High School Opening Set for Sept. 20th

After High school had been really opened for the Fall term Tuesday of this week, with all teachers in attendance and an enrollment of more than one hundred pupils, the School Board at a regular meeting Tuesday evening decided that not only would the higher classes be discontinued for another two weeks, but that the school would be closed for two weeks. The new Minister of Education, Hon. Geo. Drew, seems to have thrown a monkey wrench into the school opening dates with his newest ruling regarding third, fourth and fifth form classes. It is understood here that practically all pupils in fifth form were anxious that classes would resume at once. Those who had been employed had left their work prepared to take up their studies.

Unfortunately the new members of the staff, Miss Allen of Windsor, Miss Storts of Arthur and Mr. Gordon Wragg of Toronto, had come long distances at considerable expense to themselves to take up their work. Now they can either spend their time here with no teaching to do, or spend other considerable sums for return transportation to their homes and back. It is true their salaries go on for which no return is received by the municipality during the period school is closed.

Mr. Maybee, the principal, comes from nearby Avonmore, and Helen Lacey, domestic science teacher, lives in town.

ASK RIGHT TO TAX HYDRO COMMISSIONS

The old and much discussed question of tax exemptions came up for airing at the convention of the Ontario Municipal Association and the members again decided to cast their bread on the waters by appeals to both the Federal and Provincial Governments. In former years hard-boiled individuals aided and abetted by leaders of the Baptist persuasion were all for taxing the Churches and similar organizations. The Baptists believe in separation of Church and State and for several years Jarvis Street Baptist Church in Toronto voluntarily paid its due tax rate but as it made no impression on other bodies the congregation soon desisted and turned the money thus saved into church channels. The Ontario Municipal Association by resolution asked Prime Minister Mackenzie King to immediately consent to the payment of municipal taxes and business assessments on wartime plants owned or occupied by the crown. The resolutions committee also asked that legislation be introduced at the next session of the provincial Government to provide for assessments on wartime plants owned or occupied by the Crown. The resolutions committee also asked that legislation be introduced at the next session of the Provincial Government to provide for assessment and taxation of all publicly owned utilities in the same manner as privately owned utilities; that, where land or buildings are taken over by any public utility these shall continue to be taxed as if privately owned. The resolutions pointed out that this taxation question applied particularly to provincial and local Hydro Power Commissions. It was resolved to petition Premier Drew to bring in legislation authorizing municipalities to assess corporations for a special business tax on the same principle as municipal corporation tax.

TEACHING CARE OF OUR FORESTS

The manner in which the bushlands of Old Ontario were sacrificed with no thought for the future will remain as a sad commentary. Such depletion has turned many acres of arable land into what today can only be regarded as sub-normal farms on which the occupants have had hard scratching to make a living. In recent years Provincial Governments have done much to encourage reforestation and the conservation of timber wealth and there is reason to believe that the present new Government will be wise enough to continue the policy inaugurated by its predecessors. It is pleasing to note that the first forest ranger school in Ontario has been opened near Boshkong Lake, Haliburton, and 40 forest men from all districts of the province are taking the month's course. It is proposed to erect permanent buildings to house the school. Sherwood Forest Camp is being used now. The objective of the school is to increase the efficiency of the rangers in the Provincial service. The school of Forestry at University of Toronto is conducting the school with Dean G.G. Cosens in charge, assisted by Professors R. C. Hosie and T. Dwight. The Department of Lands and Forests pays $1,000 a year to the university and also pays the teaching staff. Everything from the use of the compass to land administration is compressed into the four-week's course. Theory and practice are given and the curriculum is designed to give the rangers an education in their own work. The university forest property nearby is used for practical demonstrations. Next year the school will stay open for two or more months, and it is planned to incorporate the scalers' school with the new venture.

PANTELLARIA FALLS FOLLOWI G
INTENSIVE AIR-SEA BOMBARDMENT

After a taste of what the combined action of Allied Sea and Air Forces could do in the way of concentrated bombardment, the Italian island of Pantellaria fell to the United Nations. Allied land forces occupied the island within 22 minutes of the time the white flag was seen flying from a hill top.

GERMAN PRISONERS GAIN NOTHING IN ESCAPE

It is perhaps true that the average German soldier is brave and self sacrificing and resourceful enough in an arrogant sort of way. As to his mentality in planning escape from prison camps that is something that may well be left to the psychiatrist to determine. Nineteen Nazis interned in the Old Fort at Kingston and living in much more comfortable circumstances than the bomb harried civilians of Berlin and other German cities, after much hard secret labor made their way through a disused sewer to freedom. Sixteen of them were speedily recaptured and the remaining three, who managed to get across the St. Lawrence River in a row boat, were rounded up and probably were profoundly grateful to the officers who returned them to their quarters in the Old Fort. Only one member of the party could speak English in a somewhat imperfect manner and all were short of money and poorly equipped in a clothing sense. The whole plan was about as futile as trying to keep back the tide with a pitchfork. Another Nazi who escaped into the bush in Northern Ontario wandered back into civilization after being given up as dead. On this continent where could an escaped Nazi turn. Across the border he would encounter more enemity than in Canada and even if he made his way to Mexico the police of that country would soon place him in durance vile. If he reached the sea coast he would soon realize it would be impossible to swim across the intervening waters to the arms of his dear Fuehrer. Such attempts may be a tribute to his loyalty but not to his head.

EXCEEDS 35 MILE TRUCK LIMIT

Despite the fact that he had the support and approval of the Mayor of Orangeville and the sympathy of the whole district, Fred Kingshott, of Orangeville, Dairy owner, lost out in his tilt with the Wartime Prices and Trade Board. It was in the nature of a test case and Kingshott pleaded guilty to three charges on operating his commercial vehicle on three separate dates between Orangeville and Toronto which is a distanc of more than 35 miles, the maximum allowed by the Board ruling. He was fined $50 and costs on each charge to run consecutively. The Mayor of Orangeville in his capacity as Chairman of the town rationing board issued a temporary permit to Kingshott and in fact advised him to go ahead, despite warning letters from the Wartime Prices Board. It was shown, however, that the accused was actuated by a desire to get his produce to Toronto expediously and cut down his charges with a return cargo. It was intimated that in view of the multiplicity of advice Kingshott received the penalty was a light one but at that the fines would provide for a good stock of butter and eggs.

ORGANIZER

The Toronto-Montreal day train was crowded and hot. From across the aisle came a droning voice that at times held the timbre of vehement but subdued passion.

"It must come," the voice said. "With everyone demanding it they'll have to agree. This is your country and mine. . . We're entitled to a thirty-hour week and a guaranteed wage that will provide plenty for all. . ."

The speaker was a dark man with flashing eyes. His listener was a young soldier, blond and cleancut. For half an hour he listened, then he stretched casually and remarked:

"My friend, when I get out of this army I'm going places, and you can't go places working thirty hours a week. Nor can any country. Anyone who thinks so is nuts."

The train clattered on. From across the aisle there was sudden, complete, and continued silence.

Visiting Uncle (who slept in his nephew's room)—Thank you, Johnnie, for that glass of water you left for me last night.

Johnnie—What! Don't tell me you swallowed my tadpoles!

THE DONKEY'S CAROL
By Audrey Brown.

As they went up the broad road
That leads to Bethlehem—
Mary and her Child-to-be,
And the ass that carried them—
Joseph flagged from weariness,
Mary sighed full sore;
But the little ass held up his head,
Proud of the load he bore.

As they went up the white road
Along the printless snow—
Mary drooped her lily head,
Joseph's foot was slow;
But the little ass stepped light and high,
And though he had no words,
His heart was full of singing thoughts
Like silver-throated birds.

Yonder rode the holy twain.
As we follow them
Let us praise the little ass
Who went to Bethlehem,
So happy for the miracle
In which he had no part—
Carrying God upon his back
And heaven in his heart.

SHE QUIT.

It is sometimes asserted that the rank and file of labor is not as conscious as union leaders of the value of the strike as a weapon, nor as interested in its application. The theory gains credence in an incident which took place recently on a Montreal street car. Two young and attractive women met.

"Why Hilda. I thought you were working at that aircraft plant. What are you doing downtown?"

"I quit."

"Oh they started one of these strike things and I just said to myself I don't have to put up with that. I can get myself a job in another place anytime."

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

One result of the war should be a greater appreciation of the farmer's difficulties on the part of the city dweller. Many business men are learning how much hard work is involved in cultivating and bringing to production a few hundred square feet of victory garden, and they must realize that managing a few hundred acres is something of a chore.

Some city men are natural gardeners and find as much pleasure in planting potatoes and training tomato plants as they did in moving a golf ball from place to place in the days when they had the gasoline. They may continue gardening when the war is over, but most of their fellow-gardeners will gladly exchange the hoe for the mashie.

On the other hand, those farmers who have forsaken the land for the higher wages offered by war industry will not all remain in the city. Many of them must have discovered by now that country life has some advantages not to be found in towns. They are looking forward to resuming a way of life that suits their own needs. They have also come to learn that the higher wages obtainable in urban employment are accompanied by higher living costs.

In adjusting postwar society, the wartime education of urban and rural workers in each other's jobs should have its effect. Each will retain his own point of view about the type of life he wants to lead, but he will respect the other's even though he may think him slightly cracked.

Heritage of French Canada

A study of Canada's early history is largely a study of French history. The English-speaking student finds himself worrying about Champlain's troubles with scurvy and Indians, and he shares in the triumphs and discomfitures of Frontenac. The textbook deals less intimately with the hardships encountered by the English in the colonies to the south. Even if more U.S. colonial history were taught, it would still be U.S. history, not the story of the land where the Canadian student lives. In a subtle way his allegiance is to the land, under whatever form of government. So, in following the events of the seventeenth century, and up to the campaigns of the elder Pitt in the eighteenth century, the English-speaking Canadian student is much of the time vaguely on the side of the French.

When the student gets out of school he forgets a good deal of the history and other subjects on which he wrote examinations, but he generally remembers that Canada—his Canada—owes its exploration and early development to French people, and he looks back on the origins of his country from the standpoint of the French and almost as though he himself were a Frenchman. Few French-Canadians are aware of this conception among the English-speaking Canadians, and the present wartime wrangles between the two main Dominion races have blurred the conception considerably, but it is a valuable part of Canadian thinking that the English-speaking still do associate themselves in a subtle way with the French in the primitive struggles of the French to fashion here in the North American wilderness this country which is the Canada of us all.

TELEPHONE SCARE

Anyone who has ever been as startled as this Montreal business man is invited to report it to The Printed Word's My Greatest Scare Contest Editor. The gentleman arrived back in town after a trip to Ottawa, went directly to the office and telephoned home to advise his wife of his safe return.

Unknown to him an old school buddy had arrived with his family and was being put up for a few days at the businessman's home. He failed to recognize the male voice answering the phone.

"I'm sorry," he said, "I must have the wrong number."

"What number are you calling?"

He gave his own home number and the gruff male voice said: "That's right. To whom do you wish to speak?"

In a complete dither, the businessman asked for his wife, then heard the mysteriocs stranger turn from the instrument and holler: "Hey, Mabel. Some guy wants to talk to you!"

Salvation Army Carries On

Brass Bands marching men off to war may cloak its music with harsher, martial strains, shuffling feet on crowded pavements may muffle its trumpets, many-colored uniforms of half the world now on the sidewalks of Nova Scotian towns may subdue its once unique uniforms—but the Salvation Army Band, like the great force it symbolizes in the public mind, still carries on!

In war as in peace, it summons to Thought; it is the outward evidence of a great work that silently and ceaselessly goes on in the world—among men broken by adversity and their own weaknesses, among children who are waifs, among mothers, the aged, the sick or the despairing.

The Salvation Army is an amazing organization, though today its achievements, no longer unexpected, may often be overlooked. It is backed by no church, but is possessed of faith. It boasts no titans of finance or industry among its leaders, but is built, instead, upon the broad shoulders of common Christian folk.

Started in a London slum's degradation, it reaches today to the topmost levels of a thousand communities in a hundred countries.

Survivor of One Great War, it finds in this second world conflict new trials yet great opportunities to serve.

With all it is doing for men and women in the armed services of the United Nations—in enemy lands it is banned because Christian and democratic—it has not neglected the field to serve which it began: the meeting of human emergencies wherever and whenever found with an understanding and compassion born of experience and with practical measurable help.

The Usual "Mistake"

On exhibition at the Missouri Historical Society in St. Louis is a Mark Twain (Samuel L. Clemens) collection, and among the papers is an envelope addressed to the author's wife and marked: "Opened by mistake to see what was inside—S.L.C."

A young Boston lawyer was recently approached by his stengrapher about a raise in salary. He scratched his head, and then brightened. "Tell you what you can do," he said. "I haven't the money now, but can promote yourself to private secretary."

PREPARING ROASTERS FOR MARKET

High quality market poultry can be produced omre economically and brings higher prices than a mediocre product. The producer has nothing to lose and everything to gain by giving his marget stock the advantages which they require to develop into "A grade", says H.S. Gutteridge, Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Except in the case of capons which if well fed and managed, should be sufficiently fat and soft fleshed when killed directly off range, all market poultry should be crate or pen fattened. Crate fattening is the more efficient method. Under conditions where suitable accomodation for crate fattening is not available or where for other reasons crate fattening is not practical, pen fattening is a good substitute. While it is possible to produce birds sufficiently fat to enter the higher market grades by pen fattening, it is not possible to produce the quality of texture and softness of flesh so characteristic of crate fattened birds by this method.

The choice of fattening feeds is of great importance. Unlike growth and egg production, where very exacting requirements for minerals and vitamins must be met, all or most of the necessary ingredients of a fattening mash are available on most farms. The selection of the most suitable of these feeds, taking into consideration their cost and availability is a matter for the judgment of the individual operator based on sound information as to the comparative merits of different feeds. Almost equally important with use of the proper feeds is feeding management which exacts more of the operator's attention in the fattening process than is the case with other poultry feeding operations. Management of the birds other than feeding must also be given some attention if success is to be achieved.

All of the above mentioned matters, as well as many other factors important to successful preparation of poultry for market, are considered in detail in a publication entitled "Fattening Poultry for Market", which is available without charge from the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. The prospective producer of market poultry will find it profitable to make himself acquainted with the subject of fattening poultry for market through the medium of this publication and to give the production of quality dressed poultry the attention which it deserves.

SAVE YEARLING HENS EVERY EGG NEEDED

Egg production is a vital war effort, and all the eggs that can be produced will be required next year for domestic use and for export to Great Britain. In order to bring increased egg production to the highest pitch the Dominion Department of Agriculture urges upon poultrymen the importance of retaining all suitable yearling hens. When the number of good pullets is not sufficient to fill the laying pens, production can be maintained by keeping over the best yearlings. It is necessary that all laying houses should be filled this year.

Pullets and yearlings should not be housed in the same pen, nor young pullets with older pullets. The older birds drive the younger ones away from the feed. Yearlings that moult early are usually slow moulters and poor producers, but active, alert yearling in good flesh, with skin and fat soft and pliable, are generally the best layers. Overcrowding at all times and in all places should be avoided, and plenty of feed mash and fresh water provided.

Egg prices are close to the ceiling price now and will continue so for some time. So save the best yearlings to maintain and increase production.

FENCE-CORNER CHURCHILL

The farmer was getting old, but he had to work hard because in this war year there was no one else to do the work.

"I've been thinking about Churchill", he said, leaning against a fence post and sharpening his hoe. "It's been puzzling me how he can keep up such a pace and still look spry. Now I've maybe found the answer. Churchill is used to these strains and excitements. He's been in the midst of them all his life. In a lot of ways he is like me. You see, I can still hoe more in a day than any of these city men that have come out to help us. They are willing enough, but they aren't used to the work. They don't get the most out of the hoe with the least effort. They don't save themselves with the little tricks that a man learns when he's hoeing year after year. But Churchill and I—we're used to it. That's how we manage to keep going full tilt and even have time to smile."

Wedding bells are ringing in our settlement.

He was rather small, and had been used to sleeping with a night-light in the room, but his parents had decided that he must start sleeping in the dark. When his mother put out the light, he asked plaintively:

"Must I sleep in the dark tonight mummy?"

"Yes, darling," was the reply, "you are getting to be a big boy now."

"Well, may I say my prayers over again—more carefully?"

War Summary

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1943.

The Axis is no more. Rome has cracked under Allied attacks and Italy's unconditional surrender was announced by Gen. Eisenhower yesterday. Actually negotiations were concluded last Friday, but it was agreed that the armistice should not be declared until the time was deemed suitable by the Allies. Germany's reaction was an immediate broadcast from Berlin that "treachery" had been expected and that the Reich was well prepared to take steps to offset it.

Allied observers are confident that with Italy out of the war another smashing blow at crumbling Festung Europa will be delivered before Germany has had time to get her breath after the first shock of Italy's capitulation. That something is in the wind was indicated by a Nazi broadcast that a huge Allied convoy of 200 ships had left Palermo and was moving up the coast of Italy. Its destination may be anywhere from Naples to Marseilles, but as yet there has been no confirmation of the story from an Allied source.

The Reichswehr took prompt action in Northern Italy, and the joy of Milan, Turin and other cities was short-lived. Shortly after seven o'clock German troops took over administration from Italian authorities, seized 4,000 hostages within an hour and clamped a seven p.m. curfew throughout the north. A state of siege was declared and all civilian traffic was stopped. Communication with Switzerland is confused, but it is understood that Italians in the north consider that a virtual state of war now exists with Germany.

Stalino has fallen, and the Germans have been driven from the Donetz Basin—one of the most important mining and industrial areas in all Russia. A triumphant radio broadcast from Moscow reported that the Red Army was charging toward the Dnieper River west of the city, and had already cut railways leading from Stalino to Dnieperoptrovsk and Mariupol. Stalino has been called by the Germans the Essen of the Soviet Union. It was captured on October 21, 1941, and, till a short while ago was the headquarters of the enemy's southern command.

The seventh day of steady hammering at German air bases and railways saw the biggest air battle in months. Nearly 100 German fighter planes tried to stop raids on airdromes at Lille and Vitry-en-Artois. One pilot reported he had never seen the sky so full of battling aircraft. Exact scores have not yet been reported but one Polish squadron, flying Spitfires, shot down six enemy machines and damaged a good many more.

Hyndman

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sloan and family, Mrs. Bert Sloan, Ventnor, called on Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Robinson, Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lattimore had dinner on Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Allan Grant, Cardinal.

Mrs. Jas. Sommerville and Cecil visited friends in Cardinal Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Alkerton, Prescott, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lattimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Grant and Stanley, Prescott, were Sunday visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Grant.

Mr. and Mrs. John Conley, Oxford Mills, visited his parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert Conley, Thursday evening.

Mr. Clarence M. Bowrn of Hyndman, who delights in growing flowers, has given us some information regarding some which grew in his garden this summer and all without any extra special care.

He purchased in June the last box of salvia plants from his local store for 25 cents and though he had never had success with such plants before they came on well. He had planted them as close as 6 inches and the only fertilizer he used was a handful of blood meal to each plant. Cold well water was used for watering when needed. On September 1st he had a solid border six and a half feet long, five feet eight inches of a spread in diameter and four feet eight inches high and has more than 100 scarlet spikes in full bloom with as many more just in bud.

He also has Siamese twin ears of corn joined at the base and within one husk, Golden Bantum, and he has a row of Zinnias planted three inches apart which now measure five to six feet across and over four feet in height and a Clarkia plant three feet high, and feels that these growths are exceptionally good.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. Wm. Hillis and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbours for acts of kindness, expressions of sympathy in their recent sad bereavement in the loss of a loving wife and mother.

The Council adjourned to meet again in the IOOF Hall at Williamsburg on October 2nd at 1 p.m.

REVIVAL MEETING WELL ATTENDED

During practically all day, Labour Day, Monday last, revival meetings were held in the Community Hall by the Plymouth Brethren when some hundred and twenty-five members were present with large delegations from Ottawa and Smiths Falls joining the local group.

NICE LITTLE SNAKES

A little girl entered a store in Midland. She carried something that looked sinister and terrifying to the women shopping in the store. They huddled in corners and would have run past the little girl into the street if they had dared. But they didn't dare to move. And it wasn't a couple of guns that the kid carried. She had a pair of live garter snakes, which she held tightly in her little fingers while they writhed and squirmed and tried to get away, and she didn't mean to scare all the ladies. She was just looking for her mother to show her the nice snakes she had caught. "No," said the storekeeper, "your mummy isn't here. Please go away." And since the merchant was polite and said please, she went.

Insurance Without Benefit Or Just Plain Taxes

From a small Ontario town comes the story of one phase of unemployment insurance. An elderly man, retired some years ago, has been induced to help out the labor shortage by taking a job in a local shop. Inspectors of the Unemployment Insurance Commission have insisted that he take out an insurance and make his contributions weekly. His intention is to return to retirement as soon as he can be spared so that he will not be eligible for insurance benefit, even if he makes a sufficient number of contributions to qualify for it.

The incident illustrates one fallacy of the unemployment insurance plan. With fire or life insurance every individual is free to choose whether he wishes to be insured or not and to fit his insurance programme to his own needs. Insurance agents are loath to admit that anyone is ever carrying enough insurance, but they would be equally loath to work for a company which had one form of policy only, even though every citizen had to buy one.

In the case cited, the weekly premium paid by the elderly employee is nothing but a tax on his right to work. The compulsory payments made by many other employees fall in the same class. Married women who have taken war jobs, stenographers who plan to get married as soon as they can manage it, will probably never receive any benefit from their premiums. The beneficiaries will be the men who are now earning good wages at war work and are, or should be putting something aside to tide them over possible unemployment when their jobs come to an end.

The tax may be necessary, since the appetite of the Department of National Revenue is insatiable, but calling it insurance does not make it more attractive to those who have to pay it.

More Milk Cans Now Available

Considerable improvement in the milk-can situation which gave cause for some concern a few months ago, is reported by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, which has made marked progress in its programme to provide a sufficient number of these containers to meet the demands of increased milk production called for this year.

The original quota of milk cans provided for this year was 110 per cent. of the production of 1940, and by the end of June almost all of the cans so arranged for had been manufactured and delivered. Accordingly, the quota has now been increased to 140 percent. of the 1940 production and the manufacturers are being asked to complete such production and make deliveries at the earliest practicable moment. Distribution of the cans is also being made in such manner that it will keep pace with production of milk in the different areas.

Leslie F. Burrows, administrator of metal containers, has made known the further fact that arrangements have been made to supply sufficient steel and tin to extend the quota beyond the 140 percent quota if that should become necessary.

"YOU CAN'T LIVE ON LOVE."

The old adage was confirmed last week by Sgt. Wilf Barbeau, of the Corps of Military Staff Clerks at Military Headquarters, and his brand new bride, the former Private Belle McLeod, of the Canadian Women's Army Corps.

Off to a quiet cabin on Lake Louise for their honeymoon, tragedy struck that night and temporarily ended the idyllic situation: They'd both forgotten their ration books!

At Northampton, overrun with the WAVE trainees, a young Navy Officer went swinging down the street.

"Oh, look!" shouted a little girl to her playmates. "A man WAVE!"

And was that future admiral peeved!

Gadgets of the Future

Popular magazines have lately been displaying the marvellous gadgets that will be available to us after the war. One illustrated magazine devoted several pages to pictures of the kitchen of the future. If dreams come true, they will be fascinating workshops. Perhaps even fascinating enough to tempt the girls now running lathes and milling machines into the joys of domesticity.

Even more to be desired is the solving of the problem of the summer bachelor. Maybe the new kitchens and other household gadgets will help in one of two ways. Either they will be such fun to run that wives will not want to forsake them for the doubtful pleasures of a summer cottage, or they will make housework so easy that a summer bachelor can cook his own meals and look after the house without the feeling of utter helplessness that now assails him when he attempts it.

Two dangers to society are nevertheless imminent in the new inventions. If housekeeping is made so easy that a mere man can take it in his stride, he may decide that he may as well stay single. The girls, too, who have become accustomed to machinery, will no longer feel that a man is necessary whenever a toaster cord blows out a fuse. They may prefer to have the modern conveniences without a husband to share them.

As men and women still continue to get married in spite of woman's economic independence, which is primarily due to the invention of the typewriter, alarm about the future of the race may be needless. We may look forward to the new gadgets with a clear conscience and a knowledge that they will be something more around the house to get out of order.

WHAT KISKA MEANS

Some idea of what the combined Canadian-American landing on Kiska means in a geographical sense came from Ottawa Army headquarters which announced: "The Canadians are more than half way to Tokyo. When they landed on the rocky, fog-saturated shores of Kiska they were 2500 air miles from Victoria, B.C. or less than 2,000 miles from the Nipponese capital. They are just 800 air line miles from the nearest of the Japanese Chishtma (or Kurile) Islands and an equal distance from the Japanese air and naval base of Horomushiro-to at the southern end of the Kamchatka Peninsula. The idea that they are "somewhere in the far north" is erroneous. Actually, Kiska is far to the west and is approximately on the same parallel of latitude as Saskatoon—or Berlin."

Telephoner—"I want to make a long distance call to Damariscotta Me."

Operator—"How do you spell that?"

Telephoner—"Lady, if I could spell it, I'd write."

Obliging.

Young Oswald was an officious young man, as every one in the office agreed.

He was always horning in where he was not wanted and he had an exhalted opinion of himself.

There were two partners in the firm, and when one of them happened to pass on, the young man approached the surviving partner, with whom he was not exactly what you would call a favorite.

"I'm sorry, sir, to hear of Mr. John's demise and I have come to ask if you would like me to take his place."

"Yes I should very much," was the reply, "if you can get the undertaker to arrange it."

"Do you want to hear a story about a good little girl?" asked Beryl's mother.

"Maybe," said Beryl, with no enthusiasm. "What was she good at?"

War Secrets

When Radio announcer John Fischer of the CBC took to the air and pronounced the Quebec Conference one of the war's best-kept secrets, There were no doubt others who were extended him magnanimous pardon for letting habit get the better of him and trotting out an old phrase with little regard for its meaning. Theer were no doubt others who were irate at the remark.

Admittedly nothing appeared in the press until the sanctifying hand of censorship had blest the first official announcement, but the story was out and had circulated widely before this. In Eastern Canada particularly, the buzz of every-day conversation developed a new and high pitched tone, as the people who open a sentence with "Don't let this get any further" chatted away. The details were vague, and in some instances completely contradictory but the gist of the secret was known and dispensed. A cement worker in one city heard about it from a neighbor who is a salesman for a large commercial printing firm. He in turn had been tipped off by the foreman of his printing shop, who had had it directly from one of his linotype operators. The operator was certain because his wife had told him, and she had heard about it from a neighbour, whose husband worked for an electrical company and had been installing special wiring at the Chateau Frontenac. Just who told the electrician what his work was all about remains obscure, but that one leak certainly travelled some distance.

Several newsstand operators were familiar with the coming event—they have a happy knack of prying advance information out of many sources—but at least they assumed all credit themselves and gave no indication of where they had learned what was in the air. A stenographer told the girls around one office that her sister had heard—from the sister's husband who worked in an obscure office of the government railway—that Churchill was coming to Quebec. And each of these people who heard the information must have passed it along to at least a few others.

An intelligent Axis spy need not have overworked himself to learn what the censors hid. There was no reason for him to snoop around beer parlors, jam into crowded trams, or rush about from one public place to another eavesdropping on conversations. All he had to do was stand still until someone came up to him.

The fact that nothing disastrous in the way of sabotage occurred during the meeting possibly indicates that there was no need to worry about the human frailty of a loose tongue. But it is probably more a tribue to the intelligent services, the counter-espionage work of the security people and the reliability of the actual forces guarding the conference locale.

One thing that did suffer however, was the collective temper of the nation's editors. To writhe under the whip of censorship, knowing that one is being "scooped" by housewives chatting over the garden fence, is not calculated to improve one's disposition.

MORE SHIPS, MORE TEA AND RATIONS UP 1/3

Just a year and a month after rationing commenced the government is able to raise our allowance of tea a full third. 'SALADA' Tea-lovers will rejoice at this happy turn of events for now they can get ½ lb. of their fayourite tea every six weeks instead of every eight. 1

A Pal Explains.

A member of a Scots regiment was being decorated for gallantry.

"This soldier," said the officer presenting the medal, "stood his ground in the face of overwhelmingly numbers. Armed with a tommy-gun, he stood up to the enemy and refused to retreat an inch."

"Must have had his foot on that sixpence I lost," muttered one of the hero's pals.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

HOMEMADE PIE

Hello Homemakers! Big, brown and handsome—juicy—bubbling and spice-whiffy—comes the sweetheart dessert from the oven. Mom's pie fairly whoops!

Big, brown and handsome—tired, but happy—comes the man-in-uniform on furlough, for a piece of pie. He really whoops if they're good.

You can, too make a good pie crust. If you're worrying about it follow the rules and don't fuss. And fillings are as legion as they're luscious, so try our suggestions.

Double Crust Pastry

2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup shortening, 5 or 6 tablespoons water.

Sift flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add cold water by spoonfuls, tossing flour mixture together. Turn onto a piece of wax paper. Gather up and pressing from outside form a compact mass. Chill in electric refrigerator. Roll out lightly.

Plum Pie

Cook plums in a little water until soft. Remove stones, mix with sugar to sweeten (about 1 cup) and a tablespoon of cornstarch. Drain off excess juice. Slice in one apple. Fill lined pie plate, cover and bake.

Pumpkin Pie.

1¼ cups cooked strained pumpkin, ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons molasses (if obtainable), 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 1½ cups scalded milk.

Mix first five ingredients together. Add beaten egg yolks and mix in milk. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Bake in one crust.

Peach Pie

2 cups cut up fresh peaches, ⅛ teaspoon allspice, ¾ cup sugar, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 teaspoon cornstarch.

Mix the ingredients together. Use as filling for two-cust pie.

Note: If the boy or girl in uniform is expected, cut narrow bias strips of pastry and outline the name or rank on top of the pie before it goes into the oven.

TAKE A TIP

1. To make a flaky pie-crust more care must be taken than in making a crumbly crust. Very soft fats do not make as nice a flaky crust as the firmer fats (lard or shortening).
2. Sift flour and measure. Add salt.
3. In mixing the ingredients for cold water pastry be sure the shortening and water are cold. Cut two-thirds of the fat in, using two knives—one in each hand "pencil style," or pick and drop pieces of fat with some flour until mixture is like coarse oatmeal. Sprinkle a little water on at a time using a fork to toss the mixture together.
4. When the mixture can be moulded together place on a slightly floured board and roll out with a floured rolling pin. Dot on pieces of the remaining fat. Fold and roll up in wax paper. Place in upper part of electric refrigerator for at least 15 minutes.
5. Divide into portions for the number of sheets and roll out, raising at the end of each stroke.
6. Shift the sheet of pastry around a couple of times while rolling into a circular shape. Then flip in half shape which makes it easier to lift to pie plate; unfold and press into shape of plate. Prick several places to prevent bubbles. Put in filling.
7. Roll out top crust quickly. Make slashes or cut-outs for steam to escape. Lightly dampen the edge of the lower crust. Place top on, trim with sharp knife using a downstroke, or clip with shears to within ½ inch of plate and fold under.
8. Crimp the edge, pressing the edge between the forefinger and thumb of one hand and forefinger of the other.
9. We cut 3-inch strips of butter wrapping and wet it, then stick it to the edge of pie plate and let it fall over the dough. This prevents juices from boiling out.
10. Place in hot oven (450 degrees) for 10 minutes, then reset the automatic electric dial to 350 for the remaining thirty minutes for fruit pies.

THE QUESTION BOX

With the announcement of the rationing of jams and jellies, etc., we are answering problems on jelly making by sending out Wartime Jams and Jellies leaflet to signed addresses—yours for the asking.

Mrs. J.M. asks: Is bread flour satisfactory for making pastry?

Answer: Yes, but use two tablespoons per cup more shortening and do not roll more than absolutely necessary.

Mrs. S.G. asks: Will placing a prepared pie in a warm place for a few minutes prevent boiling over?

Answer: No, place cold pie in hot oven. Lower the temperature if it begins to boil over.

Anne Allen invites you to write to her c|o The Record. Send in your questions on homemaking problems and watch this column for replies.

A large shipment of wool has been received by the Red Cross branch for the making of articles for the army, navy, and civilian requirements. And one who wishes to do work may secure a supply by calling at the work room Tuesday or Saturday evenings. This work is very urgent and it is hoped that much knitting will be done without delay.

WOMEN'S CLOTHES TO BE LABELLED

Both manufacturers and consumers will benefit from a new order of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board which requires that all women's, misses' and juniors' coats, suits and sports jackets must now carry the manufacturer's indentification. This must be either on the garment or on a label attached to it and must consist of the manufacturer's name or his Prices Board licence number or his registered trade mark. It must also bear the style number and size of the garment.

The new move was necessitated by the multitude of fabrics used and lack of uniformity in style and price ranges. The order maintains the "freeze" announced last winter.
