Allison Island Barns Burn

Last Thursday evening during the storm which passed to the south lightning struck the barns on Allison Island, opposite Morrisburg, owned by J. Wesley Allison, completely destroying four buildings and their contents consisting of about 75 tons of hay, a quantity of oats and farm machinery.

Local Farmer Makes Record

The Maple Leaf Condensed Milk Co., has submitted the following figures covering deliveries of their patron G. H. Baker for the month of June. This dairy consists of 22 cows, 6 being two-year olds and 4 three-year-olds. Deliveries during June totaled 27,268 pounds of milk testing 3.30% B.F, or an average of 1239lbs. milk, and 50.9lbs of butter fat per cow. Total deliveries netted Mr. Baker $407 66 or $18.53 per cow. No grain was fed during the month. The above figures do not include milk and cream used in the house during this period.

You Have Said Something

There is something wrong with our education system, says the Newmarket Era, when the department pays thousands and thousands of dollars for examining papers for promotions in the high schools while the teachers are paid their salaries for the full month of June, and get off 10 days before the time is up. Why should they not examine the papers of their own school, as well as the public school teachers for their promotions?

Monument Unveiled at Nation Valley

A large crowd gathered at Nation Valley yesterday in honor of the boys of that district who gave their lives in defence of home and liberty in the Great War, to whose memory was unveiled a handsome monument erected through the efforts of their fellow citizens on the school grounds of Nation Valley school. Mr. A. Sweet of Winchester, was chairman for the occasion, announcing the purpose of the gathering and the desire of the citizens to do fitting honor to the memory of those who had fallen.

The names visible when the draping had been drawn aside by Rev. W. T. Brown and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson were:—Harold Merkley, Willie Moodie, Howard Hess, and Henry Coughler. Following the unveiling an adjournment was made to Merkley's grove where tables laden with good things for which the ladies of Nation Valley are noted, awaited the crowd, and dinner was served. After which the assemblage was called to order by the chairman in a very gracious manner, including the reading of a letter of regret from Miss Farlinger of Morrisburg, who had been invited to be present. Speeches were delivered by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, W. H. Cssselman, M.L.A. and Preston Elliott, M. P.

A Concession to Home Investors

In offering to renew the five and a-half per cent. Canadian Government bonds maturing December 1st at the same rate of interest as is carried by the maturing bonds, and allowing a bonus of one month's interest, the Minister of Finance is making a material concession to the Canadian investor, as this rate is higher than was paid on the recent Canadian loan in New York. The high class of the security, which is the very best that can be offered in Canada, and the liberal rate of interest should lead to large investment in these Dominion bonds. Attention is directed to the official advertisement giving details.

Miners Enormous Wage Loss

On the basis of the scale proposed by the operators in the New York negotiations, which have now been abandoned to all intents and purposes, as have the demands of the men for a twenty per cent, increase, the loss in wages figured on the assumption that mines would have operated as fully this year as last, totals $93,920,000 or $866,000 a day, the daily average last year having been $1,047,820 a day, according to the figures of the anthracite information bureau, maintained by the operators.

Must Buy Fire Apparatus

Following an investigation of the recent heavy fire loss at Newboro, Deputy Fire Marshall Pointon made it quite plain that fire apparatus would have to be purchased by the village or no insurance policies would be paid.

Famous Savage Barn is Destroyed by Fire

The old Savage barn in which Dan patch trained, reigned as king of pacers, and died, located on the M. W. Savage stock farm, near St. Paul Friday was in ruins with an estimated loss of $100,000. The fire caused by spontaneous combustion in 20 tons of alfalfa stored in the barn which covered four acres, destroyed it last night. Thirty-five head of purebred Holestein cattle, valued at $125,000, were saved. One cow valued at $1,500, was burned. The burning of the old horse stable marked the passing of a landmark familiar to scores of horsemen throughout the United States and Canada. Originally built in 1904 as a home for Dan Patch, famous king of the pacers, the stable was gradually increased in size until quarters were available for 300 horses. One of the features was a half-mile enclosed race track around the stable. It was in this stable that Dan Patch died June 11, 1916, just three hours before the death of Mr. Savage, its owner.

Illicit Still Was Hidden in Bed Beside a Child

While standing beside a window of a house at Yellek, where they had been informed a "still" was to be located, Constable Fred Lefebvre and Inspector Bell heard one of the children within pass a word of warning in French. The mother hurriedly ordered the child into bed with instructions to "keop it's mouth shut." A few moments later the police found part of an old fashioned illicit still carefully hidden in the bedclothes beside the child.

This Road in Ceylon is Made of Rubber

Pedestrians who are in the habit of being bowled over by wandering motor cars, or motorists who have known what it means to be shot through a windshield to land on a water-bound macadam pavement will recognize the possibilities of such a rubber pavement as is being tested out in Ceylon. The Ceylon public Works Department has paved one of the bridges under its jurisdiction with blocks of solid rubber. These seem to have stood the wear and tear of traffic fairly satisfactorily. Plans are under way for the paving of a stretch of road in the Port of Colombo, where traffic is especially heavy.

Ceylon of course, is a rubber-producing country and in times of over-producing there may be the same justification for using rubber as a paving material there as there is in using corn as fuel in Nebraska But rubber at 50 cents a pound does not stand much chance of competing with cement at 50 cents a bag in road paving generally.

Atkinson—Earle

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents on Tuesday, Aug. 15, when Edith May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Earle, became the bride of Aubrey Doan Atkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Atkinson, Cornwall, Rev. Capt. W. T. Keough, Elgin, Ont., cousin of the bride, officiating in the presence of a few intimate friends and relatives. The bride looked charming in a dress of ivory satin and chantilly lace, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. Miss Lela Beach was bridesmaid and wore a gown of apricot French voile with black picture hat and carried a bouquet of roses and sweet peas. Minto Atkinson, brother of the groom acted as best man. Mrs. F. B. Brownridge played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, and during the ceremony Miss Dorothy Keough sang "Because." The house was prettily decorated with golden glow and fern. Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson left on the 4.10 train for Montreal, and will take the Saguenay trip. The bride is one of Cornwall's most popular young ladies, as was shown by the different showers given her by her many friends. The young couple have the best wishes of a host of friends for their future happiness and prosperity. Among guests present from a distance were Thos. McGregor, Lachute, Que.; Capt. W. T. Keough and Miss Dorothy Keough, Elgin, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Duncan J. McPherson, Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. George Muir and daughter Margaret, and Frank Earle, Ottawa, Ont.

Just a Few Years Ago

The most overworked expression in the language was: "This is on me."

The papers were full of the doings of Wright, a nut in Dayton, who thought he could make a machine that would fly.

Marconi, another nut, was getting some space in the papers by his fool plan of wireless telegraphy.

The prize nut of all was wandering around Detroit trying to get somebody to put money into his automobile scheme. Everyone knew that only daredevils would ever try to drive one of the fool wagons.

Everyone was laughing at the fellow who claimed that submarines would really sub.

Skirts at the shoe top were considered indecently short.

We knew that when we met a blonde with powder on her nose that there was a musical comedy in town.

Eggs were fifteen cents a dozen.

You could always start an argument about the relative merits of Jeffries and Fitz.

A person who played golf was more to be pitied than censured.

Bargains in Marks

An Englishman walked into a Berlin bank, laid down a sovereign and said, "How many marks can I get for this?"

"Hi, there!" cried the manager, addressing his staff, "clear out the lot of you. This gentleman's bought the bank."

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. SO MANY PEOPLE ARE NERVOUS

"Fruit-a-tives" the Greatest of all Nerve Remedies

This Fruit Medicine Restores Health

The increase in the number of persons suffering from Nervousness is world-wide; due, in a measure, to the reaction following the war. Sleeplessness, Headaches, Mental Depression, Rheumatism, Nervous Dyspepsia, Bad Heart Action, are the results of a disturbed condition of the Nervous System.

The nerves and the blood are so intimately, so vitally, connected that the condition of one is bound to affect the condition of the other. If the blood is laden with impurities, it is impossible to have strong, steady nerves.

The first essential in treating nervous troubles is to purify and enrich the blood. This, "FRUIT-A-TIVES" will do.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" stimulates the bowels, kidneys and skin and purifies the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" improves appetite and digestion and insures food being properly digested, thus enabling the blood to carry wholesome nourishment to build up the body, particularly the nerves.

Men and women who take "Fruit-a-tives" for some form of nervousness—because they cannot eat or sleep or work or enjoy life—say that this fruit medicine is simply marvellous in its action.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa Ont.

Never Left the Jail

It is not within the memory of anyone at the Middlesex County Court and Jail Building, when assistant Jail Matron Miss Doyle either left the jail building or the courthouse grounds, for any reason whatsoever, it became known to-day. For over forty years Miss Doyle had been assistant matron of the county Jail, and during the last twenty years of her four-decade service she has never left the jail building for vacation.

Jests in a Graveyard

Toronto Telegram—Every now and then we read in the papers about some fine old nonogenarian or centenarian who is enjoying his or her rest. Strange isn't it, that we say that a man is having a rest as soon as he is dead. He has gone to his rest, we say Nevertheless, there are a few fine old people on this side of the tomb who are taking a rest, a well-earned rest. What kind of a civilization is it that is inculcated in us, teaching us that we must die before we can enter into our rest. Why not rest some here? If the next world is a place of rest it looks to me like overdoing it. To rest through all eternity might suit some folks but it wouldn't suit the subscriber. I wouldn't mind lying around loose for a week or two—but Eternity! I'd want to start something.

Suppose after a couple million years a kindly angel came along and said; 'Well, Mister, got rested yet?'' You'd feel kinda mean. More than that, if the angel were to sit down beside you and in a well-modulated voice, and in sympathetic tones, ask you what you'd been a doin' way down on Earth to get so all fired tired you wouldn't know what to say. Suppose you had been a chef or a bookeeper or a street car conductor or a policeman or a hired girl, will it take all eternity and some to give you a rest?

My plan for the next world is to have a good substantiol rest before I go there.

It wouldn't be good business to pass into the Beyond all tuckered out. I don't think the lounge lizard will get there at all, but I think that the Lord has something else to do than find easy chairs for all creation.

The tendency to joke about solemn things is to be deplored. They have recently put up a tomb over the grave of Eli Tucker, in the white brick buryiug ground. Carved on it in large letters are the words, "At Rest." Folks should not jest in a graveyard. It is not seemly. I can remember Eli since I was so high and I can't recall that he ever did a tap The only exercise he ever took was when he rubbed himself with linnyment. He wouldn't thank you for an orange or a cigar, but give him a bottle of linnymint and he would be tremenjisly obligated to you. His faith was a splendid thing. I am convinced that he rubbed himself during his lifetime with every blame thing you could mention from goosegrease to blue vitrol. And they carved "At Rest" on his tomb!

Eats Poison By Mistake With Peppermint Candy

David Seabrooke, of Round Lake, is in a critical condition as a result of eating poison mixed with candy. Seabrooke purchased a package of peppermint candy. He placed both packages in the same pocket. On the way home the poison package became broken and the contents mixed with the candy. Seabrooke's mouth, throat and stomach are badly burned.

In 498 B. C.

In 498 B. C. Confucius, the great Chinese Sage said, "Tea Harmonizes the mind, dispels lassitude and relieves fatigue, awakens thought and prevents drowsiness, refreshes the body and clears the perceptive faculties." To enjoy these blessings, drink delicious "SALADA". Your own Grocer can supply you. Ask for it to-day.

Cornwall's New Policeman

Cornwall added another policeman to its staff on Saturday, when one of the "Silent" variety was placed at the intersection of Pitt and Second Streets for the guidance of traffic in all directions. This officer can be knocked down, but, like all good things, you can't keep him down. If an auto or rig runs over the officer he simply lays flat until the vehicle passes and then bobs up serenely again, something after the style of a Billiken. It is painted red, with white lettering instructing drivers to "Keep to the Right," and a red flag surmounts it. It is likely two or three more will be secured for other sections of the town We're getting more like New York or Chicago every day.—Standard.

Tire Wear in Garage

An inspection of crippled tires in the collection of any repairman will reveal the fact that a large percentage of the trouble comes from neglect in the garage at home If stones, ruts and road roughness were the only things that wore out tires repair bills would be cut in half.

Water, oil, grease and light—rubber's worst enemies—work in a garage more actively than on the road. In washing the car, the rims are liable to become rusty and eat away the tire. A coat of graphite or common stove polish will prevent this and keep the tire from creeping,

Oil or grease should never be allowed to stand on a garage floor. Small cuts or bruises on the tire surface should be repaired at once. If a tire has been smeared with grease, it should be washed thoroughly with cold water and a little soap.

The spare tire is often forgotten while the others are giving good service, and neglect sometimes causes it to deteriorate rapidly. Always it should be protected from rain, sun and dirt by a cover. Once in a while change it with one of the tires on the car so that the rubber will not harden from disuse.

The weight of a car should not be left on a deflated tire. Such treatment is almost as bad as running on a flat tire and is certain to crack the carcass. Jack up the wheel, or take off the tire entirely.

Avoid Boiling Over

A small piece of butter added to the water in which rice or lima beans are cooked will prevent their bubbling over.

The Careless Smoker

Keep an eye on the smoker who does not care where he throws cigars, cigarettes and matches when he is finished with them. You may thus save yourself trouble.

Farmers' Battle Waxes Warmer

Wasting no time in preliminaries, the Farmers' Sun has thrown itself unreservedly into the Drury-Morrison controversy on the "broadening out" issue. It has lined up with the Morrisonites, and has gone a long way towards burning its bridges by accusing the members of the opposing camp of deliberate attempts at deception. In an editorial in Tuesday's issue, the U F.O. organ refers to the steps taken at a recent Government caucus to oust the present directorate, and states that a statement sent out by the committee appointed at that caucus is absolutely misleading when it says that the paper is antagonistic towards the Government.

"In order to mislead those to whom it is addressed, it deliberately seeks to convey the false impression that the editorial management of the Sun is unfriendly to the Government," declares the editorial. The article states further that when a statement referred to by committee as detrimental to the Government, was published, the editorial staff was not in charge.

A Hint For Fall Fairs

A livestock exhibit which might be usefully copied at every fall fair in eastern Canada was seen at the recent Edmonton Exhibition. The members of the Livestock Exchange put on a campaign to illustrate by immediate contrast the commercially good and bad types of cattle, hogs and sheep. Side by side with each pen of desirable, stock was a pen of undesirable, poorly-marketable stuff. The plan was explained in the "Market Examiner" as follows:—

"A notice to stock breeders explained that the Edmonton Livestock Exchange were not advocating any particular breed of beef cattle, hogs or sheep, bnt that they were emphasizing the necessity of:

1. Raising the highest grade of commercial stock by better breeding methods;
2. Better finishing of stock before marketing to command the top market prices;
3. To prevent flooding the market at any one time by a more even distribution of shipments throughout the year.

So much has been written about bacon type hogs during the past year that the hog exhibit of the Exchange was even more attractive to the farmer than last year. Two hogs which were splendidly representative of the best type had been secured, and when the pen in which they were was reached in the progress from the large rough type, the contrast was most striking. Over above this pair was printed: 'Grade select bacon type. This is the type that produced Wiltshire bacon sides. In demand for export trade. Will in future command a premium. Why not raise this class of hog? Select weight from 150 to 220 pounds. Top market price—the kind to raise 220 pounds at 13c—$28.

Beside these in the next pen were found the light heavy weight hogs from 220 to 250 pounds. The placard above again told the market story that this grade sells at $1.00 per cwt, less, so that a 230 pound hog at $12 would bring $27.50. The next grade—that of medium heavy weight—is from 250 to 300 pounds. This grade sells at $2.00 per cwt. less and a 260 pound hog at 11c would bring $28.60. In the next pen was an extra heavy weight hog of 310 and over which at the present market price would bring 10c, or 3c less per pound than the select. A 310 pound hog would bring but $31. The pertinent question printed above; 'Why produce the extra weight and get nothing for it?' goes a long way in convincing the observer that there is no object in working for nothing and giving away the feed into the bargain."

Coming to The Music Hall, Chesterville, for three nights, the popular H. Wilmot Young and Marjie Adams with their new company of players presenting all new plays and excellent vaudeville features.

Robbery vs. Fire

It was shortly after the $2,000,000 fire that destroyed the Erie pier at Weehawken, N. J, that the following letter from Arthur Elliott Sproul appeared in the "New York World." It gives some pertinent facts and hits hard;

A fortnight or so ago there was a mail robbery in the city. Loss, $2,000,000. Great excitement; natural enough too. Postmaster-general rushing around; all his assistants and general helpers rushing around; folks who owned the "swag" rushing around.

Very well. That's a lot of money—$2,000,000 Right enough to "rush around" about it quite considerable. But—

Night before last there was a fire over in Weehawken. Once more, "loss $2,000,000." But is anybody "rushing around" about it? Not so much! Papers print the news. Then drop it. That's all right. Nothing more they can do. But here's the big difference;

Whereas everybody got all excited about the mail robbery, nobody seems to care a whoop about the fire—except the folks that saw it from ferryboats and such. They thought it was a "good show." And that's all! Now, which did the most real harm—the robbery or the fire? "Loss $2,000,000" makes 'em look about equal. But were they? Not by a blamed sight!

The robbery really did no harm at all to the world at large. Individuals suffered, of course, and that's bad. But, don't you see, the money is in the world exactly the same, to be put in circulation and used?

But the fire! Just the reverse. Property absolutely gone: blotted out; destroyed. Backs had to bend to earn that particular $2,000,000 over in Weehawken, Men had to work and sweat. And to be wasted!

Say! Suppose those mail robbers should be proved to have taken their plunder out into the harbor and sunk it. Crazy fools? You bet! Yet that's what every fire does—grabs the fruit of men's labor (your labor, Mr. Reader) and chucks it away so far that it never can get back!

Carelessness—that's another word for ignorance—causes it all. That's the plain fact. How many people are there who know that a lighted match, for instance—or a cigarette, or anything else that's afire—is vastly more dangerous than a loaded revolver? Yet it's so.

A revolver might possibly kill half a dozen people. A lighted match or cigarette may kill—yes has killed—scores.

The Biggest Eaters Are The Best Cows

"Yes, I swear by this cow here," an old dairy farmer once remarked to the writer. 'She is one of the smallest eaters in the stable and yet she always had a thrifty appearance. A little later this farmer was persuaded by the dairy Record Centre man to enter his herd in the local cow testing work. A year after that the thrifty cow took her way to the butcher as the least profitable cow in the herd. If she was a small eater and a good "doer" she was also an even smaller producer. The most profitable cows in that stable were the ones with big middles and lots of capacity to handle food And it is ever so. With very few exceptions, the breeding being the same the big cow is the more profitable. This is not only the experience of observant dairyman but of experimentalists as well. Prof. Henry, of Wisconsin, investigated this point many years ago and his conclusions have never been contradicted by subsequent work. A report of similiar nature has just been made by the United States Department of Agriculture only this report proves that the big eaters are more profitable. According to figures based on 18,014 yearly individual cow records, as butter fat production increased from 100 to 400 pounds there was regular increase of about $16 in income over feed cost per cow for every pound or increase in average production of butterfat. As the yield of butter fat increased from 109 pounds to 378 pounds, the return above the dollar expended for feed increased from 65c. to $1.52. The cows having an average income of $32.25 over the cost of feed, while those producing 13.250 pounds showed an average income in the latter group produced about four times as much as those in the other group, and their average income over cost of feed was nearly seven times as great. The increase in income above the feed cost grew regularly with the increase in production. A study of those records shows that it pays best to put feed into big producers, even though they are big eaters, says the department.

Musings

A teaspoonful of gossip would taint a kettle full of pure truth.

Same men are born good, some make good, and others are caught with the goods.

All men are born free and equal and have the choice of remaining so or getting married.

Woman is the fairest work of the Great Author. The edition being large, no man should be without one.

A wise maiden scenteth trouble from afar and avoideth a scene, but a foolish damsel exclaimeth "Don't!"

A woman is glad to be twenty, ashamed to be forty, sorry to be sixty, and proud to be eighty.

If Love is intoxication, polygamy must be delirum tremens.

The Latest "Howler"

The lesson was from the "Prodigal Son," and the Sunday school teacher was dwelling on the character of the elder brother.

"But amid all the rejoicing," he said, "there was one to whom the preparation of the feast brought no joy, to whom the Prodigal's return brought no pleasure, but only bitterness, one who did not approve of the feast they held, and who had no wish to attend it. "Now, can anyone tell me who this was?"

There was a breathless silence. Then from a dozen sympathetic scholars came the chorus:

"Please, sir, it was the fatted calf."

Open

"Has that orator an open mind?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum; "only an open mouth"

Life

If all who hate would love us,
And all our loves were true,
The stars that wing al ove us
Would brighten in the blue;
If the cruel words were kisses,
And every scowl a smile,
A better world than this is
Would hardly be worth while;
If purses would not tighten
To meet a brother's need,
The load we bear would brighten
Above the grave of greed.

If those who whine would whistle,
And those who languish laugh,
The rose would rout the thistle,
The grain outrun the chaff;
If hearts were only jolly,
If grieving were forgot,
And tears were melancholy
Were things that now are not;
Then love would kneel to duty,
And all the world would seem
A bridal bower of beauty,
A dream within a dream.

If men would cease to worry,
And women cease to sigh,
And all be glad to bury
Whatever has to die;
If neighbor spake of neigbor
As love demands of all,
The rust would eat the sabre,
The spear stay on the wall.
Then every day would glisten,
And every eye would shine,
And God would pause to listen,
And life would be divine.

Trouble At The Outset

Two old settlers sat smoking in a cabin far away in the backwoods. No feminine presence ever graced that settlement and domestic arrangements were primitive and rude.

The conversation drifted from politics to cooking and one of the confirmed bachelors said; "I got one 'o them there cookery books once, but I never could do nothin' with it."

"To much fancy work about it?" asked the other.

"You've it. Every one o' them recipes begun in the same way; Take a clean dish—and that settled me at onct."

Changing Denominations.

At a famous Pan-Presbyterian council held at Edinburg, a large number of delegates went to the Scots country. A chain bridge across the Tweed at Dryburg bore the legend that not more than twelve pedestrians could be on the bridge at one time. But the delegates disregarding or not seeing the notice crowded on the bridge in a score or more. The keeper of the bridge, Tom Fox, by name, rushed forward, and with emphatic gesticulations ordered them back.

"Can you no' read?" exclaimed Tom Fox, pointing to the notice.

"We are Pan-Presbyterians," explained a delegate, "and we were so interested that we did not see the notice."

"You may be Pan-Presbyterians or Pot-Methodists," rejoined the now angry bridgekeeper, "but if ony mair o' ye come on this bridge ye will be Baptists in a minute."

Father (from upstairs)—"Helen, isn't it time for a young man to go home?"

Young Man—"Your father is a crank"

Father (overhearing)—"Well, when you don't have a self-starter a crank comes in mighty handy."

Another innovation has been sprung in the big city where a nursery has been started where babies can be checked for a couple of weeks while the parents enjoy their annual holidays. Eighteen months is the minimum age with nine years the oldest.

Lightning-Proof!

Lightning may strike, but it can never set fire to your buildings when they are roofed with

Pedlar's Steel Shingles

For Safety, Permanence and Economy

Of course, the roof must be properly grounded at the four corners. When your roof is so covered and grounded you need not fear the fiercest lightning, because, even if it does strike, it is deflected over the whole roof, and runs harmlessly into the earth down the ground wires. The Pacification of Broken Nose

I had lived only a year in the Black Hills when I was put in charge of the "stage ranch" at White River Crossing. My helpers were two old-time plainsmen Tom Slocum and Ranse Devauw, typical cowmen. Tom was tall, lean and lantarn-jawed and had buttermilk eyes, a tanned and wrinkled face and a tawny drooping moustache that had faded to white at the ends. He was a Yankee. Ranse was a Southerner of square and heavy build and was bow-legged from much riding. His clean-shaved face was the color of coffee, his mouth resembled the jaws of a steel trap, and he had projecting eyebrows, a forehead corrugated with wrinkles and the eyes and hair of an Indian. He was a fierce looking fellow, but his mild manners about the ranch belied his looks.

At first I tried to talk with the two men during our hours of leisure, but I got no response. Once when I ventured to touch inquiringly upon their antecedents they looked at me each as if he doubted whether I were of sound mind. But within the field of their duty both gave me unquestioning obedience.

Except for the incoming and outgoing coaches the novelty of my situation and the excitement and danger of the times, I should have had a lonesome stay at White River. The ranch was built upon flat land above the stream. To the south there was an abrupt line of high pine-clad breaks; to the north lay a sixty mile stretch of broken plain, crowned on the far horizon with a line of sombre hills. Ours was preeminently the Sioux and buffalo country; the blanket Sioux still roamed freely beyond the lines of the reservations and carried on a predatory warfare.

When I took charge of the station we supposed that Broken Nose's band, most implacable of hostiles, had gone with the Sitting Bull. But one noon Tom Slocum came in with his horse herd and when I asked him why he had returned so early he replied that Broken Nose's tepees were set about four miles up the river.

"But how do you know they are Broken Nose's tepees?" I asked rather incredulous,

"I rid up, boss, an' swapped talk with 'em," was the cool response.

"But how did you dare?"

"Why," he said, "I rid up an' faced 'em with a gun in each hand, and we talked, an' then I pitched over in my saddle an' rid away, facing 'em."

The explanation was simple and enlightening. But, since we should have to await an actual attack before we could ask Camp Robinson for military help, our situation was uncomfortable, to say the least. We could only keep our horses close in and tell our stage drivers to go doubly armed and to see that there were guns for every passenger. I wrote to the route superintendent at Sidney and asked him for an extra "bull freight" of baled hay and corn.

Imagine my astonishment two days latter receiving a visit from the redoubtable Broken Nose himself. Ranse, who had done guard duty the night before, was snoring in his bunk and Tom was with the horses on the river bottom half a mile below when the chief rode up to my door and threw his bridal rein upon the ground. I knew him from the descriptions I had heard of him. He was a small man, dressed in semicivilized clothing. His single ornament was a black-tipped feather plucked from a crane's wing; it was stuck through the ragged brim of his slouch hat. The bridge of his nose had been smashed in a brawl; except for that disfigurment he might have passed for a good-looking man.

My amazement increased when that hostile of hostiles came in at my door and, greeting me in fair English, immediately set forth a grevious complaint against my horse wrangler. The man he said had astonished his people very much; he had come with guns to make them afraid. The chief intimated that his people had indeed been very much intimidated and feared lest they should be made to suffer for the evil that bad Indians had done! And now his people asked that presents of tobacco, flour and other necessaries should be given to them as a balm for their injured feelings. He hoped in fact that his white brothers would make him a valuable present.

I wanted to fling the oily hypocrite neck and heels out of the door, but restrained my indignation and resorted to mild advice. I told him that if he would remove his Indians to the agencies, where good Indians dwelt, doubtless none of my men would mistake them for enemies. Then I offered him a small sack of tobacco and an old case knife, both of which to my astonishment he refused. In a high state of dudgeon he stalked out to his pony. After a time Ranse awoke, and I told him what had happened.

"Wa-al," he drawled, "I reckon there'll be a hot time round here d'rectly and he rolled over on his bunk and fell asleep again.

When Tom came in an unusal thing happened; he laughed—laughed immoderately at having been described as an intimidator of Broken Nose's band: but he agreed with Ranse that we should have extra need to look out for ourselves. And we did act with caution, though of course we were compelled to go about our daily round of duties. Then as days passed and we saw no more of Broken Nose or his Indians it was no more than natural that we should relax our vigilance.

Meanwhile the "bull freight" came and went and left us thirty tons or so of baled hay, which we dumped in narrow piles alongside the stable corral. On account of our limited range we were compelled to begin feeding our horses at once, and, in pulling down bales we accidently tumbled the ends of two of the piles together -a circumstance that proved to be of importance later.

We usually ate our morning meals, which invariably consisted of hot "slapjacks" and coffee, together, Ranse, who was a fast eater, was almost always out first after breakfast. One morning he had scarcely left us for the horse corral before he returned. There was nothing unusual about his appearance as he stepped in at the door, but no sooner was he fairly inside than he swung the door to and sprang to his rifle, which was hanging against the wall. "Guns! Quick, fellows!" he cried, and his whole body seemed to quiver with energy.

Tom and I were on our feet instantly. There was a small arsenal of magazine guns and cartridge belts upon the wall and in a trice we were armed to the teeth.

"Ranse, which way are they coming?" I asked.

"They ain't comin'; they've done come, he replied sententiously.

"Come!" Tom and I both ejaculated.

"Ya-as, I hain't seen 'em, but I've done smelt 'em shore a-plenty. Didn't know but they'd rush us when I throwed the door shet, but I reckon they didn't savvy. They're among those hay piles; they scooted across from the breaks while we were eatin. I was crossing to the stables when I took wind of 'em. Pugh! Heap tepee, rotten tobacco, heap smell, yah!" And he laughed in genuine enjoyment.

"But—" I began and then looked at Tom. He observed the look of doubt in my face.

"There ain't any buts about it, boss," he said quietly. "I've knowed Ranse Devauw for eleven years and his nose is as good as a pointer dog's."

Our fighting station was above the ground floor, our log building had three gables that commanded all approaches. Upon the rough joists we had laid boards to stand on, and we had made portholes by withdrawing bits of the chinking Mounting to the south gable, we at once opened all of the port holes.

I scanned the hay and the corrals and the prairie beyond as far as the breaks, but I could see nothing of a suspicious nature. Still, I realized that I could see only part way into the quadrangle made by the piles of hay. Ranse and Tom posted themselves on either side of me, and in answer to my anxious query said that they could see no sign of the Indians.

"But they're shore there, boss," Ranse declared positively. They're a-lyin' in betwixt the piles."

It did not seem possible that the Indians were behind those tumbled bales. The eye caught no slightest hint of them. Upon the half mile stretch of prairie between us and the breaks there was no sign of a living creature; nor was three any sign of life among the gaping pine-grown cuts beyond. Yet I saw how easily a file of men, without so much as attracting the attention of dogs at the stage house, should slip across the hundred rods of level ground that lay behind the hay piles.

For five minutes or more we watched the hay piles narrowly and in silence. Two rows of bales stood perhaps eight feet apart and nine or ten feet high; they lay along the corral diagonally to us. The tumbled heap at the rear ends was not higher than a man's head. As I peered over it into the space between the piles I saw presently against one of the inner bales a single white feather with a black tip. It was rising slowly. It rose until the bell crown of a hat barely showed, and then Rance, who was at my left, whispered, "Shall I shoot, boss? I can get him easy."

"Just the feather, Ranse," I replied; "just to teach them what to expect."

As I had already learned. Ranse was an excellent marksman. A moment later his rifle cracked, and I saw the white feather flutter upward and drop - a beautiful shot of forty yards— and the tattered bell crown of a hat suddenly disappear.

Whoops of astonishment and defiance greeted the shot. But after their hurried run to the hay piles the rascals had not yet had time to make ready for the attack. However, a number of guns suddenly protuded from crevices made by prying the bales slightly apart, and a rattling volley greeted us. Tom and Rance replied with revolvers; they fired as fast as they could crook their fingers, yelling all the time in cowboy fashion.

For several minutes there was a tremendous racket, a good deal of smoke and a strong smell of gunpowder, but no one was killed. Everyman was firing at random, and as I looked on, which I did with some risk, a plan of action came into my mind. I determined to make things exceedingly hot for broken Nose and his band.

Having ordered my men to stop shooting, I next bade them to keep a sharp lookout while I went below. In a room adjoining our cookroom there was a portable forge and tools for doing such rough blacksmithing as was necessary at the ranch. I built a fire in the forge and heated the ends of two steel rods to white heat. Then I withdrew the shot charges from a double-barreled shotgun and dropped the rods into the barrels, cool ends downward. Opening the door slightly, I fired the missels into the hay.

The act almost cost me my life, for the treacherous rascals were on the watch; they aimed a volley of shots at me, and one bullet dented the barrel of my gun and passed into the end of a log within an inch of my face.

A minute later when I had made the door fast against a rush I heard the excited and triumphant yells of Ranse and Tom and knew that I had fired the bales of hay. When I mounted to the loft the two men were fairly jiggling with delight.

Tom gave me a stinging slap on the shoulder. "Good-by, hay," he shouted, 'but you've shore done 'em, boss."

And when I put my eyes to the lookout sure enough there were two thin columns of smoke rising from outside bales. The hay was as dry as tinder, and flames quickly followed the smoke.

At that instant an Indian broke cover at the rear end of the piles and ran for the horse stable. A shot from Ranse's rifle bowled him over before he had gone one third the distance, and he crawled back among his fellows.

Then Broken Nose realized that he was trapped. His men could not break cover in any direction without exposing themselves to deadly rifle fire; and in ten minutes the hay would be wrapped in flames. He had laid a cunning plan to kill us, and his humiliation must have been great as he waved his old slouch hat in token of surrender.

Ranse and Tom greeted the appearance of it with roars of mocking laughter. I put my mouth to a porthole and shouted to Broken Nose to come out with his men, lay down their guns and ammunitio nbelts and march off. Since the hat still continued to wave, I shouted the command in a louder voice and in more emphatic language.

The hat disappeared and there was a minute or so of hesitation and doubtless of hasty consultation among the trapped Indians. Before they had reached a decision the whole rear of the hay pile was in flames Then the Sioux, twenty-three in all, came tumbling over the fallen bales, and we greeted them with cheers.

They certainly looked a crestfallen lot as they laid down their breech-loading rifles and filed away, four of them carrying a wounded comrade. Not a cartridge belt or a revolver was among the discarded rifles; they had cunningly hidden them under their buckskin and calico shirts. We were content to let them off with the surrender of nineteen guns.

The band troubled us no more Some time later I read in an Omaha newspaper that Broken Nose was pacified and had come in at Pine Ridge Agency. I believe he remained "pacified" until his men were again furnished with modern magazine guns.
