MASQUERADE PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Young, of Maple Ridge, were host and hostess at a masqueradt party held at their home Friday evening last. There were about 60 guests present and a program of games and music was enjoyed.

The prize for the best costume was won by F. Erle Hilmer. The judges were Mrs. W. S. Atchison, of Winchester, and Miss Gertrude Weegar of Chesterville. A number of contests were held under the direction of Mrs. Atchison with the following being awarded prizes: Mrs. Ewart Carkner, Jessie Derby, Myrtle Carkner, Hilda Cassidy and Willie Helmer.

Refreshments were served at the close of the program by Misses Jessie Derby and Madge Allison, assisted by Doris Smith, Myrtle Carkner, Mrs. Clarence Helmer, Jean Grey, Ralph Helmer, Irvin Cross and Harlam Helmer.

The vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Young for the entertainment provided was voiced by Ewart Carkner on behalf of those present.

Hallowe'en Being Celebrated Tonight

A BIG TIME FOR THE YOUNG FOLK. THE HISTORY OF ITS ORIGIN.

Hallowe'en, in spite of its legendary spooks, may be said to have had an agricultural origin, and to the present day is associated with the fruits of the earth, particularly apples. There are reasons for this. In the Christian Church, Hallowe'en or All Hallows Eve, is the name given to the evening of the 31st of October as the vigil of Hallowmess, or All Saints Day. Before the Christian era, however, the eve of the 31st of October was the occasion of harvest and other ceremonies in various countries; and the festivities which gradually gathered around the Christian Hallowe'en at a later date originated for the most part in countries under the sway of the Druid religion, chiefly Britain, plus a few indoor and outdoor celebrations borrowed from the pagan Roman festival to the goddess of fruit.

The two chief characteristics of ancient Hallowe'en were the lighting of bonfires and the belief that Hallowe'en was the only night of the year in which ghosts, warlocks, witches, and evil spirits were permitted to wander on earth. On the first of November the Druids held their great fall festival and lighted fires in honour of the sun god in thanksgiving for harvest. It was also a firm belief in the religion of the Druids that on the eve of this festival (Hallowe'en as we know it), Saman, lord of death, called together the wicked souls that within the past twelve months had been condemned to inhabit the bodies of animals. With regard to this belief, it is interesting to note that in parts of Ireland, the 31st of October was, and even still is, known as Oidhche Shamhna, "the vigil of Saman."

On or about the 1st of November also the Roman festival in honour of Pomona was held. Pomona was the goddess of the fruit of trees—hence the words, pomologist, grower of fruit, and pomology. At this Pomona festival, nuts and apples, as representing the winter store of fruits, played an important part, and thus originated the custom of roasting nuts and apple ducking—attempting to seize with the teeth an apple floating in a tub of water—a sport in which many later generations of young folk have celebrated the eve of 31st October. Some cynics aver that the evil spirits of old Druidical times youths whose rough pranks on Halstill exist in the shape of thoughtless lowe'en often result in injury to persons and much damage to property. Their pranks are the survival of the licentious part of the Pomona fruit festival.

The custom of lighting Hallowe'en fires survived generally until recent years in the Highlands of Scotland and Wales, and still is in vogue in some of the remoter parts. In the dying embers of the fire, it was usual to place as many small stones as there were persons around and next morning a search was made. If any of the stones were displaced, it was regarded as an omen that the person represented would die within 12 months.

COUNTIES' COUNCIL

At the October session of Counties' Council held at Cornwall last week a petition was presented by nearly 50 members of the medical profession throughout the counties, asking that a tubercular sanitarium be erected for Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Prescott and Russell.

It was proposed that a $200,000 tubercular sanitarium be erected at a point on the outskirts of the city, north of the Athletic Grounds, and upon completion be turned over to the Religious Hospittalers of St. Joseph, of Cornwall, who operate the Hotel Dieu Hospital there, for operation and maintenance. In rereturn for the hospital the Religious Hospitallers of St. Joseph would pay $100,000 towards the cost of the institution and, it was suggested, that the counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry contribute $33,000; Prescott and Russell, $17,000; and the provincial government $50,000.

A committee was named to freely investigate the proposition, interview the proper government authorities and report on the proposal at the January session of council. Members of the council seemed of the opinion that the proposed sanitarium should be for Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry only, and it was on the three-county basis that the committee was instructed to secure the required information.

It was decided by the Council that the time for the enforced collection of arrears of taxes by sale of lands in the municipalities of Winchester village, Finch village, Lancaster township, Charlottenburgh township and Kenyon township be extended from the January session, 1935, to the January session, 1936.

WEDDING

SMITH—LEDUC

A wedding of much local interest took place at St. Paul's Presbyterian Manse on Wednesday, October 23rd, 1935, when Miss Florestine Leduc, of Cornwall, was united in marriage to Mr. John Frederick Smith, of Winchester, Rev. W. D. Turner officiating.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on a short motor trip to Toronto, where they were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Glascott, for a few days.

The Press joins, with Mr. Smith's many friends in this district, in offering congratulations to him and his newly elected bride.

Mrs. Albert Kendrick Died On Saturday

Quebec Motorist Hits Local Milk Waggon

ROY BAKER'S VEHICLE DEMOLISHED ON HIGHWAY THIS MORNING

Mr. Roy Baker had the misfortune to figure in an accident this morning when the rig in which he was taking the milk to the station was struck by a truck bearing Quebec license plates.

Mr. Baker was proceeding north along the highway about 100 yards from the "Four Corners," when the truck loomed up through the mist in the rear. It smashed into the wagon with considerable force, breaking both rear wheels and throwing the milk cans in all directions. Mr. Baker tried desperately to keep the horse under control although the animal was badly frightened. The entire contents of the milk cans was lost.

Following the accident, the driver of the truck informed Mr. Baker that he was proceeding to Winchester to get repairs made to the truck and he would be found there. An investigation by Traffic Officer Rose revealed that the man had proceeded on his way.

WILL LEAVE HOSPITAL

Mr. James H. Ross, who has been confined to the Civic Hospital, Ottawa, for the past few weeks, following an operation, has recovered sufficiently to be able to leave the institution this weekend. He will spend some time the guest of his daughter, Mrs. V. H. Craig, and Dr. Craig, 27 Irving avenue, before returning to his home.

Wesleyan Methodists Observe Anniversary

REV. J. SCOBIE, VETERAN MINISTER, ADDRESSES LARGE CONGREGATIONS ON SUNDAY LAST.

Rev. John Scobie, of Westboro, who is now in his 86th year, and who has been serving in the ministry for over half a century, took charge of the Anniversary Services held in the Wesleyan Methodist Church on Sunday morning and evening. His addresses were very inspiring and were heard by large congregations.

In the afternoon, a special service was also held, with the Rev. J. Landrey, of Rochester, Pa., in charge, assisted by Rev. Mr. Scobie and the pastor of the church, Rev. D. W. Summers.

Special music was provided by the choir at each meeting, with Miss Bessie Rennick presiding at the organ, while Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Wilson, of Ottawa, rendered several solos and duets.

REV. J. LANDREY

The Wesleyan Methodist Church is now entering its 41st year of service in this community. Recently, many improvements were made to the exterior of the edifice and today it has the appearance of a brick structure. To help defray the cost in connection with this work, special contributions were asked for on anniversary Sunday and the response was highly satisfactory, according to the Church Board.

This week and next, an evangelistical campaign is being conducted in the church with Rev. Mr. and Mrs. J. Landrey in charge, assisted by the ministers of the Conference. Services are held each evening at 7.30 p.m. and on Sundays at 10.30 a.m., 2.00 and 7.30 p.m. The public are extended a cordial invitation to attend these meetings. There will be special singing at each service.

HEADS MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The annual meeting of the Dundas-Grenville Ministerial Association was held in South Mountain United Church last week with a good attendance of clergymen present.

Rev. Donald Morrison, of Hallville, presided. Following a very lengthy discussion on the "Form of Worship Service," the election of officers took place and resulted as follows: President, Rev. W. R. Johnston, South Mountain; vice president, Rev. W. D. Turner, Winchester; secretary-treasurer, Rev. Kenneth Woodwark, Elma. It was decided to hold the next meeting in Winchester during November.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

An interesting event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Coburn on Friday evening last, when a number of friends gathered in honour of their 30th wedding anniversary.

During the evening an appropriate address was read by Rev. W. D. Turner, while Mr. Alex Summers made the presentation of a beautiful floor lamp. Mrs. T. O. Keyes also presented the happy couple with a large bouquet of chrysanthemums on behalf of the guests.

A most enjoyable evening was spent by those present at the close of which refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mesdames T. O. Keyes, Alex Summers, Ward Summers, Robert Bell and Miss Norah Elliott.

Prior to their departure the guests registered in a remembrance book and offered heartiest congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Coburn and best wishes for many such anniversaries.

MRS. J. MacKAY HELD HER FIRST RECEPTION

Mrs. MacKay, wife of Rev. John MacKay, held the first reception since moving to Ottawa from Winchester at her residence, 255 MacKay street, on Thursday afternoon last. The hostess was wearing a becoming gown of wine colored crepe and was assisted in receiving her many guests by Mrs. P. W. Anderson, wife of the former minister at MacKay United Church, Mrs. William Cherry and Mrs. B. Slinn.

At the table, which was attractively arranged, being adorned with yellow and bronze colored chrysanthemums, there presided Mrs. A. H. Sheppard, Mrs. D. A. Esdale, Mrs. D. H. MacDonald, and Mrs. T. B. Rankin. Assisting in the tea room were Mrs H. McClymont, Mrs. William Neate, Mrs. J. Powers, Mrs. C. S. atheson, Mrs. Robert Slinn, Mrs. Blyth MacDonald and the Misses Woods.—Citizen.

Five Chesterville Girls Have Narrow Escape

WERE OCCUPANTS OF CAR WHEN IT OVERTURNS AND LANDS IN DITCH

Five Chesterville girls and a Montreal girl visiting in Chesterville had a narrow escape from serious injury when a sedan in which they were driving Thursday afternoon last failed to make a turn at the south end of Chesterville village. The car was driven by Miss Shirley King, and with her were the Misses Evelyn Boyd, Audrey Alford, Helen Smith, Ethel Smirle, all of Chesterville, and Winnifred Lockheed, of

The car got out of control and failed to make the turn leading into the village, making a complete somersault and landing in the ditch. The girls all escaped injury with the exception of Evelyn Boyd who received a badly sprained arm. The car was considerably damaged.

HOSPITALS GIVEN RATING

Cornwall's two hospitals, Cornwall General and Hotel Dieu, have been given "fully approved" rating by the American College of Surgeons, according to announcement made at the 25th annual congress of that body at San Francisco, Cal., on Monday. While the hospitals have been listed for several years past as "provisionally approved," this is the first time they have been credited by investigators of the College of Surgeons as measuring up to all of the exacting requirements of the Hospital Standardization Conference.

OFFICIAL COUNT REVEALS CASSELMAN'S MAJORITY 2,355

According to revised figures, issued by returning officer W. S. Johnston, for Dundas-Grenville, A. C. Casselman's majority in the Federal election was 2,355. The official figures show that Casselman, Conservative, polled 8,936 votes; Elliott, Liberal, 6,581, and Patterson, Reconstructionist, 1,615.

Johnston's official figures vary little from the election night returns published in The Press a few weeks ago. Casselman's total is slightly lower while the totals for Elliott and Patterson are practically the same.

FENNELL FEED COMPANY

"SOL-MIN"

A Scientifically Balanced Mineral Supplement for Livestock and Poultry.

Following is a list of what "Sol-Min" is made of and the function of each ingredient—

"1. BONE CHAR (Digested) supplies soluble Calcium and Phosphorus in proper ratio for Bone-Building and for normal, healthy growth of all Body Tissues.

2. SODIUM CHLORIDE (Salt) supplies Sodium and Chlorine, important constituents of the Body Structure. Chlorine promotes Digestive Processes and is a constituent of Milk.

3. SULPHUR is an important ingredient in the Proteins of Flesh and of Eggs.

4. IRON plays an important role in Blood formation and is supplied as Ferrous Sulphate (Copperas.)

5. IODINE acts as a Preventive of Goitre in Calves and Sheep, Hairlessness in Pigs and Weakness in New Born Animals. It is supplied by Potassium Iodide."

"SOL-MIN" is fed simply and economically, mixed at the rate of 3 or 4 lbs. with each 100 lbs. of Grain or Meat Ration. The cost is trifling—the benefits tremendous!

There has been a good deal in the farm papers about "Mineral Deficiency" in livestock and Poultry. "Sol-Min" is one of the best products offered to take care of this condition. It is made by C. I. L. and we do not hesitate to recommend it. Some of our best dairymen used it last winter with good results.

"Sol-Min" is $3.25 per 100 lbs., or 3½ Cents a pound.

KEEP RECORDS

This week we sent out price lists of our Poultry Feeds to everyone we thought would be interested. The back of the card is ruled for keeping a Daily Record of Egg Production and Weekly Totals of Receipts and Expenses.

We would like very much to have everyone who is feeding our Poultry Feeds keep accurate records for the season and see just what results they are getting. We will be interested in hearing what some of these flocks are making for their owners. Also what results our feeds are giving.

If you did not happen to get one of these cards in the mail, call and get one.

TREKS FROM WEST TO GET FARM JOB

News that there was a shortage of farm labor in this district travelled far. A youth entered the Government employment office at Stratford a few days ago and asked for a job on a farm. He said he had 'beat' his way from Saskatoon when he heard labor was needed here. Officials gave him a farm job and he left immediately for his new quarters.

NEW GOVERNOR GENERAL'S AUTO ARRIVES

Lord Tweedsmuir's private automobile has already arrived in Ottawa from England, and is now in the Armstrong-Siddeley motors plant, Slater street, being overhauled so that it will be in readiness for use by the Governor- General and his family upon their arrival in Canada. The automobile will probably be delivered to the garage at Rideau Hall in the next few days.

FARMER WAS INJURED

Walter Whittaker, a farmer residing in Matilda township, two miles west of Williamsburg, is a patient in the General Hospital, Brockville, suffering from a severe leg injury sustained a few days ago when his clothing became caught in a tractor while he was making some adjustments to the machine. The ligaments and cords of the leg were injured when the member was badly mangled. He is being attended by Dr. W. J. Gibson.

DROPPING PUBLIC SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS

The final examination has been banished from the public schools and next summer all pupils will be advanced on their year's work. This is what has been advocated for many a long day and is ideal for the pupil. The teacher, however ,does not fare so well as he must conduct examinations in nearly all subjects taught every month and almost every week-end will have anywhere from one or two to six sets of examination papers to mark. People who declare the life of the school teacher consists in teaching six hours every day know nothing of what goes on behind the scenes.

RAMBLING 'ROUND NEW YORK with HUGH KENNY

The library lions at Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street looked just as bored as ever last Saturday as they faced a one-man boycott against the Olympic Games in Berlin. Parading a sign that declared the owner had been ten months in a Nazi prison without cause, it exhorted all beholders to boycott the Olympic Games in Berlin. We're half a mind to decide whether such an act displays extreme courage or extreme childishness.

For months now, the British Empire Building in Rockefeller Center has been the official home of the broad "A" and the single eyeglass. . . . The recent opening of the Italian Building just across the courtway calls up a vivid mental cartoon of a monocled British Consul half falling out of his window toward a bearded Italian consul all but losing his balance on his side, and both thumbing their noses with vehemence!

Connecticut-New York commuters must frequently stay overnight in New York when they've missed all but the "milk trains" by overstaying their time in the night clubs of glorified gals run by reformed speakeasy proprietors. One of them told me recently with great glee that by paying annual club dues at a hotel he could get a room anytime at the reduced price of only eight dollars a night!

Fifth Avenue, the abode of costly nonessentials, snooty jewelry stores guarded with quiet, but effective iron grills! Fifth Avenue, where Rolls Royces roll up to curbs with a swish and a bowing of doormen! Alas, Fifth Avenue has been invaded by the manufacturer of synthetic pearls. Dear, dear. And they frequently cost but half as much as the genuine!

Genuine pearls, by the way, can be readily spotted by the gritty feeling when rubbed against the teeth. If you don't believe it, we recommend you try it on her choker the next time you step out with the duchess.

New York is overflowing with amateurs who've come from far and wide to compete in the amateur hours on the radio. Hundreds are already on relief!

OUR NEW GOVERNOR-GENERAL

John Buchan would make "an ideal Cardinal." Thus said the late Cardinal Bourne at a dinner, and the compliment seemed rather to embarrass the author of "Greenmantle" and many other famous works, who was among the guests. Perhaps the new Governor-General of Canada was wondering what his forbears would have thought of the remark!

For Lord Tweedsmuir comes from an old Border line of staunch Protestants. He is himself a son of the manse, his father was the Rev. Joh Buchan, of Peebles-shire. The Rev. Mr. Buchan has not lived to see his son's brilliant career in full, but Buchan's mother is still alive and resides in her beloved Peebles. In this pretty little town they are proud of the Buchans!

A brother of John Buchan is the Town Clerk of Peebles, while his sister, Anna known as "O Douglas," writes most of her charming stories there. But neither, of course, can deny that "John" is the pride of the family. This quiet, rather grave-looking Scot, of middle height, has not wasted one day of his sixty years and his Canadian appointment is a fitting reward for services which have been rich and unique.

Seldom is it that authors enter politics without sustaining loss of reputation, but John Buchan, as M. P. since 1927, has enhanced his. He represented most fittingly the combined Scottish Universities, for above all else he is a scholar and a brilliant man of letters. Also he is a Colonel of the British Army; at Headquarters in France and at home Buchan rendered invaluable assistance to the Allied cause, and his wonderful "History of the Great War" showed a grasp of military and political matters which rivals that of Mr. Churchill. He does not possess Mr. Churchill's vivid character, but Canada will find that their next Governor-General has a rare and winning personality, allied to a brain of the highest calibre.

"I have travelled the world and met all kinds of man, and I consider that the educated Scottish gentleman is the finest type of man to be encountered in any circumstances." These words of the late Wilfred S. Blunt fit the case of John Buchan, who is, however, much more than a Scot. He is an author of world fame, and his output maintained at a uniformly high level, strikingly shows the range of intellect and knowledge.

One would imagine that as a writer, Buchan would have little time for much else yet he is one of the busiest men in public life. Only two years ago he was Lord High Commissioner to the Church of Scotland twice in succession, and in Edinburgh's historic Holyrood Palace he was "King" for ten days. His dignity at the levees, dinners, receptions and visits on both occasions made a tremendous impression, and after his Lord High Commissioner experiences the ceremonies in Ottawa and Canada, over which he will be called upon to preside, will offer no terrors.

John Buchan never wastes an hour if he can avoid it. He once said that he always liked to travel in trains alone, and a great deal of his literary work has been done on the "Flying Scot" on its London-Edinburgh run.

This is not the first time that he has been actively concerned in Imperial affairs. After a triumphal Oxford period—he was the New-digate prizewinner in 1898—he was appointed Private Secretary to Lord Milner, then High Commissioner in South Africa, and during the time he occupied that post he was fired with the enthusiasm for Empire that has never left him. If brains, hard work, dignity and tact can make a successful Governor-General, then he is the ideal selectio.—Our Empire.

JUST TO TEACH HER

A well-brought-up young lady, who can handle a car in the country, but isn't so sure of herself in traffic, decided recently to take a course at one of the auto schools around Columbus circle to brush up on city driving.

To her utter amazement, soon after she had started out on her first lesson, the instructor leaned over, close to her ear, and queried softly: "Did I hear you call me darling?"

"Sir!" cried the young lady hotly forgetting all about her driving and turning to glare.

"That's just to teach you, Miss," the instructor responded sternly. "No matter what anybody says to you, keep your eyes on the road."

HALLVILLE NEWLYWEDS ARE GUESTS OF HONOUR

In the past week Mr. and Mrs. Herb Doran, of Hallville, were entertained at their home to a social evening and presentation by their many friends in the community.

The newlyweds have just returned from a lengthy honeymoon down through the States, having spent a long holiday in Rochester, Minn.

The bride, nee Miss Annie Workman, of Mountain, is well known among the the people of the district where she has always been very popular, and Mr. Doran has spent most of his life in Hallville except the several years in his earlier life where he was in business in the United States.

After the party assembled at Mr. and Mrs. Doran's home a pleasant social evening was spent. A flattering address was read by Mrs. Thos. Coleman, while Mr. William Brooks presented them with a beautiful walnut Gibbard living-room table, also a Sheffield carving set. Mr. Mr. Doran made a very appropriate reply. Later a buffet lunch was served, with Mr. and Mrs. Doran the guests of honor.

OBITUARY

ALBERTUS MARQUETTE

Friday, October 18th, marked the closig of the long and useful life of a well-known and most highly esteemed resident of Prescott in the person of Mr. Albertus Marquette.

Mr. Marquette, whose death followed a five months' illness, was born at Mountain, Ont., in the year 1858, as one of the late Benjamin Marquette and his wife Caroline Lalonde. About thirty years ago he took up residence in Prescott as an employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He later worked as a carpenter and had for the last few years retired. He was a devout Roman Catholic, and will be missed from St. Mark's parish where he was an active worker and many friends throughout the town and district will sincerely mourn the passing of one, who, through his many sterling qualities, had earned so high a place in their esteem.

In 1886 Mr. Marquette was united in marriage to Margaret Jennings, and she, together with four daughters and two sons, are left to mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. The children surviving are Mrs. John Walse and Mrs. W. J. Ranson, Prescott; Mrs. E. V. Mullin, Toronto; Mrs. T. E. Delaney, Philadelphia, Pa.; John and Bernard, of Buffalo, N. Y. Three brothers, Hugh, of Mountain; William, of Chicago, and John of Oakland, Calif.; and one sister, Mrs. Mary Flannigan, Inkerman, as well as fifteen grandchildren also survive.

The funeral was held on Monday, the 21st of October, from the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ranson to St. Mark's church where Requiem High Mass was sung, the body being laid to rest in the R. C. cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. P. K. Halpin, W. J. Allen, S. Delaney, P. Quinn, J. P. Doyle and H. Byrne

Many spiritual and beautiful floral offerings were received as tokens of respect to the late Mr. Marquette and messages of condolence to the bereaved family.

LOVING TRIBUTE PAID TO MEMORY OF MRS. T. W. AULT

The funeral of Mrs. T. W. Ault, who died Tuesday morning, Oct. 22nd, was held on Thursday afternoon last from her husband's home, 108 First street, Cornwall, to the cemetery at Brinston, where Mrs. Ault was born.

During the time the body lay at the home, many friends called to offer condolences to Mr. Ault, his daughter, Mrs. Harry J. Anderson, and other relatives. Among these were Warden George L. McIntosh and members of Counties' Council, the 50 children from Nazareth Orphanage, members of Cornwall Police Department and many others.

The service at the house was conducted by Rev. T. A. Halpenny, B.A., D.D., pastor of St. Paul's United Church, Cornwall, who spoke words of comfort to the sorrowing relatives, making reference to the beautiful character which Mrs. Ault possessed and the exemplary life which she led. Dr. Halpenny also conducted the service at the grave in Brinston cemetery, where the casket was opened to allow friends to look upon the face of Mrs. Ault for the last time, this and the service being carried out under a beautiful canopy.

Pall bearers were W. B. Newton, Chas. E. Roberts, F. Stidwill, Charles T. Stafford, E. W. Devitt and Wallace Bingley.

Relatives from a distance attended the funeral were Mrs. T. H. Dunn and daughter, Miss Alice Dunn, of Ottawa; Dudley Smith, Carleton Place; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ault, Montreal; Dr. J. W. Ault, Prescott; Mr. and Mrs. Simon Ault, Mr. and Mrs. William Ault, George Ault, Shanly; Mr. and Mrs. John Ault, Winchester; Mr. and Mrs. John Brinston, and Mr. and Mrs. Alex Brinston, of Brinston.

Deer Hunting Regulations, 1935

As there still appears to be in the minds of some of those who contemplate taking advantage of the annual deer hunting season this year some confusion as to a proper interpretation of the regulations now in existence it might be well to make some explanation.

There is a partial buck law in effect which provides that the shooting of does or fawns is prohibited except that any party of four hunters is entitled to one doe or fawn—the other three of the kill must be bucks, though unquestionably the entire kill of four deer which such party of four might take could be bucks. A party must consist of eight members before they are entitled to two does or fawns, and further two does or fawns is the limit for any party regardless of its numbers. Some would argue that it is difficult to detect the difference between a buck and a doe under certain conditions when hunting. The Department is willing to concede the possibility of mistake with the result that provision is thus made to legalize the taking of one doe or fawn by a party of four hunters, and two does or fawns by a party of eight hunters or more, and thus make allowance for what might be termed mistakes by the hunter.

There are some who have the impression that there must be, in the case of a hunting party of say, four, three bucks killed before they may legally kill a doe or fawn. This is not correct as it may so happen that a party of four, or any number less than eight might be so unfortunate during their hunt as to kill one deer only, and then possibly a doe or fawn. Similarly, a party of 8 or more hunters might take only two deer, does or fawns. In such cases as these and others in which the parties do not complete, much less exceed, the number of animals to which their licenses would entitle them, and the number of does and fawns involved not exceeding the number they are permitted to take there could be no reasonable objection to them being in possession of the carcasses of such does or fawns and bringing them out of camp.

Members of hunting camps who have secured camp deer licenses could legally consume a doe or fawn in camp, or in the case of a party of eight members who had two camp deer licenses, they could legally consume two does or fawns, though they would then, of course, be obliged to bring out only buck deer according to the number of licensed hunters in the party.

In the case of the use of dogs. Those in favour of dogs frequently argued when the question was up for discussion from time to time that the dog was very essential in locating wounded deer and also in assisting the hunter to secure buck deer which is desirable at any time and which has now been made compulsory under the present Game and Fisheries Act. This being the case an endeavour was made to frame a Regulation to allow sufficient dogs for this purpose and yet not permit large packs of dogs to be taken into the woods by any separate hunting party. As these provisions now stand there must be an organized party of four before the use of a dog is permitted—and in such case one dog only. Unlike the privilege which applies to the taking of two does or fawns, the use of two dogs is permitted to any party of five, six, seven or eight hunters. There must be nine or more hunters in a party before the use of the maximum number of three dogs permitted under the Regulations would be allowed. The object of this is to prevent more than one or two dogs being allowed to run deer at one time by the party in whose possession they may be found. It is necessary that each dog so used for the hunting of deer be licensed at a fee of $2.00.

It has been provided that it shall be unlawful to molest or shoot deer while swimming in the water or any lake or river, though this does not prevent the shooting of deer about to enter the water or after having left the water.

It is hoped that the foregoing information will clear up the doubt which appears to exist regarding the proper interpretation of the present deer hunting regulations.

MRS. WILLIAM THOMS HAS PASSED ON IN HER 80th YEAR

Mrs. Elizabeth Thoms, a highly respected resident of the Capital for the past 27 years and of the Ottawa district the greater part of her life, died, on Thursday last at an Ottawa hospital, after a brief illness. She was the widow of the late William Thoms and was in her 80th year.

Mrs. Thoms was born at Hallville in Dundas County. She was formerly Miss Elizabeth Trotten and spent most of her life in Vernon and Ottawa, where she made many friends who will deeply regret her sudden passing. She was a devoted member of Knox Presbyterian church.

Surviving are four sons, Levi H., W. J., A. E. and J. C. Thoms, all of Ottawa; two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Stewart, of Kemptville, and Miss Ruby Thoms, at home; one brother, William Trotten, of Harrisville, N. Y.

PROGRAM AT METCALFE BY HOLY TRINITY WOMEN'S GUILD

Under the auspices of the Women's Guild of Holy Trinity church, an enjoyable social evening was spent in the town hall at Metcalfe recently. The hall was filled and the following program was presented: Dialogue by Vera Morris and Noel Rolston; vocal solos by Ted Moutham, accompanied by Miss Inez M. Boyd, and also by Sterling Bishop with guitar accompaniment; step dancing by the Misses Irene and Hilda Hummel, with Noel Rolston at the piano. A playlet given by Wesley Stanley and Rev. C. H. Roach.

The main feature on the program was a two act play presented by the A.Y. P. A. Included in the cast were: Mrs. F. Dowser, the Misses Dorothy Gracie, Elsie Bishop, Sarah Hummel, Phylis Rolston, Dorothy Cameron and Irene Hammil. The play was directed by Mrs. S. H. Bishop. At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Rev. C. H. Roach was chairman for the evening and money donations were received by Fred Quaile.

GOLD KEY TO CITY BEING PRESENTED TO THEIR EXCELLENCIES

Presentation of a gold-plated key to the City of Ottawa will feature the official reception ceremonies when Their Excellencies the Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir arrive in the Capital at 3 o'clock, Monday, Nov. 4, according to detailed plans released by the Department of the Secretary of State recently.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, members of his cabinet, His Worship Mayor P. J. Nolan and the citizens generally will participate in welcoming the new occupants of Rideau Hall when they arrive by special train at the Union Station. The Mayor will also deliver a formal address of welcome to which His Excellency will reply, in the general waiting room of the station.

The public will be accommodated in the outer concourse of the station and outside the station on the Plaza. The vice-regal party will drive off at 3.30 from the station, going west around in front of the post office and then down past the Chateau, just reversing the usual traffic route in that area.

A guard of honor supplied by the Governor General's Footguards' will be drawn up on the station platform, while the station will be lined by the Ottawa Cameron Highlanders. A detachment of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve will line the passage from the station exit to the vice-regal carriage, which will be drawn up at the Rideau street entrance. The royal salute will be fired from Nepean Point by the 23rd Field Battery. The city police and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police are cooperating in effecting necessary arrangements for traffic control on the afternoon of the arrival.

Following the inspection of the guard of honor, Their Excellencies will proceed to the main hall of the Central Station where the members of the Dominion Cabinet, foreign ministers, the Mayor of Ottawa and members of the City Council and ranking government officials will be presented. There will then be read an address of welcome from the city of Ottawa and a presentation to Their Excellencies of a gold plated key to the city.

Following this ceremony the vice regal part will leave by the main Rideau street exit under escort of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards. The route of the procession will be west from the Central Station to the post office, circling Confederation Square to the Chateau Laurier, north along McKenzie avenue to Lady Grey Drive, skirting the Ottawa river to Sussex street, then north to the main entrance to Rideau Hall. It is expected that the procession will leave the Rideau street exit from the Central Station shortly after three-thirty o'clock.

LEAVING CANADA

Dr. W. H. Fyfe, who for the past five years has been principal of Queen's University at Kingston, has announced his resignation to the University officials. Dr. Fyfe has received word of his appointment to the principalship of Aberdeen University in Scotland.

The WOMAN'S ANGLE by NANCY HART

The younger crop of college men are demanding women with finesse. And they're quite frank about it, too. No elbows-on-the-table, no whole-slice-at-a-time buttering of bread, and no audible criticism of other girls' clothes on the dance floor. They won't have it. And they demand social grace, tact, kindness and sympathy of their dance partners in all things . . . And the girls are learning it in a hurry at the more progressive co-educational schools.

Renaissance influence even extends to makeup, and the darker face powders and brilliant lipstick with a bluish, rather than a yellow cast are demanded by the wine-colored reds, the deep greens and the glowing purples so popular in the Renaissance mode. And brunettes are in a much better spot than blondes so far as these colors go, as you may realize by looking at any portraits of Renaissance time, They were dark, and they wore such colors beautifully.

Women are style conscious even in China. For when Butterfly Wu, China's great film actress, appears in a new film with a very slight change in the very stable styles of China, Hankow, Canton, Peiping and Tientsin women follow her lead. The variations are chiefly those of fabric designs, though there are occasional slight changes in the length of slits at the sides of the long skirt, sleeve length and the height of the collar.

An unsung heroine we know is the woman who used to teach home economics in schools in an exceptionally poor neighborhood. Knowing her pupils were greatly undernourished, yet wholly dependent on her salary herself, she spent a large part of her income on extra, nourishing supplies that the children could cook and eat under her supervision.

We seem to be headed toward a feathered and jewelled winter, looking like the Fifteenth Century itself. And fortunately, imitation jewelry is the vogue . . . even in the cases that hold your lipsticks.

MARRIED IN ERIE

Word has been received of the marriage of Loren Mulloy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Knox Mulloy, of Iroquois, and Miss Louise Owens, daughter of Mrs. John Owens and the late Mr. Owens, in Erie, Pa., on October 3. Mr. and Mrs. Knox Mulloy and Mrs. Muriel Mulloy, of Iroquois, attended the wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Loren Mulloy are spending a few days with Mr. Mulloy's parents at their home.

MARRIED 60 YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Casselman, of Morrisburg, residing on the farm originally given by the government to Mr. Casselman's United Empire Loyalist grandfather, concluded a week of quiet observance of their 60th wedding anniversary Saturday morning last. On October 12, 1875, Mr. and Mrs. Casselman were married at Bells' Corners by Rev. Mr. Davison, of the Presbyterian church, and came to the river front farm shortly after where they have lived ever since. Mr. Casselman, 84, and Mrs. Casselman, 79, are still in excellent health. One son, John W., is Eastern Ontario orchard inspector.

ELEVATOR NOW PAYING

The Prescott elevator is now on a paying basis for the first time since it was opened several years ago, according to officials. The storage bins are filled to capacity and the daily receipts are better than $1,000 a day. The elevator was erected by the Mackenzie King government to relieve congestion in Montreal Harbor and cost about $5,000,000. Between 25 and 50 men are given employment at present and it is expected that the force will be increased during the winter months.—Exchange.

HINTS FOR THE HOME

Ivory

Hot water will discolor and often spoil ivory bone, or mother-of-pearl articles.

Eggs

Cooked eggs can be kept warm in the of a double boiler. Have a low flame underneath.

Cake Icing

When necessary to make icing quickly for cup cakes, place a marshmallow on each cake and toast slightly.

Stockings

Stockings should not be gartered so tightly that when seated there is an unnecessary strain that will cause a runner.

Pancakes

Rub the griddle with a small bag of salt instead of using grease and the cakes will be cooked without smoke or odor.

When Cooking Cabbage

Place a piece of bread in the pot in which cabbage or cauliflower is cooking and it will eliminate much of the unpleasant odor.

Sweetening Applesauce

Much less sugar will be required to sweeten applesauce if the sugar is added to it just before it is removed from the range.

The Ironing Board

To straighten out a warped ironing board, try reversing the cover of the the board to the other side for a while.

Use Tape Instead of Ribbon

Try using narrow linen tape on lingerie instead of using the narrow ribbon. It will last longer, launder better and is just as dainty.

Breakfast Coffee

When members of the family eat their breakfast at various times put the coffee in a thermos bottle instead of reheating it several times.

Window Frames

If the window frames are newly painted, run them up and down several times a day for a few days after their painting. It will prevent sticking.

A Small Item

If small pieces of cardboard are kept near the kitchen sink, they will be very useful for sweeping litter from the drain board or mopping out the sink.

Nail Ridges

If the finger nails are deeply ridged, do not use a bright polish, as this will make the ridges far more noticeable. Use a very light colorless polish.

Closets

Furs and silk are said to keep much longer and in better condition if they are hung in cool closets. So try to keep the coolest spot for these particular garments.

Children's Clothes

A clean, frresh smell can be given to children's rompers and dresses if a few drops of toilet water or a few drops of perfume are put in the starch as it is cooling.

Bathroom Window

If the window in the bathroom is directly above the bath tub, try making a curtain of flowered oilcloth. It will prove practical as it will not be harmed by splashed water.

The Winter Coat

When buying a winter coat, do not think that the weight of the coat determines its warmth. A lightweight, fluffy material is oftentimes warmer than a much heavier garment.

Weed Exterminator

Was your garden overrun with weeds this summer? If so, fill an oil can with kerosene, cut each weed off even with the ground, then squirt about one tablespoonful of kerosene into the heart of the weed.

Preventing Moths

Moths will not go get into the rug if the floor is scrubbed thoroughly with strong hot salt water before laying the rug, and then a sprinkling of salt over the rug once a week before sweeping, is methodically done.

Removing Grease Spots

To remove grease spots from clothing place a clean blotter under the spot and an other one on top of the garment. Put a warm iron on the upper blotter and move it back and forth until the grease vanishes.

A Useful Addition

In remodelling an old home, a useful addition was made to the breakfast nook by removing the wall space between two studs from the height of the door to the level of the table and installing shelves. This space was nicely finished and held beside salt and pepper shakers, small bottles of oil and vinegar and decorative plates and pitchers.

Fat For Frying

Buy several pounds of beef fat or suet. Either have the butcher grind it or grind it yourself and render on the stove as you would lard. Add a small amount of olive oil and a few slices of onion. This makes an excellent fat for frying eggs, French fried potatoes and hash. It can be added to gravy.

FOR ATHLETES

A spoonful of honey dissolved in a glass of warm milk is used as a creator of energy by Finnish athletes before undertaking strenuous exertion. During long distance marathon races they take a very small portion of honey, a little on the tongue only as a reviver.

AGNES E. GORMLEY

The burial of Agnes Ellen Gormley, who died at her home in Montreal on Friday last, took place in St. Mary's cemetery at Morrisburg on Monday morning at 11.15 o'clock. Requiem mass was said in the Church of the Ascension of Our Lord, Westmount, the remains being brought to Morrisburg by train for burial. Rev. Father R. J. Coyle officiated.

ALCOHOL AND CHARACTER

Study V. November 3rd

In concluding this series of lessons many questions that any boy or girl may ask have been left unanswered.

Why has a poor man often spent his money for liquor, rather than food or clothing for his children? Alcohol did it.

Why has a kind husband sometimes spoken harshly to or even struck those he loved? Alcohol did it.

Why has a law-abiding citizen been known to commit crimes for which he has afterwards been sorry?

Why has alcohol made a strong man weak, and the weak man weaker?

Why has alcohol led young people to take the first step towards wrong-doing.

Why is alcohol to-day looked upon as a cause of poverty, crime and immortality?

Why? The answer is the same for each question. Alcohol has weakened self-control, and in so doing has opened the door to laziness, poverty, crime and sin.

"One good drink deserves another," said the man who meant to take only one drink; but he took a second, a third, and finally was carried home intoxicated. By dulling hie mind alcohol has has lessened his control.

Alexander the Great conquered the world, but it is said he could not conuer his desire for fermented drinks, containing alcohol. They conquered him, and at the age of thirty-three, his body weakened; he died of fever.

Character

To have character one must possess an ideal, ,be able to choose between the right and wrong, and to act according to one's best judgment. Since the mind is deadened by alcohol, drink makes it difficult for a man to keep, his ideals high. The lower parts of his nature gain control, and he becomes the plaything of his passions and of the whims of his companions. He becomes less than a man—we say he is not all there and the law does not hold him responsible for his actions.

There can be no doubt that this marvellous ability by which man controls himself comes from God. It has not come all at once, but as a result of an age-long process of development, for his mind was the last gift of the Creator. On that gift he still labours seeking to bring it nearer to his own ideal. God works within us. His spirit causes men to strive for something better, and as a result minds improve, and fine, new delicate cells are added to the brain, new powers of perception appear and man finds himself better able to understand God's great hope for men and the kind of ideals and conduct which lead to it. These new cells, which give us these ideals, are the finest in the body. They distinguish us from animals. They lead us to higher and better things. They must be guarded with care, not only because they are the most delicate in the body, but because any injury to them will lead us away from, rather than to God. It is because alcohol does this last that we must see it as something which strikes at the roots of our religion.

Alcohol, the Deceiver

As might be expectetd, the narcotic, alcohol, finds it easiest to injure the delicate cells of the body first. The consequences are often tragic. Liquor has paralyzed the delicate cells which perceive, evaluate and appreciate. It has taken from man his highest power of self-control. It has blunted self-awareness, self-criticism and critical judgment. It has set free base emotions. It It has enthroned the lesser man over the higher man. It has done all this by attacking the finest cells of mind first, and for this reason it is the more to be feared.

On a certain Christmas Eve a young farmer waved good-bye to his wife and family, promising to bring them all a gift from Santa Claus. But he spent his money for whisky. When he finally arrived home the most delicate cells of his brain had been put to sleep. He did not recognize his wife and family. They seemed to him to be evil ones who sought to spoil his fun. Because the lower part of his brain was still awake he could pick up the poker and strike his son. A few hours later he awoke to the fact that he had killed his boy. Yet, strictly speaking, the young farmer had not killed his son; the real father had been asleep, and another person, one who could commit murder, had taken his place.

Once the self-control is weakened, the boy or girl, man or woman is a different person. They are no longer as responsible for their thoughts, actions and speech, but are like people beginning to go insane. "All agree that the excessive use of alcohol is the cause of much crime, disease, and misery, and since the effect of even a small quantity is insidious in lessening self-control and will-power, it is surely foolish in the extreme to have anything to do with alcohol."*

Many a boy or girl has made the first step in life of sin when their wills were thus off duty.

Many a man has been ruined because while his brain centres were dulled by alcohol, he talked too freely, and told business secrets.

Many a workman has lost his job when a bottle of beer caused some stupid mistake.

Our Finest Possession

"I have no genius," said G. F. Watts, the famous artist and sculptor. "Anybody could do better if they sacrificed everthing to do it as I do. One thing alone I possess, and I never remember the time I was without it: an aim toward the highest and best, and burning desire to reach it."

"The highest and best" is God; the burning desire to reach it" comes from Him. To keep that desire burning real bright is the duty of every boy, girl, man or woman. It cannot be done if thoose parts of our selves which can reach out to God are dulled, deadened and paralyzed. Those parts must be kept at their best and that can only be done by living cleanly and abhorring intoxicating beverages.

Questions

1. How may alcohol move us away from God's ideal? (Value 9.)

2. Copy the statements in the following which are true. (Value 10):

Nansen took alcohol on his voyage.
Whisky is a stimulant.
Alcohol attacks the finest cells of the brain first.
Alcohol warms the body.
Alcohol weakens self-control.
Alcohol increases effiiciency.
Alcohol dulls the senses.
Alcohol is a valuable food.
Alcohol is more injurious to young people than to adults.
The muscles of the heart, lungs, stomach and blood-vessels are controlled by a part of the brain.

A HELP OVER THE HARD PLACES

"Well, who cares? I don't want to be on your old team anyway."

There was an angry look on Ted Hooper's face as he stood facing the three boys who came around the corner just as he stepped out of Tom Brady's store, a package of cigarettes in one hand and a tiny box of matches in the other.

"We all care. And it isn't an old team. It is going to be the best Junior hockey team that Harley ever had if—if everybody will help. Mr. Phillips said he never had better stuff out of which to make a team, and—and—here you are spoiling some of the—the 'stuff' before we even get going." Shortly Graham's face was even redder than Terry's as he spoke. "You're a nice one, Terry Hopper. I'd like to knock you right off this sidewalk."

"And I'd like to help you do it," added Jimmy Mitchell. "You know what we promised Mr. Phillips when he said he'd coach us, and here you are going back on your word, first thing."

"I didn't promise that I wouldn't buy a package of cigarettes."

"But you promised—we all promised that we wouldn't smoke one. A fellow who can't keep a promise isn't fit to be on a team anyway. He—"

But Shorty didn't get any further. With a cry of "Keep your old team to yourself then, sissy," Terry had given Shorty a push and before Shorty had quite realized what was happening, the other boy was almost out of sight as he dashed down the long street.

"Just wait till I catch him," exclaimed Shorty, brushing himself off as he got to his feet. "Just wait. I'll—"

"Aw, come on, both of you." It was the first time that Earl Smith had spoken since the meeting with Terry, and now he gave a little tug at Shorty's sleeve. "Come on, let's get going. You're almost as bad as Terry. Got as bad a temper, anyway, and you know what Mr. Phillips said about as many games being lost by quick tempers as by poor playing. Perhaps he isn't going to use those cigarettes at all."

"And perhaps he is, and that is going to mean that he's going to be short of breath and isn't going to be as clear in the head as he ought to be, and if there is any one who needs to keep a clear head it's the goal-keeper. Terry Hooper knows that as well as I do. When I see him—"

But when Wilfred Graham, who was known to all Harley as "Shorty" next saw Terry Hooper, there was no thought of doing any of the dreadful things that had come into his mind that Friday afternoon. It was on Monday, at least Shorty supposed it was Monday, for yesterday had been Sunday, and he remembered clearly every word of the sermon that he had heard in church on Sunday morning. He seemed to remember starting off for school on Monday morning, but he couldn't be quite sure that this was still Monday, for the queer pain in his head seemed to keep him from thinking much of anything and he just couldn't imagine what had happened to his foot. It was there, because he could see it, wrapped in bandages, but it really didn't feel as though it belonged to him. Then he had turned his bandaged head just the least bit, and there, in the very next bed, was Terry Hooper.

"How—did you get here?" he asked, forgetting that he and Terry were bitter enemies now.

"Same way you did," was the reply, "and if your head is as sore as this shoulder, you're having some fun standing it. You fellows in the front seat got the worst of it, they say, but there wasn't much chance for a fellow who was hanging on behind to get out of the way either I can tell you. Do you think they will arrest him?"

"Arrest who?" Shorty turned his head a little further around.

"Why, the driver of the truck that stuck the car. Mr. Smith's car, you know. He slid right into it, and I can't see how Earl got off as well as he did. The doctor says they took him home, but we had to come here to be patched up. And the truck driver's in the next ward. He's worse hurt than any of us. They say he was in the habit of taking a drink before he started out these cold mornings. Kind of kept him warm while he was on his rounds, he said, but the doctor said it didn't, really."

"Course it didn't," answered Shorty. "Anybody knows that. It just made him feel kind of warm at first, by making his blood go a little faster, but it would soon slow up again and he'd lose heat instead of getting it and be colder than ever."

"Well, he thought it would warm him up, anyway, and he took a little more than usual this morning because it was colder, and first thing he knew he lost control of the car and bang he went into us."

"Us?" Shorty's tone was one of surprise.

"Yep. I was hanging on behind. I didn't know it was Mr. Smith's car and you and Earl were in the front seat, or —" then Terry stopped. For the moment, in the excitement of discovering Shorty in the next bed, he, too, had forgotten that they were enemies. Now he remembered and he was silent. He was silent for so long that Shorty became uncomfortable.

Shorty was thinking hard. He had done a good deal of hard thinking on Sunday afternoon after he had listened to the sermon and it all came back to him now. "Judge not that ye be not judged," the minister had read from the big Bible on his desk; then he had gone on to speak in a way that even an eleven-year-old boy seemed to understand him. "You don't know how hard the other fellow is fighting his temptations, he explained. They aren't the same as your temptations. Usually you'll think they are much greater faults than your own, and perhaps they are. He may be fighting a liking for strong drink, a desire to do something that harms his own body for always, a love for evil stories, a quick temper, a hasty tongue, a—"

Shorty couldn't remember the rest. He had stopped at the quick temper, and he wondered if the people in the pew behind him had noticed how red his face grew as he listened. The minister seemed to be naming all the evil things in the world. He seemed to know how hard it was for some people to give up the use of tobacco and alcohol, to keep their bodies pure and their minds clean; to close their ears when a bad story was being told, to keep from swearing, from saying unkind and bitter things about their enemies; to keep a quick temper under control. But—and this is why Shorty had listened so hard—he was telling them how one could keep from doing all these hard things.

"They aren't always things that we can ask a friend to help us get rid of," he had said. "They are our faults, and we don't like to admit, sometimes, that they are faults at all. Friends may help, but they may critcize, may scold a little bit at the same time. There is Some One who knows just how badly we feel about it all. He can help when no one else can. He understands all about it. He will be right beside you all the time, much closer than any earthly friend could be. He will give you just the help you ask for, because He knows better than any one else possibly could just how hard we are trying, and He always likes to be on the side of those who are fighting hard."

And Shorty, alone in his room, had asked Him, and he had been helped to keep back angry words that rose to his lips when he lost his temper twice since then. He looked at Terry. It didn't seem easy to tell Terry about it. Perhaps Terry hadn't meant to smoke the cigarettes. He might have been carrying them home to his father who smoked a great deal and drank also. Terry might learn to drink, as well as smoke. Then it would be too late to tell him. The hockey team needed a strong and keen Terry as goal-keeper. Terry could not do anything very dreadful to him now, with his arm bound up. He would tell him any way, even if he could do something.

"Terry," he said suddenly, "you're the best junior goal-keeper in town. You—you won't smoke any more cigarettes, will you, not while the hockey season is on anyway? I know it isn't easy to give them up, if you've learned to like them, but there's Some One who can help you every minute of the time, if you'll only ask Him."

"I know," was the surprising reply, "I was there, too, in the back seat with Uncle Joe. I guess he's still wondering why I left a box of cigarettes in the corner of the seat when we came out of the church. He couldn't understand it, perhaps, if I told him, but I—I guess Some One else did, don't you?"

And the nurse, who came in at that moment, was wondering how two boys, who Earl Smith had declared were enemies, should be smiling at one another in such a friendly way and why the one with the bandaged head should say so decidedly, "I just guess He will. He likes a good fighter, you know, and I expect He likes to see a good goal-keeper too."

GOOD ADVICE

A good many drivers pay no attention to warning dealers that they should get ready now for the dangerous driving of late fall and winter. A driver should not start skidding himself into the belief that nothing could happen to him.

OFFICIAL REPORT

Recently a would-be chicken fancier had difficulty with her flock and wrote the following to the Department of Agriculture:

"Something is wrong with my chickens. Every morning when I come out I find two or three lying on the ground, cold and stiff, with their feet in the air. Can you tell me what is the matter,"

After a little while she received the following letter from the department: "Dear Madam. Your chickens are dead."

$68,400 IN DEPOSITS LOST BY CANDIDATES

More than one-third of the candidates in the last Federal election—342 out of 892 nominated—lost their deposits, giving the Dominion treasury a total of $68,400, an estimate based on present returns indicates.

The east, led by Ontario, had the largest number, 216 against 126 for the west. Of that total Ontario had exactly 100 more than the next province, Quebec, in number of candidates who lost their deposits.

The Reconstruction Party lost heavily 134 out of 174 candidates nominated forfeiting their $200 deposits to the government for failure to poll one-half of the vote cast for the elected members in their constituencies.

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was next with 77 candidates losing their deposits, while the Conservatives were third with 50. The Liberal party had 13 candidates who lost their deposits.

Candidates in Eastern Canada forfeited a total of $43,200 against $25,200 in the West.

By provinces the number losing deposits were: P.E.I., 2; Nova Scotia, 13; New Brunswick, 15; Quebec, 43; Ontario 143; Manitoba, 32; Saskatchewan, 33; Alberta, 41; BrBitish Columbia, 20. Total, 342.

The figures by parties: Conservatives, 50; Liberals, 13; Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, 77; Reconstructionists 134; Social Credit, 23; others, 45.

TODAY and TOMORROW

by FRANK PARKER STOCKBRIDGE

BREAD . . . . and baking

When I was a boy the test of a good house-wife was her ability to bake a toothsome loaf of bread. Nowadays, it seems to me, almost everybody buys bread at the store.

The big baking companies are talking about putting up the price of bread because of the increased cost of wheat and other materials. Secretary Wallace says that they had better reduce the size of the loaf than raise the price. It seems to me that there isn't much difference between reducing by making the loaf smaller and charging more for the standard loaf. Either way, the consumer gets less bread for his money.

In the old days of large families when practically everybody lived on the land, the idea of paying cash money for bread or any other cooked food seemed like wasteful extravagance. These days, with smaller families, mostly living in cities and towns, it just doesn't pay to bake home bread. My wife can still make as good bread as I have ever tasted, and about once a year she bakes a batch just to keep her hand in. But she figures that in the long run it costs about twice as much as if she bought it

CREDIT . . . . to ability

The other day I met the Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, Dean of Canterbury Cathedral, England. He is over here to explain the plan of "Social Credit," which is about to be tried out on a large scale in Alberta, Canada. As nearly as I can make out, the idea is that all credit should be controlled by government and granted to those who need it on the basis of their productive ability, without the many restrictions which prevent most of us from getting the credit we need.

"Where is the weak spot in the plan?" I asked the visitor from over-seas.

"Lack of trained, intelligent manpower to administer it," he replied frankly. "That is the weak spot in every human plan."

It seemed to me that the eminent cleric had put his finger on the weak spot of every plan of social and economic regeneration. I find myself completely in sympathy with the aims of most social reformers, but increasingly skeptical, as the years go on, of society's ability to bring about important reforms without first developing a great body of honest, intelligent administrators.

MACHINES . . . and men

I dropped in the other day on a young friend who makes the most complicated and delicate machinery that I know anything about. That is the machinery which produces the sound for the motion pictures.

"How near fool-proof can you make this sound equipment?" I asked.

"Did you ever see any machinery that was fool-proof?" asked Ted. "I don't know of anything more complicated than a wheelbarrow that doesn't take careful, intelligent attention to operate it."

I got to thinking about the multiplication of machines of all kinds and wondered if the time might not come when the problem of finding men able to run the machines would be an even more difficult problem than making the machines

DRIVERS . . . . not cars

One cocktail has enough effect on the average man's reactions to make it dangerous for him to drive a car, a Milwaukee physician reported to the American Safety Congress the other day.

More than 600 men, women and children were killed last week in automobile accidents.

Few of the accidents were the fault of the machine. The modern automobile is pretty nearly perfect as a piece of mechanism. What kills its victims is not the machinery but the drivers. The weak spot here, as in every other field of activity, is the human factor.

UNIONS . . . . the future

The American Federation of Labor has just voted down the proposal to reorganize on the basis of industries instead of the present basis of crafts. The industrial union idea, however, is gaining ground.

I have a feeling that it will not be many years before all the workers in any given industry will be organized into one big union, regardless of whether they are carpenters, steam fitters, machine tenders or night watchmen.

From that it will be only a step to the old IWW plan of "one big union" to include all persons who work for wages or salaries. And the net result of that, it seems to me, may easily be a new collective organization of society, big enough and broad enough to take in everybody. When that comes, everybody will have to justify his right to eat by his willingness and ability to perform useful service. And that will be getting back to first principles.

LABOUR-SAVIN' WOMAN

Rastus was bemoaning to his friend about his wife's laziness.

"She's so lazy," he said, "dat woman puts popcorn in de pancakes so they'll flop over themselves."

THE KING GOVERNMENT TAKES OFFICE

The election is over; the business of selecting cabinet ministers has been completed by Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King; the swearing-in ceremony has been performed and Canada enters a new era in her political history.

To reiterate the pressing emergencies which face the new Liberal Administration is futile, for none know better than the Prime Minister and his Cabinet Ministers the problems that must occupy a considerable portion of their time for the next few years.

Business indices, financial statements and other reliable sources tell us that Canada is well on the road to economic and social recovery. The gradual trend towards better times is unmistakable yet the need for sound and practical legislation remains as great as ever.

During the past six years there has crept into the life of this country a restlessness and dissatisfaction with prevailing methods of government. For months past the citizens have listened to charges of inaction hurled against those in power; talk of the "big interests" and their control over financial and governmental matters until they have come to believe almost anything that is said by political and social agitators. Never before in the history of Canada have the people shown such keen and intelligent interest in the affairs of this country, all of which heaps upon Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King and his government a stupendous responsibility. Over four million voters marched to the polls on October 14th to exercise their franchise and an equal number of citizens will watch with keen eyes the results arising from that decision during the next four or five years.

While it is taken for granted that the Liberal Administration will turn its attention to the matters of tariff and its effect on foreign trade, it is equally obvious that many of the causes of the present unrest and economic distress lie beyond the power of any government to solve. Canada is primarily an exporting nation, in competition with all other commercial nations, with the result that prices of her produce, in the main, are set in the world's markets over which the Canadian Government exercises little control.

It must also be remembered that present tariff policies enforced by other countries leave Canada virtually powerless to increase foreign markets without a compromise being made by both nations, the difficulty being, at present, that all nations are apparently intent upon excluding foreign goods and decreasing adverse trade balances. Another factor to be considered in this respect is that lack of purchasing power to be found in Canada is characteristic of the entire trading world, while credit is being pressed to the limit. Goods cannot be purchased from Canada without funds and many of the nations to whom Canadian farmers would sell wheat and other produce are not in a position to pay for it, being virtually bankrupt.

Such matters will tax the energy, foresight and enterprise of the King administration to the utmost and it is encouraging to note that the Prime Minister has chosen as members of his cabinet, many outstanding men of experience and good judgment.

The problems of unemployment, lack of trade and purchasing power, increased debt and taxation are acute. The people as a whole not only ask for, but demand action. The King government comes into power with a tremendous majority in the House of Commons; its work has already been cut out; results are demanded by the people—and they alone will judge.

THE QUESTION OF CANADIAN DEFENCE

The primary factors lying behind the Italian invasion of Ethiopia should give every true Canadian cause for deep concern. The need for raw materials with which to carry on industrial expansion and the desire to gain more territory are undoubtedly the chief motives with respect to the campaign against Abyssinia, on the part of Mussolini and his forces. In this connection Canada occupies an enviable position. Our natural resources are immeasurable, while millions of square miles of fertile territory lie within our borders. As our total population is roughly the same as that of the African Kingdom we raise the question, "Could we defend our shores against a foreign invader?" The answer is obviously "No!"

For generations Canadians have enjoyed freedom from attack by foreign powers, solely due to our position within the British Commowealth of Nations. The British Navy stands at all times ready to resist any effort to wrest this Dominion from the "family group," and we have been allowed to continue the work of development, so essential to a young country.

During the next few weeks, much will be heard throughout England concerning the need for a larger and more powerful navy. It is sugested that the United Kingdom expend one billion dollars on naval equipment so as to ensure adequate protection for the Empire. It is well to point out that Canada's contribution to this protection has been two destroyers, which are practically useless insofar as defence is concerned.

At the present time the Dominion is almost entirely dependent on the Mother Country for protection in case of attack. How long will the English taxpayers continue to bear the burden of providing sufficient equipment with which to protect, not only their own shores, but ours as well?

A HIGH PERCENTAGE

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, early this year announced his intention of making the fullest possible use of the power to suspend driving licenses as a means of checking the rapidly increasing accident toll. As a result of this policy, there were 5,140 suspensions in effect under the provisions of the Financial Responsibility Law, on the first of October—in other words, one out of every 130 drivers in Ontario. Of the 624 suspensions imposed during September, more than half of them were for reckless driving. The number of suspensions for driving while intoxicated set a new high record for any month although the total for the first nine months of the year was almost 10 per cent. below the total for the same months of 1931. Notwithstanding the fact that many men are prepared to express the opinion that no woman should be permitted to drive a car, only 25 women lost their driving privileges and had their licenses suspended during September, while 599 males were deprived of their licenses, according to statistics contained in the Department of Highways' monthly accident bulletin. Perhaps careless drivers will soon come to a realization that the laws are on the statute books to be obeyed.—Acton Free Press.

A DANGEROUS MENACE

It is surprising that numerous drivers on our public highways display such a lack of courtesy at night, and refuse to dim their head-lights when approaching another vehicle. The menace of glaring lights is responsible for many bad accidents and it is difficult to understand why so few motorists seem to realize that fact.

Modern inventions have made it a simple procedure ti dim the head-lights on automobiles, yet many drivers are apparently too lazy to push the button. We often wonder if such a driver would be quite so lazy about putting in a claim for damages if smashed up in an accident caused by his own glaring head-lights. Courtesy is an essential factor in driving as in every other phase of life, yet many people show an amazing lack of that quality when behind the wheel of their automobile.

HALLOWE'EN NIGHT

Tonight is Hallowe'en, and no doubt the boys and girls in this district will take full advantage of the occasion. It is to be hoped that acts of rowdyism will be absent this year and no trouble or inconvenience occasioned through damage to property. Much depends on the local authorities whether it is a night of fun or a decided nuisance.

A LONG SWIM

Recently a tightly corked perfume bottle was washed up on Woolli beach, New South Wales. Inside the bottle was a note which read: "Greetings from Ben T. Smith, Box 207, Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 16, 1930." It had taken more than five years for the bottle to float across the 8,000 miles of water from the shores of California to New South Wales.

A HALLOWEEN GAME

For the game of Turkey Hunting, a sheet or an old blanket is hung up against the wall or between two rooms. The sheet or blanket is covered with turkeys cut of white and colored papers. The turkeys are all different sizes and all bear numbers from 0 to 100. The players form sides and stand on a throwing line and in turn each one tries to "shoot" a turkey. This is done by throwing a soft rubber ball at the numbered turkeys. The number on the turkey that a player hits is his score. If a player does not hit a turkey the side he belongs to forfeits five points. If he hits a turkey with "0" on it, he has another try. The side having the highest score wins the game.

A PARTY CONVENTION

The matter of a convention of Ontario Conservatives to select a provincial party leader is very much to the fore since the Dominion election. The chief provincial organizer has stated that one will be called shortly. Of course the question of who the choice will be is almost invariable asked and the answer forthcoming in nine cases out of ten is "Hon. Earl Rowe." For some time it has been an open secret that the popular member for Dufferin-Simcoe would be taken into the Bennet cabinet and if the Bennett government were sustained at the polls he would be given a portfolio and remain in the House of Commons. But should the Bennett government be defeated Mr. Rowe would likely be the choice of Ontario Conservatives to lead the opposition in the legislature in succession to Mr. G. S. Henry, who will retire. All through Eastern Ontario Mr. Rowe seems to be the popular choice among Conservatives for the provincial leadership and occasionally in the press of the western portion of the province he is spoken of as the favorite. That he will bring an intimate and comprehensive knowledge of provincial affairs to the position is indicated by his references to Premier Hepburn and his government at a nomination meeting held some time ago. What Mr. Rowe thinks about the matter probably no one knows excepting himself.

WHAT "MAIN STREET" REPRESENTS

A phrase or title invented by an author can stick in the public mind until it becomes a nuisance.

Kipling's line about Canada being Lady of the Snows never brought joy to the travel agencies.

And Sinclair Lewis' "Main Street" gave too many city folks an unwarranted sense of superiority over those who live in the country towns.

The meaning of the word main is—important, essential to results, momentous in consequences.

In the trade affairs of this Dominion, Canada's Main Streets are precisely that.

In the 125,000 independent stores, of which a large percentage line streets such as these, is done sixty-nine per cent. of the country's retail business.

The 146 departmental stores in Canada do thirteen per cent. of the total business. The 8,476 chain stores, eighteen per cent.

Ponder that fact. Sixty-nine of every hundred retail sales are made not by the big departmental stores; not by the mail order houses in big cities; not by the chain stores.

They are made over the counters of stores on the corners of country cross-roads, on the Main Streets of our villages, towns and communities. And the owners of those stores are individual citizens, not corporations.

They are Main. They are essential to results in merchandising; they are momentous in consequence.

As a people we have been too ready to think that it is the size that counts; that power always must lie in concentration.

Manufacturers, mesmerized by Mass Buying, have too often neglected to inquire into the importance of the well-established independent dealer; the buying importance of the community that he serves.

"Remember the Maine" once roused the United States to patriotic fervor.

"Remember Main Street" can show results too.—McLean's Magazine.

It is more important to teach a boy at school how to keep a check on the irregularities of politicians than a check upon the irregularities of the Latin verbs.—Prof. W. McClelland.

MANY REGISTER FOR PILGRIMAGE

A total of 2,100 Canadian War Veterans and dependents thus far have registered for the pilgrimage to Vimy Ridge, France next July in connection with the unveiling of Canada's National Memorial. Headquarters at Ottawa of the Canadian Legion, under whose auspices the pilgrimage is being made, expect a total of 5,000 when the "troopships" sail.

MRS. GEORGE BLACK WON YUKON BY MAJORITY OF 135

Mrs. George Black, the second woman to be elected to the House of Commons, won the Yukon seat by a majority of 135 over J. P. Smith, Independent Liberal, final figures showed. The vote, Mrs. Black, 686; Mr. Smith, 551.

Mrs. Black ran as an Independent Conservative. She had, however, full endorsement of the official Conservative Association.

The riding was represented in the last House of Commons by Hon. George Black. When the former Speaker suffered a period of ill-health, his wife decided to contest the riding.

DISCHARGING GUNS ON SUNDAY IS ILLEGAL

In keeping with the Ontario Statute which prohibits the discharging of firearms in this province between the hours of midnight Saturday and midnight Sunday, George Leach, fish and game inspector for Carleton county, Sunday seized the rifles of four men whom he encountered in Nepean township. The men were Robert W. Kropp, Hurdman's Bridge; Alex Hildebrandt, Bell's Corners; Samuel Smith, 406 Arlington ave.; and William Doyle, 144 Carling avenue. The four will appear in county magistrate's police court on Friday.

SIX OF MINISTERS ARE ROMAN CATHOLICS

In Prime Minister Mackinzie King's new Cabinet the largest religious group adheres to the Catholic communion. Six of the new Ministers are Catholic. Presbyterians are represented by three. There are three Baptists, one United Church, one Lutheran and one Anglican.

All the French-Canadian Ministers, Ernest Lapointe, P. J. A. Cardin, Fernand Rinfret, J. E. Michaud and Senator Dandurand are Catholic. So also is C. G. Powers.

The Presbyterians are Mackenzie King, Ian Mackenzie and T. A. Crerar.

Norman Rogers, J. C. Elliott and J. L. Ilsley are Baptists.

C. A. Dunning is United church, W. D. Euler a Lutheran and C. D. Howe an Anglican.

With the exception of Mr. Dunning, Mr. Mackenzie and Mr. Howe, all the members of the new government were born in Canada. Mr. Dunning is English, Mr. Mackenzie a Scotsman, while Mr. Howe was born in the United States

IDEAS FOR RIGHT LIVING WORTH KEEPING IN MIND

There exists in life six things which we ought to learn. These are:

First—To laugh. Laughing is better than any amount of medicine. Whenever you smile or laugh, the mind is liberated for that moment from all the burdens and cares of human life.

Second—To know how to tell a good story. A tale amusing and well narrated is as acceptable in any company as a sunbeam in the dreary room of an in-

Third—To learn eo conceal your own valid.

regrets and discomforts. The world has sorrow enough without listening to your complaints and injustices too.

Fourth—To refrain from grumbling, even in secret. If your circumstances are not always pleasant and agreeable remember that they might be far worse.

Fifth—To greet your friends with real cheerfulness. They already have troubles enough of their own without feeling that they are about to share another's.

Sixth—To help loyally every object and effort which our conscience acknowledges as worthy, chiefly our homes, our churches and our lodges. We should always feel that we can benefit from these factors of a happy life only in proportion to the efforts and sacrifices we make for them.

DEER HUNTING REGULATIONS

Clarifications of rules governing the shooting of deer was made on Wednesday of last week, in a statement issued from the Department of Game and Fisheries.

One to three hunters are permitted to take only one male deer each over the age of one year. A party of four hunters is permitted to take three bucks and one doe or fawn, or they may take one buck each. A party of eight hunters is not permitted to take more than two does or fawns, and no party may exceed that limit.

METCALFE TEAMS PLAN TOWN HOCKEY LEAGUE

On Friday evening last a meeting was held at Metcalfe in the interest of hockey for the coming season. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Hon. president, W. J. W. Woods; president, Gordon Boland; vice president, Andy York; secretary, Morgan Park; treasurer, Oren Stanley.

The management of the Metcalfe rink was discussed and it was decided that the hockey club would take over the management of the rink and engage some one to make ice. Bill Casserly and Bill Coombs were appointed ice makers.

The matter of organizing a town league will be formed.

It was decided to hold a concert and dance in the near future to raise funds.

WOMAN THROWN FROM AUTO

Mrs. William McMillan, of Aultsville, was thrown from her car Saturday afternoon last when it collided with an automobile driven by Mrs. J. W. Schober, Waukegen, Illinois, on First street, Morrisburg. Nobody, however, was injured. Both cars were damaged extensively.

NEED FOR REFORM

"I wish our bank could get on its feet enough to stop sending back my cheques marked "insufficient funds," said the bride to her husband. "A bank that hasn't enough money on hand to pay a $4.27 cheque ought to be merged and put on a sound basis."

JAIL OUTBREAK CHECKED

One prisoner in the County jail at Cornwall is in solitary confinement, and five others are being punished for their part in a disturbance late on Saturday afternoon last, which might possibly have resulted in their escape, it was learned unofficially. For no apparent reason, the prisoners in the overcrowded jail would not obey orders and wrecked what little furniture was in the cell block.

It was reported that Duncan Willard, 21, Kenyon township farmer, serving an 18-months sentence for theft, was in solitary confinement while other prisoners, including Clarence Cameron, of Amherst, N. S., who is awaiting trial for the murder of Louis Volvey, 55-year-old farmer, ten miles north of Cornwall, on April 22 last, were given other punishment.

The disturbance came while the prisoners were being given their supper, it was learned. Ralph Cook, governor of the jail, and Bernard Maloney, guard, were supervising the serving of the meal from outside the cell block when the prisoners became disorderly. Provincial police and city police were summoned and the prisoners were subdued and locked in their cells.

Girard Beauclaire, Cornwall, who is serving a 30-day term, and who took part in the riot at Kingston two years ago, was in the cell block at the time but took no part in the affair, it was said. Cameron was said to have threatened Governor Cook.

GIRL CRITICALLY INJURED

Miss Kathleen McDonald, 46 College Avenue, Ottawa, suffered a broken back when the automobile in which she was a passenger suddenly went out of control and crashed into the ditch, turning over end for end, just missing a hydro pole, near the golf grounds at Kemptville shortly after twelve o'clock on Thursday night last. Hospital reports said her condition is critical.

The two other occupants of the car, Miss Patricia McDonald, sister of the injured girl and driver of the car, and a Toronto traveller were badly shaken up, but not seriously injured.

Miss McDonald was driving to Ottawa when the accident occurred. As she came near the golf grounds she attempted to pass another car which was travelling in the same direction. Suddenly she lost control of the car and it smashed into the ditch. The force of the crash tore the top completely off the car and smashed all the glass.

Dr. G. D. Gordon, of Kemptville, was called to the scene of the accident and he found the girl had a broken back. He ordered her taken to the hospital. She was rushed to the Civic Hospital in Ottawa in Kidd and Dickinson's ambulance, of Kemptville.

Provincial Constable P. Harkness investigated.

'Tis a curious fact, but past all doubt,
That the more of happiness one gives out
The more he has left and the more his powers;
As the gardener strips a bed of flowers
That more shall bloom, so strip your soul
That another's happiness be made whole;
And lo! in the quick-winged second after,
'Tis filled with the blooms of love and laughter.

The girls will be missed in work and sports of the community.

CARELESS SMOKERS

In Canada last year, 13,000 fires with a total loss of over two million dollars were definitely traced to the careless handling of cigarettes. Unfortunately, the loss was not in the property of the smokers, or the situation might soon be remedied.

Of 2,817 fires reported in Ontario for the past three months, 488 resulting in property loss of $66,591, were directly caused by smokers, according to an official statement issued at Queen's Park by Fire Marshal William Scott.

A GRIM WARNING

A huge yellow cross, prominently painted on their motor cars, will hereafter identify chronic violators of traffic laws in Germany's capital. It will be interesting to note what effect such a penalty will have: "Beware—I Killed a Man," painted on the front of a car would be a gruesome reminder to the motorist.

Late Mrs. W. J. Thompson

A large number of friends and former neighbours gathered at the Hainsville United Church on Monday, Oct. 14th, to pay their last respects to a much esteemed and highly respected friend in the person of Mrs. W. J. Thompson, whose death occurred at Parish, N. Y., on Friday, Oct. 11th, following a lengthy illness which she bore with true Christian faith, knowing that her Heavenly Father doeth all things well.

The late Mrs. Thompson, whose maiden name was Sarah Coarse, of Scranton, Pa., went as a bride to Glen Stewart fifty-eight years ago. She had always resided there until five years ago when the family moved to United States. She was in her 76th year and had been a member of the Holiness Movement church for a number of years. She was a devoted wife and mother, always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to anyone in times of sickness or trouble. Her husband predeceased her two years ago. Two daughters, Mrs. R. C. Oliver, of Ogdensburg, N.Y., and Mrs. J. B. Hill, of Evans Mills, N.Y., also predeceased her. Surviving are three daughters, and one son, Mrs. Fred Hubbard, Parish, N.Y.; Mrs. Wesley Hardy, of Rochester, N.Y.; Mrs. Smith Ault and Millard Thompson, of Philadelphia, N. Y., also seven grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

The funeral service was conducted by a former pastor and friend of the family: Rev. P. C. Bennett, of Watertown, N. Y., assisted by Rev. Mr. Lacey, pastor of the Hainsville United church, and Rev. Mr. Campbell, pastor of the Holiness Movement church, Iroquois. Rev. Mr. Bennett spoke in highest terms of the deceased. The choir sang a very appropriate hymn and a beautiful duet was rendered by Mrs. Ruth Campbell and son. Interment was made in the family plot in Brinston cemetery, the pall bearers being six of her old neighbors, ,Messrs. Thos. Johnston Henry Boyd, Jack Adams, Charles Anderson, James McDermott and James Wright.

The Family DOCTOR

by JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"GULLIBILITY"

It occurs to me more and more frequently as the years go by, that "gullibility" is one of the greatest misfortunes that afflicts our people. Sometimes I think it costs our country more in the total than the most devastating epidemic of disease.

Let's get the meaning of the word clear. Gullibility is the ease with which you can be mis-led by fake propositions.

At heart you really abhor all swindles. It's the deal that you THINK is honest, that you bite at with avidity and do not learn that you have been stung until you have parted with all the good, honest money that could be extracted from you. Your gullibility leads you through suckerdom.

There are all sorts of fake sanitoria in the country, with a so-called "religious" complexion added and a freak dietary system, all designed to catch the American sucker. Such things have no legitimate place in the honest care of the ailing—nor are they true component parts of any worthy church enterprise.

The "preacher-doctor" has long been noted as an American hoax, insinuating himself into the confidence of gullible people by prostituting the sacred tenets of religion to his unholy ends.

There is no more humanitarian work than that of the true physician. If an individual must summon religion to commend him in a money-getting scheme or calling the chances are that he is sadly defective in the most important qualification, the ability to honestly deliver the goods.

I wish I were able to write a book about humbuggery. But, I think I would run myself ragged, only to fail in finding a publisher.

THE POOR SECRETARY

If the secreary writes a letter it is too long.
If he sends a post card it is too short.
If he doesn't send a notice he's lazy.
If he attends a meeting he's butting in.
If he stays away he's a shirker;
If he duns a member for his dues, he's moaning.
If he doesn't he's slipping;
If he asks for service he is incompetent.
If he does not he's bull headed;
If he writes his reports complete they are too long,
If he condenses them they are incomplete;
If he talks on a subject he is trying to run things.
If he remains quiet he has lost interest.
Ashes to ashes,
Dust to dust,
If others won't do it,
The secretary must.

ENGAGING A NEW STENOGRAPHER

He was engaging a new stenographer and the conversation went like this:
"Chew gum?" he asked.
"No, sir."
"Talk slang?"
"No, sir."
"Roll your eyes at the salesmen?"
"No, sir."
"Know how to spell 'cat' and 'dog'?"
"Yes, sir."
"Have lots of phone calls?"
"No, sir."
He was trying to think of something else to ask, when suddenly she took a hand, and began popping questions at him:
"Smoke cheap cigars while dictating?"
"Why-er-no," he gasped.
"Raise hell with the stenographer if things go wrong at home?"
"Cer-tainly not."
"Bang things around on your desk when business is bad?"
"N-never."
"Raise the roof when an employee gets caught in a traffic jam?"
"No, indeed."
"Know enough to appreciate a good steographer when you get one?"
"I-I think so."
"All right you're accepted. When do you want me to go to work?

BUDGETING TIME

Most of the young people realize the importance of bugeting where money is concerned, but few seem to understand that budgeting time is equally necessary. Twenty-four hours a day is all you have to live on, and that time should be so divided and apportioned that no important interest in life is slighted. Your hours of work are generally decided for you, but your hours of play should not be neglected. Recreation should take into account physical well-being and intellectual pleasure. Worship should be planned for. Provision should be made for friendly relations with others. In every twenty-four hours time should be allowed for the quiet thinking which is back of all growth, all progress.—Acton Free Press.

ROWENA RIDES THE RUMBLE

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY THE AUTHOR

by ETHEL HUESTON

ELEVENTH INSTALMENT

Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute Little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as soon as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach Denver, where the next morning Peter and Rowena discover Bobby has deserted them and returned to New York by train. They are faced with the impossible condition of continuing their trip without a chaperon.

Rowena suggests to Peter that they make a "companionate" marriage. They are married and go to Cheyenne, where their actions, when they ask for rooms on separate floors, arouses the suspicions of the hotel clerk. They finally succeed in getting rooms, but not without exciting the laughter of the hotel loungers. They wire the company they have been married.

They resume the trip the next day and are overwhelmed by a cloudburst in an arroyo and are thrown out of the car. A party of tourist campers gives them dry clothes and food. Spokane is finally reached and the hotel clerk smiles when they register. They find Rackruff Motors have arranged a public reception and dance for them. They are deluged with presents.

After the festivities. Peter angers the hotel staff by leaving his bride alone all night and Rowena tries to console him for the bad opinion he has won by his actions.

They find Bobbie awaiting them in the hotel at Seattle and she travels with them to Los Angeles where they are met by an unfriendly hotel clerk, who summons the police who thereupon place all three under arrest for kidnapping Bobby.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"See here," said Peter angrily, "what sort of tommyrot is this anyhow? This lady is too old for the Juvenile Court. Why, she is her own mistress. She's twenty-three years old."

"Well, according to the complaint from New York, there is nothing we can do about it. Our orders are to put you under arrest. You'll have to talk to the judge."

"But, Peter," cried Rowena, "are you going to let them arrest us for not being married, when we are married! Look at all the trouble we've had. That's proof enough."

"But why should they say you are only pretending to be married if you really are married?"

"Well, who says so? That's the first question. Where did the complaint come from anyhow?"

"From a gentleman in New York by the name of Carter Wellman——"

"You can fix this up," said the officer. "You got influential friends, ain't you? They'll fix you up all right. All they got to do is swear they know all about you and everything's jake and there you are. You just hop down private in your own car with Bill here to show you the way—this is Bill Harmon—fine chap, too—he'll go down with you and introduce you to the judge. He's a swell gent, the judge is. He'll see how things are in a jiffy."

It was the simplest way out, and the officers made it as easy for them as possible, allowed them to walk unescorted through the lobby of the hotel and waited at a respectful distance when Peter stopped to send a telegram, which he wrote with a very firm hand and signaled for Rowena to come and read. It was addressed to Carter Wellman.

"Are you going to marry Roberta Lowell immediately on her return to New York, or are you not? If your engagement is canceled, as she believes, I shall marry her myself immediately. A rolling brown dumpling gathers nothing but trouble for all concerned. Please state your exact intentions."

"But you can't marry her," protested Rowena. "You're married now."

"Well, he doesn't believe it.—And Rackruff, Inc., will pay for that wire if I have to steal a spare tire to get it."

The judge proved extremely sympathetic and agreed with Peter that it was an outrage, no less, the way people in love embroiled innocent bystanders in the tangled web of their affairs. He had his secretary send off a wire to Denver to verify the marriage, and to Rackruff Motors, Inc., in New York, for details of the trip and complete information regarding Rowena and Peter. He even sent for the local Rackruff dealer, who fortunately turned out to be both a native son and a brother Elk. He was willing to stand entirely responsible for their appearance if required.

Besides seeing to their freedom he made Rowena a present of a friendly little dog which he had found in his showrooms that morning and which Rowena promptly proceeded to call Constantine. Peter grumbled at the addition to their party but was overruled.

And so Rowena had a companion on the rumble seat from then on.

By the salesman's good offices they were enabled to return to the hotel without police escort or surveillance of any kind.

In the early morning Peter read to the girls the answer to his personal telegram.

"Such has been and is my intention," read the telegram. "I am probably the last man living entirely honorable in my dealings with women. Our engagement most certainly is not ended and if you interfere I shall sue. Plan to marry her instant of her arrival. In fact, expect to meet here with license, ring and minister. Wire what train."

So at ten-ten Peter and Rowena stood side by side under the quaint tiled portico of the Santa Fé station and waved a fond—and not ungratified—farewell to little brown Bobby.

The misadventures of Bobby's return and their legal entanglements in Los Angeles had keyed them to a high nervous tension, but when they had left the limits of the city a sudden quiet restfulness descended upon them. Rowena drooped drowsily

"What, no mail for me?" asked Rowena.

against his shoulder.

"Shall I put up the umbrella in the rumble seat?" Peter asked facetiously.

But Rowena pretended she was asleep.

By the time they reached the outskirts of San Diego, Peter as well as Rowena confessed to a complete exhaustion, mental as well as physical.

They pulled up at the U. S. Grant Hotel. There was no boy in sight and Peter, unwilling to waste a moment, himself carried their bags into the lobby and hurried over to the desk. He was surprised at being immediately accommodated with two single rooms.

Their good fortune followed them and they both had a real good night's rest.

Peter had all the bags stowed neatly away in the car the next morning, ready for their start for the East, when Rowena tripped out of the hotel leading the freshly washed Constantine on a brand-new leash attached to a brand-new collar.

"Gosh, Rowena," ejaculated Peter, "what'll we do with the mutt? I forgot about him?"

"Do with Constantine!" she echoed. "Why, we'll buy him a nice silk cushion to ride on, and get him a fresh bone every day. And charge it all to Rackruff."

Peter did his best picture at Grand Canyon, one which brought him no small amount of praise and profit. It was the Rackruff and Rowena riding through the rainbow fringe, with Constantine's queer, quaint black and white head nodding approbation beside her.

Rowena was not having the best of luck with her work in those declining weeks of their tour. She kept a pencil and note-book constantly at hand, even teaching Constantine to carry them for her on command, but ideas were not coming to her with much frequency. For the first time in her life, Rowena did not feel like writing, did not want to be bothered, and it may as well be added, her writing was far below its usual standard.

They lapsed into comfortable silence. They did not quarrel so much when they were alone—there seemed less point to it. To be sure, when occasion required, they would wither each other with a scathing word, but they never went to the old lengths.

In Albuquerque, when Peter had registered and called for their mail he was handed half a dozen telegrams and two or three letters.

"Nothing for Miss Rostand," said the clerk.

"What!" ejaculated Rowena. "Nothing for me? Not anything? Why, Buddy always—he surely must have written. Oh, please look again! There must be at least one!"

The clerk obligingly ran through the mail again.

"Sorry—not a thing," he said again.

"Dear me," said Rowena thoughtfully. "How—extremely—odd!"

Alone in his own room, Peter took off his coat and settled down to his mail. A quick glance at the letters told him they were of no especial importance and he turned to the telegrams. The two that he opened first were from the Company, but the third started off on an odd note.

"Darling, I hate to ask you again," Peter read, his eyes starting with surprise. "Devil's own luck. Lost fifty bucks at craps. Got to have it this week or they will chuck me out. Rush it by wire Wish I hadn't played." It was signed "Buddy."

To Peter it made no sense at all. He turned it over and scrutinized the address again. Ah! That explained it. It was addressed not to "Mr." but to "Mrs. Peter Blande."

His mind traveled back over the trip. Buddy—that was her brother—Ronald Rostand. Ready for his third year in college and taking summer courses to cut down the time and expense. Rowena had received a letter or telegram from him at every stop en route. He remembered her subsequent counting of bills and rush for a telegraph office—her complete financial stringency—the way she starved herself, eschewing all desserts—her thousand painful small economies.

Now Peter realized fully what it meant—this thing that he was going to do. Knew quite well that when Buddy wrote back in complaint of this unwarranted outside interference, Rowena's rage would be beyond bounds.

They had talked sometimes of the future when their motor tour was over, thought they would probably be good friends in later years when their business vicissitudes were separate and distinct, and no longer bound up by compulsion in each other's work and wish. But if Peter flung open insult at Buddy—"The sacred cow!" he sneered—all such hopes for the future were null and void. Well, Peter told himself, he didn't know that he cared. After all, he didn't get on so very well with Rowena. But she was a good sport—the best sport he had ever seen—and deserved a better break than Buddy was giving her.

Peter's grip on the pen made it a sword as he gave form to his scathing thoughts.

"Granting to begin with that it is none of my business," he wrote heavily, "it nevertheless affords me great pleasure to tell you that in my opinion you are an unspeakable cad. You may not know—of course you do not know, for Rowena is one Rostand who is a rousing good sport and would not throw up her privations to you—that in order to meet your insatiate demands for money, your sister, tired and exhausted as she is by hard work and long driving, has saved money by doing her own laundry in the bathtub at nights; has starved herself on soup and coffee and gone without a proper meal for days at a time.

"Better men than you have worked their way through college. For Rowena's sake, I myself am sending you the fifty bucks.

"It is of course quite unnecessary for me to explain that Rowena does not know that you wired for this money nor that I am sending it. Your telegram was handed me by mistake and I opened it under the impression it was for me."

And without an instant's hesitation he endorsed his sentiments with the signature that would one day be worth thousands—"Peter Blande."

Peter was pretty uncomfortable about the whole business. He was not used to any sort of double dealing and was not at all sure but at any moment officers of the law—or perhaps the telegraph company—would hale him away to jail to expiate his unwarranted manipulation of other people's affairs by telegraph.

At El Paso Rowena had two letters. She sat right down in the nearest chair to read them, and Peter stalked moodily from cigar stand to desk and back again, and watched her furtively.

Peter could stand it no longer.

"Buddy O. K.?" he inquired anxiously.

"He's entirely too O. K. I'm worried."

"You can't be too O. K.," protested Peter. "Nobody can.—What do you mean?"

JUNK CARS

A despatch from Owen Sound about the adventure of youth and three friends in a 1919 motor car purchased for $5.00 lends itself to an appeal for the removal of "junk cars" from the public highways. The quartette made the trip from Owen Sound to Toronto in nine hours. They had all sorts of trouble on the way, as may be imagined, and when they came to hills they had to push it, the other traffic being held up until they reached the top. No doubt the youths had a good time—of a kind—the exploit being fun to them, but we trust this automobile has since been junked or that the police will put the new law in operation and seize it as a menace to the public. There are so many dangers on the highways without the added risk of dilapidated cars, the essential parts of which function imperfectly if they function at all, that adventures of this kind should be prohibited.

It was the twin's first visit to the Zoo, Aunt Prim, who had charge of them, was endeavouring with the aid of a catalogue to render the visit memorable. She succeeded, but not quite in the manner she anticipated.

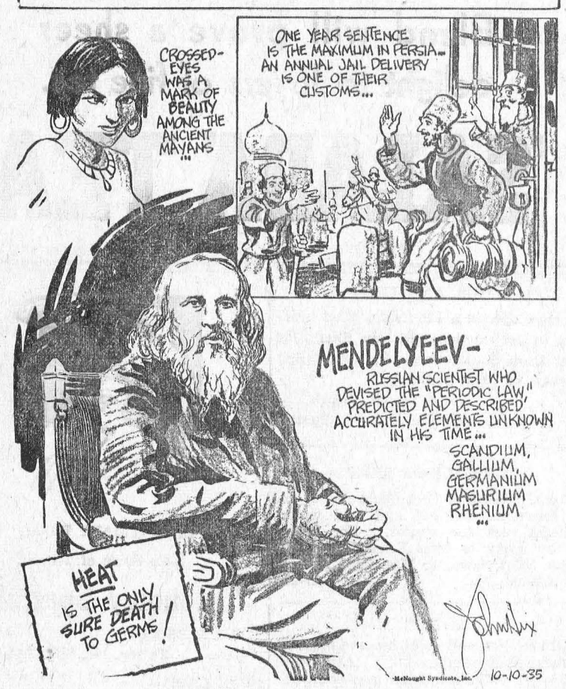
The lessons in zoology were boring enough, but her continual nagging at the youngsters in regard to their behaviour was making their lives a misery.

At last they arrived at a cage containing a long-snouted animal which she informed them was an ant-eater.

Tommy brightened up at once and, nudging his sister, whispered, "Do you think we could push her in?"

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By JOHN HIX

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.



Strange as it seems, if the 92 elements that make up all matter on earth were arranged in order of their atomic number, hydrgen, the lightest, first, and so on through uranium, the heaviest—the list would be found to have definitely re-occurring chemical and physical properties.

Eight spaces after lithium comes sodium, and eight spaces after sodium comes potassium—all three having physical and chemical properties in common. Between them, however, lie such unrelated elements as carbon, aluminum and sulpuh.

This strange fact was recognized by scientists long ago. They arranged the elements into table form to show the reoccurrence of properties.

The Russian scientist, Mendelyeev, first proposed the periodic law of elements, in 1869. Working on this theory, he was able to announce the existence of, and describe the properties of five different unknown elements. There seemed to be an element missing beteween calcium and titanium—so Mndelyeev put one there and called it eka-boron. He even described it. In 1879 this missing element was discovered and called scandium.

Mendelyeev also described and predicted the disqovery of other missing elements that he called eka-aluminum, eka-silicon, eka-manganese, and dwimanganese. He was borne out by the discovery of gallium, germanium, masurium and rhenium.

THE MODEL HIRED MAN

He gets up early and he stays up late,
And he doesn't forget to shut the gate;
He eats very little, but he works very hard,
And when butter is dear, he uses lard.
He is willing and cheerful and strong,
He wouldn't think of doing anything wrong,
He says his prayers most every night,
And he goes to bed without a light.
His back is strong—but not his mind,
And his equal would be hard to find;
For he fulfils your slightest wishes,
From milking cows—to washing the dishes.
He does not smoke, and he does not chew,
But is ever, looking for something to do;
He is willing to work hard every day—
And wait, God-knows-when for his pay.

HORSE HELPS OWN MEMORIAL

The memory of Brown Jack, one of the greatest race horses known in England, is to be perpetuated, and the horse is helping the plan. During the recent International Horse Show at Olympia Brown Jack was placed on exhibition. There was no charge to see him, but there was a collection box, and the proceeds were sufficient to start a fund to endow a "Brown Jack Bed" in a hospital

DANGEROUS PASTIME

A motorist narrowly escaped hitting a child the other day. The boy had been playing in the leaves, and had covered himself up with them, so that the motorist did not see him. Parents are warned not to let their children play on the streets. It is a great temptation, of course, when the fallen leaves are so plentiful, but it is a dangerous practice.

LEISURE

What is this life if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare.

No time to stand beneath the boughs
And stare as long as sheep and cows.

No time to see, in broad daylight,
Streams full of stars, like stars at night.

No time to burn at Beauty's glance,
And watch her feet, how they can dance.

No time to wait till her mouth can
Enrich that smile her eyes began.

A poor life this, if, full of care,
We have no time to stand and stare.

—William H. Davies

HALLOWEEN

Watch the calendar all the way,
Till you see it's Halloween Day.

Halloween has come again,
To give us children fun within.

We can do our Halloween trick,
Draw with soap and it will sitck.

If it's nice and does not rain,
We'll sound the tick-tack on the pane.

Build a fence across the way,
If you're caught, you'll have to pay.

Pile the buggies on the shed,
Then it's time to go to bed.

When you'r having all your fun,
Watch for the old gent with his gun.

—Olive Mallory, Madrid, N. Y.

"NEVER TROUBLE TROUBLE"

If you get up feeling weary,
And the day seems dark and dreary,
With no one to call you dearie,
Don't sit down in deep despair.
There are others who have troubles,
Who, like you, are feeling blue;
So never trouble trouble,
Until trouble troubles you.

Look at the little birdie,
In his shining gilded cage;
He longs to soar to tree tops,
Nor would he be afraid.
But his little throat is swollen
In a burst of joyous song
He has no time for sighing
He sings the whole day long.

So never trouble trouble,
Until trouble troubles you;
There are joys, as well as sorrows,
The whole world through.
Listen to the birdie,
Just listen to him sing;
He has no time to trouble,
Though trouble troubles him.

—Sue M. Griffiths.

SUNDAY MORNING

If I could turn life's pages back and from its golden store
Could take some precious moments and make them mine once more,
I would not ask for wealth or fame, nor far-flung fields to roam,
But just for Sunday morning on the old farm home.

Those were days of toil and hardship, care that could not be denied,
But the Sabbath brought a respite—the wordly tasks are laid aside.
Souse all shining, quiet, peaceful, mother's face so dear, so blest,
Father's voice in prayer uplifted, "Lord we thank Thee for Thy rest."

Clean white cloth upon the table, silver gleaming, china gay.
With a place laid for the preacher should he honour us today;
On the spare bed little garments, dainty ruffles, snowy white,
All that mother love could compass to make Sunday a delight.

And the old horse with the carriage, faithful friend for many a year.
Gladly do I pay tribute to a memory still dear,
Well he knows it's Sunday morning; hear him whinny "Don't be late,"
As impatiently he watches for our coming out the gate.

No stained windows, no grand organ, made that little church so fair,
Plain the people were and humble, but 'twas love that brought them there
And the awe and holy quiet, emblem of the heavenly grace,
God was near and very precious as we met Him in His place.

I cannot have that little bit of Heaven on earth today,
I cannot be a child again, so free from care, so gay,
But when life's week of toil is o'er and I to rest have come,
It will be Sunday morning in the old farm home.

—Mabel Tackabury.

SMILING THROUGH THE RAIN

Friends have you seen the good old sun
A-smiling through the rain,
And peeking out between the clouds
To cheer you up again?
Well, that's just like some folk I know;
When you are feeling blue
They chase the gloom away with smiles
And soon you're smiling too.

DO YOUR BEST

"Jes' do your best, and praise or blame
That follers this counts jes' the same;
You may have noted great success
Is mixed with troubles, more or less,
And it's the man who does his best
That gets more kicks than all the rest."

If the day looks kinder gloomy
And your chances kinder slim
If the situation's puzzlin'
And your prospects awful grim
If perplexities keep pressin'
Till hope is almost gone
Just bristle up and grit your teeth
And keep on keepin' on.

Frettin' never wins a fight
And fumin' never pays
There aint no use in broodin'
In these pessimistic ways;
Smile, just kind of cheerfully
Though hope is nearly gone
And bristle up and grit your teeth
And keep on keepin' on.

THE VILLAGE MINISTER

Counselling the sad and weak;
Hastening words of cheer to speak
To the lowly and the least;
Smiling at a wedding feast;
Helping blind, relentless youth
Into patience, vision and truth.
Teaching downcast hearts to hope;
Clasping feeble hands that grope
When the earth scenes fade, and dim
Eyes look anxiously at him.
Kind, familiarized with death—
As wert Thou of Nazareth.
Now a little child to christen,
Now a patient hour to listen
To a burdened father's woes,
Up and down the street he goes,
Sharing every smile and tear,
Counting not his own life dear.
Walk beside him all the days
In our small town's devious ways;
Rest him, Lord, with birds and bees,
And the whispering of the trees.
He whose days are one long giving—
Keep in him the joy of living.

THE VAGRANT

The man on the right was a murderer
The man on the left was a thief,
The man across was a gangster boss and wicked beyond belief,
And I was there in a cell between and nobody shared my grief.

Rats from humanity's sewers,
Guarded on every hand
From every clime and for every crime they were numbered among the band,
Guarded close in the walls of stone obeying the law's command.

Marching into the dining room,
Getting our soup and bread,
Down the aisle in a single file and I was at the head.
And all around were the kind of men that the sinks of iniquity bred.

And I was a minister's only son,
Stifling a broken sob,
Direct from Yale to a dismal jail like one of a gangster mob,
And this is the crime I was guilty of, I couldn't find a job.

Down on the books as a vagrant,
Guilty of being a bum,
Pulled by a cop from a box car top, herded along with a gun,
Shut like a rat in a narrow cell till my thirty days is done.

One of an army of unemployed,
A victim of modern days.
When a man must roam with nerve at home to follow the hobo's ways.
And society's only remedy is prison for thirty days.

My college course I would lay aside
For a job with a dago crew,
I travelled wide but in vain I tried for there wasn't a thing to do.
So they locked me up in a prison cell and made me a jail-bird too.

The feet of the guard in the corridor,
Make a dismal sort of sound;
The brazen dong of the prison gong goes echoing all around,
And sitting alone in my cell of stone the depths of despair I found.

—Maurice L. Kilgrove, of Listowel in Listowel Banner.

Suitor—Pardon me, doctor, but last night your daughter accepted my proposal of marriage. I have called this morning to ask if there is any insanity in your family.

Doctor (looking him over)—There must be.

METCALFE W. A. GIVES SUPPER AND CONCERT

Under the auspices of the Women's Association, Metcalfe, a well attended chicken supper and concert was given in the town hall in that place on Friday evening last. The supper tables were convened by Mrs. L. Dow, Mrs. E. McTirr, Mrs. J. Hutt, Mrs. W. Garrett.

Following the supper, an entertaining program was presented under the chairmanship of Rev. Dr. T. C. Gaukrodger, pastor of the church.

Those contributing were: Musical numbers including the opening chorus of the choir with Miss Gwen Gaukrodger at the piano; duet, the Misses Lois and Freda Boyd, of Ottawa; vocal solo, Miss Dorothea Blair; readings by Mr. Rowat, of Winchester. A male quartette comprised of Messrs. R. L. Boyd, J. D. Cameron, J. A. Waddell, H. Caskey, with Mrs. H. Caskey as accompanist, rendered appropriate songs. Greetings from neighboring congregations were brought by Rev. C. H. Roach, rector of Holy Trinity church, Metcalfe; Rev. C. M. Stewart, of Kenmore United; Rev. W. S. Atchison, of Winchester United.

Dr. J. C. Byers voiced the appreciation of the congregation to all those who took plart in the program.

McQUAIG—HAMILTON

A quiet wedding ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hamilton, Dundela, on Saturday morning, October 19th, at 11.30 o'clock, when their only daughter, Jennie Odessa, was united in marriage to Stanley William McQuaig, Hulbert. For the occasion, the rooms were beautifully decorated with ferns and other potted plants. Rev. S. Burman, minister of Dundela United Church, officiated.

The bride was attended by Miss Bessie McQuaig, sister of the groom, and Mr. David Hamilton, brother of the bride, was best man.

The bride wore a becoming dress of oak-brown, pebbly-weave crepe with long, loose sleeves, and soft revers of cut velvet.

Miss McQuaig wore a blue crepe dress, tastefully trimmed with yellow. Mrs. Hamilton, mother of the bride, wore a printed silk dress with navy blue predominating and Mrs. McQuaig, mother of the groom, wore a brown crepe dress.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served to the immediate relatives. Mr. and Mrs. McQuaig then left on a motor trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls. The bride travelled in a tailored wool suit of flecked blue and a black tree bark suede fur trimmed coat, with accessories to match.

On their return the young couple will reside in Hulbert.

SOMETHING MONEY CANNOT BUY

Sometimes when you feel resentful because you cannot have certain things you especially want, it will pay you to make a list of the blessings that money cannot buy. Your wealthy acquaintance may have a house you envy, but his millions cannot buy him a conscience at peace. He may have several models of expensive cars in his garage, but his wealth does not assure him the respect of his neighbours. Make out your list and think it over. You will realize that life's prescious belongings are not to be bought with money.

PROPER CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN

As the Christmas season is approaching when much mailing will be done by the public perhaps it is well to keep in mind the proper addressing of letters and parcels as neglect in this involves carelessness and waste. It is cited by the Post Office Department that an increasing amount of mail is finding its way into the dead letter office for the reason that many people are careless in addressing their mail and also from refraining to put on their own name and address in which event it can be returned to them. Apparently sometimes, it is very difficult to figure out just what destination is aimed at in adresses and parcels. The greater the carelessness shown in addressing mail the more the work involved for post office staffs. It is here that the economic wastage of the thing comes in although locally there is not much to complain about. Carelessness in the use of the mails has to be paid for, and from the pocket of the general public.

HAS 92nd BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Elisha Everett, formerly Miss Jane Shaw, of Iroquois, observed her 92nd birthday on Thanksgiving Day, when many friends called to extend their congratulations. While not very active, she is remarkably well and interested in current events, church and public affairs of the town. During the afternoon and evening more than a hundred called on her. She received many messages and gifts.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Rev Charles E. Dunn

Judah Taken Captive.

Lesson for November 3rd. 2 Kings 25:1-12.

Golden Text: Proverbs 14:34.

Jerusalem fell under the shattering blows of her Babylonian conquerors in July, 586 B.C., after a siege lasting only eighteen months. The defenders were weak, and the invaders conducted their operations with great energy. Finally the battering rams broke down a portion of the wall, and the enemy soldiers poured through the breach. King Zedekiah and his warriors escaped in the darkness of night, but they were quickly captured and brought before Nebuchadnezzar who, as a terrible warning, slew the king's sons in his presence, put out his eyes, and then dismissed the desolate monarch to a tragic imprisonment and death in Babylon.

Rev. Chas. E. Dunn

But Zedekiah did not suffer alone. No mercy either was shown to the other leaders. The chief priest, his deputies, and the ranking religious, civic, and military officers were hailed, too, before Nebuchadnezzar, and put to death. How many were carried into captivity we do not precisely know. But it is clear that the greater portion of Jerusalem's population was marched off into exile. Only the poorer classes were spared, and their fate was quite as desolate, for the Chaldean troops destroyed the city with thoroughness. The temple was stripped of all its precious valuables, and then burnt to the ground. The royal palace, and the homes of the nobles and the wealthy were also burned, and the city walls were razed.

But Nebuchadrezzar was wise enough not to allow the city to lapse into complete barbarism and decay. So he appointed an excellent governor, Gedaliah, who ruled for three or four years with devotion to the finest Hebrew ideals until he was treacherously slain. All through this fateful period Jeremiah, a heart-broken figure, continued his sorrowful prophecies, until, at last, according to tradition, he died a martyr in Egypt at the hands of his countrymen.

She and her husband spent their early married life on the homestead of his family in the Broken Second, Matilda township. Some time after the death of Mr. Everett she took up residence with her son, Homer, who is engaged in busiess in Iroquois. She is a descendent of one of the pioneer families of Dundas County. On her birthday she was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. A. Rose who is at present residing with her.

MORRISBURG TEAM DEFAULTS

So badly crippled are the Chesterville High School rugbyists that they declined to play Saturday's scheduled game in Morrisburg and gave the game to the Morrisburg Collegiate Institute. This leaves the M. C. I. boys undefeated and well at the head of the Dundas county league running.

CORNWALL TOWNSHIP APPEAL WITHDRAWN

Several thousand dollars in court costs and legal fees were saved on Tuesday when Cornwall township authorities withdrew their appeal against the equalized assessment as fixed by Stormont, Dundas and Glegarry counties' council at its session last June. Hearing of the appeal opened before County Judge Francis T. Costello, on Monday, when the judge urged settlement. This was reached on Tuesdaly when counsel agreed to withdrawal of the appeal and the placing of costs against the counties.

The township had appealed against an increase of about $800,000 in its assessment, and it was expected that hearing of the case would take from two to three weeks with scores of assessors and reeves to be called. Ten lawyers had been retained by the counties and individual municipalities.

HALLOWE'EN PARTY

A large crowd attended the annual Hallowe'en party held in the Orange Hall here under the auspices of Victoria Lodge, L.O.B.A., No. 817. The guests were received by Mrs. Louis Bouchard and Mrs. E. M. Shaver, who were hostesses for the occasion

The program consisted of games, music, and contests, after which refreshments were served by a committee composed of Messrs. Bertram Smith, Louis Bouchard and W. J. L. Boyd. Prizes for the best costumes were won by Andrew Suffell and Miss Clara Irving. The judges were H. B. Fetterly, Mrs. George Wilson and E. M. Shaver. Miss Hazel Empey, Mrs. A. W. Sherwood and A. G. Suffell were prize winners in a euchre contest.

During the evening musical numbers were rendered by Mrs. H. Nesbitt and Mr. Richard Merkley.

The hall was decorated for the occasion in a black and orange color scheme, the committee in charge being Mesdames James Crawford, George Robinson and Jake Empey.

The social committee was composed of Mesdames Leroy Boyd, George Wilson, E. M. Shaver and James McLaughlin.

MAY RETIRE FROM KEMPTVILLE A. C.

A report is current that Professor W. J. Bell, who for the past 18 years has been principal of the Kemptville Agricultural School, will be leaving shortly on transfer to the Guelph Agricultural College.

Prof. Bell has been with the school sice it was first started, and since coming to Kemptville has made many friends in the surrounding counties. Careful attention to the interests of the school has at all times been his aim, and his removal will cause the loss of a valued citizen of Kemptville.

He has for years been a director of the Agricultural Society, where his wide knowledge has been of great help at all times to the directors. He was one of the original members of the lawn bowling club and one of its most expert players. Although his duties often took him away from Kemptville, he attended as regularly as was possible the meetings of the Rotary Club. In the Presbyterian church he has been an elder for some years. It is expected he will assume his duties at Guelph shortly after Christmas.

Miss Edna Bustard, who has been the bursar for the past nine years, was notified last week that the department had decided to abolish that office at once.

W. M. S. TENTH ANNIVERSARY RALLY

Come to Kemptville on November 6. W. M. S. Rally will be held in the United Church of that place at 7.30 p.m., celebrating the Tenth Anniversary of Union. Some members of the first Executive of Dundas-Grenville Presbyterial (1925) will be present. A splendid programme is being prepared, including the presentation of a pageant by Winchester auxiliary. A good representation of auxiliaries is hoped for from all parts of the Presbyterial. Everyone welcome. During the day, officers of the Presbyterial will hold their autumn business meeting in the church. All officers are requested to attend.

TWO MORRISBURG YOUTHS ADMIT BICYCLE THEFTS

Leonard Mitchell, 19 years, and Wesley Beaupre, 18 years, both of Morrisburg, landed in Ottawa on Monday with two bicycles which they sold, one for two dollars and the other for four dollars. Then they looked around for other bicycles and when arrested by Detective Ernest Sabourin they had a bicycle owned by Alvira Chenier.

In court yesterday morning they pleaded guilty to stealing the Chenier bicycle and the detective said they also admitted the other two bicycles were stolen in Williamsburg. They were remanded until Friday by Magistrate Strike.

RETIRING WARDEN GETS GOLD WATCH

As an evidence of the regard in which he is held, and the ability with which he conducted the business of council, members of the counties' council of Stormont, Dundas and Glengary presented the retiring warden, George L. McIntosh, reeve of Roxborough. with a gold watch after the business of the October session was over Saturday afternoon last.

Arthur Flynn, reeve of Morrisburg, tok the warden's chair as Mr. McIntosh descended to the floor of the council chamber, when J. R. McLachlan, reeve of the village of Lancaster, read an address to the warden. The watch was presented by J. Leonard Johnson, reeve of Cornwall.

In reply, the warden thanked his fellow-members for the gift and good wishes contained in the address, and as he returned to the chair, the members rose and sang "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow."

THE UNITED CHURCH

An excellent Thanksgiving message was given on Sunday morning by Rev. W. S. Atchison from I Thess. 5:18. He said we should strive to make every day a day of thanks to God, because of what it brings to our lives. This is made possible through faith in God that all things will work out for our good when we love God. We can cultivate gratitude and that leads to our happiness. It is God's will for Christian people to be thankful. Gratitude is an evidence of growth and is pleasing to God.

"Co-operative action in the home" was the evening subject, based upon the latter part of the 3rd chapter of Colossians. Love, he said, is the great solution for all domestic difficulties. No one can estimate the mighty influence of a Christian home.

Our homes were once full of the Spirit of God. "Are they now?" he asked, "or has the spiritual life waned?" The place to build stability into life is in the home. A fittng comparison of the river, the oak and a mountain, to the home was clearly and beautifully given. The choir, with Miss Alice Singleton at the organ, gave a pleasing anthem at the morning service.

Next Sunday morning, Mr. F. W. Lewis, Temperance organizer or Toronto, will have charge of the service. In the evening, the W. M. S. will hold their Thank-offering service with the Mission Band assisting. A Pageant entitled: "A Living Picture of the W. M. S.," will be given.

FAREWELL PARTY

Prior to her departure for Chicago, where she will reside in the future, Mrs. B. Whitlock, nee Grace Small, of Ottawa, and formerly of this place, was tendered a farewell party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gemeroy, Gladstone street, on Friday evening last.

During the evening the presentation of many beautiful gifts was made by Miss Jean Wyatt on behalf of those present. Mrs. Whitlock replied, thanking her many friends for their kindness. A program of gamts and music was then enjoyed, after which lunch was served by Miss Sally Gemeroy and tht hostess.

MASQUERADE PARTY

Mrs. Rowat Elliott and daughter, Miss Helen, were hostesses at a delightfully arranged Hallowe'en Party held at their home on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. Over forty guests all in costume, were present and much merriment prevailed as the guests tried to identify each other before their masks were removed.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion with orange and black Hallowe'en streamers and novelties and colored lighting effects.

During the evening many games and contests were enjoyed, as well as a program of music, with Miss Grace Irving presiding at the piano.

At the close of the program dainty refreshments were served by the hostess.

Committees in charge of the affair were: Program—Miss Ida Gardner, Mrs. W. Watson and Mrs. G. E. Payne.

Decorations—Mrs. Geo. Coburn, Mrs. J. L Kinkaid, and Miss Mary Empey.
