Memorial Service at Morewood Sunday.

A Memorial Service will be held in the Presbyterian Church at Morewood on Sunday next May 13th, at 10.30 a. m., for Gunner Bern Shaver, who died "Somewhere in France" and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Shaver of Morewood.

Five Hundred in Fines

License Inspector Foster has been making a clean-up in this district of those taking liberties with the Ontario Temperance Act, and had a number of cases before Magistrate Wholehan last week. Five convictions were secured and fines assessed totalling five hundred dollars. We understand several cases were laid over until the inspector had taken up some cases on hand at Hallville and Winchester.

Gunner Bern Shaver Died from Wounds

On Sunday last Mr. Roland Shaver of the Ninth, received a cablegram from his son. Gunner Stanley Shaver, saying that his brother Berne had died that day from wounds received in the recent fighting. Until about six weeks ago the brothers have been mates in the same Howitzer battery ever since enlisting and it is believed that Stanley was called to be with his brother at the last. Gunner Berne Shaver was a particularly fine young man and came from the west to enlist with the battery in training at Kingston in which at the time were his brother Stanley and cousin Sherwood Wilson, and they all had come through safely until Berne was hit.

Big Feature for 24th May Celebration.

One feature of the 24th of May celebration in Chesterville, that is certainly catching on is the automobile parade and from present calculation there will be the greatest number of autos in line ever seen in Eastern Ontario. It is likely to take the shape of a parade of the Allies, but while there are not enough different makes of cars in the vicinity to represent all the countries of the allies, there are enough for these taking the most prominent parts each to be represented by a certain make of machine, and there will be considerable rivalry between the different agents for the best places in the parade with as many machines as possible in the line. With the cars decorated in the colors of the different countries and costumes to represent the peoples, this should be a feature of great educative value. The fun in the parade will be supplied by those in charge of the calathumpian section of it.

A concert and dance is being arranged for the evening, when a play new to Chesterville will be produced by those who have put on so many successful ventures in this line in Chesterville.

Watch for the posters giving the details of the day's sport and let nothing interfere with your taking part in it.

The members of the different committees are asked to meet at the McCloskey House sample room Friday evening at eight o'clock to finish up the details.

READ! READ!! READ!!!

"Where can I be most useful?" asked a Red Cross nurse.
"Go to the RAILWAY STATION" said the British Consul at Dunkirk.

—Here is what she says—in part—

"The conditions there were horrible, THREE DOCTORS and SEVEN DRESSERS were working on four-hour shifts. When the hospital trains drew in, the wounded were lifted out, and placed on the Stone floors of the platform. .....The station was frightfully cold—no heat of any sort, and the first two nights there was No Water. Many were dead when taken out of the trains, and many others died on the platform. As fast as a man died, they took his body away, and brought in another wounded man.....We had no surgical dressings, but we had some iodine. The odors were fearful!..... In many cases THE WOUNDS were GREEN through lack of attention.....The first night we had ELEVEN HUNDRED cases; the second, NINE HUNDRED; the third, SEVEN HUNDRED AND FIFTY; the fourth TWO THOUSAND and the fifth FIFTEEN HUNDRED. I kept no account after the fifth night."

Picture the horrors of the situation—try to place Your Own Son on that stone floor on the station platform.

This was in the first year of the war. Conditions are now less terrible, thanks to that sacred badge,

The Red Badge of Mercy

Symbol of sacrificing and suffering, symbol of mercy and deliverance—the Sacred Cross.

The figure of the Saviour of the world has become very real to all in the past terrible months. And, direct descendant of the cross of the christian faith is the Red Cross.

THE WOUNDED SOLDIER'S LAST DEFENCE, which carries to every battlefield the words of the Man of Peace, "Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy."

In this war whatever may have failed The Red Cross as a Symbol of Service has never failed. Will you enrol yourself under this Banner of the Red Cross—the flag which stands between the wounded soldier and death? You can do so by giving liberal support to the funds of the Red Cross. You cannot yourself go to the battlefields, to hospitals in Europe, but, by contributing money to purchase supplies you send that which can comfort and save.

Perhaps your contribution may save the life ot a neighbor's, a friend's son; it will at least, give comfort and blessing to somebody's son.

Supplies of Socks Soldiers' Needs.

Socks! Socks! Socks! A soldier can get along without a shirt if necessary but put a whole in his sock and he's soon out of business with sore feet.

Capt W. H. Hayward, M. P. P., O. C. of the 1st Pioneers, who spoke to the Women of the Canadian Club in Ottawa Frlday afternoon would have every woman in the Dominion knitting. Comfort bags for the wounded were given equal emphases as a prime necessity, by the returned officer.

The wounded men, he said, arrive in Dover with no possessions but what they have on their backs.

The originization of army needs is now almost perfect he said. The soldiers get plenty of food always, and things run smoothly.

The ambulance service is particularly fine and the Captain accounts for the length of time before a mans' kin are notified of his wounds in the great care which they take to be sure of each casualty before a report is made.

The Sentry and the Stranger.

One of the Canadian trench journals, published at or near the front, contains the following:

"It was raining hard, and the sentry was standing inside his box eating a sandwich, when half-way through it a man approached, remarking: 'Wet night, sentry.'

" 'Yes, ain't it; but don't stand talking to me, the corporal is sore today and he'll report me.'

" 'But, sentry, don't you know who I am?'

" 'No.'

" 'I'm General—'

" 'Holy smoke! Hold my sandwich while I present arms,' exclaimed the astonished sentry."

Fisherman V. C., and the King.

Mr. Tom Wing, M. P., told how he accompanied a fisherman from a mine-sweeping trawler, who was awarded the V. C. to Buckingham Palace to receive his decoration from the King.

"He rolled along with me in true seafaring style," said Mr. Wing, "until, as we approached the gates, I remarked, 'We must pull ourselves together, otherwise we shall not be admitted.' My gallant friend, who had been chewing a plug of tobacco, took it out of his mouth and carefully put it in his cap.

"It is usual for the King to shake hands with recipients, and when he did it on this occasion my man would not let go. He held on, and to make certain it was all right, he put his other hand on it. Then he looked at his Majesty, as much as to say; 'Are you the King, or are you only "kidding" me?'

"When we got outside he said It was all like a dream, and he felt for his pipe to make quite sure he was awake."

Potato Production

The average yield of potatoes per acre in Ontario in 1916 was 53 bushels. The next lowest yield in the last thirty-five years was 76 and the average annual yield for the whole period, 114 bushels per acre. Considering both yields and prices of seventeen different farm crops, those which gave the greatest returns per acre in Ontario in 1916 were as follows: Potatoes, $78; Turnips and Other Field Roots, $76: Beans, $63; Husking Corn, $39; and Fall Wheat, $33. It will be seen that the highest returns were obtained from the cultivated crops.

According to present prices, the food value of rice purchased for one dollar is equal to that of potatoes costing two dollars. Rice can be used as a vegetable to take the place of potatoes. Seed potatoes are exceedingly scarce and people throughout the Province are eating potatoes which should be retained for planting. Those farmers are wise who retained their potato crop for seed purposes even though they were criticised for not bringing them to market. I would suggest that those having seed potatoes for sale, beyond local requirements, advertise in local, agricultural or daily papers.

In normal years, it is economy to cut good sized potatoes in sets varying from one ounce to two ounces each. In the average of ten tests conducted at Guelph in five years the followiug average annual yields per acre were obtained from good sized potatoes cut into pieces of different weights as here indicated; two ounces, 150 bushels: one ounce, 130 bushels; one-half ounce, 109 bushels; one-quarter ounce, 98 bushels: one-eighth ounce 79 bushels; and one-sixteenth ounce 37 bushels. Small potatoes are frequently produced from scrubs or from diseased tubers. The potatoes produced in Ontario in 1916, however, were exceptionally free from rot and were unusually small owing to the growth being arrested by unfavourable weather conditions. Potatoes did not thoroughly mature last autumn and inmature potatoes are inferior for table use but make excellent seed. At this particular time, therefore, potatoes, the size of hens' eggs or even smaller, might be used for seed to good advantage. These could be cut into pieces even as small as one quarter ounce each and could be planted in rows twenty-eight inches apart with the pieces twelve to fifteen inches apart in the rows. They should be planted the same day that they are cut. Where good seed is unobtainable whole potatoes not more than one-quarter to one-half ounce in size might be planted with the prospect of receiving moderate returns. It would be an advantage to spread out the small potatoes in a warm light room for two or three weeks to allow them to sprout before planting.

The usual time for planting potatoes for best results is from the 15th to 25th of May. Potatoes do well on sod land. If it is impossible to get the land ready before the time mentioned, the sod might be plowed to a depth of about four inches and the potatoes planted in every third furrow; after which the land could be rolled immediately and then harrowed to press the soil around the potatoes and to conserve moisture.

According to present indications, the acreage of potatoes will be less than usual this year.

With the possibility of a famine in food materials, great care should be exercised by both the farmers and the city gardeners in growing the crops of highest value, in using the best seed obtainable and in economizing labour.

Farmer Finds Black Foxes.

Lorne Carroll, who lives in Wolford, near Easton's Corners, is now the owner of a fox farm, which in a measure has been thrust upon him. While out in the woods near his home on Saturday he found a fox in a big hollow log and after an excitable struggle secured it alive. It proved to be a mother fox and the hollow log was the home of a family of three little foxes which were also taken. The mother fox is a red one with black markings, but the little foxes are all black, and Mr. Carroll is anxious to know if they are real black foxes. They are about the size of young kittens and together with the mother are being carefully looked after. A lot of people who do not know anything about foxes, say they are real black foxes and are worth their weight in gold but Mr. Carroll is waiting to see what happens as they grow older, and in the meantime has a new industry on his hands. He thinks the mother fox had carried three or four young ones to a nearby swamp before he got her.

Nell—So he jilted her, did he? That must have made her feel cheap.

Belle—On the contrary, it gave her a very expensive feeling—she sued him for $25,000 for damage to her heart.

THE BLESSING OF A HEALTHY BODY

Has Not Had An Hour's Sickness Since Taking "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. MARRIOTT

78 Lees Ave., Ottawa, Ont.,
August 9th, 1915.

"I think it my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was surprising. During the 3½ years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using "Fruit-a-tives", and I know now what I haven't known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

Pte. Ford Harper Longs for Home.

Witley Camp,
April 16, 1917.

My Dear Wife and Children;—

A few lines to you this beautiful spring evening to let you know I have received your ever welcome letter of March 18th. This finds me real well and back with the Battalion again at Witley. I am on the same old job, sanitary fatigue. It is far easier than drilling as I have almost half the day to myself.

No doubt it does cheer you up to hear from me for I know how I look forward to your letters coming, Sometimes I can hardly wait for the Canadian Mail to come to hear how you and the children are.

You will surely miss Mrs. Hayes and Mr. Barkley but likely you will get along fine with your new neighbors.

How well I remember the way you used to dread the thunder storms, but don't worry. Just imagine I am beside you and think of the happy day when I shall return. That gives me the greatest amount of comfort to think of that happy day. How soon it shall come is not known but the way they are driving those German devils back it can't go on much longer.

I don't know how soon we may go to France but it will not likely be for a month yet at least.

I was very glad to hear F. Merkley and P. Hummel are home again but it seems awful to think of their being so many cripples when this war is over. I would hate to be in the man's shoes who is responsible for all this bloodshed.

I suppose the children are off to school again after their Easter holidays. There is not a day or an hour but what I am thinking of you and the children. I often wish I were close enough to take the little ones in my arms as in the bygone days.

Well dear wife we must both hope and pray for the best, as it will be of no avail to worry in the least.

I must close for this time but I will write again soon. Hoping to hear from you soon. With deepeet love to you and the children. Ford.

One for the Neighbors

Casey had been married only a week when he discovered that his wife, who had assumed control of the household and larder, was inclined to be stingy. He had been working in his small garden one afternoon when wife came to the back door and called out in strident tones; "Terrance, come in to tay, toast and foive eggs!" Terrance dropped his spade in astonishment and ran into the kitchen. "Sure ye're only kiddin' me," he said. "No Terrance," said the wife; it's not ye it's the neighbors I'm kiddin'."

A Sheep's Long Fast

A new chapter must be added to the story of long fasts by animals. Several cases were reported last month of sheep rescued from snow in which they had been imprisoned for weeks. As the days passed and the weather became milder, more missing flocks were discovered,

On the northern side of the Cheviot range many mountain ewes of the black-face or Cheviot breed were brought to the light of day after an imprisonment of from 30 to 40 days. A black-faced mountain ewe owned by Mr. M. E. Maling, of Twizell House, was buried for seven weeks less one day! The shepherd found her in a drift, alive, but a dreadful picture of want and woe, with most of her wool gone. But at the time of writing she was in a fair way towards complete recovery. The following is the record; On the farm of Mr. J. Bainbridge of Westgate, Durham, a black-faced ewe was discovered alive which had lain buried in the snow for 54 days.

We see here, undoubtedly, a glimpse of the way in which animals first began to hibernate. Many millions of animals in the course of ages would be submitted to experiences as terrible as those through which these mountain sheep have been passing. The weaklings would perish: the fittest would survive and transmit their powers of endurance to their young. Little by little certain species of animals would become accustomed to pass part of the winter sleeping and fasting, and in course of time a hibernating or winter-sleeping course would become a fixed habit. Only in that way could animals not of Arctic origin have survived the rigours of Arctic conditions descending upon their habitat.

There is no doubt that during our Ice Age animals from temperate lands marched north each year as the ice and snow melted during our summers, and returned south as the winters returned; and in their adventures many would be overtaken by conditions in which they would have to sleep in safety, fasting or perish. The same thing is observable to-day. All the wide spread animals which have hibernating examples are divided into groups. The southernmost of the family may not hibernate at all; those slightly more to the cold north may hibernate only for short, irregular periods while the northernmost groups will sleep the entire winter away, and so defy the bitter days in which all food is buried in snow or stiff with ice.

KEEP YOUR HORSES IN PRIME WORKING CONDITION

SOUND legs pull big loads. No horse with a Spavin, Splint, Curb, Ringbone, Bony Growth or Sprain, can do itself justice. Thousands of horsemen have been keeping their horses sound by using Kendall's Spavin Cure—the old reliable, safe remedy. Mr. Maurice Wayville, Amherstburg, Ont., wrote on April 20th last—"I cured a jack spavin with two bottles of your Spavin Cure. I am just taking off a bog spavin. It is the best liniment for sprains you can get for man or beast. I would like to have a copy of your "Treatise on the Horse".

The Paint That Costs The Least

is the Paint that covers the greatest surface—that takes the shortest time to apply—that wears the longest. Martin-Senour "100% Pure" Paint does all three. Here's the proof. "100% Pure" Paint covers 900 square feet of surface per gallon.

Hand-mixed-lead-and-oil, and cheap prepared paints, cover only about 500 square feet.

The greatest cost of painting is for labor. It takes less time to apply Martin-Senour "100% Pure" Paint because its fine, even texture spreads much easier.

MARTIN-SENOUR

"100% PURE" PAINT

(Made in Canada)

is guaranteed to be exactly as represented. The purity of the White Lead and Zinc Oxide—the high quality of the Linseed Oil—the minute fineness of the grinding by powerful machinery—insure a paint that gives years of protection and beauty to your home.

Why use cheap paint—that is expensive to put on—when Martin-Senour "100% Pure" Paint wears nearly twice as long?

If you are painting this year, you'll be interested in our books—"Town and Country Homes" and "Harmony In Neu-Tone". Call or write for copies—free. 97

Socks Much Appreciated

France, April 8th, 1917

Mrs. Chester Casselman,
Chesterville, Ont.

Dear Madam;—

You will be pleased to hear that the pair of socks you so kindly knitted duly arrived and being distributed amongst others, I was the fortunate recipient.

I thank you very much for the gift and assure you that they fit very well and are nice and warm. Just now we are having very showery weather which prevents the ground drying in consequence of which most of the ills the men suffer from are colds due to continuous damp feet. A change into a nice new pair of socks is very welcome, and I can assure you that the men thoroughly appreciate the thoughtfulness and kindness of the ladies of Canada who trouble to knit and send out these various comforts. May I just point out that it is not always convenient for the men to acknowledge these gifts much as they would like to, though the senders may in part be repaid for their trouble by knowing that each pair sent duly reaches a foot sore soldier and gives him much needed relief. With many thanks and kindest regards, Richard L. Cooper, No. 408765.

Cheerful Letter From Frank Casselman to his Mother

1-5 Northern General Hospital,
Leicester, Eng.
April 20th, 1917.

Dear Mother and All:—

Just a few lines to let you know I am still alive and am getting on well. I suppose you soon knew I was wounded. Well, I got it on Easter morning about ten to six. We went "over the top" at half past five and it was certainly a joke to see old Fritz run, for he was running both ways and we caught the old fellow napping and he was surprised, for we certainly give him some nice eggs for his Easter. Ha! ha!

Well, when I got wounded I took my water bottle and gas helmet and started for the dressing station I reached it o. k., but was pretty well in. First place I got it was in the left leg near the thigh and then in the left arm just above the elbow and I have the sharpnel for a souviner. There are three pieces. My leg seems to be coming on well and my arm also, so it won't be long until I am able to get up and walk around and it will be much better.

You can send me a couple of pounds if you like, for we don't draw pay when in hospital and it will be handy for getting things. I am writing on Will's birthday if I am right and I think father's was on the seventh for I thought of it, for the sun was shining in the trenches and we were out sunning ourselves.

Well I guess I will close and will you send me the Canadian casualty list of the 9th that I was in and a few later ones. I will say Bye-Bye now and write later, Frank.

Three Berwick Men Together In France

Somewhere in France,
April 16th, 1917.

Dear John and Mrs. Bogart—

Well, we received the parcel from the Red Cross enclosed to E. J. Blair, with the socks and other comforts and they were certainly appreciated, as ever thing that was sent comes in o. k. Thanking you very much. Of course we intend to write to the rest of the donors in the course of a few days, so you can tell them we received everything o. k. Well I must say I am getting on fine, everything lovely and lots to do. Father is with me and Eddie Blair, the three only from Berwick. The weather here has been sort of wet, raining almost every day, but I guess that is the custom in this country. I have seen some strange sights which I am glad I have seen and I hope will be able to have a good chat with you when the game is completed. I don't think it is going to be very long by the outlook of things. The way things are going our boys are pushing things. I tell you they are making Fritz climb. They will have something to boast about for years to come. Well, I haven't much news at present but would like to hear from you to get the news how every thing is going, so good-bye for now. Write soon. Thanking you again and all the rest of the kind Red Cross ladies for their thoughts towards us. Pte. Walter Bookhout No 634075, 3rd Canadian Labor Batt. Army Post Office, B. F. F. Chesterville High School.

Inspector Houston of the Education Department paid the annual visit of inspection to the school on Tuesday of this week, and expressed himself as being well satisfied with the way in which the school is conducted. A number of articles of equipment will need to be purchased in order to secure the additional grant of $40 per year made to "approved schools." This would involve an expenditure of $80 to $100, on which $40 would be a good annual rate of interest.

Word was received from the Education Department this week that the recommendations of all those who passed the farm option examinations had been accepted and they haye now only to fulfil the conditions of farm employment to secure certificates.

A Practical Farm Help Scheme Worked Out

For sometime Canadian Farm has been endeavoring to sift out the "wheat from the chaff" in the efforts of cities and towns to supply the farmer with much needed help for the season's work. That these efforts are sincere and patriotic, no one can doubt who comes in touch with the men at the back of this movement. And we refer more particularly here to the movement in Toronto. The men in that city who are endeavoring to work out some practical scheme for ultilizing city labor on farms are in real earnest. They were, perhaps, a bit late in beginning, and did not get off to a right start. Had they at the beginning called in some representative farmers or men who knew something about the kind of help required on farms or the character of the work expected of city help they would have saved themselves a lot of worry and would have made fewer blunders.

But we will let that pass. These men, after exploiting this and that suggestion with a view to accomplishing something worth while, have seemingly secured a truer perspective. The chaff, or a great deal of it, has been eliminated, and a plan evolved that seems to have something in it of real practical value in solving the help problem. "Spending the holidays on the farm" plan has been relegated as far in the background as possible, though it may come up again at harvest time, when it may be of some practical use.

The scheme on which the best efforts of city men are being centred just now is to secure as many men in cities who have had former experience in farm work, to volunteer for three or four months, work on farms and to begin right away. Our information is that a large number of men of this stamp will be available. These men are not the "rif raff" of the city, but men in steady positions who are able and willing to give the farmer a hand. Many are men in positions earning wages far beyond what the farmer could pay. But the farmer will not be asked to pay the wages or salaries these men are receiving in cities. He will be asked, we understand, to give soldiers' pay, or $1.10 per day and board. And the sincerity of the men at the back of the movement is shown by their willingness to guarantee to the men who volunteer for this work their regular pay during the time they are in the country. In many instances this will mean an outlay of three or four hundred dollars per man on the part of city employers who give up their men for farm work.

This is the main feature of the plan as it has been decided upon in Toronto during the past few days, and we would strongly advise farmers in need of help to avail themselves of it. An outlay of $1.10 per day for farm help is reasonable. Men who leave good positions, give up their chances of a holiday to help out on farms, are in earnest, and consequently their services will be valuable. If they can be secured for three or four months' work, their services will be well worth while. Our advice to farmers, therefore, is to take advantage of the offer to the fullest extent possible. Make application right away either to the committee in charge of the work in cities or to the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Good Rural Roads Help Small Towns.

The average saving in hauling cost brought about by road improvement in eight selected counties in different sections of the United States was found to be 17.9 cents per ton mile gross, while the net saving was 11.6 cents. The annual gross saving was $627,409 for the eight counties. These figures should be sufficient to attract the attention of any farmer to the importance of good roads to his business, as a division of the total saving, by eight will give a fair idea of what benefits will result to any average county in one year, from road improvement.

It can be easily understood why rural sections in close proximity to the cities are the first to receive attention in regard to road improvement. The fact that land in such a position is as a rule devoted to intensive farming or gardening, necessitates a large amount of hauling, more especially as the farmers or gardeners in such districts deliver a great portion of their crop by wagon. In districts further removed from the big centres, however, although the roads are less frequently travelled, loads are, as a rule, heavier and the extra long haul makes the work of the farm teams very trying if the roadway is a poor one; this added hard work and the loss of time that accompanies it, is what adds to the farmer's expense in delivery of his crop, and when in addition to this it has to be admitted that an otherwise possible sale is often lost through failure to deliver the goods on account of the bad condition of the road, the importance of making a move for betterment of their condition, is apparent.

The formation of local associations for the furthering of good road schemes in a given district is a move that should be encouraged. Such associations will no doubt be an outcome of increased interest in community breeding of live stock and co-operative marketing, as under those conditions local shipping points will do an increased business and the farmer will have his own particular district to consider first.

With the smaller country centres well supplied with good roads, the entire system throughout the country at large could soon be joined up, then beside receiving the advantage of decreased expense in haulage of his crops or other product to a shipping point, the farmer would be in a position to reach more distant points by automobile. This might mean a decrease in passenger business for the railroads which would, however, be made up for by increased freight business.

The institution of local grading and shipping stations for hogs, such as was suggested at the recent meeting of the bacon hog committee, in Toronto would have a good effect on country districts in more than one sense and if such a plan is extended to include all lines of live stock and farm produce it would do more to re-establish the much needed country towns and villages which have, of late years, lost their population through the rush to the big cities occasioned by lack of business.

Good roads are as much the making of a farming centre as good railroads are the making of a manufacturing city, and although the notion of tying a farmer to his own little district is to be condemned yet, if he can secure his supplies and market his crops without travelling long distances over poor roads, both he and the consumer of his products will be better served.

Canadian Pipers in the Firing Line

(From the London Daily Mail.)

Everyone of the wounded arriving in London from the Battle of Arras dwells on the wonderful spectacle of our great curtain fire on the opening morning.

"The sky was suddenly alight with rushing flames," said one. "The flames came from the burning fuses of the shells. As they burst they made a wall of living fire in front of us. Amid this came streaks of red and green as the Germans sent up their S.O.S. signals to their artillery to come to their assistance. But the artillery couldn't help them. It was being pounded to nothing by our heavies."

The advance of the Canadian Highlanders, with their pipers playing also made a great impression. One Canadian Highland battalion boasts of a pipe-major, Richardson, who during a particularly fierce fight on the Somme marched up and down in front of the German wire, playing his pipes until our force got through. Then Richardson went through too and was killed in the enemy trenches.

When this same battalion moved up for last week's attack its pipers begged to be allowed to take part. One went with each company, and the pipe-major accompanied the colonel. The colonel was very ill with gastritis but refused to be absent.

The men say it was a wonderful sight—the colonel and the pipe major marching in step under the heavy fire. They moved straight on, turning aside for nothing. The skirl of the pipes could be heard even amid the deafening noise of the bursting shells. Wounded men lying in shell-holes raised themselves on their elbows and cheered. "We all fought better for the sound of the pipes," said one soldier.

Colonel and piper reached their objective, the third enemy line, in safety. The colonel kept with his men until night. Then he had to struggle back to our old front in a heavy snowstorm. He collapsed when he reached our trenches and had to be carried to an ambulance.

A Hun prisoner who spoke English informed his guard as they were going to the base that the United States had now declared war on England. No prisoner seemed to know the real truth.

Protection of Birds a Farm Asset.

If one tenth of all the agricultural products raised annually in the United States were scattered over different sections of the country where most needed, would it help fight the high cost of living? Statistics show that annually there is a loss of between $300,000,000 and $900,000,000 in the agricultural products of the United States, all due to the ravages of insects.

This fact was cited recently by a leading Chicago paper, and it was further cited that the loss might be materially lessened were birds protected as they should be. When one of the leading metropolitan newspapers of the land advocates that every available plot of ground be turned into a garden spot and cultivated, and when in the same issue that same paper urges that birds be protected that they might destroy insects, it is surely time for every one to consider what part he is to do in the work, and, insofar as possible lend a hand in doing his mite. One insect destroyed in the spring means the destruction of hundreds, and in some cases thousands, ere the summer is over.

Government statistics and personal observations show over and over again that the birds are the farmers' best friends, which, in return for their services, ask only protection that they may bring forth more enemies of insects.

Just how is this protection to be given? Happily the time is passed, or nearly so, when the farmers think that the birds must be destroyed because of the fruit they eat. In comparison with the amount of fruit eaten by birds during the summer is an infinitesimal matter,—a mighty good form of insurance for the farmer.

But there is another way in which the birds require protection, and that is protection during their nesting season. Not only should prowling cats be restrained and egg collectors either be made to see the folly of their heartless whims or else be summoned before the law, but provision should be made for the nests. Birds like company. Even the bluejay, usually termed a rascal but at heart a boon companion of the farmer, likes to have his nest near a dwelling. The robin appreciates forked sticks placed in trees for him, and the wren, bluebird, and purple martin enjoy the companionship of man as soon as they learn that he is their friend.

The best way to get on amicable terms with birds is to build and put up birdhouses and see that such are not destroyed by boys or preyed upon by cats. Put up a single birdhouse this summer if you are skeptic and watch the wren, or bluebird, or purple martin, as it feeds its young, taking note of the kind of feed it uses and the number of trips made per hour. Keep a record of this for a few hours, estimate the good done in a day, in a week, in a month, and in a nesting season, and you will be wiser the following year.

I know one farmer in particular who lost, during one summer, three rows of corn forty rods long. The corn grew next to a fence row heavily sodded with blue grass, which produced swarms of grasshoppers. For the sake of experiment alone, for the farmer was a skeptic, last spring he put up twenty-one bird houses, placed two rods apart on the fence along the forty rods. The houses were some that he and the boys had made during the winter months, from dry-goods boxes obtained in town. Thirteen of the twenty-one houses were inhabited during the following summer, six by wrens, four by bluebirds, and three by colonies of purple martins.

The grasshoppers that summer made a rich living for the birds, and when the fall came, that farmer had the satisfaction of gathering twenty-three bushels of corn from the three rows that grew next to the fence, right where there was no corn at all the year before. With corn selling at fifty-five cents per bushel, it represented a saving of $12.65 for that year alone, and with the same insurance for the following year with no outlay at all. Does it pay? Boys, get busy. Get your fathers to figure with you how much corn growing next to the fence row is destroyed by insects, and then see if your fathers will let you put up birdhouses and pay you the difference for the last year.

Saving His Dog's Life.

In order to save his dog's life, Howard S. Lewis, of Hutchinson, made public announcement last week that he had changed the animal's name from Kaiser to Dennis. "I really was afraid some one would take a shot at him." Judge Lewis explained, "and besides, the Kaiser's name's Dennis, anyway.

QUALITY CHICKEN MEAT.

Experimental Farm Note.

Crate feeding on milk mashes will do more to put quality in chicken meat than any other practice. The small portion of the consuming public that have eaten crate, milk fed poultry have no desire to purchase the range and yard fattened birds, as there is such a great difference in the qualtty of the meat of the birds handled under the two different systems.

Crate feeding on milk mashes is a simple process that may be practiced on few or many birds. At the Experimental Station for Vancouver Island, slat crates to accommodate eighty birds were prepared and five birds of an average weight of three and one half pounds were confined in each section. These birds were fed for a period of fourteen days and made an average gain of two pounds per bird. The meal mixture was sixty per cent wheat middlings and forty per cent corn meal. To this meal mixture was added three ounces of salt for each 100 pounds used. The birds were starved for twenty-four hours and given a mild dose of Epsom salts before feeding commenced. They were fed sparingly the first day and the quantity of feed increased at each meal until they were on full feed at the end of the third day. The allotted quantity of meal for each feed was mixed with sour skim milk to the consistency of porridge. Three feeds were given each day at intervals of six hours. Grit was supplied once each week and chopped green Swiss chard was given daily at noon.

The quantity of the meal mixture and skim milk required for a pound of gain was but one pound, thirteen and a half ounces of meal and three pounds four ounces of skim milk. Valuing the meal at three cents per pound and the skim milk at fifty cents per hundred pounds, the cost of each pound of gain was seven and a half cents.

Starting with three and a half pound thin birds and increasing them to five and a half pound high quality birds at a cost of fifteen cents each, the five and a half pounds of first quality chicken meat was sold for twenty-seven cents per pound, which was an advance of nine cents over the ruling price for the not specially fed birds. This three and a half pound bird was selling at eighteen cents per pound or sixty-three cents per bird. The added fattening weight brought them up to the five and a half pound weight and increased the quality and value of the original three and a half pounds so they were sold for one dollar and forty-eight cents per bird. In other words, a sixty-three cent chicken was, by the crate milk feeding method, at a cost of fifteen cents, converted into a first-quality chicken that sold readily at one dollar and forty-eight cents. Quality in table poultry will sell it. Quality in table poultry will lift the industry to the level attained by other competing food products. Cull poultry will always be just as hard to sell as cull apples. Try crate milk feeding a few birds for your own table, eat them and you will not want any other kind. Quality will count with you ever afterwards.

Canadians in a Surprise Attack Capture Position

Canadian Headquarters in France, via London, May 6.—By a surprise attack early this Sunday morning the battalion holding that part of our front immediately south of the Souchez river captured an important sector of the enemy front line and support trench some distance to the east.

The whole region southwest of Lens, where the ground was gained, is dotted over with ruins of mining villages and almost every house has been transformed into a miniature fortress by the introduction of machine guns, operated from the shelter of strong emplacements. The gunners who hold these posts do not surrender--they die at their places beside their guns, fighting to the end Germany still has men of that type, and they sell their lives for the utmost price they can exact.

It was to avoid, as much as possible, the concentration of machine gun fire on our attacking forces that the enemy's trench was rushed. The assault was completely successful. Our men went in with bombs and bayonets and cleared the trench after a sharp fight. The occupants, one officer and thirty-thre men were captured. Possession of this ground was regarded by the enemy as so important that twice during the night he counter attacked Both efforts failed, and the German losses are known to be heavy.

The ground won improves our position.

The systematic burning of everything of value in and around Lens continues from day to day. The enemy seems likely to stay long enough to make good his boast that nothing of France's most prosperous mining region will be left but a smoking waste when he goes.

Everywhere Guns at High Pressure.

Canadian Army Headquarters in France, May 5.—Certain comments in the Canadian press regarding recent operations of the Canadian troops in France, and which especially underestimate the probable casualties, make it necessary to say that the corps is taking its full share in what history will record as one of the greatest battles of all time, and accepting its losses as part of the inevitable price of victory.

Yesterday and today I traversed the region behind the battleline from Bapaume to Arras, thence north to Vimy Ridge, a distance of almost thirty miles. Everywhere guns were being operated at high pressure. The enemy's retallation is shown by the showers of earth spouting up on the hill-sides, and the puffs of bursting shrapnel on the skyline is far greater than when the battle of Arras began on April 9.

He has lost many guns, and has probably made good his losses only by supreme effort, but that effort has been made and the testimony of the men in the thick of the battle is that the enemy's artillery and machine gun services are still the most formidable. His infantry will not face the bayonet, but I am bound to say that the bulk of the men captured on the Canadian front are a husky lot in the main, with a mixture of weedy lads not yet full grown. Over five thousand prisoners have passed thru the Canadian corps cages since the battle of Vimy Ridge, of whom 18 are officers and 438 are men taken at Fresnoy on Thursday.

The total number of prisoners on the western front during April and May to date is about 20,000. The proportion to the credit of our men shows that they have done their part in securing a measure of the success achieved.

The battle of Arras is not yet over. Many gallant deeds are recorded daily on this front. The cool audacity of nine airmen who, seeing the enemy assembling in the open for assaults on our lines descended to an altitude ranging from fifty to to three hundred feet above the ground and dispersed the Germans with machine gun fire, is beyond all praise.

Friday night passed in comparative quiet on our new front east of Fresnoy. Some gas shells were used, but no attempt was made by German infantry upon our advanced post of trenches.

"Did you make the money you expected raising chickens?"

"No. After a little experimenting I decided that the way to make the money is to raise chicken feed.."

"You've made a mistake in your paper," said an indignant man, entering the editorial sanctum of a daily paper. "I was one of the competitors at that athletic match yesterday, and you have called me the well-known lightweight champion."

"Well, aren't you?" inquired the editor.

"No, I'm nothing of the kind, and it's confoundedly awkward, because I'm a coal merchant."

WOMEN MAKING MUNITIONS.

Few Men Employed in a Great English Ammunition Factory.

One thing struck me very forcibly—the small number of men employed at the works. I did not see a single man doing work that could have been done by a woman. I believe the Labor Exchange Bureaux have supplied them with many of their woman workers, and though, of course, very many of them are quite inexperienced and new to their work, they seemed to be managed pretty well.

There are men to attend to the furnaces, men to carry the heavy loads men to start and to attend the machines, but everything else seems to be done by women.

Sorting, testing, using the machines, cleaning, packing, and kindred things are all women's jobs. Rows and rows of women I saw sitting at machines and benches, filling the great wooden cases with the finished bullets; women in rows everywhere, but men only in ones and twos here and there. It was somewhat of an object-lesson in that way; it was new and pleasing to find women able to do so many things and so completely. Surely, when our wonderful coalition Government provides the workers to supply the materials, and these and kindred factories need more hands to cope with the increased work, there must be many women of all classes who could volunteer to take on this work of making munitions, and thus release each a man for service and help on the output of munitions.

It must be remembered, too, that the women's work is comparatively easy—that is to say, one does not instinctively feel how tired they must get, they are laboring under almost perfect conditions, and making very good wages. It is not hard labor that is required of them, but a mechanical and automatic efficiency. Physical strength is not an essential for most of the women's work, but intelligence, deftness, rapidity, and care only.

With the few men employed, of course, it is different; but, as I said before, they are only employed for the really physically hard work, and are paid accordingly. Most of them are making twice their peace-time earnings, and serving their country, too, though I fear few of them realize and appreciate that.

It is a great work and necessary one, that of supplying the munitions of war, and every man and woman employed at it ought to feel proud and thankful to be allowed to do it.

Between seventy and eighty women conductors have appeared on the 'buses run by the London General Omnibus Company. This number will be gradually increased as the needs of the situation demand.

The women will be paid at exactly the same rates, on a mileage basis, as the male conductors, and will have the same duties and hours. Their employment is confined to the period of the war, or to such time as the male conductors shall return.

Women dockers have been introduced on the Mersey. Recently the male laborers, under the advice of their union, refused to work with them, and the services of the women were dispensed with.

There are 150 women conductors on the metropolitan electric trams and 120 on the London United lines.

"Sammy's" Lucky Stick.

By the recent death of Sir Samuel Way, Chief Justice of South Australia since 1876, the Commonwealth has lost one of its most interesting and picturesque personalities. "Sammy," as he was known in Adelaide, was born at Portsmouth nearly eighty years ago, his father being one of the leaders of the English Bible Christians, and pioneer minister of the sect in Australia.

One of "Sammy's" most cherished possessions was a lucky stick, originally owned by Mr. W. B. Dalley, first Australian Privy Councillor, who gave it to Sir Alfred Stephen. Sir Alfred, the second Australian Privy Councillor, bequeathed it to Chief Justice Way, and not long afterwards he was raised to the same dignity. "Sammy" carried the stick with him when he went to Windsor to be sworn in, and also when he took his seat in the Privy Council.

Sir Samuel was the hero of a love story which Australians liked to tell. It began when he was a poor young man at the Bar, but as the years ran on the girl married another.

Many years later he found her a widow, and his early love became Mrs. Way—for the Chief Justice had refused knighthood again and again because he had no one to share the honor with him. When a baronetcy was offered him he accepted it. Lady Way died in 1914.

THE WEATHER FOR MAY.

Frank A. Doe Dopes it Out for Readers of the Ogdensburg News.

The month of April is over and no one in this North Country will regret its finish. It did seem as though April should have been a fine, warm and pleasant month after such a terrible long winter. But it has been just the reverse. It has been a long, cold, cloudy, dreary and gloomy month that we will not forget it for many months to come. We had in that month snow and rain in abundance. We had many cold spells and terrific high, cold winds and gales. Winter extended itself into spring very much and the loud shouters of an early spring and open winter are playing the stunt that the old bear played. We don't hear from them any more and we won't till next winter, when they will be out in great numbers. But now they are closed as a clam. Up to the present time, April 22nd we have had 19 cloudy to partly cloudy days and only 4 days that were clear. While we didn't get any snow here on Easter Sunday they got it in many places all over the State.

This is what will occur in May, without fail. From the 1st to 5th will open up cloudy with a light rain within the period and some cool. Within these five days we will not have much sunshine. The most pleasant days will be the 4th and 5th. The week of the 6th to 12th will be mostly pleasant. We will have a severe thunder storm with a probable cloud burst within the week. The greater part of the week will be warm and fair. Good growing weather. From the 13th to the 20th we will experience a sudden change in temperature. It will not be so warm as the previous week. It will be frosty and cold. Vegetation will get a set back at this time. And we will also have high winds in this period. It will be equally cloudy from the 20th up to the 26th. In this week, however, we will have the fairest week in all. We will have a warm wave in this period and vegetation will do fine. It will be some cloudy, but the greater part fair. We will have some severe high winds in this week and some heavy thunder showers. The balance of the month from the 26th to the 31st will be partly cloudy and warm.

We will have large crops this year, but the farmers don't want to be too hasty planting, as we are due for a severe cold week from the 13th to 20th. It is in this week that we will have destroying frosts. Late planting will fare better than the early planting, as there is nothing gained in early sowing till the danger of frost is over.

Mr. Oldun—Life is full of strange turns.

Jack Younge—I know it I turned up at a girl's house tonight, got turned out, and now I'm going home to turn in.

Earning Good Money.

A good record for a four-year-old grade cow in Ontario in 1916 was 12,985 pounds of milk and 456 pounds of fat; she earned $206.86 for her owner. Yet close by her were many cows that did not bring in one hundred dollars each in the same time, some earned even less than that. Dairy records discover these facts and help owners to discriminate, to see that cows are handled so as to give the best possible results and earn good money. It will pay any dairyman to test each of his cows. There may be one or two in your herd capable of great development. A few minutes per cow per month spent in weighing and sampling will give most valuable information on which to build up a better herd. Drop a line to the Dairy Division Ottawa, asking for milk record forms, either three day or daily. They are free; the keeping of records help to increase your income.

EVERYBODY
Wants Profits

It isn't the amount of the premium but the amount of the dividend that fixes the cost of an insurance policy.

This is particularly true in a Mutual company where all surplus earnings are credited solely to policyholders.

The profits may be drawn in cash, used to reduce the premiums or to increase the amount of the insurance.

Less expensive policies are issued without profits, but in a prosperous company such as the Mutual of Canada the policies with profits soon become the cheaper.

One could not do a wiser thing than take out a life, limited payment life, or endowment policy in the Mutual of Canada, for it is among the most liberal dividend payers in America.

For example: twenty years ago a young man, age 25, took out a policy for $4,000 on the 20-year endowment plan. He paid a single premium of $2,036. Last month the Company paid him $5374.-16. This was a return of $263.96 for each $100 invested in addition to the protection of $4,000 for 20 years.

The following poem was received this week by Pte. Percy Hummel from the author in England, Mrs. Millington of Birmingham, who has taken a very kindly interest in the Canadian soldiers and especially those wounded. While Pte. Hummel was in hospital he received many delicacies at her hands. Quite an interesting coincidence occurred when Mrs. Millington was asked if she knew any people in Canada and she replied that the only person she knew was Dr. Miles Brown of this place and whom she remembered had a son William. Of course this little incident made her seem like an old friend to Percy.

THE MORROW.

What of the morrow, when war shall cease,
And peace dawns fair and bright,
When the clouds of strife shall roll away
And reveal the fuller light
Of courage, and honour, and sacrifice,
Which blesses the dark today,
And hastens the hour for righteous peace
To resume her happy sway.

When that morrow dawns, shall you be glad
To think of the part you played?
Will you thrill with joy for your work of to-day,
And rejoice at the stand you made?
Or shall you stand aloof, lost in vain regret,
While the hosts go thundering by?
Who have fought and bled for their country's weal,
And to safeguard you and I.

For that morrow our brothers are fighting
And ehduring the battle's strife,
Counting no cost too heavy,
They offer their fresh young lives,
Their bodies to be bruised and broken
In the cause of liberty?
Though we may not share their hardships there,
Still there's work for you and me.

Oh! what if the morrow should bring you sorrow
For duties all undone,
For cheer unspoken, to hearts nigh broken,
And honours all unwon.
Then pause and think of your Empire's need,
That the morrow may bring no shame,
Do the thing that's nearest, tho' it cost you dearest—
Heaven will restore it again.

Then God speed the morrow, tho' it bring us sorrow
For heroes and warriors slain,
For we know those brave hearts have chosen the part
That shall not be taken away,
For their memories shall rank, with the noblest and best,
Till nations shall fall to decay;
Till hatred shall cease, and the great God of peace
Shall call us to heaven's own day.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of William Garnet Hayes, who died May 11th, 1916. Beloved son of the late Pte. Wm. Hayes and Mrs. Hayes.

When we see the precious blossom,
That we tended with such care,
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our hearts almost despair.
Round the little grave we linger
Till the setting sun is low,
Feeling all our hopes have perished
With the flower we cherished so.

Stealthily the black-robed angel,
In the shadow hovered nigh
And our baby's soul has vanished
To it's home beyond the sky.
Now the tender bud transplanted.
Blooms in heaven's purer air,
But our tears still spring unbidden
O'er the little vacant chair.

Ever remembered by his sisters and brother, Mary, Maude and Thomas Hayes.
