Face to Face

OR, GERVASE RICKMAN'S AMBITION.

CHAPTER VI.

The memory of that scene weighed like a lasting nightmare upon Edward Annesley's troubled heart. When he entered his aunt's presence he expected something painful, but nothing terrible; he thought to see a bereaved mother, he found a tigress robbed of her cubs. All the fierceness in her nature blazed up at the sight of him, a grim joy possessed her at the opportunity of denouncing him as the cause of her loss; for where other women grieved, this one raged.

He could only stand silent before the storm, doing mute homage to her age, her sex, and her bitter sorrow; pained by the sight of a passion so like that he had witnessed a few hours since in one whose passions were now forever stilled, and hoping that her frenzy would exhaust itself, that she might at least accept some kind words from him, if nothing more.

That which silently gnawed his heart was bad enough without spoken reproach; her words burned into him like molten metal, and left life-long wounds. In everything, she said, he had supplanted her son; he had secretly stolen the heart of Alice from Paul while openly trifling with Sibyl, whose life he had marred. And now he had driven Paul to his death that he might snatch his inheritance. Let him take that inheritance with the curse attached to it, and a yet more withering curse on to that, the curse of a childless widow. She asked him how a strong and active man like her son could, if alone, slip and fall beyond recovery. She told him that the reproach of having survived him would cling to him and blight his happiness for life.

All this she said in the fewest, most cutting words, without agitation, with a deep, full voice, standing erect and immovable, with a hard brilliance in her cold blue eyes, and when she had finished, she bid him go and come near her no more.

He hesitated, looking silently at her stern, tearless face, in which he saw such bitter anger that he thought the shock must have made her beside herself. He hoped that what she said was half unconscious, and would be forgotten when she came to herself. Nevertheless, the barbed words struck home, and her cold, immovable calm impressed him with a horror he could not shake off, and seeing that his presence only irritated her, he withdrew with some expressions of regret for her condition, and a hope that he should find her calmer on the morrow.

Mrs. Annesley laughed a hard laugh, and said quietly that she never had been and never should be calmer than at that moment, which was perfectly true. But when the door had closed upon him, and her gaze fell upon some trifle that Paul had given her, the calm deserted her, a sense of her bitter bereaval took hold of her, the memory of a thousand stormy scenes in which she had wounded her only son rose up accusingly before her, and she sobbed and moaned, and felt herself to be the most miserable woman upon earth.

Edward left her, feeling as if he had just been cast naked into a pit of scorpions, scarce knowing what he did or whither he went. He and she alone knew how the scar came upon Paul's face; she had looked when that occurred as she looked now. He wondered if he could be the same man who had left the gypsy party at the river's source a few hours before and had stepped lightly along the rocky path in the sunshine, singing in the lightness of his heart.

He met Sibyl in the corridor, and she, seeing the misery in his face, gave way to one of those guileless impulses she never could resist, and laid her hand gently on his arm.

"Dear Mr. Annesley," she said, in her clear light voice, "I am so sorry for you. All this must be so painful."

He said nothing, but kissed the hand she had given him, and passed on with a full heart. Sibyl alone condoled with him on that day's work, he reflected, and then the barbed arrow of his aunt's suggestion about her rankled in his heart.

He went into the sitting-room, where his sister lay on a couch with Alice sitting by her side.

By this time it was dark night, the lonely village was asleep, only the hotel lights still burned, and even they were gradually dying out; but the Annesley party did not yet dream of going to rest, they were waiting and watching for the return of the searchers with their tragic burden.

Alice sat in the shadow; she had only seen Edward once since the meeting under the pine-trees, and she had then observed, in the brief glance she caught of him, that the edelweiss was removed from his hat.

The sight of her stirred Edward with a feeling akin to pain—a mysterious something bid him fly from her; for the pity and terror of Paul's untimely fate had reared a barrier between them, insurmountable for the time. It seemed an unfair advantage over the dead man, even to recall his assurance that there was no chance of his winning her, or to consider the meaning of the passion in Alice's voice, when she cried upon Paul in her sudden remorse in the wood: "Oh, Paul, Paul! If I had but known!"

She was very calm now, though he could not see her face in the shadow; but calmness, he knew well, was no index to the depth of her sorrow; it was her nature in joy and grief to command herself. Yet he thought she wished to avoid him.

"Have you been to auntie, Ned?" asked Eleanor, starting up at his step.

"Yes," he answered, heavily, and he sat down and gazed blankly before him.

"Nellie," said Alice, "do you think you could go to your aunt?"

"She had better not," replied Edward, quickly; "it would be too painful for her."

"But Mrs. Annesley must not be left alone," said Alice, with some reproach in her voice. "I am afraid your interview has been trying, Mr. Annesley—but how could it be otherwise? Is she no calmer?"

"I believe," returned Edward, slowly, "that she is out of her mind."

"Poor soul! Then I will go to her at once," said Alice, rising.

"She is better alone, Miss Lingard," interposed Edward, hastily; "pray don't subject yourself to anything so dreadful. She is not accountable for what she says now—no one must believe what she says—her grief must have its way. Her maid is at hand. Pray, Miss Lingard." He even barred the way when she would have left the room, and held the door shut behind him, until a pressure from without caused him to open it and disclose the figure of Gervase, who had seen his meeting with Sibyl a few moments before.

"Alice is right," Gervase said, on hearing the cause of dispute; "Mrs. Annesley is not fit to be left alone; it would be cruel. Nellie is too young, and just now too unwell, and Sibyl—well, Sibyl could not be what Alice is to her."

Alice therefore went, with every word that Edward had just uttered so hastily and brokenly sinking permanently into her memory. Mrs. Annesley roused herself at the sight of her to repeat the denunciation of Edward, in tones of sorrowful conviction this time.

Alice, inwardly trembling, did what she could to soothe the now terribly agitated woman, and bid her consider before accusing Edward in the hearing of others, thankful that, as she supposed, she alone had as yet heard anything.

"Dear Mrs. Annesley," she remonstrated, "you imply that he had a hand in your son's death when you speak so."

"Alice," replied Mrs. Annesley, quietly and coldly, "do you know where Edward was at the moment of Paul's fall?"

"No," she replied, simply; "how should I?"

"How, indeed?" repeated Mrs. Annesley, setting her lips hard; "that is what no one knows or ever will know."

"It is very simple, dear," said Alice; "we will ask him."

"Ask him!" returned Mrs. Annesley, with terrible scorn—"ask him yourself, Alice."

Then her mood changed, and she suddenly fell to weeping, staying herself upon Alice.

"Oh, Alice! Alice!" she cried, "my poor child loved you—he loved you!" and their tears mingled, and the bitterness seemed to pass away.

Paul's body was never found. They waited and watched in vain that night. Alice thought that if she could look once more upon his dead face, and press one repentant kiss upon the cold brow that could never more thrill with passion, even at the touch of her lips, she would be happier and perhaps lose the unreasoning remorse which troubled her now.

The current was strong at the spot where he fell; the bursting of an Alpine thunder-storm about an hour after the accident increased the difficulty of the search which was quickly instituted. There were good reasons why the body, if discovered by chance, should be concealed again. Paul wore a valuable watch, and had a good deal more money than prudent people care to carry about in his pocket, and, as it was ascertained that he had not given the diamonds into the jeweller's charge before leaving Neufchatel, and they were not found among his effects, it was inferred that they, too, were upon him.

Edward passed some weary weeks in Switzerland, a time of fruitless search for the missing body, and of apparently endless formalities with regard to the death, a time which he spent entirely apart from his aunt, who refused to see him and only communicated with him through Gervase and her other lawyers. Then he returned to England, the gainer of a great inheritance that he did not want, burdened with responsibilities and rich with opportunities that he had never coveted and would gladly have renounced in exchange for the sunny peace of mind he enjoyed when travelling on the rail through the mountains only a few weeks earlier.

Mrs. Annesley stayed on some little time after his departure before she went home, a white-haired, broken-hearted woman. Alice Lingard, the only creature to whom she now showed any affection, remained with her, surrounding her with tender cares, and trying to soften the bitter blow which had fallen upon her. Sibyl and Eleanor had returned to their respective homes immediately after the accident; the two women were thus alone with their loss, and the elder entreated the younger to make her home with her, and remain with her altogether to cheer her desolation.

But Alice, without refusing absolutely to entertain this proposal, said that it was too early yet to form any definite plans; they would wait and consider, and decide nothing till the healing hand of Time had wrought some comfort in Mrs. Annesley's stricken heart.

CHAPTER VII.

A short time before they left the village in the Jura, Alice one day gathered some late autumn flowers and bound them together, and Gervase Rickman, who had remained with Mrs. Annesley, journeying backward and forward on business connected with Paul's death, asked her for what purpose she had gathered them.

"I am going for a long walk," she replied, evasively, and she did not ask him to accompany her; but he saw her go in the direction of the path which wound along the river's rocky bank toward its source, and presently he went the same way with a view to meeting her, as if by accident.

"That old woman will be the death of her if this goes on much longer," he said to himself, glad that he had urged his father and mother to call her back to Arden.

It was now October; the hush of the solemn autumn lay upon the mountain pastures and the fading, dreaming woods, and although, lower down in the warm valleys and sheltered folds of the mountain, some grapes still remained glowing in the hot sunshine in the vineyards, and the country was alive with the songs and shouts of the vintagers, and full of the mellow, intoxicating odor of crushed grapes, up there on the green Jura slopes the frosts had been keen and the winds chill. But on this afternoon all was peace; the sun shone warmly with a last, relenting glow before the unchaining of the winter tempests, and Alice was glad to lose herself in the beauty of the quiet season.

She made her way through the wood in which she had rested shortly before she had heard the heavy tidings of Paul's death a month since, and, though the way was long, did not pause until she reached the spot upon the cliff's edge where he slipped and fell on that unfortunate day. There she rested, looking down into the green waters, now turbid from the heavy equinoctial rains, and thought it all over. Then she took the flowers, and threw them carefully down the cliff, so that they might clear the trees and bushes which grew here and there in the unevennesses and clefts in the rocky wall, and fall into the river, where she watched them swerve with the current and float down the stream, till a jutting buttress of rock hid them from her gaze. Just so Paul's lifeless body must have been borne away. It seemed as if her heart went with the flowers and sunk in the waters forever with the body of her ill-starred lover.

Her face was worn with care, there were dark hollows beneath her eyes; the shadow of Mrs. Annesley's grief lay heavily upon her youth; it was crushing all the brightness out of her, and besides that, she carried the heavy burden of an unspoken fear within her, and waged a daily, wasting warfare with a suspicion that grew stronger from the combat. She had ceased openly to rebut Mrs. Annesley's accusations of her nephew, but nevertheless the continual allusions made by the latter told upon her. She learned now of the long rivalry between the cousins, dangerous half truths; she heard of a quarrel at Medington, though not of the agreement in which it terminated.

Paul had himself betrayed his jealousy of Edward in that unfortunate boat scene; the distant and almost hostile terms on which the cousins were, had been evident to the whole party. Alice knew something of Paul's temper; she knew well what maddening things he could say when his blood was stirred to white heat; she could well imagine that Edward's temper, though sweet enough, would give way before Paul's cutting sarcasms, and betray him into what was foreign to his nature at calmer times. But why had he chosen the tortuous course of concealment, which the words she overheard him say by the river implied?

She could not forgive him that; a man capable of that was not to be trusted, nor was one stained with so dark a thing as homicide worth the thought she was wasting on him. The reproach was already beginning to work upon Annesley.

When Alice had been sitting thus, brooding on these disquieting thoughts a good twenty minutes, during which some of the autumn peace had stolen into her heart, her mournful reverie was broken by the appearance of Gervase Rickman.

"This is not a good place for you," he said, with gentle rebuke; "I am glad you will soon be far away."

"It is a farewell visit," she replied, looking up, her eyes bright with rising tears. "Come and sit on this rock, and tell me exactly what you saw on that day. When I have seen it all in imagination clearly before me, I shall brood less upon it, perhaps."

He sat down at her bidding, and looked wistfully at her, wishing she would ask him anything else, meaning to ask her to spare him the pain of the narration, reflecting that she would think such shrinking on his part unmanly, longing vainly to be saved from a temptation he knew to be beyond his strength.

"Tell me all," she repeated, seeing that he hesitated; "it will do me good."

So he took up his tale, and said that he had followed the two cousins from the river's source on the day of Paul's death, partly to see what had become of Paul, who had left them for no apparent purpose, partly to help Edward to find some means of carrying Nellie down to Bourget; that, as he approached the spot in which they were now sitting, where the ground was broken, and sloped suddenly down to the cliff's edge, he heard a cry, and running up, saw Paul clinging to the birch-tree beneath them, the snapped trunk of which showed that it had given way beneath his weight. He saw the tree bound and rebound, before it finally snapped, and Paul fell into the water, and was seen no more. It was his opinion at the time that Paul, who could not swim, had been killed or disabled by striking on the rocky bed of the stream. He called and ran for help, which he found in the shape of some men at work higher up. Edward Annesley then appeared upon the scene. That was the whole story.

"Why did Mr. Annesley not appear sooner, when Paul cried for help?" asked Alice, quietly.

"That I am unable to explain," Gervase returned, dryly; "perhaps he did not hear."

"Then why did he come at all?"

"Perhaps he heard, but was too far off to arrive sooner."

"Gervase," said Alice, turning and looking him full in the face; "you are not telling me the whole truth."

He was obliged to meet her gaze for a moment; but immediately averted his gaze and breathed quickly, not knowing what to say.

"You are concealing something," she repeated.

"There are occasions, Alice," he replied, "on which one is bound in honor to be silent."

Then she remembered the promise she had overheard, and her heart grew faint.

"It may be right for you to be silent," she returned, "but only if you have promised."

"Alice," continued Gervase, earnestly, "unless you wish to do Edward Annesley harm, you had better not enter too closely into details."

"I don't believe it," she replied, vehemently; "truth will not harm him, but concealment may."

"Well! I can only repeat what I say: if you wish to injure him, the means are at hand."

Alice plucked a spray of juniper which grew near, and tore it to pieces in agitated silence.

"It is curious," reflected Gervase, "that reigning princes are always at war with heirs apparent. The Annesleys were the best of friends till this ill-fated inheritance fell to Paul."

"Do you think that set them at variance?"

"Undoubtedly. But Paul had another cause of strife; he was jealous, you know how causelessly, of Edward. Paul never could understand how meaningless are half a dozen sugared words from a military man, accustomed to two flirtations a week on an average. He could still less understand that a man who means nothing can be jealous from vanity. He was thoroughly loyal, poor fellow!"

"He was, indeed," Alice replied, absently. She was thinking, with a sinking heart, that she must forget Edward, since he had never cared for her, as Gervase, so good a reader of character, plainly saw, and with brotherly affection and delicate tact pointed out to her. She was thinking, with still deeper pain, that silence with regard to that fatal hour upon the banks of the Doubs was the greatest kindness Edward's friends could show him; his own words on that afternoon as well as Gervase's present hints were witnesses to that. How blinded she had been to his true character by the glamor of her unasked love! How little she had dreamed that the very failing she censured so severely in Paul, want of self-control, was that of the man she preferred before him; the evil heritage of the Annesleys showing itself, not, as in the slain man, in an unbridled surrender of himself to his loves and likings, but in an inability to master the anger Paul's sarcasm and unwarrantable jealousy must have kindled in him. Paul was headlong and uncurbed in love, and thus lost her; Edward was evidently headlong and uncurbed in wrath. She repudiated a yet darker motive on the part of the heir to so rich a property, a motive urged by Mrs. Annesley in moments of confidence; the worst thing to be attributed to Edward probably was yielding to a passionate impulse that circumstances made criminal. She looked at Gervase, and realized that, slight as her strength was comparatively, a vigorous push on her part would send him beyond recovery over the verge, on that broken and mossy ground; she pictured two men walking or standing there, and saw that only blind passion or criminal inattention could ignore the fatal issue of a blow in such a spot. And passion so blind, so reckless of consequence, amounted to crime. What an inheritance this man had gained! his heart must indeed be hard if he ever derived any satisfaction from a thing won at so terrible a cost. Her heart went out in pity to him, but she hoped that she was incapable of any warmer feeling for such a man. Yet the pity was so strong that it blanched her face, and set her lip quivering in spite of herself.

"Leave me," she said, turning to Gervase, with dimmed eyes; "let me be a few minutes. If you like to wait in the wood, I can overtake you."

He rose at once and left her, with that quiet air of sympathetic tact which was so distinctive of him, and Alice shaded her face with her hand and watched the turbid waters flowing past. She knew that there could be no more happiness for Edward Annesley in this world unless his heart were quite hard and bad, as few human hearts are; and she could not think him very bad, hardly as others might judge the man she had been upon the verge of loving. She sat gazing on the river till the hot tears quite blinded her, seeing all her youth and hope borne away upon the green waters which had engulfed Paul Annesley. She wondered how people managed to live whose hopes were broken; she had heard of maimed lives dragging themselves painfully along through weary, sunless years; she tried to summon her courage to meet such a fate, but it seemed all to soon yet to piece the broken fragments of her life together. She wept on till she almost wept her heart out. Then she grew calm, the mighty peace which brooded over the sunshiny afternoon, with its careless midges fated to die in an hour, its humming-bees busy in the ivy blossom, and its pigeons fluttering out from the great sombre silent pines, once more touched her heart, and a still mightier peace than even that of Nature sunk into it. She felt that a life so broken as hers might be put to some nobler, more unselfish purpose than one in which the music had never been marred. To blend those broken chords into some diviner harmoney would henceforth give her soul courage and purpose.

And Edward? She could only pray for him. Perhaps that strong feeling so near akin to love had been given her that sacrificial incense might not be wanting on his behalf, though he should fail to offer it himself, as was just and due.

She rose and rejoined Gervase in the wood below with a serene face and eyes full of spiritual exaltation. He looked at her for a moment and saw that she had been crying; then he averted his glance and offered her a bunch of late-blooming heather he had found in a sheltered crevice. She fixed it in the black dress she wore in memory of Paul, scarcely acknowledging an attention that was so usual with him, and they went tranquilly down the hill-side through the wood and over the marshy waste where the cotton-rush grew, in the lengthening ruddying sunshine, among the gradually hushing sounds of the evening, Alice little dreaming of the passion which enveloped the purple heath-flowers as with burning flame. She clung in spirit to Gervase, leaning all the more upon his quiet brotherly friendship because of the bitterness which had resulted from the love of others. Gervase had loved her, too, but he had known how to conquer a feeling which gave her pain, and she was grateful to him.

When, nearly an hour later, they entered the bleak village street, they saw Edward Annesley leaning over the low stone garden wall of the house in which he lodged, with his face turned toward the setting sun. With a pipe in his mouth and his hands clasped together at the back of his head, which was slightly thrown back to command a better view of the splendid cloud-pageant in the west, the glory of which was reflected on his face, he looked the picture of tranquil enjoyment, and the sight of him grated painfully on Alice's feelings, wound up, as they were, to such a pitch. His heart must indeed be hard, she thought, her own recoiling from the pity she had been lavishing upon him.

Mrs. Cora B. Miller Makes a Fortune

Started a Few Years Ago with No Capital, and Now Employs Nearly One Hundred Clerks and Stenographers.

Until a few years ago Mrs. Cora B. Miller lived in a manner similar to that of thousands of other very poor women of the average small town and village. She now resides in her own palatial brown-stone residence, and is considered one of the most successful business women in the United States.

Mrs. Miller's New Residence, Earned in Less Than One Year.

Several years ago Mrs. Miller learned of a mild and simple preparation that cured herself and several friends of female weakness and piles. She was besieged by so many women needing treatment that she decided to furnish it to those who might call for it. She started with only a few dollars' capital, and the remedy, possessing true and wonderful merit, producing many cures when doctors and other remedies failed, the demand grew so rapidly she was several times compelled to seek larger quarters. She now occupies one of the city's largest office buildings, which she owns, and almost one hundred clerks and stenographers are required to assist in this great business.

Million Women Use It.

More than a million women have used Mrs. Miller's remedy, and no matter where you live, she can refer you to ladies in your own locality who can and will tell any sufferer that this marvelous remedy really cures women. Despite the fact that Mrs. Miller's business is very extensive, she is always willing to give aid and advice to every suffering woman and has decided to give away to women who have never used her medicine $10,000.00 worth absolutely FREE.

Every woman suffering with pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing-down feelings, nervousness, creeping sensations up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, or piles from any cause, should sit right down and send her name and address to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, Box 5707, Kokomo, Ind., and receive by mail (free of charge in plain wrapper) a 10-cent box of her marvelous medicine; also her valuable book, which every woman should have.

Remember this offer will not last long, for thousands and thousands of women who are suffering will take advantage of his generous means of getting cured. So if you are ailing, do not suffer another day, but send your name and address to Mrs. Miller for the book and medicine before the $10,000.00 worth is all gone.

Gossip Concerning Some of the World's Leading People.

Among the lucky youngsters who will inherit great wealth is the eight-year-old Marquess of Blandford. Some day this little fellow will be a duke, a marquess, twice an earl, and twice a baron. He will rule over 20,000 acres of land, and be Lord of Blenheim Palace.

Sarasate, the eminent violinist, has refused $25,000 each for the two violins which he possesses. He is said to have great faith in his "mascot," which is a small silver violin case containing a miniature of the famous Guarnerius that Paganini presented to his native city, Genoa.

Mr. Arthur Chamberlain, the eldest brother of the great politician, is very unlike his brother in many ways. For one thing he is opposed to him in politics; also he does not wear an eyeglass. Seeing, however, that a Chamberlain would not be a Chamberlain without some mannerism, he invariably wears the pinkest of pink neckwear.

Sir William White, who till recently was Director of British Naval Construction, began life as a shipwright's apprentice, but his genius carried him up the ladder with a rapidity which startled his fellow-workers. He nearly lost his life once through taking an experimental trip with a sub-marine which, on being submerged, stuck in the mud. It was only after furious work with the pumps that he was rescued

The Duke of Connaught's appointment as a Prussian field-marshall adds a foreign uniform with crossed batons on the collar to a wardrobe which already holds those of a colonel of hussars in the Prussian and Austrian service, to say nothing of that of the Dragoons of Kiev. The Duke's marriage with a Hohenzollern Princess, who herself is a colonel of a Brandenburg regiment, supplies some reason for the exceptional honor accorded to him at the Prussian Court.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller, jun., has resumed his leadership of his now famous Bible class in the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New York. Cats hold as high a place as dogs in the hearts of society animal lovers. Queen Alexandra owns several fine chinchillas and Persian cats. Princess Alexander of Teck and Prince Maurice of Battenberg also possess valuable specimens, but the real cat-fancier among the Royal Family is Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, and the only Royal cattery is the one now established at Cumberland Lodge. This has been arranged on the most up-to-date principles, and has curtained windows and a front door, with a knocker and letter-box. The portals are surmounted by a crown and the initials "V. S. H."

A romantic story is told concerning Lord Kelvin's marriage. When the famous scientist was on his schooner yacht Lalla Rookh in West Indian waters, he got up a system for simplifying the method of signals at sea. He asked Miss Crum, whom he greatly admired, and who was the daughter of his host, if she understood his code. She said she did. "If I sent you a signal," he asked, "from my yacht, do you think you could read it and could answer?" "Well, I would try," she responded. The signal was sent, and she did succeed in making it out and in transmitting the reply. The question was, "Will you marry me?" and the answer was, "Yes."

Starting life as a lad behind a counter, General Miles, the "Bobs" of the United States, who is at present on a visit to Britain, has had a most romantic career. Declining the offer of a fortune from an uncle, he joined the army of the Potomac as a youth and fought gallantly throughout the Civil War. Once when shot through and through, he held to his post and turned the day for his side. Without influence he rose step by step. At twenty-three he was a colonel, and when the war ended he ranked as major-general.

Sir William Treloar, London's Lord Mayor, was knighted by Queen Victoria in 1900, concerning which event Woman's Life tells a rather amusing story. Lady Treloar was travelling to Bournemouth on the day that her husband received his knighthood, and when she arrived at the popular South Coast resort a telegram was handed to her which read: "Operation successfully performed; both doing well"—the allusion in "both" being to Sir William's brother sheriff, who was knighted with him. Not many people are aware of the fact that the early ambition of the new Lord Mayor was to enter the Army. Indeed, when quite a youngster he entered a recruiting office to volunteer to fight for Garibaldi. A parental thrashing was the result. The rebuff et with in no way dissuaded London's future ayor, for, on leaving school he asked his father to buy a commission for him. "I cannot do that, my boy," said the stern parent, "but I will tell you what I will do. If you enlist I will promise never to buy you out."

Every day the young Duke of Westminster gets richer. He is the great landlord of miles and miles of houses—the whole of South Belgravia—and for each he receives 1s. a year peppercorn rent until the lease falls in. Each month fresh leases fall into his hands, and at the end of thirty years the whole of the property, which is now worth many millions, will be his entirely. The land, which was acquired by his ancestors nearly two centuries ago, was then a worthless marsh. Parts of it were drained and the land let on long leases at low rents. Suddenly, however, it became the fashionable quarter of London, and correspondingly the ducal family became one of the richest in the peerage. The Duke's income to-day is $500,000 a year. In thirty years' time it will be increased fivefold.

The News—No pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cure were like Dr. Shoops Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. CARS HANG OVER BRIDGE

Sensational Accident on the Niagara River.

A despatch from Niagara Falls says: A freight train went to wreck on the lower steel arch bridge across the Niagara gorge on Saturday, and when all was over two cars were teetering on the edge of the bridge, as if a good push would send them down into the rapids two hundred and fifty feet below. Part of the train was in Canada and the rest was in the United States. A New York Central engine pulled a train of forty-six cars out of the Lehigh Valley yard and started across the bridge for the Grand Trunk yards. As the train left the Lehigh Valley yard the forty-fourth car jumped the track. The whole course of the train was on a curve, and the men on the engine could not see as far back as the derailed car. The train went ahead at a rapid rate, and the derailed car jumped over ties, switches and frogs, damaging everything it struck. The next car behind it was pulled off the track also, and the two cars went bumping and leaping at the end of the train out on the bridge. The bridge timbers made their way rougher than ever, and as they thundered along the whole structure quivered with the shock, and people on the lower deck fled in terror from the sounding of smashing timbers over their heads. Some distance out on the bridge the derailed cars broke apart and the loose one turned aside and jammed itself into the railing, being held back from a plunge into the gorge by its trucks catching the track. Near the centre of the bridge the other car also broke away from the train and crashed through the railing so that its forward end hung over the chasm. It, too, was saved by its trucks catching into the bridge tracks and timbers. The cars were much damaged, the bridge railings and walks were shattered, and some injury done to the tracks. It took the auxiliary several hours to clear the track. The other line was not obstructed.

PRISON STATISTICS.

An Interesting Report by the Provincial Inspector.

A despatch from Toronto says: In the thirty-ninth report of Dr. R. W. Bruce-Smith, Provincial Inspector of Prisons, a number of important reforms are urged. The report was laid on the table of the Legislature on Monday. That prisoners under the present system have not the chance to develop in moral strength is one of the opinions expressed. Greater efforts should be made to correct the causes of crime and keep people out of prison. The inspector reiterates his advocacy of the protection system and the indeterminate sentence.

The report urges the plan of an industrial prison colony in northwestern Ontario. It was suggested that a tract of unimproved land be secured and that prisoners from the district west of North Bay be sent there. The labor of the prisoners might be used to clear the land, build roads, etc. The necessity of finding employment for all prisoners is emphasized.

The statistics show that 10,810 prisoners were committed to the jails and lock-ups of the Province during 1906, as compared with 11,035 in 1905. The cost of maintenance was $158,176, or $5,094 less than 1905. In 1906 there were 24 committals for murder, 17 for manslaughter, 752 for crimes against the person, 2,503 for crimes against property, and 6,169 for breaches of the peace. The number of insane persons committed to jail was 309, or 87 less than 1905. The percentage of sentences to commitments was 59.17 and 6,396 prisoners were sentenced, a decrease of 225 under 1905.

PREMIER ASSASSINATED.

First Minister of Bulgaria Meets Death in Capital.

A despatch from Sofia, Bulgaria says: M. Petkoff, the Premier and Minister of the Interior, was assassinated here on Monday. M. Petkoff, with other Ministers, was walking in the Boris Garden when he was attacked by an unknown man who fired at him with a revolver. The Premier was struck by three bullets and died instantly. M. Guenadieff, the Minister of Commerce and Agriculture, was wounded in the arm.

LOCOMOTIVE BLOWN UP.

Boiler Exploded and Three Men Were Killed.

A despatch from Metchuen, New Jersey, says: Three men were killed and a number of others hurt, and Metchuen was shaken and threatened with many fires on Monday when the boiler of a locomotive on the Pennsylvania Railroad exploded while drawing a freight train through the town. The train left Jersey City at 1 a.m., and was passing through this place under good headway, when just opposite the railroad station the boiler of the locomotive exploded with terrific force. Hardly any portions of the locomotive except the wheels were found at the point of the explosion. Portions of the boiler were blown two blocks away and tore their way into buildings. A portion of the locomotive was blown into Hahn's drug store, two blocks from the tracks, and another piece of steel entered McCutcheon's pharmacy. Both stores were set on fire simultaneously, but in neither case was there any serious loss. Windows in buildings within a radius of two hundred yards were broken by the explosion, the force of which was so great as to seem like an earthquake.

ZEALOUS FOR THE FLAG.

Botha Says New Cabinet Will Maintain British Interests.

A despatch from Pretoria says: The Premier on Monday announced that he would attend the conference of colonial Premiers in London. He continues to maintain his firm conviction in the advantages of British connection, and today, in a speech, declared that British interests were absolutely safe in the hands of the new Transvaal Cabinet. The world would see that they were as zealous for the flag as any Ministry could be.

COASTED INTO RIVER.

Young Son of Preston Man Drowned in the Speed.

A despatch from Preston Springs, Ont., says: The River Speed claimed its first victim of the season here on Monday, when Edward, the three-year-and-five-months' old son of John Gillies, caretaker of the Preston Rink, was drowned. The lad had been sleigh-riding near the river at a short distance from his home and ran into an open part of the river, where his body and sleigh were later discovered by the distracted father.

TWENTY-TWO DROWNED.

Greek Laborers Lose Their Lives on Sacramento River.

A despatch from Redding, California, says: Twenty-four Greek laborers started to cross the Sacramento River in a boat on Monday. The boat capsized and 22 of them were drowned. The bodies have been recovered. The men were employed by the Delmar-Hitt Railroad.

SAILORS EXECUTED.

Eight Participants in Baltic Mutiny Put to Death.

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: Eight sailors, found guilty of participation in the Baltic mutiny, were executed on Thursday. Twelve others who were tried by court-martial for mutiny at the Svenberg outbreak have been sentenced, five of them to imprisonment with hard labor in the mines for life, and the remainder to varying periods.

HORRIBLE ABUSE OF INFANT

Blinded, Arm Broken, and Otherwise Injured by Inhuman Father.

A despatch from Montreal says: James Allan, an Englishman, thirty years of age, who pleaded guilty to aggravated assault on the person of his two-and-a-half-year-old daughter, was on Thursday condemned by Judge Choquette to three years in the penitentiary. Allan had nothing to say for himself, except that he was sorry for what he had done, and that he had always treated his wife and family well.

Judge Choquette, in passing sentence, said.—"This is one of the worst cases of cruelty I have ever heard of. You treated your child in such an inhuman manner that she is now totally blind. You state that you were kind to your wife and family, but you did not even take your child to a doctor. You ought to be thankful that, according to the law, I cannot give you more than three years for your dreadful offence. For a brute like you there is no mercy. You are a disgrace to the community, and I will give you the maximum sentence—three years in the penitentiary."

The evidence proved that the little girl had been dreadfully ill-used. The loss of her eyesight, as explained by a doctor, was doubtless due to a severe blow given her by her father over the head while the upper portion of the head was still soft. Her arm was badly fractured and had never been set.

During the cold months of November and December one witness averred that Allan had held the child while naked under the tap, and allowed the cold water to run on her until she was practically unconscious. On one occasion he had placed her out on the gallery at night, and kept here there for a considerable time, although she was only clad in a night dress.

He used to make the child run up and down in the passage until she fainted from the exertion, and used to remark to his wife that it was splendid exercise. He beat and pounded the little one with his fists upon the head and face and chest, and was wont to throw her violently into bed. All this he did because he said the child was dirty, and irritated him by obstinacy, although the mother stated that there was no need to punish the child at all, and that what her husband mistook for obstinacy was simply blind fear of her father.

TWO-POWER STANDARD.

This Will Still Be Maintained in the British Navy.

A despatch from London says: In introducing the navy estimates in the House of Commons on Tuesday the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, Mr. Robertson, said the Admiralty believed that the two-power standard would be adequately maintained by the proposed programme for construction. During the past ten years Great Britain had added 1,132,205 tons to her navy, while Russia, France and Germany together had added only 1,108,280 tons. The British navy was the cheapest, costing $445 per ton. That of France cost $620, Russia $465 and Germany $485. Two years hence Great Britain will have completed six new battleships, including three of the Dreadnought class and three armored cruisers of the Invincible class, while neither France nor Germany would have a single ship of those types completed. The home fleet was a logical development of its concentration in home waters and furnished additional security against the remote risk of invasion. The channel fleet was stronger now than it was in 1905.

A BRAVE RESCUE.

Nine-year-old Mervin Dunn Saves Companion From Drowning.

A despatch from Thorold, Ont., says; A striking example of youthful bravery and presence of mind occurred in Welland a day or two ago, when a child of seven years was rescued from drowning by a lad of nine. After school a number of small boys were skating on McCarthy's Pond, when they were hailed by a lad named Fred George, who had been skating with them, but who had ventured on the canal. He declared the canal safe, but hardly had the two who responded to his call, arrived when he sank through the ice out in the middle of the canal. One of the boys, Mervin Dunn, aged nine, skated swiftly to the hole, and as the other boy's body rose he seized it. Then, exerting his strength to the utmost, he dragged the helpless child from the water. The boy soon recovered and went home, where, after a little care, his icy immersion left no serious injury. Undoubtedly, had the boys who were near by waited for help, young George would have been drowned.

Jury in Hochelaga School Fire Catastrophe Bring in Verdict.

A despatch from Montreal says: The Corner's jury in the Hochelaga school fire catastrophe brought in a verdict on Friday afternoon finding the children were asphyxiated, and pointing out four errors on the part of the school management and others, which, while not contributory crimes, seriously affected the disaster. Mrs. Hand, the caretaker, left the doors in the basement open, thus allowing smoke into the passage; there was omission to perform the fire drill, and this the board ought to have had practised more often. Miss Maxwell delayed longer than she should in warning the children upstairs, and there were no fire escapes. The jury added to its verdict a suggestion that in each school there ought to be one man at least as a custodian. It did not consider that the Protestant Board of School Commissioners could be held responsible in the affair.

STUDENTS BLINDED.

Result of Practical Joke at a McGill Union Concert.

A despatch from Montreal says: A practical joke was played on the science freshmen in McGill Union on Saturday night which may result seriously. A concert was held at McGill Upion by the freshmen in science. All went along very nicely until about 10 o'clock, when the electric light wires were cut, and at the same time a large bottle of ammonia was thrown into the hall from a lounging nook on the second floor. The bottle broke and filled the room with the overwhelming fumes peculiar to ammonia. This got into the eyes of several of the fellows, and four of them had to be taken to the hospital and treated for very painful injuries. There is danger of the eyes of some being permanently injured.

MUTINY IN FRANCE.

Artillerymen at Toulon Attack Non-Commissioned Officers.

A despatch from Toulon, France, says: A mutiny occurred in the artillery barracks here on Wednesday. The men attacked the non-commissioned officers with revolvers and swords. Several were wounded on both sides. The mutineers were imprisoned.

MRS. PERKINS COMMITTED

Must Face Trial in Connection With Death of Husband From Poisoning.

A despatch from Cayuga, Ont., says: A committal was secured by the Crown late Thursday afternoon in the case of Mrs. Mattie Perkins, accused of having poisoned her husband, Henry Perkins, with strychnine. The hearing closed with a dramatic exit by Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., who expressed in very forcible terms his disgust with the action of the Court, claiming there was not a tittle of evidence on which the prisoner should be confined to jail to await her trial. While a committal was not unexpected, the prosecution was little more satisfied than the defence with the turn of affairs during the day, as the evidence on which the Crown relied to the largest extent proved to be of no value. The witness reserved to clinch the conviction was Mr. Thomas McDonald, who made and signed a statement to the Crown some time ago in regard to conversations he had had with the prisoner. When placed in the box McDonald admitted that he had made the statement after being advised to consult with his father, and that he had two weeks later gone voluntarily to the Crown Attorney's office and had it revised. But he also swore that the statement did not contain what he wanted to say, and positively denied a number of the matters upon which the Crown had relied.

The court-room was crowded to overflowing on Thursday, as on the previous day, and the audience freely gave expression to its feelings, applauding at times and even hissing on occasion.

Mrs. Perkins was committed to jail to await her trial at the assizes, and there will be no question of bail. The next Assize Court will be held on April 16th.

KINGSMILL REPRIMANDED.

Captain of Dominion Adjudged Guilty of Negligence.

A despatch from London says: At the Dominion court-martial Captain Kingsmill declared that, although it was certain that if the course had been shaped half a mile farther from the Souris light the ship would not have grounded, yet under the conditions prevailing at the time the course set appeared to be the safe one. An allowance of two miles was made for the indraught into Cascapedia Bay. He personally satisfied himself that every precaution for the safe navigation of the ship was being taken before he went to his cabin. Other evidence went to show that a forest fire, mistaken for the Souris light, and the smoke from it which blew over the real Souris light, masking the land and completely obscuring the Paspebiac light, were the immediate causes of the grounding. Captain Kingsmill and Lieut. Noake, the navigating officer, were adjudged guilty of negligence and severely reprimanded. Lieutenant Clarkson was acquitted.

ROBBED BANK OF ENGLAND

Charge Against Anderson, Arrested in Manitoba.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: A defaulting clerk of the Bank of England named Anderson, who secured £1,081 from the branch of the bank at Manchester by substituting copper coins for gold in the vaults and who has been a fugitive from justice for seven months past, was arrested by the Provincial police in Dominion City, Manitoba, on Friday and is now in jail here awaiting the arrival of an officer from England to take him back to stand trial. He admits his identity, though denying the charge of theft. He has been followed three times across the Atlantic and out to the Pacific coast and back here again. Anderson is about 40 years of age.

FIRE VISITS THE "SOO."

Municipal Building, Firehall and Library Destroyed.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: The Carnegie Library, Municipal Buildings, and Fire Hall were completely destroyed by fire on Wednesday night. The fire originated in an attic over the library and was caused by defective wiring. It spread with wonderful rapidity, the buildings being finished with Georgia pine. The buildings were erected about three years ago at a cost of $36,000, and are insured for $20,000 divided among several companies. The local fire brigade soon saw their inability to fight the fire, and the Michigan "Soo" brigade answered promptly to an urgent call. All municipal books, papers and records were saved.

SIX LOCOMOTIVES ORDERED.

Contract for Needed Engines Let by Temiskaming Commission.

A despatch from Toronto says: Contracts for the supply of six locomotives for the Government Railway have been let by the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission. The engines, which will be of the ten-wheel passenger type, will be constructed by the Montreal Locomotive Works, at a cost of $120,000. The company will deliver them in October.

CANADA A DUMPING GROUND.

Discharged Prisoner a Passenger on Steamer for Canada.

A despatch from London says: Recently the Magistrates of Carlisle and Cumberland discharged a prisoner, suggesting that his friends send him to Canada. Mr. Bruce Walker wrote to the Magistrates, protesting against making Canada a dumping ground for such people. The Magistrates replied, expressing regret that the suggestion had been made, and promised that the man would not be sent to Canada. On Friday, however, Mr. Walker discovered the same man under a different name was a passenger on the Empress of Ireland, and had him stopped. The Salvation Army have taken charge of the man.

RUSH TO PLACER DIGGINGS.

New Gold Discovery, 28 Miles From Vancouver, Causes a Stampede.

A despatch from Vancouver, B. C., says: A placer gold discovery has caused a stampede to Lost Creek, at the foot of the Sumas Mountain, 28 miles from here. Pockets have been found carrying from a dollar to fifteen dollars in gold, and hundreds are rushing in from Nooksack, Sumas, Bellingham, and Vancouver. The creek has already been staked for miles. The discovery was made by prospectors on Wednesday, and the rush started on Thursday.

STOVES IN EXPRESS CARS.

Railway Commission Takes Up Question of Risk to Occupants.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The Railway Commission will have a report from one of its inspectors concerning the recent railway accident at Mountain, where two unfortunate express messengers were burned to death. The board is likely to take up the question of heating of these express cars, for which ordinary stoves are used. As a result not only is the messenger exposed to the exceptional risk of being in the front car, but should he escape from injury in the smash, is liable to be burned to death by the stove upsetting.

EX-MANAGER ARRESTED.

Charged With Falsifying Books of Bank of Commerce.

A despatch from Brantford says: Chief McFarlane of Paris on Saturday night arrested John A. Duncan, late manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Ayr, on a charge of falsifying the books and documents of the bank. It is alleged that on February 2nd last he raised a voucher for seventeen dollars and ninety cents to thirteen thousand and seventeen dollars and ninety cents, and wrongfully made an entry in the books of the bank to cover the amount.

HEAD BLOWN TO PIECES.

George Thompson Killed by an Explosion at Cobalt.

A despatch from Cobalt says: Friday morning at 2 o'clock a miner named George Thompson was killed by a dynamite explosion at No. 7 shaft, Trethewey mine. Shots had been fired and Thompson, who was the shift boss, went forward to examine their effect. An explosion took place near where he stood, and Thompson's head was almost blown to pieces. He was picked up dead. He was a married man with a wife and four children living in Cobalt.

AT MERCY OF THE FIRE KING

Montreal Unable at Present to Cope With a Conflagration.

A despatch from Montreal says: Montreal at present is in a state of absolute unpreparedness for a big fire, in spite of everything that could possibly be done to ameliorate the conditions governing the water supply. There will be no change until the broken pump is set to work again and that cannot possibly take place for some time. Once the pump has been set in operation there will continue to be a serious shortage of water still, until the cold weather breaks and there is a thaw. Once the mild weather comes it will take about a week to put matters on a satisfactory footing, until the new pump is installed.

In the meantime the volume of complaints is piling up, and the hotels and factories and other buildings, which use large quantities of water and contribute large amounts to the civic treasury in the shape of water rates, are being put to heavy expense in order to obtain the water necessary to carry on their establishments. Later the city will hear something of this in the shape of claims for damages.

The danger from a sanitary point of view cannot be over estimated. The danger in case of fire is admitted by all concerned. Patrols of policemen and firemen are out all night, and every steamer in the city is kept ready for immediate service.

The secretary of the Board of Trade Council has issued a public notice requesting occupants of down-town warehouses to keep a watchman on the premises for a few days in order that the alarm may be rung in immediately in case of fire.

CHINA'S WAR ON OPIUM

STEPS TAKEN TO WIPE OUT ITS USE BY DEGREES.

Landholders Have Ten Years to Stop Cultivation and Smokers Various Periods to Quit.

The present war for the suppression of the opium evil in China, in which Great Britain has expressed its willingness to participate, brings to mind the opium war of 1840, in which China and the British Government were the chief participants.

This conflict was the immediate attempt of the Chinese Government to prevent the importation of opium. At the end of the war Great Britain had won her object of opening China to general English trade, and to the opium trade in particular. By the Treaty of Nanking (1842) Hong Kong was ceded to the conquering power. By the same treaty Canton, Amoy, Shanghai, Fuchow, and Ningpo were opened to British commerce. China also paid an indemnity of $24,000,000.

The approximate causes of the opium war arose several years earlier. Up to 1833 the English East India Company held a monopoly of the Chinese trade. In that year the monopoly was withdrawn by Great Britain in its own interest. This meant that England had determined upon the opening of Chinese trade.

To-day we find Great Britain willing to join in a conference with regard to a general and impartial investigation of the scientific and material conditions of the opium trade and the opium habit in the Far East, to be conducted by the principal powers having possessions and direct interests in that quarter—the United States, France, the Netherlands, Germany, Japan, and China—with a view to entirely suppressing the evil in the Orient.

The regulations for the suppression of opium growing and smoking in China drawn up by the Council of Government Reforms have been approved by the Chinese Imperial Rescript.

A GREAT INIQUITY.

The cultivation of the poppy is the greatest iniquity in agriculture in China, and the Provinces of Szechuan, Shensi, and Kanghuai abound in this product. As the idea is to abolish entirely the smoking of opium within ten years' limit, the discontinuance of the cultivation of the drug is taken as a fundamental step. The cultivation will be eliminated gradually in the ten years.

The Viceroys and Governors of provinces have been instructed to see that magistrates investigate and report on the acreage of poppy lands, and licenses will be issued only to farmers owning such lands on the condition that the quantity of poppy be reduced each year and replaced with whatever grain the soil may be found suitable for. The magistrates are to make inspection trips from time to time, and the licenses to be renewed each year until the ninth year, after which any land on which the poppy is grown will be confiscated. If a magistrate induces a farmer to stop growing poppy and employ his land in useful grain previous to the expiration of the ten years he will be recommended to the throne for reward.

Opium has been in use for so long by the Chinese that nearly two-fifths of them are smokers. The Government of China has urged officials, gentry, the Government graduates, to get rid speedily of the habit as an example to the common people. All smokers, irrespective of class, men and women alike, must report to the local official office of the place in which they live, where their name, age, residence, and occupation and quantity of opium consumed will be recorded.

WILL RECEIVE A LICENSE.

At this time the smoker will be furnished with a duly stamped license granting him the privilege of smoking for one year. There will be two styles of licenses issued, the Chia and Yi (A and B). The former will be given to persons above the age of 60 and the latter to persons below that age. But those who get the second class will not be allowed to change for the first class when they reach the age of 60. The time limit for the habit to be overcome is not specifically set. Persons of 60 whose health is declining will be treated with leniency, but those who are under 60 and hold the second class license must reduce the quantity by two or three-tenths each year. If the smokers have not given up when the time of grace has expired, officials will be ordered to resign, Government graduates will be deprived of their degrees, and common people will be registered as "opium smoking class" and their names will be posted on the thoroughfares of the city in which they live, and they will be excluded from public social gatherings.

Although the opium shops cannot possibly be prohibited at present, new shops will not be allowed to open. Those in the villages, towns and cities will be registered and licenses issued, and, under a heavy penalty, opium can only be sold to holders of licenses. At the end of each year a return of the quantity sold must be made by each shop to the local officials for record, and the total of each district must be reduced in proportion each year until the business is entirely obliterated. If any shop is caught selling the drug after the expiration of ten years the establishment, with its contents, will be confiscated by the authorities and the violator heavily fined.

SHORT TIME FOR OFFICIALS.

The ten-year limit for breaking oneself of the noxious habit is for the common people. The officials of the Government, who are to set an example for the people, have only a few months to rid themselves of the habit. However, all officials, metropolitan and provincial, civil and military, high and low, above the age of 60, who cannot afford to leave off the practice on account of endangering their lives, will be treated leniently; but princes, dukes, hereditary nobles, presidents of the boards, Tartar generals, viceroys, governors, lieutenant-generals, deputy lieutenant-generals, and provincial generals will not be screened, but will be dealt with summarily if caught violating the law.

If opium is smoked secretly by any official he will be recommended for dismissal as a warning for deception if the offence is proved, and his superior will also be punished for negligence of discovery. The instructors, students and members of the army and navy must all overcome the practice within six months.

DOCTORS WILL AID.

To assist the smokers in a speedy cure skilful doctors will be selected to study and consult in the preparation of anti-opium pills suitable to smokers of different climates and degrees. The magistrates will be furnished with these pills to distribute among charitable institutions and drug stores in their districts at cost price, and the poor smokers will be supplied with the remedy gratis. The prescription will be distributed freely in order that the gentry and merchants may prepare their own prescriptions. Anyone who can afford to prepare such pills and cure smokers by distributing them freely will be rewarded by the throne.

The Waiwupu has been ordered to negotiate some arrangement with the British Minister to China in the hope that both foreign and native opium may be alike reduced in quantity each year and entirely done away with at the time stipulated. In addition to Indian opium, there is also the Persian, Annam, and that of the Dutch Colonies imported to China. If the country from which the drug is imported has entered into treaty obligation, China may approach its Minister for negotiation, and if the country has not entered into treaty, China can exercise her sovereignty by strictly prohibiting the import.

FUNERAL OL GREAT BARD

BURIAL OF ROBERT BURNS OVER 101 YEARS AGO.

Description of How the People of His Time Honored the Scottish Poet's Remains.

While the annual celebrations in honor of "Scotland's darling bard" are still fresh in mind, the circumstances of his burial, as related at the time of his taking off, over 101 years ago, will be of interest. The account here is from the contemporary press.

DID HIM HONOR.

"The death of Burns made a strong and general impression on all who had interested themselves in his character, and especiany on the inhabitants of the town and county in which he had spent the latter years of his life. Flagrant as his follies and errors had been, they had not deprived him of the respect and regard entertained for the extraordinary powers of his genius and the generous qualities of his heart. The Gentlemen Volunteers of Dumfries resolved to bury their illustrious associate with military honors, and every preparation was made to render this last service solemn and impressive. The Fencible Infantry of Angus-shire and the regiment of cavalry of Cinque Ports, at that time quartered in Dumfries, offered their assistance on this occasion, and a vast concourse of persons assembled, some of them from a considerable distance, to witness the obsequies of the Scottish Bard."

JOURNAL OF THE DAY.

The following account is taken from the Dumfries Journal of Tuesday, July 26, 1796;

"To suit the arrangements the coffined remains of the poet were removed from his house to the Town Hall on the evening of Sunday, July 24, 1796, and at 12 o'clock, noon, of the following day the funeral cortege moved in the direction of his last resting place in St. Michael's church yard. The streets were lined by the military, and the great bells of the churches tolled at intervals, as the procession passed on, headed by a firing party of twenty members of the poet's own company of Volunteers in full uniform, and arms reversed. The bier was surrounded and supported by members of the same company, each wearing crape on the left arm; and that was immediately followed by relatives of the deceased and chief inhabitants of town and country.

SALUTE OVER GRAVE.

"After these came the remainder of the Volunteers, followed by a military guard—the whole procession moving in slow time to the solemn music of the "Dead March in Saul.' Arrived at the churchyard gate, the firing party, according to the rules of that exercise, formed two lines, and leaned their heads on their firelocks, which were pointed to the ground. Through this space the coffin was borne forward to the grave, and solemnly deposited in the earth. The party then drew up alonside of it, and fired the farewell salute of three volleys over the body of their sleeping comrade. Thus closed a ceremony which presented a solemn, grand and affecting spectacle, according well with the general sorrow and regret for the loss of a man whose like we can scarce see again."

QUEEN AND LINGUIST.

The Queen of Norway speaks five languages fluently, including Russian. Her favorite poet is "Owen Meredith," the late Lord Lytton. Then she knows many arts and crafts, sews and spins well, can bind a book, take a photograph, knit stockings, carve wood, play chess, and use a typewriter—which is said to be among her favorite amusements. Like most members of the royal family, Queen Maud is a keen collector, and her up-to-date fancy seems to be for ivory tusks, of which she has a fine assortment. At wood-carving she is specially clever, and some of her friends possess pipes with grotesque heads, which have been carved for them by her.

IN NORTHERN NIGERIA

THE COUNTRY WHICH A CANADIAN WILL RULE.

Possibilities of Protectorate Over Which Sir Percy Girouard Will Rule.

A recent issue of The London Times contains a long report of conditions in Northern Nigeria, the British protectorate of which Sir Percy Girouard has been recently appointed High Commissioner. Sir Frederick Lugard, the former High Commissioner, retired in September last. Barely six years ago the vast region entrusted to Sir Frederick Lugard's charge was a chaos of contending States, constantly at war with each other, distracted by internal feuds, and paralyzed by misgovernment. Slave-raiding was universal. The ancient civilization introduced by Mahomedan invaders was fast perishing amid the general anarchy. The introduction of the Pax Britannica has been followed by a general revival of prosperity and confidence. From every Province the residents report improving trade and increasing population. Towns which had declined with the abolition of slave trading are becoming populous and prosperous again, and village markets are reported more busy and more crowded than they had ever

BEEN KNOWN BEFORE.

In Sokóto, the movement of population, due to peace and security, has been from the cities to the land. Forty new villages are reported, and the walls of the towns are left to fall unrepaired. In spite of the fact that the old slave farms are deserted, new land is everywhere being taken up. All over the protectorate the scattered members of tribes and clans driven away by decades of slave-raiding and war are gradually returning to their former homes. Even beyond the borders of the protectorate the reports of the quiet and prosperous state of the country are having their effect.

The trade in slaves has entirely ceased, and even private transfers are rare. A slave has an absolute right to redeem himself even against the will of his master, with the result that slaves, instead of running away and becoming vagrants, can appeal to the native court. Moreover, since they have no longer the fear of being sold or transferred, they are more contented and less inclined to desert, while the masters, having no longer the power of sale or fear of confiscation or desertion, treat their slaves more as part of the family. The chiefs are described as eager to introduce i.e., machinery, or rather simple labor-saving appliances.

Sir F. Lugard's object throughout has been to identify the British and native Administrations as integral parts of a single system of rule in which each has its duties and functions in mutual co-operation. He has aimed to govern the country through and with the native chiefs, not by leaving them to their own devices, but by encouraging them to make effective, and, where necessary, reform, the existing administrative machinery, and by associating white officers with them in the work as helpers and counsellors. Direct white administration with so limited a staff would have been out of the question, even if it had been desirable. But there can be no doubt that a system under which the native rulers, deprived of the old privileges of making war or raiding for slaves, still find ample scope for their activities within their dominions and retain a position of power and influence, is the best guarantee both of peace and contentment, and in the long run also of material progress. Moreover, the native rulers find that the British Government not only does not deprive them of their authority in their territories, but will lend its support to help the assertion of that authority

OVER RECALCITRANT TRIBES.

The country is capable of producing immense quantities of cotton. Besides there are great possibilities of development in rubber, ground nuts, tobacco, gum, beeswax and skins and tin. In all cases, however, the possibilities of exploration depend mainly on the question of transportation, and it is largely to solve this problem that Sir Percy Girouard has been appointed High Commissioner. His experience in railroad construction in Canada, Egypt and South Africa has been taken as a guarantee that he will be able to supply the necessary facilities for the development of Nigeria.

To realize the nature of the transport problem in Nigeria it is necessary to remember that it was not till 1904 that the Government made an organized effort to substitute animal and draught transport for human carriers. Even now, with the exception of one or two light, narrow tramways, all the transportation is done by means of ox carts. The improvement in communications is desirable, not only for the development of commerce and for the carriage of Government stores, but as essential for military security and for administrative progress.

SOME RULES TO OBSERVE.

Be punctual.
Keep your promises.
Neglect none of the little courtesies.
Acknowledge all letters and invitations.
Learn to say the right things to the right people.
Never claim to know what you do not; the sham will soon be detected.
Never stand off with an uninterested, don't-care expression on your face.
Never correct a speaker who makes some trifling mistake of date or place.
Govern your voice, and usage is the only thing that will make that possible.

CADGERS OF CAPE COLONY

"BUMMERS" AND THE DOWNWARD PATH THEY TREAD.

Some Are Scions of Noble Houses, and Some Are Men of Superior Educa[illegible]

The bummer is a purely local article, indigenous to the Cape. This interesting specimen must be confounded neither with the hoodlum, the tramp, the rough, nor the rowdy. He is certainly not a hooligan or a larrikin. He is somewhat akin to the sundowner, inasmuch as generally he has no settled abode. Occasionally he is a remittance man.

He is, indeed, a "vagrom man," and in England, would be apprehended for sleeping out, and for having no visible means of subsistence. At home he would be sent to the workhouse, if not to gaol; but at the Cape there are no poor laws and no workhouses, and so the bummer's bed-chamber is located amongst the geraniums, the heaths, and the sugar-boom bushes which clothe the lower slopes of Table Mountain.

When the rains come and the floods descend, he finds shelter in caves and sand-pits; and, if the worst comes to the worst, he can join the convict guard on the breakwater, or take up a spell of other honest, though disagreeable, and, of course, irksome work.

WHO THE "BUMMERS" ARE.

Bummers are of all ranks and classes, and of several nationalities; but the majority are British, young and of gentle birth, scions of noble houses, cadets of good families, 'Varsity men, parsons, school-masters, ex-officers, clerks, and so on. Nearly all have been dispatched from home as ne'er-do-wells; a few went out in boomy days, expecting to find the streets paved with gold and cobbled with diamonds, and, lacking the pluck, and squandering the means, to proceed up-country—where only such as they have any chance of doing anything—have got stranded.

During the period or periods when they are temporarily in cash, they resemble the "Remittance Men" of Canada or Australia, and conduct themselves similarly. They "knock down" their cheques, go the pace, make fools of themselves, and are a general nuisance.

The downward career of the bummer, though fairly rapid, is sharply graded. At first, well-dressed, well-groomed, smart, with "Haw-Haw" and arrogant insular bearing, he frequents the best the leading bars, and his connection with good society vanishes.

[illegible] pence necessary to give him the entree to hotels. Later, he has not even the few

HAUNTING THE PUBLIC COURT.

Still later, he kills time, spending lang hours in the superb public library (whence he has been known to carry away valuable books), and in the Magistrate's Court, which has a strange fascination for him at this stage—but not subsequently.

Not long after this, such clothes as he has not sold have become shabby; boots broken down at heels, once immaculate collars and cuffs ragged, hats crushed and faded, gay necktie stained and soiled.

But there is an occasional stray shot in the locker, and so the bummers drift into the back slum and dock-side canteens, where they rub shoulders with some of the most undesirable companions on earth. Runnaway merchant sailors of all nationalities, convict guards, bad specimens of Californian and Australian miners, the top scum of failures (and worse) from Kimberley and the Rand, low-class half-breeds, blackguard Afrikanders, and men 'wanted' in various parts of the civilized world.

Hardly one of the bummers goes under his own name. Most of them have an appropriate, and often offensive nickname, in addition to a convenient alias; and though nearly all of the fraternity are drunkards and gamblers, there will probably be present in a gathering of them men able to settle knotty points of theology, law, Latin, Greek, pedigrees, heraldry, the turf, the chase, and the manners and customs of good society.

HAWKING AROUND SILVER SAND.

There are periods when the bummer, out-at-elbows, homeless, and empty, is absolutely compelled to work, in order to avoid literal starvation. Then he fills an old gunny-bag with silver sand from Green Point Common, and hawks it round the canteens with which he is so familiar. Sooner or later, he will find a friendly landlord, who will deal for 6d., the sand being spread over the floor of the bar.

With the 6d. the bummer fares royally. Fourpence for a bottle of Colonial sherry, a pennyworth of bread, and a pennyworth of fish. Tobacco, of course, is to him one of the necessities of existence; but where the weed sells at 4d. per pound, a handful can always be cadged.

A couple of typical bummers will occasionally harden their soft hearts, and engage for a spell of work on the guano islands. Here, for several weeks, or months, they are virtually in prison, and compulsorily sober. Upon their return, they wear an unwonted air of health. Moreover, they are rigged out in new suits of cheap clothes. Further, they have money in their pockets. They proceed to paint the city red, and when all their money is spent they start cadging again.

MOST DURABLE WOOD.

Which kind of wood is the most durable? To answer this question some interesting experiments have been made, and the following results obtained. Birch and poplar decayed in three years, willow and horse-chestnut in four years, and beech in five years, elm and ash in seven years; oak and Scottish fir decayed to the depth of half an inch in seven years; and juniper was uninjured at the expiration of the seven years.

Cholly Nowitt—"D'ye know, Miss Smart, though I've only just met you, there seems to be a sort of intellectual sympathy between us? You know just how to appeal to my tastes, you see. Are you a literary woman?" Dolly Smart—"No; I'm a kindergarten teacher."

STORIES TOLD OF PEOPLE

MME. WADDINGTON'S VISIT TO THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Dr. Story's Little Joke—A Bishop and the Idols—Patriots Not All Dead.

The announcement that Mme. Waddington has been staying at Windsor Castle as the guest of the King and Queen, is of very special interest, for this clever and charming lady has belonged for years to the most intimate circle of their Majesties' friends. An American by birth, but educated in France, Mme. Wadington is the widow of that remarkable man who was educated at Rugby and rowed in the Cambridge boat, and yet became one of the foremost of French statesmen of his day, and was French Ambassador in London for some ten years. Mme. Waddington describes a visit to Sandringham, which she says she enjoyed very much; "the Princess always charming and lovely to look at, and the Prince a model host, so courteous and ready to talk about anything." On Sunday Mme. Waddington noticed the absence of the Highland piper at dinner, who, on the previous evening, had walked solemnly around the table playing the bagpipes; and she asked the Prince if he was not going to play again. "Oh, no," said the Prince, "not on Sunday; he certainly wouldn't. I shouldn't like to ask him to, and if I did, I am sure he wouldn't do it!" She also notes one curious custom. "The Prince himself," she says, "weighs everyone; and the name and weight are written in a book. Some of the ladies protested, but it was of no use. The Prince insisted. One young lady weighed more than her father, and was much mortified."

DR. STORY'S JOKE.

Dr. Story, the late principal of Glasgow University, taking a holiday in the country once, was met by the minister of the district, who remarked: "Hullo, principal! You here? Why, you must come down and relieve me for a day." The principal replied: "I don't promise to relieve you, but I might relieve your congregation."

A BISHOP AND THE IDOLS.

Bishop Thornton, says the London Chronicle, who has announced his intention of going from Blackburn to Birmingham to inquire into the truth of the familiar charge that idols are manufactured in the metropolis of the Midlands and exported to Pagan lands, was a Birmingham vicar, when he was selected to go out to Australia as the first Bishop of Ballarat. There he had some practical experience of paganism, for Ballarat has a Chinese "camp" or quarter in which Church of England missionaries labor and make an occasional convert to Christianity. As a Whitehall curate Dr. Thornton was an energetic open-air preacher, and twice came into conflict with the police for obstructing the traffic in the Mile End Road.

PATRIOTS NOT ALL DEAD.

A New York paper is authority for the statement that Hon. Gifford Pinchot, the United States Government forestry expert, whose salary has been raised to $5,000 a year, is one of many rich young men attached to the public service whose salaries do not meet their living expenses by several thousand dollars every year. Mr. Pinchot took up forestry as a sort of fad soon after graduating from Yale, and then sought a position in the Government service in order that he might turn his fad to practical account. Mr. Pinchot has lectured several times in Canada, and his description of the fight now being made to save United States forest lands from land sharks will not soon be forgotten.

WHEN FRENCH LEFT HIS SADDLE

General French, of the British army, is a man of extraordinary personal charm and esprit. It is a joy to hear him tell the story of how when he had been thrown from his horse in his subaltern days a pompous officer of the old school came fussing up and demanded: "What do you mean, sir, by leaving your saddle without orders?" One of his cherished possessions is a copy of The Standard and Diggers' News, the Boer organ, containing a full account of the complete rout of his cavalry division and winding up with the statement that General French had been mortally wounded.

SIR PERCY SANDERSON.

Sir Percy Sanderson, who has just resigned as British consul-general at New York, after some thirteen years, will be missed socially as well as officially when he leaves the city to return to England. He retires on a pension at the age limit of 65 years. His history is interesting, covering a service in the army in India of eleven years, from 1859, when he was 17 years old. When he was 24 he entered the civil service and he was consul-general to Roumania when appointed to New York. In 1899 he was made a knight of St. Michael and St. George.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

Florence Nightingale, who has so long been an invalid, is now in her 87th year. Though physically feeble her mind is as bright as ever, and she still keeps up her interest in the Nightingale Nurses' Training Home. In her youth Miss Nightingale longed to study medicine, and when Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell was studying in London, Miss Nightingale used often to sit with her and talk of their mutual desires and ambition on behalf of women. Miss Nightingale has always been an advocate of woman suffrage. When asked why, she answered: "I have no reasons. It seems to me almost self-evident, an axiom, that every householder and taxpayer should have a voice in the expenditure of the money we pay, including, as this does, interests the most vital to a human being."

MR. CHOATE'S RETORT.

When Joseph Choate was a very young man, just starting out to practice law, he frequently showed flashes of the ready wit which has always characterized him as a member of the bar. On one occasion he was retained by a shopkeeper to defend him in a suit for damages brought by an employe. Unfortunately for Mr. Choate, his client lost his head completely under cross-examination, furnishing evidence so favorable to the prosecution as to result in a $5,000 verdict. The merchant was, nevertheless, highly indignant with his lawyer for having lost the case, and when they encountered each other at the courtroom door he blustered: "If I had a son born an idiot I'd make him a lawyer." "Your father seems to have been of another opinion," replied young Choate, coolly.

WHY TAILORS LIKE KING EDWARD.

King Edward's tailors have a standing order to provide him with about 100 suits a year, exclusive of military uniforms and Court costumes. These suits cost between £10 and £20 each. There is only one other man in the world—the German Emperor—who possesses more uniforms than King Edward. The Kaiser's outfit, it is said, includes 2,000 of them. But the Kaiser delights in donning gorgeous costumes. King Edward wears them only when necessary. He is, however, most particular about the official part of his outfit. He has an inventory made once a month of his uniforms in stock, accompanied by a carefully prepared statement of their condition. They are never allowed to get shabby. The slightest blemish on a uniform condemns it, and it becomes the perquisite of the superintendent of the wardrobe. The statement made that he never wears the same suit twice is erroneous. He does make it a rule, however, never to wear the same suit twice on consecutive days.

All these diseases are serious in themselves, and if not promptly cured in the early stages are the certain forerunners of Consumption in its most terrible forms. Psychine conquers and cures Consumption, but it is much easier and safer to prevent its development by using Psychine. Here is a sample of thousands of voluntary and unsolicited statements from all over Canada:

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited:
Gentlemen,—I feel it my duty to advise you of the remarkable cure affected by your Psychine and Oxomulsion, which have come under my personal observation. Three men, well known to me, Albert Townsend, Hazel Hipson and John McKay, all of Shelburne County, were pronounced by the best medical men to have consumption, and to be incurable and beyond the reach of medical aid. They used Psychine and Oxomulsion and they are now in good health.
I feel it a duty I owe to suffering humanity to state these facts for the benefit of other sufferers from this terrible disease.
Yours very truly,

TRAGIC DEATH.

Of Miss Sadie Bishop Of Prescott Drowned in the St Lawrence.

The news of the tragic death at Prescott last week of Miss Sadie Bishop of this place was heard with great sorrow by all her old friends and aquaintances here. The circumstances of her death are particularly sad which makes the bereavement a doubly severe one to her family. Miss Bishop who was a teacher on the public school staff at Prescott, boarded at the home of Mrs. J. S. Lane, where Miss Lillian Layng also of Smith's Falls. Miss Bishop roomed with Miss Weese who is on the High School staff. On awakening in the morning Miss Weese was surprised to find that her companion was not in the room as usual. She went in quest of her but she was not to be found in the house nor had anyone seen her since she retired the night before. Her watch was found under her pillow and her belongings were all as she had placed them the night previous. Even her shoes were in their place but her rubbers were missing and also her rain coat. Her brother at Bishop's Mills was notified and a search party was organized. She was traced from the house about three blocks and out on the ice to the open water where she undoubtedly met her death. It is supposed that she arose from her bed that night, partially dressed herself, and while asleep walked out of the house and straight down to the river. She had been across to Ogdensburg that afternoon and this may have something to do with her choice of route.

A thorough search has since been made for her body but so far without success. The deceased was the yougest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bishop who were at one time well known residents of Bishop's Mills but who removed to Smith's Falls a number of years ago. She was a bright clever young lady and a general favorite with all who knew her. She is survived by two brothers and three sisters for whom the deepest sympathy is felt in the sorrow that has come to them—Smith Falls Record.

Final returns from Manitoba elections place the government's majority at sixteen.

COL. MCLENNAN PASSES

Dies At Cornwall After Short Illness—Famous Scot.

Col. R. R. McLennan passed away at his residence at at Cornwall a few minutes past twelve Thursday night af an illness of short duration. His health has been failing for a few weeks, but it was hoped that he would recover. He underwent an operation on Saturday and was afterwards in excellent spirits, until about midnight when a change set in and he became alarmingly ill. Complications followed and he gradually sank until the end came. He was conscious till the last and died surrounded by the members of the family who were able to teach him. A few hours before his death he recognized his friend Major Beattle, of London, Ont., who had come to see him and had a short conversation with him.

Colonel McLennan was a son of the late Roderick McLennan, of Glen Donaid, the township of Charlottenburg, Glengarry, a veteran of '37 and grandson of Farquhar McLennan, of Kintail Rosshler, Scotand, a veteran of 1812, who came to Canada and settled in Glergarry in 1802. His maternal grandfather Malcolm MacDonald, came from Invernesshire, Scotland, at about the same period Born at Glen Donald, Jan 1st, 1842, he was educated there. In early life he gained distinction as an athlete, his reord as a thrower of hammers of all weights having never been equalled. Subsequently he became an extensive railway contractor, and was engaged as such in the coustruction of the most difficult portions of the C. P. R., north of Lake Superior. On retiring from occupation, he commenced business as a private banker in Glengarry, which he continued for several years. He was one of the Glengarry Ranch Company, he had been a director of various railway companies as well as of the Cornwall Elrctric Light and gas company, and was at the time honorary president of the farmer's bank of Canada, a director of Manufacturers Life Insurance company and the Toronto General trusts corporation. Was president of the Liberal Conservative association of Glengarry 1885, and unsuccessfully contested the county for the Ontario legislature at the general election of 1886, being defeated by only 32 votes. He was returned to the house of commons at the general election of 1891 and again in 1896. During the ten years of his parliamentary career he became recognized and influential member of the Conservative side of the house. He moved there for a substantial recognition to the surviving veterans of '37, and was the auth or of a pamphlet advocating the claims of the veterans. He also introduced a bill for the exclusion of aliens from public contracts, which was adopted in 1896. He held a first class certificate from the Royal Scots infantry and was appointed to the 59th regiment in July 1888, and was promoted Lieut. Col. commanding Feb. 1897. He was strong advocate of British connection and opposed to any policy that tended directly or indirectly to discriminate against the mother country.

He had accumulated considerable wealth and was a liberal contributor to movements that enlisted his sympathy, doing many things in this direction that were never known outside of his immediate circle of friends. One of his notable benefactions was the foundation of the MacLennan scholarships at Queen's University, which made provision for the education of four young men or women from the county of Glengarry continually at that institution.

The funeral took place on Sunday, leaving at 1 o'clock for St. Andrew's cemetery, Williamstown.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend ns' Pink Pills Give New to Overworked Women.

of a domestic is a hard one. rom early morning till late er work is never done. Often busy to get out of doors for fresh air. Unless her blood h and pure this close con- ears on her health. Her ill fail; she may lose her ap- me pale and dyspeptic. In in danger of a general break- ch was the condition of Miss e Fleury, of Ste. Anne de la e., before she used Dr. Wil- k Pills. She says: "For a years I have been a servant. Up to ear ago I always enjoyed the best of health, but suddenly I was seized with pains in my side, my appetite left me, I became dyspeptic and lost all strength. I consulted a doctor who told me I was suffering from general debility. I was forced to stop work and for three months I followed the doctor's treatment, but without benefit. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I had often read of the cases they cured, I decided to do so. I only took eight boxes before I was cured, and to-day I am stronger than I ever was. My digestion is good and I can now go about my work without fatigue. I owe a debt of gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for what they have done for me and I strongly advise other weak sickly girls to give them a trial."

Miss Fleury's case is one of many that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured after doctors' help had failed. The success of these pills lies in the fact that they strike right at the root of the trouble—the blood. Other medicines simply act on the symptoms of a trouble—and may relieve, but they do not cure. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood—that is why they cure dyspepsia, rheumatism, anaemia, heart palpitation, headache, backache and the ills of women; all these are caused by bad blood—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure them all because they make new blood. For sale at druggists or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TAKING PRECAUTIONS.

"Save me! save me!" she cried, as her head rose above the water, and she grasped a plank floating by.

"I beg your pardon," he replied from the bank; "but really I want it understood that I'm a married man with seven children."

"Yes, yes; save me!" she shrieked.

"Then there'll be no falling into my arms and calling me preserver, will there?"

"Oh, no, no!"

"And you won't insist on marrying me for my heroic conduct?"

"No, no; only save me!"

"All right, I'll tackle the job," he responded, as he threw aside his coat.

"You see," he explained, just before diving in, "I was caught by one of these dodges once before, and that's why I'm married; it makes me a bit particular now."

They are good for all babies and are sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiates or harmful drugs. Mrs. F. D. Kirk, Dumfries, N. I would not be without the Tablets in the house." The Tablets are sold by druggists or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

STORY OF INGRATITUDE

HENRY SNELLING SUFFERED FOR FIFTEEN YEARS.

Is Now Cleared by Tardy Confession of Man Whom He Had Befriended Years Before.

After having had fifteen years of his life darkened by public suspicion that he was an embezzler and having nearly died from grief because he was unable to prove the suspicion false, Henry Snelling, a former gas company manager, of Gravesend, England, has been cleared by means of a letter received from Canada. In this letter, an orphan whom Snelling befriended years ago, confesses that he was the real embezzler.

The story which thus reaches its final chapter, is a remarkable illustration of Aesop's fable of The Frozen Adder. When Snelling accepted the position of manager of the Northfleet & Gravesend Gas Company more than twenty years ago, he extended a helping hand to an orphan lad by giving him work in his office. This lad proved to be an unusually bright, intelligent youth, and within a few years the sympathetic manager stretched a point, perhaps, to promote him to a position in the company second to himself. A few years later, Snelling received a series of threatening letters and he discovered that similar letters were being forwarded to the chairman of the directors and that statements had been made that he had embezzled money and

FALSIFIED ACCOUNTS.

The accused manager asked that the fullest inquiry be made, but before this could be undertaken, the office was broken into and some of the account books were stolen—this apparently strengthening suspicion against the accused manager. A most thorough inspection was at once made of the few books that remained, but they failed to show anything wrong with Snelling's accounts. Feeling, however, that suspicion still rested upon him the manager resigned his post.

Meanwhile, the young man, against whom not the least suspicion seems to have been directed, was promoted to the managership. He did not hold the position long, however, for a year or two afterwards, in 1893, he vanished from Gravesend altogether.

Snelling, in the interim, seems to have been driven almost demented by the belief that people regarded him as a rogue. Before long he had acute congestion of the brain, and for some time it was not believed he would live. Upon recovery, moreover, the burden of unjust suspicion weighed so heavily upon his spirit that he never tried to obtain a good position, but lived

A HAND-TO-MOUTH EXISTENCE.

Now he is a happy man, in consequence of the letter from Canada above referred to. Writing from Saskatchewan, the befriended orphan says it was to cover his own faults that he anonymously accused Snelling, the best friend he had in the world.

"I write this as a duty before God," he added, "and I am sorry for having been guilty of anything so mean, but the influence of Satan had fast hold of me and I believe I would have done you all the injury I could. I hope you will forgive me."

SOME HOWLERS!

Entertaining Efforts of Callow Youth at Friends' Schools in England.

In the February number of Past and Present, a journal for old and young scholars of Friends' Schools, of England, there is a long and "absolutely genuine" collection of "howlers." We quote a few specimens:—

A long time ago England was once a foreign country.

Becket put on a camel-hair shirt, and his life at once became dangerous.

Saladin was a lizard in Egypt.

The Britons painted themselves with wood, and sometimes came out green.

Clive had to blow himself out in India, but fortunately for England, it didn't explode.

In trial by ordeal a man had to carry a red-hot piece of iron for five years.

The Anglo-Saxons had no drains, and so used to disperse their broken vitals into the middle of the road.

The Spartans had to get their living at the age of five by shooting at it on a piece of string.

The Spartans had two kings to check one another.

The religion of China occupies half the house.

Southampton is noted for exporting people to South Africa.

England has much coal beds. When the coal is finished we shall have to use our brains for fuel, and it will be scarce.

The potato is not only used for feeding peasants, but goes to more important things, such as whisky.

Rose-colored spots on the bodies of children are sometimes mistaken for measles. The trouble may be roseola, a local disease of the skin: Promptly cured with Weaver's Cerate.

SINGING KETTLES.

The Japanese, who know so well how to add little unexpected attractions to every-day life, manufacture, in a great variety of forms, iron teakettles which break int osong when the water boils. The song may not be a very perfect melody, but it is perhaps as agreeable as the notes produced by some of the insects which the Japanese also treasure for their music. The harmonious sounds of the teakettles are produced by steam bubbles escaping from beneath thin sheets of iron fastened close together nearly at the botton of the kettles. To produce the best effects some skill is required in regulating the fire. The character of the sounds varies with the form of the kettle. These singing kettles have been used for many centuries.

A hive of 5,000 bees produces about 50 pounds of honey a year.

W. A. Mitchell, dealer in general merchandise, Martin, Ga., writes:

"My wife lost in weight from 130 to 68 pounds. We saw she could not live long. She was a skeleton, so we consulted an old physician. He told her to try Peruna.

"She gradually commenced improving and getting a little strength. She now weighs 106 pounds. She is gaining every day, and does her own housework and cooking."

BRD INTIMATES A FLOWER.

A remarkable bird found in Mexico is the bee-martin, which has a trick of ruffling up the feathers on the top of its head into the exact semblance of a beautiful flower, and when a bee comes along to sip honey from the supposed flower it is snapped up by the bird.

DIFFICULT FEAT.

Mrs. Gasser—"I was outspoken in my sentiments at the club this afternoon."

Mr. Gasser—"I can't believe it! Who outspoke you, my dear?"

MOTHER'S GRATITUDE TO ZAM-BUK

IT CURED HER BOY OF PAINFUL SORES.

Nothing is more unpleasant to the eye and more painful to the sufferer than boils and ulcers. At this period of the year many adults suffer acutely from these painful outbreaks. When boils, ulcers, etc., occur on children it is pitiful to see the little ones suffer.

Mrs. E. Holmes, of 30 Guise St., Hamilton, is grateful for what Zam-Buk did for her little boy when in this pitiful plight. She says:—"I wish to express my gratitude for the benefit my child received from your famous Zam-Buk Balm. He suffered from Spring eruptions and then boils broke out on his neck. I tried blood purifying remedies, salves and ointments of all kinds, but nothing seemed to do him the desired good. The boils got worse and became so loathsome and unsightly that I could not send him to school, as some of the boils and ulcers could not conveniently be covered. About this time a sample box of Zam-Buk was given to him and we tried it. The small sample did him a little good, so I bought a 50 cent box. The result was really amazing. Inside a week's time the boils had begun to dry up, and in a very short time indeed every one of them was healed."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure also for eczema, scalp sores, ringworm, poisoned wounds, chronic ulcers, chapped hands, cuts, cold sores, cracks, festering sores, eruptions and pustules due to blood poison, etc. It stops bleeding and cures piles, fistula, etc. Is antiseptic; an excellent "first aid." Every home and farmstead should have its box of Zam-Buk. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes for $2.50. Send 1c. stamp for trial box.

Lecturer (with a good opinion of himself)—"Ha, my man, I rather think my voice will fill this hall." Hallkeeper (candidly)—"It strikes me, sir, it's much more likely to empty it."

If a cough makes your nights sleepless and weary, it will worry you a good deal, and with good cause. To dispel the worry and give yourself rest try Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It will subdue the most stubborn cough or cold, and eventually eradicate it from the system, as a trial of it will prove to you.

One way to dispel the vapors that beset the victims of this disorder is to order them a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which are among the best vegetable pills known, being easy to take and are most efficacious in their action. TELEPHONES FORETOLD IN SCRIPTURE.

Some genius has found 53 passages in the Bible, which he claims as prophecies of the telephone, because, forsooth, the language seems to fit into telephone vernacular. Here are samples:—

"The line has gone out into all the earth."

"The land shall be divided by lines."

"We have no right against this great company."

"Charge the people."

"I understand the number."

"I said in my haste, I am cut off."

A Recognized Regulator.—To bring the digestive organs into symmetrical working is the aim of physicians when they find a patient suffering from stomach irregularities, and for this purpose they can prescribe nothing better than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills, which will be found a pleasant medicine of surprising virtue in bringing the refractory organs into subjection and restoring them to normal action, in which condition only can they perform their duties properly.

FACING A WOUNDED TIGER.

Experience With a Wounded Tiger in an Indian Jungle.

The courage and good nature of elephants when engaged in tiger-hunting are the subject of comment by Gen. Thomas Gordon in his book, "A Varied Life." He gives an account of the pursuit of a wounded tiger in the Indian jungle. The tiger had turned back in howling fury looking for a victim.

He first made for Davison, but catching sight of my head as my elephant descended into a dry watercourse, he dropped and crawled in the grass, and tried to spring on me in the howdah.

He was on the right side of the elephant's head in a moment, and in trying to reach me, broke the front part of the howdah with a blow of his powerful fore paw.

The elephant was badly bitten and clawed on the trunk and head, and her right eye was blinded by the eyebrow being torn down over it. She gave vcice to suppressed screams of pain and rage, and made the most violent efforts to shake the tiger off.

My Bhil gun-bearer behind me in the howdah, regarding the situation as desperate, slid down the elephant's hind quarters and took refuge in a tree. All I could do was to wait an opportunity to fire without injuring the courageous elephant. At last I had a safe chance to put the muzzle against the tiger's shoulder. One shot,—it was an expanding bullet,—and with a great growl of agony from the tiger and a trumpet yell of rage from the elephant, the whole of us were struggling loose in the high bushes.

The elephant was coaxed to come forward to the dead tiger, and after feeling cautiously with her outstretched trunk, she gave the body a kick of contempt and allowed it to be tied on her back, to be carried back to our camp.

No time was lost in attending to the elephant's hurts, but preparatory to handling them she was fed with a stiff mixture of coarse molasses and flour, with opium and brandy thrown in liberally, after which she took an intelligent and good tempered interest in the proceedings.

With the tent-pitchers' repairing needles and stout thread, and the help of the mahouts and their assistants, her cuts and wounds were stitched and salved, and many yards of native cotton cloth used in swathing her torn trunk. She was fed by hand for several days, and seemed quite to understand that this was done to keep the bandages on the damaged trunk from being displaced by her use of it in feeding herself.

THE GREAT NORTH COUNTRY.

Nimrod was a mighty hunter, but had he hunted in the "Temagami" region he would have been a mightier one. Nimrod hunted for glory, but Temagamians hunt for game. Those Indians who made the first canoe of birch bark long ago, were our greatest benefactors. The children of these Indians know the canoe, and they know how to use it, and if you go to Temagami this summer they will paddle your canoe in their own superb way. They will be the best guides you ever had. Students who camp in the summer along the Temagami lakes are able to do two years' work in one. Finest of fishing and hunting. Easy of access by the Grand Trunk Railway System. For information and beautiful descriptive publication sent free apply to J. D. McDonald, D. P. A., Grand Trunk Ry. System, Toronto.

RIVALING THE NILE DAM.

The government of New South Wales is about to begin the construction of a dam at Barren Jack, on the Murrumbidgee River, which will form a reservoir 40 miles in length, and containing more than 33,000,000,000 cubic feet of water, or 50 per cent. more than Sydney harbor contains. This immense artificial lake, which will be but little inferior in capacity to that created by the great new dam on the river Nile, is to be used for irrigation. The dam will be situated in a gorge cut by the river through a granite ridge, and its height will be 200 feet.

DOCTORS USING PATENT MEDICINES

The Honest Physician is Anxious to Cure and Uses the Best Available Remedies.

The discussion of the bill now before the Dominion Parliament for the regulation of the manufacture and sale of patent or proprietary medicines is one of the utmost importance, and is receiving a great deal of attention, not only by the proprietary medicine manufacturers, but also by the retail and wholesale druggists. Every manufacturer of reliable and high class remedies welcomes the bill as a step in the right direction. The discussion has brought out the fact that the best physicians in Canada and on the continent approve of and prescribe Psychine in cases of the most difficult character. In a recent instance of very serious throat and lung trouble the patient had been using Psychine. Two leading United States specialists were consulted, in addition to two eminent Canadian physicians. Upon learning what the patient was using, a sample of Psychine was taken and analyzed, with the result that the physicians advised its continuance. They prescribed no other medicine but Psychine, with the result that the patient has fully recovered and is a splendid walking and talking advertisement for the wonderful curative power of a remedy that will "stand up" before the keenest professional criticism and analysis. As a builder up of the system and restoring all wasted conditions, Psychine has no equal, and the best and most earnest physicians recognize this fact. "At the age of 25 my lungs were in a terrible state. I had la grippe the year before; it settled on my lungs and I kept steadily growing worse till I got down so low I was in bed for six weeks. I had a consultation of doctors, and they said they could do nothing more for me. Then I started to use Psychine. I took the medicine for more than a year. It certainly did wonders for me. I am now as strong as I was before my sickness.

"MRS. H. HOPE,
"Morpeth, Ont."

Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is the greatest of tonics, building up the system, increasing the appetite, purifying the blood, aids digestion, and acts directly upon the throat and lungs, giving tone and vigor to the entire system. EMPIRE! EMPIRE!

The Empire Cream Separator outwears other Separators, lasts longer and requires fewer repairs, because—It's simple in construction and—It is more carefully built. That has been the Exerience of thousands of farmers who have used the Empire. Its easy to see why. Being so much simpler in construction it has fewer parts to get out of order. The bowl being so much lighter and there being so much less mechanism, there naturally is less friction and wear. It will pay you to consider these things.

PURE BRED STOCK.

Annual Eastern Ontario Sale—Splendid Class Of Animals.

From Ottawa Citizen.

"This beats the Guelph sale room," said a prominent western stockman to a citizen representative at the annual Eastern Ontario sale of pure bred stock at Lansdowne park Friday afternoon. The lecture room, with its tiers of seats, nearly filled with the prosperous looking farmers, looked as if it would take a lot of beating. The sale was well attended and though the prices were but fair the sale may well be considered a success in that the stock it distributed went principally to the farms in the district. Thos. Irving of Winchester wielded the hammer, being assisted in the ring by John Bright, a stalwart stock raiser of Myrtle, Ontario. The earlier part of the sale was the better. Towards the end the bidding dragged and some of the animals had to be with drawn.

Given $800 Damages.

Toronto March 7.—Mr. Justice MacMahon today delivered judgment in favor of William Campbell, of Hintonburg, contractor, against W. H. Cluff, merchant both of Ottawa and awarded Campbell, $800 damages. The plaintff claimed $4,000 for injuries sustained while riding on street car through the falling of the bank street wall of the Gilmour house, owned by the Messrs. Cluff.

The Judge found the, defendants guilty of great negligence and said that if the city building inspectors had insisted on compliance with the by-law requiring the Cluffs to remove the dangerous portions of the walls, the accident would not have occured.

The city is ordered to pay the award and to recover from the Cluffs.

BEWARE OF DIGESTIVES.

The Only Way To Cure Stomach Disorders. Is By Strengthening The Digestive organs.

The ordinary pepsin tablet has ruined more stomachs than all other causes combined. While it gives temporary relief, it leaves the digestive system weaker than ever, and the tablets must be continued with increased frequency.

The only way to permanently cure stomach troubles is by strengthening the digestive organs with a Mi-o-na stomach tablet taken before meals. In this way the remedy prepares the stomach for the food and excites the secretion of gastric juices so that, when the food is eaten, tbe stomach is prepared to digest it.

If Mi-o-na was a mere digestive, it would be taken after eating, so as to mix with the food, but then permanent relief would not be gained.

Mi-o na stomach tablets are sold only in a neat metal box, convenient for the purse or vest pocket, and cost but 50c.

We absolutely agree that your money will be refunded should you buy a 50c box of Mi-o-na stomach tablets and not be satisfied with the results. Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere, or will be sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c

A Smuggling Case at Brockville.

Brockville, March 12—On account of the extent of the ice bridge, customs officers are kept busy watching smugglers crossing from the United States. An unusual incident occurred here when Officer Stowell accosted a woman as she stepped from the ice. He informed her of the necessity of reporting to the lady officer on duty at the dock. She brushed by him, paying no attention to the instructions, and when he followed her, insisting that she return, she knocked him down. She was finally searched and made to comply with the customs tariff.

CATARRH GROWING LESS.

Due To The Use Of Hyomei. Cures Without Stomach Dosing.

Inquiry at the local drug stores shows that the sale of remedies for catarrh has decreased very much in the last year. Some medicines which were formerly bought a gross at a time are in half dozen lots, and are rarely called for.

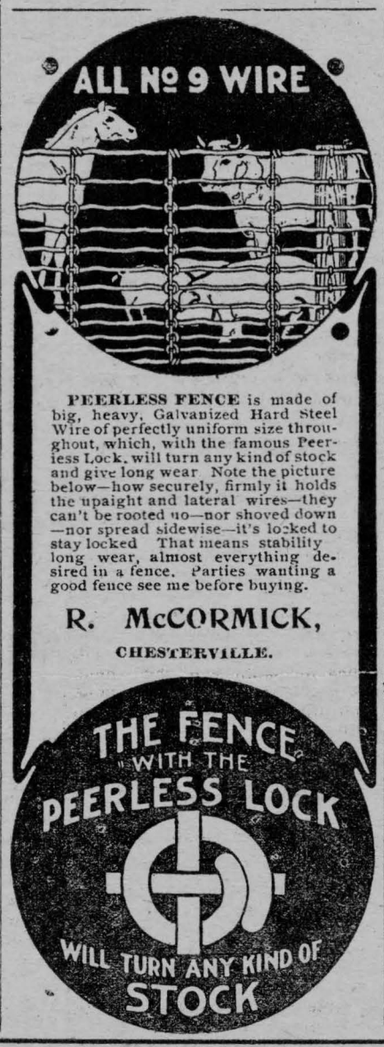

There is one notable exception to this decrease in sale, and that is Hyomei. This remedy is, in fact, responsible for the decrease in sale of catarrh medicines as it has made so many cures of catarrhal troubles that naturally there is much less demand for remedies for that disease.

People who have been trying different medicines for catarrh during many years were induced to begin the use of Hyomei by the guarantee, that cured. Much to their surprise, they found that Hyomei did what it claimed (if it did not it could not be sold under this guarantee,) and they soon become ardent advocates of the use of Hyomei.

There is no diragreeable stomach dosing with Hyomei; it is used by being breathed through a neat pocket inhaler. the complete outfit costs but one dollar extra bottles, if needed fifty cents.

All druggists should be able to supply you with Hyomei, or we will send it by mail on receipt of price, and every package is sold distinct understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures. Write us today for a symptom blank, which we will send you free, together with treatise on catarrh and how to cure it. When you fill in and return to us the symptom blank, our consulting physician will give your case the best care and attention, and write you a letter of advice without charge.
