HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Mother and Daughter Banquet Held by Presbyterian C.G.I.T.

On Friday evening, May 1st, the Canadian Girls In Training of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Chesterville, held their first Mother and Daughter Banquet in the Library. Mothers, daughters, and friends numbering forty enjoyed a sumptuous repast. Miss McKay, leader of the group presided over the tables.

A delightful programme followed the banquet. Toasts were given to "The King," "Our Mothers," "The C. G. I. T.," and "The Church." Mrs. Irwin Cross and Miss Gertrude Weegar very effectively sang "That Wonderful Mother of Mine," and a chorus was given by a number of C. G. I. T. girls.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. J. Riddell, of Pittson, President of this Presbyterial. In her address, which was very inspiring and instructive, she emphasized the wonderful opportunities for the girls of today and showed how some of these were linked up with the C. G. I. T. programme. She pointed out the duties of mothers and daughters in this present day situation.

The guests included besides the mothers, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Sproule, Mrs. Riddell, Mrs. Weegar, Mrs. Black, Miss Gardner and Mrs. Doering.

Robbie and Willie Huxtable Killed In Auto Crash

Saturday afternoon the startling news was flashed from Toronto that two natives of Chesterville, Robert and Willie Huxtable, sons of Mr. and Mrs. William Huxtable, former residents of Chesterville where they lived for a number of years and where their family was raised, together with Dr. Wilbur J. Faulkner, husband of their daughter Edith, had received fatal injuries in an automobile crash early the same morning in Toronto.

Robert Huxtable died as he was taken to St. Joseph's hospital, Dr. Faulkner passed away during the afternoon, Willie's death following early Tuesday morning in the same hospital.

There were no eye witnesses to the actual crash of the car into a heavy iron post between the street car tracks on the Lakeshore Road, near Ellis Avenue, at a curve in the street. Willie Huxtable was to have been married Saturday afternoon to Miss Eva Gonn, a Toronto girl, and the motor trip was taken after a "bachelor" party on Friday night in celebration of the coming event, for the purpose of taking Robbie to his home on Briarcroft avenue in the extreme west end of the city. Dr. Faulkner was driving and just why he did not see the post is not known. The car was an absolute wreck, the body had been ripped from the chassis after the impact against the iron pole, and was found twenty feet away. The two front doors were found 85 feet from the point of impact and glass was showered all over the roadday within 150 feet.

The Huxtable boys were born here, Robert was 36 years of age, and Willie, 32. The former has for many years been in the employ of the Canadian Bank of Commerce in the securities department at the head office in Toronto. He was prominent in staff athletics and played centre for the bank team in the financial hockey league for a number of years. Willie was a mechanical dentist and employed by Arthur C. Whitely, Danforth and Broadview aves.

Dr. Faulkner, dentist, a brother-in-law of the Huxtable boys, was 31 years of age and with his wife, Edith Huxtable, lived at the home of the latters' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Huxtable, at 300 Garden avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Huxtable and family are well remembered in Chesterville where they are exceedingly well thought of and where a vast wave of sympathy goes out to them in their hour of intense bereavement.

Some years ago the eldest daughter, Gertie, a nurse in New York City, died under tragic circumstances following the accidental swallowing of a pin.

Mrs. Henry McQuaig, Prescott

A former resident of Winchester passed away in Prescott Wednesday evening last, just at sunset, in the person of Mrs. McQuaig. Having gone to spend the winter near her son, Mr. Wesley McQuaig, she took sick a few weeks ago. Rev. D. N. Coburn, her pastor at Prescott, accompanied the remains to Winchester on Friday, where he conducted the service in the United Church, the message being given by her former pastor, Rev. J. A. Waddell. An old-time favourite hymn, "He's the fairest of ten thousand to my soul," was most expressively sung by Mrs. Percy Durant.

Mrs. G. W. Dawson, Iowa

Mr. Dawson Beatty, Winchester, received word that his sister-in-law, Carrie Dawson, passed away unexpectedly at her home in Rockford, Iowa, on Thursday, April 23rd. She had prepared the evening meal for herself and her husband and had done up the necessary work afterwards. Her husband went out to attend to some business and while he was gone she felt a weak spell coming on and managed to telephone for the doctor who came at once and found her lying unconscious on the davenport. Her husband was summoned, but she never rallied and passed away within fifteen minutes.

Besides her husband, she is survived by one daughter and three stepsons, one of whom is a State Attorney in Washington, D. C.

The funeral service was conducted by her pastor in Rockford M. E. Church on April 26th, and the remains were laid to rest in the family plot at Marble Rock amid a profusion of beautiful flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson visited Mr. and Mrs. D Beattie at Chesterville nearly forty years ago when on their honeymoon.

Chesterville United Y.P.S. Stages Delightful Banquet

A most delightful banquet was held by the Young People's Society of Chesterville United Church Tuesday night in the Sunday School hall, when Rev. Mr. Donnelly, of Brockville, was the guest speaker, and who delivered an interesting address on the subject "Scraps."

The room was tastefully decorated in yellow and white, daffodils and yellow lillies adorning the tables and combining to make a very pleasing effect. More than eighty were present and enjoyed the excellent menu and the list of toasts provided fine speeches, with Mrs. Lyle Marcellus, president of the society, as toastmaster.

Rev. Mr. Donnelly spoke on the different "scraps" of life, explaining how a "scrapped life" could be made into a beautiful and helpful one. He was tendered a vote of thanks by the toastmaster, moved by Miss Irene Hamilton and seconded by Jack Cross, and which he gracefully accepted.

The toastmaster expressed the appreciation of the society to the mothers, girls and boys who helped to make the splendid evening possible. Special note was made of Misses Betty Bolster and Enid Barwick who hand painted all the place cards.

Miss Rae Dixon, who spoke in reply to the toast to "Our Country," proposed by Eric Casselman, proved to be the most interesting speaker on the toast list. Her address was highly instructive and was delivered in a very pleasing manner.

The evening's programme was as follows:

"The King," proposed by Harry Allison and replied to by "God Save the King."

"Our Country," Eric Casselman, responded to by Miss Rae Dixon, and the singing of "O Canada."

Piano Solo, Miss Helen Hamilton.

Vocal Solo, Miss Addie Campderros, accompanied by Miss Helen Hamilton at the piano and Miss Madge Campderros with her violin.

"Young People," Mrs. Newman; reply, Miss Lillian Tate.

Vocal Duet, Misses Madge Campderros and Elsie Hewitt.

"The Church," Allison Graham, replied to by Rev. Mr. Newman.

"Scraps," by Rev. Mr. Donnelly, of Brockville, guest speaker.

Grantley Boy Attacked by Cow

Dalton Ray Darling, six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Darling, Grantley, was seriously injured when he was attacked by a cow as he was bringing them from pasture Friday afternoon. The lad was rounding up the cattle when a cow, which had a calf at her side, charged him. Her horns caught in the boy's belt and he was tossed about until it broke, when he was trampled, receiving a double fracture of his right leg just below the knee and a severe bruising.

Mrs. Darling was alarmed as her son did not come with the cattle and went in search of him, finding him lying injured in the field. She was unable to reach him as the animal still charged about and it was necessary for Mr. Darling to drive the cow back with a pitch fork so the boy could be rescued.

Prominent Avonmore Man Died Friday Last

Albert O. Miller, one of Avonmore's best known and most highly respected citizens, died peacefully on Friday evening, following an illness of about two months from heart trouble. Mr. Miller had been quite ill for the past few days, but the end came quite suddenly on Friday evening, when Mr. Miller passed away as he slept.

Carrying on an insurance business for many years, occupying the offices of Notary Public, Division Court Clerk, and Secretary Treasurer of the High School Board of Avonmore, Mr. Miller was one of the town's most public spirited and useful citizens. His passing will be keenly regretted, not only in Avonmore, but throughout the United Counties, where he was well and favourably known.

He was born in Moulinette seventy years ago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Miller. At the age of nineteen he went to Avonmore, where he has since resided. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow, formerly Jane McIntyre, of Berwick; three sons, Cecil, of Edmonton, Alta.; Earl, at home, and Claude, of Queen's University, Kingston; and one daughter, Mrs. S. L. Begg, of Crysler.

The funeral was held from his late residence at two o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, May 5th, to St. James' United Church, Avonmore.

Daniel Lavere, Winchester

Following a painful and protracted illness, death came as a happy release toMr. D. Lavere, at his home on Church street, Winchester, Friday night, May 1st. He was in his 72nd year and is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Hazel Hutt, and Mrs. Russell Crowder, also one son, Harold, all of Winchester.

The high esteem in which the late Mr. Lavere was held was shown by the large attendance at his funeral on Sunday at 1.30 p.m. in the United Church when his pastor, Rev. J. A. Waddell, brought a message of comfort from the words of Jesus: "Let not your heart be troubled," and the male quartette of the choir sang: "Nearer My God to Thee."

The bearers were Messrs. H. L. Hughes, Rowat Elliott, Oscar Pierce, Albert McIntosh, Joseph Robinson, and John McCormick.

Interment was made in the Brown cemetery.

Body of Woman Bore Fifty Wounds

Rockland, Ont., May 5.—The body of Mrs. Adelard Goulet bore some 50 wounds and the woman could not have committed suicide, according to testimony of Dr. E. R. Frankish. Toronto medico-legal expert, who was one of the first witness called at the inquest here tonight. Lucia Goulet, 17, the womans daughter, who yesterday was arraigned on a charge of murdering her mother, was present to hear the evidence.

Hundreds of villagers swarmed around the town hall as the inquest opened into the death of the 54-year-old woman whose body was found Friday morning lying in a pool of blood in her home. The local coroner at first decided it was a case of suicide. Police investigation led to a different conclusion and without awaiting the result of tonight's inquest officials laid a charge of murder against the young girl.

As Lucia Goulet entered the hall in charge of two police officers, her father met and embraced her, as did her sister, Mrs. F. Charbonneau, of Hull, and the latter's husband. It was Mrs. Charbonneau whose suspicions led to the police investigation.

There were a multitude of stab wounds on the upper part of the body, Dr. Frankish told the jury. Five of the wounds had been found on Mrs. Goulet's back while the others were distributed about her head, neck and shoulders. The right hand bore a deep cut between the thumb and index finger.

Death had been caused by one of three deep wounds in the neck. "In my opinion, Dr. Frankish said, "the cause of death was from the wound which severed the main artery in the neck. I do not think the woman committed suicide."

F. D. Jacob. Dominion Government handwriting expert, of Ottawa, was put in the box to give his opinion as to an unsigned note left lying in the home, which, translated from the Frech read: "I killed myself because I was despondent. Heaven help my children. For you Lucia."

"I have come to the conclusion that the mother had no part at all in the document," Mr. Jacob said.

King on Throne 21 Years Tuesday

Tuesday was the 21st anniversary of the accession of King George to the Throne. He succeeded his father when Edward VII died on May 6, 1910.

It is not customary to hold a popular celebration of the anniversary. The only usual public recognition is the firing of a salute at St. James' Palace and at some of the naval centres.

The King and Queen spent the day at Windsor Castle. They are expected to return to London on Saturday.

Laundress: "I couldn't come yesterday,Miss Jones. I had such a pain."

Mistress: "What was it, Melissa? Dyspepsia?"

Laundress: "Well, ma'am, it was something I eat; the doctor called it acute indiscretion."

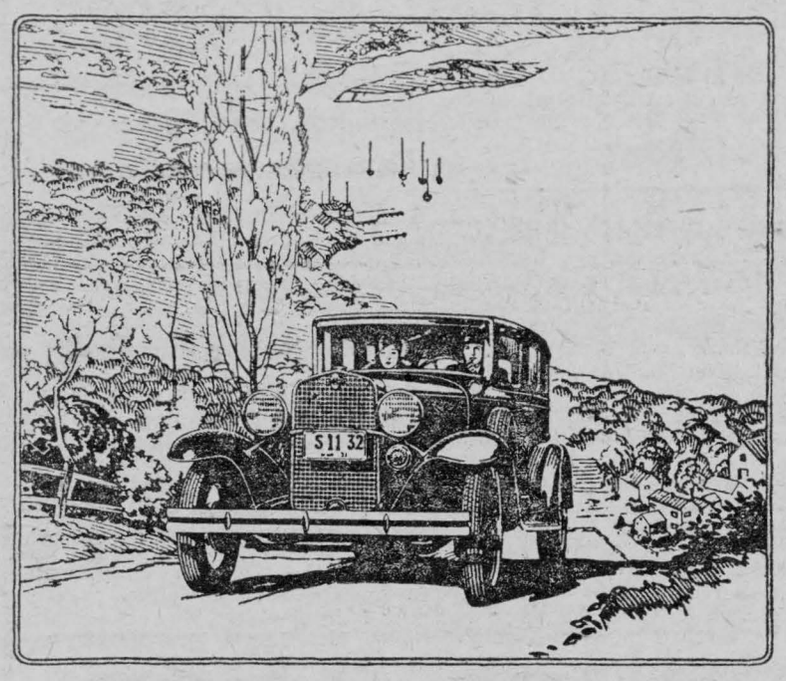

Kid: "Pa, what is an optimist?"

Pa: "He's a merchant, son, who advertises his wares on billboards and thinks motorists will slow up to read the ads."

Entire Family Asphyxiated In Home at Verdun

Carbon-monoxide gas generated by a flueless gas water-heater was responsible for the loss of six lives, an entire family, at Verdun Tuesday morning, between 7.30 and 10 o'clock, at which latter hour the tragedy was discovered. Inhalators were used for nearly two hours on the victims without success and the bodies were taken to the morgue.

Hector Hayeur, 28 years of age, his wife, nee Delia Boyer, 36 years of age, and their four children, Gilberte, 14 years of age, Lucille, 12 years of age, Lionel, 10 years of age, and Jeannette, 3 years of age, were the victims, all found dead in the apartment into which they had moved on May 1, at 287 Fifth avenue, Verdun.

A flueless gas water-heater is blamed for the tragedy. The heater had no ventilating tube leading outdoors and a piece of tin was found covering the hole to which a piece of pipe should have been attached. The burner generated carbon-monoxide gas, which had no escape except into the apartment through the bottom of the heater. A washing machine half-filled with soiled linen was placed in the kitchen and apparently Mrs. Hayeur had intended washing and had lit the gas in the heater. According to the police, the water in the hot water tank was boiling when they arrived at 10 o'clock.

The positions of the bodies in the house bore mute testimony that the victims were unaware of the danger until they were overcome and unable to act. The father was found at the kitchen door as though he had attempted to open it before he collapsed. Baby Jeannette was lying on the kitchen table where her mother had dropped her before collapsing under the table. At the same table the second oldest daughter, Lucille, who apparently had been doing her school tasks and had slumped forward over the table in her chair. The time of the tragedy was estimated at about eight o'clock in the morning, fro m these facts by Chief Dubeau, of the Verdun police.

In a bedroom off the kitchen and lying in bed were Gilberte and her brother, Lionel, who had completed dressing and had become drowsy from the gas and collapsed on the bed beside his sister. Only the baby's body was warm when Constable P. Keogh, of the Verdun police, arrived with inhalators.

We read again that a Bostonian was showing a visiting Briton around.

"This is Bunker Hill Monument—where Warren fell, you know."

The visitor surveyed the lofty shaft thoughtfully, and then said: "Nasty fall! Killed him, of course?'

Boarder: "Say, landlady, this breakfast food tastes just like sawdust."

Landlady: "Nonsense! You don't seem to realize what fine board you're getting."

old walls and ceilings

with Gyproc

HERE is a wallboard that does not burn, made from gypsum rock into sheets 4 to 10 feet long, 4 feet wide and 3/8 of an inch thick. It is used for interior walls, ceilings and partitions.

As well as being fire-resistant, it has structural strength, insulation value and is draught and vermin-proof. Use Gyproc Joint Filler for sealing the joints between the tall, broad sheets of wallboard.

When you are "doing over" any room in the house or adding new ones in the attic or basement, use Gyproc for walls and ceilings because you can nail it directly over the old surface. Gyproc is also an excellent base for Alabastine, Gyptex or wallpaper.

Gyproc is Canada's pioneer non-burning gypsum wallboard. Ask your nearest dealer for full details and a Gyproc direction sheet. Or write us for the FREE booklet, "Building and Remodelling with Gyproc". 374

Father Sees Three Sons Die In Burning Playhouse

Tweed, Ont., May 2.—"Half a minute, Dad, and I'll get the kids." With these words, 14-year-old George Rashotte threw away his chance for life and plunged into a blazing barn to die with his two small brothers today. The brothers, William, aged eight; Benjamin, five, and George were sleeping in their playhouse on the second floor of the barn when fire broke out. Their frantic father, Felix Rashotte, saw George at the loft door and yelled to him to jump. George refused. Later his body was found. His arm was around little Ben. Mrs. Rashotte, overcome by shock, was struck blind and is reported in a critical position.

Three weeks ago, in response to their coaxing, the boys were given permission to build a small playhouse in the second storey of the barn. Each night they slept in a little home-made bed. It was a glorious adventure for the youngsters; an adventure which had a sad ending.

Early today neighbours heard a cow bawling. They notified the father, who rushed out to see the entire structure in flames and George at the loft door. Helplessly, Rashotte saw his son turn back into the blazing inferno, heard the crash which meant the interior of the barn had collapsed. Mrs. Rashotte was away, visiting in Stirling. She returned shortly after the fire and collapsed.

The three bodies were recovered shortly after the fire was extinguished. All were burned beyond recognition. Bill had evidently got to the ladder leading from the loft door on the inside, only to fall through the trap into the flaming ruins of the building. The other two were lying on the little bed which they had so proudly constructed.

Imediately the fire was discovered the alarm was given and the local fire department fought furiously to prevent the flames from spreading to the house which was but 20 feet away. In this they were successful, although they were unable to do anything towards the rescue of the children.

Tonight, six girls and one boy, sisters and brother of the three who died, grieve silently.

WHEN MR. PEASLEE WAS A SELECTMAN

CALEB PEASLEE, laboriously weeding his beets, straightened a hand on either hip and groaned with the effort.

Deacon Hyne, who was leaning on the fence, almostg roaned in sympathy as he watched him. "You're workin' too stiddy over them beets, Kellup," he counselled. "You'll be hooked over like a tree in an ice storm if you don't lay off a spell and git the kinks out of you. A man can't weed all day 'thout liftin' his head and not suffer from it, anyway not if he's got to the age where you'n I have."

Caleb left his weeder sticking in the earth and approached the fence. "I s'pose you're in the right of it, Hyne,' 'he admitted. "I know you are, for that matter." He paused to survey the patch. "I d'know when I've let such a growth of weeds get the start of me b'fore; I s'pose it's the wet weather we've had, and now the shepherd's-sprout and pussley's come up thicker and stouter'n wheat did in Abel Dolliver's gravel pit once."

The deacon looked at Caleb as if he could not have heard aright. "Wheat come up where?" he asked.

"In Abel Dolliver's gravel pit," Caleb repeated stolidly.

"Tell me about it," demanded the deacon.

"I knew about it," Caleb began obediently, "on account of bein' one of the s'lectmen of the town at the time. One of the things that gave us trouble was the question of gittin' Abel Dolliver to fence his gravel pit so folks wouldn't be in danger goin' into it when they drove 'long that road nights, or when they walked along there either.

"But Abel was cross-grained and pudjicky about it, and all I could say to him didn't move him; he jest let on he didn't hear or care, and meanwhile there the pit was close to the border of the road, but not teching it. Orrin Somes had one cow fall into it, and it took a gang of twenty men half a day to fetch her out, and she was wild as a pa'tridge for a fortnight afterwards, and Orrin claimed it shrunk her milk so that from bein' the best cow in the herd, givin' better'n ten quarts to a milkin', she hardly give enough the rest of the summer to pay for fetchin' her up from the pasture at night.

"Then another night Aaron Sneed went into it and stayed there all night in a rain; but, seein' he had a jug of cider in there with him and was a kind of town nuisance anyway, folks didn't make so much stir over that as they would if it had been a cow or somethin' of value like that. And Eph Lane tipped a couple of tons of hay in there once when he turned out to pass a team and his hind wheels got too near the aidge; he'd have gone with it and his oxen too, only the kingbolt pulled out and let the load and rack go free of the forrard wheels.

"There was four or five other little happenin's too, but it chanced nobody got hurt any nor lost any gre't amount of time, and anybody might be hurt bad by it. Of course the town could have gone to law and made Able close it up with a sufficient fence, but nobody likes to carry a neighbour to court till somethin' happens. Fin'ly, though, I got scared that somethin' might come up and the town'd have a bill of damages to pay, and so I went to Abel and told him somethin'd have to be done about fencin' that pit. He heard out that time, for he saw I was in earnest, but when I got through he shut his mouth and pushed his upper lip out stubborn, and all I could git out of him was that he couldn't see any harm in the pit, and when he did he'd fence it, and he wouldn't till then! So, seein' I wa'n't makin' headway, I went off and left him, bein' p'suaded I'd have to fetch him by way of law after all.

"But in mebbe three days word come to me that Abel'd fenced in the pit with stout spruce logs and posts that'd hold a pair of hosses to pull on, and I went over to see it; and then the same day I chanced to meet Abel and spoke to him about it. He had a load of gravel on his tip cart, and I thought he moved his neck 'sif it was stiff and lame. I told how the town was pleased and asked him what changed his mind on it, but not one word could I git out of him. Not one word! And if it hadn't been for somethin' I noticed later in the year I s'pose I'd never known.

"It chanced Abel was tryin' a new kind of seed wheat that year. He got the seed over somewhere in the next county and sowed mebbe five acres of it, and it was taller and greener whilst it was growin' and ripened browner'n any wheat we'd ever grown in these parts. I went over a dozen times to look at it and admire it, and so did others; so I got so I could have told that wheat amongst a dozen other kinds if they'd all been growin' in the same field.

"Well, one day I was drivin' over to'rds Abel's gravel pit when I heard a little clink of iron, and I knew in a minute old Bess'd cast a shoe; so I hauled her to the side of the road right abrest of Abel's pit and hitched her there whilst I went back to pick up the shoe, bein' it was most a new one, and when I stepped along to her head to onhitch her I craned my neck over and took a look down into the pit. I d'know why I did, except that it's one of the things you do some times for no reason.

"But what I saw there made me look again and look close to be sure I wa'n't mistook—and I wa'n't. Down in that pit ten foot below the road was as han'some a stand of wheat as I ever saw. It stood as close as the stalks would grow, and it was that new kind of wheat Abel got somewhere away and fetched home to sow that spring. I studied over it a minute and thought back about the load of gravel I'd seen him haulin' at the time he built the fence, and in a few minutes I'd got the rights of it—almost as near as the facts I taxed out of Abel when I got to pinnin' him down to questions the next time I ketched him alone.

"He'd gone over with his team and was haulin' the wheat home of a dark night, and he blundered into his own gravel pit and bust two of the bags of seed wheat. Seein' he'd always poohed at the idea of it bein' a menace, he'd made up his mind not to own up; but he fixed a fence, and then he'd shovelled up a load of gravel off'n the top and sowed it on to his field along with the wheat, figgerin' he'd got it all in that load.

"'But it 'pear I didn't,' he says. 'From what you say I must've left some—'nough to let the cat out of the bag anyway.' And he seemed to study on it a minute, and then he gi'n me a kind of queer look. 'It mebbe is all right for a man to be stubborn and not own up when he's wrong about a thing,' he says, 'but not when nature's agin him, and I give up this time,' Abel says."

Farmers, Attention!

When Farmers tried Co-Operative Marketing, they struck snags.

Each fellow had ideas of his own as to how it should be done. No one knew for sure.

They often picked for a manager a fellow who couldn't manage his own affairs.

The stuff they had to sell was as many kinds as pies at a picnic. It didn't sell so well.

Dealers in Farm stuff didn't like Co-Operative Buying and Selling. They tried to bust it; they often succeeded.

Buying and Selling Co-Operatively sometimes didn't pay any better than the old way; that didn't help much.

But many farmers kept on trying their Co-Operative ways, sometimes failed, at times got along well. They kept on and found they didn't know much after all.

But they learned; learned alot. They are still learning. Everybody has to learn. Do you know anybody who hasn't had to learn?

OPPORTUNITY !

According to a questionaire sent out by the Dept. of Agriculture there is goinig to be anenormous decrease in the number of chicks raised in Canada this year. This, together with the fact that we have a high tariff against foreign eggs, can mean only one thing —"Sky high prices for poultry and eggs ext fall and winter."

Now is the time you will have to decide if you are going tohave a flock of pullets to go in your laying house this fall. In a very short time it will be too late to take advantage of this opportunity to cash in on the high poultry and egg prices that, under the circumstances, are sure to prevail later in the season. Chicks must be started not later than April or May to make good winter layers. It is going to cost less to produce pullets this year than it ever did. Feed prices are low and we have made a substantial reduction in the prices of chicks.

Following are our prices on both Single Com W. Leghorns and Barred Plymouth Rocks.

Up to and Including	April 15th and April 22nd	April 29 and May 6th	May 13th and May 20th	May 27th and June 3rd	June 10th and June 17th
100	$ 16.00	$ 15.00	$ 14.00	$ 13.00	$ 12.00
500	12.00	70.00	65.00	60.00	55.00
1000	140.00	130.00	120.00	110.00	100.00

A limited number of week and two week old chicks at reasonable prices.

A few second hand incubators in hot air, hot water and all electric, at bargain prices

A supply of brooder stoves, feeders, waterers, leg bands, water thermostats, incubator thermometers, etc., always on hand.

Our Ottawa Letter

OTTAWA, May 6th.—The problem of what the farmer needs and the question of what has been done to meet those needs formed the most interesting discussion of the parliamentary session in its first six weeks.

The farmer in this instance is mainly the Western farmer and Western members in opposition to the Government have painted a very doleful picture of his condition. In their words he is ruined and facing extermination and nothing is being done about it. It is not one farmer, or a section, or sections of farmers, but all farmers who are in this position we are told.

To which Premier Bennett makes answer that, while conditions are by no means what he would have them, the opposition ballyhoo of calamity, catastrophe and disaster is not only unwarranted but very detrimental to the interests they profess to serve. Low prices, speculation and bad luck have co-operated to bring hardship to a large number, but a far larger number—if not comparatively prosperous—are far from the breadline. They have, thousands of them, healthy bank accounts and are resentful, Mr. Bennett says, of their being classified as mendicants.

The crying of "stinking fish" by those who profess to be political friends of the farmer has, according to the Premier, helped to intensify the agriculturists' difficulties, because it has had the natural tendency to dry up his credit facilities. The government has taken action with banks and loan agencies to correct this situation, has co-operated with the Provinces to provide direct relief and seed grain where necessary and stood between the farmer and the forced sale of his grain at slaughtered prices throughout the winter. It has found and is finding new markets for his wheat. More of the Government plan to aid agriculture is promised when estimates covering that department are discussed.

* * * *

A NOVEL, though unofficial suggestion has stirred up an awful tempest in a teapot around Ontario. It is the proposal of a baker down at Sydney, Nova Scotia, that manufactured goods from Ontario be blacklisted in Nova Scotia until such time as Ontario backs up the eastern province's demand for practical legislation to revive the Nova Scotian coal and steel industries. The legislation desired is either much higher duties on imported coal and coke, or some form of subsidy on Canadian coal to meet the same objective.

The baker says the Maritimes haven't kicked at the higher duties to aid central Canada manufacturers to hold the Canadian market and he wants a little co-operation and reciprocity. And to most people the baker appears logical, even though no official bodies in his own province have endorsed the radical idea of blacklisting to get action.

While central Canada deplores the very thought of a blacklist, no one has yet adduced any cogent reason why the east should not get recognition. It might increase the cost of coal to manufacturers, or even to the public in certain regions, but the very same argument holds with respect to the protection enjoyed by these manufacturers, which is quite as likely to increase the cost of the goods made by them to the consumer in the Maritimes, or on the prairies. The protective policy is national policy and not for individual or provincial aggrandizement, and it is the uttermost in folly to say that Maritime or Western interests can manufacture the same goods with the same protection as Ontario or Quebec. They haven't the market and it would be quite as logical to claim Central Canadian industries generally could compete in Canada without protection against the massed production and dumping of the United States and other countries.

Coal and steel are Nova Scotia's backbone and while the Sydney baker took a violent way of emphasizing the matter, he has driven home a point which affects not only Nova Scotia, but all other provinces that are entitled to compensatory advantages in return for the concentration of manufacturing industry in Central Canada.

THE GLADIOLUS

Experimental Farms Note

THE gladiolus is one of the most popular flowers, and rightly so. It is of easy culture and can be obtained in a great range of colours, with flowers of various shapes and sizes. Some of the flowers are very brilliant in colour and some are of soft and subdued hues, suiting all tastes. The effect of a number of these flowers in bloom on a single stem at one time is very striking.

Any good garden soil is suitable. The corms or bulbs may be planted as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring, but where the season is long, a time is chosen that will bring them into bloom when required. They are planted three to four inches deep in groups, with the corms about four inches apart or in rows two to three feet apart. Do not use diseased corms. They should be in full sunlight and the soil should be kept well cultivated to keep down the weeds.

For cut flowers the stems may be cut when the first bud opens, leaving two sets of leaves to help build up the new corms. The corms are dug before there is danger of their being frozen and left to dry in the cellar and kept dry all winter.

There are hundreds of varieties of gladioli and many varieties have been tested at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. A few of the best ones are the following: Albatross, Joerg's White, Mrs. Dr. Norton, Apple Blossom, Golden Dream, Golden Measure, Dr. F. E. Bennett, Majestic, Sultan, Purple Glory, Apricot Glow, Giant Nymph, Pfitzers Triumph, W. H. Phipps, Evelyn Kirtland, Charles Dickens, Veilchenbleau, Anna Eberius.

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS:

MANY a house has been transformed in its general appearance by the use of window boxes, some times supplemented by porch boxes and by plants in hanging baskets. Window boxes should be at least eight inches deep, ten inches is better. As a rule, wooden boxes are used, although terra cotta and concrete are sometimes made into boxes, especially for apartment houses. They are too heavy for general use. There are also various boxes made of metal which look fairly well, although they cannot compare for architectural effects with well constructed wooden boxes. They have an advantage in the fact that they contain self-watering devices. If a wooden box is used, it should be made of such durable wood as cypress, and if desired may be covered with bark on the outside, although a painted box looks almost as well. Some times boxes are painted on the inside as well as on the outside, but it is preferable to char them on the inside by brushing over the sides with kerosene and burning them over quickly.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Hon. Thomas L. Kennedy and Dr. G. I. Christie made a trip last week to the States of the Central West for the purpose of visiting agricultural colleges in that area, as well as a number of Vocational Agricultural and Home Economics Schools. Ontario's problem in this regard is now before the Minister and he is seeking some helpful information.

Farm Underdrainage Profitable

It cannot be too often pointed out to the farming public that drainage is not only immensely beneficial to farm crops, but from a financial standpoint may be definitely profitable.

Quoting from Bulletin 360, a new publication put out by O. A. C., we find that "From a financial standpoint underdrainage can be considered as a long time investment—and unlike most other long time investments it will often pay divideds sufficient to return the original capital in two or three years." The benefits to be derived from underdrainage are enumerated in full in this bulletin which is exceptionally well illustrated. Full information is given on how to tile and how to construct outlets, tables for calculating the size and number of tile needed, and the cost of excavating being provided also.

The bulletin may be obtained by writing to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

Overseas Apple Market

Mr. Andrew Fulton, overseas representative of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association, has returned to Toronto after spending seven months in the European markets. This closes his second season in his position. During the past winter and spring the proceeds of sales made by him amounted to $210,000, which represents an increase of 300 per cent over last year's results. One of his chief objects is to create a cash market for Ontario apples. During the past season 18,000 barrels were sold in Europe and 50,000 more could have been disposed of if they had been available. The cash prices set by the growers themselves were obtained in every instance. Future prospects are most promising, but there is need for definite steps to standardize the pack in order to assure buyers of a uniform quality. Central packing houses and cold storage facilities, such as those in Norfolk County, will contribute greatly towards establishing Ontario grown apples in the European market. Fruit of uniformly high quality was sent overseas from the Norfolk plant during the past year and it commanded a premium of from 75c to $1.50 a barrel over ordinary prices. The government supervised packing house at NewCastle also made a reputation for itself by the packing of straight lines of dependable quality.

Fertilizer on Potatoes

Seed potatoes of pure variety and free from disease are the first requisite to a good quality crop. The soil must be well-tilled and friable, well supplied with plant fibre or organic matter so that air circlation may be at its best and water-holding capacity at its highest. Pointing out that the crop must have a large supply of suitable plant food, O. A. C. officials refer to potato fertilizer tests conducted in 1930 which gave an average increase of 53 bushels per acre where an adequate amount of fertilizer was used, over parallel sections without fertilizers. The best results were obtained with 2–12–6 with manure or clover ploughed under with 4–8–10 where there was not a supply of green or barnyard manure. The amounts used were 725 pounds per acre. The average yield from 37 tests of 4–8–10 fertilizer was 249.5 bushels per acre, as compared with 178.2 bushels per acre from check plots, or a gain of 71.3 bushels per acre from fertilizing. With potatoes selling at $1.00 a bag, the net gain, after deduction of fertilizer cost, was $30.13 per acre. Growers are cautioned not to drop the seed pieces immediately upon fertilizers, or the latter will rob the seed potatoes of their moisture and injure their vitality Fertilizers should be mixed with soil before dropping potato seed pieces.

Marketing Board's Powers

Duties and powers of the newly-appointed Ontario Marketing Board, as defined in a special Act passed at the last legislative session, give an adequate picture of the aims and objects of the Board. Firstly, it will make a general survey of agricultural conditions and keep a tabulation of all information obtained; it will collect information regarding soil, climate, etc., to aid in determining the adaptability of the various counties for any particular class of farming; it will make recommendations as to packing, marketing and transporting of any agricultural product and will seek the best marketing facilities for this purpose; it will diffuse information regarding the best methods for increasing productivity of soil and the production of any particular class of produce; it will encourage proper methods of manufacture, preparation and packing of dairy products for marketing in Ontario and elsewhere; and generally it will promote the interests of the agricultural industry in Ontario as deemed expedient. The Marketing Board is a new departure, instituted in accordance with the desire of departmental officials to improve marketing practice in the agricultural industry. Hon. T. L. Kennedy has frequently stressed the fact that marketing of Ontario farm produce is one of the big problems today and he hopes that this Board will inaugurate a new era that will mean a tremendous saving to Ontario farmers.

Sow Alfalfa Seed

In their seeding programme this year, dairy farmers particularly should not overlook the fact that there is a large supply of Ontario-grown alfalfa seed available and at the lowest prices of many years. A large part of the new seeding, therefore, can be made economically with alfalfa, while a few pounds of alfalfa seed per acre should be included in all seeding mixtures. The dry summer was responsible for failure of last year's new seeding and the outlook for a scarcity of good quality next winter. Seeding a few acres of alfalfa without a nurse crop will help to supply this deficiency.

Farm Loans

The recently issued report of the Agricultural Development Board showed that since the board was established in 1922, over $35,000,000 has been loaned, upwards of $6,000,000 has been paid back on capital, and the total amount outstanding at the end of the fiscal year was $29,454,834. A big increase in the demands for services of the Board was noted in the fall of 1929 and has continued ever since. This was reflected in the report of the year endingOctober 31, 1930, which showed an increase of over two millions in the aggregate of loans granted. W. B. Roadhouse, chairman of the board, remarks that to some extent this reflects general economic conditions which have adversely affected agriculture, but that for the most part this is not new indebtedness, the bulk of it being made up of the transfer of mortgages held previously by corporations or individuals. Further, over fifty per cent of the amount due was paid as due during the year, an evidence of the stability of Ontario agriculture even under the most trying conditions.

Attack Pasture Problems

Plans for extensive research on the pasture problems of Ontario were made at a conference of representatives of the various interested Departments of the O. A. C. recently. The Deputy Minister of Agriculture attended and assisted in outlining the project. A committee of Departmental heads, was appointed to make a preliminary survey of pasture conditions in the Province. This party will start out shortly and will visit a number of sections throughout the Province.

Research projects will cover different phases of the problem such as grasses, fertilization, best utilization and management, the control of weeds, the elimination of insect parasites, diseases, etc.

A number of experiments on pastures are now under way at the College and in other parts of the Province. These will be supplemented and new phases of the work will be undertaken. It will be readily seen, therefore, that every effort is being made to secure the best and most profitable development of the pasture lands of Ontario.

Dog Makes Long Trek

The attachment which "Don," a thoroughbred collie dog, just a little over a year old, has for Sault Ste. Marie and his master, John Brodie, has made him the hero of a most remarkable incident which includes a journey, through difficulties which must have been almost insurmountable, from a lonely farm near Goderich back to this city, after Mr. Brodie had taken him to that place, via Michigan. How the animal managed to make his way back is a mystery, and it is not yet known just what route he travelled. If he came through Michigan, retracing his route when taken to Goderich, he would have to cross the international border twice, at Port Huron and the Sault, and also manage to make the crossing at the Straits of Mackinac. Yet he made the trip in just one week.

NORAH'S BRIGHT IDEA

NORAH laid her pen down and opened and closed her hand five or six times to relieve the ache in her cramped fingers. Her brown eyes wandered down the long rows of desks in the office, and her lips parted in a little sigh as she observed the absorbed faces bent over the afternoon's w.rk. The girl at the desk beside her own was addressing and filling in post cards, just as Norah herself was doing; and so were the two girls in front, and the one across the narrow aisle.

Through the window on her other side a tantalizing finger of sunlight was playing hide and seek with itself among the neat piles of cards on Norah's desk.

No one except Norah seemed to notice it. Busy typewriters clicked on; pens flew across envelopes and cards; sharply insistent telephone bells rang here and there, first on one desk, and then on another.

No one noticed Norah, either. Four days ago, when she had first come, some one had explained her work to her, had given her lists, post cards, and baskets of letters and then had left her to herself to carry out her instructions.

The fashion department of a big woman's department had recently started a shopping service for out-of-town readers, and Norah and the four other girls round her were employed to address post cards acknowledging the receipt of orders and to fill in on the back the name of the shop that would ship the goods. It was not very interesting work, but it was simple.

She had been so proud of getting a job at the very first try! It had all come about in this way. After grandfather had died last year,—they had lived with him ever since Norah's own father had died years before,—Norah's mother had done everything that a slender little wisp of a woman with three children could do to keep things going and let Norah, the oldest, finish high school. She had taken in sewing for the neighbours, had put up jams and jellies and had opened and closed summer cottages during the spring and fall.

She and Norah had talked hopefully about Norah's "business career"—they had always dignified it with that imposing phrase when they were alone together. They had made such plans for the future—things they would do for the younger children and for each other; trips they would take in vacations—of course the trips were a long way off in the years, but it was fun to discuss them.

Then, two weeks after her graduation, Norah had seen the Household World's advertisement for clerical workers in the "Help Wanted" column of the Sunday newspaper, had answered it in person the next morning and was engaged before a single other applicant had put in an appearance.

"I'm to get fourteen dollars a week," Norah announced grandly at supper that night to mother and the wide-eyed twins. "And that's only a beginning. You'll see. I'm going to work so hard they just won't be able to help moving me higher."

Mother, with cheeks almost as pink as Norah's from the excitement of the moment, was inwardly convinced that Norah would be nothing less than fashion editor in a few months. The twins, who had the vaguest notions of what a fashion editor might be, joyfully predicted vast sums of money, which they were willing to assist Norah in spending.

Altogether it had been a most exhilarating affair, that supper.

Norah took up her pen slowly. She did not mind the actual addressing, even though it was monotonous; but how, if she were kept addressing endless post cards day after day, was her chance to come to do anything different?

Of course she tried to avoid mistakes in the work and to write as many cards as she could between nine o'clock and five, but then, those four other girls did as much, too, or they would not have been there. Norah realized now that she had dimly expected the office to be a kind of glorified school, where her efforts would be noticed and commented upon.

An unreasonable little feeling of utter desolation squeezed two unexpected tears into her eyes and forced a lump into her throat. It was foolish, of course, and she knew it, but for the moment the impersonal hurry and routine of the office and her own insignificance frightened her.

Then—for there was a good fighting spirit in Norah, inherited from mother, who had not given up at a much harder pinch than her daughter had ever known—the girl lifted her curly head to a determined angle. A new aspect of the case had occurred to her.

If she went on doing her work in a machine-like way she would be treated like a machine. But if she kept her mind alertly on each detail, tried to find better or quicker ways to do it — She gave a deep little sigh of relief, and her eyes began to smile in their usual fashion.

It was not for the office to discover her, as she had ignorantly imagined; it was for her, Norah Landen, to discover herself.

During the next hour she wrote steadily, doggedly. Each time she or one of the four girls round her finished a pile of a hundred cards she passed it on to a sixth girl at a desk farther down the office; this girl dated each card with a small changeable rubber date stamp.

"How much quicker that is than having to write it out by hand," Norah said, lingering a moment after handing over her cards. "I wonder why—" she began impulsively and stopped short.

She turned abruptly without another word and went back to her own desk on flying feet to think out an idea that had come to her.

It was so simple that she was afraid for a minute or two that some one else in the department must have already thought of it and discarded it for some reason.

Still, suppose, no one had. Norah took up one of her lists and counted carefully the names of the shops with which most of the orders were placed. There were exactly eight of them, and they all had long names that it took a great many loops and twists of a pen to write.

"I don't believe anyone has thought of it here," Norah said under her breath. "The department is new, and all the short cuts haven't been worked out yet."

She wondered whether she had the requisite courage to walk into the fashion editor's private office and ask for permission to explain her idea. For a second or so she hesitated.

"But if it's really a short cut she'll want to know," she argued with herself. "I guess I—will." And she rose bravely on the word.

The door of the fashion editor's office stood open wide, and, halting timidly on the threshold, Norah saw that Mrs. Lloyd was leisurely sorting samples of gayly coloured chiffons and velvets. She glanced up at the sound of footsteps, and Norah noticed that her eyes were kindly.

"Did you wish to see me about something?" the fashion editor asked in a pleasant voice.

"Oh, yes, please!" Norah forgot her shyness and smiled back. She came into the office softly and, leaning against the big roll-top desk, spread out her funny little collection on the blotter.

"I thought," she began a bit breathlessly, but nevertheless holding her voice steady, "I thought I had better come to you. I am quite sure I have found a way to save time in filling in the shopping orders—about several hours a day, perhaps. You see, here." Norah drew her collection of exhibits forward one by one. "This is one of the cards as we write them now, and here's a list of shops we're using this month—they're awfully long names to fill in. This other thing's a date stamp. One girl stamps all the cards, you know, and it's so nice and quick. Wouldn't it be a good plan to have a rubber stamp made for each shop, too, and then, after the cards are addressed, they could be put in separate piles, a pile for each shop, and one girl could stamp them all when she dates them."

Norah stopped, quite out of breath, and faced the fashion editor with shining eyes and flushed cheeks.

"Good! I will make out an order for them at once,' 'Mrs. Lloyd said briskly, trying not to smile at the eagerness of the young face before her. She looked at Norah rather curiously. "How did you happen to think about saving time, my dear?"

Norah's flush deepened.

"I don't want to be just a—a sort of machine always," she said shyly.

Mrs. Lloyd put her hand impulsively on the girl's arm.

"I'm glad to know you feel like that," she said simply, but the approval in her tone went warmly to Norah's excitedly beating heart. "We haven't much use for machines here, either. Go on keeping your eyes open, my dear, and whenever you have another idea bring it to me."

Norah went out of the office with a triumphant little tune beating in her brain in rhythm with the dancing impulse in the tips of her toes. She turned gayly to her next-door neighbour, a stolid, flaxen-haired girl of about her own age.

"Isn't it the most wonderful day ever?" she demanded.

The flaxen-haired girl sighed heavily.

"Uh-uh!" she agreed indifferently. "Wish't I was out of the office to enjoy it, though."

"I don't," said Norah. She glanced about her with a proprietary air. Everything was different. It was her office, now.

"Work is nothing more than a very interesting game," she added with conviction, "when you've learned how to play it right."

WHAT TO EAT

Individual enthusiasts are very often a serious menace to those who follow their misguided teachings. Enthusiasts, even when we may fairly call them cranks, are in most cases sincere. Because of their sincerity and enthusiasm, they are convincing, and this accounts, no doubt, for the extensive following which many of them have.

The enthusiasts on the subject of some particular food or diet are generally persons who are sure that some one food or combination of foods will benefit the human race. They overlook the fact that whay may be of help to one individual may not be good for all. The experience on which they base their conclusions is so limited that their contentions do not stand when generally applied.

The body requires a number of substances which must be secured in the food we eat if the body is to be kept in a state of health.

When we come to consider what we should eat in order to secure a sufficient quantity of all the substances which we require, we think of all the foods used, not merely this one or that one.

Much of what is written or said concerning the value of one particular food is based upon the idea that we are to use or depend upon one or, at the most, a very few articles of diet. This is wrong. The diet of the normal, healthy adult should include the use of a wide variety of foods.

Fortunately for us, and thanks to science which has given us rapid transportation and discovered safe and satisfactory methods for the preservation of foods, we are able to have a wide variety of foods the year round.

Not many years ago, scurvy was prevalent during the winter months. We do not suffer from this disease nowadays, because we can have fresh or canned green vegetables and fresh or dried fruits at any season of the year.

The increased use of milk and milk products, of green leafy vegetables and fruits, and of cuts of meat which were previously not eaten, such as liver, constitutes a move in the right direction.

The normal, healthy adult would be well advised not to follow the food faddist. Because one man does well on some unusual diet, this does not mean that it is suitable for another. Because some roughage in the diet is required, it does not follow that a larger amount is desirable; indeed, it may be harmful.

The normal, healthy adult should eat a wide variety of foods. Milk and milk products, fruits and green leafy vegetables should form a regular part of the diet. The amount of food to be used depends upon age and occupation, and can be regulated by watching any variation in the weight.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Assbciation, 14 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Every Friday evening Anne calls her mother by Long Distance . . . after 8.30 p.m. when the low night rates are in effect. During the week they both keep memos of topics they wish to discuss. Then there is no time lost . . . and nothing forgotten.

What if they are 120 miles apart! The telephone connection is made in about a minute — nearly always while Anne holds the line. Their voices are just as clear as on local, and the cost, after 8.30 p.m., is only 40 cents.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. Night rates begin at 8.30 p.m.

In its general application, it requires that the motorist responsible for damage to person or property of others MUST PAY either personally or through insurance OR BE BARRED FROM THE ROAD.

The sensible thing to do is to carry Automobile Liability and Property Damage Insurance. It is better to have this insurance and not need it, than to need it and not have it.
