Mrs. Gillies was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh MacMillan of Roxborough township. She came to Finch over 50 years ago where she had resided until her death. Her husband passed away 26 years ago.

The funeral took place from the family residence to St. Luke's Presbyterian church, Finch, where service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. E. Davies, B.A., B.D. Floral bearers were Messrs. Bernard, Thomas and Francis Foley and Basil Stark.

Pall-bearers were: Messrs. Alex. Foley, Roland Droppo, D. C. MacLeod, Hawley MacLean; Jas. McMahon, Jr., and Walter Burd.

EXPECT DISTRICT BANDS TO MASS HERE NEXT YEAR

On the Sunday of Old Home Week, July 31, next year, it is hoped the brass bands of the district will meet in Chesterville, as the result of an invitation extended to the organizations Sunday at Carleton Place by the local band. The spring and fall meetings have already been set for Prescott and Smiths Falls, but R. Mills, president of the association, has agreed to call a meeting of the bandmasters shortly to consider the invitation. About 250 bandsmen were at the Carleton Place gathering and this would certanly be a fine feature for the big week next year.

Interesting W.M.S Meeting Presentation to Miss Moad

Miss Evelyn Mitchell, travelling secretary for the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada. was the speaker at the Autumn Thank Offering meeting of the local auxiliary held in the schoolroom of the church last Thursday afternoon. The members of the Morewood society were guests also and contributed a beautiful musical number.

Miss Mitchell's address dealt with many interesting phases of the work of the W.M.S. at home and in the foreign fields and she related accounts of outstanding incidents that brought the great needs of the women and children of the world very vividly to the minds of all present.

Mrs. W. N. Fulton sang a solo most acceptably. An interesting feature of the afternoon was a presentation of two cheques to Miss Helen Moad by Mrs. Geo. W. Reaburn and Rev. R. C. Tait which expressed in a tangible way the appreciation of the Ladies' Aid and the Official Board for her faithful services through the years and wished her a very happy holiday on her extended vacation to the Pacific Coast.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served.

United Counties' Sanatorium Officially Opened Yesterday

Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Ontario Minister of Health, turned a silver key in the door of the St. Lawrence Tuberculosis Sanatorium east of Cornwall yesterday afternoon, and formally dedicated the 108-bed institution erected by the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry. The outdoor ceremony was cancelled by heavy rain, but about 700 persons jammed the lobby and corridors of the building to hear the programme of speeches.

Held up as a model among institutions of its kind, the St. Lawrence Sanatorium will be operated and maintained by the counties and it is expected that its patients will be drawn almost exclusively from these districts. The tuberculosis mortality rate in Glengarry and Stormont is the highest in Ontario with the exception of Manitoulin and Kenora, while the westerly member of the counties is below the normal rate. Dr. A. D. Lapp, former medical superintendent of Tranquille Sanatorium, Tranquille, B.C., is superintendent of the new institution. First patients will be admitted next week.

Speakers of the afternoon included Dr. Faulkner; ex-Warden H. H. Nesbitt, chairman of the Sanatorium Board of Governors; Warden J. R. McLachlin. of Lancaster; F. Brownridge, M.L.A. for Stormont; A. K. MacMillan, Counties' Clerk; Rev. N. D. MacMillan, D.D., of Dunvegan, moderator of Glengarry Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and Rev. James Faulds, D.D., former president of the Montreal and Ottawa Conference of the United Church.

Dr. Faulkner described the St. Lawrence Sanatorium as "an institution which, as far as I know, is perfection, an institution that will serve as an example to all others throughout Canada."

St. Lawrence Sanatorium cost approximately $268,000 of which the Ontario Government and the counties each contributed $134,000.

Mrs. H. LeBlanc, formerly Miss Violet Saucier, of Chesterville, is one of the staff.

Miss Mildred E. McMillan Wed to Mr. Oswald Horace Higgs of Montreal, at Goldfield, Saturday

THE home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh W. McMillan, Goldfield, was the scene of a pretty wedding Saturday evening at eight o'clock when their eldest daughter, Mildred Evelyn, became the bride of Mr. Oswald Horace Higgs, of Montreal. The rooms were pleasingly decorated with pink and white streamers, wedding bells and cut flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a gown of blue silk velvet made on long lines with hat, veil and shoes to match, and she wore long white kid gloves and a corsage of pink roses, maidenhair fern, and lily-of-the-valley.

The wedding music was played by Mrs. Ross McMillan, aunt of the bride and during the signing of the register a solo was sung by Mrs. McMillan, accompanied by her son, Elery.

Immediately after the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served by Misses Edith McMillan, Pansy McMillan and Jean Nephew. Mrs. Dan Pollock poured tea and Mrs .Silas Farrell cut the ices.

The bride's gift to the groom was a watch and chain and the groom's gift to the bride was a jade dinner ring and to the pianist, a purse.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Higgs left by motor for Cleveland, Ohio, and other points, the bride travelling in a brown tweed suit trimmed with fur with hat, shoes and accessories to match. Upon their return they will reside in Montreal.

Out-of-town guests included, Mr. H. Higgs, Mr. Horace Higgs and Miss Margaret Irven, Ottawa; Ewen Carruthers, Virden, Man.; Dr. and Mrs. Pollock and son Rupert, of Avonmore; Mr. and Mrs. Ross McMillan, Avonmore, and Mr. Arnott Farrell, Cornwall.

Former Local Young Couple Married in England Sept. 2

Two former young people of Chesterville, Miss Hilda Latta, daughter of Mrs. John Latta, and Mr. John Henry Collingridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Collingridge, were married in the Church of England at Old Woking, Surrey, England, on Thursday September 2nd. Miss Latta left here on August 14th to join her fiancé who had returned to England some time ago after spending a few years in Canada where had been joined by his parents and members of the family.

The young couple spent their honeymoon visiting with the groom's brothers and sisters at Nottingham. Leicester and Liverpool, and they will reside at Hoebridge Farm, Wooking, Surrey.

MOUNTAINS OF MAIL SNAPPED ON MODEL T

Chris. McLean, the veteran mail carrier on the Chesterville-Morrisburg route, is a very pleased man this week. Some time ago a patient of Dr. Locke's at Williamsburg, was impressed with the immense loads of mail Chris. was carrying on his Model T Ford and made a snapshot of it. Recently Chris. was showing these snaps to the Assistant Deputy Postmaster General, P. T. Coolican, Ottawa, who was much impressed and asked for one of the snaps. Yesterday Chris. received several very fine enlargements of the snap from Mr. Coolican which have been much admired by those who have seen them.

Sister of Local Resident Will Be Interred Today

A very estimable lady passed away Sunday afternoon at Williamsburg in the person of Miss Emma Casselman after an illness of several months. She was very greatly respected in the community where she spent her life and where for many years after the passing of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Casselman, pioneer settlers in the district east of Williamsburg, Miss Casselman carried on the operations of the farm in a most capable manner.

Interment was deferred until today awaiting the arrival from San Francisco, Calif., of a brother, Thomas Casselman. Mrs. Celia Weegar, Chesterville, and Mrs. Alfred R. Casselman, of Berwick, also mourn the passing of their sister.

Youthful Bride-Elect Showered With Presents

Miss Isobel Sutherland was the guest at a miscellaneous shower held at her home, near Finch, on Friday afternoon, Sept. 3rd, in honour of her approaching marriage. An added feature of interest was that the date chosen was also Miss Sutherland's 20th birthday. About 40 ladies were present.

The youthful bride-elect was ushered into the livingroom by Miss Aileen MacLean, an address of congratulation was read by Mrs. Alex. Foley, and a decorated basket of gifts was presented by Miss Eleanor Casselman and Miss Miriam MacLeod. After the many gifts were opened and admired, a short humourous reading was given by Mrs. Donald Gordon.

Tea was poured by Mrs. W. J. Sutherland and Mrs. D. Nephew at the diningroom table, which was covered by a beautiful lace cloth, the gift of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Barrie, of Ottawa, and had for centrepiece a dainty birthday cake adorned with a cupid surrounded by 20 candles, the gift of Mrs. D. Nephew. Lunch was served by several young ladies. The bride then cut the birthday cake and Miss Cassie Droppo served it to the guests.

HEPBURN the Tax-Payer's PROVEN Friend

Return Him as PREMIER

ISSUED BY ONTARIO LIBERAL ASSOCIATION

TODAY you have reason to rejoice that you voted Henry out and Hepburn in. The Hepburn administration has replaced mismanagement with good management, extravagance with economy. It has replaced the unbalanced budget with a balanced budget, changed the chronic yearly deficit to a surplus of over 9 million dollars. It has relieved the drain and strain on taxpayers' pocketbooks in many ways. In the year that ended March 31st, 1937, it reduced Ontario's gross debt by $33,098,165.39.

How You Have Profited by Hepburn's Policies

1 Grant, equal to one mill on the dollar, from the Province to every Municipality, has relieved Municipal taxpayers to the extent of $3,000,000.

2 Cancellation of the amusement tax will save patrons of the theatre, sports and other amusements $3,000,000 a year.

3 Ontario is granting a $5 reduction in Motor Car rates that will save motorists $2,500,000 a year.

4 The Province has cancelled the 20 per cent. levy formerly made upon the Counties toward the cost of King's Highways, a saving to Municipalities of over $2,700,000 to date, and a further saving this year of $2,000,000.

5 Township Road subsidy was increased to 50 per cent., a saving to townships of $400,000 per year.

6 Entire cost of Mothers' Allowances was assumed by the Province, a saving to the Municipal Taxpayers of over $2,100,000 a year.

7 Municipalities' share of Old Age Pensions was taken over by the Province, saving over $1,000,000 a year.

8 Payment of Pensions to the Blind of $300,000.

9 Abolition of the Students' examination fees of $170,000 is another worth-while saving that Mothers and Fathers appreciate.

10 Rates for Hydro-Electric Power have been reduced to users to the extent of $4,800,000.

11 The Hepburn Government paid relief charges out of current revenue instead of adding them to the Public Debt to be paid for by increased taxes in the future, as was the policy of the former Government.

More Sunshine Budgets

On October 6th, you will have the opportunity of showing Mitchell F. Hepburn how much you appreciate his handling of the Province's finances and the administration of its government. Mark your ballot for the Liberal Candidate in your constituency and work to elect him by a safe majority. That's the way to show Mr. Hepburn you want him to "Carry On" with his program of tax reductions. He promises another "Sunshine Budget" this year—and you know he keeps his promises. Be kind to your own pocketbook—Vote Liberal.

Carry On, Hepburn!

ELECTION OCT. 6

ELECT BARNARD FOR GRENVILLE-DUNDAS

THE HOME TOWN EDITOR SPEAKS.

W. Earle Dye in Rotarian.

WHEN you married "the finest girl in the county" where did you look for that notice which meant so much to you—and so little to everybody else? In your home-town newspaper.

When your home was invaded by a blue-eyed girl, or a bouncing boy, to whom did you immediately give details about the time of arrival, sex, weight? The editor of the home paper.

In after years, when some fellow took the blue-eyed girl to a home of his own or the boy, now a man, was given a partnership in your business, to whom did you tell the news—which once more meant much to you and so little to everyone else? To this same editor of the same home-town paper.

And when trouble invades your home and you add to your earthly possessions that desolate piece of real estate in the cemetery, and somehow the sun doesn't seem to shine as brightly as it did, and there's a flutter of crêpe on the door, and the chair that has been beside you for years is vacant—when this happens, who is it that makes it his business to "write up" the obituary? Again it's the editor of the home paper.

Did you ever stop to count the times you begin conversation with the words, "I see by the paper . . . ?" Staying at home, you may not appreciate your home-town paper; but just take a trip and be away from your intimate friends for several months, and then pick up a copy. You will welcome it as you would your closest friend.

In the main, it is the province of a newspaper to print the so-called crime news as it occurs. In so doing, it provides a safeguard to the community at large, which is invaluable. Men are deterred from criminal actions by fear of publicity. Judicious use of printers' ink can do more toward law enforcement than a dozen peace officers.

Newspapers, like all human agencies, make mistakes, but such errors are generally traceable to misinformation given the newsmen.

I am confident that all newspaper editors will go to heaven. No matter how eloquently the editor may boost for the development and progress of his community, no matter how diligently he may labour to build up his home county, no matter how loyally he supports a friend in politics, extolls the virtues of a famous native son, stretches the truth to praise a local prima-donna-to-be, or gently lays a metaphorical wreath on the grave of the departed, he seldom hears a "Thank you." Rarely does anyone say "Well done." Almost never, does he hear, "We appreciate that."

But let them make a slip. Let him say that Sam Jones did something he didn't do, or Mrs. Smith Brown said something she didn't say. Everyone in town then takes a whack at him. And that is why I believe that all newspapermen go to heaven—they get their share of hell on earth.

So it goes. Coming in contact intimately with every business and profession in his territory, the successful editor has to be well informed intelligently to handle the news of the day. Too, he must — or should — know the peculiarities and the family relations of everybody.

Fifty years ago, the newspaperman was largely regarded as a necessary evil, sometimes was the object of charity. The fault was all his. Instead of conducting his business on a businesslike basis, he was content to exist on the gratuities of the community. Nor was he judged by any higher standards than those by which he judged himself. Advertising carried in his sheet was generally conceded by his fellow businessmen as a sort of donation, necessary in order to keep the paper alive.

Today that is no longer true. Your successful home-town publisher is a keen businessman, recognizing the value of the commodity he sells. If he is asked to bid on printing, his figures are submitted on a businesslike basis in most instances. He knows his costs and his work is figured accordingly. If his competitor underfigures his bid—well and good. A job taken below cost is worse than no job at all.

Limited to Everybody.

"You say the new club you want me to join is very exclusive?"

"Oh, definitely! Why, within a year we expect to have hundreds of members from every section of the city!"

Sad Plight.

Passers-By: "What are you crying for?"

Five-Year-Old: "I want a holiday like the other kids."

Passer-By: "And why can't you have one?"

Child: "I don't go to school yet."

Kind Lady: "Good-bye, little girl; some again; we'd like to see more of you."

Litte Girl: "But there isn't more of me."

HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

PLEASE DO NOT SPIT.

WE have placed the title for this article in the form of a request rather than of a command or a threat. It might very well be regarded as a plea for the protection of children. It would be in the interests of all, but it is the children who are particularly menaced by the careless, thoughtless or ignorant individuals who spit promiscuously.

The germs of disease live and multiply in the human body. A person may have such germs in his body and yet be apparently well. There are thousands of persons with tuberculosis who do not know that they have the disease, and these persons are passing out myriads of germs in their sputum.

These germs leave the body in its secretions, and the most common way is in the secretion of the mouth and nose. Mouth and nose secretions should always be thought of as containing disease germs, and should be avoided accordingly.

There is no reason for spitting as many do. It is simply a bad habit which should never be started. If it is already a habit, then it should be broken without delay.

It is not only disgusting to other people, but it constitutes a very real danger to them.

In the act of spitting, droplets are sprayed around, and as other individuals come in contact with these droplets, they are exposed to infection by the germs of disease from which the spitter may suffer. Most of the common communicable diseases are spread chiefly by such droplet infection, and the danger that results from the spraying around of sputum and saliva cannot be exaggerated because it is so very serious.

Sputum on the floor or on the ground is dangerous. Children must and will play, and while they play, they are constantly on the floor or on the sidewalk or ground. As a result, their hands are sure to become soiled. It is of course true that neither children nor adults should put their fingers into their mouths, but it takes time to train children not to do so.

Soiled hands are carried to the face; fingers go in the mouth, and so the sputum from the floor or ground gets into the child's body, and it may carry with it the germs of disease.

Because it is a filthy, disgusting habit, because it spreads disease, because it endangers the lives of children, because there is no reason for it being done, we hope that you will treat favourably the request—please do not spit.

Entertained Berwick W. I.

Miss Bella McMilan entertained the Berwick Women's Institute at her home at Riverside on Thursday afternoon last. The officers, Mrs. Rutley, Mrs. McQuaig and Mrs. Foster were in their places. After the reading of the minutes and correspondence, considerable business was transacted. Mrs. John Rutley was appointed delegate to the Ottawa convention with Mrs. Gordon Ouderkirk as alternate.

The programme consisted of a reading by Mrs. Mills Foster on "Pure Blood;" a paper on "Health" by Mrs. R. Starke. A vote of thanks was tendered Miss McMillan for her hospitality, and lunch was served by the hostesses and a social hour spent. The October meeting will be in the Community Hall when the Grandmothers will be guests of the branch. The National Anthem concluded the programme.

Aha!

Employer: "Are you married, young man?"

Applicant: "Oh, no, sir. I'm entirely dependent on my self for support."

Fair Warning.

Son: "Father, I've decided to become an artist. Have you any objection?"

Father: "No, my boy, provided you don't draw on me."

Stranger Than Fiction?

He: "What street is this?"

She: "Belvedere."

He: "Oh, I didn't know you had a Belvy street here!"

THIS GHASTLY TRAGEDY COULD HAVE BEEN AVOIDED!

If it hadn't been for a foolhardy, reckless, criminal driver this accident would have been avoided. As it is, one victim was taken direct to an undertaker's parlours and two to a hospital. The driver who caused it is hopelessly crippled for the rest of his life.

YOU'LL BE IN TROUBLE IF YOU DISREGARD THE LAWS

If you are a reckless driver travelling the Ontario highways, cutting in, passing on curves and hills, endangering the lives of others, you will find yourself in serious trouble. The appalling death toll must stop—and you who are responsible for it will be put off the road! A thousand eyes are watching you; so be forewarned!

Ontario Motorists Will Co-operate

When you see a motorist driving in a manner dangerous to the public, take his number, make a careful note of the actual time and place, and when you reach your destination write to the Motor Vehicles Branch, Department of Highways, Toronto, giving full details. We do not invite reports of minor infringements of the traffic laws; you are requested to use sound judgment. We will deal adequately with offenders.

Elma

The Young People's Union have decided to cover in the new hall and to build the kitchen and to make the building weather-proof as soon as the materials can be obtained.

The Women's Association met in the home of Mrs. Thomas Bogart on Tuesday. A good attendance was present and plans were discussed for future work.

Mrs. Johnson, who has made a short visit to her old home, very kindly made a donation of $25 toward equipment for the new hall.

Arrangements are under way to have the Harvest Festival in the United church on Sunday, Sept. 26th, with the Rev. D. Smith of Morrisburg as guest preacher.

A good representation of the Elma appointment attended the Official Board meeting held on Tuesday. The reports showed satisfactory progress and it was decided to take the month of October for special consideration of the maintenance and missionary work of the church.

Directors Are Enthusiastic For Enlarging 1938 Show

Considerable enthusiasm was shown Saturday evening at the meeting of the directors of the Chesterville and District Agricultural Society when plans were being made for next year's show. It was decided to re-arrange the financial structure of the society with a view to cutting interest charges on borrowed capital and to provide a certain amount of working capital so needed improvements can be made at the fair grounds in the shape of stabling accommodation.

Alterations will likely be made in the prize list to increase the number of exhibitors, giving the owner of any outstanding animal a chance to get in on the prize money on an equal footing with the owners of large herds. It was also decided to make the list for light horses more attractive with better prizes and more classes.

A committee consisting of Messrs. D. Allison, Thos. Allen, W. J. McConnell and W. H. Casselman was appointed to solicit more shareholders for the society and thereby create a wider interest in the work for this section of Eastern Ontario.

CASS BRIDGE LAND MARK TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Friday last at noon, a very fine residence was destroyed by fire near Cass Bridge when the home formerly owned by Mr. Chris. Irving on Highway 31, was a total loss. Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Casseman, who now live on the property, were talking with some friends at the highway when the flames were first noticed but at that time the fire had gained such headway that nothing could be done to save the building, but neighbours answering the alarm by telephone arrived in time to carry out the furniture to safety. The building was a very substantial one, said to have been erected more than 100 years ago and was one of the landmarks of the district.

THE UNKNOWN ISLES.

Interesting Facts About Our Dominion of Canada.

OFF the mainland of British Columbia is a group of islands about which the general public knows little. They are called the Queen Charlottes. Moresby, the second largest, is almost wholly mountainous and contains some of the most inspiring scenery on the West Coast. Graham, the largest, is partly spruce and hemlock forest, partly muskeg and partly mountainous, but is noted chiefly for the length, breadth and the beauty of its sea-beaches. Blue, white-crested combers break on the shining sands to dissolve in curdled foam and flying spindrift; farther up the shelving beach whiter sands sparkle for fifty yards or more to high-water mark where thousands of drift logs, smooth and silvered by the weather, lie in confusion. Behind the drift logs are sand dunes and behind the sand dunes muskeg and forest where bear and deer have worn deep trails. On the muskeg, White-Cheeked Geese and Sandhill Cranes build their nests and raise their young.

Strange creatures are cast on the sands: abalones, starfish, sand-dollars, corals, sponges; and a receding tide lays bare polished agates of many beautiful shades.

The beaches are a resting and feeding place for countless numbers of birds. Little wading birds of the snipe family on their journeys to and from their Arctic nesting ground swarm over the sands and follow the receding waves and tide in search for food.

Bald eagles with shining heads, sable ravens and snowy-breasted gulls patrol the shores from which they seldom are absent. Cut-throat trout and Cohoe salmon ascend the many rivers and are taken with fly and trolling spoon.

The census shows seventeen hundred people on these islands. Half of them are Indians living on reserves and many of the rest are Scandinavians.

THEATRE BROKEN INTO.

Some time late Saturday night, the Community Theatre was entered through the emergency exit doors and the doors into the lobby forced open. There was nothing to be taken, and the damage consisted of a forced lock on the lobby doors. It is thought a group of especially mischievous boys who have given trouble about the Community Hall was responsible for the act.

Suppose it were your loved one being made ready for the climax of this grim struggle with Death. Anxiously you await the outcome—hoping against hope—praying that these men in white will not fail. Your heart is in their hands, but all their skill, and all their specialized knowledge would be powerless should those operating room lights go out at a critical moment.

But those lights will not fail . . . nor will the power to operate the many delicate electrical apparatus used in modern surgery today.

Outside the operating room is an organization of highly trained Hydro men, whose duty it is to see that nothing is allowed to interrupt Hydro service, and to be ready for instant action in any unforeseen emergency.

The service which Hydro provides to, and widens the scope of, medical science in Ontario is the same service that brings so many comforts and conveniences within the rooms of your own home—lowered production costs to industry—greater utility and facilities to commerce—a greater measure of prosperity to all in Ontario.

The The Hydro of today is striving to extend the benefits of low cost electricity everywhere in the Province, and to making every effort to still further reduce power costs. As a partner in this gigantic enterprise you should be vitally interested in these efforts.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE IS NOT A CLEARANCE

"THE magistrate suspended sentence." Quite often we read something to that effect in accounts of trials; and a good many, reading, dismiss the matter from their minds with the remark, "Well, that's disposed of," or "that chap got off easy!" They think evidently, just "suspended sentence" sees the last of the case. Often, too, it seems the last of the case. Often, too, it seems that those who have been released on suspended sentence have the same idea.

That is entirely a mistake. A suspended sentence is just what the name implies—a sentence that is suspended, that hangs over the offender. So long as he behaves himself, nothing further is done about it. But if he offends again during the term of which the sentence has been suspended the first offence can be cited again him in case of a conviction and the penalty be imposed in addition to that for the second offence.

Suspended sentence does not mean that the judge or magistrate has placed the offender in the position of one who has not broken the law. If he does not take his lesson to heart and breaks the law the second time the magistrate may remind him that he has broken faith. "Authority," the magistrate may say, "has given you a chance to go straight. Only one thing can be done with a person who will not behave; it is high time for you to learn that the way of the transgressor is hard. Society will stand for only so much."

Suspended sentence, then, is not a clearance; nor is it a sign of weakness on the part of the authorities. It is a manifestation of the desire of the law to give one who has slipped a chance to get back on the straight road — a favour which too often is not appreciated.

IT MIGHT BE YOU.

TAKE a good "look' 'at this picture —it's a verbal one, but it tells the story just the same. Even though you won't like it, still it is something you must face if Ontario's annual highway slaughter is to be stamped out.

It is a gruesome picture—and one that happens every day on our streets and highways. This accident happened because the driver was careless. He died—his face a grotesque caricature with his skull split open like a cocoanut, his chest a gaping hole where he had been stabbed by the jagged steering column.

His wife was less fortunate — she lived. But every time she looks into a mirror she wishes she had died, too. Modern plastic surgery can perform miracles but it has its limitations. When she looks at herself in the mirror with the eye that isn't glass she still shudders, even though the accident happened three long years ago.

Their five-year-old daughter lived, too. But she doesn't realize it. Her skull was fractured and her brain injured. It's much more difficult to rebuild a brain than a face.

Don't say it can't happen to you—because it can and you know it! Today's headlines of dead, dying and injured people may be telling a story about you in tomorrow's papers. But you can help to protect yourself. How? Demand sane and careful driving from every motorist. Report those you see driving dangerously. And more important—drive sanely and carefully yourself.

WHEN A NEWSPAPER MAKES A MISTAKE

Perth Courier.

IT IS a pretty obvious fact that when a newspaper makes a mistake there is no way of clearing it up. You can't throw dirt on it and bury it, and it is seldom you can laugh it off and pass it back to somebody else. According to "Shining Lires," a bright little publication sent us by the makers of linotypes, that's why so many country editors disappear for a while as soon as the paper is off the press. They want to be away when readers come in to scalp them. Of course, there are a few brace fellows like the one in the ancient tale of a tough guy in a western town.

The tough guy, with a drooping moustache, ten-gallon hat and two pistols in his belt stamped into the local newspaper office and demanded of the busy man at the desk who was running that "blank!" "blank!" newspaper. "I am," said the little man without looking up. "Well, then," said the visitor, "perhaps you are the guy who wrote that article saying that William H. Mudge is an ex-jailbird, a counterfeiter, blackmailer, gunman, kidnapper and desperado, eh?" Again without looking up the little man said, "Sure, I'm the fellow. What about it?" "Well," said the shady customer, "just this. I'll have you understand that I'm William K. and not William H. Mudge and by the so-and-so if you've got anything further to say about me, I'll have you get my name straight."

THREATENED TO BURN BARNS.

Thursday last, as a transient, Lucien Melleou, of no known address, sought a night's lodging from different parties in the Cass Bridge district, he threatened to burn Wiliam Prunner's barns after being refused by the farmer. Prunner got in touch with Provincial Constable Frank Rose who took Melleou in charge. He was later given a month in Cornwali jail.

TEMPTING LIVER RECIPES.

WHETHER the doctor advises liver in your diet or not, it is always good for you—and perhaps by including it in your menus you might be able to keep a couple of jumps ahead of the doctor.

Aside from its dietary value, liver is a valuable addition to our meals as it has a flavour which is different and so will add variety, and there are a number of very attractive methods of serving it.

COLD BOILED LIVER.

The words "cold boiled liver" perhaps do not sound very tempting but they are no criterion of the taste. Liver boiled until tender with the addition of salt and a few mixed spices is worth a top place in your list of cold meats.

LIVER SANDWICHES.

No. 1 Place thin slices of cold boiled liver between buttered slices of bread.

No. 2 Chop cold boiled liver and mix with salad dressing and chopped pickles, to form a paste which can then be used as a sandwich spread.

SCALLOPED LIVER AND RICE.

1 cup rice
1 quart water
2 tablespoons butter
1 lb. calf's or lamb's liver
2 cups stock
2 tablespoons flour
Crumbs
Salt and pepper

Boil the rice in the water and mash smooth with the fat. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Boil the liver, drain, chop fine and season. Heat the stock, fat and flour; add chopped liver. Arrange rice and liver in layers in a buttered casserole. Top with buttered crumbs and brown in the oven.

Cooked tomatoes may be added to the rice if desired.

POTATOES OR TOMATOES STUFFED WITH LIVER

Broil liver until cooked through; put through a meat grinder. Season with salt, pepper and onion juice. Moisten with tomato juice or boiled salad dressing. Fill baked potato shells, green peppers or tomatoes with this mixture and in the case of tomatoes or green peppers bake in the oven; if baked potatoes are used, heat thoroughly before serving.

LIVER LOAF.

Season ground broiled liver with salt and pepper, moisten with tomato juice. Place in a buttered baking dish, cover with crumbs and brown in a moderate oven.

LIVER SALAD.

½ cup cold boiled chopped liver
½ cup diced carrots
½ cup diced celery
1 teaspoon chopped onion
Salt

Mix all ingredients together with boiled salad dressing. Place in mounds on lettuce leaves. Garnish with slices of tomato and a sprig of parsley.

The carrots may be either raw or cooked according to the preference.

CALF'S LIVER WITH VEGETABLES.

1 pound liver
1-3 cup cubed carrots
1-3 cup cubed onions
1-3 cup cubed celery
½ teaspoon pepper berries
6 cloves
Small piece of bay leaf
2 cups hot water or brown stock
2 tablespoons butter

Place liver dredged with flour and seasoned with salt and pepper in a well-greased casserole. Surround with the cubed vegetables; sprinkle with spices and add stock or water. Cover tightly and cook in a slow oven two hours. Remove the cover the last half hour of cooking to allow liver to brown. Remove the liver to a platter and set aside in a warm place. Strain the stock from the vegetables and use for making a brown sauce. Pour sauce around liver and vegetables serve hot.

SAUTÉD LIVED WITH TOMATO SAUCE.

Cut liver into slices one-half inch thick; cover with boiling water; let stand five minutes. Drain; remove membrane and skin. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and roll in flour. Sauté in hot fat over a moderate heat. Place on a warmed platter and pour over it the following sauce:

1½ cups canned tomatoes
1 cup water
2 cloves
2 allspices berries
2 pepper berries
Piece of bay leaf
2 sprigs of parsley
1 slice of onion
3 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Cook the first seven ingredients 15 minutes. Press through a sieve; there should be 2 cups tomato stock. Brown onion in butter, then remove onion. Add flour and seasonings to the butter; mix well. Add tomato stock graduall, stir and cook until thick.

Broiling of meat is done over or under or in front of an open fire or other direct heat. The meat should be turned at first to sear the outer surface and retain the juices.

Baked potatoes make an excellent addition to the menu of your early fall picnics. They can be easily prepared by placing in a covered baking dish (you might use an empty coffee can) which can be placed directly over the fire. If you choose small or medium-sized potatoes they will bake in about half an hour.

TWO VIEWS ON THE LIQUOR QUESTION

"THE PROFIT"—says Mr. Hepburn

"THE PEOPLE"—says Mr. Rowe

FOR three years the liquor problem has been out of control in Ontario. Mr. Hepburn, worried by the rising tide of public indignation, now tacitly admits the fact. In acknowledgment of the situation, he makes another typical last-minute, pre-election promise.

But Ontario voters are not going to be fooled again.

"Revenue First"—Hepburn

"Profit" has been Mr. Hepburn's liquor policy ever since he took office. Here are his own words as quoted in the Border Cities Star, Windsor, October 26, 1934:-

> "Another thing that the Province requires is revenue. I am informed that since Mr. Odette took office, he has turned over to the Treasury $2,800,000. Let these people point out some other source of revenue. Do they want higher gasoline or corporation tax? Do they want a Provincial Income Tax? It is obvious that if we lose the revenue from the Liquor Control Board, we will have to get it elsewhere."

"People First"—Rowe

Contrast this "liquor for profit" policy with Mr. Rowe's clean-cut stand in the interest of the people.

> Mr. Rowe has pledged himself: "I will return to a policy of control by a responsible board, free from political patronage. A survey will be made by the new board of all licensed hotels. I promise you that these mushroom dives which have sprung up and flourished under Hepburn will be closed—and stay closed."

The Conservative Party takes the position that public revenue should not be gained at the expense of decency.

No More Mushroom Dives

When Mr. Rowe is elected, beverage rooms will be confined to standard hotels which respect the law and give adequate service to the public.

Restaurants, taxi offices, rooming houses and hot dog stands will not, by means of a few "jerry-built" changes in construction, be able to qualify as standard hotels.

Beverage rooms will not be forced on communities where they are not wanted. Nor will such places flourish in the shadow of the churches of the Province.

Non-Political Control

Under Conservative administration, by means of a responsible non-political control body, beverage rooms will be so regulated that they will cease to be a blot on the social and moral life of Ontario.

A vote for the Conservative candidate is a vote for this policy of control.

- - Bottle Bend - -

IN THESE REMINISCENCES of our young days in Maine I have mentioned more than once certain "affairs" in which we became involved with Zachary Lurvey, the old squire's crafty neighbour and rival in the lumber business, whose timberlands and winter camps were on the opposite side of Lurvey's stream from our own. Old Zack, as he was generally called, often in accents devoid of affection and respect, was the kind of man that nowadays you would call a "live wire." He was always "charged," and sometimes with guile; and whoever had to do business with him was obliged to be on his guard every minute.

Our old squire was quite too open-minded and too honourable and upright in all his thoughts and transactions with his fellow men to deal with a person so sharp as Lurvey without getting his fingers cut. As a matter of fact, he got them cut more than once.

My cousin Addison was perhaps the only one who ever got the better of old Zack and turned the tables on him. That was in the matter of the mast of the Yankee Blade, the story of which has been told often. Not that Addison himself was tricky; far from it. But his mind was of that penetrative sort which easily sees through attempts to deceive and so win an advantage. For that reason perhaps old Zack as time went on formed a great admiration for Addison.

Whatever Lurvey's other faults were he was not of a mean or revengeful disposition. He was keen to take business advantage and would play almost any trick to do it; but when circumvented he would generally laugh and remain good-natured. I do not think that the old fellow had many moral scruples; he appeared to look on life as a game of matching wits with the other fellow to see which could come out ahead. You could rely on him fully to keep his business engagements and to live up to his side of an agreement; but agreements with him needed to be carefully worded, and all points made perfectly clear, for he had a knack of reading new and unsuspected meanings into agreements—meanings that the other party had not once thought of.

Above the falls where the sawmills were situated, the course of Lurvey's stream was crooked—as crooked, some said ironically, as the man for whom the stream was named. For ten or twelve miles it wound its way through forest lands that were almost level except for an occasional hillock. Several of the loops that the stream made were really remarkable; sometimes, after flowing a mile or more, the stream would double back so far as to come within a hundred yards of meeting itself again. There were six or seven of those odd loops, one of which because of its shape was called Bottle Bend. It was said that in going ten miles on a generally north and south course the water actually flowed forty-two miles—a circumstance that merely helps to show that nature is never in a hurry to accomplish her object!

Another interesting thing about the stream was that at times of freshets in the late fall or spring it sometimes straightened itself out by cutting a new channel through the neck of one of the crooks and left the old channel round the bend gradually to become dry and grow up into forest land.

On the other hand, it now and again forsook the straight course and made a new crook for itself. Driftwood coming down the stream and lodging against some obstruction in the channel in a way to raise the water would often bring about such changes.

The Lurvey timberlands were on the west side of the stream; the old squire's were on the east side. The line as originally surveyed between the two pieces of land ran north and south and crossed the crooks of the stream in half a dozen places. But, as it was inconvenient to carry on logging on both banks of the river,—thus mixing our winter's cut of logs with Lurvey's,—the old squire had proposed to his rival that they should disregard the line and cut each the lumber that grew on his side of the stream.

On the whole there were as many crooks extending back into the adjoining lots on the one side as there were on the other and Lurvey had agreed to the arrangement. In fact he had already cut most of the lumber on his side of the stream including the trees in the bends; whereas we had only begun to clear our side.

One of the crooks or loops that favoured us and that offset others that favoured Lurvey was the Bottle Bend. It extended for almost half a mile west of the line, and, for a guess, embraced thirty or forty acres of land. One of the scattered hillocks I have spoken of was also within the loop, and on it stood a pretty growth of pine; there were twenty or thirty trees, all straight and handsome enough to be used for ship timber. The rest of the growth was fir and spruce and was less valuable. Altogether the timber was worth perhaps two thousand dollars, and we had frequently said that it would offset what Lurvey had gained from the crooks that favoured him.

That was the state of things at the time when by chance we met Lurvey at the railway station, where we were load a car with oak shooks to be sent loading a car with oak shooks to go to Matanzas, Cuba. Addison and I were passing the heavy bundles from a wagon into a freight car, and the old squire was checking them off with a pencil and paper, when who should come along but Zack Lurvey. He and three of his millmen were loading a car with clapboards on another track a short distance from us. "Mornin', squire," he said.

"Good morning, Mr. Lurvey," the old squire replied. "Fine morning."

Further friendly remarks passed, and then Lurvey said:

"I suppose you noticed, squire, that I follered the bends of the stream last winter when I cut the lumber over there where our lots jine?"

"Yes," the old squire replied.

"That was accordin' to our agreement, wasn't it?"

"Yes, that was the understanding," the old squire replied. "Each of us was to follow the stream on his side regardless of the surveyed line."

"I'm glad you recollect that," said Lurvey. "Two or three times while we were cutting that lumber last winter I was afeard you might feel hurt to see where we follered the bends over the lines onto your land."

"Oh, no," said the old squire; "that was what we agreed on four years ago."

"And we are to foller the same agreement in future, ain't we?" Lurvay asked.

"Certainly; certainly; the old squire replied. "We will follow the stream just as we have been doing."

"Wal, I thought I'd just mention it again," Lurvey remarked. "Didn't know but it might have slipped yer mind, and I didn't want any misunderstanding 'bout it." And with that he said "Mornin'" again and went back to where they were loading their car.

We finished loading ours and then, getting into our wagon, started to drive homeward. No one spoke for a while. Addison seemed unusually quiet and thoughtful. "I wonder what set old Zack to say that to us?" he said at last.

"Why, I suppose he wanted to be sure that the oral agreement between us was still remembered," replied the old squire. "He wanted to know whether I was still willing to abide by it."

Addison did not seem wholly to be satisfied with the explanation. "I suppose you noticed," he remarked, "that as soon as you began to talk with him his three men came across to where we were and stood where they could hear what was said? Evidently old Zack told them to come and listen."

"Oh, I dare say," the old squire replied, "Lurvey probably thought it would be well to have witnesses to our agreement. I don't object to that. Glad they came."

"Yes, of course," said Addison. "But old Zack has never called in witsesses before. I wonder what has come over him all at one!"

The old squire laughed as if he thought that Addison was perhaps too suspicious, and no one said any more about the matter. We drove on home, and I for one thought no more about it. But it appears that Addison still pondered it. The next Sunday afternoon he told me that he wanted me to take a walk with him. I asked him where he intended to go. "Oh, we'll see," he replied; "but I don't want the old folks to know about it."

He went upstairs and soon came out at the back door, carrying his gun.

"Not going off hunting on Sunday!" I exclaimed.

"No," he replied; "but it is a long way through the woods, and I guess it is best to carry a gun."

We set forth and after we had gone some distance I asked him again where we were going.

"Now I don't want you to back out," he said. "We can make it before dark. I'm going up above on Lurvey's Stream where the old squire's mill is."

"Why, that's seven or eight miles!" I remonstrated.

"I know."

"But what for," I exclaimed.

"Maybe for nothing," replied Ad, laughing. "But you know what old Zack said to us down at the railway station that day. I believe he is up to something. The old squire wouldn't believe it; but I want to go up there and look around."

I did not much like the idea of so long a jaunt, but we went on and, entering the woodlands, followed the winter road to the sawmill. It was mid-October, and the leaves had fallen and were lying in long yellow carpets along the road. Partridges rose and went whirring away ahead of us; but Addison would not stop to hunt.

Fast walking for an hour and a half brought us to the mill, which we found much as it had been in May when the work had ceased. Owing to the recent rains the stream was rising and water was roaring over the dam. A hedgehog lay curled up asleep at the top of the great heap of yellow sawdust at the lower end of the mill shed, and I wanted to shoot it; but Addison, who was hurryng on ahead, would not stop to give me the gun. "Oh, come on," he said. "Let that hedgehog alone and come on; I'm going to Bottle Bend."

That place was from two to three miles farther on. No one of our folks had been there since the previous winter, or, except Addison, thought of going there until December, when lumbering would begin again. He strode on, and I followed. The timberland thereabouts had been logged over several winters before, and there was a great deal of brush underfoot, which made walking bad, but finally just as the sun was nearing the western tree tops we reached the neck of the bend. Then Addison, who was a few steps ahead, stopped short. As I joined him he pointed to fresh earth in front of him and laughed. "What do you think the old squire would say to that?" he asked.

Some one had dug a ditch two or three feet deep and perhaps a yard wide clear across the neck of the crook! The ground there was low and sandy and was only a few feet above the level of the stream. Already a little water was beginning to run through the ditch to join the stream at the lower end of it. As soon as the stream rose three or four feet, as it often did late in the fall, a swift, strong current would set through the ditch and cut it deeper and wider, and in the course of a single night of high water it might become the new channel of the stream and leave Bottle Bend on Lurvey's side of it!

"Do you suppose old Zack dug that ditch?" I exclaimed.

"Probably the old man didn't do it himself," Addison replied. "Most likely some of his understrappers did it on a hint from him."

"He meant to get all that lumber in the bend on his side of the stream," I exclamed with conviction.

"Looks like it," said Addison, and laughter at my slow-wittedness. "Looks as if he were helping nature to straighten the channel here."

We noticed that the water along the upper side of the bend appeared unusually high and sluggish, as if something were obstructing the stream, and, on going father around the bend, we discovered that two large fir trees that had stood leaning out from the bank on either side of the stream had been undercut and allowed to fall into the bed in such a way as to block the entire channel. Dry brush had been thrown into the water and had lodged against the trunks. Plainly some one had done the work with a view to starting the water to flow through the ditch.

For several moments we stood there looking at the brush and the bits of driftwood.

"What an old scamp that Lurvey is!" I cried.

But Addison merely remarked, "He will bear watching," and hastened back to the neck of the bend; for the sun was now setting and the forest was darkening. "We must block up that ditch as best we can tonight," he said. "It won't do to let the water get running there."

We had no tools to work with, but at a point near the middle of the neck ditch and, poking the earth back, trod it all as hard as possible. To be perfectly sure of stopping the flow of the water we filled the ditch for ten feet or more.

Dusk was falling rapidly, and by the time we got back to the mill the woods had grown dark. But the October moon — the hunter's moon— rose shortly after we had started homeward and lighted us on our long tramp of seven miles. Owls were hooting, and coons were calling to one another. Once we saw a bear; at least we saw something black moving slowly along the woods road ahead of us. It looked so large that Addison thought he had best not fire at it. So we shouted as loudly as we could, and the animal turned aside into the forest and permitted us to pass.

It was between nine and ten o'clock in the evening when we reached home, and I was almost exhausted. The old folks had gone to bed, but Halstead, who was still awake in his room, gave us a piece of his mind for going off and leaving him to do the evening chores alone.

At breakfast Addison glanced over the table at the old squire and asked him casually when he had planned to cut the lumber in Bottle Bend.

"Sometime during this next winter, I suppose," the old gentleman replied absently.

"If you wait till then, sir, I am afraid you will find Bottle Bend on the wrong side of Lurvey's Stream," said Addison.

"Why, what do you mean?" the old squire asked, suddenly interested.

"Well, sir, I was up there last night and found that some one had dug a ditch across the neck, and that water was running through it. Also the stream had been obstructed farther around the bend."

The old squire finished his breakfast hastily and in silence; then he told us to hitch one of the work horses to the farm wagon and to put in axes and shovels. "This will have to be looked into," was all the comment he made.

We drove as far as the sawmill and thence went up to the bend on foot. Halstead and one of the hired men accompanied us. We cut away the trees that obstructed the channel around the bend and removed the brush. After that we strengthened our temporary dam across the ditch. Two days later a crew of five axemen and two teams were set at work to cut all the lumber within the bend and to haul it across the neck to our side of the line. To begin logging so early in the season was inconvenient, but to cut the timber seemed the safest course to take.

What old Zack thought of the proceeding we had no means of knowing. There is no doubt that he had meant to play a trick on us; for that was one of the "sins" that he confessed eight or ten years later after he had "got religion" and wanted to join the church. That incident, however, is another story.

Heavy sorrows overtook the man in his later years. His son Sam turned out badly and almost ruined him. Lurvey had reason to see the evil of many of his former sharp practices and I think was really a changed man, though some persons doubted it. At the time when he asked to be taken into the church he made a most remarkable, not to say scandalous, public confession of all his "errors" in the past, and they were legion! His confession occupied one entire evening service! In fact he confessed to so much that the church people became alarmed and hesitated to receive him into membership. As one of the deacons remarked to the old squire, "What if he were to backslide and we had him with all that on our hands!"

The old squire was almost alone in voting to receive him, but finally the church took him in on "probation" and kept him so; he never got farther inside the church than that. It was Josh Billings, I believe, that once said, "A damaged reputation may be patched up so as to glide along pretty well, but the public will always keep an eye on the place where the crack was."

So it was with old Zack. There were too many cracks in his reputation for people to forget them entirely. Certain persons charged the church with self-righteousness, but I suppose that like all other institutions for good, the church must needs exercise reasonable care for its own reputation.

To the end of his life Lurvey kept his admiration for Addison. Some years afterwards while Addison was on a visit home to us they chanced to meet in the village; it was after the old man had begun to walk with a cane and had become somewhat childish. Coming up to Addison, he patted him on the shoulder. "Ah, my boy, my boy," he said, "ef I'd only had you fer a son to help me, I'd have had the whole lumber business of this county under my thumb!"

In view of some of old Zack's ways of doing business the compliment was equivocal. Addison came home laughing. "The old man will still bear watching," he said.

Fall Meeting of District Bands Held at Carleton Place

With 22 members, Chesterville Citizens' Band took part in the Massed Band Concert given at Carleton Place Sunday by the 12 bands of the district, and was honoured by being one of the four bands to give individual selections in this the second massed band festival of the year.

Two honoured guests of the gathering were John C. Fulton, of Chesterville, 85 years of age, who was bandmaster when the local band was organized over 50 years ago, and G. B. Magee, of Merrickville, 82, who is still playing with his band. Both were introduced over the public address system previous to the numbers played by the bands from their respective towns and received enthusiastic ovations.

The bands were lined up at Riverside Park for the march. A new arrangement was successfully tried out, with the forming of two bands with the drum section in the centre, both bands playing together. Two hundred musicians marched eight abreast and presented a fine sight. Following the parade, the programme was given at the ball park, and then the members were entertained by the Carleton Place band at the Rustic Inn.

Colour was added by the presence of the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps band of Ottawa, 35 strong, under A. Croasdale and present by permission of Col. E. T. Renaud, O.B.E., R.C.O.C. The splendid uniforms added much to the parade, and the band's rendition of the overture "Militaire" was an inspiration to bandsmen and audience.

The programme of 19 selections was given by 250 bandsmen and was thoroughly enjoyed by the large crowd that filled the stands and sat in hundreds of autos on the grounds. The numbers were conducted by W. J. Hagar of the Carleton Place Citizens' Band and leaders of the other bands.

The bands taking part with their leaders were Arnprior, E. Smith; Chesterville, J. A. Morris; Merrickville, A. M. Watchorn; Perth, R. Mills; Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, A. Croasdale; Gananoque, A. Institute Members Present Miss Moad With Travelling Bag

The Chesterville Women's Institute took advantage of the occasion when a floral tea was being held last Friday afternoon in the Library to present Miss Helen Moad, a valued member of the Institute, with a handsome fitted travelling bag. After a few words of appreciation by Mrs. Mary Hughes, president of the Institute, and the expression of good wishes for a pleasant journey and safe return from a three-months' visit to British Columbia. the presentation was made by Mrs. Melvin Durant.

Miss Moad left this morning by motor, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Forward who are returning to their home in Ladysmith, B.C., after spending several weeks with friends and relatives in and around Chesterville.
