Society's Third Show Attracted Many Entries

Claim Firmly Established for Outstanding Show of Eastern Ontario —Baseball and Softball Games Proved Very Interesting.

Chesterville and District Agricultural Society's third annual show on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week has firmly established its claim to the outstanding stock show of Eastern Ontario, with the display yesterday of the choicest animals of the big dairy herds throughout the district, and horses which would be conspicuous at the big society events called Horse Shows in the larger centres of Canada. An added attraction this year was a section for poultry which brought forth a large list of competitiors.

Meeting with unfavourable weather for Tuesday when the programme was rained out, yesterday was almost perfect and was taken advantage of by the largest crowd yet in attendance at these shows, the only disappointment of the day being the failure of the harness horse men to provide enough contestants in the two races to work any particular enthusiasm Plans, however, are even now under way to see that the races for next year will be in keeping with every other high class feature of the big show.

Three softball games for the Men's Championship of the Show provided good contests and held a large section of the spectators. Chesterville against Metcalfe in the initial game was won by the locals 4 to 3. Hallville demonstrated their superiority over Cardinal in the second game winning 12 to 4, and then capturing the final from Chesterville 5 to 4, in one of the snappiest softball games seen on the local diamond this year, the win only coming in the last innings after two men were down.

The baseball fans enjoyed one of the best games seen here in years between Waddington and an "All Star' aggregation picked from the clubs of the Northern Stormont league, strengthened by Clair Forster and "Poy" Johnston of Ottawa Colonials. Connoly and Cauraugh were the battery for the visitors with our old friend "Tucker" Oshier as manager. Both Forster and Connoly pitched nice ball, the former having a little harder the job as the Stars lacked offensive at bat and during the first four frames only collected one counter while the visitors put five across while the locals were getting over a large attack of stage fright when facing such masterly pitching as Connoly served up before they got to him in the fifth for three. The highlight of the game came when Manager Jim Slosser of the Stars stepped in to pinch hit in the eighth with two on and nailed the first ball for a two-bagger, driving in the tieing and winning runs. In the last frame Forster was put in the hole when Desmond, the first visitor up, smashed one through first base for a two-bagger, which was as far as he got however when Forster bore down and retired the side in order with the score 6 to 5.

Forster struck out 16, Connoly 7, and Pemberton, who relieved Connoly, in the ninth, one.

APPRECIATION.

The Editor of The Record,
Chesterville, Ont.

Dear Sir,—I am instructed by resolution of the Chesterville Community Hall Board to acknowledge through the medium of your paper, appreciation of the splendid response which has been and is still being made by farmers of this district to our appeal for teams to haul gravel, earth and stone for use in connection with the Community Hall project.

There are so many divergent views and conflicting interests, all of which the Board must try to reconcile, that the way of the Board is rendered rather difficult, and the assistance cheerfully given by the farmers of this district is thoroughly appreciated. This help, together with many words of encouragement received from citizens and the very kindly comments in our local paper, greatly heartens those who are giving largely of their time and thought to try to carry the building of this Community Hall to a successful conclusion.

Signed on behalf of the Community Hall Board.

—Norma E. Doering, (Sec.-Treas.)

Pleasant Valley

Mr. Thomas Sanderson and family of Cornwall and daughter, Miss Nellie, R.N., of New York, were recent callers on Mrs. James Daugherty.

Mr. Albert Beauclare made a business trip to Moose Creek on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Crites were in Kingston recently.

We are glad to report that Mrs. O. L. Hollister is progressing favourably.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Scott and Kenauld spent Wednesday night with Mr. and Mrs. Barney Hollister and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Hollister.

Bryce Swerdfeger spent Wednesday afternoon with Allan Hollister.

Kenauld Scott spent Thursday afternoon with Bryce Swerdfeger.

Mr. Angus Brownell, Poughkeepsie, N.Y.,; Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Brill, of Poughkeepsie, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rupert and Hardy Brownell of Crystal Aveune were Monday tea guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Scott and Kenauld.

Mr. and Mrs. Aden Swerdfeger and family of Osnabruck Centre spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Swerdfeger and family.

Mrs. Thomas Swerdfeger spent Friday in Cornwall.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Brill of Poughquag, N.Y., and Mr. Angus Brownell of Stormville, N.Y., have been spending a few weeks in Osnabruck and seem to be enjoying their trip very much. Friday last they went on a fishing trip up the Nation river and came back smiling. No wonder. Mr. Brill caught 17 fine fish. This seemed to stir up his sporting blood and although fine fish as they were, the pair anticipate a trip up the Gatineau for even larger fish. Mr. Brill did not weigh his fish but one would judge from his broad smile he must have had quite a few pounds.

T'nship Council Meeting Held Here on Monday

Engineer Will Make Report on Kittle Creek Branch.—Plans For Repair of Osgoode Boundary Road.—Bills Passed For $4723.40.

The regular meeting of Winchester Township Council was held in the Town Hall, Chesterville, on Monday, with all the members present. The minutes of the last regular and special meetings were adopted as read and signed by the Reeve.

The Clerk was instructed to have the Engineer make a report on the repair of the east branch of the Kittle Creek.

Mr. Ralph and the Clerk were authorized to measure the gravel pit and make a settlement with Mr. S. Fulton for gravel taken out of his pit.

It was decided to spend $200 on the Osgoode boundary if the township of Osgoode would grant the same amount and look after the work.

The following accounts were passed and paid:-

Montreal Wedding of Much Local Interest

Mr. Thomas J. Bourke, Popular Young Chesterville Man, Is Wed To Miss Marion E. Towsley of Montreal, Monday.

(Montreal Daily Star.)

THE marriage of Marion Elizabeth, daughter of the late H. Murray Towsley, to Mr. Thomas John Bourke, of Chesterville, Ont., son of Mr. T. J. Bourke and of the late Mrs. Bourke, of North Bay, Ont, took place Monday morning at eight o'clock in the Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's Church, the Rev. Father Sullivan officiating. Autumn flowers were used as decorations in the chapel. The bride, who was given away by her mother, wore a Molyneux model of turquoise blue velvet, with a brown velvet hat and accessories, and carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses. Miss Frances O'Grady, who was the bride's only attendant, wore a frock of mulberry velvet with a hat of the same material, and carried yellow gladioli and yellow roses. Mr. Eugene Bourke of North Bay acted as best man for his brother. Mrs. Towsley, the bride's mother, wore a black crêpe Larue model, with a corsage bouquet of white gardenias and a black hat. The reception following the ceremony, was held at the Berkeley Hotel, where autumn flowers were used as decorations. Later Mr. and Mrs. Bourke left for Lake George and New York, the bride travelling in a brown crêpe tunic frock worn under a brown wool swagger coat with a brown felt hat and accessories and a red fox fur, the gift of the bridegroom. On their return they will reside in Chesterville.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. T. J. Bourke, father of the bridegroom; Mrs. Frank Lyons, sister of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. William Lond and Miss Margaret Varm, all of North Bay; Mrs. Parnell Howe, of Pembroke; Mrs. H. Williams, of Long Island, N.Y., and Mrs. Milton Courtwright, of Ottawa; Miss Marion Casselman, Mr. Kenneth McLaughlin, Mr. Harry McElroy, of Chesterville; Mr. R. Campderros, of Lanark.

Young Farmer: "What happened to those suet puddings you made yesterday, Jane?"

Young Wife: "As you didn't like them, I gave them to the ducks."

Farmer (mournfully): "So that is where my ducks have gone—they're sunk!"

SOCIETIES ASK COUNCIL TO KEEP ENTIRE HALL SITE

At the meeting of the Municipal Council Tuesday evening, resolutions were received from the Community Hall Board, the Women's Institute and the Horticultural Society requesting the Council to retain all of the lot upon which the Community Hall is being built. Action was deferred until Mr. Stewart of the Federal District Commission was consulted on the matter as he has already volunteered expert advice on certain features connected with the Community Hall layout.

BOWLING ::::: Club Notes

Labour Day Bowling Enjoyed.

The Labour Day doubles were won by Senn and Hanna with 21 points, Doering and Cass getting the Consolation. The winners received Wahl fountain pens and the losers Wahl evershaip pencils. There was a smaller entry than last year with but 12 pairs in the draw, but they had a perfect afternoon for bowling. Geo. Reaburn and Geo. Cass tied for second place with 16 points and played an extra game for the prize.

The rink games that night were popular with the same entry as last year, four rinks of five men to a side. Hanna won and Cass came second when Dixon turned Doc Hutt back. This left Doc with just one point lacking to at least tie Dubbie who had given Bill Dixon quite a shellacking in the first game to the tune of 9 to 1. Doc beat Cass 8-2 and then Bill beat Doc 7-3. Hanna beat Cass 7-3 but Dixon gave Jim a run for his money as only two out of the first five ends were scored, at that Jim pulled himself out by the bootstraps when he cut Bill out of a six-end later. Cass' big win over Dixon in the first game was enough start to get him in the money. Doc Hutt had a good looking rink but couldn't get anywhere outside his win over Cass. The rinks were pretty evenly matched up and by midnight everyone was satisfied to call it a day.

The Line-up:

August 31st.

Last Friday night Kemptville made the final appearance in the St. Lawrence Loop and the boys collected six points to bring this club's total up to 48 points out of 80 which should be well up in the running

The Kemptville boys were good losers and just as good winners so everyone enjoyed the fun, even Percy Gilroy came over to renew old acquaintances. Percy is quite popular back home.

The line-up:

Woods		Andrews
Harper		Bell
Robertson		Bustard
Dixon, skip	21	Patterson, skip	18
Flynn		Allan
Senn		Griffith
Durant		Sutherland
Lacey, skip	19	Elliott, skip	17
Merkley		Geo. Patterson
Lloyd		French
Hamlen		Graham
Hanna, skip	29	Fletcher, skip	3
Doering		Young
David		Wilson
Casselman		Anderson
Cass, skip	13	George, skip	19

Geo. Lacey skipped Doc Clayton's rink as Doc was away on holidays and had a close game which he won. Bill Dixon pulled his out of the fire going into the last end one up. Bill made a nick pick and when the smoke rolled away the jack was in the ditch and Bill had a couple tucked away nicely which Doc couldn't get at. Hanna found the picking pretty easy in his game but Dubbie had a hard road and ws six down.

The night before Thursday was cold and the crowd small so the draw went to doubles. Dixon and Wood took the forks with 18 points. Shay and Hamlen got 13, Harper and Lacey 9 and Flynn and Hanna 8 points.

Children's Bodies Found In New Family Ice-Box

Two Little California Girls Are Victims of Shocking Crime.—Criminally Assaulted and Place in Ice Box Where They Suffocated.

Sacramento, Calif. — Two little farm girls whose bodies were found in a locked icebox Saturday night were criminally assaulted, an autopsy revealed Sunday.

Belief they suffocated when their two-year-old brother closed the door on them in play was discarded by authorities in favour or an assault and murder theory.

Victims of the attacks and death by suffocation while cramped in two small compartments of a new icebox in the farm home of Mr .and Mrs. Frank Paiva at Wilton, were Mary Paiva, 6, and Marian Paiva 7

There was no clue to the identity of their assailant. Many angles of the case mystified authorities. But on one point they were sure. The children had been attacked.

Mr. and Mrs. Paiva and eight other children had gone to work in the hop fields some distance away. They left Vivian, Marian and Alfred, 3, at home.

When the family returned at night Alfred was alone. A rapidly melting piece of ice lay on the kitchen table. Along the edge of the table, as though placed there by the children, were dishes from the icebox.

Adelaide, 18, opened the door of the box. From the food compartment slumped the body of Marian. In the small ice compartment was jammed the body of Mary. Fingers of the children were bloody from clawing at the smooth doors, which could not be opened from the inside.

Authorities started a house to house investigation in the neighbourhood of the Paiva farm, hoping to obtained clues to the attacker's identity. They believed he might be a juvenile.

Protesting Beer Licenses Granted to Tourists Cabins

Established Restaurant Owners Cannot Understand Why Summer Places Granted Authorities.

Grimsby—Strong resentment is being expressed in the Jordan and Winona areas because beer authorities have been granted to highway tourist establishments, whose only claim to the title of standard hotel is the fact that they have small cabins for tourists. If these places qualify for authorities, the objectors say then practically every highway camp comes under the same category. Plans are already under way for protests to be lodged with Chairman Odette of the Liquor Control Board. District restaurant owners find it hard to understand the board's policy of refusing licenses to them in view of this latest development. While established restaurants are open the year around, the newly licensed places at both Jordan and Winona are summer propositions only, it is claimed.

SUCCESS

Success is speaking words of praise,
In cheering other people's ways,
In doing just the best you can
With every task and every plan.
It's silence when your speech would hurt,
Politeness when your neighbour's curt,
It's deafness when the scandal flows,
And sympathy for other's woes.
It's loyalty when duty calls,
It's courage when disaster falls,
It's patience when the hours are long;
It's found in laughter and in song;
It's in the silent time of prayer,
In happiness and in despair.
In all of life and nothing less,
We find the thing we call success

Crippled Labourer's Wife Wins $1,943 on Race Bets

Place Her Bet as Result of Dream and Held Only Ticket on the Double Which Paid Record Price.

Winnipeg.—A dream had come true for Mrs. Joseph Nider yesterday—$1,943 richer as result of winning the daily double at a local race track on Friday.

Mrs. Nider, whose husband had recently lost three fingers in an accident and could not work, held the only ticket on the double which was a record price for this city.

As she collected her winnings, in cash (she refused a cheque), Mrs. Nider confided to the mutuel clerk she had placed her bet following a dream the preceding night. She had dreamed of the numbers "six and six."

Frank K, No. 6 in the first race, came in front and paid $15.30 for a straight two-dollar ticket. Ecostar was No. 6 in the third race. Mrs. Nider didn't hesitate. She said the windfall was badly needed.

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

During the month of July, 1934, 11,000,000 lbs. of bacon were exported to Great Britain as compared with 7,300,000 lbs. during July, 1933. The total shipments of bacon for the first seven months of 1934 amounted to 81,504,600 lbs as against 38,737,700 lbs. during the corresponding seven months of 1933.

When packing eggs for shipment, a good practise is to brush the hand lightly over each filler as it is packed to make sure that no eggs are protruding above the top of the filler. Such eggs almost invariably break in transit. Before packing a case, examine the bottom and side. If any nails are loose or have fallen out replace them.

Value of Certified Seed.

Commercial potato growers whose stock is infested with diseases or contains mixed varieties would find it decidedly advantageous to secure certifie seed It is not the chief purpose of the Department of Agriculture to encourage potato growers to use certified seed with a view to having their crops inspected for certification purposes, because every potato grower has not the necessary patience or time, or suitable location and equipment for growing certified seed. The object of the department rather is to have growers use the best seed obtainable for their commercial crop, and help to keep down to a minimum destructive plant diseases, with their resultant serious effect on yields. The use of certified potato seed on many farms would double the yields now being obtained.

Pig Feeding Methods.

Although there are several methods of preparing meal mixtures for feeding pigs, the following rules are recommended as safe practises in producing hogs of the desired type: (1) Grind all grain. Fine grinding is recommended especially for young pigs. (2) Soak meal mixture between feeds; do not use too much water but feed as a fairly thick slop. (3) Hand feeding is the best method for securing hogs of a desirable type. (4) If necessay, a self-feeder may be used after pigs have reached the growing stage of development. (5) Keep pails, troughs and other feeding equipment clean. Mouldy or decaying matter will cause feeding troubles, and, (6) Supply clean drinking water.

The Racket of Robber Bees.

Although honey stealing by bees is likely to be most troublesome in late summer the beekeeper has to keep in mind that robber bees may start their racket at any time. In warm weather when there is little or no honey to be got from the flowers the bees will easily yield to any temptation to obtain it anyhow. After more or less fighting they will overpower any very weak colonies, and carry the honey to their own hives. Old robber bees have a shiny appearance, the hair having been worn off with entering so many hives. No colony should be allowed to grow weak, says the Dominion apiarist and no honey or syrup should be exposed in the apiary.

Notification of Animal Diseases.

Horses, mules and asses of all ages and classes are liable to contract any of the serious contagious diseases of the skin known as mange, scabies or itch. Mange is scheduled under the Animals Contagious Diseases Act, which requires that every owner, breeder, dealer or veterinary surgeon suspecting the existnce of this disease shall immediately notify the nearest veterinary inspector. Treatment is carried out under quarantine, the following mixture being used officially for hand treatment under the supervision of an inspector: Sulphur, 2 pounds; oil of tar, 8 ounces; raw linseed oil, 1 gallon.

Current Crop Report.

Recent general rains have improved pasturage and will benefit root crops and late tree fruits. Threshing of fall wheat is about completed with yields below average. Harvesting of spring grains is nearing completion under favourable weather conditions. Threshing is well advanced with oats and barley yielding from 35 to 60 bushels per acre. The hay crop is considerably below average. The second cutting of alfalfa is light. Roots are making satisfactory progress. Turnips in a few districts will be below average due to insect damage. Sugar beets are 30 per cent under expectation. Apples, peaches and pears will be light, with apple production estimated at one-third less than last year and peaches one-half of last year's tonnage. Grapes promise a good yield.

Interest in Junior Work At Central Canada Show

The Junior Agricultural Departpartment of the Central Canada Exhibition again proved one of the outstanding features of the show. This department, which includes the judging competitions in live stock, poultry, seeds, domestic science; halter making, as well as the Calf Club and showmanship competition attracted a record number of 721 entries. A large and interested ringside followed the placings made by W. J. Bell and L. C. McOat, in connection with the Calf Club and showmanship competitions.

First honours in the Ayrshire groups went to the Newington Calf Club of West Stormont, while in the Jersey section, the award went to the group from the Carp Calf Club, Carleton County. A class of 36 faced Judge W. J. Bell in the Holstein section. This class was won by the group from Prince Edward County Calf Club. The same group was later awarded the championship of the dairy groups. In the shorthorn and Hereford class both awards went to the groups from the Carp Calf Club of Carleton County, with the Shorthorn group receiving the beef championship.

The champion showman of the junior agricultural department was Norman Cummings of Lancaster, with Donald McIntyre of Finch, reserve.

All of Dionne Quintuplets Are Established in Beds

All Five Babies Are in Fine Health, Says Dr. Dafoe, And Taking Interest in Surroundings.

Callander.—All of the Dionne quintuplets were out of their incubators Friday and established in beds where they kicked and rolled with every manifestation of keen pleasure. They all had baths to-day. It was the first time Emilie and Marie, the two smallest girls, had been washed in water.

Dr. A. R. Dafoe, north country physician who attended Mrs. Oliva Dionne at the birth of her five daughters, said all the children were in the best of health and were beginning to show marked interest in their surroundings. He added the small tumour on the thigh of Marie, lightweight of the five, was improving.

West Prepares to Send Hay and Straw to U. S.

Premier Bracken, Manitoba, Appeals to Farmers to Cease Burning Straw Stacks.

Winnipeg. — Manitoba's sales of fodder for starving United States cattle will be known soon, it has been announced here by Premier John Bracken of Manitoba. At Edmonton, Hon. F. S. Grisdale, minister of agriculture for Alberta, announced surplus hay in Southern Alberta probably would be available for sale to the United States.

Premier Bracken appealed to Manitoba to cease burning straw stacks. "If large quantities of wheat straw, which heretofore have been destroyed, can be sold, it will not only mean additional revenue to producers but additional employment for thousands during the next few months in connection with the baling for shipment," Premier Bracken said.

Woman Rescuer Is Noted For Her Pluck and Stamina

Picton Citizens Not Surprised by Episode at Bancroft —Miss Folkard Has Distinguished Herself.

Picton —Citizens of Picton were not surprised to hear of Miss C. Folkard's heroic rescue of two men at Bancroft. Miss Folkard has been Mothers' Allowance investigator for a number of years and during that time has often been faced with situations calling for just such a display of courage and resourcefulness.

Miss Folkard is essentially an outdoor woman, enjoying motoring, boating, golf and tennis. She owns a summer cottage on the bay shore near Picton where she spends much of her summer. She has a large motorboat, besides rowboats, and spends a great deal of time on the water. Besides her work with the Mothers' Allowance Board, she is a members of the Humane Society. Fond of animals, she is usually accompanied by a large St. Bernard dog, which she calls "Byng."

Some three years ago while on a trip in the north country, Miss Folkard was held up by two women whom she was investigating on a charge of liquor distilling. Though outmatched in size by both her assailants, she put up so good a scrap that she gained her freedom and reached her car parked some distance down the road, while the women gave chase.

RedsNoMenaceinBritain Declares Labour Head

British Working Man Is Too Loyal To Be Led Away, He Believes.— Backs Free Speech As Long As Disorders Do Not Occur.

Because of loyalty of the great mass of the British workingmen to their trades unions, there is no likelihood of the Communist party ever becoming a formidable force in Great Britain, John Marchbank, general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen of the United Kingdom, declared in an interviewow.

Mr. Marchbank, who began life as a shepherd boy in his native Dumfrieshire, got a job as a railway porter and rose to prominence in the British railway union ,is in Toronto as a fraternal delegate from British labour to the Canadian Trades and Labour Congress.

With all the canniness natural to one who speaks with his Scottish burr, Mr. Marchbank shied away from comment that Toronto was sitting on a Communist volcano. He would discuss only the British situation. Over there, he said, the Communists were mainly among the unemployed. They would never, he thought, become a formidable political force.

In England, he said the Communists were working from within the ranks of the labour organizations, endeavouring to foment strife and split up the workers. "They are not out to improve the lot of the working man,' 'he said. "Their object is to destroy the unions."

He neverthless felt that British Communists and Fascists should have the right of free expression of their views so long as this did not lead to disorder.

A Girl and Canadian Bonds

By
A CANADIAN IN THE STATES.

THE MYSTERY that is money has been particularly baffling in the last two and a half years to Canadians living south of the border line. They have seen the United States bankers make a complete volte face in the currency question.

The following example, in which names are omitted for obvious reasons, attempts to give the drama of the Canadian dollar between October, 1931 ,and June, 1934.

Jean Canuck, a Canadian citizen employed in the United States capital, has always sent a certain amount of her monthly salary to a Canadian bank. The purpose is highly legitimate—to pay for property and insurance in her own country. In late September, 1931, when Great Britain went off the gold standard and Canada's currency immediately became sympathetic, Jean Canuck got her first premium on the bank deposit that went to Canada. Seeing money make itself like that was certainly a grand and glorious feeling, experienced every time the premium was paid thereafter into her Canadian account.

Just before Christmas of that year Jean Canuck found it necessary to raise about $300 to apply against a mortgage due in Canada. She had, among others, one Canadian Government bond of $500 which she planned to put up as a security for the contemplated loan. Jean Canuck was quite a financier in an amateur way, and when this mortgage situation arose there flashed through her agile mind the possibility of juggling on the international exchange She would get the loan from her Washington bank, then transfer the $300 to her Canadian account and collect a handsome premium.

Armed with the bond and this brilliant idea she went to her Washington bank and told the manager that she wished to raise $300 on the proffered security. Of course she was careful to say never a word about her scheme to "make" on the exchange.

This particular bank manager was not the most affable of individuals at best, and at the sight of the Canadian bond he became quite supercilious. "We couldn't touch a loan on that," he said with the merest and most deprecating glance at the valuable document.

"But it's a Canadian Government bond for five hundred dollars," said the incredulous Jean Canuck. "What could you give me on it, if not $300?"

"Nothing," said the bank manager. "What you want to do is to send it up to Canada to your own bank"

His tone was frigid enough to suit the Arctic climate that he no doubt thought prevailed the year round "up in Canada."

"The rate on these Canadian Government bonds keeps changing so that we would not risk them as collateral," he added, as if to impress on the suppliant his contempt for her country's foremost security.

Disgusted but by no means daunted, Jean Canuck next decided to try a lending institution that advertised widely for applications for loans. She had received several of their enticing circulars, explaining how simple it was to borrow from them.

The credit manager there was quite polite but not over-enthusiastic. He would have to see on what exchange the bond was listed. A lot of hunting revealed that that particular issue was not quoted on any of the United States exchanges, which automatically removed it from the field of acceptable security.

"And I can't raise anything on a Canadian Government $500 bond?" said Jean Canuck in wide-eyed amazement.

"I'm afraid not," said the credit man.

Jean Canuck did not say it, but she thought: "Well, of all the brass! . . . To treat our government bonds as if they weren't worth the paper they are printed on." Then she took her departure hurriedly lest her dignity desert her ,in which case she might have made remarks that would have found their way into the papers.

That is the incident, except, of course, that Jean Canuck got her loan from the Canadian bank without as much as a murmur. Nevertheless, she thought often and regretfully of the nice profit, "pure velvet," that would have been hers had she been able to swing things her own way.

As the general public knows well enough, the time came when President Roosevelt declared the United States off the gold standard and the premium on United States funds at once began to decrease, and was soon wiped out. In fact, Canada's currency was soon quoted at a slight premium.

Came June of 1934 and Jean Canuck wanted to raise a little money in a hurry. She had a $100 Canadian Government bond in Washington which she decided to sell at once. Some sixth sense told her to enquire at the Washington bank about the best means of selling.

"A Canadian Government bond?" said the assistant manager over the 'phone. "We can sell it—why ,sure—we can find a market for that." His tone was deeply respectful.

Jean Canuck marvelled greatly but held her tongue. That was on a Tuesday morning, and on Wednesday forenoon the bank 'phoned to say that the bond had been sold — at a premium.

Again Jean Canuck kept her composure.

"I'm just going out to lunch," she said, "so I'll come over and arrange about the proceeds."

When she got to the bank the young man who had 'phoned her was out, but the manager saw her approach the wicket.

"Anything I can do for you, Miss Canuck?" He was as friendly as he had been frigid the last time Canadian Government bonds had formed the business of the day.

"I just wanted to have the amount entered in my book and to thank you for such quick service," she said.

"That's quite all right," said the manager affably, and he took her book to be made up, much to her secret amusement.

As she was about to leave the bank the assistant manager returned from his bite of lunch at the nearby drug store. Jean Canuck offered her thanks to him also for the bank's assistance in the sale and for the speedy service.

"What did you pay for that bond?" said the young American banker.

"I think around 95 or 96," said Jean Canuck. "Less than par anyway."

"Say, you got a dandy profit," said he, with that quick approving nod that accompanies mention of a profitable transaction.

And as Jean Canuck left him with a final "thank you" she shook her head in smiling bewilderment over the whole currency question.

HOME-BUILT PINE COFFIN AMONG THIEVES' LOOT

Ridgetown, Ont. — A home-made pine coffin built by James Gilson of Ridgetown was among the loot taken by thieves who struck four times in Highgate and Ridgetown Friday night. "I might say," commented County Constable R. Priestly, "that the coffin was empty. Apparently contemplating being caught and fearing the worst, the thieves were preparing for any eventualities."

Two containers along with an undetermined quantity of gasoline were taken from the Imperial Oil storehouse. In Highgate the total value of merchandise stolen was estimated at $500. Included in the haul were 100-pound bags of flour and sugar.

Wm. Lewis 3.50; Sam Eldridge $7.00; Lillian Gow, balance on stone $125.00; Isaiah Robinson, balance on stone $10.00; Roy Swerdfeger, hauling stone and plank $48.23; James Lewis, cutting brush $7.00; Wesley Keeler, cutting brush $7.00; Dan Durant, cutting brush $7.00; J. S .Beckstead, services re Williamsburg Drain $50.00; Reeve & Clerk, issuing debentures for Williamsburg Drain $6.00.

The council adjourned to meet at Boucks Hill on October 6th, at one o'clock, p.m.

A smart boy was sent into a baker's shop for a five-penny loaf. Having received it, it struck him it was underweight, so he called the baker's attention to it.

"Never mind that," said the baker. "It will be less for you to carry."

"Very well," said the boy, and throwing fourpence on the counter he walked away.

The baker called after him and said he had not left enough money.

"Oh, never mind that," said the boy. "It will be less for you to count."

A PERTINENT QUESTION.

Stirred by the growing tendency of his fellow townsmen to use the newspaper for everything but advertising, a South Dakota editor recently asked them pertinently, in a page one box: "If a member of your family died, would you send out the obituary in a circular letter? If your wife entertained would you run a slide on the screen of the movie show? If you were to enlarge your store, would you tell folks in a hotel register? If you were to have a wedding in your house, would you tack the news on a telephone post? Then, why in heck don't you put your advertising in the newspaper too?"

A Chinaman was worried by a vicious-looking dog, which barked at him in an angry manner.

"Don't be afraid of him," said the owner. "You know the old proverb: 'A barking dog never bites.'"

"Yes," said the Chinaman. "You know ploverb, and me know ploverb, but does dog know ploverb?"

Since last writing many changes have taken place. The harvest is off and threshing mostly finished. The drought has been broken by two fine rains. A beautiful warm rain fell today most of the morning and until three in the afternoon, which will help the pasture, corn and potato crops.

We are pleased to report Mr. Thos. McConnell, Mrs. McConnell and Jas. recovering from their injuries received in the auto accident as they were going to the Ottawa Fair. Mr. McConnell is still in the hospital but is doing well according to last reports.

The electric power line mentioned in the last report is now carrying energy to the city of Cornwall and two more wires have been added. The commission's adjusters have been along the line compensating owners of the lands for injury done to crops while erecting the towers and wiring. Very liberal compensation was allowed and parties having crops damaged seem on the whole to be satisfied with the amounts paid.

Wesley and Thos. Reveler motored to Cornwall yesterday to visit Mr. Geo. C .Reveler who is a patient in the General Hospital. We are pleased that Mr. Reveler is doing well and will soon be home.

New piers are being constructed under the Crysler bridge giving employment to many labourers. This is a county bridge and we understand the steel will be put up during the winter to extend employment to those requiring it.

A certain inspector, noted for his fault-finding propensities, was inspecting a newly completed portion of the trans-Canada highway. He grumbled at everything—the crown was not high enough, the shoulder too steep, the ditches not deep enough and so on. The foreman bore it all patiently; then he straightened up to his full height, and looked full at the inspector:

"How is she for length?" he asked.

GROUNDHOG'S ROUGH RIDE.

While cutting a field of barley recently with the binder set very low because the grain was short, Mr. Frank Witt, farmer, of Locksley section, near Pembroke, noticed after passing over a groundhog's den, a dark object going up the elevator canvas with the grain. Thinking it was a snake, he paid little attention to it but when the binder dropped the sheaf, he saw a groundhog working himself out of the top of the sheaf and starting for his den. Considerably shaken up by his rough trip through the binder, the groundhog missed his hole and escaped from one peril only to meet a worse one, for before it could get under ground he was caught by a dog and killed.

Canadian Hog as a Source ot Ready Cash.

In these days the economic value of the pig to the Canadian farmer is of first rate importance. Hogs, indeed, have become to a greater extent than ever before in this country a source of ready cash to the man who raises them. They bring him twice as much money as the United States agriculturist is able to realize. This is one result of the Imperial Economic Conference held in Ottawa in 1932 at the invitation and under the leadership of the Canadian Prime Minister. Under the Anglo-Canadian agreement Canada was allotted free entry into the United Kingdom of bacon and hams up to a maximum of 280,000,000 pounds per annum.

As set forth in a publication issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway, the British market has been the best export for Canadian bacon, and other hog products, but the exports rose or fell according to production and trade conditions. As far back as 1880 they totalled in that year 10,000,00 pounds. In 1895 over 40,000,000 pounds were shipped. In 1900 the total shipment exceeded 134,000,000 pounds. The highest totals were reached in 1917 and 1919 with 216,568,097 pounds and 240,729,586 pounds respectively. Since then there has been a sharp decline. In 1931 less than 11,000,000 pounds were sold to Britain. Last year, due to the 1932 Economic Conference quota, the shipments rose to over 71,500,000 pounds, which however is still a long way short of the possible market of 280,000,000 pounds. Now 280,000,000 pounds of bacon and hams at 85 shillings per 112 pounds, the price at the time of writing, represents $53,000,000 in cash and about 2,500,000 hogs. Of course the price may fluctuate and the demand may not keep up, though if the quality is right the market will be there. This is big business.

If the Canadian farmer is to increase the advantage which he has already obtained in the Old Country market, he must remember that that market demands bacon of high quality—a product characterized by leanness, firmness of flesh, with a maximum development of the best cuts and a minimum development of the poorer cuts. Denmark has for long profited by the knowledge that the English do not care for heavy or coarse bacon. Our own hog raisers must follow the same path. They must develop an aristocracy in pigs that will bring in money. The Federal agricultural department, under Hon. Robert Weir, has shown the way, and the provincial departments of agriculture are, at least in some of the provinces, contributing their own quota of helpfulness.

It is up to the hog-raiser to do his share in the task of capturing the greatest consuming market in the world.

ANTS THAT PASS LIVES AS CASKS OF HONEY

By J. V. McAree.

WE CANNOT REMEMBER having written anything before about ants, so we think it is about time to do so. Some things about them we have known for many years, the reading of Fabre having at one time been favourite fare with us.

We know that the ants have a wonderful social system, that they keep domestic creatures as pets and pasture them as a farmer does his cows, and that like cows they divulge a substance, a kind of honey dew, that the ants love to sup. But we did not know until recently that there are ants which are what Jennie E. Harris, in the National Geographic Magazine calls "living casks of honey." These honey ants, whose scientific name is Mymecycstus hortideorum, are found in two or three western states but may be more widely distributed. They live underground, some of them having been found several feet below the earth's surface. Their presence is generally indicated by the pile of rubble that has been excavated. They are rock dwellers and the ants which are described as honey casks spend their lives, which may extend over several years, clinging to the ceiling of their dungeons, immovable for months except when they open their mouths to receive the nectar or to regurgitate it.

Like Hanging Lamps.

Not all the ants in a colony perhaps not more than half a dozen in a thousand become vessels for storing honey, nor can science say how it is that a few are selected for this purpose, or if they are in any way specially endowed. Apparently any worker ant, which is to say an undeveloped female, can be turned into a depository. Our author gives a word picture of the appearance of these insects in their cages:

"The vaulted roof is clustered with enormous hanging lamps. No, not lamps; pale amber spheres, hanging about midway into the room, occupying half the cellar space. The globes glow with .the light that lives in honey; their pale-gold colour is the richness of honey; that scent arising from them is the warm flavour of honey. Each globe is a living jewel, nothing more nor less than the distended body of a living ant filled almost to bursting with limpid honey, clutched to the roof by its claws. They crowd the arched ceiling, stir restlessly, twist their yellow heads. squirm their shoulders, but do not loosen hold. Below them the clean walls slope to the level floor, which is swept, polished, made smooth. But the roof is gritty, purposely made rough for the claws to maintain their perch."

Nectar From Oak Leaves.

A worker ant enters and climbs to one of these casks. She lifts her antennae and may stroke the body of the reservoir. Presently a microscopic drop of the liquid honey emerges. The ant sips it, and may take two or three draughts before climbing down, daintily wiping her mouth as she proceeds upon her business. But before this happens the process must be reversed. The worker ants laden with the dew climb up to the honey ants, place mouth to mouth, and drop by drop the substance is absorbed by the casks. The honey itself is collected from oak galls. These are leaves of the oak tree that have been pierced by a tiny insect, and produces a protective flow of oak dew, or perhaps we might call it sap. The ants always pass by the old galls from which the insect has departed and invariably collect from those which are new. They collect a drop and move away, but return once or twice because the wounded leaf usually exudes three series of drops in the course of the night.

Like the Bees.

These ants work always at night, and most of the night. They pass the drops they have collected from mouth to mouth. Most of the night's collection is given to other ants, the babies, which may later on develop into honey casks. What is not thus devoured on the spot is dropped into the casks. It is much the same process as that by which bees store honey with the significant difference that the ants secrete no wax and therefore cannot make cells. So they use members of the community as vats. When the weather makes it impossible for them to gather this honey they will remain indoors and quaff from the casks which are from eight to ten times the normal size of ants, and number thirty or more to a cellar, of which there are ten in a fair-sized ant home. Sometimes these casks become empty enough to climb down from the ceiling and look about them. But for the most part they remain filled. Oddly enough they are never benefited by the honey they contain for that is in a communal not a private stomach. Hanging immobile perhaps they do not require food, for no observable portion of the honey with which they are distended is ever consumed.

The Dead Ants.

Now and then one of these casks falls to the floor. Sometimes it is able to clamber back, but generally it lies writhing where it falls, held down by its monstrous weight. The other ants could hoist it back but this they never do, though they tend it solicitously and keep it clean. If in its fall the honey spilled it is eagerly lapped up by the ants and either fed to the young or redeposited in other casks. Generally when the casks die they do so in the position they have held for most of their lives on the ceiling. Their grip does not loosen, and a day or two may elapse before the other ants know anything is amiss. When they do ,one of them with a single bite separates the cask from the rest of the body. The claws are removed from the ceiling and the whole corpus is rolled away to the burial ground. The honey remains sweet and pure but the ants never touch it. The stuff itself has been found on analysis to be an almost pure solution of grape sugar. It never crystallizes, is slightly aromatic and extremely sweet. It can be made to evaporate into a gummy mass but when left in the open it absorbs moisture from the air and becomes liquid honey again.

PEACHES.

OF COURSE, we can serve canned peaches at any season, but they just aren't in it with the fresh ones. Aside from the fact that peaches have a very delicious flavour and can be combined with other foods to make many pleasing and attractive dishes, they stand high in the list of valuable foods. Three average sized peaches contain 100 calories, 7 of which are protein, 2 fat and 91 carbohydrate. Peaches contain one-third as much vitamin C as oranges, very little vitamin A and some iodine. The iron content of peaches makes them an important food in the diet of persons suffering from anaemia. They are also valuable in diabetic diets as they may be used interchangeably with oranges.

FRESH PEACH PUDDING.

Sponge cake
6 fresh peaches
3 egg whites
6 tablespoons sugar
1 cup cream, whipped
3 egg yolks
3 cups milk
¼ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon vanilla

Cut the sponge cake in slices and place in a shallow pan. Peel the peaches, remove stones and cut in halves. Arrange peach halves on sponge cake. Beat egg whites until stiff and gradually beat in 6 tablespoons sugar. Continue beating. Spread meringue, thus made, over peaches Bake in a slow oven for 15 minutes or until brown. Scald milk in top of the double boiler and pour over egg yolks which have been slightly beaten with ¼ cup of sugar. Cook slowly in double boiler, stirring constantly until the custard-like mixture coats a silver spoon. Remove from heat and add salt. Cool and fold in whipped cream to which vanilla has been added. Remove the peach cake to a dessert dish and pour the custard over it. This dessert is improved if thoroughly chilled before serving.

PEACH PIE.

2 cups peaches, cut up
¼ cup water
⅛ teaspoon allspice
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon butter

Pare peaches and slice thin. Put in a pastry-lined pie tin; sprinkle with sugar and spice and dot with butter. Cover with an upper crust and bake 40 minutes in a hot oven.

MACÉDOINE OF FRUIT.

3 peaches
3 pears
½ cup diced pineapple
½ cup diced watermelon
1 cup raspberries
1-3 cup sugar

Pare and slice peaches and pears, cut pineapple and melon in small pieces, mix fruit and sugar and chill for one hour. Serve in glasses, adding one tablespoon whipped cream to each just before serving. A berry, cherry or piece of melon placed on the whipped cream will give colour to the dish.

This dish can be changed to suit left-overs and you can easily make up your own macédoine of fruit.

Use the above mixture of fruit in the following recipe:

MELBA PEACH SALAD.

Individual peach salads may be made by placing one or two peach halves on a lettuce leaf and filling with the fruit mixture used in the preceding recipe for macédoine of fruit. The fruit may be mixed with the whipped cream or the whipped cream may be added to the salad dressing. If you like something chewy in your salads, add nut meats or chopped celery to the fruit mixture.

ICE CREAM MELBA.

On each plate place a slice of sponge cake, then a scoop of ice cream and on top of it place a peach half inverted over the ice cream. Top with the following raspberry sauce:

1 cup canned raspberries.
¼ cup sugar

Push raspberries through a sieve, add sugar and boil five minutes. Chill until ready to serve.

ORANGE AND PEACH MARMALADE

15 peaches
4 oranges
6 cups sugar
Rind and juice of ½ of large lemon

Cut peaches and oranges in small pieces, using both rind and juice of oranges. Mix all ingredients together. Boil 20 minutes. Seal in clean jars.

* * *

Peaches may be pared, sliced and boiled with sugar to taste, and sealed in jars to use in the winter time for peach pie.

* * *

A delicious one-crust pie may be made quickly if you have a baked pie shell on hand. Mix fresh or canned peaches with whipped cream and pile lightly on baked shell. Chill and serve. Or fill shell with sliced fresh or canned peaches and top with whipped cream.

* * *

Macédoine is a mixture; usually it refers to vegetables, with or without meat, but is sometimes applied to fruit mixtures.

* * *

Peaches are best canned by the cold pack method, which consists of packing the peeled peaches, either halves or whole peaches, in sterile jars. The syrup is then added. The jars are covered with glass tops and metal rings screwed losely. Place jars in a pan of water and process in the oven for one hour at 275 degrees Fahrenheit. When finished remove tops, adjust rubbr ring. Fill jars to overflowing with boiling syrup. Seal at once.

This method has the advantage of preserving the shape of the fruit and when the processing is done in the oven, is no more bother than the open kettle method.

A medium syrup made in the proportion of 1 cup of sugar to 1 cup of water is best for peaches.

* * *

Don't forget to serve peaches and cream and fresh peach short cake made like strawberry shortcake.

Bigg's Bread and Butter

GRIZZLED Capt. Thomas Crawley familiarly known as "Crawling Tommy," was regarded by his friends of the water front as a sort of mascot, shabby, but faithful—a man who could be relied upon to bear cheerfully the brunt of all jokes, and yet to share a solitary crust with his tormentors.

One so flagrantly an "easy mark" usually earns for himself more of indulgent contempt of his fellow men than of downright affection. But when, after being "caught out" in his dilapidated schooner Gazelle, Crawling Tommy became sick from exposure and was taken to the Marine Hospital at Riverport, twenty miles upriver, his Bayhaven friends realized what they had not bothered to think about before—that the old man held a very warm place in their hearts.

A group of them, round the red-hot pot-bellied stove in Oliver Biggs' general store, agreed, with what for them was the acme of eloquence, that it was an extremely regrettable occurrence.

"Crawling Tommy's in for pneumony and it'll take him off just like the thistledown!" declared chin-whiskered Capt. Ezra Roper. "He ain't got the constitution to stand anything like that! I swan, it's too bad!"

Gaunt and long-legged Peter Carr was looking out of the rear window "By jing, there's Sam and Ole comin' ashore from the Gazelle with their dunnage this very minute!" he exclaimed. "They must have give up hope for Tommy, or they'd have stood by her! Too bad! I'll be jiggered if it ain't!"

"Crawley have any folks anywhere?" suddenly inquired Oliver Biggs, the storekeeper, a rat-faced little man with hard, green eyes that were set unbelievably close together.

"Never heard of any," answered Bill Huckins. "He was a bach, ye know, and he had a sister die on him up to Riverport last summer. I cal'late that cleans out the family. It's too bad and no two ways about it!"

"There is no one to look out for the Gazelle, then? No legal heirs?" pursued Biggs sharply.

"Oh, as far as that goes, I guess us fellers will keep an eye out for her now that those shiftless loafers of Tommy's have skipped out!" spoke up fat and pink-faced Captain Sol Stearns, master of the Cyclops, the one tugboat in Bayhaven.

"I mean who will be responsible for her account," said Biggs crisply.

"Oh, that's what's eating ye, is it?" asked the captain of the tugboat. "Tommy owed ye a little something, did he?"

"Yes, he did, gents; that's the plain truth of the matter," acknowledged Biggs. "I've got a little bill of fifty dollars against Crawley."

"Been running long?" asked Peter Carr.

"Well, no," admitted the storekeeper. "It's for a bill of goods he bought this very month. But his affairs seem to be badly mixed up, and I've got my bread and butter to earn, and—"

"Oh, you and your bread and butter go hang!" growled Huckins. "You could buy and sell us all and not know the difference!"

"Yes, by jing, that's so!" agreed Carr. "Don't lose no sleep about the Gazelle. You'll get your money all right!"

"I intend to!" said Biggs shortly.

"By Jupiter, I'd chip in and help pay the bill myself!" said Captain Stearns. "But hang it all, my own grub bill ain't settled up yet this month, is it, Biggs?"

"Oh, that's all right, cap'n, that's all right! I'm not worrying any about that! But Crawley—Crawley's affairs seem to be all heads and points. I figure that the best way for me to safeguard my own interests is to put an attachment on the Gazelle."

"Put what?" asked Stearns, as if doubting that he heard rightly.

"Libel her," repeated Biggs doggedly.

"Oh, ye wouldn't do that just yet, would ye?" remonstrated Roper. "Don't ye think it would look better to wait a little—wait till after the funeral, anyways?"

"That's just when the other sharks will come flocking around, and then no one will get anything! 'Do before you're done!' is my motto! I have my bread and butter to earn! With all due respect for the memory of Captain Crawley, I see no reason for delaying!"

He took a purple ulster from its peg behind the desk, put it on over his black alpaca office coat and slammed the street door in a howl of wintry wind.

"The old Shylock is going up to see Squire Cotten about having the papers made out!" said Huckins. "It's too bad, I swear!"

Captain Stearns brought his chair down on its forelegs with a thud that shook the store. "Are you fellers going to sit there and see that old skinflint collect his pound of flesh before poor Tommy's hardly dead and cold?" he demanded. "Are you fellers going to stand it, I say? It's sacrilegious, I tell ye! I'd as soon see old Biggs out daubing red paint on Tommy's gravestone, by Jupiter!"

The graphic simile served to rouse the group to fighting pitch, and remarks that were not at all complimentary to the thrifty merchant ran among them.

"But what are you going to do about it, Sol?" asked Roper. "We're just as sore about it as you are, but Biggs has the law on his side. We can't very well mob Squire Cotten in his office, or take the papers away from Constable Greenfield when he goes to serve 'em."

"I ain't afraid of all the officials in Walcock County!" shouted Captain Stearns. "I'll keep clear of them and they'll keep clear of me, by Jupiter!" Then he smiled and winked at his hearers. "Did it ever occur to you," he said deliberately, "that that is a terrible exposed position out here for the old Gazelle to be laying in at this season. Her anchors and chains ain't what they were thirty years ago, and she's liable to go adrift with the first heavy breeze we have. Now, as caretakers of the Gazelle, it's up to us four to—"

"Warp her in to the wharf and tie her up solid as a pump bolt!" finished Roper triumphantly, giving his thigh a resounding thwack.

"O rats!" said Captain Stearns. "And have wharfage to pay? Hasn't the poor old hooker got a heavy enough load of debt already?"

"Speak up, then! We're for ye!" urged Carr. "What do ye want to do?"

"My idea was to tow her across the bay into Ironbound Cove, where she'll lay snug in all winds," said the captain, with another wink. "That's a good place for her till they find out what's going to be done with her."

"That's just the place for her, by jing!" exclaimed Peter Carr, returning his confederate's wink. "Cal'late we'd better 'do before we're done,' too, hadn't we, Sol?"

The four guardians of Crawling Tommy's honour stamped out of the store and down through drifting snow to the wharf. A short distance out in the harbour the ownerless Gazelle lay at anchor—a pathetic, weather-beaten relic with frayed rope ends flying. She plunged and sheered in the rushing chop, and the breeze in her rusty wire rigging seemed to chant a dirge for her departed master.

"By jing, it makes me feel like thunder to go aboard the old pecket!" said Carr gruffly.

"That's the worst of it," assented Stearns, blowing his nose furiously. "But it would mke me feel a lot more like thunder to have anything happen to her. Pile aboard the Cyclops, boys, and we'll yank her across the bay in a jiffy."

The top-heavy little red towboat that ministered to the scanty shipping wants of the ancient port lay on the lee side of the wharf with steam up, and her mate, engineer, fireman and cook toasting themselves in her cosy galley forward. Half an hour later the Gazelle's creaking windlass had brought her mud-laden anchor to the surface, and, with a brown smoke plume trailing down the wind, the Cyclops towed the rolling schooner labouriously across the five-mile bay.

In the sheltered waters of Ironbound Cove they let go both anchors, furled the gray-patched sails, which the deserting crew of two had left in lubberly, ballooning bags and almost reverently stepped from her decks to the tug.

Then they discovered that they had been followed in a green motor boat by Biggs and Constable Greenfield, who were drenched with spray from their boisterous crossing. The little craft rounded to under the stern of the tug and came deftly alongside. for the constable was a successful small-boat fisherman when he was not occupied with affairs of state.

"Do you know what you've done? Do you know what you've done?" shrieked Biggs.

"I hope so," said Captain Stearns calmly. "We've put the Gazelle in a safe berth' '

"You've cost me twenty-five dollars with your rascally meddling!" squealed Biggs, shaking a sheaf of papers in the tugman's genial face. "The shyster charged me twenty-five dollars for this affidavit of attachment and attachment writ and attorney's order of levy. and goodness knows what else, and they're not worth the paper they're written on! Do you know what you've done? You've taken the Gazelle over into Lincton County, that's what you've done!"

Captain Stearns winked broadly at his men. "By Jupiter, so we have!" he agreed in a voice of deep concern. "But you see, neighbour, we were afraid she might go adrift if she laid over across, and then there wouldn't be anything for you to attach."

"Thanks for your thoughtfulness! Another of your valuable efforts at assitance and I'll lose her altogether!"

"Who pays me?" inquired bowlegged Constable Greenfield suddenly.

Biggs threw both hands in air. "How do I know? Who pays me my twenty-five dollars?"

"Oh, Squire Cotten will give it back to ye!" suggested Roper.

"Cotten will ,a lot! He loves me like a rattlesnake!"

"Well, now ye're here, why don't you have some papers made out in Lincton County?" Stearns suggested, and treated his allies to another wink. "Of course if you win your case all these fees will come out of the estate."

"I'll do it!' 'snapped Boggs. "I'll serve my attachment if it takes a fleet of dreadnaughts! Constable, take me ashore!"

"Pay me my fee in full, first."

"Not one red cent!" stormed the storekeper. "Stearns, you land me; there's a good fellow!"

"I couldn't think of taking the job away from the constable, neighbour. It's his bread and butter, you know"

"You're a gang of pirates! You're all in league together!" cried Biggs. But he drew out a fat wallet and counted therefrom six crisp bills, which he handed to the constable. Greenfield cranked his engine, and they went ashore.

"Lawyer Sharp up there to Ironbound Four Corners won't be any esaier on him, by jing, if I'm any judge!" remarked Carr. "Sharp runs the general store, and Biggs has been getting all his vessel trade lately."

"Biggs'll see it through now, though," declared Huckins.

"Did it ever occur to you," said Captain Stearns, "that Ironbound Cove ain't such an awful good place to leave the Gazelle after all? She's sheltered enough, but we can't look after her as we should."

"I'm willing to stay aboard and play ship-keeper," volunteered Roper.

"O rats!" scoffed Captain Stearns. "I was thinking we could keep an eye on her better if we took her out and moored her in Gangway Island Roads."

"That's in Hando County," said Peter Carr, with a grin.

"So it is," agreed Stearns, as if it had not occurred to him. "Let's give Shylock plenty of time to get his papers good and binding, though."

"But we can't keep this up forever," said Huckins dubiously. "We'll run out of counties pretty quick."

"That's all right. We don't aim to do Biggs out of his just dues. We're just learning him a lesson in common decency."

They waited until they saw the storekeeper, Greenfield and the Lincton County constable come down on the wharf and prepare to embark for their intended prize. Then the steaming Cyclops took the Gazelle in tow again and, with the fuming motor boat in hot pursuit, pulled her into the roadstead of Gangway Island, seven miles offshore."

As Biggs clambered aboard the tug his rat-like face of an apopletic hue. "What do you scoundrels think you are trying to do?" he bellowed.

"Oh, we're just aiming to keep one move ahead of you! If we have good luck we'll do it," responded Captain Stearns coolly.

"You think you're smart, making me spend sixty-two dollars to collect a fifty-dollar bill, don't you?" snapped Biggs. "You wait and I'll take it out of your hides yet! I'll get the state authorities—I'll get the federal authorities after you, and you'll have to step lively to outwit them, you—you—"

"Suit yourself," said Stearns. "I guess likely you'll find we'll give you a run for your money first. Now, if you're going to call this a day's work, let's all go home."

Back to Bayhaven, against the glare of the setting sun, thrashed the Cyclops and the green motor boat, while Biggs promised to wreak dire vengeance on those who stood between him and his bread and butter.

On the wharf stood Capt. Thomas Crawley, a little thin and white, but smiling. He waved them a cheery greeting.

"Why, the old possum!" gasped Huckins.

The men jumped from rail to cap log and, swarming about him, shook his gnarled hand with a vim that made him wonder what new prank was about to be played upon him.

"I didn't seem to be doing any good up to the hospital; so I put on my duds and come home," he explained. "Just a little touch of the grippe, I cal'late. What are you doing with the Gazelle way out to Gangway Island? Will have your little joke, won't you, boys?" The little man smiled and noded, seemingly enjoying it as much as anyone.

"Y-yes, it was all a joke, Cap'n Crawley," the embarrassed storekeeper hastened to say.

"I guess likely you won't find it's such a joke, after all," said Captain Stearns severely. "Do you know you are liable to damages for making an erroneous attachment, by Jupiter!"

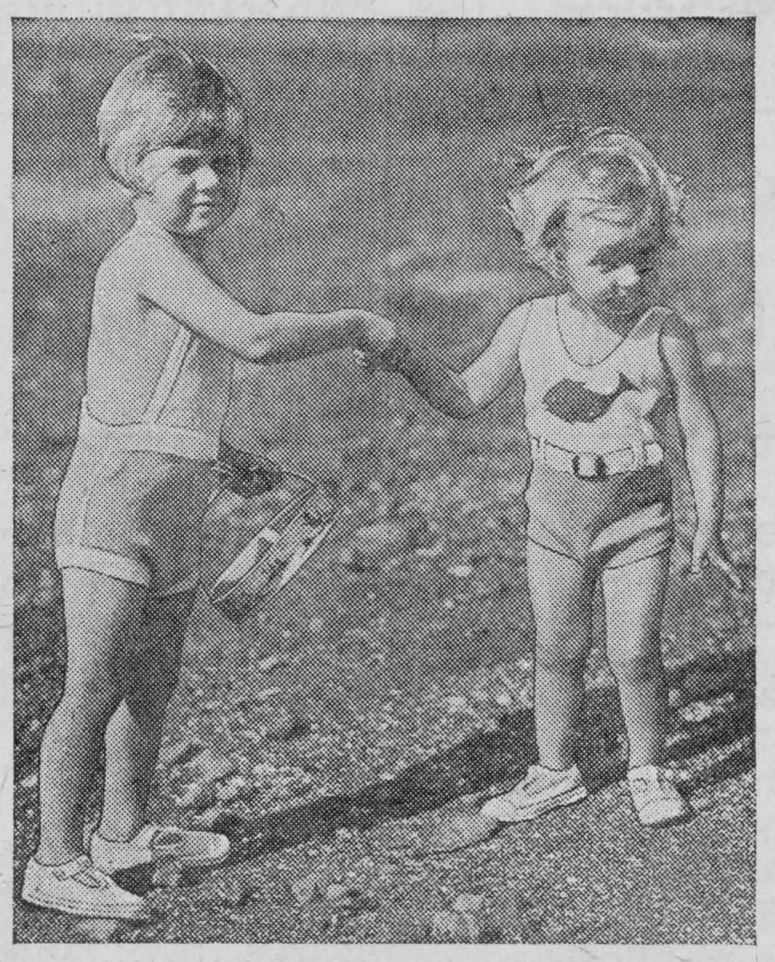

"I—I didn't make it!" whined Biggs. "But I'm willing to do what is right, Cap'n Stearns—Cap'n Crawley."

"Oh, that's all right, that's all right!" interposed Crawling Tommy with his usual good humour. "The boys will have their little joke."

"Them's the truest words you ever spoke," said Stearns promptly. "But you ain't the goat this time, Tommy. Biggs, you hand Crawley a receipt for that bill of goods about the first thing you do, unless you want to lose the trade of every vessel man betwixt Gangway and Ironbound Cove!"

"Y-yes, sir," chattered Biggs.

Store Owner Loses $500 To Two Armed Robbers

21-Year-Old Belleville Merchant Accosted As He Was About to Close Store, After Big Day's Business.

Belleville, Ont. — Late Saturday night Samuel Goodman, 21-year-old Front Street merchant, whistled as he gave his store the final once-over befor closing. Fair week had increased his business and Goodman was happy as he thought of the $500 roll that was bulging his coat pocket.

The door of his clothing store opened and two late customers entered. One, a tall slim man, in a slouch hat, speaking with a foreign accent, asked Goodman for a pair of socks. Goodman turned to reach for the socks and was terrified to feel what he believed was the muzzle of a loaded revolver jammed against his ribs.

"Stick 'em up," ordered the man with his right hand still in his pocket. Goodman reached for the ceiling and, according to the story he told the police, the other man hurriedly went through his pockets, relieving him of the $500.

Belleville police were not told of the hold-up until some three hours after it happened when Samuel's brother Jacob, insisted that Sam tell the police.

Sunday, Detective Fred Isard brought James Shub, 30, from Toronto, where he had been arrested, charged with the hold-up. Shub is now being held in Belleville jail.

Crosses Continent Non-Stop In 10 Hours, 2 Minutes

United States Speed Demon Breaks His Own Record For Cross-Continent Hop, Winning $3500 Prize.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—Col. Roscoe Turner, dashing speed demon of the air, held a new record for a flight from the Pacific to the Atlantic of 10 hours and two minutes.

He roared into Floyd Bennett Field in his orange monoplane like a streak of fire from a rifle barrel at 4.05 p.m. (E.S.T.) Saturday, shading the record he made last year of 10 hours and four minutes.

The clockers figured his margin over the old mark at two minutes and 39 seconds.

"The new record isn't much better than my old one," Turner said, "but we can't break records by hours anymore. Minutes are going to count plenty."
