HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Junior Hockey Meeting

A meeting will be held in Dr. Hutt's waiting room on Wednesday at eight p.m. for the purpose of re-organizing and electing officers for the Junior Hockey Club for the coming season. At the present time it would appear that Eric Casselman will not be in a position to handle the juniors this season and it will be necessary to select a new manager and it is desired by the boys that some of the older heads among the supporters of the Ju iors turn out to the meeting and give them the benefit of advice.

Mrs. Fader, Winchester

Residents of Winchester were surprised on Tuesday night to hear of the passing of Mrs. Martin Fader. A few months ago she took a stroke from which she had been gradually recovering, but on Tuesday afternoon a second stroke came which resulted in her death four hours later.

Besides her husband, she has left three daughters and two sons, one of whom, Mr. Phil Fader, has been mayor of the town of Leamington where he resides and where he is also editor of a paper.

Mrs. Fader was a devoted wife and mother and an energetic worker in the W.M.S., and W.C.T.U., and the Rebeccas.

Her funeral is being held this (Thursday) afternoon at two o'clock.

Crysler Man Sentenced Following Death Berwick Boy

Myles Johnston, of Crysler, was sentenced to one month in jail for criminal negligence in connection with a motor accident in which Leon Killoran, aged 9, was killed recently at Berwick, when he appeared for trial before Magistrate J. C. Milligan in Police Court Friday morning.

The evidence of many witnesses was to the effect that the boy was struck by Johnston's car as he crossed the highway in front of his home early in the evening of October 23. Johnston was said to have been travelling at an excessive speed at the time and Johnston only stopped momentarily after passing the scene of the accident. Johnston took the stand in his own defence, declaring that he did not see the boy until his car was almost upon him and failed to avoid an accident, even by pulling his car to the side of the road.

Magistrate Milligan found Johnston guilty of negligence. W. B. Lawson, Chesterville, defended Johnston, while Crown Attorney J. G. Harness, K.C., prosecuted

Prominent Morewood Man Passes Suddenly

Death came with startling suddenness to one of the most respected citizens of Morewood in the person of Morten E. Hunter. For nearly a year past he had not been well, yet his unexpected passing came as a great shock to the whole community. He was born at Maple Ridge, 69 years ago, the only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hunter. Over fifty years ago they moved to Morewood where he has resided ever since.

In his early days Mr. Hunter was a merchant but for the past thirty years he has been a boot and shoe traveller representing the Williams Shoe Co., of Brampton.

Forty-eight years ago he married Miss Isabel Carlyle, of Dunbar, who predeceased him three years ago. He leaves to mourn his loss six daughters, and one son: Mrs. B. G. Main, Winnipeg, Mrs. W. S. Feeley, Cannamore; Mrs. W. C. McQuaig, Ottawa; Mrs. H. Burrows, Northy Bay; Miss Carrie, Ottawa; Miss Laura and Lyle, of Morewood, his eldest son, Douglas, having died seven years ago; also two sisters, Mrs. W. Feeley and Mrs. A. Dillabough, of Morewood.

The funeral, which was held from his late residence, Morewood, to the Presbyterian church, was largely attended. A very comforting and impressive sermon was preached from the text, "I am the resurrection and the life," by the Rev. Alex. Nimmo, who referred to the many years of faithful service he had given to the church and in the choir where his place will be hard to fill. Rev. Armstrong of the United church assisted.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Jos. Moore, Curtis Forester, George Bogart, A. B. Allison, Allen Steven and T E. Coulthart.

In his immediate home circle he was a kind and devoted father. He was always a good citizen, taking a keen interest in all local affairs and his genial nature and ready wit made him a general favorite.

The many floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which he was held:—Pillow from the family; Wreaths, The Choir, The Williams Shoe Company, Brampton; Mr. and Mrs. A. Dillabough, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Moffatt. Basket, The Moffatt Family; Sprays, Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Main, Winnipeg; Mr. and Mrs. W. Feeley and Family, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kendrick, Ottawa; Teachers of First Avenue School, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. D. MacGregor and Family; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Craig and Mr. J. A. Craig, North Gower; The Burrows Family, North Bay; Mr. Roy Fetterly; Mr. and Mrs. H. Sheppard and Mrs. McKay, Russell; Cut Flowers, Mr. C. Tobin, Ottawa.

The sympathy of the whole community is extended to the bereaved family.

Many Turkeys Stolen

Provincial officers are having a very interesting time endeavoring to round up a gang of chicken and turkey thieves following a series of thefts in this district. For some time the theft of chickens has been going on and more recently valuable flocks of turkeys have been going the way of the smaller fowl. George Ouderkirk had eighteen fine fat turkeys taken from his place a few nights ago following thefts from Peter Merkley, Lloyd Froats, Durham Wells and others.

United W. M. S.

The regular meeting was held in the S. S. Hall with the president in the chair. After the opening exercises two letters, one from Mrs. Cross and one from Miss Mitchell, field secretary, were read. As this was our Thanksgiving meeting we followed the program prepared for that occasion.

An executive meeting was called for Tuesday, Nov. 26th.

The treasurer reported cash on hand of $391.56. Mrs. Colquhoun reported 42 social calls, 15 sick calls and flowers sent to sick people.

Mrs. P. Allison read a paper on "Temperance" and Miss Johnson one on "India."

Mrs. Wes. Fulton contributed a solo.

The devotional period was taken by Mrs. Houlehan and the study book by Mesdames Cass, Mack Smith, and Saucier. Mrs. Newman led in prayer. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Newington Man Killed When Auto Crashes Train

Sunday night about nine o'clock Frank Dixon, of Newington, received fatal injuries from which he died in Cornwall General hospital Monday morning, when he crashed into the side of a Canadian Pacific freight train at the crossing in Finch village just west of the station. The auto crashed head-on into the freight and was hurled to the ditch as Dixon was pitched clear of the wreckage where he was found a few yards from the crossing. There is supposed to have been no eye-witnesses and just why the approach of the train was not noticed cannot be accounted for.

Barns and Crops Burned

The entire season's crop together with farm machinery were destroyed when fire broke out in a barn on the farm of Michael Baker, four miles northeast of Finch Tuesday night. The loss is estimated at $4,000. Volunteer fire fighters succeeded in preventing the flames from spreading to the dwelling nearby but were unable to save the silo. The origin is unknown.

An insight into the international character of the O. A. C. may be derived from the announcement that students are in attendance from the following countries: Trinidad, Rhodesia, Bermuda, Mexico, South Africa, Holland, Germany, Peru, Ukraine, Japan, Norway, United States, England, Wales, Scotland, Ireland, Czecho-Slovakia and Canada.

—o—

Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, returned to his duties at the Parliament Buildings last week after an absence of five months due to illness. He was warmly greeted by the heads of the different departmental branches. Hon. Mr. Martin will now actively supervise the activities of the department, although he will be compelled to take things easy for about a year.

—o—

Big Value in Fertilizers.

Commercial fertilizers when applied to various crops in conjunction with good farming methods give big returns. Phosphates increase yields of almost all crops on almost all types of soil in the province. Potash pays, especially on sandy soils. Nitrogen for most farm crops should, as far as possible, be obtained from growing legumes.

—o—

Crop Yield Average.

The estimated yield of fall wheat, spring wheat, oats, barley, rye and peas in Ontario for the year is given at 114,140,939 bushels as compared with 135,377,224 bushels last year. The total acreage in Ontario for these grains was 367,881 acres less than last year. Oats are lower by 19,500,000 bushels than last year. The potato crop was below normal and turnips and mangels, due to a continuous drought, are smaller in size than usual. Small fruits proved to be a light crop, but winter apples plentiful though small in size. The tobacco average was 30 per cent below 1928. Taken all in all, the crop yield is an average one, and the quality good.

—o—

Grading is Vital

The fact that more than 180,000 acres of potatoes are grown in Ontario every year, it is highly importtant that an efficient marketing system be perfected. This means that every grower should cooperate in properly grading his potatoes and in placing them on the market in a suitable container. Only in this way can the competition of the outside product be met.

—o—

Weed Advisers.

It is the opinion of the provincial weed inspector that when councils are selecting inspectors they should choose "weed inspectors" rather than "policemen." Excellelnt progress has been made this year and it was found that this was most pronounced where a man was chosen as inspector, who was enthusiastic about weed control and could advise farmers how to reduce the weed menace. Much better to encourage a man to properly prepare a field than to come along late in the season and order the cro p cut because of weed infestation.

—o—

The Bean Market.

The Ontario bean crop will be little larger than last year. A decrease in the average yield per acre will almost offset the great increase in acreage. The American crop of small white beans has been estimated about two per cent larger than last year. The European production is about normal in contrast to 1928, when the crop was very short.

The hold-over in the United States, Canada, and Europe was very small, consequently new beans are meeting a ready sale. Quotations on imported beans European beans which compete with Ontario-grown of good quality, have gone up during recent weeks, the Nov. 1st price being $3.75 a bushel f. o. b. Montreal.

—o—

Longer Light Pays.

For several years past poultry-breeders have been trying to discover whether the use of electric light in laying houses really does increase egg production among hens. The theory is that in prolonging daylight the hens were enticed to lay more eggs. Experiments over a period of five years at the Dominion Experimental Station with two pens, one supplied with the extra lighting facilities and the other without, show the following results:

Over the five-year period, the pen of 100 hens supplied with light produced on an average 3966 eggs at a cost of 20c per dozen in the six months. The pen without lights produced 3671 at a cost of 22c a dozen. This gives an advantage of about 300 eggs for the pen with lights and at a reduction in cost of 2c per dozen.

Poultry Breeding Stations.

One important way in which the Poultry Department at O. A. C. is carrying its knowledge in a practical manner to the farmers of Ontario is by the establishment of poultry breeding stations for purposes of culling and general flock improvement. Last year there were appoximately 50,000 on 160 farms which came under this plan, while this fall over 100,000 birds, representing 300 farms have been enrolled. The department has seven inspectors constantly on the road with a view to visiting each flock four times a year and culling undesirable specimens. Thosuands of blood samples are taken and forwarded to the laboratories for testing, from which reports are sent back to the inspectors, who act upon them. A notable improvement in poultry standards has been achieved in this way.

New Interest in Field Peas.

Thirty or forty years ago Ontario farmers grew annually about half a million acres of field peas, but when the weevil became troublesome, interest in the crop gradually waned until there was less than 100,000 acres grown. However, during the past few years peas have been comparatively free from insect pests and the acreage has been increasing a little every year.

Renewed interest has been obtained also by the development at the Ontario Agriculaural College of an outstanding variety known as O. A. C. 181, which is now being distributed through the Experimental Union. This variety is a cross between Prussian Blue and White Wonder and is a fairly early ripening pea. Under a ten-year test at O. A. C. it has yielded about 25 per cent greater returns than most common varieties. Several farmers in the Guelph district have reported excellent crops with this variety.

Buy Certified Seed Potatoes Now.

Certified seed will do more, perhaps, than any other single factor to improve the potato crop on the average farm. Certified seed will likely be scarce and expensive next spring, and therefore the wise farmer will arrange for his supply now.

R. D. Nodwell of Hillsburg, one of the best known producers of quality potatoes, when acting as field man for the Crops and Market Branch during the past summer, had an excellent opportunity of observing differences in potato crops. He says: "My eyes were opened to the serious state of the potato business on the ordinary farm. I was amazed at the amount of black leg and rhizoctonia in the average fields. In may cases the loss from these two diseases alone would run from 10 to 25 per cent. This meant to many farmers a loss of from $10 to $40 per acre." Cer

McMartin---Coulthart

A wedding ceremony of unusual charm and much interest was solemnized in the Presbyterian church, Morewood, Saturday, November 2nd, at high noon, when Miss Minnie Coulthart daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Coulthart, was united in marriage with Mr. Arnold McMartin, of Elma, Rev. Alex. Nimmo officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked very girlish in her wedding gown of blue georgette, shoes, stockings and hat to match. The church was very beautifully decorated for the occasion, the bridal couple standing underneath an arch of evergreens. Mr. Beckstead, of Elma, played the wedding march. While the register was being signed, Miss Barclay sang effectively "Because." Immediately following the ceremony a reception and dinner were held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. McMartin left later for a short honeymoon.

Miracles of Science

An enterprising German surgeon, Dr. Werner Forssmann, has succeeded in propelling a rubber tube, 25½ inches long, through a vein in his left arm into the right auricle of heart. It almost gives one a spasm to imagine this long probe seeking its way into one's seat of life. The experience was followed by X-ray apparatus and only took a minute to perform. He thinks it may be possible to treat heart ilments by introducing drus directly into the heart. Next thing they will be swathing out the brain pans of ur hollow-headed friends.

Early History of Chesterville and District

Compiled and written by Miss Harrison for the Women's Institute in an endeavor to bring local history up-to-date and have it permanently recorded. The Record is glad to be of service in this laudable endeavor.

We do not know who was the first settler in what is now known as Chesterville. It may have been George Hummel, who was born about 1794 in the Mohawk Valley in the United States, of German U E. L. stock and came to Canada in 1816. He married Miss Merkley, of Williasmburg, in 1817 and settled on lot 10, concession 4, on part of which the village of Chesterville stands. Carter's history of Dundas tells of two young men of the name of Merkley coming in 1825 and, seeing the advantages of water power, started to build a saw mill. They had the timber hewed and ready to raise the frame but before doing so they went to Waddington for supplies, among other things a barrel of whiskey, for you couldn't have a raising bee then or for years later without it. Coming back their boat upset and both were drowned.

Nothing more seems to have been done about a mill until 1831 or '32, when Thomas Armstrong and son came from Edwardsburg and built one, probably with the timber the Merkleys had got out. That was where our little hamlet got its first name, Armstrongs' Mills. The first Winter they had a good cut of logs, and in the Spring when our river is a real one the son took a raft of oak plank to Quebec, and while there contracted cholera and died. The father continued running the mill and soon after built a grist mill, and what a boon it was to the people to get their grists ground here instead of going to Montreal or Waddington. Mr. Armstrong later sold the mill to John P. Crysler, who resold to John Halliday. The Halliday's lived in the double house now owned by Mr. S. Barrie. When Mr. Halliday moved to Lyn Wm. Hiller bought the mill and during his ownership it burned.

The next one was built near Cephenus Hummel's and in a few years it also burned, then W. N. Barrie built the present one about where Armstrong's first mill stood.

At one time there was an oat mill here, also Martin Houlehan owned a saw mill up at the creek, there are still some traces of it, and Adam Merkley built one not far from the Public school. Some of us remember that mill well. We had a teacher, Thomas George Leopold Augustus Wellwood. He was very lenient with us and would let three or four out at once. We ran the logs and every day some of us would get in and have to go to a neighbor's to get our clothes dried. The wonder is we were not drowned. At last our parents heard of it and that stopped the fun.

George Ault built the first carding mill, near the first mill and run by the same power, later he and Joseph Edgeton ewere partners in one on College street. Their first boiler was not in the mill but along the river bank. Mr. Ault lived in the house now owned by Nancy Kearns and Mr. Edgerton's house stood where Mrs. George Hummel lives. His father-in-law, Mr. Meeker, was a carriage maker and had a little shop east of his house. He was also a local preacher, being ordained in 1848 in the Fetterly school house. He married, baptized, and buried, and was called Daddy Meeker.

His wife always carried her snuff box as was the custom then, and she used to think she was bewitched and had them tie her in bed. Armstrong Brothers had the first carriage shop but the first buggy was owned by Robert H. Rose and made by Mr. Meeker.

The first merchants were Mr. Farr, probably of Farran's Point, Walter Bell, a merchant of Williamsburg, had a store in what was called the white store where Dwyer's house stands. H. Rose was another of the earliest merchants and also the first postmaster.

The building still stands opposite the mill where Charles T. Casselman (called Charlie) kept a general store, drugs, and the post office. After he retired, his son Chester took it over and at his death C. T.'s grandson, W. N. Fulton became our present postmaster.

Mr. Casselman owned the first lamp in Chesterville. It would not be until some time in the early sixties for petroleum was not discovered in the U. S. until 1858 and in '61 it sold here at 60 cents a gallon.

Other stores were Martin Coyne's, on the south side of the river near the bridge, Fitchell's store and hotel near the mill, while on the north side of the river McQuaig kept a store now owned by T. McGee. James Gillespie and Edward Kerr were partners there after McQuaig's death. His house stood on the site of Kearns block, a large white frame house with double decked verandahs. Capell's house and store were next the Flynn House, Mr. Capell was also a harness maker. Later they moved to Morrisburg and did a good business. There is a large brick house there on the north side of Main street that Bill Capell built and occupied. Where Charlie Marcell lives was called The Blue Store and Grant Bros. were general merchants on the site of the Bank of Montreal. Asa Beach, of Winchester, bought from Grant's and was a merchant here for a great many years later selling to his son-in-law, Chester Casselman. His house and store are still standing, the store now owned by Isaac Pelletier and the house east of the present Orange Hall. Other merchants were J. C. Casselman, Patrick Hughes and H. W. Moad.

Cannamore Girl Showered

A miscellaneous shower was held in honor of Miss Minnie Coulthart, about thirty of her fiirl friends gathered at the home of Tressa Baker.

The evening was spent in playing games until about seven o'clock when the bride-elect was called upon to follow a cord which led into a well-laden basket of beautiful gifts. While she opened and examined the gifts two balloons, filled with confetti, were burst over her head.

The bride-elect then in a few well-chosen words thanked her friends for the beautiful gifts and invited all to visit her in her new home.

A dainty lunch was then served, after which the bride's book was passed around and all signed their names.

The Late Mrs. Ira Christie

On Friday, Nov. 1st, a loving mother and a devoted christian worker passed beyond the veil. Elizabeth Bondstetter, beloved wife of the late Ira Christie, who predeceased her three and a half years, was born near Morewood and after her marriage, lived on the farm in the Melvin Settlement, now occupied by the youngest son, Sherman. Upon leaving the farm, she moved with her husband to the village of Winchester, where by her kindly disposition and christian character, she won many warm friends. Shortly after the death of her husband, she moved to Chesterville and lived with her daughter, where she passed peacefully away after a short illness. The funeral, which was largely attended, was held in the United church, Chesterville, of which she was a faithful member.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Newman ,assisted by Rev. J A. Waddell, her former pastor. Mr. Newman chose his text from Rev. 2 : 10, the verse that keeps the christian steadfast on the way, "Be ye faithful unto death and I will give you a crown of life." Mr. Harry McKercher sang very feelingly that beautiful hymn, "In the Garden Alone." The deceased was 72 years old in November of this year and leaves to mourn her loss, besides a host of friends and neighbors, two sons, Sherman on the home farm, Arthur at Melvins, and one daughter, Mrs. Wm. Ross, of Chesterville; also two sisters, Mrs. John Coulthart, of Morewood, and Mrs. Joseph Provost, of Wetaskewin, Alta.

10,000 School Children Fly

With the completion of his trip to the principal cities of Britain in his airplane, Youth of Britain, Sir Alan Cobham announced that 10,000 school children were given free flights this year. The last to go up were 44 London school boys, who had the adventure of their lives. Sir Alan said that in none of the children was there the slightest sign of fear. He travelled 60,000 miles on his trip. The flights were given through the generosity of Sir Charles Wakefield, who not only defrayed the expense of the flight, but also insured each child against accident.

USE THE DIRECTORY
and avoid "wrong number"

TELEPHONE numbers are tricky things to remember. Often when you think you know a number you have really transposed the two inside figures. It is so easy to say 3264 instead of 3624! The result is that you get "Wrong Number". You are annoyed and so is the other person. You have wasted your own time and his.

It is safer and quicker to use the directory before you call a number, because "Wrong Number" is one of the chief causes of a million calls a day in Ontario and Quebec which go wrong — tie up traffic — cause irritation — block business.

Some of these are operators' errors, and some are mistakes by the person making the call. He may ask for the wrong number — he may speak indistincty and be misunderstood.

We want you to have the best possible telephone service. We are constantly striving to provide it by reducing our own errors and by improving equipment.* But it takes three people to complete a call.

Use the directory — speak slowly and distinctly — avoid wrong numbers — save time — help business efficiency.

To keep a step in advance of demand, and to improve facilities, will involve an outlay this year in excess of $27,000,000.

Mecca for Cattle Buyers

Prince Edward County is the mecca for cattle buyers from all parts of Canada and the United States. Carloads of stock are being shipped out daily. The cows are largely for some of the largest and best-known dairy farms on the continent. The Carson Creamery, at Carson, Alberta, secured seventy-five head, nearly all of them registered. The average price was between $90 and $100. The farmers in the county are raising all heifer calves in an endeavor to keep up the number of cattle in the county.

After well over a year of intensive preparatory work all is ready to go ahead with the bovine tuberculosis clean-up in Eastern Ontario. Following the lead of Prince Edward County, which passed its third and final test a couple of years ago, all the Eastern counties roughly bordered by the Ottawa, the St. Lawrence and the Rideau waterways, will now be attacked, and every four-footed animal that has contracted T. B. will be eliminated.

"The consent of the farmers has been secured and it is announced in The Canada Gazette that the testing for accreditation may now proceed," says an official communication from Ottawa. The area includes the counties of Russell, Prescott, Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Grenville, and parts of the counties of Carleton, Leeds, and Frontenac. The area includes Kingston at the southwest angle, and Ottawa at the most northerly point, reaching eastward to the Quebec boundary at the southeast angle. It also includes the islands in the St. Lawrence, belonging to Canada, and in the Ottawa River belonging to Ontario. The work of accreditation will be carried out according to the regulations of the Animal Contagious Diseases Act, administered by the Veterinary Director-General of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

"Peace River Jim" Organized Search for MacAlpine Party

When Col. C. H. D. MacAlpine, president of the Dominion Explorers, and seven companions sailed their planes into the Arctic oblivion on September 8, it was "Peace River Jim" Cornwall who was first consulted as to the probable fate of the adventurers and the methods to solve the mystery.

It was this unique product of the northern wilds who galvanized the nomads between the Arctic Circle and the Arctic ocean, over an area of thousands of square miles. In every direction he sent out runners, and so far-reaching is this curious character's influence through the sub-Arctic region that the mere phrase "Peace River Jim says," was enough to engage whole tribes of Indians, numerous old-time trappers and the Eskimos in a persistent search for the lost men.

After the two planes had been unreported out of Fort Churchill for a week, officials of the company, and families of the lost men displayed uneasiness. They began to formulate plans for rescue.

At that very time Col. MacAlpine and his companions were down on the northern rim of the world, slowly plodding toward Cambridge Bay. The first definite move was when General D. M. Hogarth, one of the company directors, came from Toronto to Winnipeg. He opened offices and installed wireless and telephones.

Then he sought the Hudson Bay officials for conferences. From the first it was suggested that Col. James K. Cornwall, "Peace River Jim," be enlisted in the search. As the one man who could command the attention of all Indian and "free trappers" of the Arctic region, with a knowledge of remote places second to that enjoyed by no white man, it was considered imperative that Cornwall's services be at the disposal of the rescuers.

At Stoney Rapids, on the northern tip of Lake Athabasca, this "one best bet" of the Lone Land was found. Would he engage in the mission of mercy?

"Surest thing you know," was the brief way in which Cornwall dismissed the subject. Then he dropped all his business and sent word to fifty Indians at Stoney Rapids

Indians of that section. They were to report at Stoney Rapids at once. "Tell 'em Peaece River Jim wants 'em here pronto." In a week there had assembled at Stoney Rapids the fleetest runners of all the northern tribesmen, who could race behind their huskies a hundred miles a day without faltering.

Polygot Party.

"There were twelve different tongues spoken by that bunch that just came in on the run," remarked Cornwall in describing the experience. If there is an Indian language or sign among these nomads that Cornwall can't speak or interpret, thirty-five years' residence North of 63 has not disclosed the fact.

To these dependable red men Cornwall explained what had happened and what was wanted. Every man engaged was to receive the equivalent of $3 per day, payable in money, trade goods or credit at any post in the north. Jim's word was all they had and all they wanted.

These scouts were to travel north and spread out in a fan shape. In turn they were to interest other scouts in the more remote places, but Cornwall's primitive camp at Stoney Rapids was to be the centre of the most elaborate search of the northern wilds since Sir John Franklin's expedition disappeared.

Thus, by word of mouth and the mysterious "telegraph" conducted among the natives by smoke signals and war drums, the search extended gradually to every point of the main land, right to the shore of the Arctic ocean. That the wireless beat Cornwall's men to the scene of the marooned men's camp at the Hudson Bay post of Cambridge Bay was only made possible by the fact that the northern ocean blocked further extension over the inlet to Cambridge. But it is conceded that in a few days of the time that wireless flashed the news of the party's whereabouts, Cornwall's scouts would have found means through the Eskimo hunters to learn the whereabouts of Col. MacAlpine and his party.

It is admitted that the plans outlined and worked out by Col. Cornwall were the most elaborate that have ever disturbed the Lone Land from the MacKenzie River valley to the shores of Hudson Bay and on north to the Arctic. And all this vast activity, in which several hundred nomads engaged, was inspired by the mere unsupported word of one man.

James K. Cornwall is an Ontario product, of Brantford. He is 62 years of age. "Big, broad and beaming," is the phrase that describes him accurately. For 30 years he has tramped and traded in the Arctic and developed his steamship business on the inland waters right down the MacKenzie to the Arctic. At one time, before he sold a large share of his business to the French rivals of the Hudson's Bay Company, Cornwall's line of trading posts and volume of fur handled annually rivalled that of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Pupils and Baths

PUPILS AND BATHS

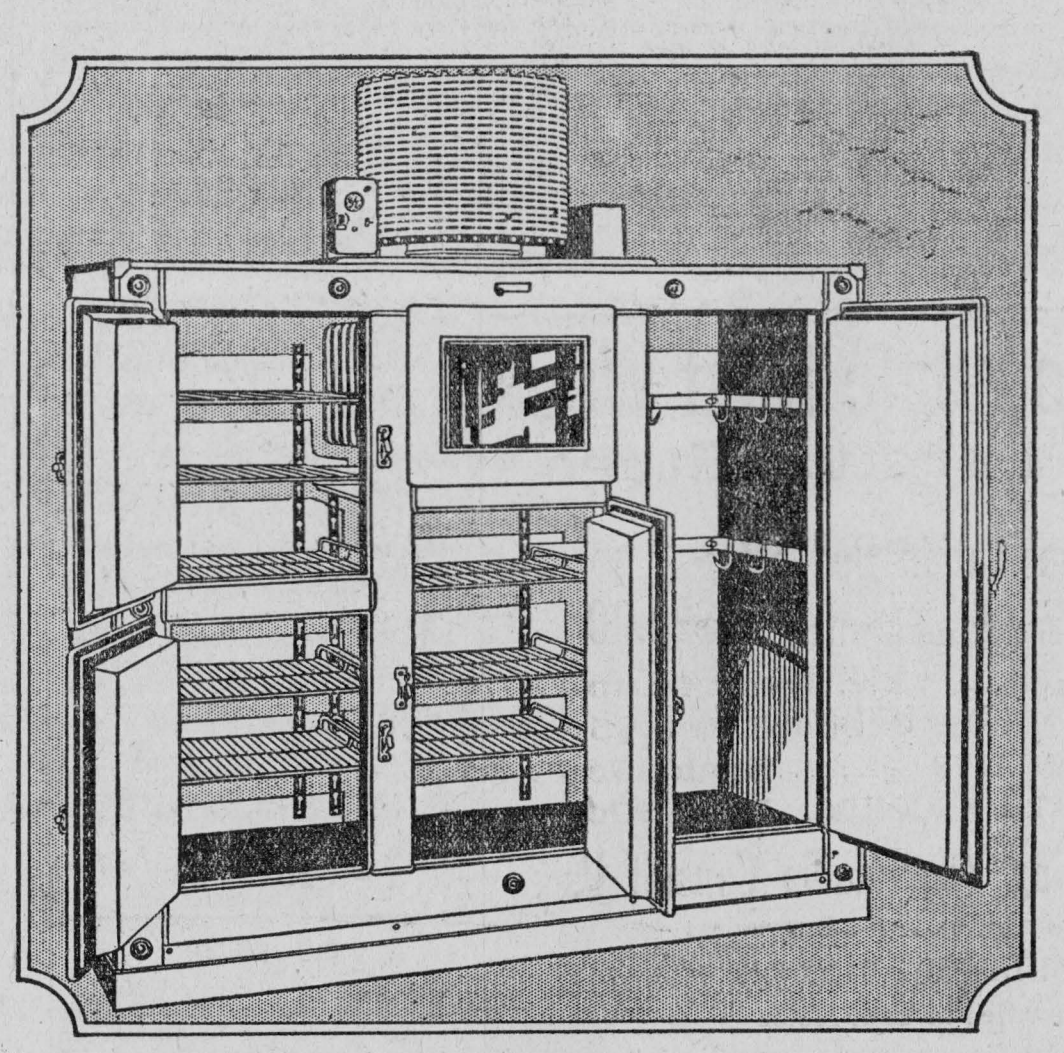

Despite the fact that there is no lack of water at Kingston, the city being partly surrounded by it, it would seem that there are some people here, especially the younger element, who are strangers to the bath. In fact, the condition of some of these is so noticeable that the public school nurse recommended compulsory baths. A committee assigned to look into the matter has decided, after due consideration, that the proposal is not feasible. The obvious conclusion, therefore, from the nurse's suggestion, is that some parents are as complete strangers to the bath as their use of leaving the systematic bathing of their brood to these unwashed parents. It won't help any then, for a Board of Education to decide that the home is the place for the cleansing of pupils, and let it go at that.

Two tramps were sitting by the wayside, when one said to the other: "I say, Bill, there was a time when I was better off."

"When was that?" asked Bill.

"When I sat on a hot stove by mistake."

MIDSHIPMAN BUMPUS'S EFFICIENCY

"I've won, Mother!"

The round face of William Bumpus, Jr., was fairly dazzling as he shouted the good news from the gate of the parsonage. Of course Mother ran out and hugged him, and his father, following close, patted him again and again, saying, "Good boy, Billy; proud of you, son!" And all three laughed and capered about on the front porch till Billy remembered that the neighbors might be looking on and hurried indoors. He was short and roly-poly, —"like his name," a mean girl once said,—and what his looks lacked in dignity Billy felt he must make up by his conduct. So the congratulations went on indoors.

"It" was the appointment to the Naval Academy, which had just been awarded to Billy after a competitive examination.

"Hooray, hooray!" shouted Billy, hopping around the parlor, now that no one could see. "I never was so happy!"

"What did Congressman Murdock say when he told you that you had won?" asked Mother.

Billy's spirits calmed down. "Why, he was kind of funny, Mother. He said I wouldn't like it or make a success of it."

"What on earth!" began Mother, highly indignant.

"He said I came from a long line of teachers and preachers, and what they wanted at Annapolis was not bookworms but efficient, practical men. I guess he thought I wasn't practical." Billy looked grieved.

"There is something in what Mr. Murdock says," observed the elder Bumpus mildly. "You've lived a good deal among books, and you are rather absent-minded; but if your heart is in it and you are determined to make a success of it, you can do it, William."

"Of course he can do it!" cried Mother with another hug. "That man Murdock is just angry because an appointment in a minister's family means nothing to him politically." And Billy agreed heartily with his mother.

Surely, there was no question about Billy's heart being in it. When he went to Annapolis and gazed on the huge granite buildings, the white ships and the august officers, the letter he wrote home fairly bubbled over.

But it was a very different boy that walked dolefully across the grounds behind Bancroft Hall one Sunday afternoon late in October. It was Midshipman Bumpus in all the glory of his dress uniform with its eighteen brass buttons in front, but he was looking for a quiet place where he could wallow in misery uninterrupted. He finally picked out a place on the sea wall and sat down to think things over.

"Fact is, everything has gone wrong since I entered," said Billy half aloud.

Before the end of the first two weeks he had been christened "Blunderbuss Bumpus," and when he recalled the blunder he had made to earn that title he turned hot and cold. Somehow he had been so easily fooled by the tricks of upper-classmen, he had so often been absent-minded at the wrong time; and it seemed as if the harder he tried the worse he did, because he got so easily rattled. He had, with the best intentions, made every lubberly mistake possible, —at least that's what the cadet officers told him,—and yesterday came the climax.

He was section-leader, coming from an English recitation, marching beside his section with a Webster's Dictionary under his arm. Just at the corner of the walk stood the Superintendent, a stately rear admiral in epaulets and cocked hat, with a group of visiting officers from the French squadron. As Billy passed, he felt that for dignity of the school he must try to look as military and as little boyish as possible. So he stiffened backward and looked frowning ahead. Just as he was getting ready to salute, his heel caught in one of the raised bricks at the edge of the walk, his dictionary was jolted from under his arm, and in reaching for it bumped one of his section. The next instant he was sprawling at the feet of the Superintendent and his guests.

Those minutes that followed were too horrible to think of again. Billy wondered that a fellow can go through such an experience and not die on the spot. Then came the interview with the Commandant an hour after, when Billy stood in trembling silence before the old sea-dog, whose keen eyes and bristling moustache radiated no tenderness upon the luckless boy.

After telling him in quarter-deck terms how he had publicly disgraced the school, the martinet concluded:

"Efficiency is the naval officer's ideal, and nothing can be further from it than your lubberly conduct. I am glad to see that you stand well in your studies and have few demerits, but those virtues don't make the naval man. Now, Mr. Bumpus, if you cannot do better than you have been doing, you'll never get a satisfactory grade in efficiency, and you will do the service and the country a favor by getting out."

"Aye, aye, sir," murmured Billy and was waved from the room.

It was only yesterday that all this happened, but to the boy sitting on the sea wall it seemed as if he had lived ten years since then. And now he was debating with himself whether he should resign. Evidently Congressman Murdock was right, and why should he stay if he was a failure? And yet how could he go home and confess his failure? He should hate to leave his roommate, "Husky" McDougal, he reflected gloomily. Husky was a big football player from Tennessee who befriended Billy and just kept "sat." in his studies by Billy's nightly coaching.

"I guess Husky would miss me," he said bitterly.

But in spite of everything the love of the sea was still strong in the lad, and the romance of it came back in all its force as he looked down on the shimmering bay at the French squadron anchored in the distance.

"No use, though," he thought gloomily; "I haven't the knack; I've got to stay a lubber all my life." At this he almost forgot the dignity of his sixteen years and had to blink fast.

Suddenly the air was torn with a horrible shriek. Whoo—ee, whoo—ee, whoop—whoop!

Billy jumped so quickly that he nearly fell off the sea wall and ran as fast as his plump legs could go. It was the "siren" whistle which calls every midshipman to fire quarters. From every corner of the yard, down the long steps of Bancroft Hall, in every possible uniform, the men of the first battalion were racing to the engine house, while the second battalion fell in in front of Bancroft Hall.

Billy belonged to the first and was soon at his station. Over the din rang the sharp orders of the officers; the tangle of midshipmen straightened out, and in a few moments the procession was rattling up the avenue to the main gate.

In those days the ancient town of Annapolis had a fire department of its own, which did the best it could. But, since the engine horse had to be brought in from pasture or unharnessed from the garbage cart, the force did not arrive so suddenly as to startle anybody. So when a fire threatened to be serious the midshipmen came to the rescue, and a great lark they usually made of it.

In the excitement Billy trotted along, forgetful of his woes. But he was soon reminded when an upper classman managed to trip him so that he fell heavily. There was a roar of laughter and a voice, "Blundy Bumps again!"

"Pipe down there!" bellowed a cadet officer.

In another minute they had wheeled down a narrow street of frame houses just outside the yard. Already one of the tenements was gone past help, and the work of the fire brigade was to save the houses on each side. The boys were rapidly separated into squads and Billy found himself with Husky and two third-classmen in charge of a hose on the roof of a back porch. Every now and then as the wind veered it blew over them a choking cloud of smoke filled with bits of plaster and burning tar paper; but they poured a steady stream of water into the window of one of the threatened houses opposite them, which had just taken fire.

"Hurray," he yelled excitedly as the stream tore off a blazing shutter and sent it clattering below.

Suddenly a mulatto woman ran out from the rear of the house across the back yard.

"They's a baby in that room!" she shrieked to the boys on the roof.

Billy was nearest her and the only one who heard. A baby! It was already blistering hot where they stood, and the room she was pointing to was pouring out black smoke. Still, it was only twenty feet away and within easy reach from the porch roof.

"Look out, fellows! I'm going after the baby!"

Billy's companions heard that just as another cloud of smoke swirled over them. As it shifted they saw him disappeear in the window. A few seconds later, Husky had wet his handkeerchief and, holding it over his mouth and nose, was climbing after him.

There was so much smoke that none of this was seen from below, and a lieutenant bawled up, "Steady there with that hose!" To his astonishment, his order was answered by the crew's shutting off the nozzle and vanishing from their stations. A shifting gust blew away the smoke and revealed all four at the window, where Husky, with Billy limp in his arms, was being helped by the other two to get back on the roof. Billy's right hand was clutching a tiny counterpane.

When they took stock of the two friends at Sick Quarters they found them not seriously the worse for their adventure. As Billy came to with the smoke out of his lungs, he asked if anybody found that baby. "I couldn't," he said weakly.

"You blamed fool," snorted Husky McDougal. who was having his hand dressed. "there wasn't any."

The following morning brought another summons for Midshipman Bumpus to report to the Commandant. Again he faced the keen eyes and bristling moustache.

"Mr. Bumpus, did you get orders to enter that burning house?"

"No, sir; the colored woman said that there was a baby in there."

"So I understand. Did it occur to you that there had been plenty of time for the occupants to get out. and that the officers in charge must have seen to it that the house was properly cleared, since they had managed to save most of the furniture as well? That darky woman only knew that there had been a baby there. Well?"

"I guess I've blundered again," said Billy miserably. "I—I think I'd better resign, sir."

"Nonsense,' laughed the marinet, and he laid a hand on the boy's shoulder. "My boy, the kind of blundering that braves danger without stopping to calculate is a splendid foundation for you to build on. Now, I think that when you get more accustomed to this new life you'll be less nervous and rattled. Never mind what they call you, Bumpus, you've got the making of an officer; and remember I said so."

Again Billy had to blink fast to save his dignity.

"That's all," said the Commandant, with a twinkle, "except that I shall expect you and McDougal to report at my quarters next Sunday for dinner."

SIXTH YEAR MOLAR

There is one tooth which is the most important in securing a properly developed jaw with regular teeth. This tooth is the first permanent molar, and it is commonly called the sixth year molar. Its popular name is apt to be misleading, however, because the tooth may appear earlier or later than the sixth year. It comes in just behind the temporary or baby teeth; indeed, it is often mistaken for one of the baby teeth and, as such, it is neglected, the parent thinking that it will be replaced by a permanent tooth later on.

This important tooth can be easily recognized. In the temporary set, there are ten teeth above and ten below, or, in other words, five on each side above and below. If there are more than five then the sixth tooth which appears is this most oportant first permanent molar, which must be carefully guarded and preserved because of its being the "keystone of the dental arch."

The loss of the first permanent molar means that the jaw will not be properly formed, the other teeth will not be in proper position, and, as a result, there will not be the perfect mastification that there should be.

The importance of the teeth as factors in health is generally known. A clean mouth means healthy teeth and gums. Dental disease is responsible for a great deal of illness and suffering. It is essential that parents and those responsible for children realize that, in order to have sound teeth in adult life, an early start must be made. We refer here to this first permanent molar which often appears in the fifth year and which must be preserved if the child is to have sound healthy teeth. This simply means that dental care cannot be postponed, but that it must begin early in life.

Proper diet, cleanliness, regular visits to the dentist are the basis of dental health. If these are begun early and persisted in, satisfactory results will be achieved.

Questions, concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Economy Meat Dishes

By Etta Bitta Pye.

Now that the days are getting colder we have a greater craving for meat, eggs, and fish than we had during the summer months. Here are a couple of unusual and economical meat dishes that will prove very popular:

CAROLINE MEAT LOAF.

- 1¼ pounds chopped beef
- 1 small onion
- 1 large green pepper
- 2 small pickles
- 1¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- Strained tomato juice
- 1 pimento

Mix the beef with the chopped onion, the green pepper, chopped finely, the pickles cut in small pieces, and the tomato juice. Season with salt, pepper, and paprika. Grease loaf pan and place half the mixture in it. Cut the pimento in long strips and arrange over meat; place rest of meat over pimento and bake in a hot oven for thirty-five minutes. Ten minutes before removing from the fire, place bacon strips across top and permit to get crisp. Serve with bacon as a garnish.

BAKED HAM.

- Ham
- Brown sugar
- Bread crumbs
- Cloves
- Milk or cream
- Raisins

Boil a four or five pound piece of ham for several hours until tender. Let cool in liquor in which it was boiled. Place in baking pan and cover with a thick layer of brown sugar, with fine bread crumbs on top. Stick a few cloves in the ham and fill the pan with milk or cream so as to come two-thirds as high as the ham. Raisins may be put on (with toothpicks) giving a very pleasing flavor. Bake forty-five minutes.

And the hilltop gardens yield this fragrant tea.

Your Car and Cold Weather

Follow These Suggestions and Winter Driving will be a Pleasure

Winter will soon be with us in earnest. Some sections of the country have already been hit by freezing temperatures and heavy snow. News dispatches have carried accounts of blocked highways, slippery roads and crippled automobiles by the score. Any of which serves as a reminder that the family chariot needs a little special attention during the cold weather season. A few simple precautions taken at the beginning of winter will save a lot of worry and perhaps costly repair bills later in the season. The Glycerine Producer's Association, whose members make all the standard radiator glycerine used for anti-freeze in this country, has just issued a booklet containing suggestions for winter driving that will be helpful to every motorist.

Before cold weather begins, the Association points out, all the old differential, transmission and crankcase oil and grease should be cleaned out and replaced with lighter grades. The grades of grease and oil customarily used in summer are too heavy for winter driving. The storage battery should be checked at the start of winter to prepare it for the extra heavy strain of hard starting. It is also advisable to increase the generator charging rate to take care of the heavier drain of winter driving, and the proper setting of distibutor points and spark plugs will increase ease in starting and aid proper combustion.

Slippery roads make proper brake adjustment absolutely essential to safety. Unequalized brakes are often the cause of dangerous skidding. After a summer of continuous driving it is generally found that brakes require attention. And it's best to have a set of tire chains under the rear seat long before slippery roads are encountered. You never can tell when the first snow will fall.

Most carburators require special adjustment for winter driving. A summer mixture is not generally suited for cold weather and may result in frequently stalling the motor.

Most important of all is proper attention to the cooling system. The radiator should be carefully examined after the past few months of strenuous driving. You don't want your anti-freeze to leak away and leave your radiator unprotected. The cooling system should be cleaned and flushed, and hose and pump packing should be checked for tightness and general condition. If you use radiator glycerine for freeze protection you can have your radiator filled now. Even if nature should slip in a few more days of warm weather, the user of glycerine solution needn't worry for the only evaporation that takes place is that of the water. One filling of radiator glycerine gives you adequate freeze protection throughout the winter provided the cooling system doesn't leak and the radiator has not been filled too full. Three or four inches airspace should be allowed between the liquid and the top of the overflow pipe to take care of expansion when heated.
