High Prices are Predicted For Eggs and Poultry, owing to Export Demand

We Export to Great Britain direct

It will pay Farmers handsomely to feed and care for their Poultry Flocks.

Farmers of Canada lose millions of dollars annually from bad methods of producing and handling eggs. Considerable loss is preventable because it is due to partial hatching of the fertile eggs which have been allowed to become warm enough to begin to incubate

Heat is the great enemy of eggs both fertile and infertile. Summer heat has the same effect on fertile eggs as the hen or incubator. Farmers are urged to follow these simple rules, which cost nothing but time and thought, and will add dollars to the poultry producers' returns.

- 1—Keep the nests clean and provide plenty of clean straw in and around the hen house.
- 2—Gather the eggs twice daily.
- 3—Keep the eggs in a cool, dry room or cellar until the collector calls for them.
- 4—Market the eggs at least once a week.
- 5—Sell, kill or confine all male birds when the hatching season is over.
- 6—Make application for membership in the Dundas Co-operative Association, Limited, and participate in the profits on the sale of your eggs and poultry.

FREIGHTER IONIC SUNK IN CANAL

The big steel freighter Ionic of the Canada Steamship Lines was sunk in the Morrisburg Canal last Saturday afternoon. She was laden with a cargo of general merchandise and iron pipe, bound from Montreal to Hamilton. The steamer had just passed through the Morrisburg lock and was getting under way when something happened, and she went down before anything could be done by her crew to avoid the accident. She was listed at 45 degrees and the water went over her upper deck.

The steamer is one of the Canada Steamship Lines' best freighters, and is of full Welland Canal size. The value of the vessel is placed at $25,000, while the value of the cargo she carried is estimated at $10,000. After undergoing repairs the steamer was able to leave under her own steam on Wednesday evening.

LATE EZRA SADDLEMIRE

There passed away to his eternal rest and reward, at his home near Glen Becker on Monday, November 3rd., a widely-known and highly-respected resident of the Township of Williamsburg in the person of Mr. Ezra Saddle mire.

Deceased, who was born on the Township of Williamsburg over eighty years ago was a son of the late Peter Saddle mire, and of U. E. Loyalist stock. Mr. Saddle mire was a successful farmer, and with the exception of a few years, when he resided in Morrisburg, his life was spent on the farm.

Deceased was a loyal and devoted member of the Presbyterian Church, and for many years, was a faithful elder of the church at Williamsburg. He was first married in 1864 to Mary J. Casselman, and of this marriage were born three children: Mrs. John M. Casselman, Mrs. Jonah Beckstead and John P. Saddle mire, deceased. In 1879 he was married to Mary Empey, to whom were born three children: Merton on the home- stead; Mrs. John Belway of Rosthern, Sask., and Calvin of Winnipeg.

Deceased leaves a large circle of relatives and friends to mourn his loss—one brother and four sisters survive, viz: John Saddle mire of Morrisburg; Mrs. Ralph Beckstead, Williamsburg; Mrs. A. Dillabough, London, Ont.; Mrs. D. Hanes, Matilda; Mrs. T. Stewart, Morrisburg; also seventeen grand-children and four great-grandchildren.

The funeral service which was attended by a large number of relatives and neighbors, was conducted by his pastor, Rev. A. Hall, B.D., of Williamsburg, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. H. Cameron, B.A., of Morrisburg, and the remains were laid to rest in the Union Cemetery, Morrisburg. The pall-bearers were nephews of the deceased: Stanley Saddle mire, Frank Beckstead, Allen Beckstead, Frank Stewart, Allen Hanes and John Hanes.

"WE NEED A WOMAN"

At this time of the year, the minds of the citizens naturally begin to wonder as to whom their representatives shall be for the year 1920. Why not a woman—or two women, on our school board? It seems to us that the services of a woman in this connection is apparently becoming indispensable. Personality and actions are the imprint of morality which reflect over the surroundings, and if the irregularities which have been trumpeted from door to door recently exist within the walls of our schools, or if there should be reason to doubt that it exists, then it is a duty the Board owes the staff, the pupils, the parents, the citizens generally, and not the least, the good name of the Institution, which we have ever heralded with pride, to make it clear that it does or does not exist. This cannot be done by throwing the responsibility on other shoulders as was the case this week when a member of the school board stated to a member of the school staff, that we intended interfering with his personality.

The services of a lady on the school board is daily becoming more indispensable.

"No Good" Greensmith

By T. C. Bridges.

The Governor of Moorlands Prison sat bolt upright in his chair, his face bleak as the bare office table before him, and his steel blue eyes fixed upon the long, shuffling form of the prisoner who stood opposite.

"You again, Greensmith!" he said, in a voice colder than the icy draught which whistled through the open window.

He turned to the hard-featured warder who stood like a ramrod in charge of Greensmith.

"What is it this time, Mr. Leney?" he asked.

"His cell wasn't fit to be seen this morning, sir. Tins not cleaned. And when I warned him, he gave me cheek."

The Governor shrugged his shoulders.

"What have you to say, Greensmith?"

Greensmith glanced up, opened his lips as though about to speak, then subsided. Long experience had taught him that it was perfectly useless to defend himself. If he did, Leney would only make it hotter for him next time.

"Nothing to say? Then you admit the charge?" The Governor paused, frowning.

"Greensmith," he went on, "this is the third time you have been before me this month. I despair of you. Warnings are useless. I shall try what cells will do. You will have three days and Number One diet, and next time you come before me you will get a week."

Greensmith did not even look up. Escorted by his warder, he shuffled out.

"I told you so," said Leney, in a voice of triumph. "Cells you've got, and I hope you'll like it."

Greensmith's upper lip lifted, showing his teeth in a sort of snarl. But he did not speak, nor did a word pass his lips till he was behind the double doors, in the half dark, utter silence of a punishment cell. Then he flung himself face downwards on the floor, and lay shivering, shaking, muttering fierce imprecations against Leney, the Governor, and everybody and everything connected with the prison.

Four days later, "No Good" Greensmith was back with his gang on the "Bogs." There was a sullen, desperate look on his thin face, his back seemed more bent, and he shuffled worse than ever as he walked.

"You looks bad, Greeny," whispered a little Cockney pickpocket, named Dingley, in his ear.

"And how would you look if you'd been three days in Number One?" growled back Greensmith.

"Oo was it—Leney?" asked Dingley.

"Who d'ye think, if it wasn't him? What's the use of a bloke trying to run straight? I tell you, Dingley, it's another sort of run I'll try next time."

"Now, then—talking! Ah, you, Greensmith, of course!"

It was Leney's voice, harsh and angry. He thrust his thick, red face almost into Greensmith's.

Discipline.

She burst into the living room, calling, "Mother, where are you, mother?" quite as if her parent had broken the habit of a lifetime and had deserted the mending basket on Thursday afternoon. "Listen, mother! I've got to get a new sweater. Can you let me have five dollars? They're four—ninety-five at Klein's—some bargain!" She flung herself into the morris chair. "Wow, but I'm tired! I wouldn't stir one step if I wasn't afraid all the pastel shades would be snapped up before I get there. What's the matter, mumsy—seen a ghost?"

The mother had put down her darning and was looking at a slender calf in old-rose silk. "No, dear, but I see a great deal of leg, and a hole that's getting bigger every minute. I warned you there'd be no wear in that kind of stocking, Doris."

"What's the use in harping on that when you won't make daddy raise my allowance?" Doris sat up very straight. "You know that I can't buy a stocking that will last two minutes for less than a dollar and a half—at the least. By the way, there's a sale of Italian silk ones this afternoon; if you make that five a ten, I can get some bargains. That would be real economy. Please, mother!"

"Doris, don't! You nearly got that head, but at the arm's expense. The limb dropped useless to his side. The pain drove him mad. Dashing round the table, he drove his right fist into Meeson's ugly face, and saw the man double like a concertina and fall against the wall.

Greensmith gave him one glance, then fell on the food like a wolf. Bread, bacon, and tea. Never had he tasted anything so delicious. With every mouthful strength came back to him.

Satisfied at last, he examined his arm. It hurt abominably. A small bone seemed to be broken. A shirt hung against the wall. He ripped it, made a rough bandage, and then turned his attention to his late enemies, who were both still stunned. It was a job to handle them with one arm, but they were not going to escape if he could help it. The words of that filthy fellow still stuck in his throat. He managed at last to tie them safely, then rose to his feet, panting.

There was a cot in one corner of the room. He eyed it for a moment, then went and deliberately lay down. Inside two minutes he was sound asleep. He was awakened by a melancholy groaning.

"Shut your row!" he ordered curtly, and sat up to find the grey dawn creeping through the window. He got up, and, paying no attention whatever to the shivering wretches on the floor, helped himself to some breakfast. Then he went out.

As he passed the printing press he slipped one of the leaflets inside his shirt. Leney screamed after him, but he paid no attention. Shutting the door behind him, he turned in the direction of Moorlands Prison.

The sun had just risen when the warder on sentry at the gate of the prison saw a mud-stained lad, with one arm in a rough sling, limping wearily towards him.

"Heavens, it's Greensmith!" he gasped. Then he shouted for assistance.

Several warders ran out, among them Leney. Leney's pale eyes glittered, and his heavy hand fell on Greensmith's shoulder.

"So you've come back?" he jeered. "Couldn't even do a bunk after you had got away. My word, six months in irons—that's what this means! He chuckled savagely.

Greensmith drew himself up, and there was no fear in the look he turned on Leney.

"You'll take me to the Governor," he said, sharply.

Leney's jaw dropped, but he recovered himself quickly.

"Oh, I'll take you to the Governor, right enough," he snarled. "I'll take you to him when I've done with you."

"That is no way to speak to a prisoner," came a cold voice at Leney's shoulder, and the warder wheeled to see Colonel Peyton regarding him sternly.

Before the dismayed Leney could find words, Greensmith spoke.

"I came back of my own accord, sir," he said quietly. "The sentry can tell you that. I have something to say to you, privately, sir."

The Governor gazed piercingly at the convict for a second or two. The change in the man's demeanor struck him as almost miraculous.

"Come!" he said, curtly, and led the way into his own house.

"Well, if this ain't a rum go!" observed one of the watching warders. And his words accurately voiced the opinion of the rest.

A quarter of an hour later, the sentry saw the prison doctor enter the Governor's house, to come out in a few minutes in charge of Greensmith, whom he took straight across to the infirmary. A little later Principal Warder McKee was seen to leave the prison with two assistant warders, and start out briskly across the Moor.

Later that day, the Governor, making his usual rounds, came to the infirmary where Greensmith, lying comfortably between clean white sheets, was happily engaged in reading an old magazine.

Colonel Peyton looked at him keenly. Greensmith's eyes did not fall. "You were in the Army, once, were you not?" asked the Colonel.

"I was, sir."

"I don't promise anything," said the Colonel, "but I'm going to see if I can get you back."

needle in your eye, of course I like to be hugged, dear child, but not when I'm sewing. And it doesn't do a bit of good to coax and wheedle, for I'm not going to give you another cent for clothes until your allowance is due." The mother straightened her collar. "You know what daddy said when he heard what your new bathing suit cost. And I don't like—"

"Oh, please, mother, just this once! Honestly, I won't ask for a single other thing, not even the stockings, if you'll let me get the sweater. I need one worst way, and it's a crime not to take advantage of that sale." She thrust an accusing elbow under her parent's nose. "Pipe that thin place, will you? It'll be a hole first thing you know. You don't want to see me in rags, do you?" She waited for a sign of surrender. A full minute passed. Then the mother said uncertainly:

"If I do let you get the sweater, Doris, please understand that it's only because the one you have on is getting shabby, not because I approve of your losing your head over bargain sales. Now, will you promise me—"

The worktable was overturned in the mad rush of gratitude. "Mumsy, you're a good old scout!" The despised sweater hurtled through the air and lay in a crumpled pink heap. "Thank goodness I needn't wear that old ruin another minute! Where's your purse, mother? I want to meet Irene at Klein's at five. Why, what's the matter? What makes you look at me like that?"

"Doris, where did you get that waist?"

"At the Florentine Shoppe. Isn't it a peach?" She turned slowly round.

"Did you ever see such handwork? Just look at the daisies on the yoke. It cost nine dollars, reduced from twelve-fifty. Where's your purse, mother? I've got to beat it."

"That settles it, Doris," the mother said firmly. "I'm not going to encourage you in any more extravagance. You had no business to buy that expensive blouse; it's ridiculous."

for a schoolgirl! No, don't coax me. My mind's made up." She bit off a needleful of black cotton, carefully avoiding her daughter's eye.

Contrary to her expectation, there was no argument, merely a look that overflowed with reproach. Doris went to the telephone, and presently the mother heard:

"That you, Irene?... No, I can't come. It's all off.... Yes, I know, but she says she won't give it to me. Of course I need it worst way, but what's the use?... Oh, cut it out, Irene, it's all off, I tell you!" The click of the disconnected telephone chimed in with a disconsolate sob.

The mother got up suddenly and went over to the despised sweater. She picked it up and examined the worn elbow. "I can mend that in two minutes, dear," she said, with a consoling pat on the blonde head half buried in the sofa pillows. A sob answered her; then another. She sighed and laid the sweater down again.

"Doris," she said gently, "you'll find my purse in the left-hand back corner of my top bureau drawer."

Vermin Are Expensive.

Here's a neat little cost-of-production fact from the Animal Husbandry Division: Lice add a cent a pound to the cost of producing pork; that is, it costs $4 more to produce a lousy 400-pound hog than to raise one of the same size free of these parasites. This is the way they found it out:

They took 24 lousy hogs and divided them into two lots as nearly equal as to quality of animals as possible. The two lots were fed and cared for identically the same, except that one was treated to prevent lice. At the end of the fattening period it was found that the pork put on by the lousy animals cost a cent more for every pound than that added by the pen free from "cooties." And keeping hogs free from lice is not an expensive operation.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Make Your Dreams Come True

Fond parents dream of a bright future for their children.

They dream of the literary and musical education they are going to give their daughter, and of the high position she will take in her sphere of womanhood.

They dream of the education they are going to give their son and vision him some day as a clergyman, a famous lawyer, an eminent physician, a prominent financier, or a captain of industry.

But to make these dreams come true —or even partly true—requires foresight, planning and money.

To provide the money what plan so wise as to buy Victory Bonds for each child?

Home, Sweet Home

A wanderer stood in the darkened street, looking through the window at a happy family within. The scene pictured the longing in his soul for the home he did not have.

The man slipped away unseen, and one day wrote a song—the song of his soul. And this song became immortal; the most beautiful and pathetic heart-song that the world has ever known.

The man was John Howard Payne, and the song is "Home, Sweet Home."

Fat Turkeys Make Fat Pocketbooks.

Turkeys that are fat when marketed bring the best prices and, if the fattening is done in a systematic way, generally the largest profits.

Different methods are employed in fattening turkeys. The majority of growers prefer to feed two-year-old corn. This is given them from November 1 up to killing time.

Some breeders get more satisfaction from feeding one-third oats with two-thirds corn, and occasionally a meal of cornmeal mush. It is claimed that white-flint corn will fatten turkeys more readily and that the flesh will be of finer quality than when yellow corn is fed.

Turkeys must have liberty even while fattening, but if given regularly two meals a day they will not be inclined to roam. If they are confined they will lose appetite.

The market demand is for medium-sized carcasses that are plump and fat. Very large turkeys do not sell so quickly. After the holidays birds weighing from eight to ten pounds sell best.

Only well-fattened stock should be slaughtered; there is no profit in marketing poor stuff. Food must be withheld for twenty-four hours prior to killing, so that the crop and entrails will be empty, thus lessening the anger of spoiling. Hens sell best in market.

When killing, tie the feet together and hang the fowl on a pole. Cut the throat and, after thorough bleeding, dry-pick the feathers. Let those of the head and wings remain. As soon as dressed plunge the carcass into hot water, and then into cold, to give the skin a fresher look.

Another method, one generally adopted by the English and Continental poulterers, is by dislocation of the neck. The legs of the bird are grasped in the left hand, the back of the bird being upward and the crown of the head in the hollow of the hand. The legs of the bird are held against the left hip, and the head against the right thigh or knee. In this position the head is strongly stretched and at the same time bent suddenly backward so as to dislocate the neck near its junction with the head. The bird is instantly killed, and plucking the feathers must be done at once.

Still another method is to hang the bird up by the legs, cross the wings to prevent struggling, and give a sharp blow on the back of the head with a stout piece of wood, which renders the bird insensible. Then insert the knife in the roof of the mouth, so as to pierce the brain, cutting it along the entire length. Let the bird hang by the legs for a few minutes to allow the blood to drain out. Plucking the feathers must be begun at once while the body is still warm. Feathers should be left on the neck about three inches from the head, and a few feathers on the tail and tips of wings; and care must be taken not to break the skin while plucking. Twist the wings on the back of the bird. As soon as the feathers are removed, the carcass should be hung up by the feet to cool—never hang by the head, for the

Which blade is yours?

You shave with the first blade—unless you use an AutoStrop Safety Razor.

Shaving causes a saw-like edge to form on the blade and the edge becomes dull. Stropping re-aligns the blade back to the original keenness. That's why the AutoStrop Razor has such a large sale. Because men realize that no razor can do good work without constant stropping.

Stropping—shaving—cleaning are done without removing the blade from the razor.

Poultry

The hen that lays must be in the best of condition, strong and vigorous. Her eyes must be bright and clear, of a prominent "shoe-button" appearance; the comb and wattles large and red; the bill short to medium in size; the distance between the bill and eye narrow; the head of good size.

The body of a laying hen must be well set, with good back capacity (which really is egg-bed capacity); broad bodies, with ribs wide spread, afford plenty of room for egg and digestive organs. The body should be solid; the birds should not be loose jointed, but compactly built. The legs should be set wide apart. The entire type should be neat and of the feminine order. There must be no physical defects nor deformities.

Heavy layers are up first in the morning, jumping from their roosts at the break of day, and going back only after it has become so dark that they are unable to pick up a bit of grain that might be hidden in the scratching litter.

The heaviest layers are also the heaviest eaters and drinkers. Their appetites and thirsts never seem to leave them, and their activity aids in digesting all the food they consume. The heavy layers can readily be picked by examining the crops while the fowls are on the roost at night—a method that has considerable merit.

Good layers are late molters, but a late molter with yellow in her earlobes in October is not a good layer; the earlobes should be white. Since the laying season ends when molting has well started, no great risks will be taken by marketing the early molters when more room is needed.

There is more activity and nervousness in a good layer than there is in a poor one, and yet they are more easily handled. In using trapsnets I have found my heaviest layers to be my tamest birds, and they always seem contented and happy. They show more friendliness, yet they are elusive, but entirely unlike the poor layers which are shy and scary, and which will yell like Indians upon being caught.

The Dairy

All feeders with horns should be dehorned before they are put on full feed.

Dehorning makes feeders more easily and safely handled and each animal has a better chance at the feeding trough. Also, dehorning avoids the bruised condition of the flesh and torn hides caused by cattle goring each other in the feed lots and in transit to markets, as well as excessive shrinkage in transit.

The most common method of dehorning is to saw the horns off. There are saws specially designed for the work.

Dehorning clippers are also used,

Cement Walks on the Farm

"You haven't very good walks out here in the country," I remarked to my country cousin, gingerly picking my way through the muddy barnyard as I accompanied him while he was doing his chores.

"No—not very good," he replied, smiling over the thought that I should expect to find walks on his farm.

And why not? Can any one think of one good reason why farm buildings should not be connected with walks? Why should there not be walks—cement walks preferably—from the house to the wood shed, to the chicken coop, to the hog pen, to the granary, etc. Thousands of trips between these places are made every year, dozens in a single day.

During the inspection of some hundreds of farms the writer has not yet seen a complete system of cement walks—or any other kind of walks—on a farm. As a rule the only walk extends from the front door of the house to the road, or from the side door to the driveway.

Every farmer understands how to mix cement and how to build things of it. The watering tank, the short driveway leading into the barn, the basement floor of the barn and the hog feeding pen all bear evidence of his familiarity with cement. Why, then, is nearly every farmer willing to plow especially where a large number of cattle are to be dehorned and where they are dehorned before the horn becomes hard and brittle. The chief objection to dehorning with the clippers is that thin or hard horns are sometimes crushed or splintered, resulting in a wound that heals slowly. This objection is partly overcome by using clippers that are constructed with two V-shaped blades which, when pressed together, bring four cutting edges against the horn.

The best time to dehorn is in late fall and early winter, or during the cool weather of spring. If the weather is cool there is very little danger of wounds becoming infested with screw worms. However, it is best to apply some fly repellent, such as pine tar or one of the coal-tar products to wounds.

Pure Bred Sheep.

Any sheep raiser who purchases a pure bred registered ram of any recognized breed recorded in the Canadian National Live Stock Records or eligible for such registration for use in his own flock, and who has not previously used a pure bred registered ram shall be entitled to the annual premium of $5.00 for two consecutive years provided he will comply with the regulations specified in Pamphlet No. 19 "Information Concerning the Policy Regarding Pure Bred Rams," issued by the Live Stock Branch, Ottawa. This pamphlet will be sent free upon application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. It has been decided that the best way to prove the value of pure bred rams is to help every sheep raiser, who has not previously used a pure bred ram, to use his own flock for demonstrating the value of this practice. Therefore the Dominion Department of Agriculture will grant to bona fide applicants who comply with the above-mentioned regulations a sum of $5.00 annually, for two years, for each pure bred registered ram. No individual sheep raiser shall be permitted to receive premiums for more than four rams. Regular forms to be used in making applications under this policy are to be found in the back of Pamphlet No. 19.

Cover the Tender Plants.

To prevent the winter-killing of valuable plants, they should be properly covered and at the proper time. Every winter many thousands of herbaceous plants—that is, plants which die down during the winter and come up again in the spring—are killed by improper covering. They should be covered as late as possible in the season, preferably after the ground has been frozen. A mulch of straw, leaves, or well-rotted manure will not only help the plants through the winter, but will give them a start in fertilizer value when growth begins next year. Plants which retain their foliage through the winter should be covered very lightly; a solid mat of material is likely to kill them.

Danger Signs.

Wherever gasoline is stored, danger signs should be posted on the doors, warning against the carrying of lights of any kind.

Health Talks

The Value of Good Cooking.

Nothing sweetens life, assures good temper, dissipates disease and preserves health so much as good substantial food, enticingly prepared and wholesomely cooked. Yet how many homes there are in which this belief is not held!

In these topsy-turvy times of ours, when many men are doing women's work and many women men's work, I was not surprised the other evening, at an industrial exhibit, to see a man cooking and serving a meal in demonstrating a small electrical stove. Indeed, it delighted me to see such highly developed culinary skill in a mere man.

For, although cooking is the job of the woman in a home, there are many bachelors, without a mother or other woman relative to help them, who could with impunity learn to cook and cook well,—instead of depending upon a restaurant for their meals, or perhaps a delicatessen store.

The person who appreciates the value of good cooking, has fewer ills than his neighbor who does not.

Questions and Answers.

My daughter, 19 years of age, had influenza and now her lungs are affected. Our doctor ordered her to a mountain farm. After two months there, she became so homesick that I had to bring her home. She was fatigued and came back a nervous wreck. At home she seemed to improve at first, but she has constant fits of coughing and spits up blood. Is there a cure? This state has been trailing on, now, for six months.

Answer—Your letter exhibits a sad aspect of that most pathetic of all diseases—tuberculosis. How often homesickness, and like emotions, retard the cure! In such a case as your daughter's, it is just as well that she should have left the sanatorium, no matter how excellent that institution undoubtedly was. The well-managed sanatorium is by far the best place for the tuberculosis cure; but if there is so debilitating an emotion as homesickness in evidence, the home were a better place. Your daughter at any rate acquired the methods and habits essential to the successful treatment, and these should be most faithfully practiced at home. All the sanatoria in existence could accommodate only five per cent. of the tuberculosis sufferers in the world, and many of the rest do get well if they are obedient to their physicians and do nothing else in life than "to labor to get well." Information regarding the management of this disease in the home, is being mailed you.

Save the Old Sacks.

Old sacks lying around get to be something of a nuisance. If stored in the right place the time may come when they are real handy.

Ripped apart and shaken out well, they make good blankets to throw over the cows at milking time. They may be sewed together so that they will come far enough to protect the legs.

An old sack is a good thing to wipe off the horses with when they come in all wet and chilly. Get clear down to the fetterlocks and up as far as the tips of the ears. Be careful when working round the ears. Some horses do not like it at all.

I have thrown an old sack over my shoulders when going from the barn to the house in a storm. Better to keep an old coat at the barn for that purpose, however.

If you ever get stuck in the mud with the auto, just put a few old sacks in front of the hind wheels. Usually the machine will walk right out over these. Some people carry a few old sacks under the seat just for use when caught in the mud. They take up little space and serve a good purpose.

In threshing time if we run short of grain sacks, the old bags come in handy. There is a temptation to fill them too full, however.

An Inexpensive Mash Hopper.

A self-feeder for pens that costs practically nothing, never clogs up, and never wastes feed is somewhat of a boon, according to my experience. It consists merely of a light wooden box about four inches deep suspended four or five inches from the floor, and a piece of one-inch-mesh poultry netting cut to fit loosely into it. This wire is to be put on top of the feed. It settles down as the feed is consumed, and effectually prevents any from being thrown out. If a piece of heavier wire is bound in around the edge, this added weight will keep the piece of poultry netting in place even when the box is nearly full. The idea in having the whole thing suspended is to keep the hens out of the box, which it does.

These feeders are so inexpensive that there is no excuse for not using enough of them to give even the more timid hens access to feed at all times, thus doing away with one of the chief causes of lowered egg yield in large flocks.

Concrete Floors Return Cost.

By increasing the value of manure produced, concrete floors for feeding stables will return their cost in about one year. The extra crop returns from manure kept on concrete floors is due to the soluble plant food saved.

The cost of concreting floors generally amounts to about $5 an animal in the ordinary feeding stable, and the saving in manure is equal to this amount of every 1,000 pounds in live weight of steers or cattle fed for the year, as compared with animals fed on earth floors.

Concrete floors also make it easier to provide sanitary places for animals. The stitching gave way in one of the straps of the harness. If we had not had a hand riveter, with a good assortment of rivets on hand, we would have been compelled to make a trip to the shop. As it was, five minutes fixed the strap and business went on all right.

Fertilizing New Clover Seeding.

It is not so very common to fertilize new clover seeding, but the results obtained seem to indicate that this is an excellent plan to use. At first thought this may seem to be an unnecessary practice because clover is planted almost as much for the purpose of fertilizing the soil, principally by gathering nitrogen, as it is to obtain hay.

There are three good reasons for fertilizing: First, a light covering of manure greatly helps to prevent the young seedling from being killed out by frost. To a great extent it prevents the ground from heaving. Second, a comparison of the nitrogen-gathering nodules of the roots of fertilized clover not fertilized shows that the nodules on the fertilized seedling are from eight to ten times as large as the nodules on the unfertilized seedling. Third, a much larger crop of hay is insured, not only because a good stand of seeding is obtained, but because the young plants have a supply of plant food. Clover, like all other plants, should have plant food.

The manure should be applied lightly in the fall or early winter following the spring sowing.

A small wire hair brush will free the carpet sweeper brush of hair, lint, threads and string.

Onions should be stored in a cool, dry and airy place. A close, damp and warm atmosphere will make the onions soft, excite them into growth and cause them to rot.

GENERAL DEBILITY FOLLOWING INFLUENZA

Strength Can Only be Regained by Enriching the Blood.

Following a wide spread epidemic of influenza, general debility is on the increase, and its effects may be noticed in the worn listless appearance of so many of the men and women you meet. Influenza always leaves behind it impaired vitality, and with the modern conditions of life that use up nerve force so rapidly, general debility becomes one of the most common maladies. The symptoms of debility vary, but weakness is always present. There is poor digestion, languor, weak, aching back, wakefulness at night, often distressing headaches and a feeling of fatigue. These symptoms indicate impure and impoverished blood. It is significant of nearly every attack of influenza that it is followed by anaemia and debility.

For all such run-down conditions, new blood is the most reliable cure. Sufferers should at once begin to make thin blood rich and red with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Under a fair treatment with this medicine they will realize more and more the health-restoring influence of good rich blood, and how this new blood brings a feeling of new strength and increased vitality. Proof is given in the case of Mrs. G. Robertson, Wingham, Ont., who says:—"When the Spanish influenza spread over our town I happened to be one of the first attacked, and the attack was a very severe one, and worse still, the after effects of the trouble left me in continuous misery. I had severe pains in my side, felt low-spirited, and with no ambition whatever. My head ached almost continually, my eyes felt heavy, and pimples broke out on my face. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking them for a time I felt like my old self, able to do my housework, and feeling well and strong. I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the serious after-effects of influenza as I am sure they will restore all sufferers to good health."

You can get these Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dining Out.

It is a real education to eat away from home. The housekeeper herself enjoys the opportunity to taste foods prepared by others and even familiar foods take on a new zest when served and fixed by some one else. The proof of this is for one only to think of the picnic, breakfast on the vine-screened porch, or the pleasure of a meal in some well-known and perhaps famous eating place. It is really good for us to eat away from home once in a while, for we have a chance to observe the way other people do and how they serve.

One woman who had been held closely beneath her own roof by a growing family was astonished to discover that there was any other way of serving carrots except cut in thin slices and buttered. She had read of creamed carrots and the rules for preparing them, but being somewhat lacking in imagination, she had never thought it worth while trying any of these. So when she took dinner with an old school friend one day, she was quite delighted with a big dish of tatty peas served to her—a well-seasoned mixture of green peas and tiny cubes of carrots.

She had grown just a little careless, too, in training her children in table manners and in permitting them to interrupt and be over-demanding in their likes and dislikes. When she saw how well trained her friend's children were and how much more comfortable it was for every one concerned, she returned to her own home determined to turn over a new leaf.

People who live in remote places, or who stay alone by themselves a great deal are almost sure to become eccentric. Little by little they drop the small niceties which are called forth by actual mingling and intercourse with the outside world, and after a time life becomes a burden. As soon as we wall ourselves in, we lose all chance of progress and get into ruts. Plan deliberately to eat away from home occasionally, and let every such opportunity prove a distinct benefit.

Flamingo is a Queer Bird.

The flamingo, one of the queerest of birds, sits on its nest while standing straight up, says a writer in the New York Sun. The birds build their nests in shallow ponds, where there is much mud. This they scrape together, making little hillocks, like small islands appearing out of the water about a foot and a half from the bottom. They make the foundations broad, and leave a small opening, or hollow pit, at the top, where they deposit their two eggs, the number the flamingo always lays. To hatch them the flamingo stands over the nest, with its body just above the eggs. It couldn't put its long, awkward legs inside the nest, and so it sits on the hillock would jeopardize the eggs.

Young flamingoes do not fly readily, although they run very fast. Once they learn to fly they show speed and resemble sky rockets, with their brilliant red plumage.

Flamingoes were first noticed in 1683 by Dampier, on the Cape Verde Islands. Ever since they have been hunted to provide feathers for millady's hats.

Canning Poultry.

Just at this season, many poultry keepers are culling their flocks, preparatory to the winter laying season, and the "slacker" hens are being disposed of. Many housewives find that it pays to can them for an emergency meal or for use next summer.

Canning of poultry is not radically different from the canning of fruits or vegetables, the same general principles being followed. Among the general rules, however, are these: Birds should be killed and dressed the same day of canning; they should be singed, washed, cut up, and cooled as for table use; new rubbers should always be used; covers should be fitted and tested; the time of sterilization is important and should not be shortened a minute (count time after water around cans begins to boil). The length of sterilization varies from one and one-half to three hours, according to the method used.

Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lock-jaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Singeing Instead of Scalding.

Why worry about having the water just right for scalding hogs? We don't. After the hogs are killed we take a rag that is partly filled with gasoline and rub the upper side of each carcass. When we have rubbed on about a half pint of gasoline, we use a torch and ignite the gasoline. The flame singes the hair from the carcass. Then we turn the carcass over and singe the other side. It takes about a pint of gasoline for each carcass. Do not pour the gasoline; rub it on. After singeing the carcasses, scrape them just as if they had been scalded; then wash them.

One of the biggest advantages of singeing is this: We can rub the gasoline into the depressions and wrinkles on the head—into corners where it is almost impossible to scrape. One of our neighbors uses a gasoline blow torch for these corners about the head.—S. R.

Garden cleaning in the fall is as important in its way as housecleaning in the spring, whether flowers or vegetables make up the garden plot. The achievement of garden cleanliness at this season will often do much toward insuring healthiness and thriftiness of plants during the next growing season. The foliage and branches of plants which have been attacked by disease or badly infested by insect pests should be cleaned up especially well and burned.

FOGGY?

If Bilious, Constipated or Headachy take "Cascarets."

Tomorrow the sun will shine for you. Everything will seem clear, rosy and bright. Your system is filled with liver and bowel poison which keeps your skin sallow, your stomach upset, your head foggy and aching. Your meals are turning into poison, gases and acids. You cannot feel right. Don't stay bilious or constipated. Feel splendid always by taking Cascarets occasionally. They act without griping or inconvenience. They never sicken you like Calomel, Salts, Oil or nasty, harsh pills. They cost so little too—Cascarets work while you sleep.

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"

For Colds, Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, and for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuritis, take Aspirin marked with the name "Bayer" or you are not taking Aspirin at all.

Accept only "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in an unbroken "Bayer" package which contains complete directions. Then you are getting real Aspirin—the genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years. Now made in Canada. Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monocacetic Acid of Salicylic Acid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer Manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company, will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

The first anniversary of Armistice Day was marked officially, when at 11 o'clock the municipal power was turned off for two minutes, consequently all activities ceasing accordingly. It was also loyally observed by the school children, who marched up and down the Main streets of the village, each one displaying the good old Flag which just one year ago had played so important a part in declaring the freedom of the world which they this day enjoyed. In the afternoon the school enjoyed a moving picture treat, and there the thoughtfully arranged program of the day ended, making a good and lasting impression on the rising generation.
