United Church 173rd Anniversary Well Received

Anniversaries tend to make one conscious of the passage of time, and the fact that the years come and go in what seems to be an increasingly rapid pace. The Iroquois United Church marked their 178rd Anniversary in this frame of mind at its morning worship this past Sunday, May 27th. The entire format of worship was designed around the three movements of anniversary: past, present, and future. Hymns and scripture lessons were chosen in keeping with these three movements.

To replace the regular sermon, Rev. Brian Gee spoke briefly within each movement about God's word for yesterday, today, and tomorrow.

Six laymen assisted in the leadership of worship. Three read the lessons, and three each brought their viewpoints about how the past is valuable to the Church today, how the Church is valuable for today, and how the Church will continue into the future.

Those taking part in the reading of the lessons were Mrs. Glenn Swerdfeger, Mr. Jack Fetterly and Mr. Wayne Marston. Those offering their respective viewpoints about the Church were Mr. Tim Casselman Mr. Clare Tucker, and Mrs. Max Bush.

In the evening friends and members of the congregation enjoyed a celebration of music. The Seaway Singers of Morrisburg under the direction of Mrs. John DuGray, offered a dozen excellent selections. Their accompanist was Mrs. Hugh Thompson, no stranger to our midst

Miss Chris Styles was featured as guest organist, playing the hymn numbers and a wide and interesting assortment of music. Some of her selections were from modern musicals, and others were from the religious classics.

The evening program was enthusiastically received, and was followed by a fellowship time.

Brian MacFarlane Speaker at Minor Hockey Awards Night

On Friday, May 25, 1973 the Iroquois Minor Hockey Association held its annual banquet and awards night in the Iroquois Civic Centre. The banquet, attended by more than 230 parents and young hockey players marked the end of one of the most successful seasons for the Iroquois boys.

Rev. Allen Rogers of St. John the Baptiste Anglican Church was asked to say grace, the head table guests were introduced and the banquet catered to by the United Church Ladies was underway. The headtable guests were Mr. Mahlon Zeron, Reeve of Matilda Township, Rev. Allen Rogers, representing the Ministerial Association, Mr. Ken Easter, President of the Iroquois Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 370, Mrs. Helen Smith, Iroquois Recreation chairman, Mrs. Ann Nesbitt, secretary I.M.H.A., Mr. Peter Swank, President of the Iroquois Lions International, Mr. James Styles, acting Reeve of the Village of Iroquois, Mrs. Brian McFarlane, Gerry Fulford, President of I.M.H.A. and the guest speaker Mr. Brian Mc Farlane of Hockey Night in Canada.

Mrs. Ann Nesbitt thanked the ladies of the United Church for the fine meal which was enjoyed by all, and Mrs. Roy Graham for her faithful service as accompanist. Mr. Styles, acting Reeve of the village of Iroquois and Mahlon Zeron - Reeve of Matilda township congradulated the boys on their fine work this year and pledged their continuing support. Mrs. Helen Smith, who has worked closely with the players and executive over the past few years spoke warmly on the behaviour and achievements of the Iroquois boys involved in minor hockey.

HEAD TABLE

To honour the younger hockey players Mr. Ken Easter presented the crests and Most Improved Player trophies to the coaches and players of the tyke, novice and pee-wee houseleague teams. The most improved player awards went to the following: Kevin Ault - Tykes Brian Frcats - Novice A, Donald Nesbitt - Novice B, and Neil Cherry - Pee-Wee Houseleague.

The speaker of the evening, Brian McFarlane really needed no introduction as he was known to us all as the host of Hockey Night In Canada broadcasting out of Montreal and as the host interviewer on NBC hockey. Brian claims some local allegiance to the area as he lived in Ottawa and Winchester and played for the once famous Inkerman Rockets. He attended St. Lawrence College in Canton, N.Y. on a hockey scholarship and was voted All-American center for 3 years.

After directing some humerous remarks at our local coaches, Brian got down to his speech based on an old Clancy adage "Hockey should be fun. If you don't have fun what's the sense of playing."

Brian noted that although hockey is a glamorous life, this country needs qualified people in other fields as well. He stressed to the boys that to be successful, a solid education is a necessity. The skills learned on the ice are with you only a few years, but an education is never wasted. Mr. McFarlane mentioned to the young players present that a sports scholarship should not be taken lightly as that is how he managed to get through University. Mr. Mc Farlane then congratulated the boys on being involved in the

HIGH PRICES AFFECT EVERYONE

Across this country and the United States has come a new wave of problems brought about by increased prices in almost every product on business shelves. Just what has stimulated this steady increase the past few months seems to be baffling even the experts but nevertheless it is having disastrous affects across these two countries.

Now comes the warning of gas shortages and perhaps even rationing. In a society so dependent on automotive transportation this latest problem could have even more serious consequences than a hike in the price of gas. Not that the latter is desirable, but it appears to be inevitable.

There has been an investigation committee set up to check into rising prices...by the time it finds that that prices have risen we will be on to the next problem in this country. That's how fast government committees are able to work.

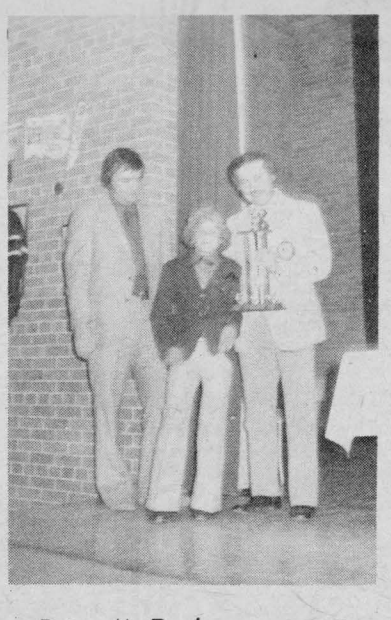

One of Four Not Moved

One of the four houses in the new Iroquois that was not moved from its location in the old town is the Martin residence on Elizabeth Drive. It was purchased from the Carman family in 1907 by Wm. Martin who moved up that spring from Aultsville. The house was built around 1820 and still has the three original fireplaces in it and the original well is still beside the present driveway. Photo was taken about 1910.

SURPRISE! I'M ABOUT TO BE A GRANDFATHER

by Bill Smiley

One minute you are a Dad, in your prime, just a broth of a boy taking a breather after raising a family. The next, you are a Grandad, doddering, heading into the lean and slippered pantaloon stage.

That's what happened to me this week. Over the phone, long-distance, a familiar and dear voice asked with a giggle, "Hi, Dad; how'd you like to be a grandfather?"

Immediate reaction was, "Oh, no!" Followed at once, as I realized the enormity of my mistake, by, "Oh, yes!. Great!"

The kid then talked to her mother, but for some reason, didn't mention the main item on the agenda. She left that to me.

When I'd picked the Old Lady off the floor, fanned her back into consciousness, and wiped away the tears, the whole thing struck me in its bleak truth.

Here we were. Not even middle-aged, except by the calendar. My wife still attracts whistles. I still have an eye for a thigh at the beach. And we're about to be plunged back into a world of bottles and nappies and colic and constipation and talcum powder.

At first it seemed as though someone was playing a practical joke. But fortunately, the resilience of human nature came into play and we bounced back to not only acceptance, but anticipation.

"That girl should be right here with me," announced her mother. "If she's as sick as I always was . . .". And was she sick! She threw up every day, all day, until you could see the insides of her heels. This lasted for about four months, with each of them. It runs in the family. Her mother was the same.

I used to bring my wife tea, and soup, cold drinks and hot, and everything came up. You'd think the babies would appear looking like something out of Belsen or Buchenwald. But then she'd settle down, eat like a hyena for three months, and produce a little fatso.

However, maybe the child will escape this. Modern girls don't seem to do anything the way their mothers did. Last night she was eating beef as though the last steer in the world had been slaughtered, and today she was out raking the lawn.

Anyway, I'm now looking at the positive side. I can hardly wait for the kid to arrive. I've been watching the television commercials for those disposable diapers, and am keen to have a go at them.

I've told everybody so often about how I won the war practically single-handed that all I get now when I casually mention the Normandy campaign and the Falaise Gap is a rolling of eyes, which then become utterly apathetic. Here comes a new listener.

And then there are the bed-time stories. There's nothing finer in life than to blow and burble in the stomach of a fresh-bathed child, bundle it into its night-wear, then launch into a story, with its eyes wide, the occasional chuckle, then the eyelids falling and the gentle breathing of deep sleep.

So I must dust off some of my dandies. They were a mixture of Mowgli and Tarzan and Kaa the Snake and Munkle-Uncle-Unky, the oldest and wisest monkey in the whole jungle.

They might have been a little confusing to the adults who had read the books, but the kids loved them. Geography got a bit mixed. Tigers turned up in Africa, and gorillas in India, but nobody cared.

Sometime I must tell you about how Mowgli, the wolf boy, after seeking the advice of Munkle-Unkle-Unky, scattered a band of marauding elephants by swinging through the tree-tops and sprinkling the ground with thumb-tacks. It was a real gas to see those elephants hopping around on two feet, trying to pick out thumbtacks from the other feet with their trunks.

Then there's going to be the fun of teaching the little blighter all sorts of things. If it's a boy, I'll teach him to fish and swim. If it's a girl, I'll teach her to swim and fish. Their grannie can teach them all the other things, everything from playing Mozart sonatas to making out the income tax return. She's much better at practically everything than I. So she says, anyway.

Maybe it'll be twins. I have a vision of the Old Lady and me, she sitting with the boy on her lap, I with the girl on mine, burping them on a Saturday night while their mother is out on the town.

One thing worries me.

Ironical offer!

The federal government's offer to turn over to the provinces taxation of tobacco and liquor as a means of financing health services is so ironical and odious that it must be challenged on the basis of principle.

Both levels of government are aware that tobacco and alcohol are the causes of major public health problems in Canada. To make health services budgets dependent upon continued use of these hazardous products is morally wrong. Certainly increased consumption of liquor and alcohol will necessitate increased health expenditures, but this inverse relationship is a poor basis for funding health programs.

The federal offer would provide a monetary incentive to increase sales of tobacco and liquor at a time when the medical profession and others concerned with the public health - including governments themselves - are endeavoring to reduce consumption.

THANKS

After the long time in hospitals I want "to Thank" everyone who gave me flowers gifts sent gifts - letters and good wishes.

Especially Miss C. E. Smith Mrs. D. Hare - also the clergy and Dr. Forbes. It all helped so much.

DON IRVINE M.P.P. REPORTS

Taxation sharing issue reaching critical stage?

Though it's been somewhat behind the scenes, there has been a debate going on in this country for the past three or four years that is only now reaching a critical point. The basic question at issue is the equitable distribution of tax revenues between our three levels of government. This argument is now reaching the stage where it may well affect the fabric of our federal system to a greater degree than any other single issue.

All of you know that each level of government has its specific rewponsibilities and the divisions between them are in most cases clearly drawn. The federal government collects personal and corporate income taxes on behalf of the provinces and on its own behalf and in turn remits the provincial portions to the provinces. The Ontario position and indeed that of most of the other provinces in this debate is that the portion of the total taxes which we receive is insufficient to permit us to finance our constitutional responsibilities. Our point is simply that there is a chronic imbalance in government financing in this country which due to tax changes of the past two years is becoming worse rather than better.

This whole subject is in the news again as a result of the statement by the Treasurer of Ontario at the Meeting of Ministers of Finance from across Canada in Ottawa on May 8. It will undoubtedly be the central issue in the upcoming First Ministers Conference or meeting of all the premiers in Ottawa on May 24. There are presently in existence a substantial number of programs operated by the provincial government where a portion of the costs are paid by the federal government.

These are known as shared-cost programs and include things such as hospital and medical care, aid to post-secondary education as well as a host of others. The provincial government has expressed its desire to opt out of these programs and go it alone on them and has asked the federal government to provide more tax revenue in order that we may finance them.

Our reasons for this approach are twofold Firstly, our government believes that the best interests of the citizens of this country require the decentralization of power and authority. We believe strongly in the principle of getting government back to the people and this means to the greatest extent possible to the local level. Secondly the performance of the shared-cost programs in the past has been quite unsatisfactory and have encountered practical problems all along the way First of all, there are too many of them and they have overlapping and often contradictory objectives. Possibly the worst aspect of these programs is that the federal grants that help finance them usually come with strings attached which makes the grants cumbersome and long delays have occurred in the collection of federal contributions and lengthy disputes over what is eligible for sharing. More important than that, however, is that this system distorts provincial priorities and interferes with the efficient delivery of provincial services. The provinces are often forced to spend in areas where money is available rather than in areas that should have the highest priority. There have been times when federal funds are suddenly curtailed leaving the province with the very difficult problem of assuming either the total program cost or the blame for the reduced services.

In the past the federal authorities have shown a unilateral willingness to change the income tax system without any consultation or agreement with the provinces These changes seem invariably to operate to the detriment of provincial treasuries. A perfect example of this occurred in the last federal budget. It restructured the personal income tax after only one year's experience with the reforms which followed the Benson White Paper debate. The reform itself already involved substantial revenue losses to the provinces when it was enacted in 1971. But over the next two years, 1973 changes in the personal exemptions will cost the Ontario Treasury $80,000,000 and due to new "indexing" formulas (a method of reducing the effect of inflation on taxes) our tax revenues by 1977 will be decreased by $500,000,000. This reduces the federal share of taxes from this source as well but they introduced other measures to replace their loss--not ours. It's not very difficult to see why we are saying it's high time that we arrived at new tax sharing formulas.

This may all sound like a dispute between two jurisdictions over money. I can assure you it goes much further than that. It goes right to the root of what the federal system, in this country, is all about.

greatest team game in the world -- hockey.

Following his address Brian conducted a question and answer period which pleased the young people very much.

The Most Improved player awards for Atom, Pee Wee, Bantam, and Midget divisions were then presented by Mr. P Swank to the following boys: Randy Casselman - Atom; Lorne MacKay - PeeWee; Shawn Holder - Bantam;

The high point of the evening came with the presentation of the Casselman and Pruner trophies.

To become eligible for this award a boy must attend practices and games regularly, display sportsmanship on and off the ice, and be an all round hockey player.

The Pruner Trophy was presented by Mr. McFarlane to the fine young Atom goalie, Kent Smith. This boy played in 57 games, allowed 66 goals and came up with an astonishing 19 shutouts.

Tickets were sold by Minor hockey for a Cassette tape player. The winner this year was Mr. D. Hyde of Cardinal and the prize for selling the most tickets went to Wally Dicks.

A door prize of a free course at the Gadbois -- Branch Hockey School at Long Sault was won by Todd Lowry.

All time mark

tonnage records for Seaway

Ottawa, May 25, 1973 --All-time tonnage records are highlighted in the 1972 St. Lawrence Seaway Authority Annual Report, released to-day in the House of Commons by Federal Transport Minister Jean Marchand. The year marked the celebration of the 40th anniversary of the fourth Welland Canal which, since 1932, has handled more than one billion tons of cargo.

For the third consecutive year, new tonnage levels were recorded in both sections of the Seaway, with 53.7 million tons in the Montreal-Lake Ontario and 64.2 in the Welland, compared to 53.0 and 63.1 for the previous year. Total bulk cargo registered an increase of 3 to 4% over 1971, a new record for the Montreal-Lake Ontario section, with overseas tonnage reaching an all-time high of 20.5 million tons.

Navigation on the Welland Canal ended on December 15 in order to allow the $188 million By-Pass project to be completed in time for the start of the 1973 navigation season. The new channel, now open since March 28, 1973, replaces the narrow section of the canal which winds through the City of Welland. Built with two tunnels underneath it, its construction was intended to optimize safety, speed and efficiency for land and water traffic in the area.

Because of the large number of vessels remaining in the system, the Montreal-Lake Ontario section was kept open until December 23, the latest closing date ever recorded, to enable all vessels to clear the system. In spite of unusually poor navigation conditions, no vessel was trapped in the system.

The report also mentions the establishment of the Great Lakes Pilotage Authority, Ltd., on February 1, 1972 as a subsidiary of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority. The Pilotage Authority is responsible for pilotage standards and regulations and for providing pilotage servcie in Canadian waters upstream from St. Lambert in the Province of Quebec and in the Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba.

215 units in Lions parade

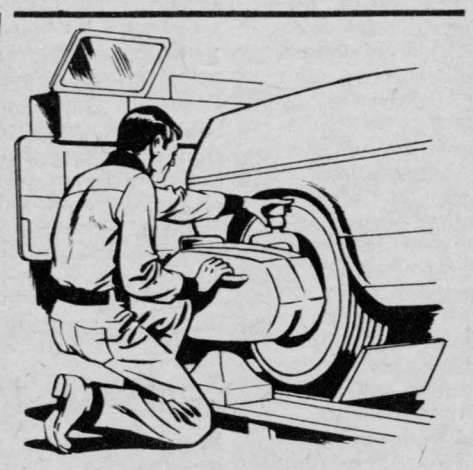

Parade Marshal Lion Earl Dagenais says if "I Love A Parade" is amongst your favourite songs" the citizens of Cornwall and District, along with the 10,000 visitors, saw the word words of that song come to life on Sunday May 27, 1973, when the Cornwall and District Lions hosted the largest parade held in the area.

The 215 Unit Parade was made up of 40 Bands of every description and size, including Trumpet, Drum and Bugle, Brass Pipe Bandstand Drum Corps, with Air Transport Command of the Canadian Armed Forces Bands leading the parade. 50 Floats depicted the lions Convention Themes with "Salute to Labour" the main one for 73, which produced some odd floats, either serious or humourous. 35 Majorette Groups were in competition, with entries as far North as Malartic Quebec, who sent 80 lovely beautiful ladies.

The balance of the parade, was made up of decorated cars, Antique Cars, Dune Buggys, Mini Bikes, Horses, Musical Vehicles also, a manure spreader, with the "Sweetest Smell This Side Of Town" just for the Ladies surprise.

The meeting was constituted by the President, Mrs. George Forrester. The opening worship service was conducted by the ladies of Morrisburg on the theme "Love, Justice, and Faith."

Came to Iroquois 65 years ago

Last Saturday Mrs. Frank Sisty marked a milestone in her life, having lived in Iroquois area for 65 years. She and the late Mr. Sisty came to Canada in 1908 and were married in Montreal prior to coming to Iroquois from Southern Italy. Mr. Sisty worked on the building of the canal with work starting where the old power house used to be on No. 2 Highway. They went into market gardening when they came to Iroquois and became widely known in this field of endeavour for their fine produce. In 1957 the family took up residence at Haddo. Our congratulations are extended to Mrs. Sisty and we hope she enjoys many more years in our area, living with her son Frank.

Blind Man's Buff

In rush hour traffic says the Ontario Safety League
"caraftercarmoveslikethis"
Not only in rush hour traffic but every weekend on expressways and major highways cars are also
"hubcaptohubcap"
One wrong move on the part of a driver sets up a chain reaction and accidents start happening. Frequently the cause of a traffic accident is set down to the driver's impatience aggressiveness or poor judgment. Rarely is his ability to see ever questioned. Yet he could have poor visual acuity or depth perception or suffer from tunnel vision or night glare.

This Ministry has been conducting a driver improvement program for its dirvers. Adequate sight is a vital part of the program and some of the results of the eye tests have been startling. Over 50% of the drivers were found to have eye defects of which they were not aware, and which could adversely affect their driving. 8% were advised to avoid night driving and a small percentage were restricted from night driving.

As the tests proceeded, some odd situations came to light. There was the man who wore glasses while in the office but removed them when driving. He did not realize that he had insufficient acuity and depth perception to judge traffic conditions without his glasses.

Another man, who though he needed glasses, had done his own prescribing when he bought a pair of glasses in a small chain store several years ago. He had kept on trying the magnifying glasses on the counter until things looked right. With the glasses, he cound not pass the driving test. To his amazement he passed the test without the glasses.

Sometimes vision changes slowly creep up on us. Impaired vision is a threat to one's safety. Some warning signals are stopping short of an intended mark or rolling beyond it; bumping the back of the garage or brushing fenders in a parking lot.

If you keep having 'near misses" with your driving, consult your eye specialist. He will tell you if you need corrective glasses or advise you how to cope with your sight deficiency.

O-O-O-H My Neck!

Research into vehicle accidents reveals some interesting facts.

Risk of a whiplash-type neck injury when a car is struck from the rear is 50% greater for a front seat passenger without a head rest than for a rear seat passenger.

Drivers are less vulnerable than their front seat passengers, probably because drivers are more likely to be aware of an impending impact which may tend to cause tensing of neck muscles.

Women are twice as likely to suffer whiplash as men, possibly because of their weaker neck-muscle structure.

Tall people are more vulnerable to whiplash injuries than shorter ones.

Whiplash in rear end crashes generally is substantially lower in severe accidents in which the seat bends backwards than in those in which it remains firmly in place.

A head rest in a car is not meant to rest your head against. It is more of a head restraint, and its function is to lessen the danger of whiplash. Adjust it so that it will cushion the back of your head not your neck in a rear end collision. Your body rises on impact and therefore your head rest should be slightly higher than you think is desirable when you first lean your head against it
Whiplash injuries are painful when you are on the receiving end.

Drive defensively so that you won't be the cause of a whiplash to someone else.

Bottle drive a great success

Last Saturday May 26th a very sucessful bottle drive was conducted in Iroquois and area. A total of $94.21 was raised to help support the development of a minor lacrosse program in the village.

Congratulations are in order to the fifteen (give or take a few) enthusiastic future lacrosse players of Iroquois. The boys also wish to extend their thanks to Alan Hare and Mike Saver who navigated vehicles for the bottle collection, as well Mr. Jack Saver and the M & M Grocery Store for their help in this project.

What kind of a world is the little stranger going to grow up in? I hope the general outlook improves by about 300 per cent in the next ten years, or it's not going to be a pretty place to be young in.

There's only seven and a half months to go. Wouldn't it be a real bummer, after I've adjusted so well and made all these plans, if it turned out to be a false alarm?

Lottery tickets available here

In Sports Slants last week Sports Lottery was advertised to send to Toronto for tickets to help recreation. The Iroquois Lawn Bowling Club has had these tickets for each draw and will have them again on the fourth draw. So why send to Toronto when you can purchase a ticket here and help one of your own sports clubs. Several times it has appeared in this paper that the tickets are available from Iroquois Lawn Bowling members and we hope for their continued support thanking the public in the past.
