Council Meeting For August Acheives Much Siren, Stove, Sewer, Fire Plugs Attended To

Councillors Brannen, Durant, Doering and Turner met with Reeve Chas. McMillan and the clerk, H. C. Hummel in the Community Hall last Tuesday night for the August meeting of the Town Council.

Hydro business was quickly disposed of. The only item that came up apart from the passing of accounts was the delay in the installation of the new 'luminaires' on Main Street. There has been some difficulty in the matter of shipping the right models, but it is only a matter of exchanging the wrong shipment for the right one. It is hoped to have them installed in a very short time.

Fire Chief Sidney Morris attended council to make arrangements about the ordering and installation of the new fire siren and alarm system. He was in receipt of quotations from a supply house for a siren of 2 horse power, a system of electrical hook-ups and alarm boxes that would put four to six alarm signal boxes throughout the village. The estimated cost is in the neighbourhood of $300. The cost of the wire is extra and the labour is to be supplied gratis by the firemen. It is hoped to have the equipment on order by next week. Reeve and Fire Chief are to examine a two-horse installation at Kemptville this week to determine the best type of alarm box to purchase.

While on the subject of fire control, the Fire Chief pointed out that a couple of hydrants of the village were in poor shape. He was instructed to take the necessary steps to have them repaired or replaced immediately, and council made the recommendation that a spare fire-plug be on hand at all times. The ones needing immediate attention are at the corner of Joseph and Main in front of the Dixon house and the one at Dan MacMillan's corner at King and Emma.

The annual grant to the Horticultural Society was given and appreciation was expressed by the reeve and councillors for the good work that is being done by the Society on ner. A sump is to be installed at the east end to discourage small boys behalf of the town. The grant was for $50.00.

Title to the old given road at the end of Victoria Street was transferred to the purchaser of the McGee lot for the consideration of one dollar. A fine new house is to be erected there next to McGee's and Merkley's. The transfer was incorporated in By-Law 721.

Theatre operator John Maxwell presented adequate reasons for the reduction of the rental of the Community Theatre for the coming year. Council regarded his words with approval, voiced the sentiments that this theatre is one of the finest equipped in this end of the province and unanimously passed a resolution to reduce the rental from $1800. a year to $1440.

The troublesome tile drain that runs across the High School grounds to the river from College street is to be operated on. Dave Johnston has been ordered to start digging in an effort to discover the trouble and if necessary to unearth the whole thing and lay new tile. This will be a boon to Church Street and South College Street residents who have been pestered with flooding from the low cor- from using the drain end for the hiding of treasures in the way of tin cans and other water stopping objects.

Council finally took cognizance of the difficulties in operating a clean kitchen in the Library with an antiquated wood stove. A new electric four-burner stove and oven is to be installed immediately with a coin meter attached. Much blessing is to accrue from this move. Blessing is not the right term for the thoughts that have been lavished on the old wood-burner in the past. The unsightly stove pipes will come down out of the Theatre a sa result.

Plans were discussed for the installation of an exhaust fan in the Library. Final decision waits on the Board of Directors of the Rotary Club, as it is hoped that the installation can be done on a shared basis. Prices will be sought on a suitable model.

Council closed with a sigh and with a lot of good works accomplished.

SHY'S HORSE KILLED HIT AND RUN DRIVER FLEES

Last Monday night a hit and run driver slammed his unlighted car into the side of one of Melvin 'Shy' Harper's horses that was cropping on the side of the road on Church St. The poor animal was thrown heavily to the pavement with fatal injuries that necessitated a merciful bullet at 2 a.m. The driver kept roaring westward and dissapeared in a cloud of dust and guilt without stopping. Police have investigated without finding the culprit, and 'Shy' is poorer by one good horse because of someone's careless and reckless driving.

Mrs. Ford Harper saw the accident from the verandah of her residence but was unable to identify the car.

The full prize list will be found on page two of the Record and many interesting classes are open to flower lovers. The many commercial houses that have donated prizes are to be thanked for their fine response and the Society is grateful for their support. Remember the date for a pleasant evening, Tuesday, August 16th.

A friend of the bride, Miss Eileen Ball as bridesmaid, wore a blue and white figured afternoon frock, navy and white accessories and carried pink carnations.

L.A. David Speaks On Floor Coverings

The weekly meeting of the Chesterville Rotary Club was held in the Library last Tuesday night with President Howard Fulton in the chair. Attendance was small due to holidays but that is an exception from the past year when the Chesterville Club has been in the leading groups for attendance in the whole district.

Hoping to improve the ventilation of the small Library, it was suggested that an exhaust fan be installed in one of the upper window lights. The idea has been in the works for some time and it seems that something can be done, with the approval of Council. Opaque curtains are to be installed to be drawn over the windows in the event that a program will include the showing of slides or motion pictures.

L. A. 'Lewie' David, program chairman took over the meeting after being introduced by Walter Carr. He spoke on a phase of his business, that of 'Floor Coverings.'

Tracing the history of the discovery and development of linoleum to be used as floor covering the speaker uncovered some interesting material. Lincleum was invented in 1863 by an Englishman named Walton., after he had tried an unsuccessful composition of rubber. By accident he picked up the skin that forms on the top of paint in cans and realized that there were large possibilities in it. From this accident developed the great linoleum industry.

Linoleum today consists of many ingredients from many different lands. Linseed oil from Canada, Kauri gum from New Zealand, burlap and jute from India, Cork from Portugal and Spain are some of the materials used. The oil is oxydized by passing it slowly down long sheets of cloth called 'skrim' until a film of hardened oil is built up to about an inch or more in thickness, then all ground to powder.

The Kauri gum is obtained from the earth in New Zealand from fossilized pine trees that have been buried for millions of years. It is ground and shipped to the linoleum plants in the form of coarse powder.

Cork trees are evergreens found in Portugal and Spain. After the trees are 15 or 20 years old the bark is stripped off every ten years. The bark is compressed in huge bales for shipping.

All these ingredients are assembled at the factory and the process of turning them into linoleum carpets takes place with the ground and powdered materials being added in the right proportions to give the longest wear to the finished product.

Mr. David illustrated his interesting talk with small samples of all the materials as he mentioned them.

The speaker was thanked on behalf of the club by Keith Graham.

Women's Institute Picnic Much Enjoyed At Cottage Of Mrs. H. J. Hamilton

When Mrs. Harold Hamilton extended to the members of the Chesterville Women's Institute, an invitation to picnic at her summer cottage, the event was happily anticipated and on July 27th, about 65 members and friends enjoyed the realization.

When the cavalcade of cars left Chesterville the thermometer stood at a record high, but upon arrival at the rendezvous, the cooling breeze from the St. Lawrence made one of this summer's hottest days delightful.

Always the gracious hostess, Mrs. Hamilton soon made her guests feel that the spacious cottage with all its comforts and beautiful surroundings were entirely at their disposal.

Miss Joan Hamilton piloted her motor boat and many ladies enjoyed a cruise on the river. Swimming and paddling engaged the attention of others in the group.

The meditative gazed on the river envisioning the stories of the past and entranced by the varying moods displayed in those few hours by the mighty St. Lawrence.

It was nice to renew acquaintance with Mrs. Ingram Cross, and to meet Mrs. Matheson, a sister of Maida Parlow French, the author of "Boughs Bend Over" and "All This To Keep."

It was interesting to learn that Mrs. French has sailed for Europe and will write extensively of her experiences.

Mrs. W. O. Dixon performed yoeman service in making gallons of lemonade. A delicious luncheon was served, credit being due those ladies who supplied fried chicken, salads and such delectable pies and rolls. Mrs. Ed. Fitzsimmons of Iroquois kindly lent the necessary chairs.

On behalf of all present Mrs. Hamilton was thanked by the President, Mrs. F. Shaver.

All work and no play makes Jill a dull girl but the W.I. Jills have a lot of work ahead, amongst which: raising money for the park; raising money to maintain the W.I. hospital ward in Winchester Hospital; to assist every effort for the advancement of the community; to answer worthwhile appeals; to hold a class in needlepoint; to hold a class in household accounting and budgeting; to plan a trip to Courtland's in Cornwall; and to live up to their motto: For Home and Country.

Boy Wanted

This is an English story:

After watching the cross-eyed butcher cutting up the carcasses, the new boy assisant edged towards the door.

"I say," he asked the butcher, "do you strike where you're looking?"

"Certainly I do," replied the butcher.

"In that case you can hold the beef yourself," answered the boy. "I'm off!"

The gardens, fifteen in number, all in the vicinity of Chesterville, were found to be in good condition considering the hot dry season and the numerous pests that have made the work of the gardeners more difficult than usual.

The gardens were placed by the Judges in the following order:

1, Edith Byers; 2, Hazel Merkley; 3, Betty Servage; 4, Shirley Beckstead; 5, Doane Irving; 6, Marion Morris; 7, Margaret Gray and Donalda Wheeler all of Chesterville; 9, Ann Moriarity and Joan Lynch, Berwick; 11 Denise Brady; 12, Barbara Servage; 13, Alice Farrell; 14, Ann Carr, all of Chesterville.

Mrs. William A. Wilson Dies While Visiting

Many friends of Mrs. William A. Wilson were shocked to hear of her death on Tuesday of last week at the home of her son, Delmar Wilson at North Lunenburg. Mrs. Wilson came a month ago to visit her son and his family, and on Monday was stricken with a stroke and passed away on Tuesday afternoon without regaining consciousness.

Mrs. Wilson was born in Shroppshire, England, in 1879, was a daughter of Ernest Stephen and his wife, Edith Farrett. She came to Canada when 12 years of age and resided with an aunt. In 1906 she married William Alfred Wilson of Manotick, where they resided, later moving to Winchester Springs, where Mr. Wilson passed away in 1938.

She leaves to mourn her loss three sons and two daughters, Mrs. Robert Coughlar (Evelyn) of Williamsburg; Mrs. George Gow (Muriel) Colquhoun; Welmar Wilson of North Lunenburg; Cecil Wilson of Gallingertown; Ernest Wilson of Inkerman, and thirteen grandchildren.

The remains rested at the home of her son, Delmar Wilson, until Thursday afternoon, when a short service was held, the remains were then taken to Colquhoun United Church, where the funeral service was held, conducted by Rev. J. H. Woodside of North Lunenburg. A solo "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer" was rendered by Mrs. Mahlon Gow. Hymns sung were "Now the day is over" and "Now the laborer's task is over".

Pallbearers were Foster Bowman, Douglas Rupert, Arnold Robb, Jack Wyatt, Glenn Rupert and Percy Moke.

Many floral tributes and messages of sympathy were received by the family from friends and relatives.

Our Fine Feathered Fiend

Henry Ward Beecher once said that if human beings wore wings and feathers very few of them would be clever enough to be crows. He might have added that few would be humorous, mischievous or unpredictable enough. For the common crow is a feathered genius and an endlessly astonishing bird.

A lady in Stewart, Ohio, owned one so dainty that he insisted on washing worms before eating them. A Staten Island crow not only could pick pockets but, when he found a pocket empty, would cry, "Go to hell!" and fly away in a huff. One kept by a Georgia moonshiner, as a lookout against revenuers, would ogle any attractive lady and mutter ribaldy, "Oh-boy-oh-boy-oh-BOY!"

To be sure, not all crows can talk, but certain ones taken young have been known to learn a hundred words and half as many complete phrases; and there are records of wild crows picking up such expressions as "Giddyap!" and "Whoa!" and "Hey!" which they hear farmers shout in the fields.

The common crow is found practically over North America east of the Rocky Mountains, as well as along the western coast line. Because of his pilfering and destructive habits, state and local governments have offered bounties on him for years; but ornithologists wryly agree that there are probably more crows on the American continent today than when it was discovered.

As crows are rather clannish, there are usually a number of nests—perhaps 50 or 60—within a small area. The birds exercise their sly mischievousness by stealing one another's nesting materials. When a nester flies off to feed, one of his neighbors adroitly removes the choicest moss and rootlets, and secrets them in his own nest. Then, when the thief is absent, the recently burglarized bird flies over and regains all the stolen goods, plus half a dozen other choice bits.

This pilfering is probably a friendly joke, for actually crows are devoted to one another. I have often watched them lament over an injured fellow and try to feed him restoratives. Edward Howe Forbush, the ornithologist, tells of a crippled crow that fell into the Merrimack River, cawed desperately for help, and was rescued by his fellows who worked in relays to keep him afloat and gradually dragged him ashore.

Being individualists and unconventional, crows in the nesting season frequently become involved in the eternal triangle. When this happens, fights rarely result; the trio settles down to an unorthodox design for living. It is not uncommon to see two males feeding the same brood of fledglings, and I have seen two females alternately brooding a nestful of eggs while accepting the attentions of one strutting male.

Baby crows stay in the nest about three weeks, consuming their weight in food every day. Then for several days they practice flight maneuvers and wing drills before the critical elders of the flocks, who teach them the rules of the crow community. The youngsters take advantage of their apprenticeship to swindle as much free food as possible. Though perfectly capable of foraging for themselves, they pester their parents with loud and piteous petitionings to be fed, and sometimes feign illness in order to sponge on them.

A list of the things crows eat takes three pages of fine type in a U.S. Department of Agriculture report. The bulk of their diet is vegetables, fruits and nuts, but they can and do eat almost anything else: wasps, rodents, toads, carrion, even poison ivy. A pet crow belonging to a Long Island naturalist once consumed a pint of house paint and survived.

Certain foods are special favorites, and crows' stratagems for getting them are endless. Hunting mice, for instance, is tedious, so a crow sometimes rides on the back of a foraging pig; when the rooting porker turns up a field mouse the wily bird gobbles it and flaps off with a mirthful cackle. If a crow spies a fox carrying prey, he sets up a tumult that fetches all his brethren in the neighborhood; they then swoop down and pester the fox until he gives up his prize.

All crows have a gift of mimicry. Outstanding geniuses can imitate the squawk of a hen, the whine of adog, or the crow of a rooster to perfection. I have watched a crow, artfully concealed in a chicken yard, cluck and crowing to lure a hen from her chicks. When this failed, the crow strolled forth from concealment and walked maddeningly up and down in front of the hen until she rushed at him, whereupon he skipped deftly aside, and two hidden crow-cronies darted down and seized two of the chicks.

Owls sometimes raid crow roosts at night and kill a sleeping bird. So whenever crows locate an owl in daylight they mob him and thrash him to the accompaniment of a hubbub of imprecations. They gang up similarly on hawks, raccons, skunks, cats and any other creatures that they know might harm their eggs or young.

Of human beings the wise and wily bird can afford to be almost contemptuous. Crow sentinels, posted in a high tree while their fellows feed, can spot a gun-barrel half a mile away, and never confuse it with a fishpole or a walking stick. When they signal that a man with a gun is coming, the flock departs in absolute silence at a speed of 45 miles per hour. Crows seem to have a vocabulary of at least 25 caw-words for keeping each other posted, and they hear so well that they can detect the snap of a twig more acutely than any other wild creature except deer.

Wilthout serious threat from enemies or starvation, crows enjoy a lifespan of about 25 years and are free to spend much of their time in games and practical jokes. One favorite and rowdy game is Waking the Sleepers. On hot noondays they love to fly quietly over the country side, drop down on a slumbering rabbit and rap him sharply on the skull, or settle silently on the backs of drowsy cattle and start a sudden terrifying uproar.

Another sport is hide-and-seek. A young crow hides in a hollow tree, and loudly sounds the distress caw. The flock rushes to the spot, hunts vainly and flaps away. This may be repeated a dozen times, after which the young crow pops out of concealment and guffaws. The flock, far from being annoyed, bursts into a hawing and cawing of general merriment.

Crows like to collect white pebbles and shells to gloat over, and also to use in the crowish version of a ball game. One, holding a shell in his beak, launches out from a tree, and the others swoop down and buffet him to make him drop his prize. Then another snatches the shell from the ground and flies off, to be set upon in turn by his playmates.

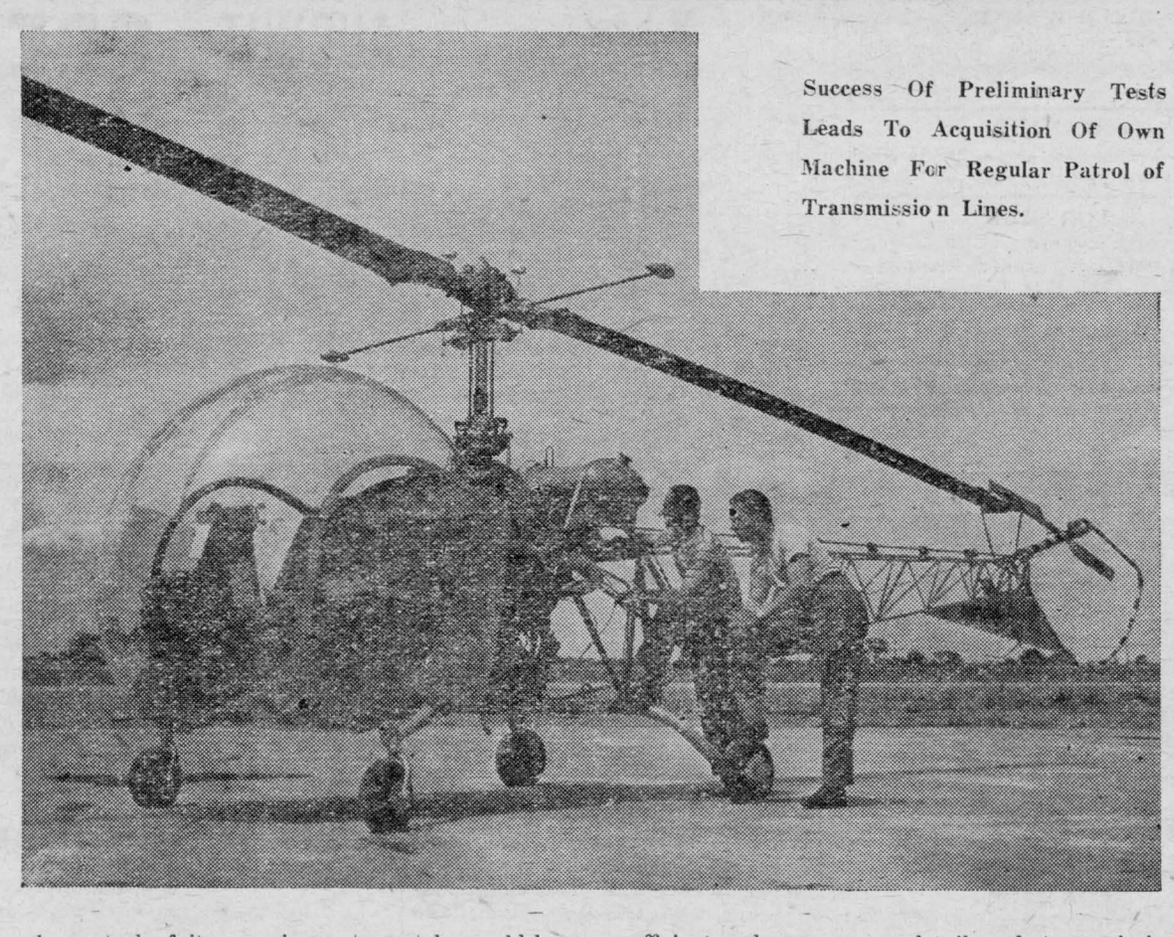

The most extraordinary rites of a flock are the "trials" they conduct. When a crow has broken the laws of crowdom, the flock gathers in judgment, parleying sometimes for hours while the offender waits some distance away. Suddenly the discussion ceases; there is a moment of silence. Then the flock either rises in unison and leaves or dives in a mass upon the offender, pecks out his eyes, and pummels him to death.

In autumn the small summer flocks of crows gradually merge into larger flocks, and presently fly to their great winter roosts, sometimes 1500 miles south at the summer feeding grounds. A Johns Hopkins scientist estimated the population of a roost near Baltimore at 230,000; another near Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia, has held 130,000 crows; one near Peru, Ind., 100,000. Records show that some of these roosts have been occupied by wintering crows since the white man first arrived on this continent.

Many are the tales told of the amazing doings of pet crows. One crow owned by William Crowder, the naturalist, developed the perilous habit of playing with kitchen matches. Not wanting the house burned down in his absence, Crowder substituted a box of safety matches. On his return he found his pet hurling them out of the window one by one, and as the bird hurled them he leered at Crowder and cried, "Ha! Ha!"

The knowingness of a crow is not the thought-born 'intelligence" of man. It is a thing of instinctive cunning and an innate prankish glee—a source of perpetual entertainment and surprise.

HYDRO PURCHASES HELICOPTER FOR REGULAR LINE PATROL

Success Of Preliminary Tests Leads To Acquisition Of Own Machine For Regular Patrol of Transmissio n Lines.

Regular patrol of its growing network of transmission lines, with a three-seater Bell helicopter, believed to be the first aircaft of its kind ever purchased by a public utility exclusively for this type of work, will soon be inaugurated by The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

In making this announcement, the Commission stated that previous use of helicopters by power companies in the United States had been on a charter basis, the aircraft being rented rather than owned outright.

Hydro conducted its own trial flights with a chartered machine, it was pointed out. When these tests proved conclusively that helicopter patrlo would be more efficient and reduce overall maintenance costs, the Commission decided to purchase one for regular use in line patrol.

During patrols the helicopter will normally carry a crew of two, pilot and observer, but three can be carried if required. The pilot has been specially trained for his job at a helicopter school operated by the Bell Aircraft Corporation at Niagara Falls. The engineer who will supervise maintenance of the flying "windmill" also received mechanical instruction in its operation at the Bell plant. The other member of the crew, the observer, will be an experienced member of Hydro's Operations Division, or Regional Staff, fully familiar with the numerous details of transmission line faults.

In the preliminary test patrols conducted a few months ago, it was found that in 18½ actual flying hours, the helicopter did the same job that would have required 600 man hours of ground patrol. In addition, faults were discerned from the air that were not normally visible to the ground observer.

Another and valuable asset of the helicopter was also emphasized: In cases of emergency repairs it will be possible to fly the necessary men and materials in on a shuttle system, land on the line right-of-way beside the trouble spot and effect the repairs in a minimum of time.

Church News

MOREWOOD UNITED CHURCH

At Morewood United Church on Sunday morning the minister, Rev. W. J. Copsey, B.A., preached on the theme "A Task Well Done" based on Luke 10:17, "The seventy returned again with joy saying, Lord, even the devils art subject unto us as through Thy name." Seventy chosen apostles are sent out, two by two, to heal the sick and preach the Kingdom of Heaven. They were to be itinerent preachers to arouse and organize the Christian life of the communities; but not to remain and govern them. They were the Lord's flying squadron to hurriedly visit many ports, His mounted cavalry to preach as they went travelling the circuit of many cities. They were to carry no impedimenta, but to depend upon those whom they served. Even purse, scrip and shoes must be left as unnecessary. Out they went, thirty-five pairs. Soon they had fulfilled their mission, and they rejoined their master at their appointed rendezvous and joyfully tell him of their success, summing up the statement "Even the devils were subject to them through His name." That particular assignment was over. The work was done and well done. There is typifield in this story the mission of the Church to preach and heal, ministering to the souls and bodies of mankind throughout the world. It is obligatory and it shoud be a joy for every Christian to support the missionary work of his own church. Never was there greater need, never greater opportunities. The world is indeed waiting for the light to penetrate in those parts not yet evangelized. In Pakistan alone ten thousand converts were received into the Christian faith on profession of their faith in Christ, in the year that followed the religious-political riots that accompanied the division of India into two states. "The harvest truly is great but the labourers are few, pray ye therefore the Lord of the Harvest that He would send forth labourers into his harvest."

One in a Hundred

One day recently, an Eastern university professor visited the expanding campus of the University of California at Los Angeles. He watched construction work on half-a-dozen new buildings; he inspected new laboratories and attended summer classes in modern study rooms; he walked across miles of eucalyptus-lined lawns and athletic fields with one of the deans. He was impressed.

"My," he said, "just how many students do you have here?"

"Let me see," the dean answered thoughtfully. "I'd say about one in a hundred."

"SALADA"
TEA & COFFEE
Outstanding Quality • Delicious Flavour

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! This year's Woman's World at the Canadian National Exhibition is indeed electrified. The products of the range and refrigerator will be in the spotlight. Men, along with teen-agers, and you, the women, are invited to enter the competition. You will find the food contests "as easy as pie." Honestly though, you may win $100 cash for your apple pie on September 7th, or by submitting a week-end budget for five people on September 10th. Then, too, there is a $50 prize for the ham and two eggs you can cook for the Judge on August 31st, or the salad plate you can prepare for them on September 8th. By the way, there are second, third and fourth prizes too.

Here is what you do:

Send the letter stating competitions you wish to enter before August 15th. The address is Mrs. Kate Aitken, Woman's World Exhibition, C.N.E., Toronto.

On the day of the scheduled competition in which you wish to compete, you will go to the second floor in the Coliseum to Woman's World. Check your registration, name and address on application, and be available to take over the project. Everything will be ready for you. There will be an electric range ready at the flip of the switch, and all the necessary equipment, as well as the ingredients.

The competitors will be judged on the speed of assembly, the ease of handling the equipment, the quality of the prepared food, and the artistry of the dish. For example: the ham should be lifted into the pan with the fork, the pan should be carried on the level, the grease should be drained off before the end of the cooking, or the ham should be lifted to a piece of paper towelling on a plate, to drain off excess fat. Then an egg should be broken into a saucer and slipped into the warm fat—first one egg, then the other. Reduce the heat to Low and cook with a cover or by basting frequently. Transfer to plate with ease and care.

In regard to the salad, the ingredients will be in the refrigerator for you. Trim and prepare quickly. Think of your colour combinations as you shake the washed greens loosely in a towel. Give consideration to food value as well as the quality of the salad ingredients. Do your job just as you would at home and enjoy it. Wish you all could win.

On the day when the big prize is for budget menus, you go into the room with only a few ideas in mind. As you are given your entry blank and a price list of the seasonal foods, check them over and write down menus for Saturday night supper, Sunday breakfast, dinner and supper. Economy is the key note. Consider the following points:

A meal should be different in texture, that is, salad with custard dessert — never, cream soup and blanc mange on the same menu. A meal should have variety in foods, that is, raw tomatoes and apple pie — never, tomato juice and raw tomatoes.

A meal should have a difference in flavour, that is, a Spanish Omelette and a fruit cup — never, liver and onions and spice cake.

A meal should have variety in colour, for instance, glazed carrots and lime jelly — never, cauliflower and bread pudding.

A meal should have good digestive foods, for example, roast chicken, and coddled apples — never fried pork chops and spicy pie.

The day's meals should include milk or milk dishes, one serving of meat, fish, poultry or eggs, one serving of potatoes, two servings of vegetables —one raw and one coloured, one serving of citrous fruit juice or raw tomatoes, four to six slices of whole wheat bread or a whole-grained cereal product.

Now, plan your menus and plan to win.

There is an easy baking item you can make and deliver on September 7th, before 11 a.m. D.S.T. Try your favourite recipe in a 9-inch pan or test our suggestion on the judges. Don't forget to put your name on a piece of adhesive tape and stick it to the pie pan, as well as fill out your entry blank.

APPLE PIE

Pastry

1½ cups sifted cake or pastry flour
½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
¾ cup shortening
About ¼ cup water

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut shortening into the flour mixture with a pastry blender or two knives. The pastry should resemble coarse oatmeal when properly blended. Sprinkle in ice water gradually by spoonfuls until a soft dough is formed. Chill dough for about one hour. Turn on to a lightly floured board and pat the pastry into rectangular shape. Roll up like a jelly roll, then cut in half before rolling out. This is sufficient pastry for your two-crust 9-inch pie.

Filling

6 medium-sized tart apples
1|3 cup granulated sugar
¼ tsp. salt
2 tsps. lemon juice
1|3 tsp. lemon rind
2 tsps. butter

Pare, core and cut the apples into eights. Mix apples, granulated sugar, salt, lemon juice, and lemon rind, together in a bowl, then place the apple mixture into a pastry lined pie plate. Lightly dampen the edges of the bottom crust, dot the butter over the top of the filling. Cover with pastry for the top, that has been slashed in an attractive design for the steam to escape. Bake in an electric oven that has been preheated to 425 degrees for 10 minutes, then reduce the heat to 350 degrees and cook for about 40 minutes. Remove from the oven and cook quickly.

'HOPPERS, WORMS AND ALL LIFE IS INTERESTING FOR THE FARMER

The grasshoppers did it again. A businessman on King St. who keeps a quality shop on week days and battles the bugs on holidays came in the other day with a doleful tale.

Taking advantage of a lull in the commercial field he took to the grain field to do a little necessary binding and stooking. The field was some distance from the house and to save time, piled into the family car that had served faithfully for many moons. Parking the car in one corner of the field out of harm's way, he went about his work. Imagine his surprise, when he returned to the car to find the left hand door post missing, the roof caved in and the windshield damaged beyond repair. He tells us that the General of the grasshopper horde that had eaten the damage was in process of shorting the ignition to start the remains and drive it away, when his hash was settled with a fork. The evidence of the story was plain the next day because Maurice drove to town with the roof of the car propped with a board and the breezes caressing his face through the open front.

One of the residents of Victoria Street was coming down town the other morning and she met something loping down the sidewalk that had tomato plant written all over its ugly face. The lady "stepped aside and let the reptile live" although in this case it was a huge worm as long as your middle finger. Investigating, we find that a swarm of the great insects has descended on the tomato patches of the country side. They are enormous and every one has an evil look in its eye for those who get close enough to see the eye. They make short work of tomato plants, and are believed to be the larva of the batlike 'Cecropia' or cedar moth.
