Ed Flynn Buried Yesterday; Was Early Gold Prospector

Having been engaged in the hotel business practically his whole life, Edward Flynn died on Monday at the Hotel Dieu hospital, Cornwall, in his 70th year, following a long illness. The funeral was held yesterday from the home, Dominion Hotel, to St. Mary's church, where Requiem High Mass was celebrated at 9.00 o'clock by Rev. P. J. Keaney, with interment in the Upper cemetery. The pall bearers were Chas. Kearns, E. B. Lynch, Bernard Coyne, Chas. Marcell, G. H. Barkley and Wm. Clarke.

The late Mr. Flynn was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Flynn who established the Dominion Hotel in Chesterville almost 70 years ago and which has been in the Flynn family ever since. He was born on September 13th, 1875. Early in the 1900's he became interested in gold prospecting in Northern Ontario and was one of the first to discover gold in the Larder Lake district.

Working with W. Knott, J. Hummel, Norman Cameron and Dr. Reddick, he discovered the mine which is now the Kerr-Addison property.

He was well-known in athletics in his younger days and was a member of the championship lacrosse team of Chesterville around the year 1902. A member of St. Mary's church, the late Mr. Flynn was associated with the Holy Name Society, the Knights of Columbus, and the Canadian Order of Foresters.

The late Mr. Flynn was also interested in music, and was a member of the Chesterville Citizens' Band up to 15 years ago. He was also a member of an orchestra that played in Chesterville and district some years ago.

Surviving are three sisters and two brothers. Mrs. Minnie Gillissie, Hamilton; Mrs. Margaret Carpenter, Chesterville; Mrs. Claude Riley, Irvington, N. J.; Thos. Flynn Chesterville; and Patrick Flynn of Montreal.

STORES CLOSING MONDAY

Stores and other business places will be closed on Monday for the Labour Day holiday. It is expected there will not be a holiday other than the usual half-day on Wednesday for Chesterville Fair.

History of Conquest of Air Subject of Talk to Rotary

The history of man's dream and conquest of flight, which has its beginning in the earliest carvings on the walls of caves, was related by John L. M. Turner to the Chesterville Rotary Club in a very engaging manner at the Monday evening meeting.

The earliest successful flight was made by a group of young Frenchmen at Lyons in 1782 where they had become intrigued with the fire balloons used at carnivals. The next great step, said Mr. Turner, was the dirigible conceived by Von Zeppelin, a German naval engineer, after whom the airship was renamed the zeppelin.

The speaker traced the series of long-distance flights that followed the spanning of the Atlantic, which led to flying around the world. Then he told of the designing of planes in the last great war which closed with the jet plane and rockets coming into production. Atomic power holds great future for aviation, he said, but he refused to make any prediction as to its development.

Throughout the 40 years since man made his first successful airplane, the machine has spent 10 years of its time at war, which is not an enviable record for our children to read, closed the speaker.

President Walter J. Carr introduced the speaker who is on the laboratory staff of Nestle's Milk Products, Chesterville, and Gordon Wragg expressed the thanks of the club

Business at the meeting included a report of the Directors meeting read by P. S. Boyd; and plans to raise funds for community enterprise. Next week's meeting will be held on Tuesday on account of the Labour Day holiday.

At the Board of Directors meeting of the Chesterville Rotary Club held Thursday evening at the home of P. S. Boyd, the disturbing rumor that the Rotary Playground was for the children of Rotarians only, was firmly squelched when the President, Walter J. Carr, declared that this was never the case, as the playground was a community project constructed from funds raised for the purpose, and asked that every means be taken to end the trouble and so increase attendance.

The parents of the 100th baby which is being presented with a silver spoon, are Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Raycroft (nee Margaret Thompson). Only two deaths have been recorded a boy and a girl. Dr. W. H. Justus, Chesterville, attended all the cases with the exception of three when Dr. McKendry, Winchester, was in charge.

Indian Life in Dominion Studied by United W.M.S.

The August meeting of Trinity United W. M. S. was held on Thursday, August 16, in the Sunday school room. A short service of Thanksgiving for victory occupied the first part of the programme, with prayer by Mrs. Wright. Reports of committees were heard and several items of business disposed of. The subject of study for August was "The Canadian Indians", and an Indian translation of "The Shepherd Psalm" was read. Mrs. Stanley Shay sang "Beautiful Garden of Prayer" with Mrs. Allison Graham at the piano. Mrs. Fred Forward and her group had charge of the study programme. After Mrs. Forward had introduced the subject, Mrs. Stanley Sullivan dealt with the education of Indians in Canada and Mrs. Will Smith and Mrs. Abe Ball described the measures which are employed in dealing with the health and welfare of the various Indian communities. Mrs. Forward led in prayer which concluded the study programme. Interesting thoughts from various speakers at the recent conference branch meeting were brought by Mrs. Wright. The September meeting will be held on the 13th, and will be in charge of Mrs. Harold Durant's group.

NEWS ITEMS HELD OVER. . .

Several news letters and other live news have had to be held over until the next issue.

Successful Flower Show

A fine display of flowers and a good attendance made the annual Flower Show of the Chesterville Horticultural Society a success yesterday afternoon in the Community Hall. An added class that attracted 22 entries was zinnias grown by school children from seed distributed through the schools. McMcKee, of the Horticultural Section, Central Experimental Farms, Ottawa, was the judge. During the afternoon tea was served by members of the Women's Institute.

Due to lack of space, the list of prize winners cannot be published in this issue of The Record, but it will appear next week.

Blood Donations Terminated; District Contributors Thanked

With the coming of victory, calls for voluntary blood donations by the Red Cross have come to an end. In appreciation of the splendid work of the Chesterville and District Red Cross in this very urgent work and in thanking the many donors from the district, the following letter has been received by O. L. King from Dr. G. W. Dunning, Chairman of the Mobile Unit Commitee.

August 23, 1945

Dear Mr. King:

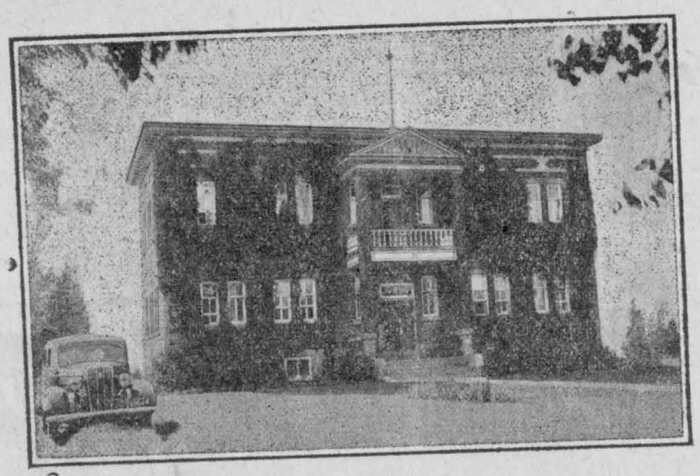

No doubt you already know from the publicity in the press that blood doning throughout the country has ceased, and that the Mobile Unit will not function in the future.

We wish to thank you for your wholehearted cooperation throughout the existence of the Mobile Unit, and sincerely hope that the short notice has not inconvenienced you and your committee. It has been a real pleasure during these arduous years to have worked with such a cooperative and cheerful group throughout the whole Mobile territory. While we are truly thankful that the need for blood and blood serum has ended, we shall miss the opportunity of serving the district and would like to know, if serum and blood are required locally, that we could help in any local organization which would like to carry on the production of blood for local use.

Will you please extend to the various members of the committee our sincere and grateful thanks for all their past labours?

Yours very sincerely,
Dr. G. W. Dunning,
Chairman, Mobile Unit Committee.

WILL CHESTERVILLE PLAN MEMORIAL?

At the Victory celebration in Chesterville, Flt. Lt. P. S. Boyd made an appeal for the erection of a memorial in honour of the men from the village who have given their lives in battle and to the veterans who fought in both world wars.

Monuments, in the accepted sense of the word, have given way to the erection of institutions or buildings that can be used for the instruction and encouragement of the youth of Canada to become good citizens. Many municipalities throughout the Dominion have plans in hand for the erection of such memorials.

As Flt. Lt. Boyd said in his address, there is a crying need in Chesterville for such an institution. There is no place where our young people can gather for healthy recreation and clean fun and they must spend their time on the streets.

To plan and erect a memorial worthy of sacrifices which are its inspiration and of the responsibilities that it will be expected to discharge, will require a good deal of thought. To secure the best within the means of the village, the planning period should not be rushed, but it should be commenced at once now that the victory is ours.

The Record invites correspondence with suggestions as to the type of memorial, the location and method of providing and maintaining it. We have discussed plans with several citizens, and it is hoped they will come forward with their ideas and assist in getting the project underway.

"FITTED FOR SHOEING OXEN"

When looking over the Liverpool, N.S., Advance, a copy of which has been placed in our hands by L. G. Allen, teller of the Bank of Nova Scotia, recently arrived from Liverpool, it caught our eye that W. Walsh of Liverpool announced that he was "Now fitted for the shoeing of oxen". It is doubtful if very many of our citizens have ever seen a yoke of oxen in action, not to say anything about knowing they were shod. About fifteen years ago half of an ox's shoe was ploughed up on the farm of Oscar Foster and has been displayed since that time in the Record Office for the benefit of the rising generation. The mystery of the "nigh" and "off" ox was absorbed by the writer when he was but a gaffer many years ago.

MANY UNDER SUSPICION

Windsor seems to have gone all out in its efforts to run to earth a homicidal maniac supposed to be responsible for three brutal slayings in that city. Already more than one hundred suspects have been rounded up and a number have been subjected to psychiatric examinations without results. The authorities evidently share the hysterical apprehension of the citizens and arrests follow on the merest suspicion. Some years ago a London Ontario policeman was killed by a "peg-leg" bandit and for months almost every "peg-leg" in the province was taken into custody and hurried to the Forest city for examination. Eventually the right man was captured and great relief was experienced by limbless men when Peg-Leg Brown was hanged. A similar procedure in Windsor may end in the locating of the slayer although in this case there is no identifying mark such as a peg leg to aid the police in their search.

PHEASANTS RAISED FOR SHOOTING

For some years past the Ontario Game Department has declared a short open season each year during which men and women are permitted to roam the farmlands of the province and shoot pheasants. Some districts welcome these invaders but in most settled parts the farmers resent the intrusion. It cannot be that hunting pheasants is an exciting pastime as in recent years these beautiful birds have become comparatively tame and during the hard winter seasons have been known to seek shelter with barnyard hens. Last year owing to the severe winter weather and the unusually deep snow the birds were unable to fend for themselves and the Game Department made some provision to supply them with feed to guard against extinction. An organization known as the Niagara District Pheasant Breeders' Association announces that 1,000 pheasants will be released in the district during the balance of the season at two weeks intervals and it is planned to released 7,000 in the entire Niagara peninsula and apparently its aim is to increase the pheasant population so that additional open shooting days will eventually be possible. In Kent County the Rod and Gun Club has already released 1,200 young pheasants. Without desiring to disturb the plans of the Sportsmen of the peninsula there are other parts of Ontario where pheasants find a refuge where a ban on open shooting days might prevent these harmless beautiful creatures from vanishing like the wild pigeons from the land.

MILLIONS OF GALLONS OF BEER

In the old days even the friendly bartender warned against the danger of mixing drinks. The Ontario Liquor Commissioner has different ideas. In announcing that the liquor ration for Ontario is to be doubled he makes it clear that the permit holder may secure one bottle of Rye and one bottle of either gin or rum which are in much freer supply now than whiskey. There will be no change in the beer rations but it is hoped that the easing of the restrictions on liquor will reduce somewhat the demand for beer. At that, this province has had 4,600,000 gallons of beer, an amount far in excess of any previous year in history.

BACK TO STANDARD TIME

Daylight Saving is due to end this month and after being in continuous operation since 1942 the reversion to standard time will be generally welcomed. In the summer months, among the sporting minded at least, daylight saving has its adherents but farmers for the most part have been antagonistic to the measure. All the year daylight saving ostensibly to conserve power for industries was accepted during the war without murmur although rising in the dark in the fall and winter months pressed heavily on women who had to get their men off to work in time and the children ready for school. Apart from June, July and August, Daylight Saving in Ontario, is a bit of misnomer.

WORK HORSES FOR OVERSEAS

Save for the slim limbed animals that carry the fortunes of betters at the race tracks the horse is not highly regarded in Ontario since the advent of the motor car and gas propelled machinery. Its fort in late years has been purely utilitarian and many farmers have gone out of the breeding of equines altogether. This policy in the post-war period may prove to be a mistake. It is announced from Ottawa that Canada has begun large shipments of work horses overseas, several boat loads having gone to France and a contract to supply 5,000 to the Netherlands having been entered into.

MEAT SHORTAGE IN FRANCE.

Nearly all days are "meatless" in France, according to Michael Dumont Director of French Information. In Paris and all large cities the meat ration is equal to one thin slice of boiled ham.

A recent law provides that Sundays and legal holidays are the only days on which beef, mutton, horse or goat meat may be served in public eating places, and then only at the noon meal.

Anaemic effects 50 percent of the children of France; Tuberculosis has increased 40 percent and the infant mortality rate is up 50 percent.

Under the occupation France lost 2,000,000 head of cattle and those that are left are lean and poorly fed. Slaughtering has fallen off from a pre-war average in one abattoir of over 8,000 per day to between 200 and 300. One of the problems in producing better herds is the fact that so many of the fertile parts of France like Normandy, Brittany and Vendee, are so thickly covered with mines that it is impossible to use them for grazing. Every bit of meat Canada shared with the liberated areas of Europe would help to repair the ravages of war and improve the health and well-being of their peoples, the Director of French information emphasized.

BBC BROADCAST FROM THE ZOO AT WHIPSNADE.

For the first time since the beginning of the war a British Broadcasting Corporation programme from the zoo was recently broadcast over a mobile transmitter. "The Zoo Man" (David Seth-Smith) and "Uncle Mac" (Derek McCulloch) were heard broadcasting from Whipsnade, the London Zoological Society's country park.

"Mac" (left) is seen here with the elephant who played a mouth organ during the broadcast and also bellowed greetings over the microphone to the children.

MY CREED

By Howard Arnold Walter

I would be true, for there are those who trust me.
I would be pure, for there are those who care;
I would be strong; for there is much to suffer;
I would be brave, for there is much to dare.
I would be a friend of all—the poor—the friendless;
I would be giving and forget the gift
I would be humble, for I know my weakness;
I would look up—and laugh—and love—and lift.

FIRE PROOF CLOTHING

During the war British scientists discovered a new raw material for textiles called "Algin", which by a hitherto secret process is produced from sea-weed. Details have now leaked out about it. Professor Speaksman of Leeds University has described the history of the new discovery. It is stated that the seaweed around the coasts of Britain contains about 40 percent "Algin", which was formerly used for mixing explosive materials could not be washed, as soap dissolved "Algin". In the textile chemistry laboratory of Leeds University, a process was developed by means of which "Algin" could be woven into a washable, flexible, resistant and completely fireproof material, which could be used in the manufacture of fire-proof clothing.

Simple

The leader of the party visiting a mental institution went up to a group of inmates standing near the gate. Quietly he addressed one of them.

"Why are you all here, my good man?"

The other grinned, pointed to the party, and gave the simple reply: "Because we're not all there."

Illegal Absence From School To Be Reported by Dept.

An official of the Department of National Health and Welfare, Family Allowances, said yesterday his department has enlisted the co-operation of the Ontario Department of Education in reporting "illegal absence" of school children whose parents receive the family allowance.

One of the clauses of the Family Allowances Act requires children whose parents are recipients of the allowance attend school up to the age of 16 or receive equivalent education in trades, agriculture or other training.

The spokesman said education authorities have been asked to inform public school inspectors of the clause and to guard against illegal absence of pupils at cost of their parents losing the family allowance.

TO MY MOTHER

What friends we've always been, my dear, together all these years; we've shared so many little joys, so many hopes and fears. You sheltered me at first from life, when I, too young to fend, would stumble, and would find you there, an ever-present friend. How often when some childish fear brought terror as I lay, your kindly voice would comfort me and chase my fears away. Could you but make my path less hard, no chance was ever lost; my welfare was your constant thought no matter what the cost. As I look back along the years, I cannot help but see how little thought you gave yourself, and yet, how much for me. The wise advice you gave so often helps me through; I know I never can repay the debt I owe to you. And now, though in these troubled times our ways lie far apart, no one can ever take the place that you hold in my heart. When I thank God for all the things that He has designed to send, I thank Him most for giving me so good and true a friend.

Programme Now Complete Chesterville Fair Sept. 4, 5

Featured by the Dundas County Black and White Championships and the added attraction of a night performance, Chesterville Fair, the 14th annual exhibition of the Chesterville and District Agricultural Society, should draw record crowds this year on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 4th and 5th.

Prize lists were distributed last week by the secretary, Eric Casselman, of Chesterville. The list, with the special prizes, cover most classes of light and heavy horses, Holstein, Ayrshire and Jersey cattle, sheep, poultry and grain.

An interesting feature is again repeated for the junior farmers, the Chesterville Boys Dairy Calf Club. A special prize of $1.50 will be awarded each member who has his or her calf on display at the Achievement Day.

Special consideration is shown this year in the grain class due to the unusual season. The barley class has been changed to mixed grain, to be judged on the quality of the grain regardless of the percentage of oats or barley.

The first day is given over to the children, "all-for-free." Wednesday afternoon also features two trials of speed, with prizes totalling $300 divided between the Free-For-All and 2.25 class.

The night show includes jugglers, ventriloquists, entertainers, midway, merry-go-round, merry-mix-up, and will be presented in front of the grandstand. If the weather proves unfavorable, the show will be given in the Community Hall preceding the dance.

It happened at the ship's store of a naval station. A young sailor was patiently waiting his turn to buy a present for his wife, who is a navy nurse. A navy wife elbowed her way ahead of him in the line.

"Beg pardon, madam, I got here first."

The woman drew herself up, "My husband is an officer," she snapped.

"What rank?"

"Ensign."

"Sorry," said the sailor, stepping ahead. "My wife's a lieutenant."

A Young Diplomat

One cold day last winter, when newsboys were to be seen pushing business in the streets, a lady bought a paper from one sad-looking little chap.

"Aren't you very cold?" she asked, sympathetically.

"I was ma'am," he replied, "before you smiled!"

Funeral Held Saturday For Dr. D. S. MacDougall, Russell

THE WARTIME PRICES AND TRADE BOARD

FARMERS' BULLETIN

HUNGRY EUROPE NEEDS MEAT

The shortage of food in liberated Europe is desperate. Meat is one of the most critical needs.

As a great food-producing nation, Canada must, can—and will—help to meet this emergency.

That is why slaughtering has been placed under strict control.

That is why ration coupons will soon be used again by Canadians to buy meat.

There is only one objective:—To reduce meat consumption in Canada in order to provide direct aid for the hungry peoples of Europe.

Slaughter Control

Farmers who slaughter meat for their own or their farmer neighbor's use are required to submit monthly reports (Form RB-61) and to surrender coupons for the meat they use and sell.

Any excess of meat over the farmer's or his neighbor's needs may be sold only to the holder of a regular slaughter permit.

The minimum amount which a farmer may sell to such a permit holder is one quarter of beef or half a hog carcass. Sheep, lambs or calves slaughtered by a farmer for his own or his neighbor's use may not be sold into the meat trade.

Locker Operators

Under the meat rationing regulations, locker operators are required to submit a list of their patrons to the nearest Ration Branch Office.

A supply of Consumer Declaration forms is being forwarded to each locker operator who will, in turn, distribute them to his patrons. The patron is responsible for completing the form and filing it with the Ration Branch Office.

Consumers must surrender coupons for all meat held in lockers over and above 4 lbs. for each person in the household at a rate of 2 lbs. per coupon. However, no more than 50% of the "M" coupons in the ration books of the consumer and his household need be surrendered.

MEAT RATIONING FACTS

Amount of Ration will be roughly 2 lbs. (carcass weight) per person, per week.

Rationed Meats. All cooked, canned, fancy and "red" meats.

Unrationed Meats—beef brain, head, tail, blood, tripe; calf brain, head; pork brain, head, tail, pigfeet, spare ribs; lamb brain, head, tail, fries; poultry, game and fish (canned or fresh).

Coupons—brown "M" coupons in Ration Book No. 5. One coupon will become valid each week.

Coupon Values—Group "A", 1 lb. per coupon; Group "B", 1½ lbs. per coupon; Group "C", 2 lbs. per coupon; Group "D", 2½ lbs. per coupon; Group "E", 3 lbs. per coupon.

Tokens. Tokens, eight of which are equivalent to one coupon, will be used as coupon change.

Farmers must turn in to their Local Ration Boards a coupon for each 4 lbs. of meat (carcass weight) they use in their households from their own slaughterings. So that they may buy other meats from their butchers, no more than one-half of the valid coupons in the hands of the farmer and his household need be surrendered. Farmers who sell meat to a neighbour farmer must collect coupons at the rate of 4 lbs. (carcass weight) per coupon.

Rationing Is your assurance of a fair share.
Is a protection against waste . . . shortages . . . inflation.

That is why farmers are asked to continue to collect and turn in coupons to their Local Ration Boards—once a month—in the RB-61 envelope.

How to Restore Wild Life

By E. Newton-White

The term "wild-life" is here given a loose and quite unscientific meaning to denote the animals, birds, fish, insects and so on, which to the layman are the opposite numbers of the vegetable life of the wilderness. Not the least virtue of this natural resource is that it can exist among all the rest without diminishing them, claiming the sole right to nothing. So far as human needs are concerned wild life is a subsidiary yield of the main forest and wild land areas, of farm, forests, pastures and fence rows, private and community woodlands, and all waters and marshes; in brief, it is a universal yield. Its forms are fur, food. sport, recreation and pest control. Those who directly benefit are the trapper, settler, farmer, hunter, general recreationist, fisherman, manufacturer and caterer.

Wild-life is not a long-term crop like trees; intensive action under a national conservation policy could have much of it in good yield in a comparatively short space of time; and as part of such a policy it can become a strong reconstruction force. The restoration of wild-life as a Canadian task is very largely a matter of protection and public education not construction. The ordinary course of conservation work in forestry. agriculture, water control and land use, would automatically provide nearly all the demands of wild-life in food and shelter; and there is still a capital stock—though sadly depleted—of most of the more valuable species, ready to respond to cultural and protective treatment.

The resource itself can be divided for our purpose into three divisions: that of the forest and wild lands, that of waters and marshes, and that of farm lands; and it should be realized that here is actually our most important form of land use, there being almost no water and no land which is not capable of some production. The special Canadian opportunity of creating our enormous extent of wild land and fresh water into the wild-life reservoir of the continent is nothing more or less than a national issue.

The reconstruction importance of wild life restoration lies in its essential quality of yielding means of income and subsistence from non-agricultural land. In the growing forest it provides a small interim yield while timber production is being awaited, and assists in keeping a small population on the spot for forestry work, timber cutting and touristing. On plains, marshlands, and barrens, wild-life can be built up to provide a definite and permanent base of population in conjunction with the fur and commercial fishing industries. As a source of fur production and of food it is above all to be developed for the support of the more primitive communities.

An important sphere of wild-life as sport, fur and food lies in farming and mixed land areas, or wherever land lies in private ownership. The wild-life which makes its more or less permanent home on a limited area should, while it stays there, be given all possible recognition as the property of the land-owner, so that private wild-life management can be made practicable and attractive. For the "fugitive" animals and birds which wander and migrate, community systems of management and protection are quite possible so that the highest yields of all kinds can be made available to the residents who participate.

Wild fur restoration has many reconstruction values; an instance being where fishing communities on a coast with a wild land interior can develop the inland fur resources as an auxiliary occupation. But trapping as a sole occupation must be as residential as farming for the conservation of fur animals is a matter of dealing with individual animal families, the same principle as in forestry which is a matter of dealing with individual trees. It is this requirement which makes conservative fur getting so appropriate a sideline occupation for any resident landowners and woods-dwellers.

In wild-life as a food supply its greatest value can be its provision of subsistence, as an auxiliary to cash returns from employment and services, for various classes of people on the wild land and sparsely populated areas. Such will be the native races, farmers and settlers in wooded country, communities solely engaged in rebuilding forest resources, and a new class of woods residents in forest communities. Just what place certain forms of wild-life might take as a food supply for the general market if developed under a conservation system, is perhaps not for discussion here. According to the extent to which Canada is again to become an immigration field, a vast resource is awaiting development as a population base.

In wild-life as a resource of sport—hunting and fishing—little can be added to the arguments or emphasis already placed on its food supply values. Obviously,a country definitely engaged in husbandry of wild animals, waterfowl, game birds and fish, must incidentally yield the finest of sporting facilities. In times of peace and prosperity, values in this direction can run high. The worth, for instance, of a sportsman—whether he carry gun, rod or only a camera—as represented by his spendings from the time he leaves home until he arrives back again, and whether he originates in Canada or from across the line. Conversely, the value of a bear or a moose or a trout is something to be expressed in dollars no less than a thousand feet of lumber, a cord of wood or a bag of wheat. In contrast to the present situation, there need be no conflict between the use of bird, beast or fish as food or sport, for the possibilities are so large that both may be provided within reason—subject only to the dictates of wise use.

Productive Pastures

By: John D. MacLeod, Director,
Crops, Weeds and Seed Branch,
Ontario Department of Agriculture,

The progressive livestock farmer is always concerned with the problem of lowering the cost of producing livestock and livestock products without sacrificing quality. This can be accomplished by improving pasture which is our cheapest feed crop.

In addition to producing digestible nutrients at lower cost than any other crop on the farm, a well-managed pasture has the following advantages —it maintains livestock for five or six months of the year at low feed and labor cost; milk and beef are produced 50 to 75 percent cheaper on pasture than under winter feeding conditions; pasture is digested 83% hay only 52 percent; pasture is our cheapest source of protein—16 to 25 percent, which is about twice as much as that in the same grain cut for hay; no loss of food nutrients from curing, which in hay amounts to 40 to 50 percent; high in essential minerals which are easily assimilated from grass in the young stage, and in essential vitamins (an excellent source of all the vitamins needed for efficient production and reproduction); pasture sod prevents erosion, adds fibre and organic matter and improves the soil structures.

Type of farming, soil and climatic conditions and length of time the field is to be left in sod are factors which must be considered when planning pasture crops to be sown. Where possible the mixture should contain some deep-rooted legumes which help to maintain soil fertility and drought resistant grasses which will provide grazing during the dry summer period. A well-balanced mixture is recommended for the following reasons —grasses and clover vary widely in their ability to withstand soil and climatic conditions, therefore when only one species is sown the results may be good or bad. Moreover, each species has its peak production period, and produces little in "off" seasons. By sowing a suitable mixture a thicker stand is obtained and this naturally results in a heavier yield and more uniform grazing throughout the growing season. Cattle always prefer a mixture and thrive better on it than when grazing upon either grass or clover alone. The variety of herbage provided increases both palatability and nutrient value. There is less tendency for cattle to bloat, a condition which frequently occurs when they are grazed on legumes alone, than when grasses are included in the mixture with clovers.

Pasture crops may be divided into four groups—annual or supplementary pastures, one to two years; short term hay-pastures, two to four years; long term pastures, four to ten years and permanent or unworkable pastures which will remain in sod for an indefinite period. Rye, oats and sweet clover, and Sudan grass have proved best for annual or supplementary pasture. Sudan grass sown alone or in combination with oats has proved particularly good during that hot, dry period in July and August when other pasture crops are not so productive. In planning a hay-pasture mixture, it is recommended that a few pounds of such seeds as Orchard grass and Parkland Brome are included, in order to add leafiness and feeding value to the hay crop and to make a thicker bottom for pasture. When planning a long-term pasture, it is advisable to sow only grasses and clovers which are persistent and remain productive over a period of years. Much heavier rates of seeding are also advisable in order to produce and maintain a thick stand.

It is essential that the seed bed be in a high state of fertility, well drained, reasonably free from weeds and well prepared. A fine, firm seed bed will permit shallow seeding, maintain moisture and enable young seedlings to establish a firm root. Only adapted seed of good quality, high germination and free from noxious weeds should be sown.

The seed should be thoroughly mixed before seeding and should not be sown more than one-quarter to one-half inch deep on heavy soils and one-half to one inch deep on lighter soils. The most common and usually most convenient practice is to seed the mixture in the spring with a nurse crop, preferably of early oats and not too heavy.

To produce and maintain a good pasture requires a higher level of soil fertility than for most other crops. Moisture, permitting, pastures grow from early spring to late autumn—five to six months of the year, hence they are continually drawing on soil fertility. When the fertility level drops, the clovers and the more productive grasses are succeeded by less desirable species and weeds. All pasture crops require nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. Nitrogen is essential for promoting the growth of grasses while phosphorus and potash encourage the growth of clovers, therefore if the pasture consists largely of grasses a high nitrogen fertilizer is advisable. If clovers predominate, the fertilizer should contain high percentages of phosphorus and potash. Soil tests will indicate the relative amounts of each to supply. Lime where required should also be applied. The best time to apply fertilizer on pastures is in late September and early October. The next best time is in early spring before seeding commences. Late spring and early summer applications seldom produce satisfactory results unless the season is very moist. One of the chief causes of poor pastures is low fertility. Five to ten loads of manure applied every two to three years will easily double the grazing capacity of a pasture.

In the case of fields which have been seeded to a short-term hay and pasture mixture, it will probably be found advisable not to pasture the new seeding until the following year, unless the crop is unusually strong.

In the case of long-term pastures, grazing may be permitted eight to ten weeks after date of seeding; in fact, this is desirable as tramping of soil around young plants will assist them in establishing a strong root. Close grazing is recommended to prevent coarse growth and thus keep the herbage in as palatable and nutritious a condition as possible. If there is too much growth for the available live stock to graze uniformly or if it becomes weedy or patchy, it should be mown. Mowing when the grasses are just beginning to head out will prevent an aftermath of tender nutritious herbage as well as prevent a coarse stand of mature plants. The livestock will consume much of the mown grass on the field.

Rotational grazing by dividing the field into sections will permit rotating the stock from section to section and is sound practice. The electric fence provides an economical method of controlled grazing. Do not graze too early in the spring or too late in the fall, and do not undergraze in June or overgraze during July and August. The idea to aim at is not to graze the pasture any faster than it grows. The practice of turning cattle out in pasture when the sod is soft and before the sward becomes established may result in hoof damage and pulling out of young plants, and should therefore be discouraged.

The pasture should never be eaten bare, and should go into the winter with at least three or four inches of top growth. It should be harrowed in the spring and again in the fall to spread dried manure, clear away the dead grass and aerate the roots, using the chain harrow or drag harrow turned upside down. Open ditches and drains should be cleaned out in the fall in order to remove surface water.

The purchase of Victory Bonds and the establishment of more productive pastures are investments which will prove profitable for the individual farmer.

Championship Victory Garden Helps Feed Family of 18

NEAR-PERFECT SCORE: The 200 by 50 foot plot (above), which has been adjudged the best victory garden on the Island of Montreal this year, helps feed the eight grown children and eight grand-children of Joseph Totta (inset), section foreman for the Canadian Pacific Railway at Montreal West. Totta works an hour before going on duty at 7 a.m. and three hours after quitting time at 4 p.m. in growing 22 different vegetables, many of which Mrs. Totta canned or put down, as her share in supplementing the commercially grown vegetable supply needed to alleviate the food shortage in Europe. Judges for The Montreal Star contest which Totta won, called his garden "without doubt the finest vegetable garden ever entered in the competition" and gave him 28 out of a possible 30 points for quality. They looked in vain for weeds and pests and particularly remarked on his four-inch-deep cultivation, a valuable aid to moisture conservation.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Less meat calls for more skill on your part. Once again a fairer method of distributing the available supply has replaced the rule of first come first served. In our opinion, homemakers will have to 'stretch' their meat more than ever before. The Mixing Bowl suggests a greater use of other protein-rich foods to make your coupons go farther. When you do serve meat cook it carefully.

TAKE A TIP

1. Remember that meat is a protein food which aids body building and tissue repairing. Other foods which contain value are milk, cheese, eggs, fish, lentils, dried peas, dried beans and corn.

2. Serve a rich dressing with smaller portions of meat. Use skim milk and cheese with crumbs to add protein value to the dressing.

3. Serve casserole dishes containing peas, beans and whole-grained cereals.

4. Serve rich soups with protein foods added. Creamed soups are a good addition to a low-protein menu.

5. Add cream sauces to main courses.

.6 Cheese used in sauces, salads, boiled vegetables and casseroles adds flavour and goodness.

MEATLESS DISHES.

Cheese loaf; Macaroni and cheese; Cheese omlette; Polenta cheese; Eggs a la King; Eggs goldenrod; Eggs lyonnaise; Bean Timbales; Baked beans; Split Pea mould; Bean-tomato Casserole; Creamed Vegetables; Peanut Butter fondue; Mushroom chop suey; Rice and grilled tomatoes; Egg noodles; Jellied vegetables with egg slices; Scrambled Eggs; Corn pudding; Lima bean casseroles; Thick cream soups; Creamed potatoes with hard-cooked eggs; Scalloped potatoes with cheese; Melba toast and chicken livers; Sphaghetti-tomatoes and cornbread; Oatmeal and peanut topped casserole; and vegetable plates.

Fish—Breaded, baked with dressing, fried, scalloped, in batter, in casserole, in loaf dishes, in vegetable and biscuit pie, with rice and with chips.

THE SUGGESTION BOX

It is important to cook meat carefully to prevent shrinkage and toughening. A meat chart listing the different cuts with corresponding cooking times and temperatures takes the guess-work out of roasting meat.

1. Veal should be cooked longer and more slowly than beef. Since it has less fat than most meats and has not much flavour some fat should be added while cooking.

2. Veal chops and veal cutlets may be coated with flour or egg and crumbs before cooking to help prevent loss of moisture.

3. Braising has been considered the best method for cooking veal but roasting in an uncovered pan in an insulated electric oven is quite satisfactory.

4. Roasting pieces of veal should be placed in a preheated oven at 300 deg.; allow 40 mins. per pound, or roast until meat thermometer registers 180 degs.

5. Every lamb cut, except the flank and neck, should be tender enough to broil or roast. Roasting temperature should be 300 degrees, allowing 38 mins. per lb. or the internal temperature according to meat thermometer should register 170 deg.

6. The fell—the thin, outer covering of the lamb carcass—should be left on the leg of the lamb, because it helps to keep the juices in and holds the meat in shape for easier carving.

7. The melting point of lamb or mutton fat is high and it is rather unpalatable if served lukewarm.

8. Pork should be cooked to the well-done stage, because the flavour is better when it is so cooked and because thorough cooking will destroy parasites which are found in undercooked pork. Roasting pieces of pork should be cooked in a pre-heated oven at 350 degrees allowing 40 mins. per pound or until temperature of meat thermometer reads 185 degs.

9. High oven temperatures for roasting beef affect the flavour and juiciness of meat and cause greater losses by shrinkage. We are assured that good browning can be achieved by searing the meat for a few mins. in a shallow pan placed over a surface element turned High before it is cooked in a preheated oven at a constant temperature of 350 degs allowing 35 mins. per pound for a well-done roast. To cook small roasts medium-rare allow 32 mins. per lb. to obtain maximum number of servings. For rare beef allow 20 mins. per lb. at 350 degs. or cook until meat thermometer registers 140 degs.

Note: Insert a meat thermometer in the centre of the roast, not touching bone or fat.
