Fire Damage Shown at Chesterville Co-Op

FIRE AT CHESTERVILLE District Co-Op last Thursday morning caused a great deal of damage and but for the notable efforts of the volunteer firemen under the able leadership of Fire Chief John Hehir, the damage would have been much greater. In the top photo our Record camera caught the blaze just after the water had started to combat the flames. The main hydrant hose had not yet been hooked up , as can be seen from the limp line in the foreground, but two lines were working at 130 pounds pressure from the supply tank of the pumper. Steam is starting to show mingled with the smoke as the water is beginning to do its job through the front basement windows.

IN THE LOWER picture, taken from the same position as the first, we caught the scene about an hour and a half later, after the flames had been licked. Tendrils of smoke continue to come from the building, but it has cleared enough so that workmen could start to clear the damaged feed from the area of the fire, to enable the firemen to quench the last stubborn fires in the rear of the building.

BLACK EGGS, IS IT?

Mr. Fred Anderson of Dunbar received a slight surprise this week when he picked up the egg of one of his prize black Cayuga ducks. The newly-laid egg was a jet black, as black as the duck herself. Ordinarily, the Cayugas lay eggs with a nice green tint, but this particular duck, at he first attempt wished to be different. We scraped gently at the shell of the egg here and found the colour was a hard smooth outer layer, over the normal shell. Who has an explanation for the black egg?

"It's just that...just that so fond of pancakes, doctor."

"Is that all? Why I'm very [illegible] of pancakes myself."

"Oh, doctor, really?" she trilled, clasping her hands together with joy. "You must come over to our house...I've got trunks and trunks full of them!"

BARREL RUN POSTPONED DUE TO UNSEASONABLE COLD

The weatherman seems to have gone all-out to give us some winter weather this March. As a result, snow and ice are still in much evidence. The river has not yet shown any signs of giving in to the blandishments of Spring, and remains solidly frozen. As a result, the annual barrel run of Chesterville Legion has been postponed until the ice starts to move. This week reports have the ice a good 18 inches thick yet.

The barrel run date will be announced from these pages as soon as the weather turns more seasonable.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN EASTER SEAL CAMPAIGN

This week all householders in the district have received their Easter Seals as sent out by the Chesterville Rotary Club in their annual campaign for the crippled and underprivileged children of this area. Nearly 4000 letters have been mailed and the returns are starting to come in.

Of all the causes we like to be associated with, this is one of the best. The reward of helping a small child to find a new and happier way of life, and to be able to see it, is one of the largest lifts we can ever hope to have. The happiness of the campers at Merrywood-on-the-Rideau, alone is a tonic to see and a deep satisfaction to know.

The local Rotary Club, working in association with the Ontario Society for Crippled Children make this yearly appeal to the public for support. Their efforts are only as great in the work of healing and care as the public makes possible. It is through the donations received each March that the pleas for help can be taken care of.

Chesterville Rotary uses the money received only for crippled and underprivileged children of the area. The work of the club committee under the chairmanship of Eric Casselman knows no season. The calls on the committee are many and year-round. Orthopaedic cases, therapy for infantile paralysis crippling, treatment and training for cerebral palsy patients, throat, nose and eye cases are only a few of the demands made on the time and the bank account of the club. All are answered without hesitation, upon the recommendation of the district nurses and other qualified advisors.

The seals have arrived in your home. Now is the time to enclose a contribution in the pink envelope and mail it to Jim Cunningham. It does not need a stamp. It is already stamped with the address on it. Send it today, and help some one not so fortunate as most of us are. How much is a healthy child worth?

Ballooning McCarthy

(The Ottawa Journal)

When reporters in Toronto asked Mr. Lester Pearson what the Canadian Government intended doing about Senator McCarthy's coming to Canada Peason asked: "Who's McCarthy?"

When reporters in Chicago asked Pearson why Canadians seemed so concerned about McCarthy, he replied:

"Why are you Americans so concerned about it? When Senator McCarthy ceases to be news in the United States he won't be news in our country either."

The right replies, exactly. For the truth is that Senator McCarthy, a third rate politician from Winconsin, has been ballooned into a prominence for which nature never intended him by the hysteria of his critics, by "liberals", by radio, by television and headlines.

Of no account in himself, crude, vulgar and unscrupulous, McCarthy would have gone into oblivion long ago if those who despised him had recognized him for what he was and had treated him accordingly. Instead, they pictured him as a potential President of the United States, as a rival to Eisenhower for the leadership of the Republican party, as a man who might have commanded an army and navy.

At successive presidential press conferences in Washington these past three weeks the questions poured at the president were not concerned with vital or perilous world and domestic happenings, though there were all too many of them; they were concerned with McCarthy—so much so that Mr. Eisenhower felt constrained to rebuke what he rightly termed "hysteria".

When this hysteria ceases, when radio, TV and headline writers cease treating him as some modern Caesar, McCarthy will go the way all demagogues, and in his case the way of a demagogue who was not even first-rate.

To be hoped therefore that when McCarthy makes his planned appearance in Toronto the wholesome process of cutting him down to size will be helped by no silly fuss over him. The Canadian Government has already acted wisely by refusing to notice him, and can continue to act wisely by refusing the RCMP to "protect" him An RCMP guard would be just what McCarthy would relish.

Canada's Distinguished Tourist

(The Ottawa Citizen)

It was characteristic of Prime Minister St. Laurent that his preliminary report to parliament on his globe-girding tour should be in the nature of a chat rather than a speech. He spoke to the House of Commons much as any other returning traveller might do when giving his interested friends a few highlights of the trip. He told of horse fairs and musical rides, of natural and architectural wonders, as well as the numerous leaders of Europe and Asia with whom he spent much time in serious and perhaps anxious talk.

The distinguished tourist was roundly welcomed back to the House. All parties joined in a standing ovation when he entered the chamber for the first time in several weeks. They felt that as an emissary at large Mr. St. Laurent had done well for his country. In his travels he had behaved with the same naturalness that his fellow Canadians have come to like, and that is one of its owner's most potent political aspects. Thus the Prime Minister could utter unpalatable opinions at a press conference in India, and be cheered at the end of it. He could be equally candid on the ticklish question of Communist China, and still apparently retain both the liking and respect of those who happened to disagree with him.

It is the Prime Minister's way of sayiny things that makes them palatable. At some question loaded with dynamite there is a small hesitation, which only those who don't know him mistake him for confusion. He is just as likely to pace his senteces in the same way when he is remarking about the weather. But after the little pause comes a gesture or two with the hands or the shoulders,and the reply, direct and to the point. On those occasions when he has no intention of committing himself, he still gives a graceful and good-humored comment unless there happens to be something in the tone of the question that arouses the Irish blood in him. Then there are apt to be fireworks. On this world tour, however everything seems to have gone off serenly.

This characteristically candid manner, as the House knows well enough, is apt to disarm opponents. Upon his return home, for example, Mr. St Laurent was questioned by the press about his remark at Manilla that China's government today is the one "the people want." He did not try to cover up, whether by pleading misquotation or that the phrase was wrenched from context. He just said: "That may have been rather an unfortunate way of putting it." Critics may try to make what they can out of this slip, but is there really much left for them to say?

It is understandable that Canada's prime minister made a good impression everywhere he went. He could not fail to make friends for Canada, and even those who will continue to do their best to bring about his political downfall—or at least that of his party—are among the first to recognize his service to the nation abroad.

What is a Communist?

(The Christian Science Monitor)

A letter from a puzzled reader asks us: "What is a communist? What does he stand for? What does he have that appears to attract so many people? Is there literature on the subject, and where can it be secured—without McCarthy branding the inquirer as Red?"

To answer the last question first, there are thousands of books and articles on the subject available in the United States, and they may be read in any good public library by anyone who believes that ignorance is not the best defence against subversion.

But from this mass of reading material can be drawn no single, simple answer to the question: What is a Communist? The term is used variously to describe a theoretical believer in the economic dogmas of Karl Marx; a conscious member of a hard-bitten international conspiracy directed form Moscow; a fanatical devotee for whom "dialectual materialism" is an absolute, religious faith: a deluded idealist who joins a legally constituted political party which he believes to be dedicated to peace brotherhood, and social justice.

Some people echoing Gertrude Stein on the rose, hold sagely that a Communist is a Communist is a Communist. But does a Chinese Communist, for instance, necessarily share all the basic aims, presuppositions, and fixations of a Russian Communist? We cannot be sure though we know that a Yugoslav Communist does not. And in general we do well to recognize a considerable distinction between the European and American Communist.

For to be a Communist in the United States requires a considerably greater intellectual, emotional, and moral wrench that in most of Europe or Asia. It is not easy for the gullible or "idealistic" simply t drift into communism today in America—though it was easier during the dark depression thirties, when to many the structure of American capitalism seemed to be tottering and the nature of Soviet tyranny was much less widely understood.

Today only the cynical power-hungry or the extroadinarly maladjusted or "pathological" individual is likely to be drawn to the American Communist Party. But that is not true in Europe or Asia, where war, violence, and large-scale poverty have so shaken the fabric of Society that many sincere but mistaken people have come to feel they must look in another direction for a totally new order of things.

In his vividly illuminating book on postwar Europe, Fire in the Ashes," Theodore White quotes Pierre Bertaux, the brilliant police chief who broke the back of the Communist bid for control of France after the war:

You Americans are wrong in trying to force your methods on our country. You believe in theology, in sorcery, in witchcraft. For you, communizm is a sin, and the communists are witches to be burned. The fact is they are very simple, ordinary people. For fifteen years the Communists have pulled to their ranks the finest young people of France. France is such an old country, so much is rotten in it, and the Communists argument is so simple—to make an omelet, they say, you must smash eggs.

So year after year the generous, the noble, the bold, the brilliant youth of a full generation has been drawn to it and been led by it to the final abomination which is communism. For the error of original decision in joining the Communists is so slight and the final consequences are so terrible. They, are the young men of communism, are the truest victims, and the job is not to persecute them but to liberate them.

Here is a maturity of judgement one could pray to see reflected in public figures. Even in the United States, where there is so much less excuse than in France for delusions about comunism (and so much less internal danger from it), there is a crucial need to balance the hunting of Communists with the healing of Communists.

Letters to the Editor

Editor, The Chesterville Record,

Sir:

In the write-up I made pertaining to the affairs of the Chesterville Public Library, I omitted to state the fact that I still hold, in trust, the sum of ten dollars, which amount of money was donated by IOOF, Chesterville Lodge 288, Carl Merkley, NG.

This gift is to be used for the benefit of children who attend the story telling periods. When ice skating became available, the stories were discontinued, then due to the prevalence of illness, we were again handicapped in getting started.

The registration in the dancing classes having exceeded all expectations, we regret that for the next several weeks we have to use the library as a waiting room on Saturday afternoons thus delaying again our project.

However, we hope to continue, and when the weather becomes good and the water tabu, we can tell our stories in the park or even under the lovely old tree here on the lawn, and many an ice cream cone will refresh a small child and they will bless the members of the local IOOF Lodge, who on any and all occasions, prove themselves to be such good citizens.

Thanking you for your courtesy in printing this letter,

Yours truly,

Stella Campbell.

Can Spring Wheat Be Grown In Eastern Canada

Spring wheat was one of the first and most important crops grown by the early settlers when the country which comprises Eastern Canada was discovered. DeMonts planted this crop at Annapolis in 1605, while Louis Hebert reports abundant wheat crops on his farm in Quebec City in 1635.

The Red Fife wheat which gave Canada its first reputation as a wheat producing nation, as well as the world famous Marquis wheat were originated and developed in Ontario All the eastern provinces provided the wheat for their own bread making purposes and numerous small flour or grist mills were to be found in each province. With the expansion of the wheat areas in the West, and the increase in population, the larger, better equipped and more efficient flour mills took over the manufacture of flour and many of the small mills closed down which lowered the demand for local wheat. During the past twenty years, the wheat acreage in East-Canada dropped from 204,700 acres in 1934 to 54,400 acres by 1953. This decline started previous to World War II when large stocks of wheat are available in the West and prices were so low, that Eastern farmers found it cheaper to bring in grain for feed purposes, than to grow it.

There are occasions however when it pays to raise wheat in preferance to other crops. One good illustration of this is in the potato growing areas where the heavy applications of commercial fertilizer cause severe lodging to such crops as oats and barley when sown on these soils following potatoes. It has been found that a good variety of spring wheat will stand up well under these conditions and produce excellent yields. The new Acadia wheat with its short, stiff, straw could be used to advantage in this case.

Mr. Carl Frazer, Cereal Crops Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, eports on a survey just completed on how Acadia wheat behaved under general farm conditions in Eastern Canada during the past season. Yields as high as 45 to 50 bushels per acre were recorded with an average for the 100 farms reporting on their yields of 25.75 bushels per acre. This is very good considering that the average yield for the past 5 years for spring wheat in Canada was 16 4 bushels and even in the bumper year of 1952, the yield was only 26.3 bushels per acre. In other words Eastern Canada can successfully grow spring wheat and a few acres on all Eastern farms would go a long way to feeding the average farm poultry flock and in providing a nice cash crop which is easy to handle.

USES FOR SEAWEED

At the International Seaweed Symposium attended by nearly 200 scientists in Edinburgh, some interesting results of seaweed research were made public.

One of the most remarkable was the discovery by a young Swedish scientist that some common varieties of seaweed contained vitimin B12, which helps animal growth. Usually this vitamin is found in liver and this is the first instances of its being found in a plant.

Seaweed it appears, now has 200 industrial uses, and at Edinburgh an attempt was made to calculate the amount available in the whole world. Seventeen countries collaborated in drawing up a map to show the principal areas of seaweed with commercial value, and this has revealed that there are at least 100 millions tons of brown seaweed which could be used for industry.

USEFUL WHEN APPLIED

The thought has been voiced by thinking men that the gospel has failed. There is no improvement in the world of today. Sin, Wickedness, war and bloodshed are as prevalent today as in the time of Christ. Does this fact mean that the gospel has failed? Are we to believe that the sacrifice of the Cross, where Jesus bled and died has been in vain?

One day a soap manufacturer, not a Christian, was walking with a minister. Said the soap-maker: "The gospel that you preach hasn't done much good, for there is still a lot of wickedness and wicked people in the world."

The preacher made no immediate reply, but they soon passed a child who was making mud pies. He was exceedinly dirty. It was the preacher's turn, and he said: "Soap hasn't done much good in the world, I see; there is still much dirt and many dirty people."

"Oh, well," answered the soap manufacturer, "soap is useful only when it is applied!"

"Exactly!" was the minister's reply. "So it is with the gospel that we proclaim. The Gospel, whether for the individual or the world is useful only when applied!"

The producer suffers first and most; the capitalist last and least.

Frendlee Farm Chats

By Mrs. Lillian Allison

A man named George Sydney got his name in the papers the other day for saying that children are introduced to Shakespeare too soon. "Shakespeare is such tough going for the 15 year old kid that he soon acquires an aversion to the greatest writer the English language ever had," he said. And I think Mr Sydney hit the nail squarely on the head.

Now what was your reaction when you read that "Hamlet" was coming to the local theatre last week? Wasn't it something like this: "Hamlet, eh! He's Shakespeare isn't he? Well I don't want to see any of Shakespeare's plays I had enough of that when I went to High School. Macbeth, Julius Ceasar, The Merchant of Venice. I got so sick of that junk. We memorized yards of it. "The quality of Mercy is not strained", "To be or not to be that is the question", "If it were done when 'tis done then 'twere well it were done quickly". What nonsense! And what's more we'd study a play all year and still wouldn't know what it was all about. No thanks. No Shakespeare for me. It's to dull.'

Well believe me "Hamlet" wasn't dull. "It was good," one Grade 5 pupil reported after the forenoon showing. "There were four murders." It certainly wasn't dull. A ghost roamed around at the beginning of the story, two young people went stark, raving mad, one girl drowned herself, her brother climbed into her grave after the burial service, two young fellows fought with lances—one blade having been dipped in poison, the queen drank a glass of poisoned wine and everybody that mattered ended up dead. Now name the modern thriller that can stop Shakespeare for excitement. "Hamlet" wasn't dull.

The story was easy to follow too. I had completely forgotten what I had learned about the play years ago but it wasn't difficult to keep up with what was taking place. The pictures made it so simple.

You'd have enjoyed the show I'm sure. For after all we're grown up now and able to appreciate things we thought were stuffy during our teens. You'de have liked the acting. Laurence Olivier gave such an outstanding performance. He spoke those lines so well, with such naturalness that we were carried back through the years until it seemed perfectly proper to say "thou dids't", "methinks", "I pr'ythee" and other such obsolete words and phrases. "Hamlet' didn't sound at all as it did when I read it in Fourth Form. It was beautiful.

You'd have appreciated the good sense of some of the speeches that meant little when you were younger.Take the old man's parting advice to his son, "Give thy thoughts no tongue—Neither a borrower nor a lender be—to thine own self be true—thou can't not then be false to any man". And that long monologue that begins "Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you" has so much solid sense in it that we should all read it a dozen times befcre we ever attempt to speak in public again. "What is a man, if his chief good and market of his time be but to sleep and feed?" Now who'd have thought Shakespeare was as clever as that?

Then you'd have got a thrill from hearing such familar quotations as: "Frailty, thy name is woman", "Something is rotten in the state of Denmark", "There's a divinity that shapes our ends rough-hew them how we will".

Yes, "Hamlet" was good. It had words, action and music that make a good movie. It had a poetic beauty that Shakespeare alone can offer.

"Julius Ceasar" is a movie now too. One critic rates it as excelleat. So if we're lucky enough to have it at our local theatre let's forget our first unfortunate experience of meeting Shakespeare when we were too young and go to see and hear it with grown-up understanding. We'll marvel, I'm sure, that such a very clever man lived so many centuries ago. Besides isn't it better to support a movie that is worthwhile than to pay our good money to see "Wild Willie Rides the Range Again"? Besides the best way to get more first rate pictures at our local theatre is by patronizing those that come.

Calling All Sportsmen

In honour of the late Jack Minor Canada will observe National Wildlife Week April 4th to 10th. When Jack Minor died, there were three suggestions advanced throughout Canada for a memorial to this man who through his efforts in furthering the cause of conservation have made him world famous. One suggestion was to build a monument at his home and Sanctuary in the form of a tower for visitors to view the birds from. Another suggestion was to make the vast North West Territory one large Park and name it in his honour. The other suggestion which won unanimous support was to create Natiinal Wild Life Week throughout the Dominion of Canada to be observed on the week of his birthday each year. The week to be strictly an educational week when school teachers will stress the importance of Conservation—a week when service clubs, sportsmen s organizations will promote the cause of Canada's natural resources and when churches will observe God's great outdoors.

Created by Act of Parliament in 1947.

Such a week is only a proclamation but was created on Friday, April 18th, 1947, by an Act of the Canadian Parliament in the House of Commons as a living memorial to Jack Minor who helped pioneer the Conservaton movement on this continent. To show how unanimous it was when voted on in the Canadian Parliament, it was the first Bill to ever pass unanimously by the Members of the House of Commons and the Canadian Senate, which alone is evidence of the esteem in which the late Jack Minor and his contribution of the Bird Refuge System was held. While National Wild Life Week was passed and created by the Federal Government, yet the Educational and Wild Life Departments in the ten provinces work whole heartedly in promoting it in their respective provinces because they realize the importance of the educational value that is derived from it.

7th Canadian National Sportmen's Show.

In Toronto this past week for three days gave me an opportunity to attend the Canadian National Sportmen's Show now in its 7th year. Sponsored by the Toronto Anglers and Hunters Association and held in the coliseum at the Canadian National Exhibition Grounds, this year's show will establish new records for attendance. This increased attendance reflects the growing public interest in all phases of outdoor activity and is also reflected in the increase in the number of exhibitors and in the quality of the exhibits and other attractions. Whilst I couldn't begin to catalogue the exhibits I would like to mention that along with an endless variety of fishing, hunting and camping equipment, I found European sports cars, motor cycles, pre-fabricated summer cottages, auto trailers. One with accomodation for sleeping as many as six plus living room, kitchenette, bathroom and dining space and fully furnished. On one tranler there was a sign drawing attention of newlyweds to the fact that the down payment was less than the cost of furnishing a three room apartment. Freezers, frigidanres, home heating equipment, gardening aids, from the common gardening rake to baby tractors and all the accesories, boats, canoes and motors of all kinds and an all breed dog show. All this and more and twice-a-day grand stand show and no wonder that attendance records are going over the top.

Dog Show Only Disappointment

What an opportunity this show presents to stimulate interest in sporting dogs and yet it is my feeling that in making this an all-breed show the sponsors are perhaps missing the boat. In my book sporting dogs when shown on the bench should be judged by special-

Gets 10 Years For Slaying Winchester Man

Walter Cierpisz, 17 - year - old Army private, said to have a mental age of 10, was convicted of manslaughter Saturday and sentenced to 10 years hard labor at Calgary.

Cierpisz, from Windsor Ont., was tried for murder in the rifle slaying last January 5 of Pte. Robert Bilow of Winchester, Ont., in a washroom at Currie Barracks, Calgary. A jury deliberated 104 minutes before returning a verdict of not guilty of murder but guilty of manslaughter.

Mr. Justice Boyd McBride told the jury it could return one of four verdicts: guilty of murder as charged, not guilty, guilty of manslaughter or acquittal because of insanity at the time of the crime. He said evidence that Cierpisz had unlawfully killed Bilow was overwhelming.

The soldiers were members of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Mr. Justice McBride said: "I think I am justified in taking into account your obvious immaturity and the lack of opportunities accorded most other young men. I suggest to you that you are quite mature enough to understand you have received an opportunity from this jury to become a good citizen.

"The jury has been merciful to you."

MORRISBURG AREA TO BE PARKLAND

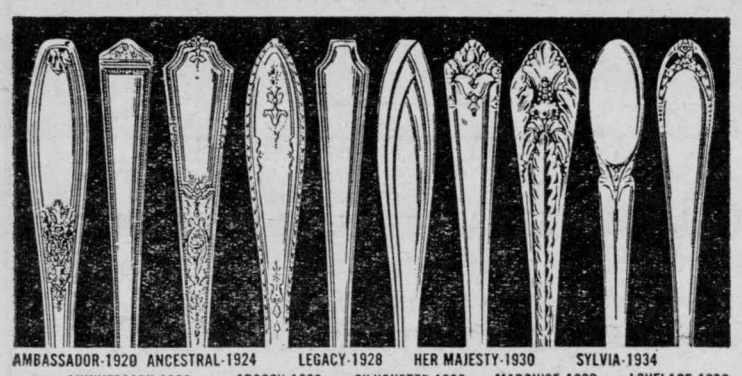

Plans for a parkland in conjunction with tthe St. Lawrence seaway which would rival Niagara as a recreation area and beauty spot are now on the drawing board, C. D. Crowe, deputy minister of travel and publicity, said last week.

Speaking to the members of the legislature's committee on travel and publicity, Mr. Crowe said a large acreage of land has been set aside in the Morrisburg area for the project.

"It should eventually equal Niagara as a vacation playground," he said.

The committee recommended that the government appoint a select committee to study all aspects of the tourist trade.

Committee chairman R. E. Elliot (PC—Hamilton East) said the province was planning the development of 60 parks under the new Parks Act now before the legislature.

He is survived by one sister, Mrs. Leonard Barkley, Morrisburg.

Funeral service was conducted at the G. L. Keck Funeral Home by the Rev. J. Hardwick of Knox Presbyterian Church. Burial will be made in the Spring at Maple Ridge Cemetery.

SEEDING RATES AND MIXTURES FOR HAY AND PASTURE

At this time of the year some consideration should be given to the kind and amount of meadow seed which will be required for this spring's seeding needs. The kind of seed and the rate of seeding will depend on the type of soil and climate and also on the purpose for which the seeding is made, whether for hay or hay and pasture, says C. B. Dalton, Illustration Stations Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Few grasses and legumes meet all requirements under all conditions of growth and all purposes or uses, thus the reasons for a mixture. Grasses usually are most productive in the spring and early summer, remaining relatively unproductive during the rest of the season. Legumes generally are better yielding than grasses and while they make best growth in spring they continue to grow later into the summer than the grasses to provide more aftermath for hay, silage or pasture.

In the nine annual yields of hay mixtures and rates of seeding test at the Mindemoya, Ont., Substation, mixture (a) seeded at the rate of 5 lb. of timothy, 6 lb. of red clover, 5 lb. of orchard grass and 2 lb. of alsike, gave ain average yield per acre of 1.14 tons of hay, while, mixture (b) seeded at 8 lb. of timothy, 3 lb. of red clover, 3 lb. of alfalfa (Grimm), and 2 lb. of alsike, yielded an average of 1.80 tons per acre, or 58.1 per cent better yielding than mixture (a). Mixture (c) seeded at the rate of 12 lb. of timothy, 4.5 lb. of alfalfa (Grimm), 4.5 lb. of red clover and 3 lb. of alsike yielded an average of 2.03 tons per acre or 78.9 per cent better than mixture (a). Under these conditions the heavier seeding rate gave consistently better hay yield and certain species were better adapted than others, as for example the mixture containing timothy was better yielding than the mixture containing orchard grass.

While the seed used in the above experiment was commercial grade, in recent years new varieties of a number of grasses and legumes have been developed and selected, seeral of which have been found to be better than old commercial strains. Climax timothy showed a much heavier and leafier growth with proportionately less stems than the commercial seed. Ladak alfalfa yielded 27.3 per cent more hay than Grimm alfalfa in pure seedings. Leon and Ottawa varieties of red clover showed greater yielding ability than did commercial seed. Parkland brome grass was superior to commercial brome in yield and in leafiness. Red Canary grass seeded on low poorly drained land, which is usually under water for several weeks in the spring produced dense leafy growth with stems reaching to a height of sevenand a half feet. This grass is suitable for pasture, hay or ensilage. It is highly adaptable to low wet land, even thriving on areas which flood for periods of two to three weeks, producing an abundant leafy growth from early spring to late autumn. While reed canary grass does best on low wet soil, it gives good account of itself on high land.

SALT IN THE LAUNDRY

To remove mildew from linen, mix salt with soap, powdered chalk or starch and lemon juice into a paste and apply to both sides of the linen, then lay it out in the sun until the stain has disappeared and wash in the usual way; or moisten the spot, rub thickly with salth and soap, and place out in the sun until stain is removed.

To set coloured clothes; make a strong solution of salt and hot water, using about ¾ cup of salt in each gallon of water, and plunge any delicately coloured fabric into it, letting it remain until quite cold. This will effectively set the colour

To remove fruit stains apply salt to the stain and pour boiling water over it; or apply lemon juice, and salt and let it stand a little while, then wash it out.

If clothes pins are boiled in a salt brine they will become toughened. This will also prevent their sticking to the clothes in frosty weather.

Much Worse

A friend once wrote Mark Twain a letter stating that he was in very bad health, and concluding: "Is there anything worse than having toothache and earache at the same time?"

The humorist wrote back: "Yes, rheumatism and Saint Virtus's dance."

Don: "Our choices of mate."

The Mixing Bowl

Hello Homemakers! Fish is our meat. We can always be sure of pleasing the family with a variety of fish dishes. Wherever there is a store with a frozen cabinet for fish there will be our favourite fillet of sole along with salmon and halibut steaks, and an assortment for cubed haddock, cod, perch, etc. No doubt there will be fresh pickeral and smelts next week since the fishing boats are in Lake Erie now.

By the way do not forget to add canned fish to your groceryl ist. If you make chowders and casseroles of canned fish select tuna flakes, finnan haddie, pink salmon, fish cakes or pilchards. However, fish for salads should be red salmon, sardines, crabmeat or shrimp. Whatever way you serve fish a relish or garnish is needed. Perhaps you have some homemade beet-and-horseradish, tomato or cucumber relish or you may wish to buy an emergancy bottle of Tartar sauce. On the other hand theres 'nothing better than a wedge of lemon and dried or fresh parsley.

Baked Fish in Foil

2 to 3 lbs. thawed fish fillets (perch, white fish, etc.)
¼ cup salad oil
2 carrots, sliced
2 onions, sliced
2 tbsps. parsley

Place each fillet in centre of 12 inch square foil. Sprinkle each side of fish with oil, salt and parsley. Place a few slices of carrot and onion on top. Wrap fish neatly in foil, making a double fold at ends.

Place in a shallow pan and bake 25 to 30 mins. in preheated electric oven of 450 degs. Serves 4.

1 pint scallops
2 cups hot water
1 tbsps. lemon juice

¼ cup pickle relish
¼ cup relish

Good Hay And Pasture Mixtures

The choice of ingredients in hay or pasture seed mixture is very important. The area in which the mixture is to be grown and the purpose for which it is to be used will determine the proportions and species, says M. R. Wiancko Expeinmental Station, Kapuskasing, Ontario.

Use of Altaswede late red clover at Kapuskasing, in a red clover, timothy, alsike hay mixture increased the yield 27 per cent over a double cut red clover. Reducing the production of late red clover by 4 pounds and replacing it with 5 pounds of Alfalfa increased the yield by an additional 10 per cent. Eliminating red clover from an Alfalfa, red clover, timothy, alsike mixture reduced the yield of hay 5 per cent.

In the great clay belt of Northern Ontario use of double cut red clover will allow haying or sileage operations to commence a few days earlier but will reduce yield and only give a low percentage of clover in the second year meadow. Altaswede late red clover is more perennial in habit and will give a good stand in the second year. The recommended hay mixture for well drained land is Alfalfa 5 pounds, late red clover 4 pounds, timothy 8 pounds and alsike 1 pound per acre. For poorly drained land use 8 pounds late red clover, 8 pounds timothy, and 2 pounds alsike per acre.

Pasture and hay-pasture mixtures should contain tall growing species such as alfalfa, red clover, alsike and timothy to provide a hay cut or pasture the first year after establishing themselves should include Kentucky blue, red top, creeping red fescue and white Dutch clover. While these pasture types do not necessarily increase the yield at Kapuskasing they apread production more uniformly over the pasture season. A well adapted pasture or hay-pasture mixture is as follows: timothy 4 pounds, red top 1 pound, Kentucky blue 3 pounds, creeping red fescue 4 pounds, white Dutch clover 1 pound, alfalfa 5 pounds, early red clover 2 pounds, late red clover 2 pounds and alsike 1 pound per acre.

Respite

The waterpipe had burst in the bathroom.

The head of the house was doing his best to stem the flow with his hands pending the arrival of the plumber.

Suddenly his small son burst into the bathroom and shouted excitedly "You can let go of the pipe now, dad."

"Thank goodness," exclaimed father. "Is the plumber here?"

No," was the reply. "The house is on fire!"

A BARGAIN FOR A BRUISE

The sales are on in the posh department stores of London's fashionable west end. Women, it is reported, pushed, kicked and scratched each other in a battle royal for the cut-price bargains.

Nurses and ambulance men were kept busy treating casualities. Only one mason who advertised tombstones reported gloomily that no one seemed to be dying for his bargains.

Both men and women lined up outside stores all through the week-end just to be in at the kill when the doors opened.

Icy gusts swept through London town on the first day of the sales but what's of the winter has been so mild that quality winter coats and suits were selling very cheap which drew most buyers.

Fred Stonham and his 16 year-old daughter, Margaret, topped all endurance records. They sat or stood for 36 hours outside one store to buy Stoneham's wife a mink coat for about $25. This coat was a "one only" come-on item, and the father and daughter took turns holding the No. 1 spot.

Police marshalled shoppers into stores in cheerful, orderly lines, but once inside the temper changed. Women jostled with one another to grab dresses and blouses off racks and counters. Many of the less robust fainted.

Others were stripping off their clothes in corners trying on bargains to make sure they had a good fit.

One furrier did a booming business. He sold hundreds of fox fur capes at $2. each.

A decrepit horse was being offered to the highest bidder. An old farmer watched as a young man in riding breeches bid for the animal. When the sale was completed, he turned to the fellow:

"Tell me," he said, "what on earth are you going to do with that nag?"

"Oh," replied the cocky young psortsman. I'm going to race him."

The farmer took a second look at the animal. "Well you'll win," he said.

MUST STOP USING LINDANE AS FLY KILLER

Ontario restaurants have been ordered to stop using lindane as a fly-killer, the legislature's committee on travel and publicity was informed last week.

J. G. Cunningham, of the industrial hygiene division of the department of health, said lindane—a chlorinated hydrocarbon—was a toxic agent and harmful to a person's liver.

OUTDOOR ROUNDUP—

ists in this field Judges not so qualified are inclined to base their decisions on their ideals of conformation and appearance without due regard for those qualities that make a good hunting dog. I would like to see this show confined to sporting dog entries and with specially qualified judges. I would also like to see some attempt made to include demonstrations which would point up that hunting dogs can be and are easily trained for the work that they are cut out for. To bring a field trial indoors no doubt presents many problems, but I still believe that some aspects of gun-dog training could be demonstrated in the ring.

DISCUSSION ON MINERALS TAKES PLACE AT FORUM

The meeting of the Berwick West Farm Forum was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Grady. There was a good attendance of members and visitors. All were very interested in the broadcast and discussion on the topic: "From under the earth, are our national resources being used in the best interests of all Canadians?"

After the reading of the minutes of last meeting, the correspondence and signpost; the members and visitors were divided into 2 groups. Aftetr a lengthy discussion, both groups reported much the same answers, agreeing that the mineral resources, including oil, being used in the best interests of all Canadians.

Our mines, oil, gas, etc., are in their infancy, but we could recommend conservation by producing as efficiently as possible and learn how to put inferior grades to good use, etc. Boards have been set up to control oil and gas production in Alberta and to see that drilling is done efficiently. Why not have a board for controlling minerals?

One of many reasons for my answer is that for every one person employed directly in the mining industry at least one other person is indirectly employed elsewhere and every Canadian in some way makes use of finished products. It is a long road from mine to finished product.

The questionaire—Choice of topics of next year: opinion of best and poorest discussion of topic during last year and several questions on our past year's meetings.

A few words of welcome by Mr. Grady were given to Mr. Middleton manager of the Bank of Montreal, Finch, and to Mr. Servage. The group was pleased to have Mr. Middletown give a short talk on the topic.
