Synopsis of Canadian North-West Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Subagency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-emp a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

The wooden freighter Rhodes, grain-laden, lies at anchor in Moore's bay, below town. While going down the river Sunday afternoon an elbow on the main steampipe broke while opposite Morrisburg, and she floated down the river to where she is now anchored. A new piece has been casted by J. D. Dain and repairs will probably be completed tomorrow.

A plot of cabbage in the garden of Mr J. W. McNeil, St. Lawrence Street, excites the admiration of every passerby owing to the remarkable size and uniformity of the heads. Mr McNeil says it is a new variety and can be left out all winter. If passersby this winter see J. W. shovelling snow in the middle of his garden they will know that he is only digging for a fresh head of cabbage.

A sad accident occurred at Kingston on Saturday, when young Erastus Jackson, son of Harry Jackson, was drowned. The young lad, who was about eight years old, was sent from here to St. Mary's-of-the-Lake Orphanage, Kingston, a little over a year ago. On Thursday last he wandered away from the orphanage grounds and search for him was made. It was thought at first that he had fallen off the Malt House dock, which is near the orphanage, but Saturday the searchers' attention was directed to an old well nearby when his cap floating on the water told the sad story. The body was recovered and his mother here communicated with.

Sunday, Nov. 30th, will be observed as Tuberculosis Sunday in the churches of Ontario. In response to the suggestions of those engaged in the crusade against the great white plague, representatives of all influential ministerial bodies, as well as scores of prominent laymen, have given their hearty endorsement to the proposal that the pulpit should lend its services to the work of stamping out consumption in Canada. The day will be made the occasion of sermons dealing with the work which is being done to relieve needy sufferers the methods of treatment and the urgency of the educational campaign which is now being carried on. The same subject will be dealt with in the schools of Ontario on Friday, Nov 28.

Miss Eliza Salmons, of East Williamsburg, and a former pupil of the M.C.I., left today to take up missionary work for the Church of England in the Canadian Northwest. Miss Salmons returned recently from New York, where she had been taking a course in training for her work as missionary. On Thursday last the Women's Auxiliary met in St. James' Hall and presented her with a handsome travelling rug. Miss Salmons gave an interesting address on the work being conducted by the Church in the slums of New York.

In trial court in Toronto on Monday, before Mr Justice Britton, an action was brought by the New York & Ottawa Railway Company against the Township of Cornwall to recover money which it is alleged was wrongfully collected for 1912 taxes upon that part of the international bridge on the Canadian side of the boundary line between the United States and Canada, and for a declaration that this bridge is not liable to assessment. W. S. Scott, Ottawa, for plaintiff; G. I. Gogo, Cornwall, for defendant. The action was dismissed with costs; thirty days stay of judgment.

On Friday last the billiard- and pool-room business conducted by Martin Cassell in the Fell Block was taken over by Mr A. J. Wood. The new proprietor intends to have a confectionery and cigar store in connection. The entrance now leading to the billiard-room will be closed and a separate entrance made, thus making the confectionery and cigar store a distinct department. Archie is a popular young man and his courtesy and business ability should bring a larger share of patronage than has heretofore been accorded.

Come and compare our prices with any in the trade.—D. C. Bush

Rogers and Grilley

The Music Hall had a fair-sized audience on Tuesday night to hear the Rogers and Grilley recital. This was the first number of the Lyceum Course given under the auspices of the Women's Institute. The inclement weather no doubt prevented many from the country district attending. The entertainment was high-class and refined and unlike most entertainments of this class, at no time did it become monotonous. Mr Rogers showed himself a finished artist on the harp, the touch of the master being traceable in all his numbers. Besides his other selections he gave a number of his own compositions. His playing of two pieces at once, "The Fishers' Hornpipe" and "Yankee Doodle," in which each tune was distinctly discernible, was little short of a master piece. Mr. Grilley, who is a graduate of the Emerson College of Oratory, Boston, is the best entertainer in his line to be heard here in years. He displayed remarkable versatility in his selections, from the sublime to the ridiculous. His first offering in which he depicted an old soldier, the last surviving member of the Scots Guards to fight at Waterloo, was one to stir the patriotic blood. An annoying incident occurred toward the close of the programme, when several young men half walked and half fell down stairs from the gallery during one of Mr. Grilley's particularly pleasing numbers. The next programme in the Lyceum Course will be Reno, Magician, on December 1st.

"Catholic," "Non-Catholic"

To the Editor of The Leader:

Dear Sir,—Whilst I have no desire to provoke controversy, or to display a bigotted or un-Christian spirit, I feel the loyalty to England's branch of the Holy Catholic Church, of which I am a duly ordained priest, obliges me to record publicly my modest but resolute protest against our Roman brethren assuming the name "Catholic" and speaking of all other Christian bodies as "non-Catholic."

The Church of England ever was, and is today, a true branch of the Catholic and Apostolic church, her doctrines and her sacraments are scriptural and primitive, she claims that her bishops, priests and deacons are duly consecrated and ordained, and all authentic history justifies her claim; accordingly we consider that the Roman branch of the Catholic church has no right to usurp the name "Catholic" and speak of England's branch of the Catholic and Apostolic church as "non-Catholic." We repudiate the term because it is a misnomer.

Thanking you, sir, for permitting me to use your paper to record my protest

I remain yours truly,
G. S. ANDERSON,
Rector of St. James' Church.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Richard Prunner

A highly respected resident of Riverside, in the person of Mrs Richard Prunner, was called on Monday to obey the last summons, her death occurring shortly before eight o'clock in the morning. Her illness was of short duration—ten days—death being due to an abcess in the throat. The sadness occasioned the family by her death was added to from the fact that the youngest son, Bennett, has been confined to his bed for nearly a year and a half. Her husband predeceased her about seven years. She was born in East Williamsburg, a daughter of the late Adam Pruner, and was in her 59th year.

A kindly, loving mother, a good neighbor, her death will be deeply regretted by a large circle of friends. Three sons, William, Robert L. and Bennett, and a daughter, Mrs A. Olliver, are left to mourn, besides six sisters and four brothers.

A large number of friends attended the funeral, which was held at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning to St. Mary's R. C. Church, where solemn high mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Meehan, the funeral sermon being delivered by Rev. Dr. McPhail, of Toronto, and the remains laid beside those of her late husband in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Henry Warner Casselman

Henry Warner Casselman, a lifelong resident of East Williamsburg, passed to his reward on Monday morning last Although he had been complaining for some time, his death was due to an injury to his head sustained in a fall about four weeks ago. No serious notice was taken of the injury until the Monday previous to his death, when a physician was consulted who gave no hope of his recovery.

The funeral was held at St. Paul's Anglican Church, Aultsville, yesterday, the rector, Rev. Mr. Floyde, officiating, and was under the auspices of the Masonic order, a large number of the members of Excelsior Lodge, of which the deceased was an honorary member, attending. Interment was at Aultsville.

The deceased was a son of the late George H. and Martha Casselman and was born 63 years ago in East Williamsburg, not far from the place where he had spent nearly all his life. Their survive his wife (who was Agnes Brydges), a daughter, Mrs. Jolly Sheets, and son Wilbur. Mr. Alex. Casselman of this place is the last remaining brother.

George Allan Smith

After lying ill for three weeks with typhoid-pneumonia, George Allan Smith passed away at his home in the Robertson Settlement on Saturday last. He had been employed on the Grand Trunk water service at Ste. Anne de Bellevue and three weeks prior to his death returned home ill with typhoid, contracted, it is thought, through drinking the water at Ste. Anne, as two other young men who were employed with him were afflicted with the same malady. For some time past he had not been enjoying robust health and typhoid coupled with pneumonia, which developed, proved too much for his weakened constitution and he passed away just three weeks after his return home.

The deceased was a quiet young man and popular with his fellow-workmen. He was in his 26th year, and was a son of Mr and Mrs George Smith. Besides his father and mother he is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Sarah Thompson of Cardinal, whom he married about two and a half years ago; a brother Alfred, and three sisters—Mrs John Coir, Mrs Elbert Gallinger and Miss Ivy Smith.

The funeral was held on Sunday at two o'clock, under the auspices of the Chosen Friends, of which deceased was a member, service being held at the house by Rev. A. H. Strike. The remains were interred in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

A Strong Arraignment

Fort William, Nov. 17.—In a sermon yesterday Rev. J. A. Cranston made a statement that the loss of life in the recent hurricane was due to orders given by officials that the captains take their vessels out in rough weather. It was the greed of the shipowners that had resulted in so great a loss of life. If it had been confined to ships and cargoes he would say it served the owners right.

"Eh? Oh, no," returned Elisha, rather puzzled by her tone; then he laughed and shook his head. "No; it will take a day or two to work Tibby round to the idea; but I'm keen on it—for your sake, Mina; an' I'll step down to the office."

Mina let him go—how could she stop him, without telling him everything? She returned to her practising: waiting through the notes for the step which was to bring her happiness. Tibby came home to the midday meal; but Elisha said nothing of his extravagant plans, and winked cautiously to Mina: Tibby was always in a hurry to get back to her work, and never in the best of humors at dinner-time.

"We'll tackle her after supper, Mina," said Elisha, with all the astuteness of the diplomat, when Tibby had departed in the usual whirlwind.

Mina was left alone in the afternoon and she got out her books, and tried to concentrate her attention on them; but she was still waiting, listening. As the daylight began to wane and dusk came her heart began to sink. He had not come. She tried to reassure herself by inventing all sorts of reasons, excuses, for his non-appearance: he was a great man a member of Parliament; he had not been able to get away, had been detained by business. Besides, why should she die quiet herself, seeing that he was sure to come in the evening? She waited and listened to the clock striking the hours: how fast they came now! Hope was beginning to die in her bosom. She listened all through supper-time, when she made a pretence of eating, but every morsel she put in her mouth threatened to choke her.

Not yet did she begin to doubt him; but her heart was heavy; it ached with longing. She was scarcely conscious of the presence of the other two, and she found herself absently listening to Elisha as he stumbled and faltered over the proposed outing.

"Oh!" exclaimed Tibby, with fierce irony. "You only want to go to Margit or Sarthend; you're sure you don't want to go to Brighton or Scarborough or one of them places in France where the other swells go? What nonsense you're talking, father! As if we wanted a change! And if we did, what's the matter with the Zoological Gardens or 'Ampstead 'Eath? Margit, indeed! An' jest becos your swell friends 'ave given you a five-poun' note or two! 'Ow do you know they'll ever come back? I don't know much about 'em, an' I don't want to, but I've always 'eard that there's no dependence to be placed on 'em. Look at Mr. Wilkins, the cat's meat man, as supplies ever so many of those fine 'ouses in the West End, an' the money 'e loses every year with bad debts. Told me hisself that if he was to be paid all these swells owe him, he'd be an independent gentleman, and able to take a pub. I don't want no change—'ceptin' out of a sovereign—and if Mina does, why take her down to Grinnidge for a blow on a penny steamer. I'm sure she'd agree with me that it would do her more good than making herself ill with shrimps at Margit or trapesing on a pier at Sarthend—won't yer, Mina?"

"Yes, oh, yes," said Mina absently.

Elisha said no more; but he winked at Mina, still hopefully.

Mina remained up for some time after the others had gone to bed; but though she had urged her lessons as an excuse, she could not see the printed page, for her eyes were dim with unshed tears. She went to bed at last, and lay beside Tibby, very still, almost motionless, choking back the sobs that threatened to burst from her lips, driving back the tears which swam in her eyes. She was very pale in the morning, but she assumed a cheerfulness which deceived Elisha, though its falsity did not pass unnoticed by Tibby. She made no remark, however, but put on her preposterous headgear, and marched off to work.

She was in the midst of a tussle with some children on the stairs, when a telegraph boy came down the Rents at the proper pace, a mile an hour, and, halting at the doorway, eyed Tibby with marked disapproval, and demanded to be informed if a person by the name of Mina Burrell resided in that house.

"'Ere, give it 'ere," said Tibby, and she snatched the telegram from his hand.

The boy, after inquiring anxiously where she usually bought her hats, and adroitly dodging a box on the ears, slouched off, and Tibby went up the stairs again. But half-way she stopped, pondered for a moment, then, thrusting the telegram in her pocket, went down again and into the street. When she had turned the corner she opened the telegram and read it. It ran:

"I am unavoidably prevented from coming to you. I will write. I am quite well, but grieving at not being able to see you. —Clive."

Tibby read the telegram through, counting the words and estimating the cost, then, with a savage nod of the head, she thrust the telegram into her pocket, muttering:

"Of course! Just what might have been expected of the likes of him and his class. He'll write, will he? Not him! An' if he does, he's got me to tackle. Her mind's set on him"—she stifled a fierce sigh—"I can see that. It's lucky for 'er that she's got a sensible woman to protect her."

That day Mina suffered all the agonies of the sickness that comes from hope deferred, which precedes actual despair. Of course, he had been prevented from coming, but—but why had he not written? Just one line, one little line, to tell her why he had not come to assure her that he had not changed his mind, now that he was well again? In after years Mina was never able to look back upon that day or the two that followed it without a dull aching pain.

The dark shadow of a vague trouble seemed to fall not only upon her, but on the other two. Tibby appeared suddenly to have lost her capacity for scolding, and was almost as silent as Mina, at whom she every now and then glanced with a strange pity and yearning in her old-young eyes; and on the evening of the third day she said abruptly, and without any leading up to the subject:

"What did you say that trip to Margit would cost, father?"

Mina happened to be out of the room, or he would have winked at her triumphantly, but with every sign of meekness he went into details with Tibby.

"Well, it's a ridicklous notion," she said at last, with an air of resignation; "but if you've set your mind on it I s'pose we shall be forced to go; for you'll worrit and worrit until we do, I know. An' if we're goin', we'd better go at once," she added.

"P'r'aps Mina won't care to go now," remarked Elisha, with an affectation of doubt.

"Oh, yes, she will—won't you, Mina?" said Tibby, as Mina, white and wan, entered the room. "Father's got this foolish notion of goin' away still running in his head. Got a cravin' for sea-bathin' and catchin' periwinkles—softenin' of the brain or old age, I s'pose. What do you say, Mina?"

Mina's face flushed, and a feverish eagerness shone in her eyes.

"Yes, yes! Oh, yes!" she said, her usually clear voice dry and hoarse. "Let us go; oh, let us go! Let us go at once, Tibby, dear! I—I am not well. I feel as if I were choking, as if there were no air. I want to go away—far away.

Tibby sprang up and caught her just in time.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Clive reached his rooms in the state of mind which will be easily understood by every man who has been in love, and is fortunate enough to be loved in return.

Notwithstanding his severance from his family, and his solitary life, he had had happy moments: the moments immediately following a successful speech; during a long burst with the hounds, a strong pull up-stream, a tussle with a twenty-pound salmon; the happy moments which come to a man when he is young and strong and his pulse is bounding with health. But he had never known such happiness as this, which thrilled him through and through, and set his being dancing to the music of joy.

He knew the gravity of the step he was about to take, knew that the world, not only the world of his own class, but the larger one, which was also interested in his movements, would declare that he was acting a fool's part, was ruining his career by "marrying beneath him"; that everybody would laugh and sneer at what they would deem his folly, his infatuation for a girl who was so very far below him in social position. The ever-busy and ubiquitous reporter would rake up Mina's antecedents, and dilate upon her lowly, not to say vulgar, surroundings. In his mind's eye he already saw the "spicy" paragraphs which would inevitably appear in the daily and weekly papers; he knew that his father and his two brothers would be furious with him, and that he would be still more of an outcast than he was at present.

But all this counted for nothing with Clive, compared with the fact of his great love for Mina and her love for him. He began to plan out his course of action: it would not be fair that Mina should face his world without some preparation. Though he himself was not only not ashamed of her, but proud of her beauty, her grace and her innate refinement, he was too worldly wise to be ignorant of the fact that she would be shy and fearful and very likely unhappy if she were plunged, all unprepared for the change, into the society to which he belonged, and in which he must continue to move unless he abandoned his career. And he had no intention of doing so, for he knew that under proper auspices Mina would take her place by his side and would not only be a joy to him, but a helpmate in every sense of the word.

He would send her to a good school: one of the really good schools at Brighton or Eastbourne, for instance, where she would associate with the daughters of people of rank and fashion, so that she might be armed at all points. He himself was quite satisfied with her as she was; and his resolve was made for her sake and hers only: so that she should not be handicapped and embarrassed in her new sphere. He could go down and see her frequently—every day that parted her from him would be a lost day—and as soon as possible they would be married and begin their life together.

He had a bath and changed, and then fell to work at the pile of letters on his table. While he was reading them there came a knock at the door, and in response to Clive's invitation Quilton came in.

"Sorry to disturb you," he said, his eyes fixed a foot above Clive's head. "Just looked in to see how you were."

Clive lifted his radiant face and laughed. "First rate," he replied.

"You look it," said Quilton. "You appear to take a lot of killing. But I imagine you were very carefully nursed by those humble friends of yours."

"I was indeed," said Clive with devout gratitude.

"Yes." Quilton paused a moment, his colorless eyes fixed on a picture above Clive's shoulder. "One of the young ladies is rather eccentric, isn't she? But the other atones for her—sister's little peculiarities. A very beautiful girl: don't often see that peculiarly refined type amongst her class."

Clive colored and his eyes dropped, but Quilton did not appear to notice it or the tone in which Clive said:

"She is as good as she is beautiful. Look here, Quilton"—he hesitated a moment. "No; I won't tell you just yet."

"There isn't any need," said Quilton impassively. "I am aware that when you have made up your mind that I am worthy of your confidence you will tell me that you are in love with her. Oh, my dear fellow, don't look so surprised—give me credit for the ordinary intelligence of a boiled owl. Besides, the young lady gave herself away the day I went to see you. I mentioned that you were excited and might need her, and she flew past me with an expression on her face which might have been read by a blind man."

Clive drew a long breath, nodded, and smiled.

"You've guessed it at once, Quilton," he said. "I am in love with her; and, please God, we are going to be married."

"Quite so," said Quilton, as if he were assenting to a statement respecting the weather. "Why not? She is not exactly of the class of Vere de Vere to which you belong; but that will not matter to you, who are so prominent a Democrat, who go in for the 'equality of man,' and have justly earned the title of the Friend of the People. In fact, I admire the consistency of your proceedings. Ignoring the claims of the daughters of a thousand earls, some of whom are doubtless quite willing to marry you, you go to the People—capital P, please—and choose a bride from amongst them. It doesn't matter to you that her father plays the fiddle in the streets and that her sister is a freak who has no business outside a side-show—I beg your pardon."

Clive leant back and laughed. "Not at all, my dear Quilton. What you say is absolutely true, but it makes no difference to me. I would marry the girl I love if her father were 'doing time' and her sister danced in the ballet. Love levels all distinctions, you know."

"Quite so. Good old copy-book wheeze. By the way," he said, as if suddenly recollecting, "they aren't her father and sister, are they? You said as much the other day, if I remember?" He put the question in the most casual and indifferent way.

"That's so," replied Clive as indifferently.

"You don't know who she is—have no idea?" asked Quilton as indifferently as before.

"Not the slightest," replied Clive.

Quilton nodded. "You are content to take her as she is—do not care anything about the mystery? She may be a princess, like the girls in the story-books, you know."

Clive laughed. "She has a higher title than that, my dear fellow," he said with absolutely boyish ardor. "She is a queen, queen of my heart."

"Beautiful!" murmured Quilton. "You've got love's young dream as badly as they make it. And this lack of curiosity on your part will continue, you think; you will not want to hunt up her origin, employ detectives, worry the girl herself?"

Clive laughed again. "I certainly shall not," he said. "It will be enough for me that I have got the girl I love, that she is my wife—but why do you ask?"

"Ah, why?" echoed Quilton. "I'm sure I don't know; just the journalist's interest in a little love romance."

"I see," said Clive. "Is there any news?" he asked as he turned to his letters again.

"Yes," said Quilton; "the Earl of Rafborough has been taken ill, but no doubt those telegrams will tell you."

He nodded to two or three telegrams in the pile; and Clive tore them open and sprang to his feet.

"My father is very ill!" he said. "Why didn't you tell me at first?"

"I was trying to break it to you," said Quilton; "but I saw that you would come upon the telegram before I could do so. He was taken ill at his place in the country, Rafborough: you will want to go at once. Is there anything I can do for you? See here, I'll help you pack while you look up a train. He was taken ill yesterday. There is no need to look so remorseful. We only got the news last night. I should have come and told you, if you had not returned to-day. I'll find your things—there's a Bradshaw on that table."

"You're a good fellow," said Clive. "Throw some clothes into a portmanteau. He must be very ill—must want me badly. There are four telegrams. There is just time to catch a train. Quick, Quilton!"

Clive reached the station only just in time. He was fond of his father, had long since forgiven him, and all the way down to Rafborough was grieved and anxious about him. He did not forget Mina; but it was just possible, if his father had recovered, that he, Clive, might return to town and see Mina next day. In any case he could telegraph or write to her.

At Rafborough he found a carriage waiting for him; for the ready-witted Quilton had wired to say that Clive was coming. The old coachman, who had been in the service of the family since boyhood, touched his hat and shook his head gravely at Clive's anxious inquiry.

"I am glad you've come, Master Clive," he said—Clive would be always "Master" to the old servant who had held him on a pony and taught him to drive. "The Earl's mortal bad. It's some kind of a stroke, I believe. We was afeard that you were abroad somewhere, and that the Earl might die—be left alone."

"Is my brother Adolphus not there?" asked Clive.

The coachman shook his head. "No, Master Clive; his lordship is very ill with something or other, at a Nursing Home. And Mr. Bertie"—he hesitated—"I don't exactly know where he is, sir."

Clive was driven quickly to the Hall. It was a beautiful old place, surrounded by some of the finest timber in England—an old-world place, rich in historical associations. It was architecturally imposing, but it was very much out of repair, and ill kept; and it had the appearance of all such places when the owners lack ready money to maintain them. Clive, of course, loved it; and even at this moment, when his heart was heavy with anxiety, he was conscious of a feeling of pride and admiration as the carriage swept up the avenue of magnificent beeches, and a turn in the road disclosed the ancient house and home of his race.

The butler met him with a face as grave as the coachman's.

"The doctor says will you go up directly you come, sir," he said. "His lordship is about the same."

Clive went up the great stairs, and the doctor came into the dressing-room to meet him.

"I am glad you have come, Mr. Harvey," he said. "The Earl has been asking for you, fretting. Yes; it was a paralytic stroke. He is conscious, and understands what is said to him; but he speaks with difficulty. He knows that you are here; he heard the carriage. I scarcely need ask you to keep him as quiet as possible."

Without a word Clive entered the bedroom. A nurse glided out, and he went to the bed. He was grieved and startled by the change in his father. Rafborough had not been called "Dandy" Rafborough for nothing; he had been young for years, and had looked, when Clive saw him last, little more than middle-aged; and he could scarcely believe that the shrunken form, with the drawn, twisted face and hollow cheeks, could be his sprightly, youthful father. They had removed his wig, there was no rouge on his cheeks, deep lines had been suddenly graved at the corners of his drooping mouth and about his eyes; but though the outer shell was a wreck, the indomitable spirit that had kept him young for so long still smouldered within Dandy Rafborough, and it flamed up feebly at sight of Clive. He nodded his already shaking head and tried to smile with his twisted lips.

HOW TO ENJOY LIFE.

Agreeable Companionships Made in Man's Daily Work.

Should a man look upon his bread earning as an unwelcome task, to be hurried and done with confusion and at the risk of his health, with the hope of reaching an early period of retirement when he may do what he will and really "enjoy life?" But suppose a man can hope to retire at an early period and live thereafter without gaining work, is he justified in regarding whatever respectable occupation he has as a bore or as merely a method of earning enough money to retire on? And, if he so regards it, is he likely to enjoy his retirement? He will make a very doubtful experiment. Whatever a man does during his active period he ought to do with such orderliness and thoroughness as to get from his daily and monthly and yearly labor the pleasure that comes from doing his task well and the additional pleasure of so doing it that he performs a real service. To do anything wholly for the money it brings is not to do it well enough. And those men who contract the habit of working wholly for the money are likely thereby to unfit themselves for the enjoyment of a period of retirement; for the right-minded man makes agreeable companionships in his daily work, he finds problems that call for all his brain and character—for endurance, for fair judgment, for just dealing, for doing as he would be done by; and all these are the very warp and woof of successful living. The kind of man to retire from money earning labor with the hope of really enjoying life is the man who has really enjoyed life during his period of hardest work. And you will deceive yourself if you imagine that in idleness you will develop virtues or a capacity for sensible enjoyment that you did not have during your working days.—World's Work.

"MY STOMACH IS FINE"

Since Taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets"

Mrs. J. Merkhuger, Waterloo, Ont., enthusiastically recommends Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. Her experience with them, as she outlines it, explains why.

"I was greatly troubled with my stomach", she writes. "I had taken so much medicine that I might say to take any more would only be making it worse. My stomach just felt raw. I read of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and a lady friend told me they were very easy to take, so I thought I would give them a trial and really they worked wonders. Anyone having anything wrong with his stomach should give Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets a trial, they will do the rest. My stomach is fine now and I can eat any food."

One of the many good features of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is that they are so pleasant and easy to take. The relief they give from heartburn, flatulence, biliousness and dyspepsia is prompt and permanent. Try one after each meal—they'll make you feel like a new person.

WHITES MAY BECOME BLACK.

Question Raised by Discovery of New Race in Africa.

Will the descendants of white men living in the tropical countries become black in course of time?

This question has been raised by the discovery of a tribe of giant black men in German East Africa, who are so different in their refined features from the ordinary negro that it has been advanced that they must be degenerate Europeans.

In support of this theory the traditions are recalled which tell of European communities having been lost in the interior and having lived there for centuries in isolation from their kind. One such story is mentioned in Gibbon's History, and a native Hottentot legend of white men in Namaqualand once led the Cape Dutch on a wild goose chase into the desert. However, scientists who have been studying the question do not seem disposed to agree with the theory. They point out that none of the legends cited has been verified by facts. For instance: The South African Boer who lives in the semi-tropical Transvaal, and whose forbears have lived for two centuries in South Africa, is only a shade darker in color than the Dutchman born and bred in Europe. Again the Manyuema, a negro tribe, who live at the source of the Congo and around L. Bangweolo, are physically not dissimilar to the new tribe of giants just discovered, and are one of the finest races in Africa. Yet they are inveterate cannibals whose excesses have disgusted every European traveller. On these grounds they refute the theory that white people in the tropics will in due time become black.

The World in Review

Must Raise More Cattle.

It is useless to look with regret on the passing of the great cattle ranges of the west. Under modern conditions they are a most wasteful way of utilizing land. What we have to do is to encourage the small farmer to devote more attention to cattle raising. That he can raise far more cattle to the acre than the ranchers, and with less risk of loss through disease and accident, is indisputable. This problem is one of the most serious before both Canada and the United States, and it is to be hoped our Government will give it the serious attention it deserves. There is no need whatever for beef to become prohibitive in price.

The Speed Mania.

The spirit of Swinburne's Faustine seems to have entered automobiling:

She loved the games men played with Death.
When Death must win.

Day after day it is the grim duty of the press to display the tragic news of the latest automobile accident. The list of victims grows unceasingly, but there seems no growth of caution, in spite of the terrible lessons spread by the newspapers to every village and farmstead. Speed, over the ground in trains and trolleys, in motor cars and "scenic railways," over the water in hydroplanes and hydroaeroplanes, throughout the air in aeroplanes; speed, the thrill through the nerves of wind rush and roaring wheels, the modern passion, the twentieth century vice; better, perhaps, than the gambling of the eighteenth century, of the bear baiting of the seventeenth, but costlier and more likely to produce unexpected results.

Quartz Gold Mining.

Some extraordinary rich samples of gold quartz have been taken into Vancouver recently from Texada Island and are said to have been taken from regular ledges and not from mere pockets. Placer mining has to a great extent overshadowed any other form of gold mining in British Columbia not only because the sands of the rivers have nearly always shown gold but because the prospector can wander freely over the country with his pick and pan, and if he makes a strike he can work his claim on the spot with very little extra in the way of necessities. But quartz mining is different. Transportation of machinery to deal with the quartz has been most laborious and expensive and the results of transporting machinery into a district only to find that the gold occurs in pockets would be rather disastrous. On the other hand gold-bearing quartz ledges are apparently usually of far greater value than placer fields.

The whole world has been astonished at the production of the Transvaal gold mines, which are entirely quartz ledges and go down to enormous depths. Rumors have from time to time come through from the Peace River district that there is quartz formation bearing gold exactly similar to the lie of the famous Johannesburg reefs. The mines in the Atlin district too have for a long while shown some remarkably rich gold quartz propositions. If the samples from Texada Island are not from pockets but on further development the quartz proves continuity and of richness at depth, British Columbia is on the verge of becoming a tremendous factor in the world's gold supplies.

Death on the Rail.

On the American Railways in the last 23 years the number of persons killed was 192,542. It is rather startling to find that of this appalling total 103,566 were passengers. Only 40,000 were employees, killed through mischance of their own fault, and only 80,000 other persons killed through mischance of their own fault. Of the total, trespassers formed 53.8 per cent., or twice as much as the percentage of the next highest class. Passengers killed in accidents to trains numbered only 3,302, or 1.7 per cent. Our Canadian statistics show that the number of trespassers killed is almost as large as all other classes put together. In the last railway year for which data is available, that ending on June 30, 1912, the fatalities on Canadian railways numbered 568, and of these 235 were to trespassers.

Women in Australia.

We hear so much nonsense nowadays about what would happen were women to be allowed to vote just as men are allowed that it is refreshing to hear from a very good authority what has happened in Australia through granting the women a vote. The Premier of the Commonwealth has no fear of feminism or of the vote making women coarse and vulgar and immoral. After an experience of nearly a dozen years of female enfranchisement in that country the Premier says:—"Women's suffrage steadies political feeling. In democratic countries turbulence is always a danger. In a time of political excitement men will let themselves loose. Women won't. They don't want hysterics. They are the domestic economists, and they have to calculate the needs of their households pretty closely every week. That is why economic questions are more carefully studied now, and why you get a steadier, more sober, more wholesome opinion on all questions connected with the home."

The Maligned Crow.

According to the report of agricultural experts, the crow is a much-maligned bird and is not the despoiler with a reputation as black as his coat. A report issued recently announces that the crow does more good than harm; he eats more pests than crops. His one besetting sin now as recent investigations show, is devouring the eggs and young of other birds, but the contents of his craw prove that about nine-tenths of his food consists of insects and other crop-destroying creatures. "Don't be too hard on the crow that caws about your farm," is the advice of the department of agriculture to the United States farmer.

Britain's New Lord Chief Justice.

Sir Rufus Isaacs has been made Lord Chief Justice of the British Empire. Sir Rufus Isaacs is a Jew. There is a chance for a man with brain, pluck and industry to climb high under any flag, regardless of the accident of birth or the handicap of religious creed or nativity. If Sir Rufus Isaacs, says the Record, lacked the qualifications he would not be Lord Chief Justice of the English Courts to-day. He won on merit alone. It is a hard fight for men of oppressed races to climb over the shoulders of men of races more fortunate. There is a prejudice in every land and it takes a man to beat down its barriers and rise to fame and eminence. The keeper of the record lifts his hat to the man who wins on merit alone. He is worth the while.

A Peril in War.

Rear Admiral Caspar F. Goodrich of the United States navy, declares that the Panama canal will be a peril in war. He is convinced that a great mistake was made in not building a sea level ditch, even at a cost of time and money. "as the locks are far too small and show ignorance of the land men who built it!" Rear Admiral Goodrich never built a canal. For this reason he is supposed to know all about it. That is the way with some men. They view the constructive work of others and point out the mistakes. Before a man attempts to tear down the work of another, he should go out and get a building record for himself.

WORKS ALL DAY

And Studies at Night on Grape-Nuts Food.

Some of the world's great men have worked during the day and studied evenings to fit themselves for greater things. But it requires a good constitution generally to do this.

A man was able to keep it up with ease after he had learned the sustaining power of Grape-Nuts, although he had failed in health before he changed his food supply. He says:

"Three years ago I had a severe attack of stomach trouble which left me unable to eat anything but bread and water.

"The nervous strain at my office from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M. and improper foods caused my health to fail rapidly. Cereal and so-called "Foods" were tried without benefit until I saw Grape-Nuts mentioned in the paper.

"In hopeless desperation I tried this food and at once gained strength, flesh and appetite. I am now able to work all day at the office and study at night, without the nervous exhaustion that was usual before I tried Grape-Nuts.

"It leaves me strengthened, refreshed, satisfied; nerves quieted and toned up, body and brain waste restored. I would have been a living skeleton, or more likely a dead one by this time, if it had not been for Grape-Nuts."

IRELAND'S CHIEF SECRETARY

Will the Hon. Augustine Birrel Be the Last One?

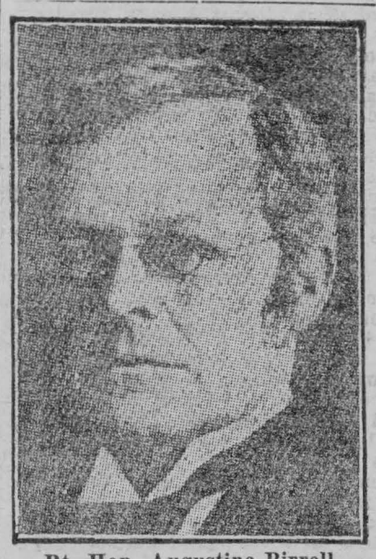

In these days, when there is so much talk for and against Home Rule for Ireland, there is one man behind the scenes who says little and does much. He is the man destined, so it would seem, to be the last Chief Secretary for Ireland in the British Cabinet, for when Home Rule is in force there will be no need of the office, in its present form at any rate. There is no more sincere Home Ruler than he, and few are the British politicians who have a better knowledge of the Irish people and their problems.

Mr. Birrell is a most benevolent looking man. He looks like one of the Cheeryble brothers. But you mustn't think he is as grandmotherly as he looks. He resents with vehemence any attempt to misconstrue something he has said. When one of the eloquent Cecils misquoted him in the House, he at once interrupted the oration (in that lion's roar of a voice that is at once the terror and delight of his opponents) with, "I may be a fool, but I'm not such a silly fool as to have said anything of the sort." And he corrects his friends with the same bluffness. He never lends his name to a misconception, nor cares to be the peg for all the virtues with which Party seeks to drape its leaders, says a writer in London Sketch.

"Bob Logic."

He has half succeeded in establishing his ferocity. "Have you ever known a female Birrell?" asks Lady Sybil Grant, as if the big voice rendered it futile for any women to aspire to fill in politics the place that he fills. His wit, too, is of a masculine quality. Based upon fact, rather than fancy, it is the wit of the student; his jokes are cracked in the hard-headed school of logic. "Bob Logic," Sir Frank Lockwood used to call him; and it is in the company of lawyers and doctors and politicians that his humor flourishes.

Mr. Birrell's taste in books, while it is sane and thorough, has the same bias as his humor. His inclination is for the weighty syllables of the eighteenth century. No trend of fashion beguiles him from the things that naturally appeal to him. He loves his Dr. Johnson whatever befalls, and could go on editing him to the end of time. Charles Lamb, and Browning, and Charlotte Bronte are also among his authors, and he has read "the young men." But his preferences are easily tested by his copious quotations. In talk, in speech-making, in essay-writing, he is continually citing the heavy couplets, that lighter memories cannot carry, even if they cared to.

Rt. Hon. Augustine Birrell.

Birreligeon.

The tasting sense is his only guide in literature; for him books, like apples, are either good or bad. He likes to tell of the child who ran to his mother, crying: "Why, here's a better book than the Bible," and so began a long series of adventures among masterpieces. That child, probably, was no other than A.B., for it is characteristic of him to break with Genesis, and start again at the beginning on his own account. One of his weaknesses has been a certain willingness to sneer at the reader who approaches literature in the religious, rather than the literary, mood. Mr. Birrell is irreverent, not necessarily toward religion, but towards certain classes of the religious. Birreligion becomes very much the same thing as irreligion when the Chief Secretary thinks he finds that the devout parent, with no sense of humor, uses his devotions much as he uses castor-oil. Ireland, probably, has done much to open the Chief Secretary's eyes to the humanity of the Church, and the church-goer.

The notion that religion must be checked lest it become an unkind and sullen tyranny probably came to him in early days in Scotland. In his Glasgow days he had few ambitions and small knowledge outside Glasgow, and had he been able in those days to sketch an outline of his future to his father he would, he has said, have had his ears boxed. Now as Chief Secretary, he has, for a little longer, ample powers of boxing other people's ears. The Irish Constabulary is at his beck and call. But when the batons are out and heads broken, it is because Mr. Birrell has forgotten his powers of beckoning. He is anything in the world but a good policeman. When "Bob Logic," spectacles and all, is found in the smoking-room of the House it is easy to know him as a man of wide tolerance and sympathies—of wider tolerance and sympathies than office gives scope to. We must, however, await the genuine confessions of Augustine before knowing him to the full.

HOW AN ONION CURES A COLD

Oil Contained in Vegetable Destroys Certain Bacteria.

Most persons know that eating a raw onion "drives out a cold," but why the onion should possess this beneficent power not one in a hundred persons who were cured would be able to say.

The oil contained in the onion, chives radish and horse radish, is an oil that belongs in the category of spices, and this oil has a deadly effect upon certain pathogenic, that is to say, harmful bacteria flourishing in various organs of the human body. The intestinal flora against which Dr. Metchnikoff wages his incessant campaign are the best known of the pathogenic bacteria and are among the most dangerous. But the microbe which causes colds is quite annoying. According to Dr. Haig, the great uric acid specialist, all colds are due to a combination of three things—a chill, a microbe or a uric acid tendency which prepares a cell for the microbes' growth. In addition to being a source of great discomfort a cold is dangerous as well, because the person suffering with it is always in jeopardy of pneumonia. The pneumonia germ, the diplococcus pneumoniae, is present in moderate numbers in the mouth of perfectly healthy persons, but the mucous membrane forms a sort of protective wall against it to bar it from entering the system. During a cold the extremely delicate membrane lining of the nose, mouth and throat is intensely irritated and its protective efficiency is greatly weakened, affording the pneumonia germ a better foothold than when the membrane is in normal condition.

Among the germs to which the oil of the onion is a deadly foe is the cold microbe, and by attacking it one of the causes producing colds is obviated. Thus the cold microbe, one of the necessary three factors that caused the cold, an onion, eaten raw, will "drive out the cold."

Properly speaking, the onion is a vegetable, but because of its strong flavor we have come to regard it almost exclusively as a spice. There are other spices which have just as good an effect upon the human system. According to Dr. Alfred Gigon, of Basle, spices are a much abused constituent of the diet. He classifies spices into five divisions. Into the first class fall salt and the so-called aromatic spices—ginger, cinnamon, cloves, pepper, etc. These spices, by stimulating the flow of saliva and of the gastric juices, further digestion.

A Better Offer.

They were enjoying a motor ride and were just entering a country road.

"May I kiss your hand?" he asked a little confusedly.

She removed her veil.

"No," she replied. "I have my gloves on."

Chinese women have no girlhood, there being only childhood, and, at the age of 12 or 13, marriage.

FOOD IN TABLOID FORM.

One May Prepare a Whole Meal in a Few Minutes.

A Spanish physician is credited with being the latest inventor of concentrated food tablets. The only tablets heretofore that have been a success are those containing a compound of beef, which, when dissolved in water, forms a bouillon.

The Spanish doctor's tablets are concentrated vegetables, meats, soups and sweets. By the use of five or six tablets of various kinds one may prepare a whole meal in a few minutes. The tablets are light in weight, and are being especially prepared for explorers, aviators and for automobilists who are making long cross-country runs. They may later be introduced into practical housekeeping, if they can be reduced in cost by manipulating large enough quantities.

Many of the tablets may be eaten without being altered in form, but, according to their inventor, they improve in taste by the addition of water. They are a dull brown in color and are a sort of powder. This powder is compressed with great force into a solid cake, which is wrapped in oiled paper and tin foil. Oiled silk will be used to protect those taken by explorers.

Some of the varieties prepared by the Spanish doctor are various kinds of soups; tablets, potato flavor; tablets, onion flavor; tablets, asparagus flavor; tablets, beef flavor; tablets, mutton or lamb flavor, and tablets, chicken flavor. The inventor claims that the tablets are rich in nutrition and entirely digestible.

Any Headache Cured, Tired Systems Re-Toned

When You're Dull, Tired, Restless Day and Night Something is Wrong in the Stomach.

A Prominent Publishing Man Says the Quickest Cure is Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Headaches never come to those who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and this fact is vouched for by the Assistant Manager of the Poultry Success Magazine, of Springfield, O., Mr. J. H. Callander, who writes: "No better medicine than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. We use them regularly and know of marvelous cures that resisted everything else. They cleanse the whole system, act as a tonic on the blood, enliven digestion, help the stomach, and make you feel strong and well. For headaches, indigestion and stomach disorders I am confident that the one prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Being composed of natural vegetable remedies, Dr. Hamilton's Pills possess great power, yet they are harmless. They aid all organs connected with the stomach, liver, and bowels. In consequence, food is properly digested, the blood is pure and nourishing, the body is kept strong and resists disease. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 for $1.00, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

By The Stems.

Henry was very proud of the new kittens and went for them to show them to visitors. His mother heard him coming along the hall and alarmed at the noise of the procession, called out: "Don't hurt the kittens, Henry."

"No, mother," came the reassuring answer. "I'm carrying them very carefully by the stems."

"Will you marry me?"

"No. I don't know you well enough yet."

"Well, will you marry me a year from now?"

"Oh, I'll know you too well then."

The Lakes Disater Fund In Canada

To the spirit which makes for the Brotherhood of Man the Dominion Marine Association has decided to ap peal, in opening a public subscription list for the families of brave sailors lost in the recent hurricane which swept the great lakes.

Substantial contributions are already offered by the members of the association and subscriptions from all sources will be welcomed. The mayor of Toronto will act as Honorary Treasurer, and Mr. H. H. Gildersleeve, Manager of the western lines of the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Co., whose offices are at the Yonge Street dock in Toronto, has been appointed General Treasurer for the fund. Contributions should be sent to either of these gentlemen before December 1st and all returns made by that time, in order that the administration of the fund may be made promptly All subscriptions will be acknowledged. The owners of Canadian ships take this opportunity to express their deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives and their confidence that the contribution which they are making to the fund will be generously and heartily augmented by a sympathetic public.

L. HENDERSON,
President Dominion Marine Association.
Toronto, November 14th.

The Mayors of all Canadian cities and towns are being asked to co-operate in this appeal by acting as honorary treasurers in their respective localities. Reeve Gibson has kindly agreed to receive donations to this fund and the same will be duly forwarded and acknowledged.

Mrs. Thos. W. Gillespie

The following taken from a Lidgerwood (N. Dak.) paper refers to the death of Mrs. Thomas Gillespie, wife of Thomas Gillespie, a former well-known Morrisburg boy and a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Gillespie:

This community was shocked last Friday afternoon when the sudden and unexpected death of Mrs. Thos. Gillespie was announced.

Mrs. Gillespie gave birth to a boy Oct. 22 at the hospital, and had been home for a week, and seemingly in excellent health. Friday afternoon she suddenly complained of feeling ill. Her husband went to her, and seeing she was growing weaker. carried her to her bed, immediately summoned a physician, but before anything could be done for her she died, about fifteen minutes after she was taken ill. Heart failure was the cause of her death

Maud S. Propper was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Moses P. Propper; was born at Wahpeton, this state, Oct. 23, 1879, and was one of the first white children born in this county. She died Nov 7 1913 at 3:10 p m.

About 18 years ago she moved with per parents on a farm in Grant township, this county, where she lived until her marriage. She was married to Thomas W. Gillespie Oct. 7. 1900 since which time the family has lived in Lidgerwood.

Besides the husband, four children, three boys and one girl, survive her, also her father, the mother having passed beyond about eight years ago.

Mrs. Gillespie was of an affectionate disposition bright and winning in her ways, so that friendship's circle was to her a large one. Here in this county she played as a child, developed into beautiful girlhood; here she married and helped to establish a home; here her busy life was spent, her battles fought, her faithful service rendered to the world. In this dearest of all places to her, she lies down at length to sleep and rest.

The funeral services took place Monday afternoon at the Episcopal church, Rev. C. H Brown, conducting the services and preaching a very appropriate sermon. After the services at the church the body was taken to the Stine cemetery for burial.

The flowers were many and beautiful, and the attendance at the church was one of the largest in the history of this city.

To the grief-stricken husband, father, and the four young, motherless children, sincere sympathy in their hour of sorrow is extended by their large circle of acquaintances.

Kidneys Wrong?—

If they are you are in danger. When through weakness or disease the kidneys fail to filter the impurities from the blood, trouble comes at once. Backache, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gravel, Diabetes, Gall Stones and the deadly Bright's Disease are some of the results of neglected kidneys. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills contain a most effective diuretic which strengthens and stimulates the kidneys so that they do their work thoroughly and well. Try

LOCAL OPTION

Voting January 5th, 1914

Mr Editor :

The Local Option Committee desires to contradict certain false statements that are being circulated by the advocates of the open bar concerning the list of voters attached to the petition that was presented to the Council asking for a poll on Jan. 5th. In the first place, it is being whispered about that over half of the signatures are those of women (as if that should count against Local Option), when as a matter of fact there are the names of 95 men and 71 women, total 166. Moreover many more names could have been added if the committee had desired them. Several prominent citizens who were canvassed said, "If you really require my name to make out the 25 per cent. of the voters we wil sign the petition," but we did not require their signatures. The second mis-statement that is being circulated by the friends of the treating system is that many of the names on the petition were not put there by the persons themselves, but were written by members of our committee. We challenge the liquor party to show one name on the list that is not a lawful signature.

The committee expected just such tactics on the part of the antis, and so were most particular in securing signatures.

By order of Committee.

Ex-Governor Patterson of Tennessee, explains his change of attitude toward saloons

He Claims That the Open Bar Cannot Produce One Veracious Witness in Its Favor

At Columbus, Ohio, on Wednesday. the 12th inst., ex-Governor Patterson commenting on one of his own messages to the Tennessee legislature in which he opposed further legislature to regulate the saloon traffic, Mr. Patterson reiterating that at that time those were his honest convictions based upon a misguided judgment, continued:

"I have seen the trail of liquor in the criminal courts where I have prosecuted crime, I know and have been a participant in its paralyzing corroding influence in the social and public life of our national capital. As the governor of Tennessee, I have seen it a veritable and raging centre of storm around which gathered its defenders and assailants, and from which sprang divisions in parties, disputes in families and dissension in churches.

"Going through life I have seen it drag down many of the associates of my boyhood, blasting their hopes and consigning them to untimely graves. I have seen its forked lightning strike my first born—the child of my manhood, and I have borne with him the suffering and tried to help him in his brave but sometimes melancholy struggle for redemption. At last I have felt its foul and stealthy blow as it turned upon me in its deadly and shaming wrath—upon me, who had pleaded before the people for its very existence. Men have called me strong; and while I could see its harm in others, I thought myself immune, as thousands before my time have thought, and suffered for the thought.

"When logic failed and reason gave no answer, I cast aside all pride of opinion, all thought of what the world might say or think, and went to the throne of Almighty God. There, on bended knees, I asked for light and strength, and they came. The curtains of the night parted, and the way was clear. I arose a changed man.

"The saloon cannot produce one veracious witness in its favor as it stands indicted before the bar of public opinion.

"I favor prohibition in any form that will either reduce or destroy the liquor traffic. I favor it personal wide, town wide, state wide, nation wide and world wide."

DIED

YOUNG—At Osnabruck Centre, on Friday, November 14, 1913, W. S. Young, aged 72 years. The funeral took place on Monday from his late residence to St. Matthew's Church, Woodlands. and interment was in Woodlands cemetery.

Attention is directed to the advertisement on page eight of W. Marsh & Son. This well-known firm will hold one of the greatest sales of furniture, rugs, oilcloth, linoleum, window shades, etc., ever held in this section. The sale, which is in charge of the Toronto Auction & Commission Co., opens Friday, Nov. 21st, at 8.30 a.m., and will continue for twenty days.

VITALITY REGAINED KIDNEYS CURED

Health Restored By "Fruit-a-tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys and liver were not doing their work, and I became all run-down. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them.

Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the results all that could have been expected.

My liver and kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever enjoyed, and I unhesitatingly give you this testimonial for publication if you wish"

B. A. KELLY.

In hundreds of letters received by the Fruit-a-tives Company, the same expression is used "Fruit-a-tives is the best kidney remedy in the world". At any rate, these tablets have proved the best to the hundreds of men and women who have been cured by taking them. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FREAK BUILDINGS.

Strange English Monuments to Folly and Vanity.

There are many buildings in England which are nothing more than freaks.

A family in search of social position or who want to "lionize" the immediate section builds a place along the lines of the great castles of Richard the Third's time. The estate is guarded as if the King lived there, but this is for the purpose of preventing the deception being discovered. As a rule such buildings are a series of hollow arches and domes and turrets and spires around a comparatively small dwelling.

Not far from Aylesburg is one of those fabric castles. It is a reproduction of a great mediaeval stronghold. From the road it looks to be just what the owner had in mind when he built it, but if one gets close to the buildings it will be found that the walls are far from massive and the windows too large for the mediaeval home it resembles at a distance.

There is a house near Ilford which is a freak if there ever was one. It is a mausoleum used as a dwelling and locally known as the castle. Some years ago a titled Englishman discovered the family hadn't a proper mausoleum so he tumbled down his house and erected on its site a big mausoleum. Below the structure he had built a number of catacombs. Over this was the chapel in which funeral services were to be held and over this apartments for mourners were provided.

The builder did not take the bishop of the district into his confidence when he started the structure, and when it was finished the bishop refused to consecrate it.

Finally the apartment provided for the mourners over the chapel was rented. There are only four rooms inhabitable in the structure. These are reached from the chapel through a well-like spiral staircase which extends to the roof. The spire is one of the features of the structure. The building stands against the hillside as a monument to the vanity and folly of the builder.

Near Carshalton is a massive gateway of wrought iron and stone something like 240 feet wide. Though it has stood for many years its value now is placed at $25,000. From this can be gleaned the original cost. The gateway was to lead to a great mansion that was never built. Financial reverses prevented it. The mansion was to be built for a great London merchant. He had a title, but apparently wanted a greater one, and the building of a house that would be the gossip of all England was the means he selected to get it. He went bankrupt and only the gateway was completed. It is one of the sights of the place and is usually referred to as the "Lion of Carshalton."

Incubators In Egypt.

Announcement is made by W. H. Cadman, an English investigator, that he has discovered how the ancient Egyptians incubated chickens to the number of 120,000,000 a year. He has found incubators which he states were used in Egypt 5,000 years ago. The secret has been well guarded, but it is laid bare at last. They had no oil stoves or gas or electric heated incubators, but they had ovens which worked much better, even though they required more constant tending. Each oven was calculated to hold 7,000 eggs, and the fuel by which it was heated consisted of chopped straw and dung, but for the last ten days of the hatching the energy was supplied altogether by the chickens themselves. It is the commonest error of those operating our modern incubators to use too much heat, especially toward the end of the period, and now we may learn from the old Egyptians how not to do things as well as how to do them. The use of the straw and other light fuel shows that the Egyptians were most careful to avoid too intense heat at any stage, and the uniform success with which they met shames our boasted modern progress and so-called scientific achievements. We thought that we were the first in the world to hatch chickens and other poultry in incubators, but we are only about 50 centuries behind the times.

Indian Matrimony, Old and New.

The matrimonial advertisements accepted by the Indian papers occasionally bring out the contrast between the old order of things and the new. Here, for example, is an invitation from a paper in the Punjaub illustrating the old: "Wanted, a suitable match for a Sareen boy of 13 of a highly respectable family. The girl must be between 7 and 8 years of age, and should be well-connected." By the side of this may be put an example of the other kind, an advertisement inserted in the same paper by one Ram Singh Ray, of Dharamsala: "My good friend, an educated, young, possessing robust health, wealth and independent livelihood, aged 32, bachelor, wants to marry a girl decorated with education, civilization and sound health; no distinction between Hindu castes."

Victimizing Mr. Winston Churchill.

The old "bogus laundryman" trick has just been performed successfully at the Admiralty House, Whitehall, and the wife of the First Lord (Mr. Winston Churchill) has lost articles of clothing to the value of $250.

A young, neatly-dressed man called at the First Lord's official residence recently, represented that he came from the firm which deals with the Admiralty House laundry, and asked for the week's linen. The maid saw no reason to be suspicious, and a large number of articles of personal clothing belonging to Mrs. Churchill were handed over to the man with two tablecloths worked with a rose, shamrock, crown and anchor. Within less than an hour the genuine laundryman arrived, and the trick was discovered.

An Aged Swimmer.

Mr. John Classey, the oldest racing swimmer in England, recently took part in the "H. J. Phillips Cup" for veterans in the Serpentine, Hyde Park, London. Although he is 84 years old, Mr. Classey went in from the diving-board, and swam the distance of fifty yards in great style.

He was defeated by Mr. John Denty, the president of the Serpentine Club, who is the father of a well-known swimming family, and has himself been bathing all the year round in the Serpentine for nearly fifty years.

Solar Physics Laboratory.

A solar physics laboratory is to be erected in New Zealand, at Nelson. The site will probably be on a summit known as The Fringe, which has an elevation of 2,500 feet above sea level.

Sure.

It was the third day at sea, and the Boston man who sat next to the Chicago man in the diner of the steamer was sick and irritable.

"Why do you bolt your food in that manner?" asked the Boston man as he watched the Chicago man eat.

"To keep it down," replied the Chicago man.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Norway's Climate.

The average length of life is greater in Norway than in any other country. This is attributed to the fact that the temperature is cool and uniform throughout the year.

An Old Story.

"Did that palmist tell you the truth about yourself?"

"Yes, but my wife has been doing that for years."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

For Baking Success —This Oven Test

Success on some baking days can be expected no matter what flour you use. But constant success is rarer. It can be assured in only one way. The miller must select his wheat by oven test.

So from each shipment of wheat we take ten pounds as a sample. We grind this into flour. Bread is baked from the flour.

If this bread is high in quality, large in quantity, we use the shipment from which it came. Otherwise we sell it.

Constant baking success comes as a matter of course from flour bearing this name

CORNWALL GENERAL HOSPITAL

This institution provides skilled nursing and care at very moderate rates to those able to pay, and without charge to indigent persons from the three United Counties, other than the Municipal Grants.

It is kept up by:

1. Fees from paying patients.
2. Grants from the Government and Municipalities.
3. Donations and Subscriptions from Churches, Corporations, Societies and Individuals, the last being the largest source of revenue.

You are Asked to Assist in this work

The nucleus of an endowment fund has been established by a legacy recently received, and parties remembering the Hospital in their wills may stipulate that bequests made by them shall go to this fund.

If you would like a copy of the last Annual Report, drop a card to the Secretary, who will be pleased to send you one.

Household

Catering For Large Family.

Unconsciously or with forethought, writers on household matters show a leaning toward teaching the young housekeeper "how to cook for two," and the perplexities of the little cook are so appealing that we lose sight of the still more serious problem that confronts the mother of a large family, especially if the family income has not kept pace with the increased demands made upon it or the higher cost of living. It may be that we take it for granted that years of experience precede the gradual advent of this large family. However, a mother's time is necessarily divided among many branches of homemaking, and unless she be well trained in domestic economy the cooking and serving of three meals a day is likely to be subject to fluctuations when the family will be either under or over fed. Of course, the quality and variety of food must be determined by individual taste and means, but many good dishes suited to every purse and palate can be made by judicious marketing and management.

Chicken Economy.—To mention chickens and economy at the same time may seem rather far fetched, but if all parts are used to advantage, you will find chickens no more expensive than chops or steak. For a family of six or seven two medium sized chickens, each weighing from three to four pounds, will be liberal, allowing for one or two made dishes to follow. To enable you to stretch the birds, provide a few suitable trimmings. They will take a too keen edge from the appetite and add materially to the enjoyment of the meal. When the market man cuts off the feet, ask to have them sent along, as you can use them for stock. Have him draw the chickens, and he will also cut them into suitable pieces, as for fricassee. After washing all parts well, remove the skin (to be tried out and added to the drippings), scrape and wash the feet, add the first joint of the wings, neck and giblets; cover well with water and simmer slowly with a few sprigs of celery, a carrot and an onion; when meat is tender strain and set the stock aside for further use.

Milk Baked Chicken.—When simmering the stock, add the back of the chickens to the other less desirable parts and let this slowly come to the boiling point. Then place the jointed fowls on top, cover tightly and let cook until almost done. Now take out and season with a salt and pepper, roll each piece in flour and lay closely together in a buttered roasting pan. Dot top with butterine or a little of the fried out chicken fat and set in oven until it begins to brown; then pour one cupful of stock over top, place back in oven and add one or two cupfuls of milk when almost tender. When done the chicken should be a light brown tinge and the gravy must be rich and creamy. This can be poured over the chicken or served separately. A good accompaniment much liked by children is a celery and bread sauce.

Celery and Bread Sauce.—(This is also good with roast or fried birds.) Ingredients: Three cupfuls of celery, two cupfuls of bread crumbs, one small onion, three tablespoonfuls of butter, two to three cupfuls of milk, salt, pepper and celery to taste. Method—Wash and cut celery into small pieces, skin and cut up the onion, then cover with water, and simmer until very soft. Drain through a fruit press, then add the butter and the bread, which must be stale and rolled or picked into small bits. Now add the hot milk, and season to taste. Place in a double boiler and simmer until soft enough to mash the bread. The amount of milk must be determined according to the kind of bread used or the consistency desired.

Hot Chicken Sandwiches.—Ingredients: Two to three cupfuls of diced or chopped chicken, three cupfuls of chicken stock, one green pepper, one tablespoonful of butter, four tablespoonfuls of flour, salt and pepper to taste. Method—Heat the stock, moisten the flour with the softened butter and enough stock to rub smooth, then stir into stock and add the minced pepper and chicken. Stir and cook until thickened, then heap onto toasted bread. A little parsley garnish will be an improvement. This is a fine luncheon dish for hungry children.

Leftover Sauce and Chicken.—If some of the sauce as well as chicken is left for a second day, try to scallop them with the addition of a cupful of canned tomato pulp and rolled crackers. Method—Place a layer of the seasoned tomatoes in pudding dish, cover with a layer of rolled crackers and bits of butter. Mix the chopped chicken and bread sauce and spread over tomatoes. Now put on rest of tomatoes, crackers enough to form a crust and dot with butter. Bake in moderate oven to heat well and brown top.

Peach Sago Pudding.—Ingredients: Three and one-half cupfuls of hot water, one-half cupful of pearl sago, one can of peaches, a pinch of salt, sugar as needed. Method—Heat water in double boiler, add salt and stir in the sago. When quite clear place a can of peaches in a large pudding dish, add sugar to taste, then pour on the boiled sago (sprinkle a good layer of sugar over top), and bake until peaches are tender. (Do not use too much of the liquid on the peaches, but reserve for other uses.) If cream is too expensive to serve as sauce, make a thin custard to pour over. This will serve eight persons.

Household Hints.

If the cuticle around the nails seems dry and stiff there is a tendency to hangnails, rub in well a little vaseline or cold cream every night before going to bed.

In packing away summer clothes be sure to let them be put away rough dry. If they are starched there will be great danger of their cracking when next brought out to use.

To toughen glassware or lamp chimneys, immerse the glassware in cold water to which some common salt has been added. Boil well, then cool slowly. The glass will resist a sudden change of temperature.

To clean white felt, make a soft paste with magnesia and milk. Cover the article thickly with the mixture, applying it with a brush. Leave this on until the next day, then brush off with a clean, hard brush.

The coffee pot should be cleaned once a week in the following way: Put a tablespoonful of washing soda into the pot, fill it nearly full of water and let boil for a little while, then rinse thoroughly with hot water.

To prepare a painted wall for papering, wash it first with a solution of half a pound of washing soda in a gallon of water and then apply a warm mixture of half a pound of ground glue dissolved in a pail of water.

When working on velvet use only the finest pins or needles to pin so as not to injure the pile and when bastings are essential do not draw the thread tight. Clip each stitch with scissors before pulling out the bastings.

The measures for the ordinary French dressings are: Three tablespoonfuls of oil, 1½ tablespoonfuls of vinegar, a fourth of a tablespoonful of salt, an eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper. This is enough for a pint of salad.

Wash leather furniture very gently with warm water in which there is a little vinegar, wipe with a dry cloth and then restore the polish by mixing the whites of two eggs and a little turpentine which is applied with flannel.

After thoroughly washing white lace curtains, put them in a solution of one teaspoonful of chloride of lime to three quarts of warm water. Let the curtains stand in the solution for about an hour.

If the seats of caned chairs sag, turn them upside down, wash well with soapy water, soaking so as to thoroughly wet them, and in drying they will stiffen to almost, if not quite, their normal condition.

A few pieces of large macaroni inserted in the top crust of a berry pie will prevent the juice running over into the oven. The juice will force its way up into the macaroni tubes. When the pie is baked and the steam escapes, the juice will fall back into the pie.

A very fine spool holder is made with a brass curtain rod. Select one small enough to allow the spools to slip over it easily. Place on the rod as many spools as it will hold, then fasten with small brackets which come with the rods and place in a convenient position on the sewing room wall.

The piano, to be kept in good condition, should not stand against an outside wall, nor should it be placed very near a fire. It should be kept free from dust inside and out. If the keys become yellow, make a paste of whiting and potash, lay it on them and leave for 24 hours, then polish. Heavy articles on the top of the piano disorder the sound.

New York is building the largest hotel in the world, containing 1,800 rooms, at a cost of $12,500,000.

Greek athletes of old trained on new cheese, dried figs, milk, and warm water, but never touched meat.

"You knew old Dempster, who was said to be so well off? As you know, he died the other day, and now the story goes that his one and only possession was an old grandfather's clock." "Ah, well, there's one good thing about that. The trustees won't have much difficulty in winding up his estate."

THE ROYAL COUPLE ACKNOWLEDGE CHEERING.

Prince Arthur and Bride on the Balcony.

Prince Arthur of Connaught and his wife, who was the Duchess of Fife, repaired to the bride's mother's home after the ceremony. Vast crowds cheered them and forced them to make an appearance on the balcony.

Our London Letter

Think Militant War Ended.

The Home Office is in a more cheerful frame of mind regarding the "wild women," for it regards the back of the militant movement as having been broken. The police to a large extent share this view. There are very few recruits to the ranks of the militants and the Suffragette has dropped its lewd articles by Christabel Pankhurst. Fewer women have been seen selling the paper in the street this week than for several weeks. For the last couple of Thursdays, publication day, not one woman has been seen distributing the Suffragette in the Strand, where for a long time there was one every week just west of the Hotel Cecil and another opposite Simpson's, the famous restaurant.

Hop Growers Reaping Profits.

The London hop market is experiencing a crisis unprecedented since the famous season of 1882, when hops attained a price never reached before or since.

For several years English hops have been plentiful, but of poor quality, and the ruling price was so low that all of the weaker growers were driven out of business, leaving only the independent farmers in the field. This season the crop in England and Austria is very short, and the market had hardly opened when prices began to soar.

In the United States the crop is plentiful and good and, almost from the opening of the market, the price on the other side has been 10 cents lower than here. In spite of the high price no hops have been brought to market, and the surviving growers are enjoying their vengeance to the fullest extent. All of them can hold on as long as they please and with the season two weeks old there are no signs of weakening on their part. The only buyers who are happy are those who foresaw the conditions early enough to buy American crops in advance, some of whom have made fortunes on their deals.

Windsor's Treasure Vaults.

There is one thing no visitor to Windsor ever sees, and that is the vast treasure vaults that lie beneath the buildings. As a matter of fact, the whole Castle Hill is honeycombed with vaults, which in olden days formed part of the system of fortification of the place against a possible siege. But to-day they are put to more peaceable purposes and are used to store away the wealth of the palace during the absence of the court. Some of them form vast strong rooms, and it is in these that the famous gold plate is kept that is displayed on the occasion of state banquets. But very little of it is really gold; the bulk of it is only silver gilt.

Royal Mint's Record Output.

From the annual report of the Royal Mint it is seen that the output in 1912 largely exceeded, both in value and in the number of coins produced, all previous records.

Nearly 162,500,000 Imperial coins were struck there during the year, and that this number exceeded the highest previous figure of any year by nearly 34,000,000. The gold coinage exceeded that of 1911 by about 400,000 pieces. The number of pieces struck in silver has only once been exceeded, viz., in 1910, though the value of the coinage in this metal in 1912 was greater than in any previous year. The coinage in bronze numbered upward of 77,000,000 pieces of a value of $1,267,010, figures again which are unprecedented for any year. The heavy Imperial coinage made it again impossible to undertake all the Colonial orders which were tendered, and only some 8,500,000 of Colonial coins were struck, a smaller number than in any previous year since 1890. The total coinage of the year amounted to over 171,000,000 pieces of a currency value of upward of $182,500,000, the highest figure on record.

In addition to the output of the Royal Mint, 16,800,000 pieces of Imperial pence and 44,308,000 coins for Colonial Governments were struck by a Birmingham firm. In addition to these coinages two outside companies supplied the Royal Mint with over 315 tons of unstamped coins for pence and farthings.

Washington's Home For Sale.

Sulgrave Manor, the ancestral home of the Washingtons, is open to the purchase of any one who has $40,000 to spare.

It is hardly necessary to point out that Washington himself never lived there, the last of his family to inhabit the old home being his great-great-grandfather.

Rubber For Street Paving.

"Facts and Problems of the Rubber Industry" was the title of a lecture delivered at the Northern Polytechnic Institute, Holloway, this week, by Prof. Wyndham R. Dunstan, F.R.S., director of the Imperial Institute. Dealing with the question of synthetic rubber, Prof. Dunstan said that artificial rubber could be produced by the chemist by elaborate processes without the aid of the living plant, but it could not be produced artificially as cheaply as it could be grown. With the prospect of rubber being produced shortly at less than 25 cents a pound, the chances of synthetic rubber competing against the real product commercially were becoming more and more remote.

In his opinion there is a big future for rubber, which, he believes, will in the near future, be utilized for the flooring of churches, chapels, halls, and other public buildings, if not for street paving purposes. One thing now necessary was to ascertain and define once and for all the characteristics which the raw material should possess in order to adapt it most effectually for manufacturing purposes.

New Mistress of the Robes.

Queen Mary has appointed the stately Duchess of Portland mistress of the robes, the only one of the queen's "ladies" who has to go out of office with a change of ministry. The mistress of robes, always a duchess, stands next to the queen on state ocasions and controls the maids of honor. Her husband is naturally supposed to be of the same politics as the party in power. There was no Liberal duke left in the country, so the best thing to do in the view of the queen was to choose a duchess whose husband has not been a partisan.

Has Duchesses A-Plenty.

Four duchesses have taken up their residence at Roehampton, a one time fashionable suburb of London, and still considered one of the most desirable residential districts.

The duchesses are their Graces of Marlborough and Roxburghe, the Duchess of Westminster, who has left the more stately residences of her husband for a house in this district, and the recently widowed Millicent, Duchess of Sutherland.

There is no prettier place on the borders of London than Roehampton. The nearest town is Putney, although as a matter of fact, the whole district is a part of London, and at Roehampton one gets the first glimpse of the real country.

A Tribute to Andrew Lang.

A handsome granite Celtic cross has been erected at Andrew Lang's grave in the Eastern Cemetery, St. Andrew's. The inscription on the base of the cross is as follows: "Andrew Lang, born March 31, 1844, died July 20, 1912. The souls of the righteous are in the hands of God, there shall no torment touch them."

London, Nov. 1, 1913.

A SISTER'S LOVE.

Gave Food to Her Brother Which She Required Herself.

At the Wood Public School in Philadelphia they conduct a "food clinic" each morning for undernourished children. It consists of a nourishing ration of well-cooked cereal and milk, which is given at recess, under the direction of the medical inspector of the school, to each child who suffers from malnutrition. The school nurse weighs the children each week.

Little Monica was seven pounds under weight. She had a little crippled brother, named Robert, in the kindergarten. At the end of her first week at the lunch-table, the scales showed that Monica had not gained as the other children had. At the next day's luncheon an attendant watched her to see how much food and milk she really did eat. He saw the child, when she thought she saw an opportunity to do so unobserved, slip down from her seat, take her bowl of cereal and milk and her spoon, go out through the door and down the hall to the kindergarten room. There she fed her portion to her little brother Bobby.

She ate none herself, quickly went back to her place, put the empty bowl on the table in front of her, and sat demurely until the children were dismissed. Then she returned to her class-room hungry, but happy in the thought that her little brother had been fed. She had been doing the same thing every day—which explained quite well why she had not gained in weight.

CITY TENEMENT IS OLD IDEA.

Poor of Ancient Rome Were Infinitely Worse Off Than To-day.

The tenement house is not a modern institution by any means. So great was the number of such houses in ancient Rome, and so badly were they constructed, that in A.D. 69 Emperor Otho, who was marching against Vitellus, found his way barred for twenty miles by the ruins of tenement houses that had been undermined by inundation.

The spontaneous collapse of tenement houses in those days was so common an occurrence that little attention was paid to it. The tenants have been described by a writer of the times as constantly fearing to be burned or buried alive. Companies existed for the purpose of propping and sustaining houses.

In comparison with the modern tenements, those of Rome were excessively high. Martial alludes to a poor man, his neighbor, who was obliged to mount 200 steps to reach his garret.

That garret must have been perched nearly one hundred feet above the level of the street. Emperor Augustus, to make less frequent the occurrence of disasters, limited the height of new houses that opened upon the street to about sixty-eight feet.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, NOVEMBER 23.

Lesson VIII.—Joshua, the New Leader. Josh. 1. 1-9. Golden Text, Josh. 1.9.

Verse 1. After the death of Moses—The Israelites are still encamped in the land of Moab, east of the lowest Jordan. In Deut. 34, 8 we are told that "the children of Israel wept for Moses in the plains of Moab thirty days," after which it appears that Joshua took immediate command of all the administrative affairs of the nation.

Jehovah spake—It is not necessary to think of an audible, verbal communication from Jehovah to Joshua in this connection. Joshua had long been second in command as the assistant of Moses, and the situation naturally demanded that he take up immediately the reins of administration and proceed to carry out the plans of Moses, which were very familiar to him. His duty, therefore, was most clear, and as he contemplated the work before him, and the best means of carrying it out, he was conscious that the work intrusted to him was placed upon him by Jehovah, and there was borne in on his heart and mind by the Divine Spirit a strong and overwhelming conviction that he should at once "arise" and "go over this Jordan," and lead the people of Israel unto the land which Jehovah had promised them. God speaks to men to-day as truly and as clearly as he did to Joshua; yet we do not expect the audible, verbal communication now—nor need we think of such a communication here. That the language of the sacred historian is figurative and anthropomorphic does not detract from the value of his narrative. On the contrary, it adds much to its forcefulness and beauty and gives to this ancient record a new and more enduring meaning and value.

Moses' minister—For forty years, ever since the departure of the Israelites from Egypt, Joshua had been the principal assistant and adviser to Moses.

3. Every place . . . to you have I given it—A supreme challenge to conquest and faith.

As I spake unto Moses—The promise referred to is found in Deut. 11. 24, which reads: "Every place whereon the sole of your foot shall tread shall be yours: from the wilderness, and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the hinder (western) sea shall be your border."

4. The boundaries of the land of promise, the new home of the redeemed nation, were to be the wilderness on the south, the lofty mountain ranges of Lebanon on the north, the great river, the river Euphrates, on the east, and the great sea toward the going down of the sun, that is, the Mediterranean, on the west. For other specific designations of these boundaries, compare also the following references: Gen. 15. 18-21; Exod. 23. 31; Num. 34. 1-2.

The land of the Hittites—Northern Syria, extending westward into Asia Minor. The Hittites were neither Semites nor Aryans, but probably Mongolians, whom they resembled most nearly in physiognomy and dress. Their facial type is said still to persist in the peasantry of Cappadocia. Their most prosperous national period was from about B. C. 1600-700 after which latter date they were absorbed by the Assyrian empire.

5. As I was with Moses—The narrative is designed to impress upon the reader the sense that the continuity of the nation and of its high purpose was independent of, and not broken by, a change in the person of the leader.

I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee—A promise quoted by the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews: "Be ye free from the love of money; content with such things as ye have: for himself hath said, I will in no wise fail thee, neither will I in any wise forsake thee" (Heb. 13. 5). Compare also Deut. 31. 6, 8; 1 Chron. 28. 20.

7. Observe to do according to all the law—The law is to be strictly and carefully observed if the great work to which Joshua has been called is to be successfully accomplished. He is to "read, mark, and inwardly digest" that law, carrying out its provisions to the letter.

Have good success — Literally, "deal wisely."

8. This book of the law—"This obviously refers to the 'law' described in Deut. 31, 9 as written by Moses and delivered to the Levites and elders. That it embraces a considerable nucleus of the Pentateuchal legislation (including, of course, the bulk of Exod. 20-23) few critics would deny."—Dummelow.

9. Have not I commanded thee?—For similar emphasis on the personal leadership of Jehovah, compare Deut. 31. 7, 8, 23.

DOWN BY THE SOUNDING SEA

BITS OF NEWS FROM THE MARITIME PROVINCES.

Items of Interest From Places Lapped by Waves of the Atlantic.

A big party of shantymen and contractors have gone to Anticosti to cut pulp wood this winter. According to the agent who engaged the men, it is expected to cut 25,000,000 feet.

An I.C.R. baggagemaster named Wm. Landry, of Pictou, was committed for trial on a charge of stealing a letter containing $300, given to him to mail by W. L. Reid, of Welford, N.S.

In the St. John, N.B., police court a man was up charged with theft. The police had found a quart of liquor on him, which it was said: "Looked like amber and tasted like the fiery sword of Genesis."

In Rothesay parish, near St. John, N.B., it is complained that too many men go shooting on Sundays, and people going to church complain that they are in danger of their lives from the reckless hunters.

New Brunswick vendors of probate and law stamps have received notice from the provincial treasurer that, beginning on November 1, those instruments will be sold through the Bank of Montreal in future.

Roy Anderson, a messenger for the Western Union at St. John, N.B., drew $52 for the month of September, which is said to be the largest sum ever earned by a messenger in one month in that city.

Joseph Thayer Gilman, a millionaire car manufacturer of Chicago, spent his holidays in Moncton, N. B. There he met Miss Marion V. Mackenzie. On October 4 Miss Mackenzie and Mr. Gilman were married in Boston.

Over 150 Nova Scotian vessels were engaged in the deep sea fisheries this season, an increase of 400 men and $250,000 in capital. Throughout the province 30,000 people are directly dependent on deep sea fishing for a livelihood.

At Moncton, N.B., a police officer prevented a man from jumping over a high bluff, intending to commit suicide. He took the man to the station, and two hours later discovered him in the act of hanging himself with his suspenders.

The three-masted topsail schooner Destinana, from Carbonear, Nfld., to North Sydney, C.B., ran ashore at Gooseberry Cove, in a fog and was a total loss. One seaman jumped on the rocks with a line and saved the lives of all the crew.

THE ORIGINAL JACK HORNER.

How It Occurred That an Unfortunate Cleric Was Hanged.

"Little Jack Horner," the familiar nursery rhyme, had its origin in a real tragedy, according to the story that a London correspondent tells.

During the Reformation, the head of Glastonbury Abbey in the west of England resolved to make his peace with Henry VIII., and, in token thereof, sent certain title-deeds of abbey property to the king at Whitehall. For security's sake, the abbot placed the documents in a pie dish, and covered them with a crust. The dish he gave to a rustic lout, named Jack Horner, and he told him to carry it by the highroad to the king in London.

On the road, Jack Horner became hungry, and came to the conclusion that it would be foolish to starve while he had a pie in his hands. So he broke the crust and put in his thumb and pulled out a roll of parchment. The disgusted and disappointed fellow threw both pie and parchment into a near-by brook.

When the deeds did not appear, the king charged the abbot with contumacy, and commanded that the unfortunate cleric should be hanged.

Step Lively.

Yeast—"Nothing will make a person walk so quickly as good cold weather."

Crimsonbeak — "Oh, I don't know. There's the dinner bell."

It was the class in the second reader, and little Willie had just been called upon to rise and take up the reading where Martha had left off. Willie stood at attention, his book held in the proper position before him, clutched the corner of his desk with his free hand, swallowed hard, and read: "This is a warm doughnut. Step on it." "What!" gasped the teacher. "Willie, that is not correct. Read it again." Willie did, with the same result. Moreover, he maintained stoutly that that was what his book said. So the teacher had him bring it to her. Perhaps there had been a misprint, and—— But this is what the teacher read in Willie's book: "This is a worm. Do not step on it."

THE HALF-SPEED MAN AND WOMAN

What It Means When You Feel "All Out of Sorts."

You know what it means to feel "all out of sorts." Most people have felt this way at some time. Nerves out of order, irritable, languid, depressed. An aching head, a fagged brain, appetite bad and digestion weak. With some people this condition comes and goes; with others it is chronic; they can't shake it off. It interferes with business, spoils recreation and robs life of all its joys. These men and women are only able to live and work at "half speed."

Half speed people have lost that abundant natural vitality which enables others to go "full-speed-ahead" through life. Their energy and nerve power have evaporated—they cannot work long without breaking down. The trouble is nerve weakness and is caused by poor, watery blood. You can begin to improve your condition to-day by taking Dr. William's Pink Pills. They make rich, red blood once more pulsate through your veins, and your nerves thrill with fresh vigor. Here is convincing evidence that new strength and full health can be had through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mr. Newton Mayhew, North Tryon, P. E. I., says: "I am a farmer and naturally have to work very hard. The result was that I found myself very much run down. My blood became thin and watery, and my muscles flabby. I took doctors treatment but it did not help me and I grew so weak that I could scarcely work at all. As I found the medical treatment was not helping me I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in these I found the medicine I needed, as in a short time I was restored to my old health and vigor. I shall always recommend these pills to all sufferers."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers, or will be mailed, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

BIRCH LEADS.

Its Use in 1912 Was Greater Than Maple.

The popular idea that because Canada is the Land of the Maple, the maple must necessarily be the hardwood of first importance in Canada is incorrect, judged by the data gathered by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa.

There are three species of birch of commercial importance in Canada, the black, yellow, and white, or paper, birch. The former two have the more valuable wood, but are confined to eastern Canada, whereas the paper birch is found in every province of the Dominion, ranging to the limit of tree-growth towards the north and growing well within the Arctic circle in the Mackenzie River basin and in the Yukon.

It is this wide range which contributes largely to its present importance, but the qualities of the wood promise a still greater use in the future, for it is a strong, hard, fine-grained wood which takes a high polish and can be stained to imitate the more expensive woods, such as mahogany, cherry or walnut. "Wavy" birch is an accidental form due to cross-grain, somewhat similar to "curly" maple, and is highly prized for ornamental work. In another recent report issued by the Forestry Branch on the Wood-Using Industries of Ontario, birch is reported as being used in the manufacture of over one hundred different articles, ranging from ships to spools. As a fuel-wood, it takes first place, and it is also one of the principal woods used in wood-distillation, while its only objection as a pulpwood is that it is too heavy to be readily floated down the streams to the mills.

Birch also formed 28 per cent. of the square timber exported from Canada in 1912, according to the bulletin on the production of lumber, square timber, lath and shingles for that year, which has been prepared by the Forestry Branch and will shortly be issued. The remainder was largely white pine. Until 1912 the export of square timber had steadily decreased since 1877, but last year showed a surprising increase, the quantity exported in 1912 exceeding that exported in the previous year by almost 90 per cent.

ILLS OF CHILDHOOD.

Every mother should be able to recognize the symptoms of the little ailments that attack her children. She should also be in a position to treat them promptly. To do this she should keep a supply of Baby's Own Tablets in the house at all times. The Tablets never fail to be of help to little ones. Mothers who are anxious for the welfare of her little ones will receive free for the asking a valuable little book on the care of infants and young children. Concerning the Tablets, Mrs. G. L. Bonham, St. George, Ont., says: "I can recommend Baby's Own Tablets as a safe and sure medicine for little ones. I have raised four babies with their aid and would not be without them." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FOXES WORTH A FORTUNE.

Shipments of Cubs From Alaska Said to Be Valued at $100,000.

A shipment of 126 cub foxes, estimated value $100,000, recently arrived in Vancouver on a Canadian Pacific Railway steamer from Skagway, Alaska. Included in the lot were red, black and silver gray foxes, one pair of black foxes being estimated as worth $10,000 when full grown. The owner, who accompanied the shipment, collected them in Northern Alaska and Yukon Territory, purchasing them from the white and Indian trappers. They are being shipped East to the fox farms in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and the Eastern States.

It is reported that since the opening of the season 219 live foxes, ranging from silver grey to cross, valued at $320,000, have been shipped from Edmonton to points in Eastern Canada and the United States for breeding purposes. Included in this lot were 10 young black foxes which were sold to a New York firm for $30,000. Many young foxes die soon after capture. Several black pups have died after being sold for $1,500 to $2,500. A Western raw fur company, which has been supplying the Eastern markets with young live foxes, announces that it will discontinue Eastern shipments, having decided to establish a farm in Western Alberta, where 40 foxes are already domiciled.

It is stated that a decrease of 25 to 50 per cent. has taken place in the prices paid for these animals, which is attributed to the large number which have been supplied from the entire Northern country of Alaska, Yukon Territory and the North-West Territories. The supply has been plentiful on account of the young foxes being dug out of their holes before they were able to escape. In a short time the young foxes will leave their dams, and it will then be impossible to catch them other than singly in traps, which will then, in all probability, increase the price of these animals in the Eastern markets.

THE HEARING OF ANTS.

A Scotch Scientist Gives Results of Experiments.

Prof. Pringle, a Scotch scientist, is quoted as saying that ants have the most perfect sound-producing organs yet discovered in insects, and that they are extremely susceptible to sound. He claims that these organs are situated in certain segments of the abdomen and that sounds are brought forth by rubbing, but no one has ever heard them, as they are too faint to be detected by human ears. Attempts have been made to hear them with the aid of the microphone, but the only sound detected was that of the crawling of the ants.

Again in regard to the hearing of ants, careful and exhaustive experiments have been conducted with six species from this country and England, and it was decided that these species could perceive sounds. How they did it was more or less a matter of doubt, as some scientists insisted they heard through organs of hearing, while others claimed that it was through a sense of touch, excited by atmospheric vibrations.

Prof. Pringle inclines to the opinion. When they were even violently shaken they did not seem to be disturbed in the least, while at the blow of a very shrill whistle close to them they were seen to be perceptibly agitated.

Offensive Breath Caused Usually By Catarrh

A Simple Remedy Discovered That Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat Catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs, so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. It's rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs, and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedies because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath, and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size, 50c; trial size, 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day, gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or a sore, such injury is insured against blood poison! Not one species of microbe has been found that Zam-Buk does not kill!

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or to skin disease, it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should never forget this.

Again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that new healthy tissue is quickly formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. This is why Zam-Buk cures are permanent.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were at one time so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves. Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him, and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema!

All druggists sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box, or we will send free trial box if you send this advertisement and a 1c. stamp (to pay return postage). Address Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

GOT A COLD YET?

If So, Try the Deep Breathing Cure For It.

In the season when coughs and colds are prevalent any method of preventing them and checking the first symptoms without drugs may be of inestimable value, says a physician.

When you find you have a cough, and before it gets to be deep-seated, go into the air and practice deep breathing. Draw air into the lungs until they are completely distended, raising the arms above the head during inspiration to more fully expand the chest. Hold the air in the lungs for a few seconds; then breathe it out slowly. Repeat the operations a dozen times or more, and after an hour try it again.

Persistency in this treatment will often cure a newly-contracted cough in a few hours. If the cough is of long standing, pain may be felt under the shoulder-blades and across the chest during the breathing, but, as this is caused by the tearing away of adhesions of the lung tissue, it will usually pass away in a day or two, and the fact that it is felt shows that the lungs need thorough inflation.

NEW WAY OF USING SHOES.

Missionary's Wife Tells of Amusing Incident.

The wife of a missionary long stationed in Africa confessed recently that she became hysterical with suppressed laughter at the first service that her husband held at the station after bringing her out. She had, indeed, to leave the chapel lest she should disgrace herself by an outburst of an unseemly mirth.

The cause of her discomfiture was an important convert, an aged and venerable chief, with snowy wool and a countenance of ferocious dignity. The young wife had thrown away the day before an outgrown pair of her tiny daughter's ankle ties. They were of a gay scarlet morocco, and when they reappeared at church buttoned neatly through the distended lobes of the old chief's ears and dangling conspicuously against his withered ebony shoulders the spectacle was too much for her—especially in combination with the rest of his costume, which consisted of a dirty blue loin cloth and a headdress made of feathers artistically combined with imported shirt buttons.

Expected Death From Day to Day

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by Nerviline.

We have all read and heard of the agonies of sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration. "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down, because the money I had spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended 'Nerviline.' I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day, and got relief. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica, to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

Wet Grounds.

An Irishman was fishing in a river when it began to rain heavily. Pat, not desiring to get soaked through, sought shelter under a railway bridge spanning the river, and here he plied his rod with true Waltonic zeal, utterly regardless of the trains that incessantly thundered to and fro overhead. Presently another individual appeared on the scene and politely asked Pat what he was doing. "Fishing," was the laconic retort. The stranger laughed. "Pray what is the use of fishing under the bridge while such an infernal noise continues?" "Oh, shut up, man," replied Pat, indignantly. "Sure, ye don't know these fish. They'll come under here to git out av the rain!"
