HENRY'S Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Infantile Paralysis Causes Little Child's Death

Sunday last in Cornwall General Hospital, Francis, the two-and-a-half years old son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barkley of this place, passed away, a victim of infantile paralysis. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon with interment in Maple Ridge cemetery. The parents have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

The case was first brought to the attention of the Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Casselman, on Friday and was quickly and accurately diagnosed as the dreaded child's disease and the convalescent serum used which is supplied to the medical profession by the Ontario Department of Health, and the child at once removed to Cornwall hospital where he was given every attention, but the trouble had become so aggravated that his life could not be saved.

Dr. Casselman wishes to sound a note of warning to all families where there are young children, to use the utmost vigilance lest what is regarded as a slight cold may quickly develop into paralysis. The first symptoms are not unlike those of a mild cold with a slight inflammatory condition of the throat. If the symptoms are recognized early enough and the convalescent serum used, we understand that chances are quite good to save the child's life without paralysis of the limbs. During the past three years infantile paralysis has been more or less epidemic throughout the province and every thing possible must be done to prevent a recurrence of it in this district.

Inter-Club Games Bowling Schedule

At the annual meeting of the St. Lawrence Lawn Bowling Association held at the Ontario Hospital, Brockville, on April 30th, it was unanimously resolved to arrange a schedule for the playing of home and home games between the clubs forming this association with the exception of Alexandria and Hawkesbury, which, due to distance to travel, could not be included.

A schedule has been tentatively arranged and the dates may be fixed to suit the respective clubs by mutual agreement. It is desired that all games be played.

Not less than two full rinks shall form a team from any club and the club desiring to enter more than two rinks shall notify their opponents at least two days in advance of the date set for the game.

A game shall consist of 15 (fifteen) ends and the aggregate score shall decide.

These Inter-club games were proposed by Mr. W. O. Dixon, of Chesterville, at the 1930 regular meeting held at Prescott, but no action was taken at that time and the matter was again brought up at this year's meeting with the above result. It is intended to make this an annual event and the co-operation of the various clubs is requested in order to make the endeavour a success.

Crysler Guild and W. A.

There was a large attendance of members at the May meeting of the Guild and Women's Auxiliary of St. John's Church, Crysler, held at the home of Mrs. Henry Armstrong. An interesting report was given by the delegate, Mrs. F. H. Fleming, who attended the annual meeting of the Diocesan Board. The Dorcas secretary reported having sent out a bale recently.

Lunch was served at the close of the meeting by Mrs. Lorne Irven and Mrs. Lorne Feeley.

Bill Tate Wins Two Ottawa Road Races

Bill Tate, Chesterville runner, came through to win the Y. M. C. A., Ottawa, six and one-half mile race Monday morning in the exceptionally good time of thirty-seven minutes and thirty-two seconds. Lloyd MacAllister was not very far behind him for second place, and A. Smith of McGill won third position quite handily.

The fine weather drew out a larger field of runners than was expected. For the first mile it was difficult to judge who was going to take the lead, but after a quarter of the course was clipped off it was clear that the contest revolved around MacAllister, Tate and Smith. At the Bronson avenue bridge, MacAllister and Tate were running closely together, the former setting the pace. Smith and Charboneau were running a dead heat at this point, but shortly afterwards Smith pulled away from his pursuers and started after the two leaders.

MacAllister looked very dangerous until the runners were within about two hundred yards of the goal. Here Tate, who had been saving some reserve energy, sprang into the lead and finished with a tremendous burst of speed. MacAllister continued his running pace and crossed the tape for second place about seventy-five yards behind Tate. Smith had pulled away from his nearest competitor and was not pressed for third position.

Tate Wins Second Race.

Six mile marathon foot race—Bill Tate, Ottawa, first, carrying the colours of the Aylmer Dramatic Society, and winning the silver trophy donated by the society; time, 38 minutes and45 seconds. A. Smith, Ottawa, second, came in 45 seconds behind the winner. Jack Dunn, of Ottawa, was third.

Hundreds View Big Engine

Last evening between seven and eight o'clock it might have been surmised that the C. P. R. was holding a reception at the local station when hundreds of our citizens were given the opportunity of viewing the wonderful new oil burning locomotive which was passing through on its first trial trip over this division. As the engine was held here some time, those in charge gave the spectators every facility for getting their first glimpse of the inside of a cab of a locomotive of any kind and particularly of the first oil burner ever turned out by Canadian engineers from Canadian materials, the plans from which it was made were also the product of Canadian skill and teaching. The number of the monster engine is 8000 and the first one of that type to be turned out which will be known as the eight thousand class. It will be used on this division for some time until thoroughly broken in for regular running.

Forty Hours Devotion In St. Mary's Church

The forty hours devotion commenced in St. Mary's Church on Sunday, May 24th, the pastor, Rev. Father Keaney, being assisted by a number of priests of the Archdiocese of Kingston, including the Very Rev. Dean Hanley, P. P., Brockville; Rev. Louis E. Staley, P.P. of Gananoque; Very Rev. E. M. Lacey, Chancellor, P.P., Deseronto; Rev. T. J. Scott, P.P. of Merrickville; Rev. R. J. Coyle, P.P., of Morrisburg; Rev. M. E. James, P.P., Cardinal; Rev. A. J. O'Donnell, P.P., South Mountain; Rev. Jas. Foley, P.P., Apple Hill.

The devotions during the three days, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, were largely attended and sermons appropriate to the occasion were preached by Rev. Fathers Coyle, James and O'Donnell.

Chesterville United Church Celebrates Anniversary

Large congregations attended both services of Chesterville United last Sunday when Rev. D. N. Cockburn, of Prescott, delivered powerful sermons morning and evening.

Tuesday evening the anniversary supper sponsored by the Ladies' Aid was held in the dining hall of the church, followed by an address by Rev. N. MacLaren, of Moose Creek, telling of his work along the Labrador Coast, as a missionary,which was highly intructive and most interesting. told as only Mr. MacLaren can. The musical part of the programme was taken care of by the male quartette, Messrs. Hutt, Forward, Bolster and King. The proceeds of the occasion ars considered very satisfactory, when such a substantial bill of fare was provided for such a modest figure.

Dundas-Grenville Rally

A very successful rally, presided over by the Presbyterial president, Mrs. J. I. Murdock, was held in the Iroquois United Church on Friday, May 22nd.

Great appreciation was evident as a result of two interesting addresses delivered by Miss Effie Jamieson, General Secretary of the Dominion Board. Miss Jamieson spoke on world-wide work, when she told of the accomplishments of the organization during the last fifty years and the great need existing in Angola, Africa, and her vivid description of the celebration which she witnessed during her recent visit to that country. This was followed by splendid moving pictures of the African Jubilee which were thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Mrs. (Rev.) Townsend, Inkerman, sang the new version of "The Ninety and Nine."

Rev. A. F. Fowkes, Brinston, closed the rally with prayer.

Police Check Up On Highway Hazards

Steps toward making the highways safer for motorists were taken over the holiday when the provincial Highway Department issued warnings to some fifty drivers for disobeying that portion of the Motor Vehicles Act which states: "No vehicle shall pass another when it is not possible to see clearly that portion of the road immediately ahead." Police stationed at hills and curves on the roads leading to the mountain resorts stopped cars attempting to pass other cars at these dangerous points and warned these drivers that if they repeated the offence, their licenses would be cancelled.

Commenting on this action, George A. McNamee, manager of the Royal Automobile Club of Canada, said that the club was pleased to learn that the Department of Highways was taking action on these two points, since contraventions and infractions of the law had been sources of considerable complaint in the past and were a most dangerous practice.

Passing a car on a hill or round a curve was contrary to common sense, Mr. McNamee declared, for it brought out the offending car into the centre of the road at a moment when it could not possibly see whether a car was approaching it directly from the opposite direction; and by the time it could see that a car was coming it was too late to avoid a collision. The Royal Automobile Club was glad to learn that the law making for sane driving at these points was being observed, he said, and motorists should guide themselves accordingly.

It was a very simple rule to follow; just keep well over to the right when you can't see what's ahead, Mr. McNamee stated, and if people would only do this thousands of accidents could be avoided.

Morewood Women's Institute

The annual meeting of the Institute was held at the home of Mrs. John Edgerton on Tuesday, May 12th, with fifteen members and six visitors present. The meeting opened in the usual way. The members responded to the roll call with current events. Mrs. J. W. Bogart, Mrs. Vernon Fetterly, Mrs. Olive Craik, Mrs. Gordon Fraser and Mrs. Dillabough each gave a paper on "Famous Women." Miss Nona Loucks favoured with a solo. Mrs. J. W. Bogart, Mrs. Gordon Fraser and Mrs. Vernon Fetterly are to prepare the programme for the next meeting which will be at the home of Mrs. J. W .Bogart.

The secretary gave a report of the year's work and the financial statement, which showed a balance on hand of $95.61.

It was moved by Mrs. Ab. Dillabough, seconded by Mrs. Allan Swerdfeger, that the old officers be re-elected. The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which the hostess served a delicious lunch.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

When American foul brood is prevalent in a neighbourhood, the wise beekeeper will inspect all of his colonies carefully every two weeks and treat or destroy every infected diseased cell. He will not wait for the inspector to come.

Leftovers, culls and potatoes from fields in which no special attention has been given to disease do not make good seed. Good seed means good potatoes, low in disease, well-grown tubers which in turn have been well-stored.

A new booklet of facts concerning the corn borer has been published by the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. It gives all particulars about the pest and how it can be exterminated. Every corn grower should get one now free of cost. It will save much trouble and expense.

Winning Slogan

Out of 18,000 slogans submitted in the Slogan Contest conducted by the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference, the judges chose one that tersely expresses the purpose and object of the event which next year will draw approximately fifty different countries into friendly competition and conference at Regina. "Show what you grow and share what you know" is the prize-winning slogan and the latter part of the accepted watchword is of constantly growing importance.

Corn Helps

Quality corn, either for silage or for husking is the result of suitable seed and suitable preparation of the soisl. Ontario growers of corn for husking purposes are warned that planting this crop later than the end of the first week in June will prevent its ripening. Tests have been conducted at the O. A. C. relative to different dates of planting coupled with fertilization with high phosphate fertilizers Records obtained show that a week's delay in the planting could be largely overcome with the use of suitable fertilizers. Fertilizers of an anaylsis of 2—12—6 or 3—10—5 used at the rate of 500 pounds per acre at the time of planting, have been found to hasten the ripening of the crop at least a week.

It is a well-known fact that corn well advanced toward ripening makes a richer quality of ensilage than does green corn with white immature ears. Growers of this crop for silage purposes can increase the total weight per acre and also greatly improve the feeding quality of corn by proper regulation of manuring and fertilizing.

Corn and Roots

Corn and roots are two crops essential for all kinds of live stock, taking the place of green grass in the ration long after the season for grass is over. Corn is planted any time after danger of frost is past. Mangels should be put in fairly early so that the seed will have the early moisture. Turnips are not planted before the second week in June and may go until about July 10. If planted too early they are likely to become tough and make less palatable feed than those which make most of their growth in early fall.

Sweet Clover as Manure

During recent years many farmers have been growing sweet clover in rotation with potatoes. A full crop of sweet clover ploughed under may be considered as 25 to 30 tons of barnyard manure. Where farmers have plenty of manure available it may not be desirable to grow sweet clover for the purpose of ploughing it down, but where the manure supply is limited it has been profitable to follow the above plan of action. The most essential precautions to be observed in growing sweet clover are to make sure that the soil is not acid, that it is well drained to prevent heaving and that the seed is inoculated.

Fine Crop Prospects

Reports from district representatives reveal that practically all farm crops, with the exception of strawberries, which are expected to be below average yield, give promise of good returns. Warm weather and frequent showers have brought along spring grains wonderfully. Pasture has made good headway, which is most fortunate as feed supplies are beginning to run low. It is almost certain that the acreage of both spring grains and new alfalfa, clovers and grasses will be much greater than for some years past. This increase, together with the absence of winter killing, indicates a large crop of home-grown feed next fall A decrease in milk shipments to cheese factories is noticeable, due to low prices being offered for cheese.

While too early to make any definite prediction regarding fruit prospects, P. W. Hodgetts, director of the Fruit Branch, states that everything so far is favourable. All classes of fruit came through the winter in excellent shape and there has been a wonderful showing of blossom. With continued seasonable weather, a big yield may be expected of apples, cherries, plums and other fruit.

Minister's Report

The report of Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, for the year ending October 31st, 1930, shows at a glance the many and varied activities being carried out under the different departmental branches, including work done at the O. A. C., and the various experimental farms throughout the province. Any farmer who doubts that the Department is accomplishing valuable work should obtain a copy of this report.

Trap The Borer

The suggestion has been advanced that a trap crop of corn consisting of about half a dozen rows of early sown rapid growing corn, if put in as early as the ground is fit, will in most years lessen the amount of injury done the main crop by corn borers, if the main crop is sown a few days later than the ideal date. The trap crop should be cut low about the end of the first week in August, when all borer eggs have been laid and should be removed and fed to live stock.

Junior Calf Clubs

Widespread interest in calf clubs is being created among the farmers' sons of Central Ontario, between the ages of 12 and 20 years. Three clubs have been organized in Peel, namely, Shorthorn, Jersey and Holstein, with a total membership of 57 boys. Arrangements have been made with the Brampton fall fair board for an entire morning devoted exclusively to the boys' calf club work on the last day of the fair. A survey is being made in the county with the intention of organizing a colt class among the junior farmers to stimulate the breeding of typey mares to enrolled stallions of the heavy draft types.

Farmers' Week At O. A. C.

Arrangements have been completed for Farmers' Week at the O. A. C., Guelph, on June 15, 16, 17, 18 and 19. Every farmer should take a day off and visit the great and growing Agricultural College and Experimental Farm. He will see fine live stock, excellent crops, beautiful gardens, up-to-date machinery and modern machinery and methods, as well as special exhibits of very practical interest which are being arranged by most of the departments. The dates for the various counties are as follows: Monday, June 15th—Welland, Lincoln, Waterloo, Perth and Huron; Tuesday, June 16—Lambton, Essex, Kent, Elgin, Norfolk, Haldimand and Wentworth; Wednesday, June 17th—Peel, York, Ontario, Durham, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Hastings and Eastern Counties; Thursday, June 18th—Simcoe, Grey, Bruce, Dufferin and Halton; Friday, June 19th—Middlesex, Oxford, Brant, Wellington, Muskoka, Victoria and Peterboro. See or 'phone your Agricultural Representative for information as to the arrangements being made for your county.

Calf Kicks Lantern Setting Barn Afire

Kemptville.—A calf kicking over a lantern in the barn owned by James Sloan, living three miles west of here, caused a fire which destroyed the building. Alone in the barn about 8.00 o'clock Monday evening, Mr. Sloan had just completed milking the cows, and started to feed the calf. He had placed his lantern on the floor just behind the calf, and suddenly the calf kicked and knocked it over. The burning oil spread quickly in the dry straw on the floor, and Mr. Sloan barely had time to release the cattle and horses in the barn before the building was a mass of flames.

In addition to the loss of his barn, a corn cutter, a quantity of hay, and 500 bushels of grain which were in the building were destroyed.

Nearby buildings, which included a log barn and garage, were threatened for a time, but the efforts of neighbours who quickly gathered on the spot and organized a bucket chain saved them. The loss is partly covered with insurance.

Four Cornwall Youths Sent to Penitentiary

Cornwall, May 26.—Girard Beauclaire, 17; Harold Paquette, 19; Hermidas Paquette, 18, and John Merpaw, 17, were each sentenced to two-year terms in Portsmouth Penitentiary when they appeared in police court here today on charges of burglary and shop-breaking.

The boys, arrested yesterday morning for a series of robberies, took their plight lightly and laughed at the magistrate when sentence was imposed. All have previous criminal records.

THOSE PICNIC MEALS

By Etta Bitta Pye

PICNIC DAYS are here again. With Victoria Day, Empire Day, and the King's Birthday and a whole collection of Saturdays before us, it is quite reasonable to anticipate at least one or two picnics between now and the first trace of cold weather.

Much can be said in favour of the picnic. Sunshine, fresh air, green grass, bubbling brooks, leafy dells, games in the open, clean dirt for mud pies, sun baths, the old swimming hole, and a real meal in the open—all these are placed on the debit side of our picnic ledger. Thunder storms, snakes, mosquitoes, poison ivy, sunburn, gnats, angry bulls, lost children, tired limbs, aching heads, upset stomachs, and impossible lunches—these go on the credit side.

The picnic will always be popular no matter how many disadvantages there may be. The best of it is that the more one picnics the more he is able to avoid the things that spoil picnics. The appearance of poison ivy is soon learned. The danger of too much sun is not so great after one or two serious burns. Seldom is a child lost more than once or twice. The things in the lunch basket that do not agree with those who picnic are gradually eliminated, while other foods that do agree take their place.

The picnic lunch is really one of the most important things to be considered when a picnic is suggested. For some reason or other, the lunches of inexperienced picnickers are very likely to contain little but acid-reaction foods. As meat, fish, eggs, bread, rolls and cake all come under this classification it is easy to see that such an error can quite readily be made. See that your picnic lunches are filled with alkaline-reaction foods and you may find many of your headaches and upset stomachs disappearing. Fruit, green vegetables and milk are all listed among the alkaline-reaction foods. Knowing this, the wise packer of a picnic lunch takes plenty of oranges, lemons and apples, lettuce, celery, tomatoes—anything as a matter of fact that may be classed as either a fruit or vegetable and that fits into the meal in the open.

A stream of pure water running from a spring may be turned quickly into a delightful refrigerator for the lettuce, celery and other greens to be used later on. Good old-fashioned lemonade may be made and the dish placed in this same cool refrigerator. This beverage is very desirable, for thirsty children and adults drink it as often as they wish. It will cool the body and also tend to keep it sufficiently alkaline.

When you bring crisp leaves of lettuce and celery to the picnic lunch, use your tomatoes, your oranges and your apples to make little out-of-door salads. Not only will they be relished but they will be very beneficial. Instead of allowing children to nibble cake, doughnuts, crackers and popcorn between meals, let them eat an orange, which will act as an appetizer rather than something that takes the edge from the appetite.

Pay close attention to your picnic meal and you will make your picnic lunch much more enjoyable and far more healthful than those you have had in the past.

FARMERS ESCAPE THE INCOME TAX

Calgary Herald.

OF ALL THE TAXES devised by Federal, provincial or municipal governments, the most popular among farmers should be, and no doubt is, the Federal income tax. Last year they paid about one-fourth of one per cent of the total revenue from this tax. Of all the farmers in the Dominion, only 2,737 paid on income.

Some interesting information as to the application of the income tax is contained in an article in MacLean's Magazine. It shows that last year 142,154 individuals and 7,957 corporations paid on their incomes. Manufacturers put up $20,149,260, or nearly thirty per cent of the total. Financiers came next with $11,044,813. Salaried empolyees contributed $8,336,415. The army of retailers in Canada paid less than half the latter amount. The number of professional men in the country is estimated at about 20,000, but only 7,349 paid income tax to the total of $1,716,674.

Boys Trim Cats' Tails

Bob-tailed cats in Ottawa West are giving Carleton County police a new kind of "crime" to investigate. Complaints have reached Sergt. Jeremiah Cooke that boys in Ottawa West were capturing cats and cutting off their tails, then turning the animals loose. One household cat was taken to Sergt. Cooke's home in Westboro as an exhibit. The police announced their determination to make examples of the boys when they are caught.

"Traveling has its discomforts and dangers, but most of the trouble comes from eating wrong foods. No matter where I am I call for Shredded Wheat and milk for breakfast. It is the safe and satisfying food, easily digested, which helps to prevent fatigue on a long journey." Shredded Wheat is served in dining cars, and in nearly every hotel or restaurant in this country and many in Europe. It is deliciously strengthening with milk or fruits.

Crysler Residents Surprised In Raid By Police

Cornwall, May 26.—As a sequel to a liquor raid, in which ten provincial and Federal officers swooped down upon the village of Crysler, early Sunday morning, three residents of that village were convicted of breaches of the Liquor Control Act in the police court this afternoon.

The officers divided into five parties and arrived simultaneously at five dwellings and business places in the village, where liquor act violations were suspected. They seized liquor at three places.

Freighter Is Released

Iroquois, May 26.—The barge "Redfern" was released late yesterday from the shoal near Point Iroquois Pine Tree Summer resort, opposite lock No. 25, Galops Rapids canal, where she went aground in the early hours of Wednesday, May 13. The boat is one of the old whaleback style and was bringing 114,000 bushels of wheat from Port Colbourne to Montreal, towed by the tug "John Pratt" of the Sin-Mac line.

Last Sunday three young men of Morrisburg, in a sea flea, capsized alongside the "Redfern" and had a narrow escape from drowning. A skiff, used for ferrying the labourers and supplies was probably the means of saving them as they clung to it until help came, when it filled with water and went to the bottom. Their motor boat was brought to the wharf at Iroquois to be sent on to Morrisburg later.

The "Redfern" was taken to Cornwall to await the arrival of a Montreal appraiser, who will decide its future.

Mr. Geo. Colquhoun spent Tuesday at Mr. Allan Colquhoun's.

Mrs. Milburn Hislop spent one day last week at her home here.

Mr. Wilfrid Ward, in his "Life of Newman," tells of a very comical misprint. Newman had dedicated his Grammar of Assent to Serjeant Belasis, in these words: "In memory of a long, equable, and sunny friendship." Imagine his horror when, on receiving the first proofs, he read: "In memory of a long squabble and funny friendship!"

Father (finding music teacher kissing his daughter): "Sir, is that what I pay you so heavily for?"

Teacher: "No, sir. I don't charge for this."

WATCHING "KING'S PLATE" OLDEST HORSE RACE ON CONTINENT

THE Seventy-Second running of the King's Plate. The oldest fixture run continuously on this continent, 50 Guineas, the gift of His Majesty King George V, with $10,000 added by the Ontario Jockey Club. And after that the rules of the entry and the history of the classic. To the crowd it was the King's Plate and the list of horses running, only 12 out of a possible 61, was the matter of interest.

Dancing Horses.

Somewhere a bugle tooted. A line of dancing, quivering horses came up the track, past the judges' stand. They minced daintily, their jockeys hunched forward, close-reined, hands well down. There was a wild scramble for benches on the lawns and each bench took a load of standing passengers. The level sea of heads in front of the stands became tempestuous as the owners of the heads danced up and down in an effort to watch the horses.

The stands were filled. Movie men perched on the top stands were outlined against the sky, crouched over the machines, coat collars turned up against the wind, which whipped the flags behind them. The stands were a huge bank of pink faces, here and there the owner of field glasses breaking the rigidity and regularity of the rows of pinkness. Then came the roar.

"They're off!" A huge burst of sound that rises high and then fades to a steady roar which wells up steadily in a throbbing rhythm. It becomes so steady and smooth that the flickering flags seem to be heard and the pound of the hooves becomes part of it. As the bunched horses pass the stand the first time, the crowd bobs up and down, shrilly yelling. As they turn and go down the back stretch the crowd steadies, watches more intently and fades in its roar.

Round the turn and the crowd reaches a new high note, single screams of encouragement piercing the well of sound. Down the stretch, a little patch of black and brown topped by feeble colours, come the horses, and the crowd reaches a frenzy point. The leaders sweep past and the crowd screams and sweeps in a long wave to the west end of the enclosures.

The Finish.

The winner flashes past the stand, close pursued by two followers racing neck and neck. The crowd breaks the roar of sound and roars in waves and patches of noise. It breaks its ranks and flees in every direction, some towards the payoff wickets, some to the fence, some towards the gateways. The posting of the winning numbers causes no interruption in the rushing and running and roaring; everyone has already known the result: Froth Blower breezes home. Along the fence in front scurries a group of cameramen, racing for waiting motorcars and waiting last editions. Their little race follows the big race.

The race is over, but the crowd, winners or losers, thrill once again as the ruddy-faced, gray haired, rotund, quivering owner takes his place opposite the judges' stand and has his hand heartily shaken by the representative of the King. The horse poses for pictures, nostrils quivering, dancing gently, his jockey smiling amid the cries of "Well done, Frankie."

A few minutes later, still carrying the stiff hat he removed in lieu of retaining a topper he did not have, the owner rushes along the track near the fence, bearing a huge silver cup. Only a few notice him and call congratulations. The empty stands stare down vacantly. Two more races will only attract smaller crowds into the empty stands. The Plate is over.

239 Pounder Caught

Pike Creek, Ont., May 26.—Ulric Suzor, a fisherman, came home here today with a whopper of a fish story and just to back it up he brought the fish along.

Suzor found a 239-pound sturgeon, believed to be the largest ever caught in Lake St. Clair, in one of his nets off Pike Creek. He towed his prize catch to the dock and moored it. A lot of people came down to see it today.

Suzor was so proud of his catch that—with sturgeon selling at twenty cents a pound—he offered it to the Detroit aquarium at Belle Isle.

Public Strongly Behind Project

Cornwall, May 26.—Definite steps were taken to-day toward the establishment of a vehicular bridge across the St. Lawrence River between Cornwall, Ontario, and Nyando, N.Y. This afternoon, Geo. A. Noren, engineering assistant to the vice-president of the New York Central Railway, held a conference with representatives of the Cornwall City Council and Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce of Massena, N.Y., and stated that the company would give complete approval to the project for the planking of the New York Central Railroad bridge here, in order that it might be used for vehicular traffic.

As a result of the conference, a committee comprising Mayor Aaron Horovitz; C. C. Munro, president of the Board of Trade; George A. Stiles, K.C., of Cornwall; Fred G. Kirkbridge, president of the Chamber of Commerce; W. S. Wilson and J. K. Phillips, presidents of two leading banks of Massena, was appointed to further negotiations and to go into the matter of financing and operating the bridge. It is expected that the committee wil return a full report within the next few weeks.

Planking of the railway bridge will provide the only vehicular traffic link across the border between Montreal and Smiths Falls. Communities bordering the river are strongly behind the project, and it is probable that it will be carried out as an international public enterprise.

Widow of Soldier Refused Re-Entry

Sault Ste Marie,Ont., May 26.—"In all my life, and I am 61 years old, I never had a door closed on me, not until Canada did it—my own country, for which my husband fought and ultimately died," said Mrs. W. J. Lyons, of Winnipeg, refused admission to enter Canada, May 16, by immigration officers stationed at this port. Mrs. Lyons is a war widow, drawing a pension of $60 a month from the Dominion Government because her husband died from effects of war service. She has resided over twenty years in Canada, is a property holder in Winnipeg, and has many friends and relatives within the Dominion.

When she was refused admittance, Mrs. Lyons was on her way to North Bay to live with a married daughter there. She had been on a visit to her son, W. L. L. Lyons, in California, whom she had visited for nine months and had had no thought that she or her son who accompanied her back would be refused admission to the country.

Have you enough Life Insurance?

No matter how large or how small your estate, it will suffer heavy deductions before it reaches your wife or family. Doctors, nurses, hospitals, undertakers, lawyers, etc., not to mention succession duties, if the estate be considerable, will reduce the net amount payable to your heirs by anything from 10% to 25%.

Take your pencil and try a simple sum in arithmetic, using an actual case as an example:

	Typical Case	My Case
Total face value of all my life insurance policies	$5,000	$
Estimated value of my real estate, securities and other assets	$2,000	$
Total	$7,000	$
Less 15% as indicated above	$1,050	$
Total estate (net)	$5,950	$
Invested in good securities at 5% this should yield my family an annual income of	$297.50	$

Our Ottawa Letter

OTTAWA, May 27.—Re-opening of the whole question of the relative authority of Federal and Provincial Governments over water powers on navigable streams is likely to follow parliamentary investigation of the financial structure of Beauharnois Power Corporation. The company now has authority to divert 40,000 cubic feet per second at Beauharnois between Lake St. Louis and Lake St. Francis on the St. Lawrence river and is about to seek approval by the Dominion of withdrawal rights of 30,000 additional cubic feet already sanctioned by Quebec.

At one period the King Government contended that power rights on navigable waters were vested in the Dominion. The claim was contested by Ontario and Quebec and a decision of the Supreme Court of Canada failed to finally dispose of the matter. Shortly afterwards Quebec province gave Beauharnois its authority and the then Federal Government approved the plans for the work as not interfering with the rights of navigation.

A YEAR AGO the whole situation the whole situation was brought dramatically to the attention of Parliament with the claim that the promoters—who had a very limited cash investment in proportion to the cost of the enterprise, which was financed by a bond and preferential stock issue—had made themselves a present of stock of a face value of some hundred million dollars and that the ultimate scheme would raise this to probably three hundred millions. By comparison it made all other Canadian promotional enterprises look insignificant in the return it promised those influential enough to put across. The demand was then made that the whole circumstances be fully investigated and Mr. Bennett, as leader of the Opposition, expressed the view that if the circumstances were as represented complete inquiry was desirable.

The matter was raised again a few days ago by the U. F. A. leader, Robert Gardiner, who insisted the company had broken its lease and that it was still within the power of the Dominion to secure return of rights which he computed to have a value of hundreds of millions. Mr. Bennett agreed that the whole issue be referred to a committee of the House for investigation and this is now being done. The Prime Minister pointed out that eminent counsel advised him that the power rights did not belong to the Dominion.

The inquiry is likely to throw up a considerable amount of mud as the suggestion has been made that certain members of Parliament were financially interested in the project. Mr. Gardiner charged that Senator W. L. McDougald of Montreal, former chairman of the Montreal Harbour Commission and a most intimate friend of Mr. King, was paid $780,000 and 208,000 class A common shares for his interest in the old company. These securities, according to the company prospectus, Mr. Gardiner said, were worth $30,000,000, though the present market price is about $1,456,000. Other members of both Houses are said to have retained in a legal capacity by the power company and Mr. Gardiner said men behind the company had been charged with attempting to corrupt the administration of justice in Quebec.

Not since the customs inquiry has such a subject aroused equal interest. At this writing the claim is advanced that the power interests are as anxious to have the ghosts of suspicion and innuendo laid as are the company's critics to have its linen washed.

ACCIDENTS IN THE HOME

WHEN the pioneers of the automobile were tinkering with their first crude cars they little thought that in addition to making a vehicle which would change the aspect of the country and the lives of their country-men, they were also designing a terrible lethal weapon which would some day take the lives of scores of thousands of people every year," said the Radio Lecturer of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council recently over a number of Canadian stations.

"It is not, however, of the automobile that I would speak to you to-day—I merely use that to give one outstanding illustration of a friendly useful thing—the automobile—which can cause painful and fatal accidents.

It is, to-day, your own home that I wish to talk to you about. How many of you realize that death and disease can lurk for unwary and careless people right in their own homes? According to a booklet issued by a leading life insurance company, as many as 24,000 persons have lost their lives in one year through accidents occurring in their own homes. This is almost as many as were killed by automobiles. Among school children, you may be amazed to know, more accidents occur in the home than in the street, in the school or in the school grounds.

"Of what nature are these accidents? How are they caused and what can we do to prevent them? Well, now you wouldn't think of a chair, a ladder, a rug, and a cake of soap as death-dealing weapons, would you? You would scarcely think that these friendly useful articles could break your leg, or your neck, yet when you learn that more than one-third of home accidents are caused by falls we begin to see how these friendly and harmless seeming things can play a part in creating a death rate. A tremendously large number of falls come from the want of a good steady step ladder. A chair or a box is a dangerous substitute for a good ladder. Slippery floors with skidding rugs are of course a common cause of falling and a loose stair carpet and poorly lighted stairs and hallways make another delightful combination. 'The only serious injury I ever received was in my own bathroom,' explained a famous naturalist and explorer who had travelled through jungles and all sorts of difficult country. When there is a baby in the house and he is apt to start exploring and tumble downstairs, there should be a gate at the top. Ladders should be made secure beyond question before they are mounted.

"When sidewalks are icy there should be ashes or sand sprinkled around to give a sure footing. Nails, glass, boards with nails or tacks sticking in them should not be left around. The wound from a nail may be slight but the germs of tetanus do not need a big wound to work in. For the same reason one should be extra careful when opening tins or bottles. Children should never be allowed to play with matches, nor to carry lighted lamps or candles. Fire works quickly, and burns are painful. Children should never, under any circumstances, be allowed to play with fire. Before we began to settle down to sanity regarding the First of July and the 24th of May the toll from firecrackers among children was terrific.

"One should never clean gloves with gasoline in a room where there is a flame. Another dangerous practice—and one leading to many accidents by fire—is hanging clothes in front of an open fireplace to dry. Still another habit is the one that some people have of putting lighted lamps under shelves. Every home should have in its medicine cabinet a small but complete first aid outfit for use in emergencies."

Brakeman Has No Right To Spank Passenger

New Orleans, La.—The Louisiana Supreme Court ruled that a railroad brakeman has the right to police his train but not to spank a passenger. The court afforded a lower court judgment of $300 in favour of Lionel Vinot, 14-year-old schoolboy, who was whipped by Edward Brou, a brakeman. The Louisville and Nashville Railroad, defendants, argued it was the brakeman's duty to protect passengers. Vinot was spanked for allegedly annoying a schoolgirl on the train.

Placed Under Arrest By Cornwall Police

Cornwall, May 26.—When Richard O'Hara, 48, registered at the city police station here last night to obtain a night's lodging, he was immediately placed under arrest and is being held today for the Wentworth County police.

He will be taken to Hamilton by High Constable Clark, of Wentworth County, to face a charge of manslaughter, alleged to have arisen out of a free-for-all fight in a brickyard near Hamilton, in which a man by the name of Riley suffered fatal injuries.

O'Hara spent the night of May 4 at the police station here and on May 7 police received word that he was wanted for manslaughter.

THE BEST FOOD

There is, beyond question, one food which is best for the baby during his first months of life, and that is breast milk.

The great value of this natural food and its superiority over any substitute are apparently not known, if we are to judge by the number of babies who are put on artificial feedings on the slightest excuse, indeed often upon no excuse at all.

Natural food is best. It is intended for the child; it is of the right composition and it is easy for him to digest; it is free from disease germs, and because it does not have to be handled in any way, there is no danger of its becoming contaminated.

The act of nursing is good for the baby in that it helps the jaws to a proper development, strengthens the muscles of the jaw and widens the dental arch.

It is true that many babies have been brought up successfully on artificial feedings, but it is equally true that, comparing the artificially-fed baby with the one who is breast-fed, more sickness and less health are found among babies who have been deprived of their natural food.

Some mothers start artificial feedings because they have an idea that their milk is not as good as it should be, or that there is not enough of it. Usually, this is only an idea and is not founded on fact. Mothers should never wean their babies unless, after an examination, the doctor tells them to do so. It is well for them to remember that a little breast milk is better for the baby than none at all. If the mother's milk is not sufficient, the proper thing to do is to supplement it by some artificial food given at the end of nursing and not by discontinuing breast-feeding altogether and replacing it by artificial feedings.

Other mothers give up nursing their babies because they think that the artificial feedings will mean less trouble for them. The preparation of artificial feedings takes much more time and is a great deal more trouble than is the nursing of the baby. Those who have had one experience know that the easiest way is nature's way.

Every baby has the right to be naturally fed. Breast-feeding gives him the chance to become healthy and strong, to which we all agree he is entitled.

It is the baby's right not to be deprived of his own proper food without careful consideration. If it is found to be necessary to do so, then every care must be taken to provide him with the best substitute, in order to replace, as well as can be done, his natural food.

STORING EGGS AT HOME

WITH THE PROSPECT of a shortage, and resultant high prices for eggs, between October and January next, the Poultry Division of the Dominion Live Stock Branch urges housewives to take advantage of present high quality and low prices for eggs to preserve a practical quantity for winter use.

Nearly every housewife has available an earthenware crock, a small water-tight barrel or similar receptable having a capacity of from four to five gallons, liquid measure. Such a receptacle is ideal for the storing of eggs at home and will hold around one case, or thirty dozen eggs which is recommended as a practical quantity for use during the winter for cooking purposes.

The preparation of suitable preservatives is a fairly simple matter. Lime-water and water-glass are the two best preservatives known. Dr. Frank T. Shutt, Dominion Chemist, after many years of experimental work, endorses both of these but expresses the view that lime-water is a better preservative than water-glass in that it keeps the quality of the egg better than does the water-glass.

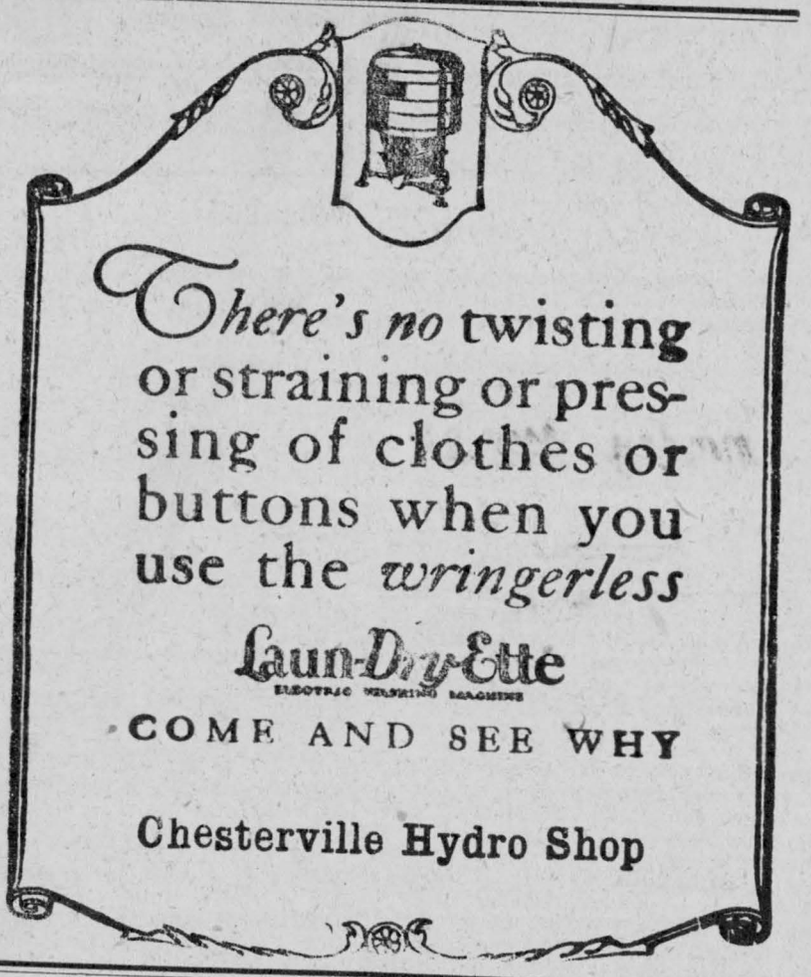

Lime-water solution for preserving eggs is made by the use of freshly-slaked burnt quick lime at the rate of one pound to five gallons of water. This will make a suitable saturated lime-water solution sufficient to fill a receptacle capable of holding between twenty and thirty dozen eggs.

Where water-glass is used (silicate of soda), which can be obtained from almost any druggist or grocer, a five per cent solution, that is, five pounds of water-glass to ten gallons of water, is recommended as giving the best results.

In selecting eggs for home storing only eggs of the very first quality should be chosen. Eggs of commercial grade "Fresh Extra" are entirely suitable; and the housewife putting down eggs from her own flock will be well advised to candle them to make sure of their quality before putting them into the preservative. An egg of the grad "Fresh Extra" when held up against a strong light will show an air-cell of not over one-quarter of an inch. It also requires to be a fairly large egg, weighing not less than 24 ounces to the dozen. Eggs should be placed in the crock or other receptacle to be used and then covered with the preserving solution. They should not be taken out of the solution or allowed to become exposed to the air until they are wanted for use.

The Census of Canada 1931

In the opening weeks of June every family and every home in Canada will be visited by a representative of the Government for the great national purpose of taking the seventh census of Canada.

The census is really a stocktaking. That is, it provides the information to enable the Government and others interested in the development of the country to formulate progressive policies for the happiness, comfort and prosperity of our people.

All the information supplied is strictly confidential, and the officers of the Government are subject to severe penalty if they disclose any of the information which is given to them by residents in the country, to any other than the Government.

Furthermore, it has nothing whatever to do with taxation, or military service, or compulsory school attendance, or immigration, or any such matter; and the Government itself cannot use it except for statistical totals.

The Government representative will put the same questions to all, and it is your duty as a resident of this country to answer promptly and truthfully. The Government is very anxious to avoid forcing anyone to answer these questions, but it is empowered to do so in the few cases where individuals may refuse.

Tne Cowboy Cook

THE following story was told me by a hotel man who comes to Santa Barbara every summer from one of the desert towns of California:

I was born on a cow ranch in southern Arizona. As schools in the part of the country were about as numerous as hens' teeth, I got most of my education in the saddle. I followed range work till I was twenty-three years old. Then I was hurt by a horse and had to quit the hard riding.

As I had always been pretty handy with the frying-pan I thought I would try camp cooking. So I went over to the Ramada Corral, at Yuma, where some riders were outfitting to go down into the Cocopah country. Sam Myers, the boss, was one of those sober-sided jokers. When I asked him for a job, he said:

"Down in those Cocopah Bottoms where we're going it ain't very healthy, especially for young people."

"What's down there?" I asked.

"The meanest bunch of swamp guerillas in Mexico and probably in the world," replied Sam emphatically. "Yes, sir. José Machado and his gang of cutthroats sure are bad ones. They think they own the whole delta of the Colorado River. They've got everyone down there bluffed out, including the Mexican rurales—and also including myself as soon as I can get my cattle out of there."

After giving me time to digest these remarks Sam said: "All right. We're pulling out at noon, so be here with your bed."

Beef, beans and bread, and two meals a day were all a cowboy expected in those days. And I had only five riders to cook for. The Hardy River country swarmed with game; and I spent my days hunting quail, ducks, deer and wild hogs and inventing better ways to cook them. Sam declared I was the best cook in Mexico and probably in the world.

Making hot-cakes over an open fire is something that camp cooks as a rule can't do. Cooking them in a frying pan is too slow and the heat is too uneven. But I figured out a system of my own. I made a scoop by cutting the top and one side out of a two-gallon syrup can. With this scoop I would dig up live coals from the fire and spread them out on the ground in a thin layer about a foot wide and eight feet long. Then I would string about six pie plates on this bed of coals and put a hot cake in the middle of each. If any of them got too hot I would sift some sand over the coals. When it came time to turn a hot cake I would take hold of the edge of the pan with a pair of wire nippers and give it the high-up-and over. We had plenty of crushed comb honey to eat on them, and there was a happy bunch of cowboys in that camp every morning.

After I had been in that camp a couple of months without seeing a soul but the outfit I was cooking for I got careless. It was rumoured that Machado's gang was operating over in Sonora. One day I went off down the river after fish without any kind of shooting iron. It was about noon when I got back to camp. I noticed some tracks—riding boots with spurs dragging. Then I found that my rifle, Sam's shotgun, both my six-shooters and the big, new, pearl-handled revolver that Sam had given me were all missing. The next thing I knew armed horsemen came spurring into the camp from all directions, seven all told; they were mighty mean-looking Mexicans. I put my hands up as far as I could, without waiting for any invitation. The mob gathered round me; every one of them looking as bravo as he could.

The leader of the bunch, a big black, burly fellow riding a fine sorrel horse, was wearing the new, pearl-handled revolver that Sam had given me. Sam had explained that he was giving me that gun because it was the handsomest-looking and the crookedest-shooting weapon ever manufactured. It had been given to him for a Christmas present by a man who owed him two thousand dollars.

The leader reined his horse close up to me, then, leaning over in his saddle and tapping his chest, said in Spanish, "I am José Machado!" I guess he thought I was going to faint at the sound of that awful name. He seemed disappointed when I acted as dumb as an oyster. Then, in Spanish, he asked me what I was doing there. I could understand every word he said; but I acted kind of blank and worried and asked, "Don't any of you boys speak English?"

That was one thing I was always cranky about. I could speak pretty good Mexican-Spanish, but somehow I hated to do it. I never would do it until I had made sure that the other fellow couldn't speak English. I had begun this with Machado without thinking, and now it was too late to back out. Machado then began to call me a lot of foul names, all in Spanish. I could see that he was watching to see if it would make me mad. Suddenly he said quickly to a fellow behind me, "Give him a kick."

I was so busy holding my face straight and trying not to act as though I was waiting for something that I was greatly surprised when the fellow did kick me. I was hostile, too, and in a few well chosen words told that hombre what I thought of him. Machado seemed greatly amused.

When Machado had had his laugh out he began questioning me, speaking good English. I answered everything he asked me, telling him the exact truth. Finally he asked, "Got anything to eat?"

"I sure have," I replied, welcoming the turn of conversation. "That big pot on the fire is half full of frijoles, and that other one has six mallard ducks in it, stewed with onions. They have been simmering there on the coals all day, so they ought to be good. We're all ready to go as soon as anyone comes in, and, as your men are hungry, and as you have the drop on me, help yourself. I'll feed my gang on beef."

"Your gang won't need any feed," said Machado, with an ugly grin. Then he ordered his top hand to tie me up to a mesquite, adding: "When we get through eating we'll take him out in the brush and stick a knife in him." He said this in English, so that I would get the full benefit of it. I grinned, making believe that I thought him joking. But that wasn't an easy grin, because I knew that Machado was a cold-blooded murderer many times over.

Those bandits hadn't had anything but jerked beef and coffee for a long time, and how they did fly into the stewed duck and frijoles! One of them said to Machado: "Don't kill him today—he's too good a cook."

They were all sure I didn't understand Spanish and talked freely of their plans. I heard them say that they were all out of cartridges for their revolvers, and that it was lucky they had plenty of rifle cartridges for the gringos. I gathered the bandits had scouts out who would warn them when Sam and the cowboys approached with the herd. Their plan was to wait until the cows had been corralled, to shoot all five of the riders from ambush, and then take all their arms, ammunition and cattle.

I surely did rack my brains for an idea as I stood with my back to that mesquite tree watching the Mexicans eat. The way the rawhide thongs were biting I knew there was no hope of getting loose. I kept thinking of my five good friends being foully murdered.

Mexicans go strong on pepper, and the stuff I had cooked wasn't strong enough for them. I kept hearing them say in Spanish, "Pass the pepper." "Pass the pepper." And then, all of a sudden, I got a big idea. It was just like picking up a million dollars.

I did some heavy thinking then for about half a minute. Then, speaking casually, I called over to Machado, who was doing some fast work on the breast of a mallard. "Any of you boys like hot-cakes? We've got some crushed comb honey to go with them."

Three of the Mexicans besides Machado could understand English. They had had hot-cakes at some of the border towns, and they began telling how good they were with syrup, and that honey would be better because it was thicker, and so on.

Machado seemed to like the idea pretty well at first. But presently he asked suspiciously: "How you going to make hot-cakes for all this bunch without any stove? On top of what-you-call-'em? A range?"

"I invented a system of my own," I replied carelessly. "And I'm said to be the best hot-cake cooker in Mexico and probably the world. And I'd a whole lot rather cook hot-cakes than have my hands chewed off by a rawhide thong."

Machado grinned and told his top hand, fellow called Pancho, to cut me loose and stand herd over me with his rifle and to shoot me down like a dog if I made a single false move.

I didn't waste any time getting that hot-cake batter ready. Because, as I had it figured out, my life and the lives of my five friends, depended on my getting those hot-cakes on the fire before the bandits got beyond the "pass the pepper" stage. The bandits had built a big quick fire to make coffee on, and it had burnt down so that the coals were just right. I soon had a couple of scoopfuls spread along the ground and my six pie plates strung out in a row. I gave the first stack of six hot-cakes to Machado and put some of the crushed comb honey close to him. All this time Pancho was stalking around close to me, keeping me covered with his rifle. As he seemed gloomy over having had to leave his dinner, I was particularly careful not to make any false moves.

Pretty soon Machado, who was a fast, nervous eater, told Pancho to come back and finish his dinner. He said he would take a turn at watching the cook. I was mighty hopeful when I saw that Pancho was taking his rifle with him, and that Machado, who was picking his teeth and couldn't be bothered with a double-handled shooting iron, was going to stand herd over me with that big, crooked-shooting pearl-handled revolver that he had stolen from me. Things were coming my way even better than I had planned.

I was very busy juggling my six hot-cake plates. Apparently I was thinking of nothing else. And Machado was more than well satisfied with himself and the world on account of all the stewed duck, hot-cakes and honey, and so on, that he had stowed away. He probably couldn't beieve at this moment, that a cook who had furnished him with such a repast could be a troublesome fellow. Or perhaps he was just too full of duck and hot-cakes to do any heavy thinking. At any rate he went over and sat down where he could watch me from the shade of a tree about twenty feet away. That was good; the farther away the better. But, best of all, he was on the other side of the camp from the mesquite where he had tied his fine sorrel horse. All the other animals were grazing some distance away on their stake ropes.

I was all ready to go now—except for a good excuse to pass the pepper. The six bandits were all lined up around a small canvas that was spread on the ground to serve as a table. It was in the shade of a mesquite about ten feet from the fire. Presently I saw an hombre helping himself to frijoles. That gave me the excuse I was looking for, and I remarked casually: "I doubt if those beans are hot enough, boys. That black pepper is no good; but here's some of that old red kind, hot enough to burn the roof of your mouth off."

Before releasing this remark I had taken pains to fill my two-gallon scoop with fresh coals. To all appearances I was about to string out some more of the condensed heat underneath my hot cake pans. Now, as though not very intent on what I was doing, I straightened up. Still hanging on to my scoop full of coals, as though I had forgotten to put it down, I stepped over to the grub box and got the pepper can—it was a pound can and was nearly full—and started over to where the men were eating. I expected every second to get a curse or a shot from Machado. Without making any move that would excite his suspicions, I managed to loosen the lid of the pepper can with my thumb and forefinger. Then, as I approached the feasting bandits, I suddenly dumped the whole can of pepper on the live coals, gave the scoop a quick shake to mix the contents well, and, with one sweep of my arm, showered the smoking coals and pepper over the circle of bandits. The next second the air was filled with ashes, live coals, pepper smoke and fine red pepper. I think that every one of the six bandits tried to cough and to sneeze and to choke and to yell and curse all at the same time. That was what it sounded like anyway. They all began scrambling in every direction, pawing tears out of their eyes, butting and backing into and knocking one another down. I could see at a glance that for two minutes at least I had nothing to fear from those six bandits.

Machado's big pearl-handled revolver, the one that Sam had given me, went off with a bang. Whirling around, I saw Machado running toward me, shooting as he came. And I made a flying start for Machado's sorrel horse.

But a smoke-blinded bandit who was scuttling backward out of the mêlée got in my way. He was wiping pepper tears out of his eyes with one hand and trying to knock a live coal out of his top knot with the other. He was too busy to notice anyone. I grabbed a revolver and a knife from his belt as I dodged around him. And I tried to return Machado's fire. But snap-snap-snap was all I could get out of that revolver. Then I remembered having heard the bandits say that they were clear out of pistol cartridges. By this time Machado had fired six shots at me with the big-pearl-handled revolver. He was a crack shot with a pistol—that was the reason he didn't hit me. The better the shot the surer the miss with that revolver.

Machado slammed the gun down on the ground, whipped out a wicked-looking knife and made for me.

Did I run for that horse? Well, so far as I remember, I don't know for sure whether I ran or flew, or whether I vaulted into the saddle, or whether I just wished I was in the saddle and landed there. Anyway, I made wonderful speed. Two things I distinctly recall—the sight of Machado's black, ugly face, his white teeth showing like tusks, coming close behind me, and the horse I was heading for, scared at my coming at him so fast, trying to break loose. I was deathly afraid that Machado would have that knife into me before I could mount, and that the horse would break loose before I could get into the saddle.

But the next thing I knew, by some hook or crook, there I was astride my mount. Machado made a flying leap to grab my leg as I leaned forward to cut the tie rope. The horse, probably thinking that Machado was going to club him, gave a scared lurch to one side. That lurch probably saved my life, although it nearly threw me sprawling. Then, as my sharp blade sliced off the rope, that nervy mount of mine gave a great forward leap and was off like a bounding greyhound.

A glance over my shoulder showed me Machado running for a rifle. He sent ten shots after me; but it was a willful waste of ammunition, because by this time I was out of sight in the brush. I don't think he tried to follow me at all. He knew it was no use, because my mount was the fastest horse in the country.

I rode out, met the boys coming in with the herd and told them to look out for an ambush. But we didn't see any more of the bandits.

Machado never came back to claim his horse, and, as I couldn't find out whom he had stolen him from, I kept him. When I went back to Yuma I sold him for enough to buy an interest in a lunch counter. That was my start in the restaurant and hotel business. I succeeded because I take a real interest in feeding people—that was how I got on so well with Machado.

Ottawa on Egg Markets

Ottawa, May 26.—Early in the past week egg markets in Canada were firm at the higher levels reached the previous week, says a report issued today by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and this condition has been fairly well maintained. There is still some surplus over consumptive requirements and until the demand for consumption is on a par with the receipts there is not likely to be much change in the market, adds the report.

Country prices in producing areas are now starting to show some reaction to the higher levels which have been prevailing recently on the carlot market. At the Pacific Coast the market is in a considerably firmer condition. Receipts there are dropping off quite steadily. British Columbia eggs are now commanding 23 cents in carlots delivered Montreal for extras.

Conditions on the prairie provinces are somewhat variable. At certain points princes are working upward as a result of the generally firmer market prevailing, while at other centres values are holding unchanged. All over the prairies very substantial reductions in receipts are reported and the general tone of the market undoubtedly is firmer. Western dealers are now asking up to 22 cents for extras in carlots and with the demand from the east stronger is appears that the western sellers will be able to sell eggs at this price.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. John A. MacLean, who entered into rest May 31st, 1925.

Our Heavenly Father was going His rounds
And could not His wishes deny
That our dear Mother be taken
To reign with Him on high.

No stain was on her pure soul,
Sin had not entered there,
And innocence sleeps sweetly on
That pale white brow so fair.

She was too pure for this bold earth,
Too beautiful to stay,
So God's holy angels bore
Our darling Mother away.

Ever remembered by daughters—
Greta, Verna and Jessie.

IN MEMORIAM

Henderson—In loving memory of our darling little daughter, Doreen Henderson, who passed away May 24, 1930.

When we reach the heavenly garden
And see her in full bloom,
The flower we loved so dearly
And thought God plucked too soon;
Oh then we shall know the reason
Though we know it not to-day,
Why in her fragrant beauty
God took our darling away.

"TheOldNewHampshireHome" Cleverly Given at Morewood

A very entertaining drama, "The Old New Hampshire Home," was cleverly presented in the Morewood United Church Hall by Group 4 of the Ladies' Aid. The play itself was exceedingly interesting in its theme, having been plotted about an old New Hampshire home, and presented a true picture of the rigid discipline of the early New England home. Each singular rôle was well played by persons well chosen to act therein, and the players excelled themselves as was indicated by the generous audience which was in attendance.

Headline in the Paterson, N. J. Morning Call says: "Cloven Foot Rears Ugly Head as Election Fraud is Charged." And, no doubt, has its back to the wall.
