Henry's Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school ?

Our instruction being individual, you may start at any time.

Prospects Bright.

Mr. H. G. Carter of the Maple Leaf Condensing Co., was in town on Saturday and is very enthusiastic about the prospects of the company. We understand the machinery is to be installed almost immediately and that a tentative contract has been entered into with the war office for a very large quantity of condensed milk.

Write on One Side Only.

Last week in the report of the Women's Institute "At Home," owing to it having been written on both sides of a sheet of paper the following two paragraphs were not discovered, until our attention was called to it by the president.

"The Rev. Mr. McCorkindale told several humorous stories of Scottish "Beadles," and so entertaining were they that all were sincerely were sorry he considered the evening too far advanced to give his "Scottish Reminiscences." as arranged for.

A dainty lunch was served at the close of the programme, after which the National Anthem was sung, bringing to a close a very enjoyable affair."

A Chapter of Accidents.

The heavy coating of ice covering everything outside during the past week has made getting about somewhat of a dangerous proceeding. Several accidents on account of the ice have been reported and severe injuries sustained. Friday Andrew Carruthers, west of Chesterville, was quite seriously hurt. Preparations had been made to deliver two cattle to Chesterville buyers, and they were loaded on a sleigh but before it had left his own place it skidded around on the ice and upset and in the mix-up Mr. Carruthers received his injuries. On the way to town the load was again toppled over. Just at the east end of Hummel's bridge the sleigh again went to the ditch taking a portion of the railing with it and upsetting.

Mr. Samuel Smith is reported to have fallen on the ice and fractured a limb, and we understand that the teacher at Goldfield had a bad fall and sustained a fracture of the hip.

On Wednesday, February 16th

Prof. Dorenwend of Toronto, Americas greatest hair-goods artist will display and demonstrate a sample stock of ladies quality hair-goods and gentlemen's toupees and wigs at the McCloskey House, Chesterville. A free demonstration of any style is available to anyone interested.

Obituary.

MRS. HONOR MCGLOYNE.

Saturday morning at 7.30 o'clock Jan. 29th, 1916, Honor Coyne, widow of the late Wm. McGloyne, peacefully passed to her reward at the ripe old age of about 98 years.

The deceased was born in the County Mayo, Ireland, and came to this country 68 years ago, living continuously in this vicinity since that time.

The funeral took place from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. P. Kirby, on Monday to St. Mary's Church, where Requiem High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Fr. Crowley, thence to the upper cemetery for interment.

The pallbearers were Hugh Kearns, Jas. Dwyer, J. T. Kearns, Chas. Chambers, P. D. O'Grady, Ed. Gibbons.

Another Old Resident Gone.

The death of Mr. Chas. Beckstead of Elma, occurred at his late residence on the evening of Jan. 26th, 1916, at the age of 89 years, 11 months and 26 days.

The deceased was born in the township of Williamsburg a few miles from where he died. He was married to Sarah McMillan of Dunbar in 1844, who predeceased him 13 months ago.

His death came unexpectedly, as he seemed as well as usual, when he took a stroke and only lived 13 days. The funeral service took place on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 29th, in Elma Methodist Church (of which deceased was a member) and was conducted by Rev. H. E. Warren of Chesterville, assisted by Rev. Mr. Ferguson of Williamsburg. Interment afterwards taking place in Williamsburg cemetery.

The pallbearers were Messrs. G. Fetterly, I. Weegar, W. Barkley, Peter Droppo, I. N. Dillabough and A. N. Barkley.

Letter of Condolence.

The following is a letter written to Pte. Frank Merkley on behalf of his comrades of No. 1 Co., Grenadier Guards, St. John, Que., on the death of his father, which occurred on Jan. 20th, 1916.

St. John's, Que., Jan. 22nd

Dear Frank,

We, your roommates, are very sorry to hear of the sad bereavement which has fallen upon you. You have the sympathy of all your comrades. Signed on behalf of comrades:

Corp. Fessender H. A. Cassidy, W. L. Smith, R. Poidevin, Geo. K. Dunn, Wm. St. Pierre, J. Bicum, Wm. E. Hayes, Harry Button Leonard Shirley, R. A. Cassidy, P. E. Hummel, D. L. Chaplin, C. J. Philfot, H. Dawson, Clifford Merkley, J. O'Keefe, L. Downham, A. J. Wilkes.

An Exciting Trip.

A few exciting minutes was furnished Tuesday morning by a horse tied to a pole on the west side of the street opposite The Record Office. An automobile passed frightening the animal a little, and when it began to jump around the cutter slid around on the glare ice frightening the horse still more. The halter held and the horse kept circling the post and with every trip scattered milk cans, robes and other articles over the street and slamming the cutter up against the brick wall. After the horse was controlled the damage was found to be insignificant.

Foot Badly Damaged.

Dorothy Coyne little daughter of Mr. Bernard Coyne has a very badly bruised foot as the result of attempting to jump on a sleigh while it was moving. On the slippery ice the footing was not very sure and instead of landing where she desired, her foot went under the runner and the weight of the sleigh jambed it along the ice, and while the ice has been responsible for many mishaps, the smoothness of it probably saved Dorothy a broken limb. The cry of pain caused the owner to immediately stop and her foot was released.

T. A. McAvoy took the little girl quickly to her home where Dr. Brown was soon in attendance.

Former Chesterville Boy, Aviator, Has Nervous Breakdown.

The following clipping from the Saskatoon Phoenix of January 25th refers to Charles Ross Alford, son of Joseph Alford, formerly of this place but later of Iroquois.

"After months of the most thrilling adventures and dangers at the front in Flanders and in the Dardanelles, Lieut. R. C. Alford, son of Mrs. Alford of 611 MacPherson Avenue, Saskatoon, a British airman, has suffered a complete nervous breakdown, according to a cable received in Saskatoon on Sunday.

Lieut. Alford enlisted with the first contingent to leave Saskatoon after the outbreak of the war. He joined the Engineering Corps in Winnipeg and proceeded to England, where he served in the Aviation Corps in Northern Flanders. He experienced many dangers in this part of the world and later was transferred to the West Yorks, and in September, 1915, went with the regiment to the Dardanelles, where he took part in some of the most daring air raids over the Gallipoli peninsula. He took neurasthenia and he is now in Malta still suffering from a nervous breakdown."

COLLECTION OF WASTE PAPER TO SUPPORT RED CROSS.

Hamilton Jan. 31. —A movement which is expected to spread from coast to coast in Canada, and possibly make the Red Cross self-supporting, will be launched here soon. It is the scheme of Fred G. MacBeth, the man who made such a success of the Canadian Club fruit campaign. At trifling cost, Mr. MacBeth secured $50,000 worth of fruit for the wounded Canadians in military hospitals in France and England. He plans now to make use of the waste papers and rags, thousands and thousands of dollars worth of which are yearly destroyed in Canadian cities. The proposition has been discussed with the Red Cross officials and Mr. MacBeth has been instructed by W. H. Wardrope, K. C., president of the Hamilton branch of the society to go ahead with the plans.

"It is simply a matter of organization," explained Mr. MacBeth. "The market has never been higher for rags and papers and yet there is little, if any attempt to make use of the waste. The lowest grade of rags brings $30 a ton. In view of the great shortage of dyestuffs an assortment of colors, converted into shoody would command a good price.

More than fifty tons of newspapers, to say nothing of wrapping paper and magazines, go to waste, each week in this city. I am satisfied that with a well-organized system Hamilton can provide from $400 to $500 a week throughout the year for the Red Cross. Look what this will mean if every city, town and village in Canada lends a hand.

"In Hamilton, collecting stations will be established, and large bins built to receive the waste, We are going to ask the public and separate school boards to co-operate, for it is the children who must do the work of assembling the rags and papers. Besides giving them a chance to do their bit for the soldiers it will impress them how to save."

If Hamilton, after testing the scheme, finds it a success Mr. MacBeth wants to organize the school children of the entire Dominion to carry on the work on behalf of the Red Cross until the war ends.

BRITAIN CALLS FOR 20,000 MEN FROM CANADA.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—Britain today sent the message Canada's training troops have been eagerly expecting for weeks. The motherland has asked for the despatch across the Atlantic of 20,000 additional Canadian fighting men. Nearly twice the number are ready, and wi hin the next two or three months twenty more Canadian battalions will encamp in England to wait the final summons to the front. The competition among the waiting, ready battalions will be keen, and in so far as the Militia Department can determine, the selection of the fortunate twenty will be in order of merit.

Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, minister of militia. made the announcement in an interview with the newspaper men tonight. The Minister gave no intimation tonight as to individual battalions likely to be chosen, other than his statement that the selection would be made solely upon merit.

They're Not Like Pants.

"Well, Bobby," said the minister to the small son of one of his deacons, "what is the news?"

"Papa's got a new set of false teeth."

"Indeed," said the minister, restraining a desire to laugh, "and what will he do with the old set?"

"Oh, I suppose," replied Bobby, "they'll cut 'em down and make me wear 'em.

DARING PATROL WORK BY CANADIANS IN FRANCE TOLD IN OFFICAL REPORT.

The enemy has displayed little enterprise in patrolling. The few German patrols encountered have in every case retired to their trenches on the approach of our patrols. Our reconnoitering parties and scouts have on various occasions cut the German wire and bombed the enemy working parties. The German bombs have twice been brought back to our patrols.

On the night of January 23-24, Scouts Bole, Gunn and Matkin, of our 8th Winnipeg Battalion, while near the the enemy's wire, observed two parties of Germans moving in the opposite direction. Crawling forward, our scouts opened fire with revolvers on the enemy party of five, wounding one German and forcing the hostile patrol to fire. Shortly afterwards the enemy reappeared. Our scouts fired, killing one German. After returning to our lines for more ammunition the scouts again went out and observed stretcher-bearers carrying away dead and wounded.

On the night of January 24-25 a patrol of our 19th Western Ontario Battalion, under Lieutenants Hooper and Burnham cut a path through the German wire up to the enemy parapet. The location of the enemy working party was ascertained. After the return of our patrol our machine-guns were turned on the working party. On the following night, patrol passing through a gap cut in the wire, entered the German trench and, creeping up to the German sentry, endeavoured to capture him. A scuffle ensued, which aroused the enemy in nearby dugouts. Our patrol withdrew without a casualty.

The distinguished Conduct Medal has recently been awarded to Private Harris, of the 29th City of Vancouver Battalion, for an exceptionally courageous act. Private Harris was attending the grenade school in December, and, while throwing a live bomb, slipped and fell. The bomb rolled into a trench in which a number of men were standing. All of these accept one were able to gain cover Harris, who saw that this man was unable to move, flung himself without hesitation on top of the bomb in an effort to save his comrade. Almost immediately the bomb exploded. Harris was very seriouly injured and the other man's leg broken. Both men are reported to be doing well.

Another deed of exceptional gallantry has recently been reported. On January 11 a large mortar shell was thrown into a trench of our 31st Alberta Battalion at a point where Private A. H. Jackson and a party of men were at work. These shells are dangerous and destructive. Realizing there was little chance for any of the party, Private Jackson threw himself on the bomb, and, at the risk of being blown to pieces, seized the burning base fuse and wrenched it out.

ANCIENT SEEDS GROW BIG SQUASH.

Los Angeles, Jan. 23.—Rivalling the discovery of the Aztec bean nearly fifteen years ago, seed has been found in the prehistoric cliff dwellings of Arizona along the Varde river that has been planted and has grown into a huge green extremely warty squash, which has been named the "Aztec." The squash was grown from a seed hundreds—perhaps a thousand—years old, and in the Verde country is considered a wonder of the age.

The discovery was made by John G. Allen of Cherry, Ariz., and in a most novel manner. Allen was fishing along one of the tributary creeks of the Verde and his skill with the rod seemingly failing him he decided to see if he could not make his trip a profitable one by hunting the ruins for pottery left by some pre-historic tribe.

Making his way into one of the larger rooms of the cliff dwellings he noticed a portion of the wall that appeared as if some time or other it had been closed up. Further investigation proved that he was right, for he easily broke through the wall at this place and discovered a small room or recess which contained pottery, corn cobs and about a dozen seeds that resembled ordinary squash seed. The room had been sealed so tightly that not even a mouse could make its way into it.

It was too late to plant the seeds at the time of their discovery last year, so they were not planted until early last spring. Of the twelve seeds but one came up, and the plant from it carried one large squash which weighs 25 pounds.

About Even.

"You've had plenty of rain in your section."

"Yep Hurt my crops, too."

Will you lose much money?"

"No; I'll break about even by hauling autos out of mudholes."

PREPARING FOR THE CORN PLANTING

Presuming that the ears of corn intended for seed this Spring were selected in the field last fall, marked and labeled so that the grower can see at a glance the items necessary to a complete understanding of the nature of the plant that bore the seed, and stored so as to keep in proper condition until planting time, the next thing to be looked after is the testing of this seed corn ear by ear so that only the best germinating seed can get back to the land again. The great usefulness of the tickets describing the plant from which each ear was taken will now be impressed on the selector of seed, because these tickets will give him a chance to pick out seed that is not only true to type as regards its appearance on the cob, but also taken from a plant that has the characteristics desired in the variety preferred. This consideration of the parent plant is especially important in cases where the corn is grown for fodder or ensilage, as something more than a large crop of ears and good quality grain is wanted in such cases.

O late years great progress has been made in the growing of seed ensilage corn in South-western Ontario and now many growers of corn for ensileage obtain their seed corn on the ear from the growers in that section, thus ensuring a sufficieut maturity of the grain in their own districts which in some cases are not early enough for the ripening of the grain for seed. However, as the matter of seed selection is being considered here, the question of purchase of seed must be left alone.

To be able to select seed that is near 100 per cent, fertile, it is necessary that more than one test be made, and so that there will be plenty of time for the work testing must start soon.

A sheet of muslin in squares to correspond with the ear from which the kernels are taken may be placed on a layer of earth or sawdust about an inch deep. Place three kernels for one cob, on each square, cover with a cloth pad, which must be kept damp, and preserve an even temperature sufficiently high to encourage germination. When sprouts begin to appear, start to judge the ears their representative kernels on the sprouting table and discard the weak ears, keeping the medium and strong ones for further test a few weeks before sowing. The ideal seed must germinate 100 per cent.. but a chance may be given the ears with a smaller percentage in case of a shortage of the desired kind. The average yield of corn on Ontario and Quebec farms in 1914 was 9 tons of fodder and 50 bushels of grain per acre. These yields show that there is a lot of room for increased production per acre, and one thing that will increase yields more than almost any other is careful selection of the seed corn.

To avoid a poor stand of corn many farmers, who guess at the vitality of their seeds, plant too thickly. If the seed germinates strongly, this practice produces too thick a stand, and if the number of stalks is not reduced a proper development of the ears is not possible. Beside selection of one's seed, the selection of a variety suited to one's district is important to success in corn growing, as light crops of poor quality often result from using varieties that, though good in the right place, will not stand any extra cold or dampness above that which is the rule in their home section of the country.

Saved the Money.

They were discussing mean people, and during the course of the evening all manner of little acts of stinginess were described. Then the silent man began to speak.

"I once knew a woman," he said, "who had a cat. She went out shopping one morning, and ordered a few cheap groceries, together with a pennyworth of meat for the cat.

"The goods had to be delivered three miles away. But as the van was about to leave, late in the afternoon, a servant rushed into the shop in a state of great excitement.

"Missus's things gone yet?" she asked anxiously.

" 'Just going,' replied the assistant.

" 'Well, you must change the order,' gasped the breathless girl. 'Don't send the meat. The cat's just caught a bird.' "

$2000 Per Month Granted Until June

In response to an urgent appeal laid before them by Sir Herbert Ames, secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the Counties' Council of Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry made a grant to the fund of $2000 per month until June. Last year the grant was $600. $90,000 was asked for as the amount alloted for the counties.

The Council also granted $150 per month until June to the 154th Battalion, by which time it will be better known how much money is required to provide equipment not furnished by the Government.

Grenadier Guards Likely to go.

"If the selection of battalions for the 20,000 men announced by Major-General Sir Sam Hughes as to be sent overseas within the next few months is made by merit, I am confident that the 73rd Highlanders, under Lt.-Col. Peers Davidson, and the 87th Grenadier Guards of Canada, under Col. F. S. Meighen, will be chosen." This was the opinion expressed by Brig.-General E. W. Wilson, G. O. C., yesterday afternoon, when asked if there was any further information regarding the troops to be sent over.

Considerable anxiety has been evinced by the officers and men of both the 73rd and the 87th battalions to be sent overseas as soon as possible, and this patriotic anxiety is also shared by the officers at headquarters. The two battalions are probably as fit as it is possible to make them, with winter conditions here, and it is urged that the sooner they are sent across the better for them. Further, the barracks accommodation is badly needed for other battalions to be organized, so that the sending of these two battalions forward would not only be of benefit to themselves but would also considerably aid the general work here.

Both battalions have been training as few regiments in Canada have done, with the express object of getting fit for service as speedily as possible, and it is now hoped that their hard work will be rewarded by their speedy departure for the still harder work of their final training for the work at the front.

PROHIBITION WITHOUT COMPENSATION.

Chesterville, Jany 31st, 1916.

Editor, The Record.

Sir,—Once more the question of prohibition has come to the front. At the present time a petition is being circulated, the purpose of which is to ask the Provincial Legislature for a province wide prohibitory law. The promotors of this movement cooly ignore the fact that hotel owners have rights the same as other citizens; the right to own and hold property inviolate is one of the fundamental principles of common justice. No man can alienate, injure or destroy the property of another without being guilty of an act that everyone admits is dishonest. This is the law that is universally recognized and it is based on no less authority than God's own word "Thou shalt not steal." When such action is deemed necessary for the public welfare it is conceeded that the government has the right to alienate, injure or destroy the property of any citizen but only on coudition that due compensation be made for the loss incurred. Without such compensation even the government has no right and therefore no authority to injure any citizen in his property, except only in case of a citizen who has been fairly tried and convicted of an offence against the law of the land. In such circumstances a fine may be lawfully imposed.

Now, as the owners of hotel properly in this province have not been convicted or even accused of any crime, the Government has no moral or legal right to mulct them on their property without full and complete compensation; hence if Parliament should pass prohibition without provision for compensation to those whose property is thereby injured it will be guilty of enacting an unjust and tryannical law, yet this is exactly what the petition now circulating, and what every singer of that petition asks the Legislature to do. This is a consideration that provides food for serious thought.

Some may in all good faith, argue that they favour prohibition, and can see no harm in signing this petition because it is for a good purpose, viz, to promote the cause of temperance and sobriety. They forget that however good our intentions may be, however great or important the good result that we hope may follow we are never in any circumstances allowed to do a wrong or unjust act. To provide a remedy for the evils of intemperance is indeed a worthy and noble end to have in view, yet it can never justify the use of any wrong or unworthy means, such as prohibition without compensation would undoubtedly be. The end does not justify the means.

To send this petition to the government is morally wrong, to sign it is morally wrong. Those who are pedaling this document around and asking others to sign it are no doubt quite unconscious of any intention to injure neighbor's property, but the devil is using them for his own purpose just the same. They are doing Satan's work and dreaming it is God's.

FINCH.

The anniversary services in the Methodist Church Finch were a decided success. The Rev. Dr. Mavety of Ottawa was greeted with a full house and delighted his audience with strong gospel sermons. The Finch people did not forget to extend their sympathy to the Dr. on the loss of his only son, who along with many others of Canada's most noble sons gave his life for his King, Empire and country in this great world conflict.

The tea meeting and concert on Monday evening was enjoyed by all. The speaker of the evening, the Rev. H. E. Warren, M. A. gave a most excellent address on the world's greatest evangelest (Billy Sunday). The Rev. Bell of the Presbyterian church also ably assisted and assured pastor and people of his frendship and good will.

The musical part of the programme was a sure treat.

The choir opened with a rousing anthem and the Elma Male Quartette appeared in splendid from and rendered several selections both sacred and humorous which received loud applause.

Miss Brownlee sang two patriotic solos which were very appropriate.

TOO MUCH OF THE SAME THING

A Man and Wife Decide to Try Effects of One Evening of Separation.

By F. A. MITCHEL

While Donald and Rosamond Burke were courting the hours they could spend together were interminable. Donald would go home, after sitting sometimes till 2 o'clock in the morning, wondering what in the world they had found to talk about. Rosamond would go up to her room regretting that the next evening she must pass without her lover, for her father would not consent to his calling oftener than twice a week.

But there came a time after their marriage when this was changed. To their surprise the evenings began to seem long. Then Donald about 9 o'clock would stretch himself on a lounge and go to sleep. If any friend dropped in there was instant relief. Both husband and wife would brighten up, the hours would fly, and bed time would come too soon.

But they lived in a city where distances were great, and not being especially intimate with their neighbors, there were few to drop in on them socially. They had both been in society before marriage, but as soon as they became engaged they were sure they would never care to keep up the work attending a membership of a large social circle or enjoy the society of any one except each other. They had therefore dropped out entirely.

Donald was a thinker. When anything went wrong he was accustomed to think out the cause. "Cause and effect rule the world" was a favorite phrase of his. When he found that instead of spending six hours on a stretch with Rosamond and wishing they were eight he could now scarce spend one without being bored he set himself about looking for the cause. Not long after he had found it he said to his wife one day at dinner:

"My dear, I wish to call your attention to a matter concerning your providing our food. Don't continue to place on the table any one article continuously. No matter how much one likes tomatoes, if we have them every day we will grow tired of them."

"Just so," said madam.

"And the same cause pertains to another matter of much greater importance. For the same reason that a person can't eat tomatoes every day continuously he or she can't associate with any one person exclusively. There is no truer adage than 'Variety's the spice of life.'"

"I see what you mean. I have noticed it for some time—you have become tired of me."

Some time was occupied in getting over this obstacle to a plan Mr. Burke had formed, and, forcing his wife to admit that they would be better off if they were not so closely tied together, then he continued:

"I propose that one night in the week—say Saturday—we each go out somewhere separately and see other persons besides ourselves. We need not say where we are going, though that shall be optional."

"I know very well where you will go. You will be behind the scenes at the theater. That was your favorite way of spending an evening before we became engaged."

"I don't think," replied the husband, "that I would care to return to that. I shall probably go where I can meet intellectual persons. Where do you expect to go?"

"I can't go anywhere without an escort."

"Humph! I did not think of that. Whom do you propose to call in for the purpose? Your brother Tom, I suppose."

"I shall call on any one I choose. Tom wouldn't do at all. He has too much on hand to give his time to me."

Donald was not so infatuated with his plan after this. There was a great disadvantage in it on his part. He could go alone, but his wife must have an attendant. This attendant might be an attractive man. It would be necessary that the escort should know that the reason he was called upon to take the lady out was because she was tired of her husband. Donald didn't like the scheme so well as he had thought he did. But he had gone too far to recede.

When the first Saturday came round on which the couple were to see others besides themselves before Donald went to business his wife said to him:

"I think, dearie, that you had better dine at your club or somewhere else, and I will dine at Mary Edwards'. She says she will be delighted to have me. So goodby till we meet tonight. Don't be out after 11."

"Why can't we dine at home?"

"Why, I've thought that a dinner at the club with some of your old friends would do you good."

Donald made no reply to this. He kissed his wife goodby, or, rather, suffered her to kiss him. He was thinking that this dining apart would prevent his knowing who would be his wife's escort, and in that he was very much interested.

After business he repaired to his club and looked about for some of his old friends with whom to dine. It was astonishing how the men about the club had changed since he had been married. In all the years of his membership he had not noticed so great a dropping away of old and a coming of new faces as had taken place in the brief period of his marriage. It did not occur to him that he had been standing still as a club member while the club had been marching on. Only two or three members whom he knew well were there, and they were either going home for dinner or had engagements to dine elsewhere. One old friend touched a sore spot in Burke's breast by saying:

"Hello, old man, got back to the club, have you? They all do in time, but it generally takes longer than in your case."

"I've not come back to the club permanently," replied Burke with offended dignity. "I've come because—because—there is no dinner served at home today."

"I see, cook got on a rampage and lit out. That's one of the troubles of married life, you know."

Burke dined alone in a room big enough to seat 200 persons, and there were just twenty men in it. Nothing tasted good to him, and he only half finished the bottle of wine he ordered. Having finished his meal, he went into the lounging room to smoke. There was no news in the evening papers to speak of, and, as for the Parisian illustrated journals with their vivid pictures that used to be so attractive to him, they disgusted him.

He received a pleasurable sensation in being called to the telephone. Rosamond's voice made his heart throb quicker.

"Is that you, dearie?" she asked.

"Yes, sweetheart."

"Having a good time?"

"Pretty good. How about you?"

"Oh, I'm having a splendid time! Mary invited my escort to dine with us. He and I are just going out together."

Mr. Burke made no reply to this. He was thinking about the escort.

"Give my love to the chorus girls," came from Mrs. Burke.

"Eh?"

"Ta-ta! My escort is waiting for me. I hope you'll have a jolly evening. Don't stay out all night."

A click, and Mr. Burke knew that there was nothing further to be said. It was just as well, for he had nothing to say outwardly, though he had a lot to say inwardly.

Several ways of passing the evening suggested themselves to him. He would go to a theater where he had been once well known behind the scenes. In the morning, if his wife did not give a good account of herself, he would fling chorus girls at her. Another plan was to go to the club library and read till midnight. A third was to go home and hide in a room on the top story and let his wife worry till 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. He hoped by that time she would be hysterical.

He tried the library; but, finding that he had read one page over several times and still did not know what was in it, he went to the theater, sat awhile looking at a play he had formerly thought very funny, but which now tired him; then went around to the stage door and was admitted by the same official he had known when a bachelor.

How tawdry the scant costumes of the ballet girls! How frightful the paint and powder! Burke left the theater and when outside among the flaring electric signs debated how he would get through the rest of the evening. Looking at his watch, he saw that it was only 9 o'clock. What would he do with the rest of the evening?

He returned to the club, knocked the balls about on the billiard table, looked at his watch three times in half an hour and at 10 o'clock went home. It was the stillest house he ever entered. He walked the floor till 11. If his wife had gone to the theater she would likely be home within a few minutes. Between 11 and a quarter past seemed two hours. Going to the front door, he opened it and looked out. No wife in sight. Slamming the door behind him, he strode away to Mary Edwards'. Pulling the bell violently, he was admitted by the lady herself.

"Where's my wife?" he asked sharply.

"Upstairs getting on her wraps to go home. The carriage will be here in a few minutes."

"Where's her escort?"

"What escort?"

"Is that you, dearie?" came a lugubrious voice from a landing above.

Down came Mrs. Burke.

"I'm so glad you've come," she said. "Mary has been very good to me, but I've been worrying about you so that"—

"Worrying about me? Why, haven't you been anywhere?"

"Nowhere but here."

"There's the carriage," remarked Miss Edwards, hearing a sound of wheels without.

"I've had a horrid evening," said Mrs. Burke as they drove home locked in each other's arms.

"So have I," replied the husband.

"I don't like your plan at all."

"Nor I. We won't do it again, will we?"

"No, indeed."

"I bored Mary dreadfully. She tried hard to amuse me, but failed."

"I dined alone at the club and had a miserable time of it."

"What did you do after dinner?"

"I went to the theater."

"Behind the scenes?"

"Yes, but the girls were not as attractive as before I met you, dearest."

Burke gave the cabman a five dollar bill without calling for change.

"Reckon them's just married," remarked the cabman to himself as he drove away chuckling.

May Have Made It Up.

The expression, "If you will let me write a nations' songs I care not who makes their laws," seems to have had a singular origin, its putative father being Andrew Fletcher (1655-1716), a Scotchman, who divided his time between politics and literature. In a letter to a nobleman of the period Fletcher said, "I know a very wise man who believed that if a man were permitted to make all the ballads he need not care who should make the laws of a nation." Perhaps the alleged wise man was a myth and the expression originated with Fletcher himself.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Chapped Skin.

Nothing is so healing as glycerin, benzoin and water for chapping of the skin. Prepare a mixture as follows: Glycerin, one ounce; water, four ounces, and compound tincture of benzoin, one ounce. Shake these ingredients well together and rub well into the skin upon retiring at night. Housekeepers may us it twice a day, especially after dishwashing or on the family wash day. The skin becomes smooth very quickly after being treated with this lotion. If the skin is very tough and red it makes it white and soft.

MARIAR WAS LEAVING.

And Wanted to Be Nice and Fresh For Her New Situation.

Mariar was going. For a week the housework had stood still, "because," as Mrs. Woodside said, "you can't ask a maid to do anything when she's leaving."

For a week the kitchen range had been cold, likewise the water tank beside it, and, there being no gas heater in the Woodside home, the grownups had contented themselves with cold baths and the children with such purification as could be accomplished with occasional bedtime teakettles of hot water. "I ought to have Mariar start the fire," said the mistress, "but it means bringing up coal from the cellar, and I'm afraid to ask her."

The hour of Mariar's departure had arrived. She lazied through the breakfast dishwashing, then disappeared upstairs to pack. Mrs. Woodside went into the deserted kitchen and said, "Now I'll have a fire and a boilerful of hot water at last." She brought kindling and coal from the lower regions; she built the fire and stoked it for an hour until the water tank gave out a grateful heat. Then she went to look for Mariar.

The outgoing maid was not in her room. Mrs. Woodside came down from the third floor perplexed. Could Mariar have gone without saying goodby?

Then, from behind the closed door of the bathroom, came the joyous sounds of one luxuriating in a porcelain tub filled with glorious hot water. Mariar was taking a bath.

The New Butler.

We have a butler now. Good lands!
He's dignified and grim;
In fact, the entire family stands
In perfect awe of him.

He simplifies housekeeping, though,
In terror of his frown,
Each day we all discreetly go
And get our meals downtown.

Good Work.

"Do you do anything for your flesh?"

"I should say so. I keep getting fatter and fatter."

Real Careful.

Farmer Bill is a cautious man,
And "safety first" his rule;
He always wears chain armor
In harnessing a mule.

His Position.

"Like him?" snorted the old codger, referring to a neighbor whom he did not in any wise appreciate. "I have no more use for him than a man with dyed whiskers has for another man with dyed whiskers! That's how I feel toward Henry J. Swank — confound him!"

Girls.

The way they act shows love is blind,
And makes one jealous as Othello;
For when they fall in love you find
It's always with the other fellow.

Made All the Difference.

Sister—Come, Willie, and take your powder like a little man. You never hear me make any complaint about a trifle like that.

Willie—Neither would I if I could daub it on my face like you do. It's swallowing the stuff that I don't like.

In Suspense.

In crowded trolley cars, perhaps,
You've seen folk carried off their feet,
The ladies hanging on to straps,
The men all hanging on to seats.

Paw's Version.

Willie—Paw, is it proper to say that a man was given in marriage?

Paw—No, my son. A girl is given in marriage. The man always gets sold.

Maw—Willie, you go out in the back yard and stay there.

Her Waterloo.

Young Mrs. Justwed's gone insane;
They say that she will die, for
She found her hubby's dairy book,
And it was writ in cipher!

Warned.

"She told me that I might hope."

"Better look out! I've known girls to say that when they intended to accept a chap."—Puck.

Well Remembered in Chesterville

Many Chesterville people will be glad to hear of the success of a former pastor of the Presbyterian church here, in his charge at Riverfield, Que. We refer to Rev. S. A. Woods and wish him continued success in his work. The following particulars of his past year's work we clip from the Huntingdon Gleaner : -"The congregation of Riverfield and Howick held their annual meetings last week. The attendance was small because of the prevalence of la grippe in the community, but the reports told of a great year's work, the banner year in the history of the congregation. The charge consists of 100 families, with a membership of 271, 23 being added during the year. The three Sunday schools have an enrolment in all departments of 240 and raised $385, of which amount $225 were for missions and benevolence. The "Y" society raised $149 and devoted $98 to benevolence. The W. M. S. also had a splendid year of study and raised $234. The total giving for missions and benevolence amounted to $1565, while $1020 of this amount is credited to the budget. The duplex envelopes were introduced very carefully and judiciously in 1915 and have proved eminently satisfactory. The general expenses of the church have been met, all needed repairs to church property were made and handsome balances were left in both Knox church Howick, and in Riverfield. The aggregate givings reached the grand total af $4830. The pastor, Rev. S. Woods, was not forgotten by his congregation for the salary was increased $100."

His Four Sons Are All Fighting Men.

To have all his sons who are of military age wearing khaki and doing service in the defence of the Empire, is a record of which any father may be justly proud, the father in this case being James Mattice of Osnabruck Centre. The sons now either at the front or in training are John, with a western battalion; Clarence, with the 38th at Bermuda; Walter, taking the N. C. O. class at Alexandria, for the 154th and Sergt. Wilfrid of the 154th Battalion at Cornwall.

Went To The Dentist.

After suffering a long time with toothache the young colored girl got up her courage enough to go to the dentist. The moment he touched the tooth she began to scream, "Look here." he said, "you mustn't yell like that. Don't you know I'm a 'painless dentist?" "Weel, meb-be yo' is painless, sah," she said, "but ah aint."

"A GREAT LITTLE MAN."

King George is Absolutely Fearless of Zeppelin Raiders.

King George is a great little man, a sailor and a soldier every inch of him. There is not much connected with the navy and the army that he does not know about, says Cosmo Hamilton, the English dramatist, who for the last year has been an officer in the Royal Naval Aviation Corps and was held personally responsible for the safety of King George V. at Sandringham Palace during the Zeppelin raids.

"When the war first started it was the magic name of Kitchener that caused the thousands in England to enlist, but to-day the men in the trenches speak with affection of 'G. 5,' which is their pet name for the King."

With regard to the report that King George had told Premier Asquith that he would abdicate the throne immediately if the war terminated by an inconclusive peace, Mr. Hamilton said he thought it was quite likely to have happened.

As to his duties at Sandringham Palace early in the year Mr. Hamilton said:

"We left London with two 4.7 guns and two electric searchlights. The guard consisted of 36 men of the Royal Naval Aviation Corps under my command with a lieutenant as my aide. On our arrival at Sandringham we found a detachment of 250 Grenadier Guards commanded by Major Gilbert Hamilton, with Lord Stanley, son of the Earl of Derby. The guns were placed in position, one at each end of the palace with the searchlights on motor trucks about 300 yards away.

Among the 36 men in my detail I had 15 baronets, who owned town and country houses with yachts and motor cars, two well-known surgeons, a clergyman who was the son of a bishop, a professor of history at Oxford University, two painters, three bankers, and the remainder were merchants and insurance and shipping brokers. All of them had been well trained as gunners and gave up their incomes to earn 40 cents a day without meals.

"The first day after we arrived the King invited the officers of the guard, including myself, to see the grounds, which had been laid out under the direction of King Edward VII. A portion of the garden was set apart for trees planted by distinguished personages. 'There, gentlemen,' said the King, 'is a tree planted by my grandmother, Queen Victoria. Here is one that was planted by the late King Christian of Denmark, and on the other side is the one that was placed by the Kaiser.' After a pause the King added: 'You will see that it is crooked.'

"When we left London Kitchener instructed us to sit on the King's head if necessary to protect him from harm in the Zeppelin raid, but it was a difficult order to carry out, because he is absolutely fearless and would not hide in time of danger for anyone.

On the night of one of the early raids the Zeppelins struck the east coast at Hunstanton, about nine miles from Sandringham. There was a low lying fog at the time, rising about 30 feet from the ground, which was very favorable for the raiders. Sir Charles Cust, the equerry in waiting, was in his bath when he heard his telephone ringing in his room and jumped out to answer it. While he was listening to the report from the commander of the station at Hunstanton the King walked into his room and said 'What's up?'

"Sir Charles told him the Zeps were on their way and the King replied: 'Well, I hope they go by before dinner without harming anybody.'

"Going out of the equerry's room, King George saw the electrician rushing along the corridor to shut off the lights, whereupon he called out: 'If you switch off a single light I will have you shot. I have had electric light at my dinner nearly all my life and I am not going to do without it now, whether there are Zeppelins or not.' As a result of this order the palace was the only house showing lights within a radius of 100 miles during the raid. The Zeppelins passed within three miles of Sandringham Palace.

New Year's Long Ago.

Way back in the days of the Romans the New Year celebration was a gala one. They decorated their houses and temples with wreaths of evergreen and presented each other with branches of trees as omens of good luck for the coming year. Also they feasted and made merry in the dance and in the masquerades, visited each other and exchanged gifts much as we now do on Christmas day.

New Year's Eve.

New Year eve's the time for fun,
'Fore the New Year has begun,
When it's everybody's plan
To make all the noise they can.
An' you take most anything—
Horn to blow or bell to ring,
Whirl a rattle hard an' quick,
Pound a dishpan with a stick.
Any nonsense is allowed,
An' you join in with the crowd
An' parade around the square,
Makin' racket everywhere.
An' as you go 'long the street
You must cry to all you meet,
"Happy New Year!" If you do
They will say, "The same to you!"

Over silk net are draped two pale blue taffeta ruffles irregularly cut and em broidered with sequin disks. The bodice has been draped to keep the diagonal lines, and from the belt wreathe French roses, which extend over the right shoulder.

The New Waists.

To be worn with the suit to give the effect of a complete costume is the waist that matches in color at least, if not the material. Flesh color and white are always dressy and, with a touch of the color of the suit added to them, give a charming effect and the necessary connecting link.

Chiffon, georgette crape, net or tulle in a shade to match the suit is made up over white lace. Often the lace sleeves are left uncovered with the darker hued material. Marquisette is a material that will be frequently used for this purpose.

The less dressy waist of crepe de chine is made on military lines, with high collar, epaulets, long sleeves and many buttons. Military colors are added as a decoration.

Collars are either high or low and flat, seldom a combination of the two, or of the convertible type of which there were so many last season Sleeves are, as stated before, long, and in many cases they are tight fitting, while others are loose from shoulder to wrist, with tight wristbands.

Sad Joy.

A minister who had resigned from his church was making his farewell calls. He called at the home of one of his parishioners, who sent her little girl down to the parlor to entertain the minister for a few minutes, the mother not being dressed to receive him. After a few of the customary remarks about the weather the little girl said to the minister:

"I hear that we are to have the sad pleasure of leaving you."

The Greatest Historian.

By common consent the greatest of all historians is Thucydides, the Greek contemporary of Pericles and author of the history of the Peloponnesian war. One of the greatest tributes that can be paid to him is that, according to the estimate of a very able critic, we have a more exact account of a long and eventful period by Thucydides than we have of any period in modern history, equally long and eventful, and yet all this is compressed into a single volume. For concise, vigorous and yet intense presentation Thucydides has never been equaled. He is easily the king of historians.

Didn't Wait the Attack.

At Boulogne during a royal reception some years ago a number of English ladies in their anxiety to see everything pressed with such force against the soldiers who were keeping the line that the soldiers were forced to give way and generally were, as policemen say, "hindered in the execution of their duty." The officer in command, observing the state of affairs, called out: "One roll of the drum! If they don't stand back kiss them all!" After the first sound of the drum the ladies took to flight.

"If they had been French," said a Parisian journal, "they would have remained to a woman."

HARMFUL REST.

Let us beware that our rest become not the rest of stones, which so long as they are torrent tossed maintain their majesty, but when the stream is silent and the storm passed suffer the grass to cover them and the lichen to feed upon them and are plowed down into the dust. —Ruskin.

Discharged Soldiers.

New Zealand has already taken up the question of helping her returned fighters. An office called the Discharged Inquiry Office, has been opened in Wellington, and an official from the Government Life Insurance Department appointed to manage it. Returned soldiers in need of advice or help communicate with the office, and all able to offer employment of any kind to soldiers who have returned are requested to send particulars of available work. Each man before or immediately after his discharge is interviewed by a public officer, who gives him a card informing him of the existence of the department. If the soldier does not require the department's assistance he is asked to sign a statement to that effect. It is recognized that it will be necessary in the case of men prevented by injury from following their former calling, to teach them some new industry. Here the department invokes the help of the head of the technical education branch and the principals of technical schools.

War on Rabbits.

So great is the demand for rabbits that rabbit trains are being run over some of the branch lines in Devon and Somerset. Dealers have established services of motor-lorries to bring the rabbits from the farms on which they have been caught to the neares' distributing centres. In normal times Devon farmers are content to receive 6d. a rabbit. Now some dealers are giving 1s. for freshly-trapped rabbits.

Governess Becomes Secretary.

Mlle. Dussan, Princess Mary's governess, is now acting as secretary to her Royal Highness. The Princess receives over 200 letters a day.

The Soft Question.

Mrs. Nuwed, Sr. (to son after family jar)—Don't forget, son, that "a soft answer turneth away wrath." Mr Nuwed, Jr.—Well, I know a soft question of mine brought a lot of it on me.

Showing the Way.

Friend (to guide)—Why does your wife always go round with the parties that you take over the castle? Guide—She always gives me a tip at the end so as to induce the others to follow suit.—London Answers.

What Did He Mean?

Mrs. H.—I see there's a man in France who has murdered three of his wives in succession. I'd like to see the man who would murder me.

Mr. H.—So would I, my dear.—Exchange.

Fixed For the Future.

Friend—Haven't you named the baby yet? Proud Mother—No; we must be very careful to give him a nice one because there will be so many named after him when he is president.—Exchange.

A Lapse of Nine Minutes.

In answer to a correspondent who asks if it is true that the sun never sets on the United States or her possessions, the Scientific American replies that strictly speaking it is not true, for the sun has set nine minutes and eight seconds at the most western point of the Philippines before it has risen at the most eastern point of Maine.

The Heintsman Co. Piano is without a peer in its class.

It Is Made In Canada.

Yet, that does not constitute our appeal for its favor. Too many inferior articles are being sold to-day whose only merits are that they are made in Canada. The Heintzman & Co. has maintained its own standard of excellenee for 60 years.

THE VEILED FUTURE

THE YEAR upon which we are entering is dark with mystery—we cannot forecast the events of a single day of it.

A new year naturally arouses anxious thought, but the disastrous war now raging adds to the prevalent anxicty as to what 1916 has in store for us.

Exposed to these uncertainties,is it not important that we should protect our homes and business enterprises with "the one thing sure"—life insurance ?

Protected by Mutual policies the home is kept intact though the husband dies, the business is held together though the partner passes away.

There are no bonds or treaties in the world more binding than life insurance policies—no policies more immutable than those issued by

The aim of The Mutual Life is to give the largest amount of protection at the lowest possible cost.

Services in Holy Trinity Church on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock—Rev. B. Arthur Arnold, pastor.

Whitteker, the Optician, will be at Winchester, Monday, Feb. 14th: Chesterville, Tuesday, Feb. 15th: Finch, Friday, Feb. 17th.

It is sometime since our correspondents at Maple Valley and The Boyne have been heard from. We would be pleased to have their welcome budgets next week.

The many friends of Mrs. Geo. Blaine of Brockville are glad to hear she is doing nicely after undergoing two serious operations in the General Hospital at Brockville.

There is said to be four feet of snow in Fort William, the most in seventeen years. On Friday last the Winnipeg-Toronto express required five engines to haul the train.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Bogart on Tuesday, Feb. 8. All women of the community are welcome at our meetings.

If you break a lens or the frame of your eye glasses Mr. A. E. Bolster can fix it for you—day or night every day—at W. G. Bolster's Drug Store, Chesterville.

Mrs. Henry Whitteker, near Morewood, was taken to Cornwall General Hospital on Friday last, where she underwent an operation. In November last Mrs. Whitteker was operated on before.

Mr. Arthur Swerdfeger of Morewood was in town on Tuesday, the first time since his narrow escape from his burning home. He still carries bandages on his scorched hands. Mrs. Swerdfeger is doing nicely but is still confined to the house.

Miss Edna M. Cass, sister of our esteemed townsman, W. J. Cass. B. A., has been appointed on the staff of nurses for the new Ontario hospital about to be opened at Orpington, England, with accommodation for 1000 men at a time.

Mr. C. E. McIntosh of Spencerville moved his household effects to town on Monday and with his family has taken up his residence on Queen Street. Mr. McIntosh has purchased the stock and business of Mr. Chester Casselman and his announcement will be found in another column.

To fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of V. K. Greer as Public School Inspector for Dundas, who has accepted a position on the Stratford Normal School staff, J. W. Forrester of Smith's Falls has been appointed. Winchester people expect him to make his home in that village.

John Ryan, a retired locomotive engineer of Brockville died in that town on Sunday. Aside from the fact that he was a skilful engineer, he possessed a knowledge of astronomical science, that made his name known among the leaders in that line of thought on this continent.

We had it in mind to say something real mean about the ice and the difficulty of "footing it," but when we have watched the enjoyment it has afforded the boys and girls, and grown-ups, too, skating wherever they wanted to go we could almost wish for a continuance of it. Wouldn't a rink give a lot of pleasure and health in this town?

For forty-two years the average temperature of the first month of the year has never been so high as it was in January 1916. During the time mentioned the average temperature has not reached above 12.9 degrees above zero, but last month it was 18.5 degrees. How high the temperature has ranged during the month is indicated by the fact that more rain fell and far less snow than has been the average fall in the same period of time.

South Mountain Herald:— Last week our esteemed townsman and neighbor, Captain Jack Wright, a retired sea-captain, received a cablegram from England asking him to report at New York and secure a crew and take charge of a vessel under sealed orders. Inside of 24 hours the captain was on his way to New York and on his arrival there further orders were given him to proceed to Newport News, Va., where he would find his ship awaiting him. We bid the estimable captain "God Speed" and hope for a safe voyage through the mines, torpedoes and submarine terrors of the deep.
