to moult

MOULTING SAPS A HEN'S VITALITY. Just remember that forcing out the old quills and growing a new plumage of a thousand feathers is a serious business.

It requires just so much feed, so much grain converted into nutrition to do that job.

Now, the more you can get your flock to eat and assimilate each day, the quicker your hens will get back to laying.

Dr. Hess Poultry Pan-a-ce-a keeps your moulters from getting into that run-down, unhungry stage.

It contains tonics that tone up the appetite—tonics that promote digestion.

It contains Iron—so essential to a moulting hen—Iron that keeps the paleness away.

Pan-a-ce-a your hens. See them begin to eat. See the old feathers let loose—see the new plumage come.

COSTS LITTLE TO USE PAN-A-CE-A. The price of just one egg pays for all the Pan-a-ce-a a hen will eat in six months. There's a right-size package for every flock. REMEMBER—When you buy any Dr. Hess product, our responsibility does not end until you are satisfied that your investment is a profitable one. Otherwise, return the empty container and get your money back. Eggs are high and will be higher. Start the hens laying.

POWER UNION HOLD MEETING IN BROCKVILLE

(Brockville Recorder)
Confidence in the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission's stand in regard to the St. Lawrence River development scheme was expressed at a meeting of the executive committee of the Eastern Ontario Power Union held Tuesday afternoon in the Victoria building, at which Mayor W. B. Reynolds, president of the union, officiated as chairman. Those in attendance were J. M. Dobbie, A. L. Farquharson, Dr. T. F. Robertson, Brockville; G. C. Cumming, Lyn; M. B. Holmes, Athens; J. M. Campbell, Kingston; W. P. McCarthy, Prescott; A. E. Braybrook, Cornwall; Arthur Flynn, Morrisburg; A. C. Fetterly, Cornwall; W. S. Connolly, G. H. Challies, Morrisburg and T. J. Hannigan, Guelph, secretary of the Ontario Electrical Association.

In opening the meeting Mayor Reynolds referred to the re-organization of the Eastern Ontario Power Union and introduced Mr. Hannigan, who gave a comprehensive resume of the growth of Hydro development in this province. He predicted that in 1926, if the demand for power continues at the same rate as has been the case in the last couple of years, the province would be faced with a power shortage such as never has been known. He deplored the apparent inattention of the government at Ottawa to the St. Lawrence power development project and stated that some 270 municipalities interested are becoming impatient. Sympathy and promises of consideration have been received but when power is wanted, there are other things, such as action, which will do more good than sympathy. It would be easier and cheaper, he stated, to develop the St. Lawrence in two stages, which would give an approximate strength of 600,000 h.p. The governments should divide the costs of the development which, he claimed, would be in the neighborhood of $80,000,000. If the plans for the development are approved, there is a company in the United States ready to look after that end of the work. The development of such an amount of power, he claimed, would be a boon to Ontario citizens. He sketched the hydro movement in Western Ontario and showed what benefits have been derived from it.

Opposition in Cornwall
Mr. Fetterly stated that in Cornwall there is much opposition to the activities of Hydro Electric Power Commission, many being of the opinion that it interferes with the rights of the people. Mr. Braybrook explained the method of distributing and allotting power as carried out by the commission and stated that in Cornwall the power situation is bad, though citizens will not admit it.

J. M. Dobbie stated that at an investigation held recently it was pointed out that Cornwall's power supply, obtained from private sources, is not as plentiful as it would appear.

J. M. Campbell, Kingston, claimed that west and north of Brockville there is a demand for power which cannot be met. If there is not a possibility of an early development of the St. Lawrence, the shortage, he contended, could be alleviated by the development of 100,000 h.p. on the Ottawa river.

G. H. Challies of Morrisburg, declared that the people of Eastern Ontario cannot sit idly waiting for a government to move. Action should be taken for the development of the rights of the people. Engineers appointed by the government are not satisfactory to the people, he claimed, and the people of the district interested are going to fight to the last ditch in support of the Hydro Power Commission's fight for the interests of the province. He would like to see a publicity campaign instituted which would show the people of Ontario how important the matter is to them. He stood firm in a demand that the work be undertaken and that the Union keep on demanding it.

G. C. Cummings, Lyn, advocated conciliation. If the Hydro Commission and Dominion Government are at odds on the question some means of getting representatives of each here for a joint meeting should be effected.

Mr. Fetterly stated that people in Cornwall do not believe that Brockville has three cent rate for electricity when they are forced to pay double that amount. It is very essential, he said, that the people of Eastern Ontario be correctly informed. The Cornwall press take delight in publishing everything unfavorable to hydro.

Controversy Narrowing Down
Arthur Flynn, Morrisburg, claimed that the controversy over the St. Lawrence development is narrowing down to a struggle between public ownership and the monied interests of Montreal and New York. The Union should register a strong protest.

W. S. Connolly, Morrisburg, cited treaties which give to the American equal rights so far as the waters of the St. Lawrence are concerned, stating that the power trust of the United States could lay claim to 95 per cent. of the power. The return of the Republican party to power in the United States is a blow to public ownership. He was firm in his belief that the union should stand behind the Hydro Commission.

W. P. McCarthy, Prescott, spoke

CASSELMAN—BOWMAN

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place on Thursday, November 6th at 2 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, when Miss Adah Vaudrey Bowman, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bowman, was united in marriage to Mr. Hubert Michael Casselman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Casselman of Williamsburg Township. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Maeder, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran Church. They were attended by Miss Eva Casselman, sister of the groom and Mr. Keith Bowman, brother of the bride. Mrs. Maeder played the wedding march.

After the ceremony a buffet lunch was served after which Mr. and Mrs. Casselman left for points in New York State. On their return they will reside in Williamsburg Township.

Prior to her marriage, members of the Luther League, Choir and Willing Workers of St. Paul's Church and a number of the bride's friends gathered at her home and presented her with many costly and useful presents.

SURPLUS OF TEACHERS

The fact that 1,000 school teachers are without positions in Ontario, formed the basis for a lengthy conference at Toronto, Saturday afternoon of last week, between Premier Ferguson and a deputation representing the Ontario Education Association. The deputation offered "lack of training" as the cause of the surplus.

The recommendation of the Educational Association was that all Model Schools should be eliminated, and that all training for teaching should be confined to the Normal Schools.

The deputation was of the opinion that a teacher should be granted an interim certificate at the end of one year's Normal Course, and should then be asked to teach for two years, at the end of which time the teacher would be required to return to Normal School for another year before the final certificate would be granted.

The premier said he was not in favor of the total elimination of model schools, but that he was in favor of granting interim certificates.

The Prime Minister also met with a deputation from the Teachers' Institute, who wished to have sex hygiene included on the public school curriculum.

The Premier thought the home was the proper place for imparting such knowledge.

HAVE THE BEST ALWAYS

When buying a newspaper the same rule should apply as when buying goods. You want the best for your money. There is one "best" in Canada and it should be in every home. You should have your own local paper without doubt, but you should also have the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. It is undoubtedly the greatest family and farm paper on the continent and at the low price of Two Dollars it is a wonderful bargain. This year the Family Herald is giving to each subscriber a chance to win as much as Five Thousand Dollars cash, and each subscriber receives a large calendar with a fascinating picture that would adorn any home. For those who secure new subscribers there are some very handsome rewards, which are described in a catalogue obtainable free.

of the efforts of the Board of Trade of that town in getting Sir Adam Beck to speak there last spring and of the willingness of the people of Prescott to assist as far as possible in the campaign for the development of the St. Lawrence.

Mr. Hannigan stated that there is no fight between the Dominion Government and the Hydro Electric Power Commission and after some discussion a committee, composed of J. M. Dobbie, Brockville; W. P. McCarthy, Prescott; J. M. Campbell, Kingston, A. C. Fetterly, Cornwall, and G. H. Challies of Morrisburg was appointed by the president to attend a meeting of the Executive of the Ontario Municipal Electrical Association at Toronto on November 26th. On that day the committee will also meet Sir Adam Beck with a view to promoting a publicity campaign in the interests of hydro development throughout Eastern Ontario. A resolution, moved by M. B. Holmes and seconded by J. M. Campbell, conveyed to Mr. Hannigan the thanks of the union for his helpful address.

PLOWING ORCHARDS IN THE FALL

With the right set of conditions it is advisable and with the wrong set it is not. But I believe that we have the right conditions far more frequently than one might think from the rarity of the practice.

The principal advantages are: First, that late autumn, when this plowing should be done, if at all, is a slack time for the teams on most orchard farms.

In the second place, by stirring the soil in the autumn we disturb and to a great extent destroy those insect pests which pass the winter in the soil or in trash about the orchard. Their winter quarters are broken up, they are exposed to the weather and their enemies, skunks and birds of all kinds, can get at them better.

The list of such insects includes such formidable pests as the railroad worm or apple maggot, the spring canker worm, the green fruit worm and the curculio. The last named is found in the trash and not in the soil, but it is at least considerably inconvenienced by the plowing of the land.

In the third place, the soil in the orchard is better exposed to the action of the frosts and snows and rains of winter and is thereby put in better condition for the following year and more of its latent plant food becomes available.

In the fourth place, the cover crop and any other plant growth on the land are turned under, where this material becomes thoroughly soaked and remains so, and if it does not actually begin to decay it at least is in the best possible condition to do so early in the spring and thus become of value to our trees earlier in the season.

And in the fifth and last place, every block of orchard that is plowed up and laid by in the autumn is just so much work out of the way of the spring rush.

That is surely a fairly strong case for autumn plowing.

Turning now to the negative side of the case, the one serious and legitimate argument against the practice is the fact that lands which have been so plowed are more subject to washing during the winter and early spring.

This is a real argument and is sufficient reason for vetoing the practice in any block of orchard which is on fairly sloping land. Don't do it in such a case. But almost every orchard farm has one or more blocks on sufficiently level land so that the practice is entirely safe.

I have seen hundreds of orchards plowed in the autumn and never yet saw a case of injury through exposing the roots to cold.

That is the case of autumn plowing as the writer sees it. Having practiced it for years without any bad results, he feels fairly sure of his ground. If your orchards are on reasonably level land try it out.

fed with things as they are. Often, too, they are afraid of changes because they do not know what the changes will bring. They are usually those who have responsibility and therefore want to let well enough alone.

The middle-of-the-roads are the great body of people, sane-minded and with a realization that there is some good in what both the radicals and conservatives advocate. They weigh sanely all things and take the good from both extremes and put it to practical use. They pull on the tugs with the load of heritage behind them. Whereas, the radicals want to be unhitched from that load and run ahead in leaps and bounds, while the conservatives would sit in the breeching and leave the load where it is. The middle-of-the-roads put into the mill of public thought the grist that the radicals and conservatives furnish and grind out a safe and sane progress.

So, it seems that regardless of what our trend of thought is, except that it be evil, we serve a purpose in this world. But, the one thing we are glad of is that most of the people are middle-of-the-roads.

Late Cutting of Alfalfa

Alfalfa haying in October is not in the best interest of the alfalfa plant in Ontario. As late as October the 20th of this year the writer noticed a number of fields of alfalfa in different counties that had just been cut, raked and coiled preparatory to extracting the last straw possible from these fields. This practice can be followed without the risk of removing all profit from alfalfa growing. Past experience has shown that late cutting or close grazing leaves the plant in a weakened, unprotected condition and not likely to survive a hard winter with sufficient reserve energy to produce a full crop the following season. Alfalfa fields have been completely lost by the practice of late October cutting.

Only silage from well-matured corn should be fed to the sheep.

THANKSGIVING UP AT GRAY'S

Hiram Gray and his sister Mary sat talking matters o'er,
Young Hiram's wife had been sick in bed a whole six months or more.
And Mary, by way of comforting, said: "Brother, be strong of heart,
For methinks the time draws very near when you and Nellie must part."

"There is no disease worth mentioning, so Dr. Brown declares,
It's just a slipping away from life, and all life's worries and cares.
She'll be a saint before the year's out—she looks a saint to-day;
And, brother, there's no use grieving if the Lord doesn't want her to stay."

"We mustn't question Providence"—here an interruption came From Aunt Rosanne, whose figure was short and temper somewhat the same.

"If I were you," the good lady said, "Hiram Gray, upon my word,
I wouldn't saddle my own mistakes and meanness upon the Lord"

"I'd be man enough to bear them myself. Five years ago last May
The woman who lies in your big spare room was married to you, Nephew Gray."

Her eyes were bright as a happy child's, her face was sweet and fair,
You seemed to think the whole wide world not worth a lock of her hair.

"Oh, you were a wonderful lover, but lovers and husbands, I find,
Are often different creatures—I am going to speak my mind.
Wish I had spoken it long ago, wish I had cried out shame
When you first began to wear the life out of her who bears your name."

"She wasn't fitted to do the work of this big house year by year—
Trying her best to get through with it has cost her something, 'tis clear.
And the sympathy that you gave—your better at complaints,
And fault-finding is very poor help when a mortal droops and faints."

"Her life mission was to slave away, that you might prosper and thrive,
And I tell you plain that a selfish man is the meanest thing alive!
Didn't think? Don't tell me! 'Twas the greed of gain kept you from doing right."

You neglected to cherish the woman you wed—and you're paying for it to-night.

"What's that? You love her with all your heart—and have loved her all the while?"

Methinks it would be a pious plan to tell her so once in a while,
And not leave her bearing her burdens, uncheered by a tender word,
And then try to ease your conscience up by blaming it on the Lord,

"When she lies in the big spare bedroom, with her face as white as snow, Dreaming of Heaven's own peace and rest—and thankful enough to go."
He's away! How he cried at that last; never saw him so moved.
He's in his wife's room, he's down on his knees praying her to live and be loved.

"Now, Mary, I know you're thinking I should have left him alone.
You've never been married, I have, dear, and have daughters of my own,
And too many wives are wearying for the cheering word and smile—
But, well, from the way Nephew Gray's carrying on Nellie won't be a saint for a while."

Can't you surmise how things will go? As fast as ever she can Nell will get the roses back in her cheeks if only to humor her man.

The blessed prophecy came true, and this is why to-day
They keep Thanksgiving royally in the home of Hiram Gray.

"Let us number up our blessings before we sing the grace,"
Speaks up the happy husband with his eyes on Nellie's face.
She smiles at him, and he can but note the dimple in her cheek and chin.
"I've so much to be thankful for," he cries, "I don't know where to begin!"

Silos.

We praise thee, God, for harvests earned,
The fruits of labor garnered in;
But praise thee more for sail unturned
From which the yield is yet to win!

We praise thee for the harbor's lee,
And moorings safe in waters still;
But more for leagues of open sea,
Where favoring gales our canvas fill.

We praise thee for the journey's end,
The inn, all warmth and light and cheer;
But more for lengthening roads that wend
Through dust and heat to hilltops clear.

We praise thee for the conflicts won,
For captured strongholds of the foe,
But more for fields whereon the sun
Lights us when we to battle go.

We praise thee for life's garnered gains,
The blessings that our cup o'erbrims;
But more for pledge of what remains
Past the horizon's utmost rim!

Salt is essential to all farm animals.
Ordinary barrel salt is the best to feed for the reason that an animal may have all the salt desired. Salt should not be mixed with the feed but should be fed in a separate feed box. If salt is mixed with the feed the animal may get either too much or too little and suffer as a result.

In Ontario only one farm in seven has a silo. Some counties show a high percentage, other counties a very low percentage of farms using this modern, economic storage construction. The fodder storage costs can be reduced by the use of the silo to one-sixth of the barn storage costs. The silo has made possible the extensive use of plants that are not sufficiently palatable in their natural state to be of great use. The ensilage process when practiced on sunflowers, mustard, coarse, sweet clover and Russian thistle makes palatable, acceptable silages. The silo can be made to serve a useful purpose by providing a medium through which weed infested crops may be handled, by being utilized to save grass, clover and grain crops in seasons too wet for haymaking or grain ripening. Well made silage will keep for a number of years if not exposed to the air. The surplus corn ensiled in September of one year will have a distinct value in carrying the stock over a dry period the following summer.

Should your farm still be without a silo, why not plan to get the lumber and gravel ready during the coming winter. Bulletin 287 may be of assistance to you.

Cows fed plenty of well-cured legume hay are receiving an abundance of vitamins.

A SHOCKING THANKSGIVING

BY LYDIA LION ROBERTS.

"Four quarts of cranberry jelly," murmured Mrs. Bronson, her kind gray eyes watching to see that every one was served, "and about eight or ten pies." She sighed a little, and absently smoothed her wavy white hair. "And two plum puddings, besides the turkey. Did you speak to me, Myrtle?" she apologetically inquired.

"It sounded like a poem in free verse," smiled the new daughter-in-law affectionately.

"It will taste much better than free verse," spoke up the eldest daughter. "And we have tarts for breakfast, and mince pie the night before, and mother packs a basket for each of the married ones to take home after the dinner—there's something going on all the time," grinned Ellisworth.

"I guess it's mother who is going on all the time," quietly suggested the father of the family as he rose from the tea-table and went with the others into the living-room.

"How would you really like to spend Thanksgiving Day, Mother Bronson?" curiously asked Myrtle, with her hands in the dish-pan. "Suppose some one should give you a present of Thanksgiving Day, what would you do with it?"

"You nonsensical child," indulgently smiled Mrs. Bronson, "who ever heard of such an idea? For thirty years I've had the big Thanksgiving celebration at our house."

"I suppose you can't even imagine any other way of spending it then," said Myrtle.

"I wouldn't say that exactly," dryly answered Mrs. Bronson, "a little twinkle glinting over her face, 'for sometimes when I've been extra tired I've rested myself pretending what I would do if things were different. First, I think I'd lie in bed an extra hour, and after breakfast I'd do up the housework leisurely. Usually I'm in a breathless rush all day—and then father and I would go to church and in the afternoon we'd saunter over to the home of one of the married children, have a light supper and sing and talk around the fireplace," and mother shook her head at her own sinfulness.

"I think that's a lovely idea," warmly defended Myrtle, "and you needn't look so horrified at yourself for telling me. I understand just how you feel," and thought to herself, "I think I understand more than the rest of the family."

One morning, a few days later, Mrs. Bronson was making out her list of groceries for father to take to town, when Bertha ran in. "Mother," she began, "would you feel too badly if we didn't come to dinner on Thanksgiving day? The away is so little, we hate to take him away from home all day, and I thought maybe you could arrange to come over to my house for supper instead."

"If you think best, I guess that will be all right," meditated her mother, "and it would be pleasant for father and me to be at your house for supper."

The next evening David strolled in on his way home from work.

"By the way, mother," he said, as he hunted for doughnuts in the pantry, "don't make any pies for Thanksgiving. Myrtle wants to make all the pies this year. Is it a couple of dozen you usually make?"

"Mercy, no!" said his mother, chuckling, "not more than six this year as long as Bertha's family isn't coming. It's very nice in Myrtle to help me out."

"Mother," cried Ruth, hurrying into the kitchen after David had gone, "don't make any plum puddings, for I have promised to buy two big ones from a girl in the office."

"What does an office girl know about plum puddings?" protested her mother indignantly.

"Rita doesn't make them," explained Ruth, "it's her aunt in the country. She asked Rita if there was anything she could make to earn some money and Rita remembered her wonderful plum puddings, and told her she would try to get orders from the girls in the office. She's got twenty orders now."

"The plucky woman!" exclaimed Mrs. Bronson. "What a good idea and it won't cost much more either."

"It won't cost you anything," smiled Ruth. "It's my present to the jolliest mother in town," and she hurried out again.

"Well," smiled Mrs. Bronson, "my list keeps getting smaller and smaller. This is a topsy-turvy Thanksgiving. What next?"

"I ordered a chicken this year," announced Mr. Bronson, the first of the holiday week. "The children said they didn't mind if I'd put what I saved on it toward phonograph records."

"Well, I'm sure that's getting off easy for me, so I don't mind," said mother, and bustled cheerfully about the kitchen as she planned the unusually small dinner.

When mother awoke Thanksgiving morning, she was surprised to find that father was already up and out of the room, and when she turned to see what time it was, his watch was gone, too.

"I must have overslept," she murmured, and opened the door to ask the time. "It must be late," she worried, "for I hear the children's voices, and I smell coffee, too."

In answer to her anxious call for the time, a merry laugh answered her, followed by Myrtle's dark eyes and dimples beaming at her over a tray.

"Here is your coffee, madam," she curtsied, "with griddle cakes sweet, and fruit to eat," and she put the well-filled tray down in front of her speechless mother-in-law.

"For goodness' sake, what time is it?" exploded Mrs. Bronson, her surprised eyes resting hungrily on the dainty and appetizing breakfast.

"Time is nothing in your young life to-day," saucily teased Myrtle, "you have absolutely nothing to do but to just as you are told."

"Which I won't do unless I'm told more," threatened Mrs. Bronson.

"Very well, tyrant, so be it," assented Myrtle, and giggled as Mr. Bronson and the rest of the family tiptoed in to see how mother took the news.

"What's my family up to?" demanded mother.

"Your dinner is cooking nicely and will be served at noon by Myrtle and David," began her daughter-in-law, "helped out by the pies Bertha and I made, the plum pudding Ruth bought, and the chicken Father Bronson provided. You are to dress slowly, wisp to church with father in this crisp air, rest after dinner, and then go over to Bertha for supper."

"This—why—this is awful!" gasped Mrs. Bronson. "I never heard of such a Thanksgiving! Thanksgiving is for the family—not just for me," she protested, eating the grapefruit which David had handed her.

"That's just the trouble," smiled David, "Thanksgiving has been all for the family and none for you, and now the family is presenting you with a workless, painless, groanless, gaspless Thanksgiving."

"Go along, you young scamp," scolded his mother, "and you too, you young mischief," shaking a finger at Myrtle affectionately. "This is simply shocking—but I am enjoying being shocked!"

Mrs. Bronson's day went leisurely and happily along, each hour full of comforts and surprises. When she entered Bertha's home and found the whole family, waiting before the fireplace, with the smallest baby gurgling at the dancing flames, mother's heart was full.

"It has been a wonderful day," beamed Mrs. Bronson after the good family "sing" around the piano at the close of the evening, and then she stopped in surprise.

"You have always packed Thanksgiving baskets for us," said Bertha, as she placed several gay boxes and packages in mother's arms, "with all kinds of goodies from your big pantry and your big heart, so now it is our turn. Here is some of our Thanksgiving for you. Take it home and feast for a week."

Mrs. Bronson dazedly opened the boxes, while the girls and boys whom she had served so eagerly and lovingly for many years, looked on with tender pride. There were bright paper napkins holding nuts, fruit, little cakes, chocolates, and other surprises, and in the longest box of all lay six golden chrysanthemums.

"I never saw such goings on in my life!" she exclaimed, as she faced them with misty, radiant eyes.

"I never was so shocked and I never was so thankful! This is the most wonderful Thanksgiving that any one ever had!"

To determine which hens should be killed off and which kept over for another year, the Poultry Division of the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa carried out an experiment, in which it was learned that the latest moulting hens are as a rule the least fertile layers. It is recommended, therefore, that when killing in the late fall, it is well to reserve those that are not fully feathered, that is to say, those that are in the process of moulting, provided they are vigorous and of good type.

A NEW STANDARD

In nearly every locality, these days, one can find homes containing many modern conveniences. The other day we inspected such a home having an up-to-date bathroom, hot and cold running water, a septic tank, electric lights and power, the latest type of washing machine, furnace, and, outside, a well-kept lawn with shrubbery and trees arranged to set off the home from the remainder of the farm buildings and the farm.

One farmer suggested that this layout favored quite strongly the feminine side of the house. He took the position that a farmer should afford none of this until he becomes financially independent.

This may be true, but we cannot think it more important to play out the full length of a mother's strength, and to expose the family to unsanitary or unhealthful conditions, simply to pay off the obligation against the farm a year or so sooner. We venture that, in many instances, money spent in supplying the home with these things bring about financial savings and enhance the family income out of proportion to the gains that might come by devoting all the funds in profit-producing investments. A reasonable division of the farm income between the home and the farm should augur for the highest interests of the farmer and his family.

Thanksgiving!

When the turks have ceased to gobble,
An' are bein' stuffed to eat,
An' the ducks no longer wobble
On their pigeon-toe feet;
When the odors from the oven
Come to tempt the sons o' men,
It's a sign that that ol' hovin'
Day—Thanksgivin' is here again!

When the pumpkin, fat an' juicy,
Is transformed into a pie,
An' your Ma an' Aunt Jerushy
Keep the kitchen stove "on high";
When the cellar's store o' cider,
Pickles, an' preserves,
Makes you let your belt out wider,
To accommodate the curves;

When the air is full o' spices,
An' the scent o' things a-bake,
An' the freezer's freezin' ices,
An' there's frostin' on the cake;
When the folks—both kin and neighbors,
Start appearin' on the scene,
Lookin' hungry-like, b'jabsers!—
You can guess what it may mean!

When the guests have all foregathered
'Round the meanin', groanin' board,
An' their smilin' lips are lathered,
An' their appetites have soared;
When the gobblers' stuffed with dressin',
To be gobbled up by men,
You can thank God for the blessin'
O' Thanksgivin' Day, again!

—James E. Hungerford.

The Three Classes.

Despite the various activities of life, people are divided into three great classes, radicals, middle-of-the-roads and conservatives. All three are useful in world affairs.

The radicals are against "what is" and are usually in a hurry to bring Utopian conditions upon earth. Some are radical because they want to attract attention; others sincerely think that they can bring the seventh heaven on earth if we would but let them. The radicals are usually ahead of the times in which they live.

The conservatives are better satis-

CENTRE OF STIRRING ELECTION SCENES

Trafalgar Square, where nearly half a million Londoners awaited the election results. A large screen was hung over the wall of the building which is exposed to the extreme right of the photograph and as the results were received they were flashed onto it from one of the side windows of the Canadian Pacific Railway and Steamship offices which are seen toward the right front. In addition to the election results a series of slides and films illustrating scenes and industries in Canada were shown, while at the same time, through the largest loud speaker procurable, a lecture was delivered on Canada interspersed with the Maple Leaf and other Canadian songs.

REPUBLICANS GIVE COOLIDGE HUGE MAJORITY IN IMMENSE POPULAR VOTE

Both Houses of Congress Are Republican by Majorities Sufficient to Enable President to Enforce His Policies.

A despatch from New York says:— Calvin Coolidge's election to the Presidency of the United States proves, as the returns near complete tabulation, to be an overwhelming Republican victory. The party's popular total very probably will exceed the staggering Hardy victory of 1920, and the President's position in the Electoral College probably will rank third in strength in the whole history of the country. The results of Tuesday's election, as they appeared on the latest tabulations, are as follows from an Electoral College point of view: Coolidge, 379; Davis, 139; La Follette, 13.

The popular vote cast for President Coolidge and his running mate, Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes, may actually exceed that cast for Harding in 1920, when the totals are complete, but thus far it appears to be about three million short. This is the nearly complete tabulation:

Coolidge, 13,303,118; Davis, 7,976,172; La Follette, 3,847,959.

Both Houses of Congress will be Republican. But, more than that, they appear to be Republican by majorities that will enable the President and his party leaders to fight successfully the bloc opposition which saw his measures and policies so often overridden in the past Congress. This is apparent both as a direct numerical result and because the country has said such a firm and emphatic "No" to the radical element that it is regarded as doubtful if those with weaker leanings in that direction will be willing to embarrass a President who manifestly has the people behind him.

"Ma" Ferguson turned the knights of the Ku Klux Klan over her knee and gave them a good spanking at the polls in Texas. She defeated the Republican-Klan candidate for Governor by 100,000 votes.

For the first time, women will sit in the legislative halls of Wisconsin as a result of the election. Helen M. Brooks, of Coloma, will represent the Green-Wasuhara Counties district. Mildred Barber, of Marathon, will be assembly-woman for the first Marathon County district.

One woman, Mrs. Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, will sit in the next House, the first woman to represent a congressional district east of the Mississippi.

ELECTION A TRIUMPH SAYS BRITISH PRESS

London Newspapers See Message of Good Cheer in Downfall of Progressivism.

A despatch from London says:— The outstanding point of the majority of the London newspapers' comment on the United States elections is that it emphasizes the prevailing desire of the democracies of the world for a period of quiet, stable government and that the people of America are no more than those of Great Britain in a mood for the experiments of Progressivism.

The Conservative Daily Telegraph regards the "outcome" as a much more amazing triumph than that of the Conservative party in Great Britain. The general desire for continuity and stability in national administration, it adds, "has been more than commonly strong."

Anticipating that the policy of the last four years will be continued and that United States adherence to the League of Nations is still out of the question, The Telegraph says that, nevertheless, "the reality of the Republican Government's desire to see effective American co-operation in the world's work of recovery from the war receives a new demonstration in the election of Charles G. Dawes."

"In this country," it goes on, "there is nothing but sincere gratification that a period of serious political difficulty has been avoided in the United States and the best of all possible governments—a government backed by a great popular majority—secured."

Ivory is Drug on Market.

Nobody in London seems to want mammoth ivory, although it has the distinction of being 50,000 years old, for at the quarterly ivory sale, which took place recently thirty-nine tusks from mammoths—the ivory weighing in all a ton—was withdrawn from the sale because the minimum price could not be obtained.

There is some mystery as to the origin of these tusks. Seven tons arrived, only a portion of the total being put up for sale in Mincing Lane. The ivory came from the Baltic, via the Kara Sea, having been consigned to a Russian firm of traders. It is reported that the Soviet government had discovered them in the frozen fastnesses of Siberia.

Scientists believe the ivory tusks to be at least 500 centuries old. Unlike elephants' tusks, the mammoth's tusks are nearly all of them solid, and the majority are externally of a dark-grayish color, although it is possible they are white inside. Some of them look fossilized enough to be dated before the flood, while others are of a bright yellow, and are well preserved. Most of them, however, look like old branches of dead trees.

The bids did not go above £41 for these prehistoric tusks. Some east African ivory, which sold at the same time, brought a top price of £219 the hundredweight.

Method of Extracting Pure Steel.

Discovery of a method of extracting pure steel and forge iron directly from iron ore, eliminating the use of smelting furnaces, is announced by a Swedish engineer, Flodin, of the Hagfors Iron Works. The invention, which is the result of extensive experimental work, has aroused lively interest among metal experts, and will immediately be submitted to practical tests on a larger scale.

Here is the way an Arab woman bakes her bread: She makes a pit in the sand, and builds a hot fire in it. Then she rakes away the embers and plasters her dough on the hot sides. When the bread is done, she picks it off with a pair of tongs.

SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATES IN UNITED STATES ELECTIONS
Calvin Coolidge elected President for a second term by large majority—General Dawes is Republican choice for Vice-President.

PREMIER BALDWIN ANNOUNCES THE PERSONNEL OF BRITISH MINISTRY

A despatch from London says:— Stanley Baldwin, the new Prime Minister, has lost no time in drawing up the list of his new Cabinet, which has been submitted to and approved by the King. The King held a Privy Council at Buckingham Palace on Friday for the transfer of the seals of office from the old to the new Ministers, who took the oath and complied with other formalities. The personnel includes:

Lord Chancellor—Viscount Cave.

Home Secretary—Sir Wm. Joynson-Hicks.

It is understood that this list of nineteen Ministers constitutes the Cabinet, although it is officially announced that it is not necessarily complete. The other Ministers and Under-Secretaries will be named later, and the Government is not likely to be completed until next week. The Cabinet Ministers, however, will be able to follow custom and attend the Lord Mayor's banquet Monday in their official capacity.

Can Decay in Wood Be Prevented.

Some of the oldest building in Canada now standing were built of wood. Flour and grist mills of wood construction that have served generation after generation are still turning out their product and will no doubt do so for many years yet. This is, however, not always the case. Wood, unfortunately, like practically everything else, has its enemies, and probably the most destructive of these are fungi. To secure exact information as to the conditions which facilitate the action of various wood-destroying fungi on woods used for interior construction in mills, factories, etc., and to work out procedure and methods by means of which the decay may be prevented, the Forest Products Laboratories of the Department of the Interior have been carrying on investigations for some years. Expert technical knowledge on the prevention of decay has been secured as a result of decay studies in some hundreds of large buildings.

What is almost of equal importance to Canadian industry is the series of mechanical and physical tests which the Laboratories is conducting on the strengths of Canadian timbers. Data have now been obtained for practically all Canadian timbers of any commercial value, and these are available to architects, engineers, builders and others interested in construction work.

Canada has become Italy's rival as a macaroni manufacturer. Three years ago the Dominion imported 7,000,000 pounds of macaroni, principally from Italy. Last year it imported only a few hundred pounds. Canada's factories turned out 12,000,000 pounds. Exports increased from 219,000 pounds in 1922 to 2,229,000 pounds in 1923. The product went principally to the United States, Great Britain and Belgium.

After a long search a patrol of Royal Canadian Mounted Police, headed by Inspector T. V. Sandy-Wunch (above), brought back to Vancouver, B.C., recently, five Indians, charged with murder.

Republican Victory Has Prompt Effect on Wall Street

A despatch from New York says:— The Republican victory was promptly reflected in Wall Street, the markets scoring substantial advances. Turnover on the New York Stock Exchange reached 1,823,600 shares. Trading in the morning neared 1,000,000, the largest showing in three years. In the first two hours sales reached the huge total of 895,600 shares. Business was nation-wide, with wire houses rushed with orders.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Baldwin are shown at the wedding of Miss Elsie Kipling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudyard Kipling. Mr. Baldwin wears the smile of the victor even before his party was returned.

REASONS WHY CANADA WILL PROSPER

Expert States That Worst of Readjustment Period is Over and Farmer is Better Off.

A despatch from Hamilton says:— Seven reasons why business conditions should show an upward trend during the next six months were cited to the Purchasing Agents' Association by John T. Kingsbury of Babson's Statistical Bureau of Boston.

The reasons on which the Babson organization have based their optimistic forecast are:

1. Two-thirds of the period of readjustment have been experienced. Hence the worst is over.

2. The purchasing power of the Canadian farmer has been greatly increased, despite the decrease in the volume of major crops. The farmer is receiving from 15 to 20 per cent. more for his product this year. This means more business.

3. Canadian exchange is now on a par with the American dollar. This points strongly to one conclusion: Bankers have a substantial faith in Canada and its future.

4. The world at large is waking up to the unbounded possibilities offered by investment in Canada. Many authorities who have studied Canada closely believe that, as the nineteenth century made the United States, so in a like degree will this century make Canada.

5. There are no burdensome supplies of commodities overhanging the Canadian market. This obviates liquidation and discount.

6. The balance of trade in Canada has never been better since 1919.

7. European conditions are steadily improving. The uncertainty caused by the Presidential elections in the United States is now dissipated.

WINTER GRIPS ENTIRE CANADIAN WEST

Snow From Six to Eight Inches Deep in Three Provinces.

A despatch from Winnipeg says:— The entire Canadian West is now in the grip of cold, bleak winter. Heavy snowfall, according to reports, has been fairly general throughout the southern portions of the three Prairie Provinces during the past 24 hours, while in other districts low temperatures prevail.

Eight inches of snow fell in Calgary and district. A uniformly heavy fall was experienced in the southern part of Saskatchewan, while in Manitoba the storm was more general, with Winnipeg and Brandon blanketed with snow more than six inches deep.

Predictions are for further snowfall and continued cold temperatures. Winter last year set in almost a month later, with the first snowfall in Manitoba on Christmas Day.

RESULTS OF FIVE BY-ELECTIONS IN QUEBEC

Liberals Retain Three Out of Five Seats While Sherbrooke Stays Conservative.

A despatch from Montreal says:— Winners of the five by-elections held in the Province of Quebec to fill vacancies in the Legislature were:

St. Anne, Montreal—J. H. Dillon, Liberal. No change.

St. Maurice—A. E. Guillemette, Liberal. No change.

Sherbrooke—A. Crepeau, Conservative. No change.

Bonaventure—P. E. Coate, Liberal. No change.

Quebec County—L. Bastien, Conservative. Opposition gain.

The standing of the parties in the Quebec Legislature as a result of the by-elections is: Total seats, 85; Liberals, 62; Conservatives, 22; vacant, 1. Balloting on election day brought to a close a campaign in which the leaders of both the Government party and the Conservative opposition figured. Premier Taschereau and several Cabinet Ministers toured the constituencies, while Arthur Sauve, Opposition Leader, delivered a number of speeches in the various ridings.

According to first counts of the ballots, the Liberal majorities in all the seats the Government party retained were cut.

RAINY DAYS IN THE ATTIC

Those rainy days were the perfect days, writes a subscriber. No entertainment could have been devised to give us more pleasure on a rainy day than to spread the collected treasures of The Youth's Companion on bed or floor to read to our heart's content. For the time being we would be disembodied spirits wandering in the far-off, entrancing places of earth in the company of Indians, trappers, pearl-divers, the heroes of strange adventure.

The rainy days come today as in the good old times, and The Companion has still the power to carry its readers away to the college football field, to the wild places of the far West, among the isles of the seven seas.

Kit Kennedy

BY S. R. CROCKETT.

CHAPTER I.—(Cont'd.)

"Why, a man must live," Christopher said at last, with a short laugh; "I have been used to company, and if I did not sometimes go among men who are not afraid to be men, I should mould and dry-rot both at once in this place. It is all that keeps one alive in such a dull dog's hole as Cairn Edward."

The blue eyes were still upon him with a yearning in them that made even the selfishness of Christopher Kennedy wince.

"And what of me?" she said, soft as a breathing, yet with an accent that pierced to the dividing asunder of soul and marrow.

"Lilias, Lilias," he cried, in genuine pain, "I love you, I tell you so. That rights all. What difference does it make what people may say? What do a parcel of farmer folk and villagers matter to us? You know what your Bible says, something about 'for this cause shall a man leave father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife!'"

She kept her eyes fixedly upon him, and their regard was deep and steady as the sea when it is stillest.

"His wife!" She breathed the two words again, and the wind among the waterside willow trees was not softer, nor the dying soul's parting cry more tragic.

"His wife!" The young man nerved himself, and dashed in the rapid voice of one who fears interruption, into an obviously premeditated speech.

"Listen, Lilias," he said, "I have told you why I cannot marry you openly, though God knows I would be glad and proud to do it to-morrow. My father put me through college, and I promised to repay him before I married. He is poor and needs the money. Besides, it would ruin me in Cairn Edward if such a thing were known, and I have good hopes of the headmastership. Then again, your father thinks me godless and debauched. He told me so openly, upon the Plainstones of Dumfries when I met him there three months ago. He forbade me ever again to enter his door. He forbade me to meet you. He would never consent. But happily we live in a land where marriage is easy, Lilias, will you marry me privately? I know it is against your kirk rules, but it is according to the law of the land, and to the full as binding as if twenty ministers were present."

He paused a little breathlessly himself and looked down upon her, smiling an anxious, forced smile.

The girl drew herself back a little way from him, and reaching up her hands she kept his handsome head, with its high forehead and weak irresolute mouth, at a distance, so that she might look into his eyes.

"You have left me no choice, Chris," she said, still looking steadily into his soul; "you have made me love you so terribly. I must marry you when you bid me."

"Ah, that is right," the young man cried, cheerfully, stooping to kiss her, "that is all right. Now smile and put your sadness away! A bride does not look like that."

But she held him still at a distance, and her gaze did not falter. She was a child even at two-and-twenty, this Lilias, though she had long been climbing on the perilous ridges which to such a temperament as hers form the watershed of life and death.

"Tell me what it is that you propose!" she said. "No—do not touch me—yet! I want to understand."

"I have but short time, little one," he made answer, "and I have not yet thought it fully out. But if you bring a friend with you I will bring another—friends whom we can trust, I mean, and we will make the declaration that we are man and wife before witnesses. I, on my part, will bring Alister French the lawyer with me, and he will see that all is right and draw up the papers. Whom will you bring?"

"I do not know; I have had no one to trust, to speak to, except you! I do not want any other," she answered him, the firmness of her gaze wavering under his burning glances. She felt the weakness inherent to all loving women coming over her.

"Another we must have. Would not Bell Kirkpatrick serve?" he suggested with a quick downward glance at her face, to see how she took the suggestion.

"I do not like Bell. I could not trust her!" said Lilias Armour uncertainly. "And pray why not?" he urged;

"she is clever and secret. Besides, being with you in the house she could help us more than any one else!"

"I do not like her!" persisted the girl. "Well, think it over. I must go at once or I shall be late; I am late as it is. Think it well over. I will see you again on Saturday. Be ready to tell me then what you will do. And oh! Look here, Bell is willing to help. In fact, I have spoken to her myself."

There came a quick, leaping terror into the girl's face. She caught the classical master by the arm.

"Chris," she whispered, "what have you told her—what does she know?"

He smiled and patted her fondly on the shoulder.

"Silly one, only what I would that all the world knew," he said, "that I love you and would like to marry you!"

She was silent, but she sighed the long, weariful sigh of hope deferred. "Good-bye," he said, and bending a long moment to her, he was gone.

At the top of the moor, before he plunged down the long, rough, heathery steep, he turned and waved a white handkerchief. Lilias Armour stood where he had left her. She did not wave a response, but kept her hands clasped before her, looking steadfastly after her lover.

As he ran down the slope he pulled out his watch.

"An hour and ten minutes," he said; "I can do it; I shall have time to see French and look in at the Cross Keys as well. This sort of thing takes it deucedly out of a fellow whose business it is to explain the accusative and infinitive all day long."

An hour later Lilias Armour sat in her appointed place at the dour and sober morning worship of a Cameronian home. As was the daughter's duty, she had brought down the great Bible, covered with worn calf skin with the hair outside, and laid it before her father at the head of the table. Before doing so, she had taken away the breakfast dishes and respread the board with a white cloth like that which is laid upon a communion table, for the more fit offering up of the morning sacrifice.

Her mother, bustling, masterful, loquacious housewife that she was, had been so long among the poultry in the yard that the Elder was compelled to sit full five minutes silent among the family, with the Bible open before him, ere he could give out the psalm to be sung. Then his wife, flustered to find them all silent and waiting, sat down and endeavored to smooth her hair with one hand, while she found the place with the other, naturally enough failing in both. But there were tears in the eyes of one within the wide sunny house-place of Dornal as they sang to the wistful rise and fall of the Elder's favorite Colleshill the final verse of the opening song of praise:

I, like a lost sheep, went astray:
Thy servants seek and find:
For thy commands I suffered not
To slip out of my mind.

CHAPTER II.

THE MARRIAGE LINES.

"Bitter are the rigors of righteousness, and by them the merciful are shamed and sinners confirmed in their evil way."

This may not be a text out of the written Word, nevertheless it embalms somewhat of the spirit of the Great Forgiver of sins.

It was the morn of the Sabbath some months after the early meeting between the classical master and Lilias Armour. The solemn Taking of the Book was over in the farmhouse of Dornal, but Matthew Armour, Ruling Elder in the Cameronian Kirk, still sat with the Bible open before him. His face, with its shock of silvery hair sweeping back from the noble cliff-like brow, was sober with more than Roman gravity. His wife gathered together the folded white handkerchief, the spectacles and the psalm-book which were her indispensables at any function of a religious character. She had learned by the experience of half a lifetime, added to her original store of woman's instinct, when it "wasna chancy" at such times to stand long in the way of her husband. Now in that hush of Sabbath silence which she knew so well, she was especially eager to be gone.

But even in the doorway the voice of the Elder arrested her.

"Margaret Armour, bid our daughter Lilias come hither to me!" he said.

"Hoot, Matthew," urged his wife, "be canny. I ken the young man is no great professor, and his ways are no oar ain homely ways—but dinna fret the young lass. The lad is weel-to-do, and of a decent family enough, though they say an Episcopalian."

"Silence, woman, do as I bid you instantly," commanded the Ruling Elder; "It is with my daughter and yours that I desire to speak!"

"Mathy—Mathy, mind that we are a' sinners," the mother pleaded, "mind that ye were yince young yersel!"

"And if so, think you not that I have suffered in the flesh for the deeds of the flesh. Think you that I do not wet my pillow many a night for the sins of my youth. And if my children must suffer, it shall not be because no warning word has been spoken, or no strong hand outstretched to deliver. Send in the lass!"

With a little helpless appeal of the hands and a side-long sway of the head in acknowledgment of the fact that of course her word went for nothing, Margaret Armour took herself off to do as she was bid. She found Lilias standing with a book in her hand under the great beech tree by the house gable. But she was not reading. Her eyes, large and vague, their sometime bright blue dimmed with sadness and tears unshed, were fixed on the distant hills at the foot of which lay Cairn Edward.

FOR A CHANGE, TRY PRUNES.

Stewed prunes are wholesome and can be delicious, if properly cooked. Buy as good a quality of prunes as your purse affords, remembering that there are as many pits as prunes to the pound, therefore very small prunes do not pay. A prune boiled is a prune spoiled. To cook, wash very carefully, then put to soak over night. Next morning, drain, put the water in which the prunes were soaked, on to boil, and boil until reduced one-half. Add the prunes and allow them to come to a boil, then remove from the fire. Cooked thus, they require no sugar.

Prune Souffle requires one-half pound prunes, one teaspoonful extract of vanilla, whites of three eggs and one-half cupful of sugar.

Wash prunes, cover with water and allow to soak for two hours. Then in the same water cook slowly (in a covered vessel) until tender. Drain and cool, remove pits and rub prunes through a colander. Beat egg whites to a stiff froth, add sugar and vanilla to prunes, then fold gently into whites of eggs. Pour lightly into a well-buttered glass baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for 20 to 25 minutes. (Vanilla can be omitted and a few finely chopped prune kernels substituted for the flavoring if desired.) This Prune Pudding is worth trying—it requires two cupfuls of cooked

CHILDREN'S AFTERNOON LUNCHEONS.

It used to be the worry of my life when first one and then another of the children would come in and say: "May I have some bread and butter?" I was never through running to the pantry, and when I was busy they were sent to the pantry to help themselves. This is poor policy for anyone who values a tidy pantry.

Finally I hit upon the happy plan of preparing a lunch before clearing away the dinner things. Each child's lunch is wrapped separately, and all is packed in a pail and set away in a cool place where the children can get it themselves.—S. M.

Surnames and Their Origin

RUSSELL

Variations—Roussel, Rouse, Russ.
Racial Origin—Norman-French.
Source—A nickname.

The family name of Russell is, in a sense, akin to that of Reid, and its variations, Reed and Read. It comes from an old English word meaning "red," which, however, was of Norman rather than Anglo-Saxon speech. This word was "rouse," and has survived to-day only as "russet," with a meaning "brownish-red" somewhat different from the original.

As might be expected it was, together with the sobriquet "le Rede," just about as widespread as red hair was, for apparently there is no personal characteristic which the human eye singles out more quickly in a man to differentiate him from his fellows than a red head.

The name "le Rouse" and "le Russell" appears frequently in the old records, the so-called "Hundred Rolls," the "Munimenta Gild Lallac Londoniensis" (Minutes of the London Guildhall), etc.

An explanation for the name Russ, which form is also found among the old records, but an explanation which probably has little foundation of fact, is that this name was derived from the nationality of one of the original bearers; in other words, that it means "the Russian." While a great many names are known positively to have taken their origin from nationality, the evidence is against the claim in this case, for it was not customary among the medieval English who knew little of the lands to the east of them beyond the shores of Germany, to make any distinction between the races inhabiting them, all of whom they referred to as Esterlings, or Easterlings. This objection, however, does not apply to the explanation in cases where the name has come to the United States from other countries.

PALMER

Variations—None.
Racial Origin—Medieval English.
Source—Descriptive.

Palmer is a very appropriate family name for a crusader. Its origin is traced straight back with little variation or change to the days when the spirit of fighting religion swept over all Europe and crusade after crusade was launched at the Turk with the object of winning back the Holy Land. One very old English document, dating from Norman-French days, gives a list of names, among which is one Hervey le Palmer. Another mentions a Geoffrey le Palmer, while an old document of Parliament speaks of John le Palmer, Harvey the Palmer, Geoffrey the Palmer and John the Palmer.

A palmer, of course, was one who carried a palm leaf. It wasn't considered a silly thing to do in those days, any more than it is considered silly to-day for the soldier to wear his campaign stripes or other insignia denoting service in the army or navy or membership in a society or lodge. The palmer was one who had made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, either as a warrior fighting the Turk or simply as a traveler actuated by religious fervor.

The descriptive appellation of palmer quite naturally developed into a family name on a very large scale. In the first place, there were many pilgrims. In the second place, the man who had made the pilgrimage was likely to be considered the most important member of his family for several generations before and after, and therefore the most likely individual in his family to perpetuate his name to the extent of its being permanently accepted in the course of years as the family name.

EASILY FATIGUED AND DESPONDENT

A Condition Known as General Debility Due to Watery Blood.

General debility is a term used to describe a weak and run down condition of the system. Debility may come from a number of causes. The after effects of acute illness, lack of nourishment due to poor digestion, overwork or worry, or anything that makes the blood thin, thereby preventing it from carrying nourishment and health to the tissues of the body. The symptoms of debility vary, but weakness is always present, often a tendency to be easily fatigued, spots passing before the eyes, weak back, dizziness, wakefulness caused by inability to stop thinking, and unrefreshing sleep.

Mr. Lorenzo L. Gamache, Rockland, Ont., was a severe sufferer from this trouble and tells how he found release. He says: "Two years ago I was in that condition which medical men call general debility. I made periodical visits to Montreal for fourteen months to undergo electric treatment. At the end of this time I was feeling well and thought with proper care I would continue in good health. But in the course of a month or so the symptoms came back more acute than ever. I lost appetite and could hardly sleep during the night, and what sleep I had was disturbed with nightmares. I had headaches and the least effort was telling on my nerves. I always felt pains somewhere, and had to lose much time. After suffering for three months, trying various things without good results, I was terribly depressed and disheartened. One day I met a friend who noted how pale and thin I was and he so strongly recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I determined to give them a fair trial. I got six boxes and began the treatment at once. After I had taken four boxes I began to notice an improvement in my health. I could sleep better, and I scarcely had a headache. Since that time my health has been steadily improving and now I feel just as well as ever. I have gained twenty pounds since I began the treatment. Now I would not be without Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the home, and strongly recommend them to all who suffer from a depressed system and the aches that follow."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cts. a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Most Unfortunate.

Huskisson was very proud of his son and heir, who had only arrived at his house a few months. He was never happier than when he was showing off his son's good points.

Bagshaw was among the party of inspection.

"Well, Bagshaw," said Huskisson, as he proudly showed off the wonder-child, "what do you think of that for a strapping lad?"

Bagshaw made no reply.

"Think he looks like me?" persisted Huskisson.

"H'm—well—er—ha—hum—well, Huskisson—well, old pal, to tell you the truth, I'm afraid he does."

His Hearing Restored.

The invisible ear drum invented by A. O. Leonard, which is a miniature megaphone, fitting inside the ear entirely out of sight, is restoring the hearing of hundreds of people in New York city. Mr. Leonard invented this drum to relieve himself of deafness and head noises, and it does this so successfully that no one could tell he is a deaf man. It is effective when deafness is caused by catarrh or by perforated or wholly destroyed natural drums. A request for information to A. O. Leonard, Suite 437, 70 Fifth Avenue, New York city, will be given a prompt reply.

CUT PLUG

Shiploads of Girls.

For every 100 women in Canada there are 106 men. So Canada solves the problem of importing women from England as was done 300 years ago by the American colonies. And the plan suits England, for statisticians estimate England has a surplus of 2,000,000 women. Parties of women and girls are formed in England, brought to Canada under reliable escort, and offered jobs in whatever line of work they may choose. As each ship lands, scores of housewives are on hand to hire servants, and farmers, to offer them jobs in the rural districts, says Capper's Weekly. So far as the marriage question is concerned, the women have proved able to take care of that detail. Records show that most of the girls are married within a year and settle down on farms of their own.

She Knew Sheep.

After the city-bred young woman was put in charge of a country school, to the class in arithmetic she said: "Now, children, if there are ten sheep on one side of a fence and one jumps over, how many sheep will be left?"

"No sheep, teacher," answered a tow-headed little lass of ten summers. "Oh, no!" cried the city young woman, reproachfully. "You are not so stupid as that! Think again. If there were ten sheep on one side of the fence and one sheep jumped over, nine sheep would be left. Don't you see that?"

"No! no! no!" persisted the child. "If one sheep jumped over, all the others would jump after it. My father keeps sheep."

Then, seeing the puzzled look on the teacher's face, the little tow-head explained apologetically: "You know 'rithmetic, miss, but I know sheep."

Michael Was Mystified.

Michael's mother had married again, and though Michael did not object to his new father, he was somewhat puzzled as to the relationship.

"Mother," he said, "is this man my stepfather?"

"Yes, dear; he's your stepfather."

"Well, mother," continued the child, "you call me your little lad."

"Yes, dearie, you are mamma's little lad."

"Then, mother," continued Michael, "I suppose I must be my stepfather's little steppladder."

Couldn't Be Mistaken.

An American woman went to Scotland to visit some friends. When she returned one of her friends accompanied her.

As they neared New York the American woman said: "In a little while we shall see Sandy Hook."

"Oh!" said her Scottish friend, "Do not tell me when, because I am sure I would know a Scotsman anywhere."

Dublin, Ontario.—"I was weak and irregular, with pains and headaches, and could not sleep nights. I learned about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by reading the letters in the newspapers and tried it because I wanted to get better. I have got good results from it as I feel a lot stronger and am not troubled with such bad headaches as I used to be and am more regular. I am gaining in weight all the time and I tell my friends what kind of medicine I am taking. You may use my letter as a help to others."—Mrs. JAMES RACHO, Box 12, Dublin, Ontario.
