People of This District Must Be Generously Provided for in St. Lawrence Development

$16,000,000 Amount Set Aside for Compensation. Morrisburg and Iroquois Dike Unspeakable, Says Hon. Geo. H. Challies.

Expressing himself in an unmistakable manner as to what his views are with regard to the damages the St. Lawrence waterway will mean in certain sections of this district, Hon. Geo. H. Challies, addressing the Electrical Contractors Association, stated that $16,000,000 was the engineer's estimated amount to compensate the Eastern Ontario municipalities affected thereby, and that the people of this district must be generously provided for. The idea of Morrisburg and Iroquois having to carry on behind a dike, he said, was unspeakable. This should eliminate the possibilities of such a conclusion, existing in the minds of many in this district.

Mr Challies spoke, in part, as follows:

"There is one phase of the Waterways enterprise that must not be lost sight of—the fact that it cannot be consummated without causing extensive and expensive damages to the frontier municipalities bordering the St. Lawrence. It is axiomatic that these damages must be kept to the absolute minimum, and what cannot be avoided must be provided for with that generosity and sympathy due to one of the older sections of the Province, namely the St. Lawrence River Valley in Eastern Ontario.

"The people affected in this area simply ask justice tempered with mercy—justice because their property cannot be taken without due compensation, and mercy because they fear local interests may be neglected in the whirlpool of international negotiation and inter-Governmental discussion.

"The people who will be affected now realize that this Waterway project is going to be built, and therefore they must accept the inevitable, but they insist upon their interests being considered sufficiently in advance of the commencement of construction operations to permit them to accommodate themselves to the new conditions with a minimum of readjustment hardship.

"During the early stages of the international discussions of this enterprise, these frontier people were properly apprehensive because there were those in authority on both sides of the boundary who were prepared to agree upon a scheme of development which would cause ruthless and unnecessary damage. It was even proposed that towns like Morrisburg and Iroquois would have to carry on behind dikes, and that thousands of acres of the finest farm properties on this continent would be sacrificed. Better counsels have prevailed and it is now, so far as Canada is concerned, at any rate, the accepted principle that a double stage scheme of development must be carried out in international territory. This will result in the flooding and other incidental damages being reduced to a minimum and has been brought about very largely by the strong stand taken by the Government of this Province, ably supported by the Hydro Commission whose engineering representatives have successfully induced the Dominion Government to accept a double-stage scheme as best for Canada. Their conclusions are set out in a Conference Report dated in April 1932.

"In this Conference Report, some $16,000,000.00 has been estimated as the amount required to pay for damages that will result to private property, to municipalities and for road and railway diversion. So far as the private property and the municipalities are concerned, such estimates must be taken simply as a more or less reliable indication of the minimum cost.

"Before leaving this phase of the situation, I take this opportunity of formally thanking the Government of the day for the constructive way in which it has already protected the interests of the municipalities bordering the St. Lawrence and I am confident that long before this construction work is commenced, a solution of their financial readjustment difficulties will be found, which will satisfy the people of these municipalities."

MONTREAL MOTOR SHOW

The Montreal Motor Show will open its doors next Saturday, January 20th, at noon. After the success which crowned the Motor Show at the Grand Central Palace in New York, a success which has shattered all previous records, the organizers of the Montreal Show are more than enthusiastic. In fact, if the New York Exposition attracted larger crowds this year, it was due entirely to the curiosity shown by the public to see the new marvels produced by the manufacturers. Automobiles have withstood radical changes during the past few months and the Show is the best place to study the new inventions—independent front wheel suspension, automatic transmissions eliminating altogether the gear-shift lever, etc. Bodies have been totally transformed in many cases and, for the first time, we may see aerodynamic cars in the full meaning of the word.

All this, which can be taken into account for the success of the New York Show, will be seen at the Montreal Motor Show. But besides this, the Montreal Exhibition is held this year in a new building of unquestionable beauty, the Sun Life Building. This skyscraper is the largest in Montreal, and possibly in all of Canada. Situated in the centre of the city, it is in the midst of hotels, theatres, play-houses and the larger stores. The organizers of the Montreal Show can thus be doubly sure of an unprecedented success since the Exposition, besides being as worthwhile as that of New York, will have the advantage of being in a building which, by itself, is of special interest.

Thousands and thousands of visitors will come to Montreal from various points in the Province of Quebec, in Ontario, in the New England States and in the Maritime Provinces, more so on account of the fact that the Montreal Motor Show coincides with many special railway excursions at very reduced rates.

There are many who will take advantage of this occasion to visit Montreal and see the Motor Show at the same time, killing two birds with one stone, so to speak. Hotels also offer specially reduced rates during this week, and this is another item worth considering.

The Montreal Motor Show will open its doors next Saturday, and will remain open until eleven o'clock in the evening. It will be closed all day Sunday, January 21st. It will reopen Monday, January 22nd and every day during the week, at ten o'clock in the morning and remain open until eleven o'clock in the evening.

CAPTIVE, FUGITIVE, ALCOHOL ALL ELUDE LUCKLESS CONSTABLE

Two alleged rum-runners outwitted a lone member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police force at Cornwall on Monday, when he had them within his grasp. The wanted men not only managed to escape, but took with them their load of alcohol.

After a long vigil on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, near Cornwall, Constable T.A. Humphries spotted a horse and cutter crossing the river on the ice road, and he suspected a rum-running attempt. When Humphries tried to stop the cutter, one of its two occupants jumped out and ran off. Unable to give chase for fear of losing the other man, the constable inspected the cutter and found it loaded with twenty-five gallons of alcohol. He placed the second occupant of the cutter, Louis Lacelle, Cornwall, under arrest and drove with his prisoner to town. On arrival, Constable Humphries alighted and walked beside the cutter, hoping to catch the man who had escaped. At a busy intersection in East Cornwall, Lacelle whipped up the horse and leaped from the cutter, running south on Marlborough Street. Constable Humphries gave chase, but failed to notice a slippery patch on the sidewalk and tumbled. He got up, but had run only a few steps when he fell again. This gave Lacelle quite a lead, and Constable Humphries, realizing that he could not catch his man, fired three shots into the air in an effort to bring his escaped prisoner to a halt, but the shots had no effect, and Lacelle was lost from sight.

While Constable Humphries was pursuing Lacelle, the other ex-occupant of the cutter, who was hiding nearby and awaiting just such an opportunity, ran down the street in the opposite direction, caught up with the horse and cutter, and made off with it.

Police endeavored immediately to trace the two men and the load of alcohol, but to date their efforts have been fruitless.

BUTCHER SHOP AND DWELLING DAMAGED BY FIRE

Fire originating, it is said, in the attic from over-heated stove pipes, on Thursday morning caused serious damage to the building on Main Street West known as the Rice building, at one time occupied by Mr. Alfred Clement, and the late Wm. Rice.

The fire was first noticed about 8 a.m., and the fire brigade, responding promptly to the alarm, experienced considerable difficulty in fighting the blaze, as the fire made slow progress between the walls, and clouds of smoke made the work of the firmen even more difficult. It was not until the firemen, several hours later, had cut holes into the walls in order to reach the steadily progressing blaze within, that the fire was extinguished.

The lower part of the building was occupied by Mr. W.C. Coir, butcher, while the upper flat was occupied by the owner, Mr. Thos. Kerr, as a residence.

The contents of the building suffered little damage, a large portion being carried out before the fire spread, but the damage to the building was considerably large, and was partly covered byinsurance.

Jean coaxes [illegible]l to go to Paris. On the road to Paris [illegible]an finds a string of pearls in Euan's [illegible]ocket. He snatches the case from her [illegible]nd the car crashes. The accident is discovered by Jerry Grant, who takes Jean back to his hostess, Helen Gorst. Upon learning of Euan's disappearance, Doreen behaves in a strange manner. M. Rivaux, French inspector, investigates. Geoffrey Winton tells Helen that his wife's pearls are missing. Rivaux confronts Jean with this as the reason for Euan's disappearance. Jean visits Euan's friend, de Laurier, whom she dislikes, and learns that Euan is in debt to him. Meanwhile Jerry Grant meets M. Perichon, famous detective, who promises to help them.

CHAPTER XIII.

Silently Grant walked away with Dan, for he was thinking of Jean, and wondering whether the time had come to propose to her. He wanted to, devilishly, but a hint of Scottish caution withheld him. It would be a pity to do it too soon and be rebuffed. He thought over the moments when he had been with her, and tried to gather from them the portents in his favor, but they were pathetically few. Just odd half hours spent in cheering her up whilst she was ill, and Washburn had often been present. The nearest he had come to intimacy with her had been that morning when he had found her in the olive grove crying. She had quickly wiped her eyes and pretended it was nothing, but he knew, and had done all he could to comfort her, short of actually making love. He had wanted to most terribly, for somehow she had looked very pathetic, but he had known it was not the moment. Her whole thought had been with that brother of hers, and to thrust his own feelings in would have been ineffectual. He had come nearer to her in intimacy all the same, for she had told him a little about Euan—only the sweet things—speaking of her love for him, and of how much they had been together.

Washburn glanced at his friend, who was walking beside him with long strides down the road leading to that part of the town known as the Condamine, and saw that he was far away. At least, however, he broke in:

"Say, is this a walking tour?"

"Um." Grant scarcely noted him. He was just remembering that he had placed his hand over Jean's and asked her whether she would not let him help. He had thought that she was going to tell him something—he had seen the very words trembling on her lips, but she had pulled herself up before uttering them and with a sigh had turned away.

They were nearly at the railway station when Washburn struck. Grabbing Grant's arm he stopped dead.

"Look here, I'm not going any further. Anyway, I wish you'd stop looking like a fish with toothache and talk a bit. God gave me ears to hear with, but the devil a little they hear from you these days. Your tongue will dry up if you don't use it."

Grant shook himself mentally and chuckled:

"Sorry, old man. I'm worried over this business."

"Don't I know. I saw you last night in the moonlight pulling all the daisies in the garden to pieces. She loves me—she loves me not—does—doesn't. Gosh, why don't you grab the girl by the hair and ask her to marry you? She can only stab you with faint No's."

Grant shook his head. "Wish I could, but that's not the way to do it."

"You Scotch are too done up; you should pull off a button or two and let your caution out. It's choking you."

The Scotsman regarded the now sulky face of his usually good-humored friend and said: "Look here, Dan, I'm going to stand by Jean Graham whatever happens. If that doesn't suit you, I'll move to an hotel!"

A wide grin overspread Washburn's face and he shook his head: "Oh, no you don't," he said. "You're not going to give me the frozen cold mitt. I told Mrs. Gorst I was in it, and I'm not going back on my word, even if life with you isn't a cocktail. Anyway, look what I did for you today. Didn't I introduce you to the world's longest nose?"

"Um," muttered Grant doubtfully. "You mean old Perichon?"

"Sure I do. You needn't think because he looks like a pelican that he doesn't know anything. His head's as packed with sense as an egg is with chicken."

Suddenly Grant laughed. For no reason in particular but that he felt better. He would go up to the Villa Marguerite later and invite Jean to lunch with him on Wednesday. That would be a beginning.

CHAPTER XIV.

Helen Gorst was astounded and not a little disturbed to learn from Jean that she was going to lunch with Baron Max de Laurier. But then, several things about the girl had been puzzling her in the last few days. She knew, of course, that she was horribly worried, especially as the press had got wind of the story and had announced the loss of Doreen Winton's pearls in words which, although not libellous, unpleasantly connected the young Grahams with their disappearance, by drawing attention to the fact that the pearls had been missing ever since the day of their departure. Naturally it was all very trying for Jean, but it wasn't so much this as a kind of nervous reticence which had been growing upon her in the last few days, which disturbed Helen. Until recently the girl had been willing enough to talk things over but now she could scarcely be induced to mention the affair, although quite obviously she never ceased to think of it.

As indeed she could not. "The Baron knew something!" said Jean over and over to herself. He knew that Euan had had some pearls. Probably he did not know that they were Doreen Winton's—if they were—but he would suspect it now that the loss had been made public in the press. A shudder of horror and of shame passed through her as she thought about it. If only Euan had told her how and where he had got those pearls. She simply could not believe that he had stolen them, and yet—that two thousand pounds!

"Oh, Euan!" she gasped. Two thousand pounds! It was appalling. And to owe it to Max de Laurier of all people. That, of course, was why he wanted her to be nice to the Baron. Oh, she saw it all now. And she had believed that by selling her little bits of jewellery she had saved him from debt! The disappointment was terrible, like a dead weight upon her heart, and quite beyond the relief of tears. Euan, for whom so much had been done, to whom so much had been given. She thought of their mother—she had promised her before she died to look after Euan, and of their father. He would have to know as soon as a letter could reach him. But although her thoughts reverted to de Laurier, for he seemed to her a great danger. How much did he know and what? No doubt more than he had confessed to. But why had he waited until the last moment like that, before mentioning the pearls? Anyway, she decided that she must lunch with him and find out what he knew.

When Jerry Grant came over to invite her to lunch with him the next day at the Reserve at Beaulieu, she refused, explaining that she was engaged to lunch with Max de Laurier.

He started at her and ejaculated: "Oh, hell!"

"I'm sorry, Jerry. I'd love to lunch another time."

"But—" The young man broke off. Of course it was none of his business really, but why this new craze for de Laurier? He disliked the man and everything about him. He was of the dark, smooth type which Englishmen abhor. The sort of man he could never by any stretch of imagination visualize in tweeds upon a moor with a gun over his shoulder, or even upon a golf course. To Grant he was a product of Hotels de Luxe, he went with thick pile carpets and hot restaurants, and looked his best when twisted in the contortions of a tango. None of which was like Jean, and yet she had seen him the day before and was lunching with him on the morrow. He could not understand it; it was beyond him. However, he supposed he had no right to object, and changed his protest into another invitation.

"Well, why not come over to the Cafe de Paris afterwards and let me give you some tea?"

"I'd love that," she agreed readily.

"Good," he grinned. "As Dan would say, 'Make it snappy.' I'll wait outside for you. We might go for a drive first or—or something."

The next day M. Gustave Perichon sat in the lounge of the Hotel de Paris with an apertif before him, apparently ruminating. He was thinking of the interview he had had earlier that morning with his friend Rivaux—or Ris de Veau as he had used to call him, because he had always maintained that the poor fellow had sweetbreads inside his skull instead of brains. They had discussed the case of Euan Graham together quite amicably and frankly, because Perichon had kept it dark that he had any interest in the case whatever.

"Ah, mon vieux, I shall get promotion for this," Rivaux had said.

"Idiot," thought Perichon. "He'll never be promoted; he's too small. Sees everyone through himself and it is a narrow outlook. Now me—ah, what a difference. I am big. I look at the world and the people in it, not just as fat little Papa Perichon."

Going back to the case in hand, he recalled having asked Rivaux why he considered the Grahams to be guiuty. Rivaux had smiled, purred almost, as he explained: firstly, that the brother Graham was a bad hat, that he gambled and drank; neither had his associates been of the best. Perichon had then led the conversation round to de Laurier, but there had seemed to be nothing against him. He was rich, apparently, and as far as anyone knew anything about him, respectable.

"Then why," had asked Perichon, "do you suspect Mlle. Graham?"

So slowly and very pompously Rivaux had divulged his reason; that the Grahams hardly knew the Wintons, but had come to stay with them for the first time. That the boy had lost much money, certainly a great deal more than he had. On the night before his disappearance he had again lost heavily and had seemed in a very reckless mood, yet according to the testimony of Baron de Laurier he had promised to pay all he owed in a few days. The testimony against the sister was that mademoiselle adored her brother. Mrs. Gorst and mademoiselle had said so. She would do anything for him. Perichon remembered what a point Rivaux had made of this and nodded his head slowly. It was important.

High Water at London

This is the wave that rang from shore to shore
With alien battle cries; this is the wave
That stood at Caesar's prow, that scornful gave Echo to Norman shout and Danish oar;
This swerving flood in many old nights has drawn
Seaward with such rare freight of dreams and fame.
Valor, and high adventure without a name,
That even today its foam runs fire at dawn.

Ay, even today its tides go burnished bright
With pomp of kings and beauty of watching queens,
Glint of old armor, arrogant flags unfurled;
And never this hour comes brimming to its height
But, slow and deep, an answering pulse begins
In all the lonely waters of the world.

British National Council of Women

Conference Discusses Ways and Means to Make Things Easier for Girl Who Takes Up Nursing

"We must do something to make things easier for the girl who takes up nursing but cannot stand the racket of her first year as a probationeer," said Mrs. Oliver Strachey, speaking at the conference of the British National Council of Women, at Torquay.

She was a member of the "Lancet" Commission, which inquired recently into conditions in the nursing profession, and was speaking after Mrs. Keynes, the Mayor of Cambridge, had urged that it should be possible for candidates for nursing to take part in a preliminary State examination before leaving a secondary school.

Mrs. Strachey said the commission found that in many places probationer nurses were so miserably overworked that during their first year of training they broke down.

"We found," she added, "that one fifth of the girls who go into nursing break down under the strain, and have to leave the profession during their first year.

"Another serious factor which keeps girls out of the profession is the gap which exists between the time when they leave school and the time when they are old enough to enter the hospital.

"Nursing is losing thousands of suitable girls because of this age gap."

One way of filling the gap, Mrs. Strachey suggested, was to allow girls to prepare for the theoretical part of the State examination before they went into hospital.

Married Women

The conference passed a resolution declaring that regulations having the effect of dismissing women from employment on marriage were unjust, uneconomic, and contrary to public interest.

"In Germany," said Mrs. Eva Hartree, of Cambridge, "150,000 young women have been bribed to leave industry to get married. We claim, however, that it is a fundamental right of every individual, regardless of sex, to sell his or her labor for gain.

"It is a private matter between a woman and her husband how they arrange their lives. It is no business of the employer.

"The only business of the employer is whether the work is well done and what payment should be given for it."

Mrs. Hartree declared that refusal to allow married women to work was putting an obstacle in the way of marriage.

"To make a woman give up her work on marriage leads to many secret marriages and even to a great number of immoral marriages—of people living together," she said.

"We all know that young people are the worse for having to wait to get married. It has a shocking effect on young people that they cannot marry until the thirties."

Named Physiopolis

Paris.—The first child to be born in the Paris nudist colony on an island in the River Seine arrived recently and was christened Physiopolis.

The infant, an 8-pound boy, was the first child to be born on the island in 200 years, records showed. The parents are a French professor and his wife, prominent nudists, who decided to have a 100 per cent. nudist birth as a scientific experiment.

Despite the fact that this so far has been the coldest winter in years, the mother took a daily swim in the Seine and walked five miles around the island, completely nude.

Through Dr. Gaston Druville, nudist leader, the mother announced:

"I did this for all the women of the world, to prove that child birth is just a normal function, without danger, if we lead a natural life."

Both mother and child were reported doing well.

Relaxation Necessary To Healthful Sleep

Relaxation is absolutely necessary to healthful, restful sleep.

When you get into bed, try to relax completely before sleep comes to you. One of the best ways to erase lines and wrinkles around the eyes and mouth is to get eight hours of restful sleep.

Lie flat on your back, without a pillow, with your arms at your sides. Breath deeply but do not count your breath or be conscious of it. If worries of the day persist in coming into your mind, think of yards and yards of black velvet or some other soft, rich but dark fabric. You'll find that relation will come sooner that way. Counting sheep makes your mind work—and that's exactly what you don't want to do.

The woman who works very hard or who has many things on her mind should try to get a few minutes complete relaxation in the middle of the day. A two-hour nap isn't necessary, but twenty or thirty minutes will do wonders for her nerves. The thing to do, of course, is to select a quiet lunching spot and go there alone. Don't try to talk or think. Simply eat a light, well-balanced meal and then lie down somewhere for a little while. If it's impossible to stretch out on a bed, try and find a comfortable chair in a secluded corner and relax. Close your eyes. You'll be surprised how much easier the afternoon's work will be.

Protect Child's Feet And Legs from Cold

Some mothers muffle their children almost up to the eyes in cold weather; others don't give them enough to wear in the belief that they will become hardy.

Now there's a happy medium. The parts that matter most are the extremities. Hands and feet, legs and arms must be protected.

You often see children with their chests swathed in heavy clothing, a thick scarf wound round their necks and not nearly enough covering on their legs.

Too much clothing round the chest cramps the lungs; it prevents the child from running about, for he soon gets breathless; it also leads to excessive perspiration after exercise which may be followed later by chill.

Another thing to remember is that if the extremities are cold a larger proportion of the food intake has to be used to provide heat when it is needed for growth.

A commercial traveller who had removed his spectacles after completing his business in a furnishing shop at Coalville, Leicestershire, walked through a plate-glass window, which he had mistaken for a door. He was uninjured.

Prevention Proves To Be Best Cure

Philadelphia Bureau to Protect Young Boys From Entering Erring Paths

Philadelphia.—The Crime Prevention Bureau of this city, slightly over a year and a half in operation, has had definite results in crime reduction among boys between 16 and 21 years of age, the group it seeks to reach, in the opinion of Mr. Thomas A. Meryweather, executive director of the Crime Prevention Association, which co-operate with the bureau and was instrumental in its formation.

Comparing the figures for arrests among boys of this group, designated as "older boys" by the association, a significant reduction of 30 per cent. is shown for the months between July and November of this year, as against the same period for last year in the four districts of the city where the association, together with the officers of the Crime Prevention Bureau, are functioning. In addition to this reduction in arrests, the association notes that there are fewer repeaters among those who are arrested.

The plan of the association has been fourfold, according to Mr. Meryweather, attempting to reach the boys through their homes, through their play, or recreation, their work and their worship, as too often it has been found that the youth has drifted into crime because of the lack of home ties, little or no supervised recreation or work, and no active religious contact.

One of the most valuable results of the crime prevention work has been in the development of a friendly relationship between the boys of the neighborhood and the police, Mr. Meryweather pointed out.

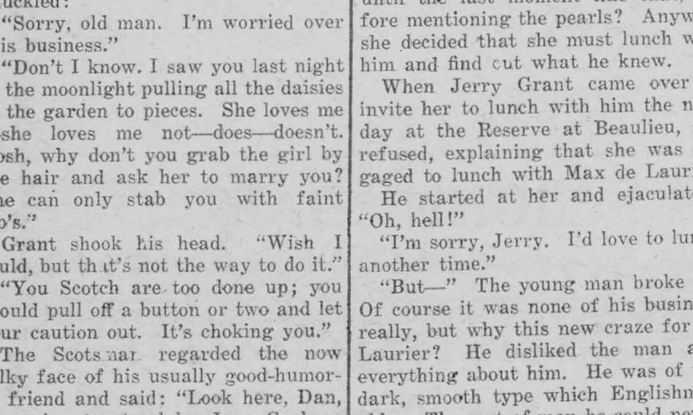

Through a periodic personal investigation of all places of public amusement in the district, the crime prevention officers are able to keep a check on the moral conditions of the neighborhood.

KITCHEN TRIALS.

Time seems to fly faster in the kitchen than any other place, and if one takes one's eyes from the vegetables on the stove, they take it upon themselves to burn.

The best of cooks occa[redacted]s, add makes mistakes, but her tru[redacted]d put shown by her ability to turn [redacted]This ure into a success.

Any vegetable that has jus[redacted]discol- to burn may be placed—in [redacted]lt will ing pan—into a larger pan [redacted]excel- water. The vegetable then should be shaken out of the burned pan into a [redacted] pan or bowl, leaving any scorched material in the pan. If not sufficiently cooked, a little boiling water may be added and the cooking finished. Season and serve as usual. If things have not gone too far, most of the vegetable may be served without a taint of burn.

Shaking Instead of Stirring.

A precaution for the new cook is that of shaking the sauce pan in which a vegetable is cooking. Often the smooth-cut, flat surface of a vegetable sticks and burns before the water is cooked. Shaking prevents this without crushing the vegetable as stirring might do. Potatoes and sliced carrots are examples of vegetables that often scorch because of this flat surface.

Too much salt has often spoiled the soup. A remedy for this is to add from half a cup to a whole cup of sliced raw potatoes to the kettle of soup. Let stand ten or fifteen minutes, remove potatoes and serve. The potatoes absorb the excess salt.

Mayonnaise and Custard.

If the mayonnaise separates put another egg yolk in a fresh bowl and slowly beat in the curdled dressing, continuing as usual until all the lemon juice and oil are used.

If a custard sauce curdles, beat it well with a dover beater. This same beater will beat the lumps out of white sauce that has been made in too big a hurry. If the sauce is very lumpy it can be rubbed through a fine sieve and reheated.

If the breakfast cereal contrived to lump despite vigorous stirring a heavy wire whisk or a strong dover beater will beat out the lumps and make the cereal appetizingly smooth.

Curdled Soup.

A tomato cream soup that shows an inclination to curdle may be converted into a thick tomato puree by adding butter and flour rubbed together in the proportion of 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon flour to each cup of soup. One tablespoon of fine sifted soda cracker crumbs added to each cup of soup will correct the tendency to curdle, too.

A gelatine jelly that refuses to stiffen in the required length of time may be hurried if more gelatine is softened in cold water, dissolved over hot water and added at once to the stubborn jelly.

If jam becomes hard and sugary before it is used up, place it in a moderate oven until the sugar melts. When cool the jam is almost as good as new.

HOW TO BEAT.

Most housewives have an aversion to any article to be cooked that requires lengthy beating as it is so tiring. Try to remember to beat from the elbow and do not use the whole arm in the motion. It is far less tiring.

A GOOD FRIEND.

Vinegar is a very good friend, both in the kitchen, dining room, and the cleaning cupboard.

Rub vinegar on tanni-stained teacups and teapots. Add some to the water when cleaning carpets and see how it brings up the color.

A vinegar compress applied to sprains is most soothing. A raw egg in vinegar is strengthening for a weak throat. Two tablespoonfuls added to the rinsing water on washing day will give a nice finish to silk stockings and underwear.

A few drops of vinegar will soften the toughest meat. To whiten artichokes and leeks, add a little vinegar to the water you plunge them into as they are scraped.

The unpleasant smell of greens cooking will be avoided if a little vinegar is added to the boiling water.

When eggs are high priced, two teaspoons of vinegar used in place of an egg will improve the lightness of a cake. Add a teaspoonful to the water in which you boil preserved eggs and [redacted]

[redacted] excellent for polishing windows.

TAPIOCA MERINGUE.

Here is a way of cooking tapioca, so that what is "good for the children" will be liked, too.

Soak two tablespoons of tapioca in cold water overnight. Next day, bring to the boil, sweeten to taste, and add sufficient milk to make the mixture into a thick cream. Flavor with lemon rind, nutmeg or a few drops of vanilla, then leave to cool.

Add the yolks of two eggs and pour into a pie dish smeared with a little jam. Whisk the whites of the eggs with a teaspoon of sugar, pile on top top of the pudding, then bake in a slow oven until slightly browned.

PLENTY OF FAT.

The success of frying articles dipped in egg and cracker almost always depends upon having plenty of fat in the pan, and that very hot. In hotels, the fat is so deep that there is no need to turn the article to brown on all sides. After cooking, the remaining fat may be strained into a glass jar and kept for future use, so it really is not as extravagant as it sounds.

BATHING DE LUXE.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness"—the old saying goes—and modern women agree. For there is nothing in the world which makes you feel any better and more relaxed than a warm bath.

Present day women go a step further by saying that bathing is a real pleasure, providing you have the necessary toilet and bathroom accessories close at hand.

If some one gave you a nice big box of bath powder for Christmas, and you happen to love the odor of it, why not match the scent with toilet water, soap and bath salts? There is something about having bathing things which really match that makes every woman a little happier.

Is your bathroom equipped with a long-handled bath brush? You really need one for your back. And you need a little flat brush, too—for nails, feet and the like.

Wash cloths should be rough and soap should lather easily no matter how hard or soft the water is in your particular locality.

Many girls prefer toilet water to bath powder. And some use both. Bath oils vie with bath salts for favor this New Year. Whichever one you choose, your daily bath will be more of a joy because of it.

PAINFUL CHILBLAINS.

In spite of precautions, some people are unlucky enough to get chilblains.

Provided you begin in time, it is sufficient to bathe them in very hot water, then dry the skin thoroughly by dabbing with a soft towel. Do not rub or you may break the skin.

If the chilblain is of long standing it often gives relief to paint the part with iodine every other day.

Where the skin has broken, there is some danger of septic poisoning of the wound. Carbolic ointment helps in these cases.

Dressings should not be applied unless the skin is broken. Great care must be taken where the toes are affected, because a bulky dressing increases the pressure inside the shoe.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Never trust to your memory when putting anything away for storage. It takes but a minute to write on the outside what is on the inside and you will be very glad you did so later on when you find your memory is not so reliable after all.

As a rule, salad dressing is generally associated with salads, but it can be used in many other ways. As a condiment, for example, to season steaks and chops and fish.

All egg mixtures, custard, souffles and puddings, should be baked in an oven at a low temperature. If the heat rises above 350 degrees you will not have good luck with any concoction containing eggs.

Baked potatoes are more delectable when rubbed with a vegetable oil or lard before baking. A small amount of either lard or oil in the centre of the palm is sufficient to prepare a dozen small potatoes. Potatoes baked in this way are easily peeled for frying purposes.

Beef liver can be made very much like calves' liver if soaked over night in sour milk.

Beets With Onions.

Four cups diced cooked beets, 1½ teaspoons salt, 1 cup coarsely chopped onion, 1 cup boiling water.

Arrange beets and onion in a greased casserole. Add the salt and boiling water, cover tightly and bake in moderate over 375 deg., about 45 minutes. If raw beets are used bake for an hour.

Julienne Beets.

Wash and cook large-sized beets in their skins until tender. Remove skins and cool the beets. Cut crosswise slices one-eighth inch thick, then cut these slices into Julienne strips the long way of the slices. When ready to serve them, re-heat the strips in butter, season with bit of lemon juice, salt and pepper.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson III. — January 21. — Jesus Begins His Ministry. — Matthew 4:12-25. Golden Text—Repent ye; for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.—Matt. 4:17.

TIME—April, May, A.D. 28, the second year of Christ's ministry.

PLACE—Capernaum. Sea of Galilee. Galilee.

"Now when he heard that John was delivered up." It was an act of deepest treachery, against which John the Baptist was compelled to preach, and this preaching was punished by Antipas, who seized John and shut him up in the gloomy prison-palace of Machærus, east of the Dead Sea. John languished there in a black dungeon for a year. "He withdrew into Galilee." We are left to conjecture why our Lord withdrew from Judæa and went northward to Galilee.

"And leaving Nazareth," He returned there, after an evangelistic tour of Galilee, a famous man. But he saw that they were eager to witness a miracle, and he refused point blank. Thereupon their admiration turned instantly to rage. They seized him and bore him to a lofty bluff near the town from which they were ready to hurl him headlong; but with majestic mien he passed through the mob, those angry men falling back before his royal gaze, and so he left Nazareth with a sad heart. "He came and dwelt in Capernaum." The word means "the village of Nahum" or "of consolation." "Which is by the sea." Capernaum was on the northwestern shore of the Sea of Galilee.

"That it might be fulfilled which was spoken through Isaiah the prophet." Another of Matthew's characteristic parallels of prophecy and fact, taken from Isa. 9: 1, 2.

"Galilee of the Gentiles." This was true in the time of Isaiah because so near to Phœnicia and Syria. In B.C. 164 Simon Maccabæus had carried the Jews out of Galilee (1 Macc. 5: 23). Many had later gone back, but it remained partly a Gentile country.

"The people that sat in darkness saw a great light." The people in all this region, represented as in darkness and ignorance, and with little religious life or light, now had Jesus, "the true light," to fill their hearts with heavenly truth. "And to them that sat in the region and shadow of death, to them did light spring up." He who came to seek and to save that which is lost, fixed in this remote and despised section of the Holy Land the centre of his labors, and here chose most of the apostles who were to carry his teachings to Judæa and Samaria, and the ends of the earth (Acts 1:8).

"From that time began Jesus to preach." He had been preaching in Judæa for a year, but here begins a new epoch in his teaching. "And to say, Repent ye." From the beginning to the end of the New Testament, in every Gospel, in every Epistle, men are given to understand that they re before Almighty God sinners. "For the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Entering into the kingdom of heaven is rising out of those conditions of animal life which imply violence, selfishness, cruelty, appetite and lust, into those conditions which imply purity, honor, truth, fidelity, faith, hope and love.

"And walking by the Sea of Galilee." The Sea of Galilee is the largest body of water in the Holy Land. "He saw two brethren." Among the twelve disciples were two and possibly three sets of brothers. "Simon who is called Peter." Simon was a very common name in Palestine, the Hebrew form being Simeon. "And Andrew his brother." Andrew as a quiet, modest man, associated in the Gospels with the discovery of others and bringing them to Jesus. "Casting a net into the sea; for they were fishers." Our Lord chose for his followers humble men, lowly toilers and not the powerful and learned of the earth.

"And he saith unto them, Come ye after me." The first summons, by the Jordan, was a call to discipleship; this was more, it was a call to companionship, a summons to abandon their ordinary work and take up with Jesus the work of evangelism, a call to full-time service. "And I will make you fishers of men." The art of catching men resembles in many points the art of catching fish. You must know men in their classes and individualities, you must know their haunts, you must know their conditions, you must understand how to approach them.

"And going on from thence." The great haul of fishes was attended to, and our Lord passed farther along the beach. "He saw two other brethren, James the son of Zebedee." He became the first martyr among the Twelve. "And John his brother." This was the John who became the disciple whom Jesus loved. "In the boat with Zebedee their father." We are told nothing about Zebedee except that his wife was Salome. "Mending their nets; and he called them."

"And they straightway left the boat and their father, and followed him." They did not leave their father alone to do the work, for he had hired servants with him.

"And Jesus went about in all Galilee." Galilee was then very thickly populated. "Teaching in their synagogues." Christ was everywhere known as The Teacher. "And preaching the gospel of the kingdom." The two words "glad tidings" are combined in the Saxon word "gospel." "And healing all manner of disease and all manner of sickness among the people." In Christ's great strife with evil, it was bodily pain and disease which he made the special object of his personal work on earth.

"And the report of him went forth into all Syria." Syria was the Roman province to the north of Palestine. "And they brought unto him all that were sick, holden with divers diseases and torments, possessed with demons, and epileptic, and palsied." Today, as of old, Palestine is quite ignorant of the medical art, and the sufferings of her sick people are unrelieved.

"And there followed him great multitudes." Note the plural, not just one crowd, but crowds. "From Galilee and Decapolis." The name means the Ten Cities because the region contained ten prominent towns. "And Jerusalem and Judæa." From the farthest south of Palestine they brought their sick up to Galilee. "And from beyond the Jordan." That is, from the region to the east of the Jordan and the Dead Sea, Peræa, a country joined with Galilee in the tetrarchy of Herod Antipas.

Ate 42 Pancakes Wins Championship

Garrettsville, O.—They stacked the pancakes high. They poured the famed maple syrup of Portage County with a liberal hand. Sausage sizzled in the skillets.

And when the pancake eating championship of Northeastern Ohio was over, Charles Barholt, 22-year-old truck driver of Hiram, was the victor.

The score: 42 five-inch buckwheat cakes.

Seventeen men sat down at a lodge hall table. Barholt, an "unknown" so far as advance notices were concerned, hadn't eaten anything since breakfast.

Swallow Chokes Motor

One of those swallows that does not make a summer tried to stop a British tri-motored airplane recently by flying down the air intake of one engine on a flight between Batavia and Java. That particular power plant quit "cold," but the pilot went on for 40 miles on the other two. Investigating mechanics cleared the engine's throat for it and it functioned as well as ever, but the swallow was a total loss.

Cures Reported In Ulcer Cases

Amazing Results Reported at Medical Association Meeting

Cambridge, Mass. — Spectacular recoveries from stomach ulcers have been accomplished by treatment reminiscent of the "day by day in every way I am getting better and better" nostrum of Dr. Emil Coue, it was reported to the 93rd annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The amazing cures were attested to by four Columbia University psychologists and physicians, one of whom, Dr. M; N. Chappell, himself recovered, by the use of psychology, from a peptic ulster which had resisted ordinary treatment over a period of 16 years, he said. Those assisting him in the experiments were Doctors J. J. Stefano, J. S. Rogerson, and F. H. Pike, all of whom signed the report.

Symptoms of his ulcerous condition, which included hemorrhage, vanished six weeks after he had attended lectures by Dr. Rogerson on the influence of ideas in the control of organisms, Dr. Chappell testified. He and the other scientists then embarked on a seris of carefully planned experiments intended to determine if his recovery had been due merely to chance.

A total of 52 persons completed the experiment, 20 of whom were divided into a control group which received only ordinary medical attention. The remaining 32 comprised the experimental group, treated solely through psychology.

The psychology treatment consisted in part of lectures, which dealt with the relation between the activities of the brain of the organism as a whole. At the end of each lecture the subjects were given a drink of cold water, after which they closed their eyes while the experimenter made a number of general suggestions covering mastication, digestion, absorption, elimination, sleep, disturbing ideas, recovery from bodily ills, self confidence and the efficacy of experimental measures.

The subjects were not permitted to discuss any phase of their organic disorders or any other disturbing conditions except with Dr. Stefano. They were directed to turn their attention to pleasant memories whenever they found themselves dwelling on their disorders. They gave themselves suggestions aloud each night before retiring.

At the end of six weeks all but two of the experimental group were eating everything they desired. Of these two one showed no appreciable improvement throughout the six weeks not subsequently. The second was so well satisfied with his progress that he was unwilling to branch out on his diet as rapidly as the psychologist recommended. At the end of two months he was eating anything he wanted.

Only one of the 31 reported cured by the experiment had a serious recorrence after three months. One could not be located for subsequent examination. The remainder were found free of all objective and subjective symptoms.

1933 Cheese Production

Although it was hoped that production of cheese in Canada during 1933 would have been greater than in 1932, which in turn was about 3,000,000 pounds greater than in 1931, such has not proved to be the case. In all probability, production during 1933 will not be more than about 110,000,000 pounds, as compared with 113,704,000 pounds in 1931, and with 121,607,000 pounds in 1932.—Dominion Dairy Commissioner.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

POULTRY FEED FACTS

Completed experiments in poultry feeding show that skimmed milk is an excellent protein feed, that dry clover leaves with an occasional dose of Epsom Salts may replace rooes or sprouted oats, that home-mixed is as good as commercial grain, and that screenings of good quality may replace part of the good grain.

Time For Pruning Fruit Trees

The more moderate weather now being experienced in certain localities will give the people in those sections an opportunity to get their various fruit trees and bushes pruned Pruning can safely be done any time after the plants become dormant and all work done in this line in early winter will allow more time for the hundred-and-one jobs that turn up simultaneously when the open weather arrives in March or April.

Profit and Pullets

At present, prospects look bright for the poultryman and farmer who has a good flock of well-matured pullets. The cold snap will probably stiffen egg prices that are now offering a fair margin of profit over the cost of production in flocks that are laying satisfactorily.

At the present prices and with better prospects in view it will pay to feed a good balanced mash ration liberally and to give sufficient grain at night to ensure a well filled crop. Plenty of fresh water, with the chill off on cold days should always be provided. A frozen water pail left too long means a serious crimp in production.

One Million Dollar Increase for Ont. Live Cattle Export

The Ontario Marketing Board reports that during the past calendar year, Canadian exports of live cattle to Great Britain were in excess of 50,000 head: more than three times the number forwarded in 1932 Ontario exported some 30,000 animals or considerably more than half the total Dominion shipments. Assuming a mean average value of $50 per head, Ontario's export cattle business was worth upwards of $1,500,000 to the farmers of the Province last year, which is an increase of at least $1,000,000 over 1932.

More important to the average cattle raiser, however, is the fact that the removal of large numbers of cattle from the home market has considerably improved domestic prices. It is not an exaggeration to say that if this export trade had not developed, cattle shippers would be facing prices as low as 3c per pound instead of the prevailing quotations of around 6c per pound for top quality beef animals.

Special Dairy Course

Marked by the largest registration the class has had in some years the annual special three months' dairy course at O.A.C. opened the first week in January. Forty-eight names were enrolled to commence the class, and it is expected that another half-dozen or more names will be added. Of the 48 students listed, all but two are registered as from Ontario. The others are two men from Prince Edward Island.

A Valuable Booklet

A very interesting booklet entitled "The Yardstick" has recently been issued by the Ontario Marketing Board. It gives a review of the various standards and grades under which Ontario farm products are sold and an attempt is made to educate the housewife on how to buy on grade. The pamphlet also measures the responsibility of both producers and consumers to a continuing agricultural prosperity in Ontario and is intended to be the first of a series discussing this subject from different angles. Copies of the booklet may be obtained from the Ontario Marketing Board, Parliament Bldgs., Toronto.

Hay Marketing

Hay marketing in Western Ontario was very quiet in December, but much improvement in the situation is expected before spring. The principal movement this season has been by motor truck to the larger centres such as Toronto, and gradually the hay supply within trucking distance of these centres is being reduced. Nearly all the second-cut second-cut alfalfa has already been marketed for alfalfa meal manufacturin gpurposes, and the first cut is now being sold rapidly for the same purpose. A shortage of hay and also of feed grain is expected in Western Ontario before spring, if the extreme winter weather continues.

Current prices being paid growers are: for No 2 timothy $5.50 to $6 per ton; mixed hay $4.50 to $5.25; alfalfa 2nd cut, $9 to $10, 1st cut $7 to $8; oat straw $3 to $3.50 and wheat straw $3.25 to $3.75 per ton.

Canadian Honey

The United Kingdom ranks second to Germany as the world's honey market. From the standpoint of Canadian bee-keepers, however, the United Kingdom is easily the more important of the two. Honey imports by the British Isles have ranged between seven and ten million pounds yearly in recent years, and have not shown the drastic decline which charcterized German imports during the depression period. Up until 1928, the United Kingdom drew its honey supply from three main sources:—United States, British West Indies and New Zealand. Other countries contributed somewhat smaller amounts. Within the last three years, however, Canadian honey has made striking progress on the British market, taking second place among all the various competing countries in 1931. Chief among Canadian provinces to increase notably its honey export was Ontario. This province is now shipping overseas yearly, considerably more than all the other provinces combined.

Prevent Goitre in Your Future Lambs

Goitre in your lambs is due to lack of iodine. Whether or not this mineral is deficient in the Ottawa district is not certain. However, goitre has appeared in the Central Experimental Farm flock, and sheep owners should, therefore, play safe and feed iodine to their prgenant ewes.

If no commercial iodized salt is available, prepare as follows: Spread on a tarpaulin 100 pounds of ordinary salt. From your druggist procure 2 to 3 ounces of potassium iodide, dissolve in water and spray the solution on the salt. Mix thoroughly, keep dry and feed to the ewes during the winter. This will prevent goitre, and, when for no distinct reason lambs are born weak or flabby, it may prove beneficial.

In order to encourage the more general use of Agricultural Limestone in sections of Ontario where a soil corrective is required, the Department, in co-operation with the Federal Government and the leading railway companies, will continue for another year at least, the policy whereby substantial reductions in freight rates on ground limestone for agricultural purposes are made. This announcement was made by Hon. Thos. L. Kennedy recently.

The Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, Pere Marquette, Michigan Central and associated railways are co-operating by quoting a special freight rate on Agricultural Limestone of approximately 25 p.c. below the standard rate. The Federal and Provincial Governments, through a subvention policy, will jointly pay 50 p.c. of the reduced freight up to a maximum combined subvention of $1.00 per ton. For example, if the standard freight tariff is $1.00 per ton, the railway reduces the rate 25c. The subvention policy pays 37½c and the farmer pays the remaining 37½c. If the standard rail tariff is $3.60 per ton, the railways reduce the freight 90c, the subvention policy pays $1.00 and the farmer pays $1.70.

For further particulars in regard to the regulations governing this subvention policy, purchasers should get in touch with their local agricultural representative.

DAMAGE OF $10,000 WHEN BARNS BURN

Starting from an overturned lantern, fire Tuesday evening totally destroyed a large barn owned by Lyman Black of Roebuck, four miles west of Spencerville. Twelve cows, 100 chickens and a number of ducks and geese, and all Mr. Black's farm machinery and grain were lost. Only two horses were saved. The loss was estimated at $4,000, partly covered by insurance.

The fire started when Mr. Black, who was getting hay from a mow in the barn, accidentally kicked over his lantern. The flames spread rapidly, and but for the efforts of neigbours, a shed housing an automobile, adjacent to the burning building, would also have been lost.

Damage estimated at $6,000 was caused Tuesday night, when fire destroyed two barns with contents, the property of Harold Clark, about a mile south of Inkerman. The cause of the fire was attributed to the explosion of a coal oil lamp. Two head of cattle were also reported burned.

Mr. Clark was in the loft of a barn pitching hay, while his wife stood on the main floor of the structure, holding the lantern in such a manner as to illuminate the work in which Mr Clark was engaged, when the explosion occurred. The hay in the barn was immediately ignited. Both Mr. and Mrs. Clark escaped injuries.

ANNUAL MEETING, ST. PETER'S CHURCH

The annual congregational meeting of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Williamsburg, was held in the Sunday School room on Wednesday afternon. All sections of the parish were represented. Rev. C.R. Cronmiller presided, and Wm. Gordier recorded the meeting.

The church treasurer's report showed a balance carried forward. The congregation's pledge to missions was met in full, and $118. in special missionary offerings was forwarded to the synodical treasurer. Reports from the Women's Missionary Society, Luther League and Sunday School showed all obligations met and balances on hand.

The following were elected as new members to the church council:
Secretary—Wm. R. Whitteker.
Treasurer—Wilbert Loucks.
Deacon—Ernest Trickey.

A commitee was appointed with a view to building up a special fund now on hand. When the required amount is secured, work will be started on a new chancel, to be built in the front of the church. The proposed plan calls for the removal of the pipe-organ from the choir balcony to the chancel.

WILLIAMSBURG UNITED HAS PROSPEROUS YEAR

The United Church at Williamsburg wrote another chapter in its eventful history, when a representative group of interested men and women gathered in the school room of the church for the purpose of transacting the annual business, and of electing new officers for the ensuing year.

After the opening devotions conducted by the pastor, Rev. C.A. Adey, a chairman and secretary were appointed for the evening, viz: Rev. C.A. Adey, chairman, who assumed charge of the meeting, with David A. Short, secretary. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted.

Reports from the different organizations all showed marked progress in many different directions. The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance with a surplus of $350 with all bills paid. The missionary and maintenance treasurer reported the allocation over-reached. Special mention is due the Young People's League with a membership of about fifteen members, who raised $145, a contribution to the missionary fund.

Following the different reports the election of officers for 1934 resulted as follows:

New managers for a three-year-term were: Howard Saddlemire Grant Alguire.
Sec.-Treas.—David Short.
Missionary and Maintenance Treas. —Strader McIntosh.
Cent-a-Meal Treas.—Roy E. McIntosh

Asst. Supt.—Miss Violet Trickey.
S.S. Treas.—Wilbur Garlough.
Cradle Roll Sec.—Mrs. M.S. Beckstead.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served and a social hour followed.

FORTY-YEAR AGREEMENT WITH HYDRO ACCEPTED

On Tuesday evening, a special meeting of the council of Mountain township took place at South Mountain, with the reeve, Robert Bryan, in the chair, for the purpose of considering an agreement with the Hydro-Electric Power Company, for the street lighting of the police village of South Mountain.

Since early last September, the council and ratepayers have been negotiating with the Hydro concerning the question of rates and when first their representative, Mr. Surkiss presented the company's terms, they didn't come to an understaning. On Tuesday evening, however, after a lengthy discussion, their terms were accepted by the council and ratepayers, and once more South Mountain is assured of lights on their streets for the next 40 years.

A Wink in the Dark

Someone has said that doing business without advertising is like winking at a girl in the dark. You know you are doing it, but no one else does. —Winnipeg Tribune.

Wages of Virtue

Prominent Hollywood star complains that the only parts she is given these days are those in which she is "chased all around the room in an effort to save her honor." In such cases, however, the wages of virtue are anywhere from $2,000 a week up—which is not to be sneezed at.—Border Cities Star.

Unnecessary Tears

There is a lot of lachrymose talk with regard to Mary Pickford divorcing her husband "with deep regret." On the other hand, she did not hesitate to separate from her first spouse before she married Douglas Fairbanks. There is altogether too much fuss made over the martial differences of the film stars.—Brantford Expositor.

Misuse of "America"

During the past year, the keys of the typewriter which writes this for the printer, have religiously been made to spell out the word United States, rather than the word America or American, depending on the context, and despite all the additional time involved, also loss of euphony, we can see no progress anywhere among writers, speakers, Old Country statesmen or European commentators toward correct usage in their reference to the United States of America. They still call the U.S.A. America. However, among the New Year resolutions, it may be just as well to struggle along and be right.—St. Catharines Standard.

Toy Pistol

In England the sale of a toy pistol known as "pencil pistol" has been prohibited. It would be well if the sale of all toy pistols were prohibited. It may seem a little thing, but the young mind is influenced to a great extent by what play things are placed in his hands. Similarly this applies to the moving picture show, which should be more closely censored. — Glencoe Transcript.

Effective

An airplane ride "will end a common cold,' says a specialist. So will a parachute if it doesn't open.—Halifax Herald.

Extra Proof

Another lynching in the United States. This time the mob, as a special proof of its civilization, cut the victim's heart out.—Peterborough Examiner.

Best Known Train

The Royal Scot is back on its tracks in the Old Country, after having crossed the ocean and travelled some 14,000 miles over railways in Canada and the United States, where it was visited by 3,000,000 people. The Scot formerly was famous in its own land and on the Continent, but now it is the best known train in North America as well.—Montreal Gazette.

When a Man's Old

That definition of a man being old when he must sit down to put on his trousers does not apply, we understand, to inhabitants of nudist colonies.—Brockville Recorder.

Remember the Horses

In our quite natural preoccupation with the problem of keeping ourselves warm in these days of cruel cold are we not perhaps forgetting what this weather means to our horses, compelled to carry on through long hours under extraordinarily difficut street conditions, and often made to stand for comparatively long periods in cutting winds and driving snow with almost no protection?

Veterinarians tell us that the horse is physically the most peculiarly susceptible to cold of all our animals. Moreover, in the artificial conditions in which they are bred and worked the heavy winter coat of hair which Nature provides and which helps the wild or range horse to get through the cold season does not develop or is largely groomed away. To replace it in far too many cases nothing is provided but a small and often thin and ragged blanket.

These are cruel and bitter days for the horses. Let us not forget them.—The Montreal Daily Star.

A Man To Be P'aied

In England there lives a man who has not slept for eight years. Probably he never will—until he sleeps the sleep from which there is no material awakening. Eight years ago he had an unusual operation, and since that time he has bee unable to sleep.

It is a pathetic condition. He must be one of the saddest men in the world.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

THE EMPIRE

The Empire and the World

By the defection of Japan and Germany, the League has been weakened, not fatally nor irretoverably, but so seriously that, when the abstention of Russia and the United States is remembered, there is evident a danger of breakdown. In these circumstances, while ardently supporting the League, the Empire ought to spare no pains to make the most of itself, for the benefit of the world as well as its own good. To think in terms of wide bearing, beyond the increasingly elusive limits of the islands in which his lot is cast, is an urgent duty for every New Zealander. Heed to domestic affairs, butnot absorption in them as a distinct interest, is the call of the hour.—The Auckland News.

Health Movement in India

Health may be thought of as a property of the individual, and public health as a sort of sum of all these properties in a country. But the worker for public health has to conceive of it differently, as an aspect of the way in which people live together, as a concommitant or resultant of their whole social life. We shall understand all about public health only when we know all there is to be known about individual and social life, about humanity as a whole. This thought need not depress us; on the contrary, it should be an inspiring challenge, as it has been to many workers and will be, we are assured by the appeal, whose study we commend to all interested in the welfare of humanity in this great and afflicted country.—The Calcutta Statesman.

Canada and the U.S.A.

The proximity of Canada to the United States of America along an extensive imperceptible frontier means, of course, that any major economic disturbance there makes its tremors felt in our country. It could not be otherwise with the links, firstly geographical—lakes, canals, rivers, roads —and, secondly, mechanical — railways, motor-cars, aeroplanes—which nature and man have forged; but in spite of this, Canada has never lost her individuality nor her Imperial ideals. We have tried also to develop a personality in literature and in art, but obviously the struggle here must be difficult when one considers the heavy proportion of literature, including magazines and newspapers, that crosses the border.—Lieut.-Col. Geo. P. Vanier in The Listener (London).

British Stability

We have no more use for dictatorship, Fascist or Communist, in Great Britain than we have for gunmen, racketeers, concentration camps, and other modern features of life abroad. Our last dictator was Cromwell. We got over all that sort of thing three centuries ago. Now, with a stable Government and a constitution based on common sense, we owe our lead in world affairs to the absence of civil and political upheavals.—London Sunday Chronicle.

The "English" Accent

Cultivated people on both sides of the Atlantic speak the English tongue equally well, according to Dr. Walter Hervey, founder of the American Good Speech Society. The best English and what Dr. Hervey calls the best American are so nearly alike to-day that, in his opinion, they cannot be distinguished the one from the other. When King George or President Roosevelt speaks, the spoken words are not marred, we are told, by any "local tang or distortion." As a result of education the same exquisite English is spoken, Dr. Harvey maintains, in both New York and London by the finest actors, the best preachers and the best orators. This is all very gratifying as far as it goes, but apparently that is not as far as Hollywood. For who ever heard an American film star who spoke his or her lines without a good deal of that "tang or distortion" which, the founder of the American Good Speech Society says, cultivated America completely eschews?—Dublin Irish Independent.

Japan's Challenge

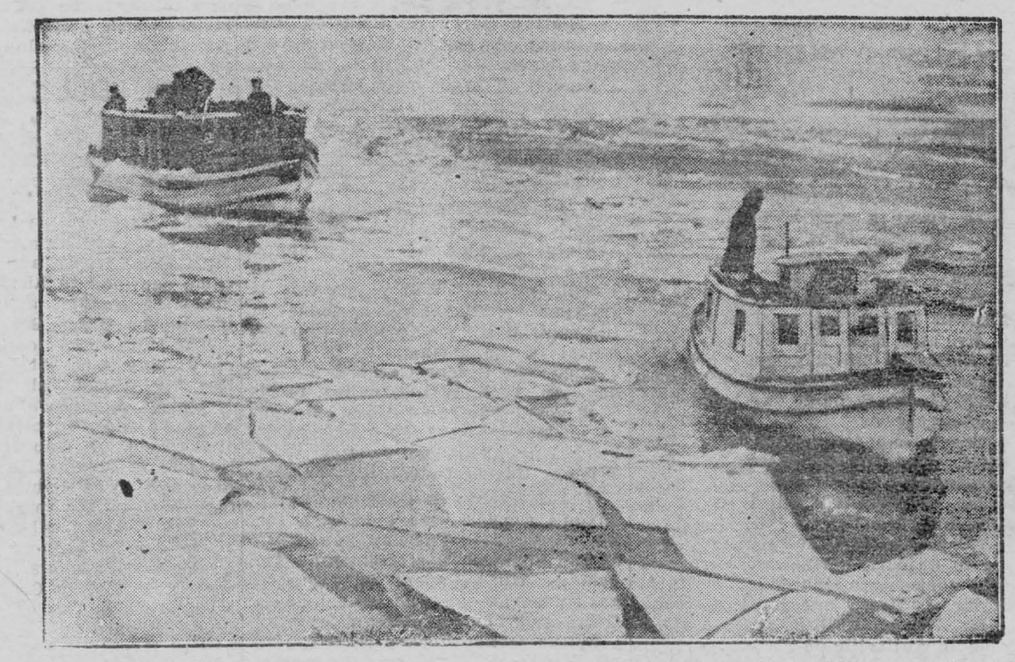

Machinery, motor-cars, and ships are among the few important manufactured goods which Japan has not yet begun to produce for export, and coal she has none. But with these exceptions it is prudent to regard the cotton onslaught as the mere vanguard of a general offensive. No doubt it is the exchange depreciation which has brought the present attack so suddenly to a head, and it is reasonable to anticipate a slackening of the pace as this temporary advantage diminishes. But there will still remain the permanent factor of high organization and efficiency combined with a level of wages which is not likely to catch up to Western standards for at least a generation.—London Morning Post.

THE UNITED STATES

Old-Fashioned Canada

Canadians seem to have an old-fashioned notion that law is law, and should be enforced. In the United States we are more up-to-date. For example, a dope peddler was tried in Montreal recently, and this was his sentence: (a) Fourteen years in prison. (b) Fines amounting to $300. (c) Ten lashes on his bare back. You doubt if that gentleman would care to sell dope again in Canada. We don't know that whipping is the best penology, or that we should adopt it. But we do know that something of the Canadian attitude toward law enforcement would discourage a lot of criminals here.—Washington, D.C., Times.

Diminutive Fishing Boat Rescued

When King Neptune and Jack Frost form a conspiracy there is not much else but ice. After battling high waves and ice floes on Lake Michigan for 24 hours, this frail fishing boat, the "Seagull," her bow stove in by ice, was rescued by U.S. coast guards. Her crew of three were saved.

Jobless Less World Over

Considerable Improvement Noted by International Labor Office—Advance in Canada

Geneva.—A world-wide improvement in the employment situation was noted Friday in a communique of the International Labor Office.

A comparison between the last three months of 1933 and the previous year showed a decline in unemployment in 13 nations: Canada, the United States, Chile, Germany, Great Britain, Hungary, Australia, Belgium, Finland, Yugoslavia, Roumania, Denmark and the Irish Free States.

In Great Britain the index of employment in December rose from 91.6 in 1932 to 97.5 in 1933, the Labor Office revealed.

Figures for November in 1932 and 1933 indicated an increase of workers in Canada from 71.1 to 76.6.

In Japan the number rose from 81.8 in August of 1932 to 90 in August, 1933; in Italy the employment index for October, 1932, has 70.5, while for the same month last year it was 73.6.

The communique said that 10,076,000 persons were idle in the United States in October, 1933, compared to 11,586,000 unemployed in October, 1932.

Figures for 1929 were regarded as equalling 100 as the basis for the employment index.

Old Lady Leaves Her Money to De Valera

Eamon De Valera, President of the Irish Free State, was a party in an action (adjourned) concerning the will of Miss Polly Mary Fitzpatrick, a Brighton, England, woman, 72 years old, who was found dead at her home in July, 1932.

Miss Fitzpatrick left a will part of which read: "I give and bequeath to Mr. de Valera my house and all my furniture and effects." The value of the estate is a little more than £3,000.

The will was contested by John Fitzpatrick, of Dublin, who claimed his sister was of weak intellect, childish and eccentric, that in late years she had become a recluse, and that she died in a neglected condition, having refused to have medical treatment. When Miss Fitzpatrick died, said counsel for de Valera, she had no relatives with whom she had been in touch for 40 years. She had said that her property would go to Ireland when she died. She also expressed the view that the only man who had don any good for Ireland was Mr. de Valera.

"It is not Mr. de Valera's intention to profit by a penny piece from this estate. His inttention is that the money shall be used by him as a trust for public purposes of the kind which Miss Fitzpatrick was known to approve," said counsel.

Weather expert says that around 1950 or 1955 the seasons will be wetter and cooler than at present. It's nice to know that but we don't see what can be done about it.—Stratford Beaco-Herald.

New Scotland Yard Loses Keen Officer

London.—Scotland Yard lost one of its most prominent officers with the retirement on January 7 of Superintendent Percy Savage. He retires at the age of 55 in accordance with the new order recently issued by Lord Trenchard.

Superintendent Savage's career at the "Yard" is one of the most distinguished of any police officer. His long run of successes earned for him the enviable distinction of being the youngest officer to be made a superintendent. He handled every type of case, including espionage, confidence tricks, "long-firms" frauds, jewel thefts, and in all probability more murder cases than any other officer.

He secured a conviction of Patrick Mahon for the murder of Emily Kaye in a bungalow near Eastbourne. In that case Savage began his investigations from the discovery of cloakroom ticket in Mahon' clothes. For many years he has been the bane of confidence tricksters, while during the war he captured many German and Austrian spies.

In private life Superintendent Savage is a charming companion and a keen lover of animals. On one occasion he jumped into the River Thames fully clothed and rescued a friend's dog.

Women Magistrates Study Psychology

At the Magistrates' Conference, held recently in London, Eng., 192 women magistrates were present. When the conference discussed Psychology, Dr. Helen Boyle said she had been told of a motorist who suffered from a "compulsion neurosis."

Though a very good driver, he found it extremely difficult not to drive into things on the road. He had to drive, but he did not dare to take his wife with him. Luckily his wife asked why she was never wanted, and he told her. She called in the doctor.

Other points noted in the discussion were: Children defective in intelligence were five times more frequent among delinquents than among the ordinary population.

Sir Robert Armstrong-Jones asked why women were supposed to be the more necessary than men to serve on the Bench in Juvenile Courts. Were they quicker at cross-word puzzles or quicker at solving motives? One woman magistrate declared: "I would not have dared to accept the office of magistrate had I not studied psychology first."

Millions of Bushels Russian Wheat Harvest

Moscow.—The total Soviet grain harvest this year was officially indicated at 3,300,000,000 bushels, an increase over 1932 of 725,000,000 bushels.

This indication, the first estimate to be regarded as official this year, was given by Mr. Abel S. Enukidze, secretary of the Central Executive Committee of the Soviet Union, in an article in the newspaper Izvestia, which mentioned the grain harvest figure only as a passing reference.

University Molder Of Destinies

Sir Arthur Currie's Last Report Made Public

Montreal.—The role of the modern university "in the desperate battle of modern life" is not that of a "mere reservoir of knowledge, a storehouse of equipment, a base of supplies, but rather it must be the creator of forces for the molding of human destinies by promotion of sane, enlightened thinking,' says the late General Sir Arthur Currie, principal and vice-chancellor of McGill University, in his last report to the board of governors.

Completed by Sir Arthur a few days before he was overtaken by illness which resulted in his death November 30, the report was published after approval had been obtained from the Governor-General of Canada in the Capacity as visitor to the university.

"Education merely as a decoration is despicable," Sir Arthur continues. "Education for ultilitarian purposes has some justification. But education that kindles the imagination, awakens the power of vision, teaches man economic difficulties have not left McGill untouched and that "it was necessary to curtail appropriations even for the most legitimate academic activities." After giving detail figures, he adds: "The depletion of capital account vannot be allowed to continue and I feel that I must again call to the attention of all those interested in the welfare of the university the urgent necessity of taking steps to increase the endowment."

French Flier Beats Seaplane Record

St. Louis, Senegal, West Africa.—Commandant de Bonnet, French naval aviator, and four companions claimed a new straight-line distance record for seaplanes on arrival here last week from Berre Airdrome, outside Marseilles.

De Bonnet set their huge seaplane down on the harbor here at 12.18 p.m., 23 hours six minutes after they took off from Barre. He reported that the Southern Cross, their ship, had functioned perfectly during the flight.

He estimated that they had flown approximately 4,000 kilometers (p,420 miles), bettering the old record held by Jean Mermoz, another French ace, who flew 3.173 kilometers.

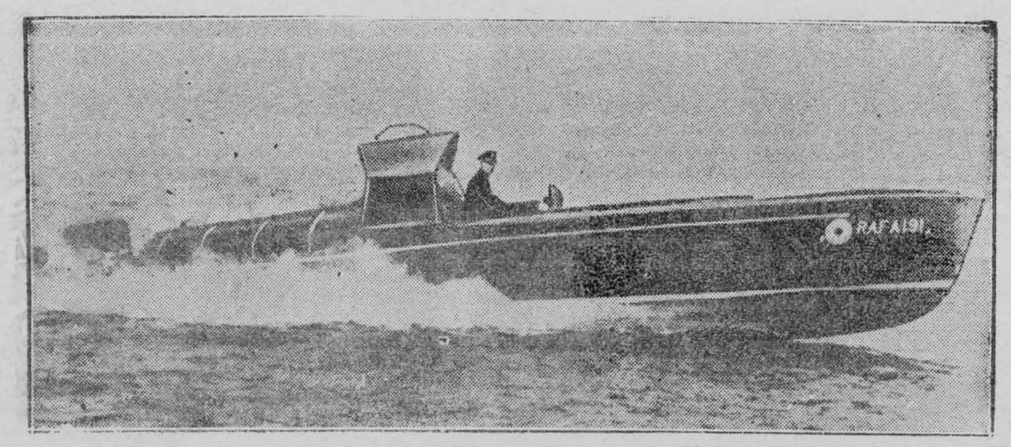

De Bonnet insisted that they had not started out to break the record but expressed satisfaction that the flight here had had that result. He said they were merely attempting a series of long experimental flights, in which he probably would cross the South Atlantic next, and make that trip from here to Natal, Brazil, several times.

The experiments are to better knowledge of flying conditions and routes linkig Europe with South America, it was understood.

Cows Paid Way

Irish cows pay their way. When a carload shipment arrived from Fishguard, it was found that six had given birth to calves en route.

Air Men Serve As Targets

On the desert wastes of the north Atlantic, "Lawrence of Arabia," now known s Aircraftsman Shaw, and two other members of the Royal Aid Force, have been risking their lives, piloting armored boats while bombing aeroplanes shoot whiz bangs at them for targets. They have been at it for a year.

1933 Notable For Oratory

Few of Year's Historic Utterances Preserved For Posterity

New York.—Called by many the most eventful year in the history of the United States, 1933 saw oratory reach a new high in the country. From Congress and curbstone came the sound of debate and dissertation.

Some of the statements caught public fancy; some made headlines that sounded round the world.

Here are a few of them:

President Roosevelt—"now, therefore, I....do hereby declare that the 18th amendment to the constitution ....was repealed on the 5th day of December, 1933."

Senator Huey Long (anent the famous black eye)—"Some one struck me from behind. Three or four men covered me."

Father Charles Coughlin—"It's Roosevelt or ruin."

Anton Cermak (to President Roosevelt after he had been mortally wounded by an assassin's bullets intended for the chief executive)—"I'm glad it was me instead of you."

Samuel Insull, Sr.—"I have done nothing that is not done by any reputable business man."

Alfred E. Smith—"I am for gold dollars as against baloney dollars."

Senator Hiram Johnson of California—"Unless the President's program is carried out, the country will go to hell economically."

And, intriguing if not important—Mae West—"Come up and see me some time."

Defends Good Jazz Music

Lincoln, Neb.—Jazz music—if it's good—and the English opera have a stanch defender in Dr. Howard Hanson, Nebraska-born composer and president of a Rochested, N.Y., conservatory.

Dr. John Erskine, author and head of another New York music school added his support to the work of American composers as the two discussed the problems and achievements of musicians before several hundred persons attending the fifty-fifth annual convention of the Music Teachers National Association.

Dr. Peter W. Dykema of Columbia University said municipalities doubtless would be called upon in the future to furnish music halls, instruments and equipment for music, just as they are called upon now to furnish playgrounds and equipment for them to take up the play hours of children.

Homemade Toys Were Beginning of Big Industry

Manchester, Eng.—In an endeavor to amuse his four-year-old son, Mr. A. Gray Pickard of Broadheath, near here, laid the foundation of what is now a flourishing British tow industry providing employment for about 100 workpeople.

Twelve years ago when Mr. Pickard's son was in the nursery stage at Rubgy School it occurred to him that the metal constructional toys with their nuts and bolts and screwdrivers were too complicated for a child so young. A simpler wooden construcional toy would be better suited to his age.

Without any thought of selling the device, he worked out in a simple form a constructional toy. His son was delighted and thinking other young children might like it, Mr. Pickard developed his enterprise.

Boys Who Wanted to Help Mother Honored

New York. — Last June Richard Lowe, 11, and his brother, Holling, 12 wrote Owen D. Young from their home at Franklin, Idaho, that they would trade some birds' eggs, a calf, and a pet lamb for one of his refrigerators.

Not only did they get the refrigerator, which they wanted for their mother, but they occupied the presidential suite at the Biltmore as guests of Young, with their mother.

The boys had an exciting day visiting skyscrapers, pushing elevator buttons, and lighting matches, which they don't have on their farm at Franklin "on account of the hay." Later they went to a party at Roxy's Radio City penthouse to meet Mary Pickford.

Irish Jazz Dancing Labelled "Paganism"

Dublin. — The Irish Free State's campaign of disapproval against jazz dancing has received official support from Cardinal McRory and President Eamonn de Valera, who sent messages of approval to a big meeting at Mohill. The aim of the meeting was proclaimed on banners inscribed, "Down with jazz and paganism". Cardinal McRory denounced the moral dangers of all-night dancing and sent his wishes for success of the campaign. De Valera said he hoped for the restoration of Ireland's national forms of folk dances.

Old German Daily to Quit

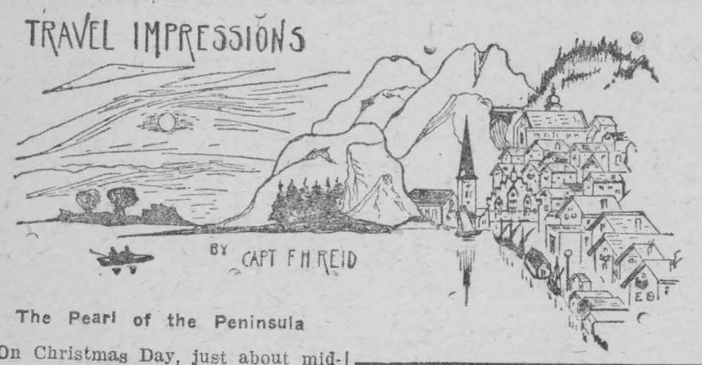

Koenigsberg, Ger.—One of the oldest daily newspapers in Germany, the Koenigsberg Hartungsche Zeitung, founded in 1640, ceased publication on Dec. 31. The publishers said henceforth they would concentrate on their other paper, the Koenigsberg Tageblatt. The Hartungsche is a Liberal organ, while the Tageblatt is a non-party paper.

Every Man a First Aider

"Why, John, you are surely not thinking of driving to Hamilton today!" exclaimed Mrs. Harvey as her son announced his determination to motor to the Mountain City with his three chums.

The party started and despite the drifts and slippery surface of the road all went well until they struck the grade near Dundas. Without any apparent reason the car skidded into the ditch. Very fortunately a Bell Telephone crew was at work near by and went immediately to the aid of the young men. Every man in the telephone crew was a skilled first aider and while one called the nearest doctor, the others rendered first aid. The doctor said their skill and promptness had undoubtedly saved the young men from much suffering and permanent injury.

The Pearl of the Peninsula

On Christmas Day, just about midnight, the front door-bell at my home was rung and, on answering it, I was surprised to be handed a letter which had been left at the home of a neighbor. The envelope was practically covered with Italian stamps and, when I opened it, I found the following:—

MARIA E. . . . ...

I don't know just why I thought my readers would like to read this letter—one thing I did think and that is that some of them might have something to send to Italy. If you have, kindly communicate with me at the address given beside this article.

I met Maria some years ago. I had two priests in my party that year and they, with a young man from Toronto and I, were strolling under orange and lemon trees, finally coming into the beautiful town perched on the top of a cliff overlooking the Bay of Naples. We went into a store and were browsing around; a beautiful young Italian girl came to serve us and, as she spoke excellent English, and had a keen sense of humour, we spent longer in the shop than we had intended. At the moment none of the four of us wanted to buy and, as we left the shop we gave the usual remark—most of my readers may have done the same—"We will be back" to which Maria answered "You will be back?" and when we had replied in the affirmative, she looked at one of the priests—Rv. J. S. McCowell of Hamilton—and said "You will be back, on your word as a Father?" For the moment he was nonplussed but he laughed and said to me "I guess she has me this time, Cap.; I will surely have to come back" . . . and he did and, by his purchases, rewarded her.

Every year since we have visited Maria in her store at Sorrento; each year it is like visiting a friend while away from home. The letter speaks for itself and it gives one a little insight into some conditions that exist elsewhere.

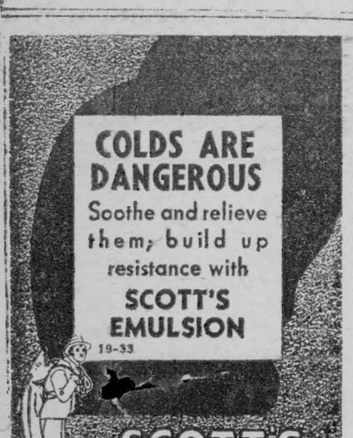

Just a word about Sorrento. It is situated on the Bay of Naples and is reached by boat in a lovely two-hour sail from Naples; it takes about the same time to drive around the curving shore. It is known as "The Pearl of the Peninsula", is a celebrated resort, both in winter and summer and oranges, lemons and other citrus fruits are grown there in abundance. It is also a favourite place for artists and writers, many of whom have made their residence in Sorrento.

Next week I shall tell you of a flag incident in the centre of Germany.

Are you looking for something different in the way of entertainment for your church, society, club or institute?

Capt. F. H. Reid, the well-known traveller, who has been contributing the series of articles to this paper, under the heading of "Travel Impressions," has what is, perhaps, the finest collection of European views in the country. Pictures taken with his own camera, beautifully coloured, showing some of the out-of-the-way places, as well as the localities about which you have read and heard. Portugal, Spain, France, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Jugoslavia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Holland, Belgium and British Isles are included in his unique collection.

For particulars regarding this, communicate with Captain Reid at Room 421, 73 Adelaide Street West, Toronto.

Recent Events From Overseas

Trespassing No Crime.

The origin of the notice, "Trespassers will be prosecuted" was explained by Justice MacKinnon, at the Chester Assisizes.

He said that an act was passed in the reign of George II. making it an offence to trespass after a warning had been given. As a result land owners all over the country put up notices, which constituted a warning.

The Act was repealed long ago, but the notice continued, although they could not be enforced. "People know they cannot be enforced. That's why they trespass," said the judge.

Man Sticks to Record But Death Is Reward.

Because he refused to break his record of never having consulted a doctor, William Buchanan died recently in Larbert, Scotland, after having taken mercuric chloride in mistake for lemonade.

Buchanan consumed several dozen bottles of lemonade every week and drank the insecticide, which had been placed in a lemonade bottle. He worked 15 hours and ate a hearty meal before feeling bad effects. He then realized he had been taking the poison but refused to let his wife summon medical aid.

Asked To Revisit Where "Knot Tied."

A new scheme for filling his church has been devised by a clergyman.

Estimating that more than 10,000 persons had been married from his church in the last 60 years, the Rev. J. A. V. Wallace invited 500 of the couples to special service.

While only 100 of the couples appeared, the little Church of St. George's Camberwell, London, was packed to the doors with a congregation of 1,200 others.

The vicar believes that 99 out of every 100 marriages turn out happily and it was in support of this that he sent out his invitations.

Bearded Steeplechaser Active at 71.

Sir Wilfred Lawson, son and namesake of a famous English temperance reformer, celebrated his seventy-first birthday recently in Cumberland. He still retains the distinction of being the only bearded steeplechase jockey in England and appears regularly at racing meets.

Last season he established a record by winning a race as a septuagenarian

Test Water For Salt.

Oxford, Eng.—An Oxford hairdresser had a sign, "Gent's Saloon," outside his premises. The city council objected. It now reads: "Ladies' and Gentlemen's Saloon."

Womens Knees Court Exhibit.

London, England.—A woman's knees are just as much an exhibit as a burst motor-tire, said counsel, defending Miss Doris Marie Wyatt, of Stroud Green, London N., a Government office clerk, who was accused of driving in a manner dangerous to the public at Farnham, Surrey.

The case was a sequel to a collision, and the defence was that she sprained a cartilage of her knee in applying the foot-brake.

The magistrates retired to their consulting room to view her knees.

She was fined 40s and her license was suspended for two years.

CRAWLING ABOUT WITH LUMBAGO

Here is some useful information for anyone troubled with that uncomfortable complaint, lumbago. A woman writes:—

"For years I suffered from lumbago. During wet weather, I could only turn in bed with great effort and pain, I was so stiff and ached so much. Two years ago I had both lumbago and sciatica, and crawled about for a fortnight, feeling very sorry for myself and looking 103 instead of 33. Someone said, 'Try Kruschen Salts,' so I did, and I have taken them ever since, with the result that I hardly ever get a hint of lumbago these days."—(Mrs.) G. P. C.

Why is it that Kruschen is so effective in keeping lumbago at bay? Simply because it goes right down to the root of the trouble and removes the cause, which is an impure bloodstream. The six salts in Kruschen keep the bloodstream pure and vigorous by promoting a clockwork regularity of all the organs of elimination. tion.

Bells and Their Implications

Bell-ringing is an art peculiar to England; we pride ourselves on it, and on our superiority to the mechanical carillons of the Continent; we lament the destruction of the Reformation, when thousands of bells were melted down—an abomination but lately repeated by the Germans; we record with pride the feats of aged bell-ringers, who achieve unnumbered changes on their peals; the earliest poem we learnt by heart is often the Inchcape Bell, and, with the mariners, we bless the Abbot of Aberbrothock. But when all is said and done, the bell is a survival. What did it once stand for in England? Let's see.

Once upon a time it conferred social distinction. The Saxon who held five hundred acres of land might claim the rank of a thane if he had a church with a bell-tower on his estate: hence the distinctive character and relative importance of surviving Saxon bell-towers, such as Sompting. . . . It was Gundulph, Bishop of Rochester, who, on hearing the sound of bells, would sigh, "What must be the joys of Heaven, when the hand of man calls forth such melody?' Dunstan, himself a metal-worker, gave many bells to the churches of the West, and a mighty deep-toned bell — sono et mole praestanti—to the Abbey of Malmesbury. Alcuin speaks of the bells of York, and it was a Saxon thane of the name of Litolf who sold his flocks to buy a bell, and chuckled when he heard it ringing. "Hark, how sweetly my sheep and my goats are bleating," while his wie capped the jest with her gift of a second bell, that the joint harmony might symbolize the happiness of their marriage. In Saxon times, therefore, England was all a-sound with bells, ready to hand when the curfew should ring by Norman law, as it does to this day at Charterhouse, in the City of London. It was the first Norman abbot that, foreshadowing Lord Grimthorpe, gave St. Albans its peal. Bishop Hythe, in the twelfth century, placed four bells in the Tower of Rochester Cathedral, and called them Dunstan, Paulinus, Ithamar and Lanfranc, to perpetuate the memory of his predecessors.

On 1st July, 1809, Mr. Samuel Thurston, the change-ringer of Norwich, rang all the church bell peals upon his hand-bells, the plain bob-triplets, bob-majors, grandsire bob-cators and bobs-maxiums in all their mysteries, "nobly bringing round his performance, his plain bob-triples in two minutes and three-quarters, his grandsire-bob-cators in five minutes and fourteen seconds." This statement sounds all right, though one does not quite know what it means.—From "The Mancroft Essays," by Arthur Michael Samuel (New York: Harcourt Brace).

Germany Limits Number of Freshmen in Colleges

Berlin.—Drastic reductions in the enrolment of freshmen in German colleges during 1934 is decreed by Interior Minister Wilhelm Frick.

The decree says that the schools are overcrowded and that freshmen starting into college next year will be limited to 15,000, as against an average first year class enrolment of 35,000 a year, including men and women.

"Only the physically and mentally superior whose national convictions are unimpeachable," wil be admitted in this curtailed number, the decree stipulates. Furthermore, freshmen girls will not be permitted to exceed 10 per cent. of the total class. Their total hitherto has been one-fifth to one-fourth of all enrolled as freshmen.

Reflecting a steady march of workers back into gainful employment after long or short periods of idleness, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has issued its annual review of employment covering 1933. A distinct upward trend, starting about April 1, is shown in the figures, which are based on the payroll reports of some 8,140 employers. In all 146,900 people were added to the number of wage-earners in Canada by these firms from April 1 to December 1. During that period, the index number of employment (based on 1926 at 100) jumped 15.8 points or 20.8 per cent from the year's low of 76.0 to 91.8.

MORRISBURG TIGERS DEFEAT PRESCOTT 5-1

In a regular St. Lawrence league fixture here Monday night, Morrisburg Tigers defeated Prescott 5-1. Tigers played their new goalie "Tiny" Jones, for the first time on home ice, and he certainly showed to advantage. "Tiny" is six feet two, weighs two hundred and eighty-odd, and certainly knows how to get between the puck and the net.

The score hardly does the Prescott team justice, if one bases his opinion on the first period. There was a lot of close checking in centre ice, but the Prescott team had as much of the play as the Tigers. There was no scoring in the first frame.

In the second, the Tigers' passes began to click, and Del. Robinson opened the scoring on a pass from John Cross. A few minutes later Robinson scored again, this time on a solo rush. It was also in the second period that Prescott scored Saunders getting the tally.

The third was more or less of a walk-away for the Tigers ,who scored three goals. John Cros started it by taking the puck from his defence through the entire Prescott team to bat one past Bramkey in net. McCallum then followed suit, taking assists on his goal from Robinson and Cross. The other goal was Robinson's, assisted by Chuck Lapierre. This closed the scoring, but Prescott kids tried till the end, though they were plainly tired.

Tigers now have a 3-point margin on second place, and are beginning to crowd the league-leading Canadiens of Cornwall. They play in Prescott Monday, and return home to meet the Canadiens on Friday. This team looks to be going places—and fast. They showed plenty of foot against Prescott and are making combination efforts click. They also have a great goal-tender in Jones, who, by the way, earned a shut-out in his first St. Lawrence League game. Before long, if they keep their present stride, Morrisburg Tigers ought easily to lead the league group.

The teams:

Morrisburg—Goal, Jones; defense, Cross and Lapierre; centre, Robinson; wings, McCallum and James; subs, Miller, H. Smith, O'Malley and Hay.

Prescott—Goal, Bramkey; defense W. Newsome and Urquhart; centre, Frattura; wings, Saunders and Bowers; subs, G. Newsome, Fleming, McCauley, Fisher.

Referee—"Happy" Hooper, Ottawa

ONCE AGAIN

Hello Everybody! Have you had enough hockey this past week? And what do you think of the "Tigers"?

Last Saturday evening as we were leaving my dad's place to go to Iroquois, Danny and I looked the street up and down, and decided that we wouldn't have very many followers. Well, imagine our surprise when "Doc" Gorrell, Howard Hessell, the "bankers" and numerous others were leaning "over he cushions" when the boys went on the ice. We were not only surprised, but had a feeling that Morrisburg was openly showing their interest in the "Tigers". And folks, it gives the boys another 60 horsepower to know that they have supporters following them. And those supporters were not disappointed, because right from the first "peep" of Happy Hooper's whistle the "Tigers" jumped into that game with a spirit of determination that did not relax one minute, and the result—5-0 for the "Tigers".

Now here it is Thursday, and I must ask you to recall Danny MacGillivray's statement at the arena the night Prescott came here and the "Tigers" trimmed them 5-1 (and if the spectators didn't get their money's worth I'll eat my hat) regarding the Colonial Coach being chartered for the convenience of those who could to follow the team —"Give us your support and we'll give you a victory." Now folks quite a crowd were in the bus, and numerous cars were loaded—all bound for Cardinal—and what a night! What a game and what a crowd of Morrisburg followers! The first period was "kinda ragged," each team feeling the other out when Gamble of Cardinal got a break, slapped it at "Tiny", who was flat on his back in an attempt to stop it, and scored the first one. No penalties this period, and the second period was scoreless, with MacCallum and "Robby" of the "Tigers" drawing penalties, and Thompson and Loughridge of Cardinal following suit.

In the third period, Loughridge of Cardinal (Cardinal's cleverest player) slipped another past Tiny, and then they were 2 up on us. I had a vision of a little animal with a white stripe riding down in the bus with me, but the vision was erased from my mind by "Chuck" Lapierre, Tiger defenceman, who tore his way through Cardinal, and beat Sweeney by the old trick, now you see it, now you don't." And it seemed so easy to Chuck that he came right back and did it again, ending the period with a 2-2 tie.

The overtime period of 5 minutes each way was not so fast, because the Tigers had skated the "pep" nearly out of Cardinal. Sam MacCallum wiggled his way through the Cardinal boys, passed it to "Robby" who in turn scored. Thus the game ended with a 3-2 overtime game for the Tigers—repeating another night at the beginning of the season, when Cardinal was here and the Tigers did the same—3-2 overtime.

I didn't tell you that during one of the periods, we were positive we had a score that was not counted—we'll let that pass. Just imagine the Tigers, practically whipped, 2-0 at the end of the second period, and staging an almost impossible comeback. It speaks of the Tigers' physical condition to "take it". By the way, MacCallum and Robby were not the only "bad boys" with the Tigers: James and O'Malley spent a few minutes with the penalty timekeepers, while Cardinal had five men in the box during the third period, Loughridge drawing a 10-minute penalty.

Well folks, that covers the last three games we played—one here, two away from home—and all victories for the Tigers. We are in second place, and journey to Prescott Monday night, and hope to see some familiar faces in the Fort Town Arena.

Once again, the "Tigers" and their executive thank you for the interest shown.

I'll give you the "low-down" on Monday night's game in next week's "Leader," but come along Monday night and see for yourself.

WM. T. SHERMAN, Sec.
