Chesterville District Credit Union Shows Progress
Bill Lackie Guest Speaker at Second Annual Meeting

The second annual meeting of Chesterville District Credit Union Limited was held in the Co-op building with a goodly number of members and friends in attendance. The meeting was convened by Mr Harry Allison, the president, and the minutes were read by the secretary, Leonard O'Donohue. Among the visitors was Bill Lackie, of the Ontario Chapter of the Co-operative Union of Canada.

The reports presented by the various committees showed steady progress an dthe conclusion of a successful year of business. The members passed the recommendation of the Board of Directors that a 3% dividend be declared on all shares on deposit at the end of December, 1955.

In his opening remarks the president, Mr Allison, explained that an annual membership fee of fifty cents is collected from each member. This is the amount the local credit union pays to the Ontario Credit Union League, of which it is a member. He also advised the meeting that a change in the by-laws, under which the Credit Union holds its charter, was effected during the year so that now "persons who reside in or within a 15 mile radius of the town of Chesterville," the members of their families, as well as all members of the local Co-op may join the Credit Union.

The treasurer's report was submitted by Maurice Beckstead, treasurer-manager for the past 21 months, showing a balance on hand of $349.58 after all payments had been met for the year. The total of the shares on deposit amount to $1,866.28, while the total amount of money loaned to members during the year amounted to $2,960. Mr Beckstead found it necessary to resign his office, and so expressed his appreciation to the members and officers of the Credit Union for their support and co-operation during his term of office.

The report of the credit committee, which was given by Eric Casselman, revealed that 26 loans had been made for various purposes. The total amount of money loaned from the beginning of operations 21 months previously, he stated, was equivalent to 237% of the share capital held.

The report of the supervisory committee, which audits the books and reviews the business of the Credit Union, reminded members that only full shares can draw interest, and that no shares that are withdrawn at any time during the year are eligible for divident payments. The value of each share is $5.

The report of the nominating committee was given by John Coyne. The Board of Directors for 1956 will consist of Don MacIntyre, Harry Allison, Leonard O'Donahue, Ellis Thompson and Rev R. A. Mitchell. The members of the credit committee will be Don Cross, John Sutherland, Maurice Beckstead. The members of the supervisory will be Charlie Collingridge, W. J. Masterson and Hubert McCloskey.

In his address to the members Bill Lackie reminded them that the real value of their Credit Union was making loans available at a low rate of interest, and of the insurance these loans and deposits of the members carry. Any member, he said, that had money deposited before he reached 55 years of age would receive dollar for dollar insurance on the total amount so long as the money was not withdrawn. The same is true of the money members borrow.

Mr Lackie was thanked for his address by Rev R. A. Mitchell, after which the members having enjoyed the film "Snowtime Holiday," provided through the courtesy of the C.P.R., the meeting was adjourned.

Mrs Albert Winters Hostess to Members Of Grantley W.A.

Mrs Albert Winters was hostess to the Grantley W.A. on Wednesday afternoon with 10 members present. After the opening hymn and creed, the Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison.

Mrs Ralph Winters read the scriptures and Mrs Wilburn Robinson the lesson on "Hope" from the topics for worship. The discussion brought out that in the Psalms, as well as in our spring months, was the note of expectancy.

Mrs Albert Winters quoted an Ottawa dispatch entitled "Rags Tell a Country's Wealth," telling that rags from Canada are of the highest quality in the world and bring in over $3,000,000 a year. These rags are processe d in Europe and made into low-priced clothing. With housecleaning coming soon, members were asked to remember the bales of good used clothing we send to those less fortunate.

Mrs Wilburn Robinson gave a paper on current events and also won a contest on music titles. Readings were given by Mrs Glenn McMillan, Mrs Frank Darling and Mrs Claude Carr.

Mrs M. O. Robinson led in the Bible study entitled "Confidence in God," from the book "Luke's Story of Our Lord."

Thank-you notes were read from Mrs Lorne Lasalle, Mrs Beach and Mrs Denzil Robinson for gifts and Mrs Hesson for cards and calls while she was ill.

OPINIONS . . .

Ours and Others

Rural Safe Driving Week

Statistics show that you are more apt to be killed if involved in a motor accident in the country than you are if the accident happens in a city. In 1954 the number of motor vehicle accidents occurring on straight rural roads was 15,619. Even though half the accidents occur in rural areas over three quarters of the total deaths resulting from accidents occur in rural areas.

How many times have you popped out the lane onto the highway to have your whiskers removed by a passing car you did not notice? You were missed, but 1,100 others in 1954 tangled with the passing car. Do you bother to stop out at the corner where the sign says stop? Has habit built up to the point where you do not even see the sign? Over 7,000 motorists paid with broken fenders and in some cases with their lives for just that a year ago.

It is so easy for us to get careless about traffic safety on our own rural road. Living as so many of us do, in the country, after a time, we take on a measure of disregard for passing traffic because the road seems to become almost a private lane through continued use. It is well to remember that 783 persons met their Maker in varying degrees of suddenness on the rural roads of Ontario a year ago through a variety of reasons, with carelessness on somebody's part playing a large part in the accident.

The slogan says: "The life you save may be your own." Being intensely interested in what happens No. 1, take more care on the highway, especially during the coming week. Remember, rural roads have the most accidents.

Jumpeth on the Editor

(From Cowlitz County (Washington) Advocate)

Consider the editor. He weareth purple and fine linen. His abode is amongst the mansions of the rich. His wife hath her limousine and his first-born sporteth a racing car that can hit her up to forty flat.

Lo! All the people breaketh their necks to hand him money. A child is born unto the wife of a merchant in the bazaar. The physician getteth ten gold plunks. The editor writeth a stick and a half and telleth the multitude that the child tippeth the beam at nine pounds. Yea, he lieth even as a centurion. And the proud father giveth him a Cremo.

Behold, the young one groweth up and graduateth. And the editor putteth into his paper a swell notice. Yea, a peach of a notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman, and of her excellent comeliness. Like the roses of Sharon is she and her gown is played up to beat the band. And the dressmaker getteth two score and four iron men. And the editor getteth a note of thanks from the merchant.

The daughter goeth on a journey. And the editor throweth himself on the story of the farewell party. It runneth a column solid. And the fair one remembereth him from afar off with a picture postal card that costeth six for a jitney.

Behold, she returneth and the youth of the city fall down and worship. She picketh one and Lo, she picketh a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of our most promising young men and getteth away with it. And they send unto him a bid to the wedding feast and behold, the bids are fashioned by Muntgummery Hawbuck, in a far city.

Flowering and long is the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth ten bones. The groom standeth the editor off for a twelve month subscription.

All flesh is grass and in time the wife is gathered into the silo. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a cubit of poetry and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the head, and the darned thing cometh out "Gone to Her Last Roasting Place."

And all that are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great jumps. And they pulleth out their ads and cancelleth their subscriptions and they swing the hammer until the third and fourth generations.

Canst thou beat it?

The Dead Sea Scrolls

Similarities between certain New Testament writings and pre-Christian documents found recently on the Dead Sea shore have caused a minor revolution in Bible scholarship.

This claim is made in a broadcast talk by John Allegro, one of two British members of an international team translating documents found in 1947.

The scrolls, found by a Bedouin boy in a cave in Judea, are considered the earliest known Bible writings. Three of the manuscripts comprise the Book of Isaiah, a commentary on the Book of Habakkuk, and a manual containing rules and regulations of an ancient Jewish sect.

One of the copper scrolls has been unfolded at the university at Manchester, Eng. Part of it was recently handled in the United States at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, where experts were unable to find a method of unrolling it. It remained the property of the Jordan government, which allowed it to go to Manchester.

A portion of the scrolls have been consigned to McGill University in Montreal.

In an earlier talk Allegro referred to historical parallels between the life and teachings of Jesus Christ and a Jewish religious leader crucified more than a century earlier.

Future translators of the Bible would have to take into account what he called "this fabulous library," said Allegro, lecturer in philology at Manchester University.

He declared there was evidence that the Qumran community expected their priestly master to return, after his crucifixion, as the Messianic high priest of Israel.

According to the writings. he would awaken from the tomb and lead the faithful to the new, purified Jerusalem. There he would start an era of peace and plenty.

According to Allegro it might appear that the close correspondence the thought of the sect and the Christian Church broke down. "The answer may perhaps be sought in the now established fact that the Qumran community expected two Messiahs," Allegro said. "With their own resurrected priest there would arise a single shoot of the stock of Jesse, a prince of the Family of David."

An important ritual which seemed to have taken a central place in the worship at Qumran was the Messianic banquet, thought by scholars to have been the basic element of the Lord's supper or holy communion, he said.

One of the documents set out in full the order of this rite. The priestly Messiah laid his hands on the bread and wine, blessed them and distributed them to the assembly.

Allegro maintained that similarities shown by the scrolls pointed to a common religious background for the early Christian Church and the Qumran sect.

It had been suggested, he said, they both had their roots in an "ill-defined religious group called the Essenes." If so, much was explained.

According to historians. communities of these people were living in Judea in Jesus' time, following the lives of brethren in the Dead Sea monastery.

"It is not difficult to see how the disciples and Jesus Himself came into contact with Qumran doctrines and documents," Allegro said.

Allegro, who has made three broadcasts on the Dead Sea scrolls, believes it may be four years before the translation is complete.

Light Along The Way

The season of Lent has a long history. These forty days which precede Easter were given special significance as early as the fourth century. They were the time for preparing candidates for baptism, penitents for absolution, and the faithful generally for joining worthily in the Paschal festival. One of the observances of such a season was fasting. Since the Lord's Day was not, traditionally, a fast day, the four days preceding the First Sunday in Lent were added to the Lent fast to bring the total to forty fast days. Thus the tradition of Lent, with its emphasis on fasting or "giving up" something, is a very ancient one.

It is intended, of course, that the Lenten fast should remind us of the sacrifice and suffering of Our Lord. The period through which He passed before death brought it to an end was one of tremendous trial and inward struggle. One has only to read the Biblical account to realize that the "agony" and "bloody sweat" were not limited to the Garden of Gethsemane and the place of trial, but reached back, indeed, to the very beginning of His ministry and became ever more acute until the climax was reached.

We are called upon to remember this, and to let the memory become so real and significant that it leads us to sacrifice too. The Way of the Master can only be trod by those who, with Him, are ready and willing to give themselves to the will of Almighty God. We may not face the awful agony of the Son, but we are required to pay any necessary price that may have to be met to do God's will. The significance of "giving up" something during Lent lies here, and it not candy nor smokes that we are called on to give up but whatever may be keeping us from the presence of God.

What shall we give up? We may tritely say: "Anything that is evil;" and in the triteness state a profound truth. The commandments of the Old Testament help us to understand this truth. These "Thou shalt nots" are the most significant consideration for anyone seeking to be worthy of God, and desirous of doing His will.

The value of the teaching of Jesus is that it carries us beyond the "Thou shalt nots," however. It is one thing to give up, it is yet another to seek what the New Testament calls rebirth. Yet this is the more significant, to lose the evil of life, by the Grace of God, in something good. The sacrifice expected of us is of this nature. Let us seek to replace evil with good, temper with patience, envy with understanding, greed with thankfulness. Let us, in a word, seek the light in the darkness; life in the midst of death.

The suffering and death of our Lord were lost in the triumph of the Ressurrection. The early church preached this. Men were called to a new life, a life that by its nature could not end, so that even death had no victory over it. It is this life we seek, and the most important requirement is the need to sacrifice, to "give up" our unworthy self and become a "new creature" in Christ. "Earth might be fair" if men were willing to undertake the sacrifice that admits them to the life of the Master, for His is the way for men.

Fifty Years Ago

Valentine's Day, February 14, 1906, just half a century ago, Chris McLean, then running a mail route between Morrisburg and Chesterville, dumped a Valentine and his trunk off at the Chesterville Post Office. It was cold, cold and stormy and after an 18-mile drive the Valentine (Harry McMurray) was almost frozen stiff.

He looked around and couldn't tell which street led where. He made up his mind right then that as soon as he made enough dough he would be going back to where he came from.

He's here yet!

DRASTIC ACTION

The drone of an electronic machine at a Leicester, Eng., factory prevented Fred Waring from reading or concentrating. In court he was conditionally discharged but ordered to pay a fine for throwing bricks through the factory windows.

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS

By Lillian Allison

"I'm so glad I can ride home with you tonight," the lady said when the meeting was over. ,'I'm scared stiff to walk home alone."

"You are," I commented with obvious surprise.

"Oh, I don't mind it until after I turn the last corner," she went on, "then I run the rest of the way."

"What are you afraid of?" I asked her.

But she didn't seem to know. She just knew she was afraid to walk home alone after dark. Frightened stiff of the night.

"I don't mind driving at night," one farmer's wife told me, "but I haven't the courage to come home at midnight and put the car in the garage by myself."

It's pitiful too when folks are so nervous after dark. I remember the confessions of my sister-in-law. She spent six weeks with us one time and her RCAF husband joined her on weekends. She didn't have the heart to ask Harry to take him to the station at one o'clock each Sunday night so she forced herself to do it and come back alone.

Every Sunday night she asked Harry if she would leave the car out when she came back or put it in the garage. she told me later, praying that Harry would say that it didn't matter. For she was terrified to have to go to the garage alone at that hour. Harry, who didn't know how frightened she was, usually said that she better put the car in out of the rain or the dew or something.

So I didn't quite understand her thoughtfulness when one night last fall she volunteered to accompany me to the garage instead of getting out at the front door. But I simply laughed and said, "Now don't be ridiculous. I don't mind going out there alone at any hour." I think I could go to the bush at midnight and never shudder.

Harry's father used to tell about a lad of 16 who came over from England about 40 years ago and worked on this farm. One warm June night he decided he'd walk to town. He stayed there longer than he intended and when he got out into the country he realized it was pitch dark.

Suddenly the door into the kitchen burst open, Mr A. said, and Cecil dropped on a chair exhausted. His face was red as a tomato and the perspiration was streaming down him.

"What's thematter?" Mr A. inquired.

"I ran all the way from town," Cecil explained. "There were people watching me in both ditches all the way."

Mr A. laughed. "What makes you think that?" he inquired.

"Well they kept lighting matches all the way along and I was so scared I ran as hard as I could," he puffed.

Mr A. laughed again. And when the boy cooled off he took him outside and introduced him to his first lightning bug. Apparently bugs in England don't carry flashlights and the poor chap was terrified.

A young lad who used to work for Dad had a hurried trip home from the village one night too. He ran all the way quite certain that the ditches were full of people set on catching him.

And really folks who are afraid of the dark are more to be pitied than laughed at. I remember being a little scared once myself.

I was about 14 then and walking alone at night on one of the side streets in town that none of my friends would dream of taking by themselves. Suddenly I was aware of a man's step following directly behind me. I quickened my pace and it seemed he did too.

Surely he would turn the other way when we reached the cor'ner, I reasoned, but when I turned onto a darker, more lonely street he followed close behind. Finally I turned up the walk to my friend's house much relieved to get away from the stranger. In a moment the man who was "chasing" me turned up the walk too. He was my friend's father.

Then it was that I realized how stupid I had been in being afraid. What had I been afraid of? It was perfectly absurd. In fact, it is usually silly to be afraid. For the thing we fear never exisits. As Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "The only thing we have to fear is fear itself."

Civil Defence Development

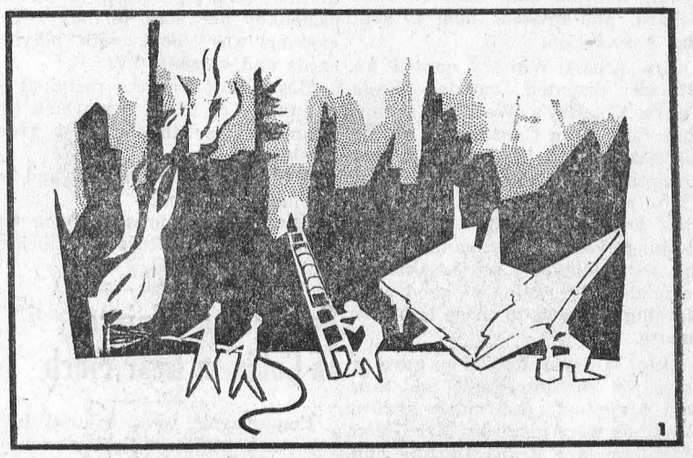
The only absolutely certain defence against the hydrogen bomb is to be where it isn't. And even then there is a danger from its radio-active fall-out unless you're far enough away.

The long-range bomber, capable of spanning oceans in a few hours, has brought the H-bomb threat into every front yard of North America. Its destructive capabilities are so great that now not only would large cities be in danger but also towns, villages and even farms. It is this possibility of infinitely greater horror on the home front should a third world world war come that has created a need for civil defence measures in Canada more urgent than it was for Britain during the worst buzz-bomb days of the Second World War.

But what is civil defence? When and how did it take on such importance?

The ultimate aim in war today is to break the enemy's will to fight. The ultimate aim of civil defence, therefore, says the federal civil defence co-ordinator, F. F. Worthington, is: "To reduce the effects of enemy attack in order that the people maintain their will to win, public utilities are restored, essential production can continue and the government can continue to govern."

The value of a civil population organized to care for itself when disaster strikes was never more clear than during the Second World War. With an efficient civilian defence organization, Britain was able to sustain months of terrible bombings without losing the will and the ability to fight.



It was built, as Canada's is being built, by using the normal services and facilities of governments at all levels, assisted by volunteers and non-governmental organizations. Civil defence must be built through a network of organization from the federal government through the provincial to the municipal level. The services required

Safe Driving Week To Be Launched in Dundas County
Statistics Show Most Deaths Occur in Rural Areas

There will be a meeting in Hallville School Hall on Monday, February 20, at 8.30 p.m., to start Safe Driving Week off in the County of Dundas. Provincial Constable E. J. MacDougal, of Morrisburg Detachment, will be in attendance to address the meeting. Observe Safe Driving Week and be careful and courteous all year. "The Life You Save May Be Your Own."

Here are some facts and figures that will be of interest to all safety-conscious persons in the County:

1. In 1954 there was a total of 31,985 motor vehicle accidents in the rural areas of Ontario. In addition, there would be many accidents which were never reported to the police. This means that on the average over 80 automobile accidents a day occur.
2. A total of 783 persons were killed in 1954 as a result of motor vehicle accidents in the rural areas of Ontario. On the average two persons a day are killed in rural Ontario in motor vehicle accidents.
3. Property damage arising out of motor vehicle accidents in rural areas of Ontario in 1954 amounted to $16,127,972. Over $44,000 a day damage is created by such accidents in Ontario.
4. Of a total of 31,985 motor vehicle accidents in rural Ontario in 1954, over 7,000 occurred at rural intersections and 1 100 at private driveways. Over a quarter of all accidents in rural Ontario in 1954 occurred at rural intersections and private driveways. These two types of accidents are mainly due to personal carelessness.
4. Although many of our railway crossings have automatic signals, gates and men on duty, a total of 55 accidents in 1954 in rural Ontario occurred at these locations. Of these 55 accidents nine were fatal.
6. While 783 persons were killed in 31,985 motor vehicle accidents in rural Ontario in 1954, there were over 15 times as many people injured. Total injured was 12,795.
7. While property damage in 1954 as the result of automobile accidents totalled $16,-127,792, this figure does not take into account the cost in terms of lost working time, medical expenses, emotional upset and physical disability.
8. The number of motor vehicle accidents on straight roads in rural Ontario in 1954 totalled 15,619: on curves, 4,836; on hills, 2 283; on bridges, 749.
9. If you are involved in a motor vehicle accident in the rural areas of Ontario you are much more likely to be killed than if you were involved in an accident in an Ontario city. While half the motor vehicle accidents in Ontario occur in the rural areas, three quarters of the total deaths resulting from motor vehicle accidents occur in rural Ontario. Total motor vehicle accidents in Ontario in 1954 was 62,509 and in rural Ontario 31,985. Total deaths resulting from motor vehicle accidents in Ontario was 1,045 in 1954 and in rural Ontario 783.
10. All statistics to rural Ontario apply to highways, county and township roads.

Both Saunders and Chinook varieties were produced by the Cereal Division, Experimental Farm Service, through the co-operative efforts of agricultural scientists of the Canada Department of Agriculture.

Saunders was licensed as a registered variety in 1947 and named in honour of Sir Charles Edward Saunders, the first Dominion Cerealist. It was the result of a cross between Thatcher and a numbered strain, C-26-44-7, made in 1938. After early trials at Ottawa, Saunders was widely tested on branch experimental farms in the West before being made available to farmers in Northern and Western Alberta. It is two days earlier than Thatcher and is resistant to the stem rust races occurring up to the time of its release but not to race 15-B.

Chinook wheat was developed from a cross between Thatcher and No. S-615-11, also made at the Central Experimental Farm in 1938. Early generations of Chinook were matured and grown at the Swift Current Experimental Farm and final testing completed by the Cereal Breeding Laboratory at Lethbridge. Chinook was licensed and accepted for registration in 1952. It is highly resistant to the wheat stem sawfly, is drought resistant, and has good filling qualities, characters that make it suitable for the dry areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

This is the first time either variety has been awarded championship honours in world-wide competition.

GIVE YOUR CHICKS A "FLYING START"

FEED CHICK STARTENA

Purina Chick Startena is a COMPLETE feed, fed dry, without additions. It comes in two forms—mash and Checker-Etts. (We especially recommend Checker-Etts, varying from mash to cracked grain size. They have given exceptionally good results.)

Keep Startena in front of chicks all the time. At first fill feeders full. After chicks get used to finding feeders, fill only two-thirds.

Amount needed: 2 lbs. per chick—then they're ready for a Purina growing ation.

Civil Defence—

of Civil Defence are the same now as during the war: Police, fire, health and medical, welfare, ambulance, warden engineer and public utility, transportation, communications and information.

But destructive as they were, the bombs of the Second World War were like mites compared to the H-bomb. There was not the need, as there is now, to evacuate whole cities. There was still safety in bomb shelters. The big CD job then was after the raid.

Most important was to assess the damage and casualties as quickly as possible. The wardens with their neighbourhood setup proved invaluable for this. But another problem followed close behind a bombing raid. People flocked to the damaged areas to seek information about relatives and friends. And, the British found, people didn't want to go to the city hall, say, to get it. Setting up inquiry points on the spot became a part of the CD service to sort out this information so important to the civilian population's morale.

Trained volunteers provided through Britain's CD setup to supplement normal fire fighting forces were able to increase the sped with which fires were controlled and put out. Countless lives were saved by the quick action provided through volunteers trained in rescue and first-aid work.

The normal services would have been swamped. CD volunteers often worked 72 hours at a stretch.

Should a nuclear war come to Canada, Canadians would face all the dangers Britons faced, multiplied several thousand times. Main difference is that against H-bomb attack the only real safety is in evacuation of potential target areas —chiefly large cities. The day of ducking into a shelter during a bombing raid and cleaning up after it is over has ended.

Canada's Civil defence policy for target areas has evolved into four stages:

1. Evacuation of non-essential persons—children, expectant mothers aged, infirm and so on—to outlying towns and villages when intelligence reports indicate an impending attack. This likely would be about 12 hours before the bombers were expected to arrive and would involve about 35 per cent of a city's population.

2. Planned withdrawal of the rest of the population based on an alert from the radar warning devices being thrown up around North America's outer fringes by the U.S. and Canada.

3. After the bomb, potential fallout areas must be ascertained and alerted; populations evacuated from cities must be found shelter in towns and villages; mobile columns would return to the stricken cities when directed to help those who may not have escaped in time and get necessary production of essential materials under way again.

4. Disposal of those disrupted by the bomb, rejoining families, providing food and shelter and

With the capability now in Communist as well as American hands of wiping out whole cities and endangering vast rural areas with radioactive dust particles raining from the sky from one exploding H-bomb borne in one aircraft, the importance of civilians organizing themselves and being trained to provide themselves the maximum protection from such destruction seems obvious.

Mr and Mrs Chas. Cassell and son, Tommy, Morrisburg, were Sunday visitors of Mr and Mrs John Bogart.

HE THINKS CANADIANS CONSERVATIVE

It's easy to spot a Canadian, says an employe of the farm labour office at Houton, Me.

"Canadians are recognizable anywhere," he said. "All you have to do is look at the wool in their clothes.

"If they aren't wearing wool, take a look at their shoes. If they are black the wearer's a Canadian. Another way, apart from the way they talk, are the jackets they wear. If it's one of those blue blazers or conservative in style, you're talking to a Canadian.

One of the man's jobs is to spot Canadian migrant labourers who head illegally into Maine for jobs on visitors' permits.

Ben Jonson, English poet and dramatist who died in 1637 was a bricklayer and soldier before turning to the stage.

Bad Equipment, Habits Makes Sewing Suffer

How many times have you sat down at your sewing machine for a productive half-hour of mending sheets or nishing a dress to have to jump up to hunt for a scissors or marker? Some economic experts in a survey of home sewers found that 27 per cent of valuable sewing time is lost because they do not have proper equipment or an edequate place to work.

To help make every minute of sewing time count check your sewing corner for efficiency and comfort. How is the light? During the day do you get a maximum of sunlight on your work-table and sewing machine? And can you control the amount with shades or curtains so that you won't end up with eye strain from excessive brightness?

If you sew during the evening, do you make certain that you have light over your left shoulder so that your hands do not cast shadows on your sewing? Above all, don't be a "television seamstress." The sure road to eye strain—and poor sewing—is to work in subdued light while the family is enjoying its favourite programme.

Another sewing "must" is a chair that is comfortable, supports the back and places you at the proper working height. You can't do justice to the sewing job—at the machine or at hand work—and you are doing yourself a major injustice, if you work in a slouched position. A straight chair that gives your back the support it needs will provide much more real comfort.

The infallible way to lose time that could be spent completing a garment, or cutting a new one, is by having inadequate sewing equipment. Manufacturers hire the finest engineering talent to produce quality equipment to make sewing tasks easier, and yet most of us have a tendency to stick to worn, outmoded items and methods. We cut the finest silk with scissors that double as everything from bottle openers to cutting paper dolls. Our pins are an odd collection, saved from here and there.

Collect your equipment, put it in a clearly marked box and you will have an organized sewing centre as well as everything in its place.

NOT JUST THE GUM

British parents complained their youngsters were buying Danish chewing gum for the sake of the cuties on the wrappers. The government says there's nothing it can do about it. Home Secretary Gwilym Lloyd-George wrote one mother in Duncaster he does not consider the pin-ups—designed for use as a playing card — obscene. Scores of parents have written to newspapers complaining their children spend their pocket money on the chewing gum—and not just for the flavour.

LAZY PIGEON

A pigeon that had been roosting on a nearby roof at London stowed away on a Germany-bound airplane before it took off from London airport. The departure was delayed while the bird was chased out.

CHICKEN EVERY SUNDAY

YOU MAY REMEMBER "Chicken Every Sunday" as the title of a book published during the war years. It was a bright, cheery book with no political implications and that is why I chose it to be sent in a parcel to a young flyer in a German P.O.W. camp in 1944. I blush every time I think of it as it must have caused some unpleasant pangs for those subsisting on the limited fare provided in a prison camp. I can only hope that the above mentioned flyer has had his fill of chicken since that time.

Maryland Chicken

There are several methods of preparing Maryland Chicken. It may either be done in the oven or frying pan. In either case you should use young frying chickens, or if older birds are used, you may steam or boil them slightly first. If the chicken is partially cooked to begin with the frying or baking time will be considerably reduced. If you are not going to have too much time it is best to precook the chicken although the flavour will not be quite as good.

2 chickens
Flour
Salt and pepper
Bread crumbs
1 cup milk
½ cup butter
2 eggs

Cut chickens in pieces for serving. Sprinkle each piece with salt and pepper dip in flour, beaten egg and then in bread crumbs, either stale or fresh crumbs. Place in a well-greased pan. Bake in a hot oven from 45 to 60 minutes, basting frequently with ¼ cup fat melted with ¼ cup hot water. Do not neglect the basting as it helps prevent the chicken from drying out and also improves the flavour.

When the chicken is done, make a gravy from the fat left in the pan, stirring in two tbsps. of flour, one cup of milk and a cup of stock made from simmering the necks, wing tips and giblets in cold water.

Chicken a la King

¼ cup chopped green pepper
2 tbsps. diced celery
2 tbsps. butter
1 tbsp. flour
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 can sliced mushrooms
¾ cup diced chicken
¼ cup chopped pimento
Salt and pepper

Cook green pepper and celery in butter until tender. Blend in flour; gradually add to the soup; add mushrooms and liquid. Cook till thick stirring constantly. Add chicken, pimento and seasonings. Serve on toast or crisp waffles.

Chicken Souffle

1 cup cooked chicken, minced
¼ cup butter
¼ cup flour
½ tsp. salt
3 well-beaten egg yolks
1 tbsp. chopped pimento
3 stiffly-beaten egg whites

Melt butter; blend in flour. Stir milk in gradually. Add seasonings and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Stir in yolks, pimento and chicken. Cool to luke warm. Fold in egg whites. Pour into greased casserole. Place casserole in pan of hot water and bake in oven at 325 degrees for 60 minutes. Serve at once.

Chicken Salad

3 cups diced, cooked chicken
1½ cups celery
1 tsp. salt
3 tbsps. chopped green pepper
3 tbsps. chopped pimento
Mayonnaise

Combine chicken, celery, salt, green pepper and pimento. Moisten generously with mayonnaise; serve on lettuce and garnish with stuffed olives and parsley.

Much Time, Effort Goes into Preparation Of Ottawa Music Festival

For 10 years a music festival has been held in the city of Ottawa under the auspices of the Ottawa Music Festival Association, which is affiliated with the Federation of Canadian Music Festivals and the British Federation of Music Festivals and under the patronage of Her Majesty, the Queen.

Those who are participating in the Ottawa Music Festival this year for the first time will be interested in knowing that not only does it provide friendly competition as a spur to greater achievement on the part of young musicians but the kindly and constructive criticism and advice offered by the adjudicators is of immense help in their future studies.

An important objective of the Festival is the improvement in the standard of music in the home, the church, the school and in social groups, thus enabling greater numbers to share in the pleasure of producing fine music. Furthermore, it binds together all who love music, whether as active participants, teachers, parents or merely enthusiastic listeners, for a common purpose of advancing the art of music.

The next Festival in Ottawa will be held from February 27 to March 3, 1956.

The Festival is held in various church halls throughout the city, with evening sessions in the auditorium of the Glebe Collegiate Institute. The general public attends all sessions of the Festival, especially the evening sessions. A "Highlights" concert is held in one of the high school auditoriums early in the week following the Festival, invariably with a capacity audience.

A Festival of almost 800 entries, with an estimated 6,000 persons taking part, requires careful planning over many months. The citizens of Ottawa are indebted to a group of selfsacrificing people who give generously and cheerfully of their time in making the Festival possible. The Festival is also indebted to individuals and business firms who give financial support. President is Wm. H. Scrivens.

Last year nearly $3,000 was distributed by the Festival in the form of scholarships to enable the recipients to further continue their musical education.

Adjudicators for the next Festival will be: Senior piano, Kendall Taylor, London, Eng.; vocal, Jan van der Gucht, London, Eng.; school choirs, Cyril Hampshire, Director of Music for the Hamilton, Ont., School Board; wind instruments, Murray Adaskin, head of the music department of the University of Saskatchewan;; junior piano, David Ouchterlony, of the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto.

The Festival issues a syllabus each year outlining the 200-odd classes in the various instruments in which contestants may enter, giving, as well, rules and regulations governing the competitions. Copies of the 1955 syllabus are available from the Secretary, Ottawa Music Festival, 59 Fulton Ave., Ottawa 1, Ontario, as well as the Festival's local representatives in the major centres throughout the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Valleys, music stores in the city of Ottawa and Montreal.

IN MEMORIAM

BAKER—In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Mrs Charles Baker, who left us suddenly one year ago, February 17, 1955.
She bade no one her last farewell,
She said good-bye to none;
The Heavenly gates were opened,
A loving voice said "Come."
We often sit and think of you,
The things you used to say;
We wonder why you had to die
Without a chance to say good-bye.
Though out of sight, you're ever
Still missed, still loved, still mine;
You will live with us in memory
Until the end of time.
