Chesterville Legionaires to Join 5,000 International Day at Brockville This Year

Chesterville and district Legionaires will join 5,000 veterans from Eastern Ontario and New York State at the 5th annual International Goodwill Day, Saturday, May 26, at Brockville.

Started in 1952 to commemorate the harmony that exists between the people of the two countries, the day will be marked by a memorial service, and 10-band parade through the historic Leeds County town.

Sixty-eight District "G" branches from as far as Napanee, Deep River, Ottawa and Cornwall have been invited to join comrades from over 70 American posts from Alexandria Bay and Watertown to Syracuse, N.Y.

Plans for the day were laid recently at Brockville, when District Commander Ian Beresford met with the host Branch 96. The programme calls for laying of wreaths at 1.30 p.m. and a parade moving off from the County court house square at 2.30 to the Brockville Armoury via Church, Perth, King Streets and past the Cenotaph.

The salute will be taken at the town hall by Dominion Command President, Rev John Anderson, of Ottawa, or Ontario Command President, Henry Harvey, also of Ottawa.

The Col. Russell H. Britton Branch 92, Gananoque Trophy, will be presented for the best high school band. The O'Keefe Trophy will go to the best other band on parade. The special host branch trophy will be awarded to the best turned out branch or post on parade.

Presentation of trophies will be made at the armoury immediately after the parade. Refreshments will be served at the armoury and the Legion hall. Dancing is scheduled for the armoury in the evening.

Commander Beresford, after conferring with Brockville President Miss Elizabeth Sheldon and American officials said indications are that the fifth celebration will be the most successful ever had.

Brockville is planning on having four bands and Kingston branch will bring the famed PWOR and the KCVI bands. The Citizen's Band may accompany the Gananoque branch.

Legionaires from such District "F" points as Belleville and Trenton are expected to join in the celebration.

Cecil Glazier, secretary of Branch 96, Brockville, should be advised of band entries by May 15. A committee will be at the Legion hall to arrange overnight accomodation.

Season Opens Saturday For Pike and Pickerel

Unknown to babies, scholars and natives of Timbuctoo but known to nearly every male of Ontario is the fact that the fishing season for the ordinary fellow opens on Saturday, May 12. Then pike and pickerel take to the hills because everybody and his brother appears at the riverside with blood in his eye.

It has been reported that trout are not biting too well. The reports have filtered down from northern parts as returning fishermen stumbled home suffering from snow blindness, frustration and general disgust.

We didn't get anything either!

GRANTLEY W.A. HAS MOTHER'S DAY THEME FOR MAY MEETING

This day had its real origin in a festival of mother worship in ancient Greece but it was not until May 10, 1908, that Miss Anna M. Jarvis, of West Virginia, thought a church service should be held each year and named Mother's Day.

The worship service was in charge of Mrs Frank Darling and Mrs Glenn McMillan. Psalm 8 was discussed. Luke's story of God's concern for sinners was presented by Mrs Ernest Beckstead; the parables of the lost sheep, the lost coin and the prodigal son were examples.

Convent Superior Sister Mary Hilda Passes

Sister Mary Hilda, superior of St. Mary's Convent, Chesterville, died May 3 at the Marian Infirmary, Heathfield. Sister's death came after a short illness in which she suffered a series of cerebral hemorrhages.

Following an attack in February Sister Mary Hilda spent two months in St. Francis Hospital, Smiths Falls. Later transferred to Healthfield Infirmary, she suffered a stroke April 30 from which she did not recover.

Sister Mary Hilda was the former Clara Quinn, of Ferguson's Falls, a mission of Lanark in Kingston Archdiocese. Following a year of teaching she entered the Sisters of Providence in 1907.

Her life was spent in the education of youth and she herself always remained a student continuing studies to receive a B.A. from Queen's in 1924 and spending many summer months taking courses in French and art.

Of her 50 years as a religious, Sister Mary Hilda spent 28 years in Belleville, and the fine school situation in that city now is due in no small measure to her untiring efforts and ability.

It was her ambition to provide for her pupils a truly liberal education. The strictly academic subjects were insisted upon; vocational subjects were offered; music and drama were given prominence; and her religious classes were motivated by the text she had once printed on her chalk-board: "That they may have life and may have it more abundantly."

Her interest in education went beyond her own school. She was a member of the committee who organized the Ontario English Catholic Teachers Association in Toronto in 1944, and although she declined an invitation to serve on the first Provincial executive, she gave generous leadership on the district level. The Parent-Teacher Association also benefitted from her experience and her zeal. The Sodalities of Our Lady will remember her as a competent and devoted Moderator.

To her duties as educator were added seventeen years in Lancaster, Belleville and Chesterville, where she was Local Superior of the Convent.

Of her family of ten, three sisters and two brothers survive: Mrs Annie Carberry, Miss Alice Quinn, Mrs James Quinn, Carleton Place; Mrs Julia McCann and Mr Thomas Quinn. The following nieces and nephews attended the funeral: Reverend Leo Hickey, Reverend Sister Mary Carmel, G.S.I.C., and Mrs Phelan, of Ottawa; Mr and Mrs Hickey, Almonte, and Mrs Carmel Marshall, Kingston, Reverend Sister Mary Edward, St. Joseph's School, Arnprior, and Sister Mary Eugene, St. Patrick's School, Kingston, are cousins.

Most Rev J. A. O'Sullivan offered the Solemn Funeral Mass at Heathfield chapel on Saturday morning. Assisting him were Rt Rev J. P. Sullivan, assistant priest; V. Rev A. J. Welsh and Rev A. C. Hendrix, assistants at the throne; Rev R. J. Flurey, deacon; Rev L. Hickey, sub-deacon; Rev B. J. Walsh and Rev W. Lynett, masters of ceremonies.

Present in the sanctuary were Rt Rev E. M. Leacy, V. Rev L. B. Garvin, Rev C. A. MacDonald, C.S.S.R., Rev J. H. Mitchell, S.J., Rev J. P. Ainslie, Rev F. J. O'Neill.

OPINIONS . . .
Ours and Others

Safety in Small Boats

An organization less well known than it deserves is the Canadian Power Squadrons, which is dedicated to the cause of safety on our waterways through teaching piloting and the handling of small boats, sailing and powered. It has an Ottawa branch of which the secretary-treasurer is Mr T. H. Gordon Kenyon.

The Toronto Squadron has a house organ called the "Port Hole" which is able to make this proud boast as it enters the new boating season:

"It is a matter of record that no member of CPS ever has been involved in a fatal marine accident. That is a record we must take pains to keep.

"No boatman who puts into practice the lessons he learned in the CPS piloting class will ever get into serious trouble."

To become a member of a Power Squadron and authorized to fly its flag means more than merely signing an application form. The applicant must take a course of instruction and pass an examination—his subjects are listed as these: equipment and government regulations, rules of the road on the water, seamanship, safety on the water, use of the compass, aids to navigation, charts and piloting, and manners and customs on shipboard.

And having passed his examination he takes a pledge to observe the laws, to promote and perpetuate high standards of navigation and seamanship, and to operate his craft "in a manner that will not cause damage or discomfort to others."

Most boating accidents, like most accidents on the highways, can be averted by skilled piloting and a courteous adherence to the rules of the road. It is the objective of Canadian Power Squadrons to encourage and develop that sort of boatsmanship, and from what we have learned about the habits of many outboard motorboard owners the objective of common courtesy alone will be as ambitious as it is desirable.

Canadian and British TV

In the view of the recently begun investigation of Canada's television setup, the British experiment in commercial TV takes on added interest. It is hardly surprising, as an article in the Ottawa Citizen points out, that the programmes of the Independent Television Authority, which began its operations in a limited way last September, are gaining in popluarity. Nor is it surprising that the British Broadcasting Corporation, no longer enjoying a monopoly of the field, should begin to shed some of its rather superior airs.

Perhaps the Fowler Commission might find time before writing its report, to study the British experience in competitive television thus far. There are, of course, great differences in the Canadian and British situations. Canada has an enormous instead of compact area to cover. It has two broadcast languages as against Britain's one. Commercial TV is nothing new in this country, for the CBC has incorporated it in its programmes from the beginning. Unlike the British, too, a great many Canadians are able to tune in directly on television programmes from another country; the nearness of United States stations has an important bearing on Canada's broadcasting problems.

Yet the commission could no doubt gain some helpful hints from Britain, including the nature, frequency and position of commercial messages, and also the general practice of a quiet hour at supper time.

GIANT CLOCK WINDSOR EYES

Windsor is interested in buying the biggest clock in the world for its new city hall.

City council recently authorized Mayor Michael J. Patrick to investigate possibilities of buying the outsize timepiece from a brewing company. It was told the clock graced the firm's Montreal plant which is being abandoned.

Alderman Albert Weeks suggested the city should buy the clock, a three-face machine with dials 60 feet across, which he described as being seven times the size of Britain's Big Ben.

The alderman said the brewery is eager to make the clock a "virtual gift" providing its name is mentioned on a small plate at the bottom of the clock's tower.

Publicity value to Windsor would be tremendous. The clock would be visible from all parts of Detroit and as far away as Amherstburg, 18 miles south.

Light Along The Way

Little is known of the home life of our Lord. The few words which conclude the second chapter of Luke are all that refer directly to the long years of His boyhood. The rest must be supplied by inference. Yet we are not without help. As one scholar said: "We know that He grew up in the ordinary circle of a home, and we find Him drawing familiar illustrations from the common scenes of home, and we infer that He is going back to this remembered daily round of His own boyhood."

The home is the most important part of a child's growing up. It is there that he learns the standards which will govern his life for the rest of his days. If he knows his father is an honest man, he will likely be honest himself. If his parents deal fairly and justly with him, he will deal with others in the same way. If he is taught that the commandments of God are the first consideration in life, he will not later be tempted to forget them in favour of others of man's devising.

It is in the home that a child learns attitudes to others. If his parents are kind and thoughtful, the child will learn consideration for others. If, however, his father —even though otherwise kind and considerate—has no use for people of other races or colour of skin, he will quickly develop an animosity for these same people and will blindly strike out at them all his life. Racism is one of the evils that are easily handed on to children by unthinking and cruel people.

Happy is the child who has a good home and such a home Jesus must have had. It is impossible to believe that He experienced anything but love and patient understanding at the hands of His parents. It is unthinkable that He ever heard His father curse the Romans, or berate the authorities for their exacting demands. It is inconceivable that there was any lack of interest in the Word of God, or lack of sincerity in accepting its demands. This is all revealed in His teaching and the example of His life. His compassion, His concern, His unswerving faith in the will of God and His complete trust that God's way was right and would always justify itself, were all part of His family life with Joseph and Mary.

As we turn our thoughts once more to Christian Family Day, let us remember that home in far-off Nazareth, for it is a home to remember!

Fake Fossils That Fooled

In the field of fossil study, where serious debates have raged over which end of a backbone a skull should be fastened to, it is enevitable that even the experts can be fooled.

Dr Harry Ladd and Dr Roland W. Brown, of the United States Geological Survey, told recently of several frauds that have been perpetrated on paleontologists. The falsity of one fossil, as a matter of fact, was proved through research in preparing the article.

Dr Ladd, remembering a specimen he had seen 30 years ago in an Australian museum, wrote for information about it. It was a piece of selenite (a variety of gypsum in crystals) with the wing of a large insect trapped inside.

When the museum director photographed the specimen for Dr Ladd, he noticed that, under pressure, tiny air bubbles near the wing shifted position. Closer scrutiny revealed that the crystal of selenite had been cut open, the wing slipped inside, and the crack pounded smooth over it. The wing, long believed to be a fossil of the Tertiary period, was nothing more than that of the common grasshopper.

Experts once identified a Wedgwood teacup handle as the stem of a "calamite," a fossil plant. But their shame was small compared to that of poor Johann Beringer, the credulous professor of Wurzburg.

An avid fossil collector, Beringer used to take his students digging in his favourite hillside. He believed that the Creator had planted fossils there for him. But the students didn't. The carved weird stone images were smuggled into the hill for the professor to discover. As fast as the students carved, the professor gathered.

Not until after he had published his r ual findings in an illustrated volume in 1726 did Beringer tumble to the trick. Then he spent all he had trying to buy back the copies of his book. He died shortly thereafter, penniless and humiliated. Ironically, the book was reissued in 1767, and sold for profit as a collector's item.

The most recent—if not the greatest—hoax of all was the Piltdown man. For 40 years after Charles Dawson, a Sussex lawyer and amateur antiquarian, discovered the skull and jaw bones near Piltdown, they were believed to have belonged to the earliest Englishman—a "beetle-browed chap with a murderous jaw" who roamed the land 500,000 years ago.

So rare were the fossils that they were locked up, like the crown jewels, for safe keeping. Because a few authorities—among them the late Dr Gerritt Miller of the Smithsonian Institute—doubted that the jaw belonged to a man, a team of British scientists finally decided in 1949 to re-examine the bones.

Through radiation and chemical tests, they have proved that the jaw belonged to a modern orangutan. The skull was a real fossil. But it had been doctored to make it look 10 times older than its actual 50,000 years. Like the skull and jaw, other animal remains found with them also had been artificially aged. All the "fossils," moreover, had come from somewhere else and been planted at Piltdown.

So far, the faker of the fossils remains officially unidentified. But it is certain that, in making man of a monkey, he made monkeys of men.

PLASTIC PIPE AIDS MILK OUTPUT

While researchers disagree on how often a day a cow wants to drink, they are in agreement with the fact that the greater her intake of water, the greater her ability to produce milk.

In their investigation, the experts found that cows would rather not drink if they have to walk too far to their water supply and advise that for maximum milk production, watering bowls be placed at several locations in the pasture to enable cows to drink whenever they become thirsty.

Piping water to convenient locations has uong been a problem on the farm. Conventional metal piping presented special problems. Due to its weight it was difficult to handle. Installation of joints and couplings was time consuming. Corrosion by water and soil chemicals decreased its life and efficiency. A sudden dip in temperature below freezing often resulted in bursting of undrained pipe.

With the introduction of polythene piping (polythene is a plastic made from Alberta natural gas), a trouble-free, inexpensive and easily installed cold water system has been made possible for the Canadian farmer. The plastic is so light a farm boy can carry several hundred feet of piping on his shoulder. It expands with freezing and returns to normal when the water thaws. It will remain in the soil indefinitely without deterioration. The only tools required for installation are a knife to cut the piping and a screw driver to tighten the connecting clamps. The piping can be laid down in a plowed furrow for warm weather use or in a trench below the frost line for year-round use.

FROM POKEY TO MUSEUM

Massive, granite-walled Lincoln County Jail, at Wiscasset, Maine, full of years but long empty of prisoners, has been converted from cooler to cultural shrine.

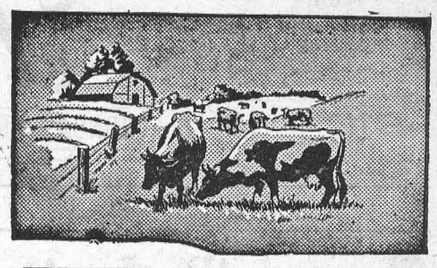
The Lincoln County Cultural and Historical Association obtained the 180, pokey for $1 by consent of this year's State Legislature, and fitted it up as a museum and repository of local historical material.

It's been more than 30 years since the jail was used for prisoners except as an occasional overnight lockup.

Saint Rose of Lima, native of Peru who died in 1617, was the first person of New World birth to be declared a saint.

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS

By Lillian Allison



No doubt you remember how delighted I was at the end of last week's ',Chat." The battle in the martin house was over. The martins had routed the sparrows. Then in a short civil war they had determined which martins would live on the coveted east side and which would move into the cottages. And the curtain went down last week on a house full of martins each standing guard over his own door. It was a pleasant picture of domestic happiness. But, unfortunately, it didn't end there.

We were busy and away from home quite a bit during the early part of last week and didn't have time to sit and watch the martins. Of course that hardly seemed necessary anyway. We knew there were plenty of them and we had all summer to enjoy their antics.

About Friday, however, we began to realize there wasn't much stir around the house considering the large colony that had taken over. So we watched more closely. Sometimes we'd see one or two martins. Once or twice we noted four. But the multitude had fled.

"They did that last year," someone remembered. "They came and took over then went away and didn't come back for two or three days."

But when the sparrows and some starlings began to move into the rooms again we were worried. The martins had gone.

"Maybe they didn't like the new cottages," somebody suggested. "They are fussy about the place they live."

"I think they've been reading the RECORD and don't like all the things you've said about them," Dad volunteered. But whatever their reasons they had left. There was no doubt.

Then Sunday we had callers. We got discussing the martins. "A lot of our's died," Mr Caller told us. "We couldn't figure it out so we sent two of them to the Agricultural School at Kemptville. And do you know what they told us?"

"I hadn't any idea."

"They said the birds had starved to death. You see they catch bugs in flight. And it's been so cold this spring there haven't been any bugs yet. So the poor things starved to death."

Well I was quite convinced that our martins starved to death too. And I was feeling most sympathetic for the poor creatures—victims of a cold spring. But we found the real culprit later that day.

It was about suppertime and Mother was sitting by the east window. Suddenly she shouted, "Look! Look!" And she pointed toward the martin house. I got to the window just in time to see our grey and white cat slowly making her way backwards down the pole. She had been right up at the house when Mother noticed her. The scoundrel! She it was who had frightened away our friends, the martins. I could have pulled her apart piece by piece. You see we didn't have a cat last year and the possibility of her climbing that pole and scaring the birds had never occurred to us.

Well Sunday or no I insisted that Dad nail a wide piece of tin around the pole so Mrs Cat couldn't climb up for any more meals. I even quoted the scripture that tells about doing good on the Sabbath and not evil and explained that this certainly would be a good deed.

Mrs Cat and Mr Cat came for a look at the house early Monday morning. But they soon found out they couldn't climb the pole and would have to look for their fresh fowl somewhere else.

Now if you see our nervous, frightened martins anywhere tell them it's safe to come home. The cats won't bother them now. And we do miss them.

I should write a sequel to another "Chat" too. It is the one about the venetian blind that broke in the bathtub.

Well, after exchanging several letters and a postal note with the company that made the blind I finally got the new tapes cut and ready to install. So Dad and I went at the job on Friday.

There's an old supersition about it being bad luck to start anything on Friday and I almost believe it.

To begin with I took the roller out at the top of the blind by mistake. And how we suffered because of that. Then I put the tapes on upside down. We cut a piece off at the bottom and then we had to splice a piece on at the top. We worked for hours.

Time and again we threatened to throw the whole works in the furnace. I was never so disgusted with anything. And I'd better stop telling you about it before my blood pressure goes up again.

We got the blind fixed eventually though and it works fine.

Civil Defence in a Target City

The mechanization of war has made cities, where factories and industrial plants are most densely concentrated, the likeliest targets in a nuclear war. Federal civil defence officials estimate that one H-bomb, with the destructive force of 5,000,000 tons of TNT, would obliterate everything in an area of about 27 square miles.

That wouldn't leave much of any Canadian city and there is, therefore, only one sure means of survival for people living in such a city; not to be there when the bomb goes off. A basic plan of evacuation that can be adapted to any Canadian city has been worked out by federal civil defence experts. Briefly, it is this:

Phase A—Enough warning of an attack is expected so that about a third of the population can be taken out to communities up to 100 miles away. This would include children up to high school age, mothers with small children, patients and staffs of hospitals and others who have key work to do.

Phase B—Planned withdrawal of the rest of the population when attac kappears certain. Every available means of transportation would be used. This requires a carefully worked out plan, for which the provinces and municipalities are responsible. A city must be divided into sectors, each with its exit route. No traffic would be allowed to cross exit routes and incoming traffic would be stopped at least 25 miles out of the city. Police and civil defence volunteers must provide the vast amount of supervision required for carrying out the evacuation.

Phase C—Civil defence authorities must instruct the public on whatever additional survival action should be taken as the bomb explodes. Everyone must remain in shelters or, if on an evacuation route, keep going until directed to shelter. These directions would be given by radio through traffic offices and civil defence wardens.

Phase D—In this post-bomb period, hundreds of thousands of people will be scattered outside the city in small communities. People may be separated from families and must be brought together again. They must be kept informed, given food, shelter and clothing and protection against radioactive fall-out, the dangerous dust from the pulverized city sifting down from the sky an hour or so after the blast.

The rehabilitation period that followed would not be handled by civil defence alone but by all government agencies and all the people of Canada.

To carry out such an immensely detailed plan these essential steps are recommended:

A well-organized civil defence force, including auxiliary personnel for police and fire duties and wardens, about one to every 150 families to supply the vital link between the people and the city's main C.D. organization.

Development of an operational plan for evacuation. The city civil defence director shoull set up working teams to find solutions to every problem. Then the plan must be tried out.

F. F. Worthington, federal civil defence co-ordinator, was not exaggerating when he said: "Evacuation of a large city will work well only when a great deal of planning and testing has been done."

St. Luke's Ladies' Aid Holds Meeting At Valdemar Home

The regular meeting of St. Luke's Presbyterian Ladies' Aid Society was held at the home of Mrs Paul Valdemar, with a large number in attendance. In the absence of the president, the vice-president, Mrs Gordon MacIntyre, conducted the meeting, assisted by Mrs Paul Valdemar, as secretary.

The meeting was opened by Scripture reading and prayer. The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting and the correspondence.

The treasurer reported a substantial amount had been realized from the daffodil tea, held in the Sunday School room.

A social hour was enjoyed, when lunch was served by Mrs Valdemar, assisted by Mrs McDougall and Mrs Middleton.

Study Low-rent Housing At Morrisburg

Morrisburg Village council and Morrisburg-Williamsburg Planning Board wil study plans for a low rental housing project proposed for the relocated part of Morrisburg Village.

This was decided at a meeting with representatives of Ontario Hydro and Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Officials studied terms of a contract for the housing scheme which must be signed by all parties concerned.

It was disclosed that a recent survey indicated a need for about 60 low-cost rental homes to take care of tenants forced to relocate by power project flooding.

Councillor W. Guay and Mel Bradden, of Hydro's rehabilitation department, will make a further study of low rental housing requirements and report back to council and the planning board.

Before you use a glass cutter, dip the wheel in turpentine or kerosene. This makes the cutter work easier and does a better job of cutting.

Zone Commander Pays Visit To Legion Auxiliary

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion Branch, No. 538, Williamsburg, was held at Locketon Lodge Hotel, with the president, Mrs Georgina Froats, presiding. Following the opening ceremonies one minute's silence was observed for the late Elmer Dillabough.

District Zone Commander G. Countryman, of Mille Roches, Mrs Murphy, of Ottawa, Mrs Joyce Eldridge and Mrs Clara Steinburg, of Williamsburg, guests of the evening, were introduced and welcomed by the president.

Plans are underway for a rummage sale in May. A past president pin and medal were presented to Mrs Ellen Norval by District Zone Commander Cunningham, who thanked Comrade Norval for the good work done during her term as president.

A gift was presented to Mrs Cunningham, who was making her last official visit to the Auxiliary. Mrs Cunningham expressed thanks and urged the Auxiliary to have a good representation at the Rally to be held in Winchester.

After the closing ceremonies, lunch was served by the social convener, Mrs Gladys Hess.

Mrs Ross Nephew Hostess to Meeting Of Chalmer's W.M.S.

The April meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Chalmer's United Church, Finch, was held Friday evening at the home of Mrs Ross Nephew. The theme of the meeting was "The Call to the Mission of the Church."

The worship service was led by Mrs Jas. MacMillan, with Mrs Ben Spence giving explanations of Bible readings by Mrs Clifford Eligh, Mrs Boyd Higginson and Mrs Phil Casselman.

The programme was in charge of Mrs Will Johnstone, Mrs Myles Nephew and Mrs Jas. MacMillan. It was taken from the study book, 'Entering our Gates," and was about immigrants coming to Canada and their welcome by port workers.

A moment of silent prayer was held in memory of the late Mrs Alfred Casselman. The president, Mrs Jas. MacMillan, conducted the business. The roll call was answered by 15 members and several visitors.

Reports were given by the treasurer, supply secretary and literature secretary.

Mrs Boyd Higginson, Mrs Morrison MacLeod and Mrs Geo. Smith were appointed delegates to attend the Presbyterial at Kirk Hill.

Mrs Blake Nephew, literature secretary, was authorized to order the annual report. The president announced a teen-age girls' rally to be held at North Lunenburg on May 8.

The meeting closed with prayer.

A social hour was enjoyed and lunch was served by the committee in charge.

MUSKRATS AT LOW EBB FALL TRAPPING ADVOCATED

Due to a number of causes, it appears that the muskrat harvest this year will be the poorest in many years. In some areas the catch is said to be 75% less than last year.

This loss of income to the trappers immediately raises the questions, "Why," and "What can be done?" As in many instances in the past few years, it appears that the time has come for a change of thought and custom with regard to muskrats.

Most of the loss occurred during the past winter. The crop appeared good in the fall, but failed to materialize in the spring. Low water levels, following last summer's dryness, coupled with heavy frost combined to reduce the liveable muskrat space in most of the marshes in the area. Trappers this spring in some areas found more frozen rats than live ones!

The best answer to the situation such as this is a fall trapping season for muskrats. Harvesting is a natural function in the fall, when crops of fur, as well as game or farm produce, are at their peak. Removal of some rats in fall permits better wintering of the remainder so that a fair spring catch is also possible.

A SUBSTITUTE

A Tucson, Arizona, couple tacked this note on the door and left for a shopping trip downtown:

"Dear Keith: Have a drink and enjoy the fights. Look up when you leave."

Keith couldn't make it, but someone else did. This was what the couple found:

"My name is not Keith. I enjoyed the drink, though. I did not steal anything as I had planned to, and I'll tell my friends to keep away from here, too."

"P.S.: I locked the door."

RANK TROUBLE

Lieut. Herb Sargeant, of Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., is having name and rank trouble. "My girl friend tried to call me here long-distance," he said. "And the operator told her she must be mistaken because there's no such rank as lieutenant-sergeant.

The Canvas Cathedral Evangelist

Since 1947 many millions of people have gone to church in a tent — a mammoth canvas cathedral under the open sky — or in great auditoriums where a dedicated evangelist named Oral Roberts reads the Bible, interprets New Testament teaching for today's understanding and through his prayers and his simple appeals recruits active followers for Jesus Christ. His goal is to win one million souls for Christ in 1956 through revival campaigns and radio and television programs over more than 550 stations. Already this year he has won approximately 300,000 converts to Christ.

During April evangelist Roberts conducted revival meetings with the sponsorship of 17 local churches in Milwaukee, Wis., and also held a series in Elkhart - South Bend, Ind. At these meetings more than 139,000 men, women and children heard him; and 7,950 persons pledged to serve Christ actively.

His current campaign schedule includes a 10-day crusade in Danville, Va., May 4-13, and in Detroit, Mich., June 1-10. The Danville meeting will be held in the giant Neal's warehouse on Highway 58. The canvas cathedral, seating 14,000, will be used in Detroit.

DOOR OPENED BY RADIO WARNING

While Bruce Williamson was conducting a record programme on Radio Station WHIM, Providence, R.I., his wife phoned to say that their two-year-old daughter had locked her out.

Figuring that the radio would be on at home, Williamson addressed to his daughter a stern warning what she might expect unless she unlocked the door.

Mrs Williamson phoned back soon afterward to report that the daughter had let her in.

SURFACE SCRATCHES EASILY REMOVED FROM FURNITURE

Surface scratches on a walnut table can be easily and quickly obliterated.

Rub the meat of a walnut or a brazil nut over the marred surface until the scratches disappear. The nut meats stain them to match the original finish. Apply a coat of paste wax and polish.

To remove fine scratches from a piece of mahogany furniture, try the iodine treatment. Wrap a small amount of absorbent cotton around the end of a toothpick, dip the cotton into a bottle of iodine on the unscratched portions of the wood. After this has dried thoroughly, apply a coat of paste wax and buff.

Dents in wooden surfaces can often be removed in the following manner: Cover the dent with about six thicknesses of damp cheesecloth. (Wet the cheesecloth thoroughly and then gently sqeeze out the excess moisture.) Place a bottle cap over the dent. Press a hot iron on the bottle cap. Reheat several times until the dent has disappeared.

DEADLY DINNER FOR THIS JUDGE

Reno Court Judge Harry Anderson had his wife arrested the other day for failure to pay fines on seven overtime parking tickets.

Brought to court on a bench warrant, Mrs Marie Anderson promptly pleaded not guilty, arguing that the judge himself should have paid the fines—and besides, one of the tickets was his.

Judge Anderson resignedly put up th $27 bail for his wife's freedom. Then, in an effort to smooth things over, a spectator asked Mrs Anderson what the judge could expect for dinner.

"Something slow and deadly," she snapped as she stalked out.

ESKIMO CARVING SAVES MAN'S SIGHT

Small surgical instruments fashioned by an Eskimo woman from a walrus tusk are prized possessions of Dr L. E. Borden, of Victoria. Fifty years ago he used them to save a man's sight.

The tiny, hand-made eye-spuds are a part of his collection of primitive Eskimo carvings and ornaments which he acquired during service in the Arctic.

"I was a doctor in the Arctic and ran across this case of severe eye cataracts in a man, but I did not have the proper instruments," he said.

The old woman, with only a diagram the doctor had drawn, made the instruments, using only a file, emory paper and flannel cloth.

"Specialists later told me they were perfectly balanced and finer than the manufactured product," he said.

Dr Borden said work of this calibre was typical of most Eskimo carving, and he has a roomful of objects to prove it.

He spent 18 months with the Eskimos as surgeon to a government expedition from Halifax in 1903. After practising for 45 years at Nelson, B.C., he moved to Victoria recently to retire.

In addition to carvings, he has the eye of a whale, a native skull, an authentic fish spear and Eskimo glasses—slitted pieces of wood which effectively afford protection from the glare and blast of Arctic snow and wind.

In the eight years 1946 to 1953 immigrants to Canada brought into the country $415,000,000 in capital.

DOLLS WERE COMMON DOWN THROUGH AGES

What is more precious to a little girl than a gift of a gay doll at Christmas time!

Precious puppet of childhood days, the doll is one of the oldest of human institutions. In ancient remains of earlier societies, dolls of clay, wood, bone and ivory were fund in children's graves.

It is known that in earlier centuries, those dolls used as playthings were connected with images of saints.

In many aborigine groups, dolls are made as the image of a deity and are considered sacred. They are entrusted to the children as part of their religious instruction.

In Japan, dolls were created as "scapegoats" — they were dressed and fed and generally treated as though they were alive to ward off evil from the families' children.

Among the Hindus and Mohammedans where infant marriages prevail, elaborately-dressed dolls with many belongings, are presented to the girl at marriage.

In Africa, the use of dolls as toys is complicated by the fact that they are often used for magic rites and are often kept as household fetishes.

Among the Fingo of the Orange Free State, a girl is given a doll when she becomes of age, which she keeps until she has a child, then her mother gives her a second doll, which she keeps until she has a second child. These dolls, too, are considered sacred.

NEEDS EXPLANATION

Strangers sometimes raise an eyebrow when they hear directions on how to get from the Texas town of Cuero to the Gonzales County community of Cheapside. They are told:

"You go out of Cuero on the dam road, then you cross Hell's Gate and go along the Devil's Backbone until you come to the Lords pa'sture."

The explanation is this:

Coming out at the dam, you cross at a bridge known as Hell's Gate. The Devil's Backbone is local terminology for a series of jagged barren hills beyond the bridge.

The Lord's pasture? It belongs to the Lord family.

DETERMINED TO JOIN CANADIAN MOUNTIES

Derek Davitt, a 16-year-old Reading, Eng., schoolboy is determined to join the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

He has been thinking of little else since he saw a movie about the force two years ago, and now is working weekends to save the fare to Canada.

"The open life and prospects attract me," said David. "I'm training for it by scouting."

"If I pass my school exams next summer, I hope to leave for Canada, find a job and get the two-year residential qualifications which I must have to join the Mounties."

His parents agree.

"If that's what the boy wants to do, we would be the last to stop him," said his father. "It sounds a fine life."

MONEY STOLEN IN 1939 RETURNED TO OWNER

Detectives are investigating a letter which arrived at the Surrey, England, home of Archibald Bosely containing $27,000 in American dollars stolen from him 16 years ago.

Boseley, a retired bank official, received the letter two weeks previous, and got in touch with Scotland Yard. The letter bore a Windsor, England, postmark.

The money had been stolen from Bosely's car near Windsor Castle in 1939. He reported to the police at the time that he had bought the dollars as a speculation and had them in a cash box.

GOT ACQUAINTED —THE HARD WAY

Two Michigan people whose cars collided twice in two days finally struck up a better friendship.

Mrs Alice Barber, Jackson Mich., and Jack V. Cooper, Detroit, first met when their cars collided near Louisville, Ky. Mrs Barber was travelling to Florida—Cooper was returning from Florida.

The woman told police she decided to return to Jackson after the first collision. To make the trip easier she decided to follow Cooper on his northward trip.

Police said she followed a bit too close and smacked into the rear of his car when he stopped at a traffic light.

The second collision finished her car, so she accepted Cooper's invitation to ride back to Michigan with him.

AMOUNT OF PAINT NEEDED MUST BE KNOWN BEFORE STARTING JOB

A lot of people run into trouble in painting their homes because they haven't figured before they starte d just how much paint they would actually ned. By the time they get half-way through they decide that the job is taking too much paint and costing too much money. What a lot of them do then is to switch to some cheap off-brand paint and the final result is not often too good.

The amount of paint required for a house will depend on the size of the house, the number of coats and the type of surface you are painting. It will also depend on the kind of paint you use. It's easy enough to figure out the number of square feet of surface you have to cover—simply multiply the width of each wall by its height and then add them all together.

If your house is covered with wood siding you can expect a gallon of paint to cover between 400 and 500 square feet on the first coat. On a second coat a gallon should cover about 550 square feet. Now if your house is covered with wood shingles a gallon on the first coat will cover only about 350 square feet and about 400 square feet on the second coat.

If you have asbestos siding and use an asbestos shingle siding paint, look for a coverage of about 200 square feet per gallon on the first coat and about 400 square feet for the second coat. A paint suitable for use on brick siding will give you about the same coverage. The reason you get such poor coverage on wood shingles, asbestos and brick is because these surfaces are more porous than ordinary wood siding and they quickly absorb much of the paint from the first coat. The second coat does better.

WEST VIRGINIA STREAMS HAVE ODD NAMES

A recent check on some 10,000 streams in West Virginia has turned up so many odd names that the Conservation Commission has catalogued all of the rivulets by number to avoid mix-ups.

For years, names such as Shirt Tail, Slipper Gut, Shabby Room, Jazz Bottom and Stinking Run have completely befuddled the commission's fish division.

An abundance of multiple names like Chicken House Run and Hell For Certain have made it impossible for technicians to run them down. Duplication of names has also added to the problem.

A few other screwball names the commission must contend with are Meat House, Snake Root, Big Ugly, Bad Way, Horseneck and Cheveaux de Frise.

ONE TREE THAT IS POISON

Visitors to the Everglades are warned by guides to stay away from the manchineel, a tree as deadly as the swamp-dwelling snakes and 'gators.

Though it looks harmless enough, this tree literally drips poison, according to tree experts. Even rainwater falling from its leaves can blister the flesh. Recently, a university chemist got a drop of the pure sap on his hand. His arm was paralyzed, swollen and covered with sores for days.

Indians once used the tree sap to make poisoned arrows. Early settlers were unable to chop the trees down because the sap would splatter under the axe strokes .

Pineapples are low in calories and if served without sugar provide an excellent fruit to use in the low calorie diet of the individual who wishes to lose weight.

When you buy hard surface flooring materials such as linoleum, asphalt tile and rubber tile, etc., remember that those materials with a high gloss fiinish are much more difficult to keep looking clean and polished than those with the dull finish.

Small splits in wood table tops, etc., can often be filled with a plastic filler. Larger splits should be cut out in a wedge-shaped section and then filled by gluing in a piece of wood that just fills the opening.

EVERYBODY EATS-- TRY THESE!

By Helen Graham

PINEAPPLE

PINEAPPLE, either fresh or canned, has many uses. Now that we can get the fresh ones, perhaps it is best to concentrate on ways to use them and leave the canned pineapples until winter time when fresh fruit is scarce.

The simplest way to serve fresh pineapple is to slice or dice it, let it stand a few hours with sugar on it before serving. If you are, perchance, trying to cut down on calories, most pineapples are sweet enough to serve without sugar. On the other hand, if you do not have to think of calories, the plain diced pineapple is dressed up by the addition of a little whipped cream.

Fresh pineapple mixed with strawberries or raspberries is very delicious. It is a good method for making the first expensive strawberries go farther.

Pineapple Pie

- 2 cups fresh shredded pineapple
- 2 tbsps. cornstarch
- ½ tsp. salt
- ½ cup sugar
- Juice of ½ lemon
- 2 eggs

Scald pineapple. Mix cornstarch, salt and sugar together and stir into the pineapple. Stir and cook ten minutes. Add lemon juice and beaten yolks slowly. Cover and let cook five minutes. When cool, turn into a baked pie shell and top with meringue made from egg whites. Brown in a slow oven.

Pineapple Upside-Down Cake

- ¼ cup butter
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- ¾ cup milk
- 2 cups flour
- 3½ tsps. baking powder
- 2 tsp. vanilla
- ¼ tsp. salt

Cream the butter, add sugar gradually and blend well; add egg, then flour, sifted with baking powder and salt, and milk. Combine well and lastly, add the vanilla.

Grease a cake tin and cover the bottom with quarter slices of pineapple in rows. Over the pineapple sprinkle a thin layer of brown sugar and butter mixed and on this pour the cake batter. Bake in a moderate oven.

This cake may be served with whipped cream and used as a dessert.

How to Choose a Good Pineapple

There are two points to remember in choosing a pineapple. First you want a pineapple that is ripe and secondly you want one that is juicy. If the centre leaves of the pineapple pull out easily the fruit is ripe. To choose a juicy fruit look for a square shouldered one that has a number of little sprouts around the top.

Preserved Pineapple

¾ lb. sugar to each pound of prepared fruit

Pare the pineapple, and with a sharp knife remove the eyes. Tear the fruit from the core in shreds, using a silver fork. Weigh the pulp placed in a preserving kettle and partly cover with water. Cover tightly. Cook until pineapple is tender. Drain the pineapple from the water and add the sugar to the water. Cook together until the syrup is thick enough to coat a spoon. Return fruit to syrup and cook quickly until clear. Pour in hot sterilized jars and seal.

* * *

A very useful thing to know about fresh pineapple is that you must never use gelatine. Fresh pineapple contains an enzyme which acts on the gelatine to prevent it from setting. If you do use fresh pineapple in a jelly you will be deceived, because it will set perfectly at first but as soon as it gets nice and hard it then begins to get watery and by the time you are ready to serve your jelly it will be a very dejected jelly—in fact it may not be jelly at all, but a liquid.

Pineapples are rich in the blood-building minerals such as iron, copper and manganese.

Pineapples are a good source of vitamins and when included in the regular diet may help to build up the body's resistance to infections, promote growth, maintain normal teeth and bones and also act as a preventive of various diseases due to vitamin deficiency.

United Mission Band Holds May Meeting

The hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers," opened the meeting of the Mission Band of Trinity United Church on May 7. Work was done on the cards for port workers and the lesson story was told by Mrs G. White.

After Bob Mitchell read the scripture, a thank-you prayer was offered for specific blessings suggested by the members.

"What a Friend We Have in Jesus" was sung and the collection was taken by a visitor, Douglas Fry. Fourteen children answered the roll, called by Brian Docksteader, and in the absence of the secretary, Joan Mitchell read the minutes of the last meeting.

Mrs White welcomed three guests. Peter Merkley distributed the World Friends Magazines and the Mission Band Purpose was said in unison.

After the meeting a lively relay race was held on the church lawn.

LATE DECISION

For 29 years Pitzer Transfer Co., Roanoke, Ba., received a $2 cheque every month from a man in Baltimore for storage of goods.

Finally a man identified himself to Jim Nunnery, the secretary-treasurer, and asked to see the goods. They were in two small chestes. One contained some tools for an old model car. The other contained some relics of World War 2—gas mask, uniform and some moths.

The owner said he guessed it wasn't worth paying further storage—would the company throw them away. The total bill was $696.

FISHERMAN'S BREAD HAS SAD BEGINNING

A fisherman's impatience with his wife's dull cooking provided a recipe and a trade mark for a popular brand of bread—100 years later.

The wife always gave the fisherman corn meal mush and molasses for dinner, so the story goes. One day about 1850 he mixed this all-too-familiar food with some flour and yeast and baked it as bread.

"Anna, damn here!" he muttered as he kneaded.

But his neighbours tasted it, and soon they were baking "Anadama" bread in their own ovens.

Four years ago, two Rockport, Mass., restaurant owners bought a bakery and started producing the tasty loaf commercially. The first day they sold 70. Soon chain stores were clamouring for it. A new plant they are building will bake and wrap 2,200 loaves an hour for shipment to every state and Alaska.

Thanks to Anna, *x*x*!
