The Morrisburg Leader

LXXXVI, NO. 7. MORRISBURG, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 13th, 1948. $2.00 PER YEAR; SINGLE COPIES, 5c

Letter To The Editor

Editor, Morrisburg Leader,

Dear Sir—In a letter appearing in your issue of February 6th, the Municipal Council feel that a grave injustice was done to the volunteer members of the Morrisburg Fire Department. The members of the Fire Department have never refused to go anywhere they were needed at any time and are a group of self-sacrificing men who give their time and ability unstintingly, and we feel that if a little mor e co-operation were given by the public, the efficiency of the department would be improved. The statement was made that the firemen could not operate the pumps; this is not true, as four men besides the fire chief are able to operate any fire fighting equipment owned by the village.

Please note that the fire siren will be blown every Wednesday noon commencing Feb. 18th, 1948.

(Signed)
Reeve and Council.

Ed. Note:—In last week's letter to the editor, there was no such statement made as "that the firemen could not operate the pumps". If the reeve and council, or the firemen, would indicate to the public what exactly they mean by "a little more co-operation", (other than increased salaries and grants), the editor has no doubt that the public would be only too happy to supply it.

Editor, Morrisburg Leader,

Dear Mr. Laurin—I think my subscription has expired so am sending you three good American dollars. I see Canada needs American dollars; every little bit helps.

Up to receiving the last copy of The Leader to reach me, II was so happy to learn that you were going to have an Old Boys Re-union in Morrisburg this summer, but I see that it has all failed. I sure would have made the trip so as to be there for the happy occasion.

I was letting my mind drift along different lines in hopes that I could offer you some suggestions which might help a little. One suggestion was that we should have a "Battle of Crysler's Farm day" where Old boys and dignitaries could render some orations.

I hope you can see some way of making the event materialize this summer. Regards to all the "Old Timers". Sincerely,

G. R. DAFOE,
Miami, Florida, U.S.A.

Ed. Note: We have also received a letter from a subscriber in New York who offered to organize all the ex-Morrisburg residents in that metropolis for a pilgrimage here this summer.

B. C. GARDNER NEW PRESIDENT BANK OF MONTREAL

B. C. GARDNER, M. C.
who was appointed executive vice president of the Bank of Montreal last December, has been elected the president and chief executive officer of the bank, succeeding the late Geo. W. Spinney, C.M.G.

Mr. Gardner, a native of Bristol, Eng., after serving five years with Stuckey's Banking Company, began his career in this country with the former Bank of British North America, which merged with the Bank of Montreal in 1913. He held important positions in branches in various parts of Canada from British Columbia to the Maritimes and was, for a period, manager at St. John's Nfld., and later at St. John, N. B., prior to his transfer to the head office in Montreal as superintendent of foreign branches. In 1932 he went to New York as second agent and later took charge of this important office.

In 1935, Mr. Gardner returned to Montreal as an assistant general manager, becoming general manager in 1942. He was appointed executive vice president at the bank's 130th annual meeting last December.

From August 1915 to 1918, he served with the Canadian Expedition ary Force, was twice wounded and was awarded the Military Cross for "Conspicuous Gallantry and devotion to duty during an attack on the enemey trenches in Avion". Mr. Gardner combines a broad background of banking experience with a lengthy record of community service. A director of the Royal Trust Company and a past president of the Canadian Banker's Association, he is a member of the executive committee of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, a life governor of the Montreal General Hospital, and a member of the Board of Governors of Ridley College, St. Catharines, Ont.

HOCKEY NEWS

The Morrisburg Juniors finished their regular schedule Monday nite when they trimmed Cardinal 11-2. Ronnie Casselman ended up as high scorer for the locals this season with 37 goals to his credit, and Wes Stitt is high man on assists with 33. Ronnie has a total of 53 points, Wes 51. Bruce Stitt 42, and Jack Deeks is in fourth position with a total of 30 points. All together the Krafts have a grand total of 249 points. They have played 16 league games and have won them all, have scored 123 goals and have had 27 scored against them.

Morrisburg also played two exhibition games this week. They took an easy win from Cornwall West End Eagles by a 9-4 count and lost a close one to Gananoque last nite 6-5. The Gananoque Club is smooth and very fast and seemed to baffle the locals with their smooth passes. Morrisburg started out well but fell down badly in the second period.

On Monday the locals go ahead in to the district playoffs for the Citizen Shield when they journey to Alexandria. Little is known up here about the Alexandria team, but you can be sure that they won't be any pushover. On Wednesday nite, Feb. 18, Alexandria will return to Morrisburg and this game will be a real battle. Either Morrisburg or Alexandria will have to win this one to go on. Should the locals take Alexandria they will go ahead to meet either Inkerman or the Cornwall Crusaders.

A bus has been chartered to go to Alexandria on Monday evening. The return fare is only $1.75 and tickets may be obtained from Don Beckstead. You may make reservations for a seat on the bus up to monday noon. Come to Alexandria and cheer the boys on to their first win in the Citizen Shield play-offs.

On Tuesday nite the Dept. of Highways team trimmed Pyramid Tigers 6—1, and on Wednesday nite Main St. Maulers again defeated the Locke Street Leopards 6-4. Fans who saw this game say it was the best of the season in the Town League, and the same two teams have been invited to play as an added attraction on the evening of the ice carnival to be held shortly. For this game the Maulers had the assistance of Bill Parrington, the Junior Krafts goalie, in the nets.

Leopards also introduced a new player in Bill Strader, formerly of Iroquois, who is now working here.

NEWLYWEDS HONOURED

On Friday evening in the I.O.O.F. Hall, Williamsburg, there was a large crowd who gathered to honour Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Whitteker (nee Audrey B. Casselman) on the occasion of their recent marriage.

During the evening's programme of dancing the couple was called to the front of the hall when Lloyd Casselman read an address in which the bride and groom were congratulated and wished many years of health and happiness, as they travelled down life's pathway together. At the same time they were presented with a miscellany of gifts and a purse of money on behalf of their friends.

After the bride and groom had expressed their sincere thanks and appreciation for the gifts and the good wishes extended, all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows". Later refreshments were served and dancing was again resumed.

THE CASE OF LANDLORD VS TENANT

Living-Room, Library and Sleeping Apartment All Complete—The above room, together with the kitchen and "semi-finished upper" floor, constitute the whole of the rented space in question. The floor is of cement, resting directly on the ground as there is no cellar underneath. Kitchen and garage—the latter used by the Landlord—are separated by a layer of corrugated tin and a layer of summer shutters. Tenant claims that $40 per month is too much for this accommodation in wintry weather.

Pity Poor Rentals Control People!

by Fergus Neall

On this page we tell, in picture and story, of one of the many disputes continually arising between Landlords and Tenants over a piece of rented property, as illustrative of the sort of case on which our Rentals Control Administration has to arbitrate. Below follow some of the statements made by this particular Landlord, each followed by the Tenant's comment regarding same. Personally, we're only glad that we don't have to decide between the two.

Landlord's Claim. It is a story-and-a-half brick-clad building 17' by 50' with one room 17' by 17' feet reserved for the owner's car.
Tenant's Comment. He doesn't tell about leaving those big double garage doors wide open even in sub zero weather—or of the icy breezes that seep through the second-hand corrugated iron partition, to say nothing of those healthful gas and oil fumes from his car.

Landlord; The top floor is only semi-finished.
Tenant; If "semi" means "half" that's about a 90% overstatement. See the picture of this "semi-finished upper floor"—I mean garret—which doesn't, however, show the daylight that comes through the roof in several spots.

Landlord; These living quarters were formerly occupied by a gardner.
Tenant; From the looks of the place that gardener's name must have been Adam after he got chased out of Eden. There appeared to be the dirt of at least several centuries, and the whole place, excepting for the living room had apparently been used as a catchall for the whole neighborhood's junk.

Landlord; There is no plumbing.
Tenant; I'll say there isn't. I had to partition off a corner of the kitchen to make a bathroom, where I installed a chemical toilet—which I had to purchase.

Landlord; Drinking water has to be carried from the main dwelling—the tenant of his own volition has recently been having water transported.
Tenant; During the Summer I had the privilege of using an outside tap sticking through the wall of the landlord's house; but when the danger of freezing came along, this was shut off without notice. Rather than dig a well on another man's property I bought two 250-gallon tanks, had them put in the living room, and have water hauled at a cost of $5.00 per month.

Landlord; In addition, hydro has been supplied from the main house. This, however, may have to be discontinued as the load at times is too heavy for existing equipment.
Tenant; Three 60-watt light bulbs and the radio represent all the electricity we use, having even spent $100 for an ice box rather than use our frigidaire and so put extra load on the very old wiring. However, in November, the landlord put about 100 chickens in a small building not far from ours, and has more chickens in still another nearby outbuilding—and has placed electric lights in both, with electricity supplied from an outlet on the rear of our "house". But maybe, at the present price of poultry, chickens are more important than humans.

Landlord; The tenant has the right to free use of the fruit and to the use of any desired land for a garden. The tenant has further been given use of free wood, of which there is considerable along the fences.
Tenant; In May we were told that if we wanted apples we should just help ourselves. But when the apples did appear I was told to see that my family touched nothing but windfalls. There is much wood, semi-decayed and otherwise, lying around. I was told at one time to help myself, but declined with thanks because coal is the only thing I can burn in either the stove or the fireplace basket. As for the garden, I was originally offered a plot which I couldn't find time to use—and in the Fall it was turned into a chicken-run for the landlord's chickens.

Landlord; It was understood when the tenant took over the premises he would make certain improvements and in consideration would receive greatly reduced rental during the winter months. These improvements were not made, but instead the tenant has, in a measure demolished the premises.
Tenant; A few of my "demolitions". Kitchen and garage are separated by one layer of corrugated tin and one layer of summer shutters nailed together to make a wall. I plastered the shutter side, which is toward the garage, with asbestos fibre and cement in an effort to eliminate gas and oil fumes, also chilly breezes later on. The east wall of the kitchen, which is formed by an unused garage door, I insulated with asbestos fibre. I painted the concrete floor of the kitchen with plastic paint. I never put a wood floor in this section, due to the fact that the cost of putting the building in any reasonable condition was prohibitive unless a reasonable rental was offered for at least five years—which was the original understanding when I took the place. In the kitchen I built a 12' drainboard complete with sink—supplied by myself and dug a pit some 15' outside the place to which I ran a disposal line. But what's the use—I spent approximately $400 of my own money in improvements, and now am told I ruined the place.

Great interest has been aroused throughout Canada by the announcement from Ottawa that Rent Controls on residential properties are likely to be continued indefinitely.

Only naturally, perhaps, many owners of such properties are more or less up in arms. "Why should we be singled out?" they ask. "Why not let the Law of Supply and Demand bring things to their proper level, the same as they are doing with food and clothing."

On this page we illustrate an example of why it is probably best for such restrictions to be continued, at least until the Housing Shortage is less acute. This is an actual case which recently came to our notice, and interesting too as showing the sort of problem our Rentals Control Administration is constantly forced to try and straighten out.

Worried Veteran

Early this January a young veteran of our acquaintance came to us asking for advice.

"For a while, after I came back from overseas, my wife, my 8-year-old boy and myself lived in a couple of rooms in a city roominghouse," he said. "But we wanted a place of our own; and in answer to an advertisement rented a place on the outskirts of the Village of BLANK. (Ed. NOTE; As settlement of the case is still pending, any names used are fictitious.)

"The rent was to be $40 a month, with the distinct understanding that if, by any chance, we stayed on for the Winter there was to be a substantial reduction. The landlord failed to keep any of the promises he made. I spent hundreds of dollars of my own trying to make the place at least liveable; and I'd spend even more if I wasn't afraid of getting thrown out on my ear—which might happen at any time, as the landlord wants to sell the property and as I haven't any lease, I understand that a new owner could turn me out. Now, we're into the Winter. My request for rent reduction has been absolutely refused; and although I've searched for forty miles each way from the city where my job is, I can't find any place to move into.

"So now, what should I do? Shoot the landlord—or just sit still and think what a sucker I am?"

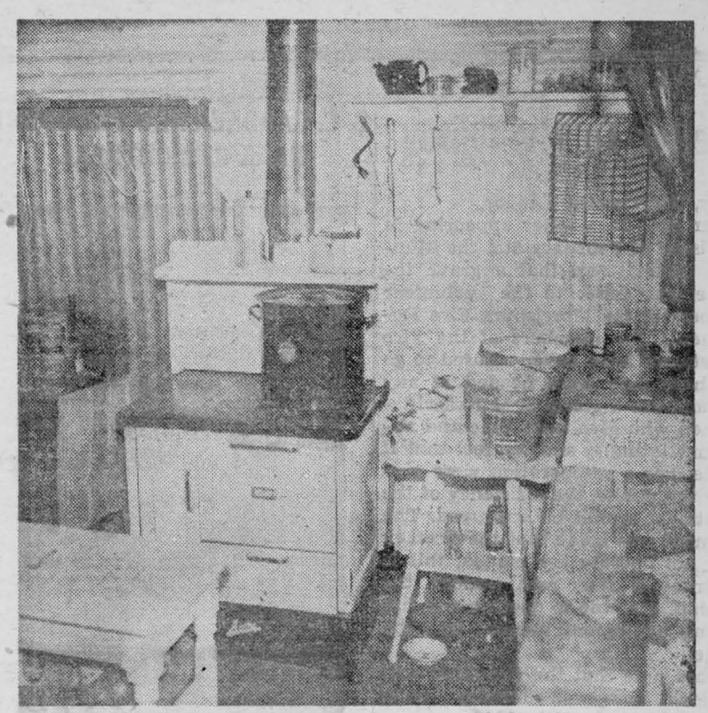

Good Advice

As is always our custom in such cases, we advised him to take the matter to the proper authorities—to the Rentals Administration in the city where he worked. At first he scoffed at the idea. "I know those Government Departments" he said. "I'll get a letter saying that the matter has been carefully filed, and they'll probably get around to attending to it some time in 1953 or thereabouts."

We persuaded him, however, to do as we advised; and the sceptical young veteran was astonished—pleasantly—at the speed with which things started moving. Within a matter of days he had been asked to write stating his case fully and freely. The landlord had been ordered to tell his side of it; and at the present time of writing there promises to be a prompt settlement of the matter—possibly before this little tale sees the light of print.

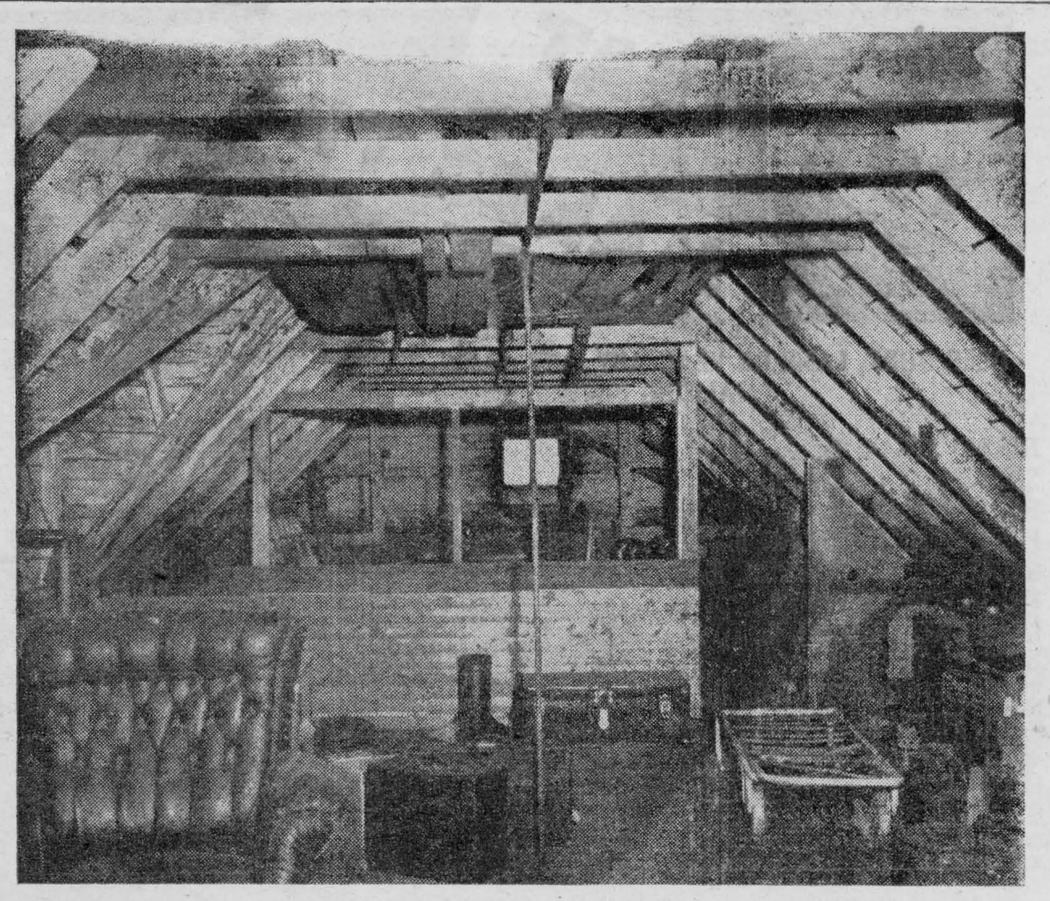

When that settlement does come, we shall report what it was. In the meantime, some of the landlord's claims—with the tenant's comments on same appended—may be of interest as illustrating how widely two different viewpoints of an identical matter may vary. As the old saying put it, "It all depends on where you sit."

But, as stated earlier, our principal object in commenting on such a typical case at such length is this—to try and show that if more people, instead of indulging in useless complaints and empty wailings against the "Powers That Be" would really make use of those Powers, the better it would be for them.

"Everything's Up-To-Date in Kansas City"—or Kitchen, Bedroom and Bath all in one. With no plumbing or running water available, the tenant had to instal a chemical toilet in one corner of the kitchen, which is also used as sleeping quarters by the 8-year-old boy. BELOW, an outside view of what the landlord describes as a storey-and-a-half detached brick-clad building. The garage door shown is commonly left open, even in zero weather.

Semi-Finished Upper Floor or Unfinished Garret?—In telling his side of the story to the Rentals Control people the Landlord described the above as a "semi-finished upper floor". The tenant claims that this is a gross exaggeration of the actual condition. What is your opinion? This picture, like all the others, is from an actual photograph of the dwelling involved in the case.

Sports-And One Thing or Another

By FRANK MANN HARRIS

The Winter Olympic Games have brought to light several highly interesting facts, a few which might be mentioned being — (a) that a boy brought up in Canada is quite liable to be a better hockey player than one who has grown to manhood in Ital (b) that countries such as Norway and Finland in some mysterious manner manage to develop more skilled skiers than lands situated in the tropics; and (c) that while it may not be absolutely essential for a champion figure skater (feminine) to have an eye-filling face and "built", still it doesn't seem to hinder any.

Now all these may be very amazing pieces of information — the sort of things nobody would have figured out by the light of pure reason, or without the proof of actual experience. Still, we doubt if they are worth all the money the Games cost, to say nothing of the backbiting, childish squabbles and ill-feeling they caused. The Swiss gentleman, who opened the proceedings by saying what wonderful things the Olympics are for "furthering International goodwill" certainly must have led a cloistered existence up to now. What a shock he's going to get when somebody tells him about the birds and bees and flowers, and other basic facts of life!

The English girl—a recent arrival to Canada — who put the blast on Toronto by calling it a "dead town" and several other unpleasant things —has been properly reproved and put in her place by the Press of that fair city, many columns of supposedly valuable newspaper space being devoted to telling her where to head in. How taken back and abashed the poor girl must have felt after reading it! Still, now we come to think of it, probably not nearly so much as she might had nobody paid her the slightest attention. As one of the greatest publicity-getters of all time used to put it, "I don't care what you say about me so long as YOU SAY SOMETHING, and get my name spelled right."

The theory that "the customer is always right" can be carried too far in any line of business — and nowhere is this truer than in the business of Sport. Too much rowdyism can sicken or even kill a great sport more quickly than anything else — a shining example is Field Lacrosse — and the hockey moguls, by placing too great emphasis on the fighting qualities of their hired help, may be setting off a chain reaction that they'll someday wish they'd brought under control ere it was too late.

"A wild brawl broke out on the ice and overflowed into the rail seats as the spectators struck out at the players." "Close by a dozen players surged around shoving elbows and fists into each other's faces." "It was during this final brawl of the evening that a live bullet was flung on the ice by a spectator." These are quoted from the account of a single game taking place in Detroit not so long ago.

Now we realize that the fights which take place on the ice among hockey players are about 95% phony — a lot of grabbing, tugging and hauling that doesn't mean a thing, so far as actual damage is concerned. It's the effect, not on one another, but on the cash customers, that's important. For there's a type of sports fan who positively shouldn't be allowed to witness anything more nerve-agitating than tiddlywinks — and generally he's the type of guy with money or influence enough to wangle seats right down in front.

Spectators who take punches at enemy players have no business being at any sort of game. A man who would throw a live shell — even a .22 — would, if he happened to have one handy, heave a bomb or grenade. Yet seldom is anything done to these wild-eyed wombats, who can spoil an entire evening for everybody within hearing or seeing distance of them. You see them back in the very same seats at the very next game, carrying on in the same old way. They should, after one warning, be barred for life — or else told to confine their attentions to wrestling, where a certain amount of rowdyism among the pew-holders is part of the game.

It Wasn't Mutual

The late John Barrymore was out walking one afternoon, when he saw a certain notorious snob approaching. He tried to avoid the man, but the other singled him out with the hearty greeting: "Good afternoon, Barrymore. You are positively the only person I've met today worth stopping to speak to."

"Really?" rejoined Barrymore, "Then you're more fortunate than I am."

Preparing For a Different Sort of World—The world our children are growing into is vastly different from the one our grandparents knew—with distances shrinking daily and London, Ontario hardly a "sleeper jump" from London, England. The National Film Board picture TOMORROW'S CITIZENS is a vivid illustration of what our educational authorities are doing toward preparing our boys and girls to understand the problems which face them.

"Tomorrow's Citizens"

"Tomorrow's Citizens", a feature film on the Ontario rural film programmes this winter, is in many ways an answer to the spate of questions which has been raised ever since the first atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, namely, "how are we preparing ourselves for the atomic age?"

For most of us, of course, life has continued in much the same manner as it did prior to the atomic attack on Hiroshima. But, nevertheless, we are aware that a new form of energy has been released, which, combined with other scientific discoveries of the past decade, is capable of transforming the world completely — for better or worse.

For the most part, the question concerns our children and the manner in which they are being educated. Are they being made aware of the possibilities of the future?

"Tomorrow's Citizens" takes a look at the classrooms of to-day, and decides that a beginning is certainly being made. Take maps, for instance. The old public school geography book maps showed the countries and continents in a flattened out form, and you were taught to think of the distances between places in terms of railway or steamship miles. The net result was that most countries seemed remote and not worth bothering about.

New Kind Of Maps

But a revolution in map making has been under way for some years now in a quiet sort of way. Map makers like Richard Edes Harrison are featured in "Tomorrow's Citizens" as showing the world in terms of airways: the airways which in future will be travelled by jet and rocket propelled aircraft. This reduces the distances between countries very startlingly. People we thought of as living on the other side of the world are now next door neighbors.

Maps are drawn, too, from other new points of view. For instance in place of the flattened projections of the "Old World" and "New World", and the "Eastern Hemisphere" and "Western Hemisphere", we can now look at the world from the north pole, and note a new relationship between the major countries of the world. From such a map we can get an entirely different view of the geography and world relations.

What else do the children of today see in their classrooms? They are making the acquaintance of many new technical advances which are transforming the world. Of course they may not understand these all at once, but they become familiar with them. Also, they are being made aware of the communications which link one country or continent with another. Through pictures, films, and actual tours where these are possible, the children see the great ships and railways and airways which form the basis of world commerce and the interchange of ideas and customs.

Shrinking World

But there is more to the business of education to-day than this, as people who are worried about the future will maintain. Besides becoming aware of new inventions and technical processes, the citizens of the future must be given a sense of social responsibility. This is commonsense for a world that is shrinking—a world which finds all nations on each others' front and back door steps.

The Test

The family was having company for dinner. Julie, aged five, laid down her spoon, looked at her mother, and said: Mommy, there's a hair in my soup."

"Hush, dear," implored the embarrassed mother, trying to cover the situation, "it's just a crack in your plate."

Julie picked up her spoon, stirred dubiously a few times. "Mommy," she insisted, "can a kwack move?"

Voice of Experience

On a blackboard in front of a small Canadian business college the enterprising manager wrote in bold letters;

"Short course in Accounting for Women."

A little later in the day a crowd gathered before the board to read —and laugh over—a second line some knowing passer-by had added. It read:

"There is NO accounting for women."

PILES—Modern medical science has overcome ailments formerly thought impossible. Piles were considered one of them. That's nonsense today. The new Pyltone treatment has proven itself in thousands of the most stubborn cases. It gets results because it goes direct to the internal cause. Your first bottle (a liquid taken by mouth) shows you the difference, or that price refunded at once. All modern Druggists.

YOU can always profit with quality chicks. These are unusual times, but during our 24 years in the poultry business we have never seen a year when Tweddle chicks and good management didn't come out on top. The world shortage of food is alarming and the hen is a mighty important factor in this economic crisis. She is the most economical producer of meat as well as the producer of the closest thing to meat—the egg. Increased production cuts feed cost. Some of you can remember when poultry feed was dirt cheap but you had a lot of hens laying an average of only 90 eggs a year. Now, we have the 300-egg hen and lots of Tweddle customers are getting 200-egg averages and remember every extra egg cuts down the cost of feed per egg. The answer then is better poultry and hundreds of customers come back year after year to get those husky bred to lay and pay Tweddle Chicks. Send for free catalogue and pricelist. Tweddle Chick Hatcheries Limited, Fergus, Ontario.

'Hoot' Man

Now that Britain's railways are nationalized, the public wants that extra bit of service. One of the latest requests asks the engineer of the 6:20 a.m. Hastings-Ashford train:

"Would you be so good as to hoot as you go over the iron bridge just out of Rye station, as we rely on you to get my husband up for work?

"When you don't hoot, we are at a fix as we cannot buy an alarm clock anywhere.

"P.S.: My husband says 'not too loud' but I say 'blow like blazes'."

Railroad officials said the request was being "considered."

ALGONQUIN STORY

The above title pertains to a book recently published by the Department of Lands and Forests of Ontario which is well worth any reader's time. The book is available from the department at $2.00 per copy.

The address is: Department of Lands and Forests, Parliament Bldgs. Toronto, Ontario.

Following is a short review of the Algonquin Story.

What is the magic that gives Algonquin Park a unique place in the hearts of those who have camped on the shores of its lakes? What is there about the park that made To Thompson, Canada's foremost painter of the Northern Canadian scene, adopt it as his home? Perhaps it is the warm touch of living history, the presence of old time residents and rangers, with their stories of the Gilmour brothers fantastic lumber drive, or Grandpa Dennison's tragic encounter with the bear. Perhaps it lies in the mossy rotting logs of the old "camboose" camps.

Whatever the answer, the magic of the Park echoes through this book "Algonquin Story" is no ordinary story. Simply, unpretentiously, skillfully, Audrey Saunders has told the story of Algonquin Park. Snatches of reminiscence by gnarled old lumbermen: vivid little sketches of wildlife episodes: intimate anecdotes of Canada's great and humble, meeting as equals in a land where a man is simply himself—all these and more make it a book worth reading.

Are You Asking These Questions About Saving Electricity?

IS IT STILL NECESSARY TO SAVE ELECTRICITY?

Yes. Not nearly enough saving is yet being made, especially in the home. Result, for some time past several large industries have had their power supply cut off for lengthy periods in the 24 hours.

IS IT NECESSARY TO SAVE ONLY AT CERTAIN HOURS?

No, it is vital to save at ALL hours. While electricity cannot be stored, water that generates it can be stored. The water storage for the five Hydro plants in the Niagara area is provided by the Great Lakes. This assures a continuous flow of water sufficient to enable these plants to go all out 24 hours a day—still there is not enough power. In 48 other Hydro generating stations throughout Ontario the water supply must be very closely guarded—if too much electricity is demanded one day, the next day's power supply must suffer. This condition is aggravated by the abnormally low rain fall last Autumn.

MUST HOMES DO ALL THE SAVING?

Not by any means. ALL consumers must play their full part. Modified rationing has to some extent reduced the consumption of electricity in stores and by other commercial consumers, but still greater voluntary savings are urgently needed.

HOW CAN I SAVE MORE ELECTRICITY?

Don't leave lights burning in unoccupied offices. Turn idling motors off. Use range elements as short a time as possible. Turn off verandah and all other lights when not needed. Use electrically heated water sparingly. Do not use electric heaters or grates.

Synopsis

CHAPTER XXVI: Bartle asks a fabulous sum for the tobacco farms which Haskell refuses to consider. Haskell returns to the ranch house. There, during a meeting of the cattlemen, "El Caballero Rojo" suddenly appears.

CHAPTER XXVII

Statuesquely still, ominously silent, he let the sight of him sink into every man's mind before he moved a muscle.

Then he took two stiff steps forward, and the eyes visible above the red kerchief fastened themselves on Pete Haskell.

'You're boss here?" he demanded.

The veteran beefman had never known what real fear was in his life. And no man whose face was hidden by a scarlet neckerchief was going to spook him now.

"That's right, hombre," he said in a low, even friendly voice. "Was there something you wanted to see me about, maybe? I reckon you're the man they call El Caballero Rojo, right enough. Plumb glad to see you. Howdy."

The masked man gestured sharply.

"You've heard that the Aldman drying shed in Deep Water Valley was burned last night?" he snapped. "And that—"

"No!" Haskell's eyes widened, and he scratched his grizzled mop.

"And that Pop Aldman was shot down in cold blood—when he was not packing a gun?" The questions rapped on, toneless, insistent. "And that young Sam Aldman was murdered and nailed to Don Attero's Cross?"

"No!" Something accusing in that relentless fire of interrogation caught Haskell's ear, and slow, angry red dyed his broad, leathery face.

"Then you know all about it now!" snapped the scarlet-masked accuser. "And I don't expect you to admit that one of these men here right now obeyed your orders to have those things done!"

As those words were flung out, angry murmur arose from the crowd in the ranchhouse living room. Haskell himself was fighting mad. He took a quick step forward, thrust his head out to face the accuser.

"I wouldn't admit a lie like that for you or any man!" he flung out.

"I didn't come here to argue," El Caballero Rojo said coldly. "I'm only here to tell you that right after the next fire or killing of tobacco men in Deep Water Valley you'll finish up where Sam Aldman finished—spiked on Don Attero's Cross."

El Caballero Rojo didn't wait for an answer. Swiftly he backed, with one hand behind him groping for the doorway, and eyes on men he knew itched to go for their guns. But his own guns were steadily on them, moving in deadly, menacing arcs. Then, like a top, he pivoted, crouched a bare instant and sprang into the open.

Men snapped alive then, fell over each other in the packed room, crowding through the door. Guns blazed. A hail of lead whistled after a racing horse whose hoofs pounded through the gray of dawn.

"Got him!" a marksman yelled as the fleeing horseman swayed. "Got him sure as guns!"

"Sure, you got him bad, Andy!" Haskell yelled as he bolted for the corral. "Come on, boys, all of you! He won't get far. He can't hug leather for long—not the way he was reeling in the saddle."

The Half Circle H was the scene of a wild race to waiting horses, as Haskell roped and saddled a mount for himself. And yet, even as these men leaped to saddle, the last thought in any of their minds was of the reward money known to be on the head of El Caballero Rojo. Other matters were of far more importance to them. All any of them wanted right then was a chance to burn down the man who had dared accuse any of them of the lowest outrage of which they had ever heard.

In the arid hills beyond Mission Ridge, where neither cattle nor puncher were wont to stray, Juanita de Cuevas had built a campfire close to the steep side of an arroyo.

Her meal perpared, she walked aimlessly, to all intents, in a wide circle around the fire. Suddenly she mounted Pedro, whom she had left with trailing reins nearby, and the cry of a mountain lion came to her practiced lips. She rode off, leaving the breakfast to keep hot on a pile of stones she had heated in the campfire.

Drifting on the early morning wind came an answering cat's call. She rode faster. When she and El Caballero Rojo had made their arrangements they had decided that she was never to be found in his company as long as they stayed in Deep Water Valley. Nor would they ever be seen together over a campfire. So she had prepared his breakfast and had left it waiting while she had ridden away.

Presently Michael Valdez appeared, tethered El Cielo and began to wolf down his meal. Who was there to say he had not prepared it himself? And who was so canny as to recognize in this wandering black-haired vaquero the famous red-headed outlaw?

Valdez ate slowly after his first appetite was satisfied, and when he had finished he carefully killed the fire, cleaned and cached the kit. Then, with his gaudy conquistador raiment stowed away, he rode toward Gold Creek with a cigarette dangling from one corner of his mouth, the blue smoke drifting away on the wind.

Before he had traveled far, though, Michael Valdez reined up sharp. His brow furrowed, and he strained his eyes. He blinked and looked again. Then what he thought he had seen was gone. Mirage? No Valdez knew better. And yet—

On the cold gray skyline of early morning, climbing up, crossing the flat top and quickly fleeing down again, he had glimpsed a rider traversing a knoll so round it looked like a halved ball. And as suddenly as the rider had flashed into view, he was gone.

But Michael Valdez had seen. On the instant he had recognized the Mexican clothing, with sparkling conchas, the red sash and neckerchief worn by the mysterious rider ahead, and the cone-shaped hat that in the distance were exactly like Valdez' own.

It was one of the few occasions upon which Michael Valdez was frank to admit bewilderment—and surging curiosity that he had to fight hard to down. For as much as he would have liked a closer view of that rider ahead, this was no time for him to go investigating.

"That rider certainly looked like me," he muttered. "Worth seeing, at that, because I'm not left in the dark. For sure as fate somebody around here has started to trade for my brand—red hair and all."

Your Handwriting and You

Analysis of Writing Reveals Handicaps

A neighbor told me that you have analysed her son's handwriting and the report was so much like him and his ways that I decided to write to you for a frank and truthful analysis of my son's handwriting. His school work is very poor and he is constantly getting into fights with other boys. Would you please assist me with this problem?

If you will look at the small letter "d" in the word "would," you will find David's first handicap. That small "d" which rises above the writing line and has a definite loop then comes down straight and finishes bluntly, like a club, tells me that he is very stubborn and determined to buck opposition for he does not care to recognize standards or accepted customs of procedure. You can help him with this by teaching him the rules of fair play and encouraging him to take part in team work with the other boys. The letters "l" and "k" are very tall which reveals pride, and plenty of it. He is a boy who thinks a lot of his personal honor and will force the issue when challenged by other boys on this point. The wide open "o" is indicative of his determination to be frank and outspoken which is another good characteristic but again it is overemphasized. The large and sprawled out writing with the long lower loops of the letter "p" are indications his desire for change and variety in whatever he does, for routine matters and detail work cause him to lose interest rapidly. The ability to concentrate is absent in his script and this must be a definite handicap to his studies. It would be to a decided advantage to vary his school work as frequently as permissible as he is at his best when there is variety and changing conditions.

Love of sport, movement and change of scenery are all indicated in the script and he might benefit by mixing studies and sports to give him full expression of change from too much concentration at one time.

My letter to you should give further assistance with this problem and you may help further by discussing this report with him and encouraging him on all his strong traits of character.

Equal Education Vital To Teen-Ager

WHAT WOULD you do if you were a girl of 17, on your way to college, and in love with a young man who hasn't gone through high school?

You aren't the usual teen-ager by any means. You have been brought up with a love of learning (always an A student) to which have been added superior home training and quite a bit of travel. You are a positive person, too, restless, needing many diversions.

On the other hand, the lad concerned comes from a community where higher education is not common, nor deemed essential. He is superior to all his friends, however. He has a dormant intelligence, sterling qualities, and is ambitious.

The girl who asks my opinion says he is the sweetest person she ever knew, and there is nothing he wouldn't do for her. Her parents like him. "But," she adds, "he doesn't have the one necessary attribute, an education."

● WOULD MARRIAGE WORK?

She wants to know whether she shall give up her college plans and marry the boy now. Subtly help him along the path of knowledge ("seeking her own literary stimulation elsewhere") or go on to college and "find someone with a good education and the common sense to use it to good measure?"

It is likely that this 17-year-old places too high a value on education per se; yet with her background it is easy to see why. If she marries the boy now she would, I'm afraid, (and sooner than later) become really ashamed of him. Being a positive person, she wouldn't be able to hide it. Their marriage would be doomed. If, however, he too goes to college because she asks him to, and rises to what she calls her "literary level," it might work out all right.

To my mind, though, the hazards are too great. Notwithstanding her education, she is only 17. In the next few years she is apt to find someone better suited to her demands. Just now she is something of an intellectual snob. Whether college will deepen that attitude, or awaken her to life's more vital realities, is hard to say. It would be unfair to lead this devoted lad on with hopes which might prove impossible to realize.

It seems best that she tell him firmly that she does not intend to consider marriage until she has finished college. By that time she can see how they both mature, and whether they are still in love.

TO "H.B.": Your parents may like this boy, but they also might be appalled that you consider giving up college to marry him now. You should be good college material. By the time you graduate, however, you may have other ideas on marriage with which this lad even then might not concur. At any rate, I don't think either of you is old enough to marry now. Ask your parents' opinion. I think they will agree.

Marriage needs far more than most teen-agers are prepared to give. It requires common ideals, mutual acceptance of the verities of life, and an all-embracing appreciation of each other. If you stand on the threshold of such a decision, let Anne Hirst help clear your mind. Write her at Box A, Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto.

Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. R. Barclay Warren

Power Of The Holy Spirit

John 14:25-26; Acts 3:1-4; 4:41; Galatians 5:22-26.

Golden Text — But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witness unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.-Acts 1:8.

In this quarter we have studied about God the Father and about His Son Jesus Christ. To-day we consider the third person of the Godhead, the Holy Spirit. Divine Revelation never goes into reverse. "But who", you ask, "could take the place of Jesus when He ascended into heaven?" He promised the Holy Spirit. "He", said Jesus, "shall teach you all things. and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."

The Spirit was given on the day of Pentecost which came fifty days after the Passover. It commemorated the giving of the Law at Sinai. The Spirit came upon one hundred and twenty believers who were assembled together. The phenomena accompanying the Spirit's descent were significant. There was a sound as of a rushing mighty wind. One word expresses "wind" and "spirit" in both the Hebrew and the Greek languages. Wind is a symbol of the Spirit. The tongue of fire pointed to the fact that God had now taken up His abode in His human temple. But what astounded the men from many lands, gathered on this festive occasion was that these Galileans were miraculously enabled to preach the Gospel to them in their own language. Some mocked but many listened to the message in their own language and were converted.

The gift of the Holy Ghost not only purified their hearts (Acts 15:9) but gave them a holy boldness. They went out to preach Jesus Christ to the world. They were not deterred by stripes, imprisonment or the probability of death. They obeyed God in preference to men.

Paul points out another very important evidence of the Indwelling Spirit. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, self-control." What a beautiful cluster, yet blended in one. Love heads the list. None are so beautiful as those who live and walk in the Spirit.

Jesus Christ, in his humanity, was limited to one place at one time. But the Holy Spirit is everywhere revealing Christ to the hearts of men. We ought to yield ourselves completely to His dominion. We shall then live the beautiful life and bear an effective witness in a needy world.

THE WINNER

From the letters received in our recent contest "Name Your Favourite Band And Why You Like It", the one sent in by Bill Goodrich of Cardinal, Ont. was selected as best. Bill sounds as if he really bends the old ear when his favourite band is on the air, and seems to understand what it 's all about.

Bill writes: t my opinion that the "King of Swing" Tommy Dorsey has the best band. I like T.D. for many reasons but the first and foremost is because every man in his band is given a fair chance. I mean he does not hog the solos. Tommy also gives his vocalists smooth background with his soft brass section (on slow pieces) and w 'l blended saxophone section. Finally his fast pieces are extremely instrumental. — Your friend, Bill Goodrich.

A young fellow we know from Whitby, Ont., also entered the contest. He is about 10 years old. His name is Murray Wade and here is what Murray had to say: I like Sammy Kaye's band because (1) I listen to Sammy every Monday night (2) he seems to have lots of swing in his band, (3) Sammy sounds like a very swell guy to get along with. —Murray Wade.

We seldom receive letters from fellows as young as Murray, but we are very pleased to receive them. Thanks to all who entered the contest. We hope that you will all enter again next month and many more as well. You can read the details of the February contest at the bottom of the column. In the meantime, the personally autographed picture of Vaughan Monroe has gone out to Bill Goodrich with our best wishes.

Our Apologies To Colborne

For some time now we have been spelling Colborne as Colbourne and the gang down there have taken us to task for it. We offer apologies to the Keen Klub and hope that Bill Tye and several others will quit kidding our Colborne correspondent Bev. Wilson about it. Glad to hear that some of you came to Bev. Wilson's aid in securing new material for her dances and Club meetings. Bev. asks me to thank all who answered her request for help.

The Keen Klub of Colborne is holding a dance in February to raise funds to purchase a new record player. That Klub is quite interested in finding out who a person by the name of "Square-toed Muginty" is. Seems that they received a letter from this character who suggested they raise their admission from 10c to 11c and that they hire a rambling corn-boy orchestra and have some square dances. No one can figure out who the non-de-plume belongs to, and it really has them guessing.

This Is Valentine Week

This Saturday being St. Valentine's day we are reminding all you guys out there to get your shopping done early. If most of you are as forgetful as we are, you'll need a little reminder about now. P.S. We were going to write a Valentine poem, but after the insulting remarks following our Christmas effort, we'll be hanged if we will. Make up your own lousy poems.

What's Wrong Out There

From the little bit of correspondence coming in here it would seem as though our correspondents are still getting over Christmas—or else things are generally quiet around the Province. Don't forget to send in all the news of your Club activities to this column, that others may keep up-to-date on what you are doing. How about letting us have your new slate of Officers for the year 1948.

OUR FEBRUARY CONTEST

This month we are offering a lovely autographed picture, suitable for framing of "The Golden Voice Of Radio", Wishart Campbell. In 75 words or less tell us who your favourite radio singer is and why. Remember, it must be a Canadian Radio Singer. These pictures are personally autographed and well worth having. This contest is open to all Teen-Agers in the Province; you have a chance to win every month, so get busy now. The February Contest closes on the Twenty-Ninth of this month, and the winning letter will be announced and published two weeks after. Owing to the fact that we are suffering from a heavy siege of the flu, we are going to stop right here.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

By Gwendoline P Clarke

Sometimes I think that just as Sunday was appointed as a day of rest — which it frequently isn't — so Monday was surely designated as washday for women because so often Monday is the only day in the week when washing can be done with any satisfaction—that is if one wants to hang it out and have it at least half dry. I never gave the matter much thought until last year and then I began to take notice—and act accordingly. And so it happened that when a friend phoned me quite early last Monday and said—"Are you going to wash today?" — I naturally answered—"I expect to." But then I added—"But why—what had you in mind?"

"Well, I thought I would come down for the day, but if you're washing maybe I hadn't better."

"Why not . . . come anyway . . . I'll be through by ten-thirty."

So my friend came to visit — arriving at 8.45!—sat with me as I worked, helped when she could, and exclaimed at my good fortune when she noticed that Partner took over the job of hanging out the clothes. Personally, I think that a splendid idea. Gentlemen, please note: The easiest way to catch cold—or worse—is to hang out clothes after getting overheated at the washing machine or tub. The chances are you will only have one wife so why not try to keep her as long as you can?

After dinner my friend and I were sitting in the living-room discussing what I had in mind for re-decorating. "It's too bad you are not ready—we could have stripped the paper off today," said my visitor regretfully. I looked at her, sensing the fact that being an active woman she was already getting tired of doing nothing. So I answered—"But I am ready—we can go at it right now, if you like!"

And we did. By five-thirty the walls were bare.

So, that my dear friends, is the way I entertain visitors. Was my friend bored? Well, she phoned next day and told me when I was ready to paint she would love to come down and help. As I have said, or inferred, in this column upon other occasions — I think people enjoy a visit far better if they are not treated as "company".

And what of the room? Well, the weatherman put an end to my enthusiasm. All my efforts for the rest of the week were spent in keeping, or trying to keep, the house reasonably warm. But in that I did not succeed, at least not as long as the wind was blowing. When it dropped, we were snug as could be even at sixteen below. Or was it that on one of those cold days I had a letter that warmed me right to the cockles of my heart? This was a letter from a friend in England who wrote—"I AM COMING!", just like that—in big capitals.

Tentative plans are that she will arrive by air for an extended visit at the end of her present school year. I suppose there will be the usual red tape to go through—we must guarantee to be responsible for her keep while she is here as five pounds is as much as anyone is allowed to bring with them from England, but she hopes to be able to do something to pay her way. As to that, I have been given to understand that no person visiting in Canada is allowed to take a salaried job—just as a protection to Canadian citizens—but I suppose there would be no objection to anyone picking fruit, or filling in wherever there is a temporary shortage of help. In any case I am not worried.

Another letter we got this week was from a friend — in Canada — recently left a widow, and to our distress she wrote—"I am having such a time because there are five years' income tax returns to make out!" Will people never learn?

Just imagine that poor little woman, who has never been required to help with financial matters, to suddenly find herself faced with such a gigantic task. I suppose her late husband was one of the many who, if the Government did not bother him, thought it was all right to let well alone. But a day of reckoning always comes—and it isn't the government who loses out.

Surely the least any man can do for his wife is to so arrange his business affairs that she will not be unduly embarrassed if, and when, she is left with the full burden of responsibility.

An Easy Answer To "More Cookies"

You will be prepared for the unexpected guest if you make a practice of keeping a roll of cookie dough in the refrigerator. When guests "drop in," or one of the youngsters asks for a treat, cut some thin slices from the roll and pop them into a very hot oven. They take only 10 minutes to bake.

Here is a basic refrigerator cookie recipe, which makes about 100 cookies, and some variations:

Refrigerator Cookies

½ cup butter
½ cup other shortening
2 cups sugar
3 eggs
3½ cups pastry flour
2 ts baking powder
½ ts salt

Cream butter, shortening, and sugar. Beat eggs and add. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Work gradually into mixture. Form into rolls. Wrap in waxed paper and chill in refrigerator. When cold, slice thin. Bake 10 minutes in hot, 400 degree F. oven.

To make the variations, divide the dough after mixing it into three portions and put each in a bowl. After a variation is made, form into rolls, wrap in wax paper and put in the refrigerator.

Marmalade

Flavor with ½ teaspoon vanilla. Form into rolls, wrap in waxed paper and chill in refrigerator. When ready to use, cut very thin slices. Put 1 teaspoon orange marmalade on one slice and top with another. Press edges together and bake.

Chocolate Nut

Melt 1 square chocolate and add to dough. Mix well. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Work in ½ cup chopped walnuts.

Spice

Add 1 teaspoon allspice and 1 teaspoon cinnamon to basic dough. Chopped walnuts may be worked in.

Pinwheels

Flavor with ½ teaspoon vanilla. Divide the dough in half. Color one part with a few drops red coloring, or with melted square of chocolate. Roll out both portions of dough separately on waxed paper. Lay the colored portion on top of the other, and then roll the two together from one long edge, until both sections form one long roll. When sliced, each cookie will have a spiral of color.

Black and White

Divide dough in two, one portion larger than the other. Flavor larger portion with ½ teaspoon almond flavoring, and set aside. Melt 1 square chocolate and add to smaller portion. Flavor with ½ teaspoon vanilla. Form into long roll on waxed paper. Take second portion and roll out on waxed paper to width of about three inches and length of 10 inches. Place chocolate roll on this portion, and wrap almond-flavored dough around chocolate core. When sliced, and baked, there will be a chocolate center bounded by a wide cream border.

Orange

Mix 2 tablespoons strained orange juice with dough. Grate skin of orange, and work in.

Lemon

Mix 2 tablespoons strained lemon juice with dough. Add grated skin of lemon.

Sugar Cheapest Of Energy Foods

While costs of most commodities continue to rise, refined sugar remains the cheapest of all staple foodstuffs available to Canadian consumers. A survey just completed at Chatham, Ont., shows the cost of sugar to the householder to be five cents per 1,000 calories—a full 50 percent below the cost of bread which places second on the list of low-priced energy foods. Third from the standpoint of economy are potatoes at nine and a half cents per 1,000 calories.

Winter cabbage costs the consumer no less than $1.18 per 1,000 calories. Costs of other staple food products per 1,000 calories follow: Rib roast beef 79½ cents, back bacon 32 cents, cheese 25 cents, butter 21 cents, milk 20 cents, rice 11 cents and white beans 10 cents.

A Change

The vicar was paying a call on some of his parishioners whom he had not seen for some weeks, and his last visit was to one of the oldest residents of the village.

After the preliminaries were over, he sat back to have a chat with the old man.

"I understand you have a son in Hollywood. Do you see him often?" he asked.

"Ah, he's been home every summer for five years."

"And does he bring his wife with him?"

"He does, sir. And five fine gals they were."

CELEBRATE 40TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

On Thursday evening, February 5, 1948, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Carr, Boucks' Hill, was the scene of a festive gathering when about thirty, including members of their immediate family and friends from Ottawa and Grantley were present to join in the celebration of the 40th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Carr.

It was on Wednesday, February 5, 1908, that Miss Carrie Merkley daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Merkley, and William A. Carr were united in marriage, with Rev. Johnson Sellar of Elma, minister of the former Methodist Churches at Williamsburg and Elma, officiating at the ceremony, which was performed at the Methodist Church parsonage at Elma.

Since that time Mr. and Mrs. Carr have been residents of this community where they are held in high esteem and affection by a large number of their friends, who join in congratulations and best wishes with the wish that they may be spared for years yet to enjoy many more years of health and happiness.

During the evening's program, Miss June McConnell of Ottawa, on behalf of the gathering, read an appropriate address and at the same time the presentation of an electric table lamp and a reclining chair and ottoman was made to the honoured couple. Both expressed their sincere thanks and appreciation for the lovely gifts and kind words spoken. The well-laden six o'clock dinner table was centered with a lovely decorated 3-tier wedding cake, which was cut by the bride of forty years ago, and was later served to the guests.

SPARROW'S LAMENT"

I listened to a sparrow the other day
As he indignantly fluffed his feathers gray,
"What's all this fuss about the robin", he said,
"No difference between us 'cept his breast is red.
I don't desert you in the fall
To head for the south and the palm trees tall.
I stay right here the whole year through
And brave the winter, that's more than he'll do.
Yet every spring, the very first one
Is welcomed like the prodigal son.
With fat and crumbs and welcoming cries,
The first robin! the first robin! what a surprise!"
Shamefaced, I looked at the little bird;
There was logic in every word I'd heard.
Then a bird flew by and we saw a red flash!
The sparrow was up and away with a dash.
And I heard his chirpings and welcoming cries
"The first robin! the first robin! O glad surprise.
—Robin Merkley.

ROYAL DELACY PRICE

The death of R. D. Price on Saturday, January 31, came as a shock to all. While he was in failing health he had been around the home as usual, but he took a sudden severe heart attack and passed peacefully away.

He was a man of a kindly disposition, devoted to things pertaining to God and loved to walk in the way of our Master. Ever faithful, he always put his trust in Jesus from day to day and leaves behind him a memory which will always be remembered by those who knew him best.

At the request of the deceased the funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. P. Maitland of the Presbyterian Church. It was a very impressive service. Hymns sung were "Rock of Ages" and "Sometime We'll Understand". The funeral was under the auspices of the Masonic Order, of which he was a member, and the pall bearers, including two nephews, were all Masons.

Friends from a distance attending the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Howe, Bowness, Alta.; an only sister, Mrs. Fannie Wheeler of Haverhill, Mass.; Claude Wheeler, Haverhill, Mass.; Chester Wheeler, Springfield, Mass.; Earl Wheeler, Albany, N. Y.; a nephew, Basil R. Price, Montreal, Que.; Miss Nancy Reynolds, Montreal Que.; and a number of grandchildren.

His remains were taken to Williamsburg vault to await burial in Maple Ridge cemetery in the spring.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP is a lot of little things

KEEP MATCHES AWAY FROM THE KIDDIES

It's not always true that once burned a child is twice shy. The lure of the bright, hot flame of a match is often too much for a youngster. Untold damage has resulted from childish curiosity about fire. For the protection of your own property and that of your neighbors, matches should be kept out of reach of youthful hands. Such forethought is a contribution to "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.
