Henry's Shorthand School

Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school?

Our instruction being individual, you may start at any time.

Relaxed Rules for Enlistment.

In order to secure more recruits, a relaxation in the physical demands for men for active service was announced on Saturday. Hitherto the regulations have set forth that every man accepted as fit to fight the enemy must be at least five feet three inches high and have a minimum chest measurement of 33½ inches. Under the regulations published on Saturday, these qualifications were modified, so that men of five feet two inches would be accepted. So far as chest measurements are concerned, a compromise has been put into force. For men between 18 and 30 years the minimum girth of chest has been reduced from 33½ inches to 33 inches, but this half inch has been added to men from 30 to 45 years, who in future must have a minimum chest measurement of 34 inches.

Red Cross Work.

Warmly appreciative was the large gathering of workers and sympathizers in the Red Cross movement, who assembled on the beautiful lawn adjoining the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry at Berwick to listen to an entertainment put on by a band of Chesterville young people, who have for some time been doing splendid work in support of the local society.

Mr. John D. Grady, Reeve of the Township of Finch, presided at the meeting and gave a capital address in his well-known eloquent style, setting forth our duty to the Empire, and to our soldiers who are fighting our battles today. In language glowing with fervour, he gave recognition to the splendid work which is being done by the women in caring for our defenders, and earnestly urged all men in the community possessed of any manhood whatever, to rally to the help of the women, and not to hinder their good work by indifference or criticism.

The musical part of the programme consisted of selections by the orchestra, choruses, a violin duet, beautifully given by Miss Violet Saucier and Miss Ruth Lawson, that splendid old "Veteran Song" and "The Deathless Army" magnificently rendered by Mr. Fred Bolster. Exquisite violin solos "Mazurka" and "Harlequinade" exquisitely rendered by Miss Amy Beattie, (who is also leader of the orchestra). A touching solo "The Voice of Belgium" sweetly sung by Miss Violet Saucier, and that popular song "The Little Old Ford" sung by Masters T. Carpenter and Bobs Lawson. Each descriptive line brought bursts of applause and laughter from the audience, and the ladies were heartily encored. Miss Hazel Saucier was a most sympathetic and efficient accompanist. Mr. Ernest McMillan assisted in all the orchestra work.

The Rev. Mr. McCorkindale of Chesterville, in his splendid address struck a high note of patriotism when he declared it to be a proud privilege for the young men to enlist in the service of their country. Every well-rounded period of his impressive address reached the spirit of highest loyalty and love of country.

The Rev. Mr. Bell of Finch spoke a few words of commendation of the workers and appreciation of the programme.

God Save the King brought to a close a most enjoyable and successful affair.

The Red Cross workers of Berwick are to be heartily congratulated on the marked success attending their efforts, as, with the booth receipts, where everything was speedily disposed of, the fine sum of $96.55 was netted. After the slight expenses was paid, an equal division of the money was made, by which Berwick Red Cross and the Red Cross Society at Chesterville each profited by the amount of $41.60.

The same musical organization put on a concert at Morewood on Wednesday evening, July 28th, and will at Williamsburg on July 30th and at Finch on Aug. 6th—all open air concerts, if possible. Should the weather prove unfavorable an indoor concert will be held.

Acknowledgment.

The young people who are actively engaged in Red Cross work, and the Red Cross Society desire to give public expression to their appreciation of the kindness of their townsmen, who have conveyed the performers to Berwick, and have arranged to convey them to the other places by motor car. Mr. David Allison, Mr. Jack Powell and Mr. Howard Fulton were good enough to take the orchestra and their assistants to Berwick.

Your Soldier Friends Would Be Glad to Hear From You.

Sir George H. Perley, acting high commissioner for Canada, in a cable communication to Sir Joseph Pope, under secretary of state, for external affairs points out that one of the chief wants of wounded soldiers in the hospitals of the United Kingdom at present is news from home. The men are simply longing for Canadian newspapers, and to meet this natural desire it has been decided to utilize the services of the Canadian Red Cross Society in London. The request is made to Canadians of all classes who desire to meet the wishes of the wounded men, to send clean copies of daily and weekly newspapers addressed to "Lady Drummond, Canadian Red Cross Society, 14 Cockspur street, London, S. W." Canadian newspapers so forwarded should not be more than a week old and preferable should be put in bundles and mailed weekly, the ends of the package being left open. The postage rate of Canadian Newspapers to England is one cent per four ounces, provided the packages are inscribed "By Canadian steamer." When the bundles of newspapers have been received in England they will be sent under Lady Drummond's direction to the several hospitals throughout the United Kingdom, where Canadian soldiers are under treatment.

Fruit For Our Soldiers

Some five thousand Niagara Peninsula fruit growers are giving fruit at lowest cost, while Canadian womanhood is asked to prepare it.

The Hamilton Canadian Club has started something; it is a movement which will spread throughout Canada.

This great movement gives the sweethearts, wives and mothers of our boys at the front an opportunity to do an extra "bit." Dried fruit is needed at the front in the trenches. The kind that is wanted is the home-made—love made—product, dried on a screen in the sunlight.

Any home can provide a few pounds of dried fruit after the following manner:—

After pitting or stoning the fruit wash and place out in the direct sunlight, spread thinly on a cheese cloth screen, say two and a half by three feet—(a convenient size to handle in case of rain.) Shake the screen a few times daily in order to turn the fruit.

Peaches, etc., should be pared and sliced and spread as above, but turned oftener.

To keep flies off, simply spread a piece of mosquito netting over the screen, tying a washer at each corner to hold it down against any breeze.

When the fruit is perfectly dry make it up into packages of about seven (7) pounds weight in good stout paper or cotton and send it to the Red Cross section in your city. They will undertake to forward it to the boys in the trenches.

Canned fruits are equally acceptable for the hospitals. Take it to the Red Cross headquarters in your town, they will do the rest.

Any club, society or organization which desires further information regarding this movement should drop a line to the Canadian Club, Hamilton, Ont., who have things well under way.

A Grand Assembly will be held in the Music Hall under the auspices of the Monster Picnic Committee, Tuesday, Aug. 10th. Ottawa's renowned orchestra in attendance.

Social And Assembly

Court Chesterville of the Canadian Order of Foresters have made arrangements for holding a social in aid of the Red Cross Funds on Mr. W. B. Lawson's lawn next Wednesday evening. The Chesterville String Orchestra and other local talent will supply the programme. After the social an assembly will be held in Hamilton's music Hall, when the Forester's four piece Orchestra will supply the music.

LARGE STEAMER TURNS TURTLE HUNDREDS ARE DROWNED

Chicago, July 24.—From 75 to 300 persons are believed to have been drowned by the capsizing of the steamship Eastland at her dock in the Chicago river shortly before 8 o'clock this morning. However, only twenty-five bodies had been recovered at 8.50 o'clock and those in charge of life-saving expressed the hope that the estimated number of victims may have been exaggerated.

The steamer had been chartered for the day by the Western Electric Company which had planned an excursion to Michigan City, Ind.

Passengers were crowded on the ship shortly before 8 o'clock, the hour it was to leave, when the boat slowly listed toward the middle of the river. It is said that there were 2,500 persons on the steamer.

When the boat started to tip the officers shouted warnings but it was too late. The heavily loaded steamer continued to roll until the hawsers which held it to the dock snapped. A moment later amid the screams of passengers the steamer turned over on its side and floated out into the middle of the river. Apparently scores of women and children in the cabin were drowned without being given a chance to escape. Hundreds of other passengers were able to climb on the side of the boat which is above water and were later taken off by rescuers.

Life preservers were cast into the river from the steamship Theodore Roosevelt which was docked across the river and scores of the Eastland's passengers clung to them until picked up by boats. City fire boats, police launches life-boats from nearby steamers in the river rushed to the rescue.

A hole was cut through the side of the lower deck by life-savers and the bodies of six victims, five of whom were women, were soon taken out. L. D. Gadory, employed as a "candy butcher" on the steamer, was the first eye-witness to tell a detailed story of the accident.

"It was about 7.40 a. m. this morning and the boat was lying at the dock near Clark street bridge loading with passengers," said Gadory.

"We were to leave in twenty minutes and the upper deck and cabins were crowded with passengers. There were hundreds of women and children; I estimate that between two and three thousand on the boat at the time of the accident. I was standing on the lower deck near the gang plank watching the people come aboard.

"Suddenly I noticed the boat list toward the centre of the river. It rolled slightly at first and then seemed to stop. Then it started to roll again. I became alarmed and shouted to the crowd to keep still. Apparently a majority of the passengers were on one side of the boat and this had overweighed it and caused it to list. Suddenly the hawsers which held the boat to the dock snapped and the officers pulled the gang plank in and refused to allow any more on the boat.

"At this time everybody was panic-stricken, women screamed and men tried to quiet them, I attempted to reach an upper deck but could not because of the crowd and excitement and ran back to the port side where the gangway had been. The boat then slowly drifted away from the dock as it slipped away into mid-stream and a moment later it had turned over on its side.

"I climbed over on the side of the boat and stayed there until I was taken off by life savers. Many of the passengers leaped into the water as the boat went over. Scores of others were caught in the cabins and drowned. When the small boats began coming out to us I worked with other survivors in taking passengers out of the water, and cutting holes in the cabins to remove bodies."

The North Clark street bridge was choked with persons on their way to work when the accident occurred. Friends and relatives of those who were going on the excursion lined the bridge waiting for the boat to depart.

Capt. Charles Garland of the United States life saving station at the mouth of the river hurried with his crew to the scene and aided in the rescue as did dozens tugs and river craft.

The first body recovered was identified as that of Mrs. Peter Kommer. Her two sons were believed to be lost. Her husband was saved.

Private motor cars and wagons were pressed into service transporting the injured to hospitals. The police were called to the scene from a score of outlying stations.

Eye-witnesses said that the boat turned gradually and that when it began to tip the crowd rushed and slid toward the side that had settled in the water.

New Evidence to Save Becker Rejected by Gov. Whitman.

Albany, July 24.—Joseph Murphy, a convicted murderer serving a life term in Sing Sing, who recently made an affidavit, that he had heard Jack Rose, Bridgie Webber, and Harry Vallon plot in the Tombs to "frame" ex-Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, admitted to Governor Whitman today that he had had a talk with Becker in the death house the night before he wrote to Becker's counsel that he had a story to tell which might save the life of the condemned man.

Governor Whitman spent two hours questioning the convict, and afterward announced that there was nothing in the story to justify him in taking any action to save Becker from the electric chair or even grant him a reprieve. The interview between the Governor and the convict was held at the Executive Mansion, Deputy Warden Johnson and a stenographer were present.

Governor Whitman telephoned to Warden Thomas Mott Osborne, of Sing Sing, the information Murphy had given. Warden Osborne told the Governor it was absolutely against the prison rules to permit convicts to converse with the men in the death house, and that he would suspend the two prison guards who were on duty there when this infraction of the rules occurred. Later Governor Whitman instructed Deputy Warden Johnson to promulgate a hard and fast rule which would shut off such opportunities in the future.

One of the first questions the Governor asked Murphy was whether he had talked to Becker. Murphy said he had not. Later Murphy let slip a remark which made the Governor inquire anew, and Murphy then admitted he had entered the death house on Sunday evening, June 20, with the Entertainment Committee of Mr. Osborne's Mutual Welfare League, to sing to the condemned man, as is customary on Sunday nights. When in there Murphy found his opportunity to talk with Becker.

The Governor began his examination of Becker's convict pleader by asking him his name, his age, and his criminal record. Murphy said that he was born in Ireland thirty-five years ago, and had been a grocery clerk, and later a bartender. He killed Noel Forester in a saloon at Forty-first Street and Eighth Avenue, New York. On June 21, Murphy wrote to Bourke Cockran, Becker's chief counsel, telling him of the conversation between the three witnesses against Becker.

"With other prisoners at the Tombs, I was out for my afternoon walk on July 29, 1912," Murphy told the Governor. "I heard some one say, 'We must frame Becker,' I was curious to hear the rest of the conversation. I slipped into a bathroom, so I could listen. There I heard some one say, 'We haven't a chance in the world unless we frame Becker.' Rose, Webber, and Vallon were talking, but I do not know which one it was said it."

"The man who was talking went on to say, 'According to newspapers they seem to think that Becker did it because Rosenthal made that squawk. Anyhow it will be easy to make people believe it is the truth.' One spoke up and said, 'You damn fool, Big Tim will never stand for that. He knows Becker was not in this.' Another of the three men then said: 'Big Tim sent Applebaum (his secretary) to see me to get Steur to fix it up for us so as to cover Tim's name up and put it on Becker.'"

Murphy said that at this time he looked over the bathroom partition and saw that Webber was the one who had spoken last. Steur, according to Murphy, was Max Steuer, a New York lawyer, who arranged with the District Attorney for Webber's turning State's evidence.

Governor Whitman asked Murphy if he had ever told his story to anybody. The convict replied that he had done so in December, 1912, after he had begun his sentence in Sing Sing. He said that Stuart A. Wallace, a Brooklyn real estate man, who was serving a term for forgery, had been his confidante. Wallace worked in the same shop with Murphy. At present he is one of the Mutual Welfare Court judges at Sing Sing.

"Wallace told me that I should come to the front and not let an innocent man go to his death," Murphy told the Governor.

The Governor's cross-examination of Murphy brought out inconsistencies in his statement which have apparently justified Mr. Whitman in placing no credence in his story.

Port Hope Girl Murdered By Father.

Port Hope, Ont., July 26.—Edward James Tait, a local brickmaker, to-day took the life of his twelve-year-old daughter, Elsie Maud, while the child was sleeping, and threatened his wife, who, however, escaped. Tait is believed to be insane. No other explanation for his deed is forthcoming, and his actions in the cell since his arrest tend to confirm this belief.

The killing took place about eight o'clock this morning, before the girl had risen. The weapon used was an axe, with which the demented father severed the jugular vein of his sleeping child.

Before attacking his daughter, Tait cut off the head of the house cat. He then went to the girl's bedroom, killed her, and next turned his attentions to his wife.

Mrs. Tait fled from the house, crying for help. Her husband followed flourishing his dripping axe. The wife took refuge in the house of a neighbor, a Mr. Twiley.

Tait was placed under arrest on a charge of murder by Chief of Police Royce.

Dr. Aldrich was called in to attend the child, but could do nothing. The girl died almost immediately.

The father, meantime, was taken to the local jail, where for a time he disported himself turning handsprings. He also showed a tendency to dash out his brains against the wall of his cell. Later he calmed down, and this afternoon was amusing himself with a picture book, in which he seemed greatly interested. He failed to show any realization of the tragedy or of his present position as a result of it.

Tait was a member of the local corps of the Salvation Army, and something of a "character" in the town. For the army he played the drum and was a regular attendant on parade. Usually he gave rather lengthy testimony. Last night, however, his talk was very short—so much so as to excite remark among his comrades. Aside from this, however, it is not known that he showed any signs of mental disturbance. This morning he arose about the usual time, and proceeded quickly to his task of murder.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

ONION FLY REMEDY.

Wisconsin Scientists Perfect Spray to Kill Pest.

What is believed, after practical application, to be a thorough remedy against the very destructive and heretofore uncontrolled onion fly has been discovered by a number of Wisconsin scientists. It is a remedy which, if generally applied, will result in the saving of thousands of dollars to the growers, it is asserted.

The remedy, a spray, was evolved after some four years of experimentation by Dr. H. H. Severin, J. G. Sanders and C. R. Cleveland of the University of Wisconsin. Last summer the solution was tried out by onion growers in that state under ordinary field conditions, with the result that they gathered almost perfect crops, by far the finest grown for years.

According to the best available information, the onion fly was brought into this country from Europe early in the nineteenth century. As a maggot it chews its way into the onion just at or below the surface of the ground. The maggot is the larval stage of a tiny fly, resembling to some extent the common house fly, yet with a more pointed body of brownish color. When the seedling onions first appear above the ground in the spring the fly lays its eggs. The injurious larvae hatch from the eggs in four or five days. These larvae then burrow into the plant, and often all onions in a row for several feet are killed off.

Close study of the various stages of the life of the pest developed that a period of from ten to fourteen days elapsed between the hatching of the fly and the time it started laying its eggs. This period was selected for destroying the pest. Further experiments developed a killing poison bait spray.

The latter is a solution of one-fifth of an ounce of sodium arsenate in a gallon of boiled water, to which later is added one pint of New Orleans molasses. As no attempt need be made to cover the foliage of the plants, as is the case in ordinary spraying, the application of the remedy will be found extremely simple. The work may be done with a plain hand syringe or even a whisk broom dipped into a bucket containing the solution, the scattering of large drops being most preferable.

Clean Water Trough.

It is a problem to keep the ordinary open feed and water trough for fowls in a sanitary condition. If there is any possible way to do it the birds will sooner or later be into it with their feet.

In case a top of any kind is put on the trough to prevent this the birds will roost on it. To overcome these difficulties a Kansas poultryman has made an ingenious trough that, he says, keeps the feed or water clean, as well as keeps the birds off the trough. It is four feet long and eight inches wide. The end pieces are ten inches high and the side boards five inches. The swinging board is six inches wide and pivoted at each end by means of a nail driven into it through a hole in each end piece. The nails are put in a little to one side of center, so as to keep the board upright. The moment a bird jumps on to the board it will turn over and flop it off. It is not long before the fowls become wise to the situation and give it a wide berth as a resting place.

Director Quisenberry of the national egg laying contest, Mountain Grove, Mo., gives these rules for breeding poultry:

Breed only from stock of high vitality, which has never been seriously sick with any disease.

Breed from mature males and females.

Breed from birds as near ideal in shape and color as possible. A good all round bird is better to use as a breeder than a bird exceptionally good in one point and exceptionally poor in others.

Let the male be exceptionally strong in points where the female is weakest, and vice versa.

Instead of buying ten males at $1 each and thus getting very ordinary males to head your flock, it is much better to get one good male at $10 and mate him in a separate pen to ten or twelve of your very choicest females.

The condition of the parent stock is largely, in fact almost wholly, responsible for the condition of the baby chicks. A chick well born is half raised.

Good strong, vigorous males and females, properly mated, will store so much vitality in the eggs that the embryo can stand a lot of abuse in incubation, and the baby chick will overcome and outlive many of our mistakes in faulty breeding and improper feeding.

Canada's Population Exceeds Eight Million

Ottawa, July 26.—The total population of Canada at the beginning of the present year, according to an official estimate made by the Census Department, was 8,075,000. This is the first time that the eight million mark has been passed, and in the total was included, of course, Canada's soldiers at the front. The growth of population since the census, was taken in 1911 is officially estimated at approximately 850,000, or as an average of about 200,000 per year. It is worth noting that the total immigration of the past four years since the taking of the census has been in round numbers 1,330,000. It is apparent therefore but since the immigration exceeds the estimated increase in population by nearly half a million there is still a considerable annual exodus of Canadians to the United States or other countries.

The total immigration for 1914 is given as 168,930, a decrease of 149,908, or more than 50 per cent., as compared with the preceding year. For the present year it is expected that there be another large decrease, as with the exception of the new settlers still coming into western Canada from the United States immigration has practically ceased on account of the war and the existing financial depression. It would not be surprising if at the end of the present year the official estimate of the population of the Dominion shows the total to be again under the eight million mark.

Heavy Yield Of Barley

A stool of Barley taken from the farm of Mr. Sylvester Byrne, Stoco, shows a marvellous yield, says the Tweed Advocate. From one seed of grain there are seven straws each headed out and range from 3 to 5 1/2 inches in length, with a yield of over 500 grains. One head contained 92 seed. A gentleman who has engaged at threshing for a number of years told us that it was the best he had ever seen.

Suspected Spy Carried Notes And A Big Roll

Montreal, July 26.—A man who gave his name as Jean Bouchard, and his home as Luxembourg, was arrested yesterday at Montreal. Among papers found in Bouchard's pockets was a small map of the city, on which the locations of the different armories, the railway stations, public buildings, pumping stations and reservoirs, as well as some of the largest establishments where war munitions for the allied armies are being manufactured were carefully noted.

He also had a notebook that was well filled with copious notes in German as well as copies of a German newspaper published in New York and a couple of local newspapers. Though poorly dressed, he had $276.73 in his pocket, including some German coins. Baggage checks were also found on him, and the police think the man had made frequent trips to the United States. Bouchard was handed over to the military authorities.

Uncle Sam might send Champion Willard to Berlin to resist Germany's "might is right" arguments in the logical way.

One man rowed and drifted 850 miles in a small boat out of the Yukon to join the colors. What particular orator convinced him?

Heart-felt sympathy is coming to the people of Denmark. They have been infected with a press censorship, and they don't get any letters from the front.

The reason why no answering chant of hate has been published in the British press is that one to express faithfully the feeling of Britons for the Germans would be unfit to print.

A fine circumstantial story is going the rounds of the press telling how Kitchener bluffed the Germans into the belief that less than a million men was the total of enlistment in England when as a matter of fact an army of four million was being trained and equipped. There are many more than the Germans who would like to know when the four million is going to start something.

The Hour Of Pressing Need

In a long article in the Globe yesterday entitled "Britain's Second Wind," Ralph Connor, who returned Tuesday from the front with his inviolated brother, Dr. Andrew Gordon, says no man living, not even Kitchener, knew until three months ago how serious a business this war is. Now that Britain has realized its seriousness, she is finding the money, the men and the munitions to carry it through successfully. Only if her present attitude towards the struggle in maintained, he says, can defeat be averted. Canada need not find money, but she must help to provide men and munitions.

The article concludes: "Canadian women, you will not hold back your men, your sons and your sweet-hearts, but will send them forth where honor and safety bid them go. Men and ever men; not the men only who can be spared, not the men without ties of love to hold their hearts, not the men whose going is easy. No, no. But the men whose going will imperil business interests and will break hearts. These men, men of sacrifice, and wives and mothers will wave them away with mist dimmed eyes, but with hearts that will not refuse to make complete the sacrifice."

"Seriously, soberly, solemnly let it be said that unless the Empire can furnish in overwhelming quantities, munitions of war, and in overwhelming numbers men of war, the bitterness and humiliation of defeat will be our portion, and the shame and slavery of an infamous tyrannous militarism will be the portion of our children."

A Soldier's Sacrifice

A touching little anecdote is reported in a letter from the front.

A French soldier fell wounded close to the parapet of his trench. All around him the ground was being flicked into dust by a hail of German bullets. The injured man made a painful but ineffectual effort to crawl the few yards that separated him from safety. His strength failed, and he lay exposed almost to certain death. As a last resource he called to the trench for help.

Not a head showed above the parapet owing to the intensity of the German fire. But a voice answered his appeal. "Are you married?" asked the unseen soldier.

"Yes," answered the wounded man. Any family?" "Three children," came the reply with a groan. "Right, then I'll come," rejoined the soldier in the trench.

A moment later a young man sprang over the parapet into the bullet-swept open and flung himself down between the wounded soldier and the enemy. "You shall see your three children again," said the rescuer, as he began to push the other toward safety. "I have only my skin to lose."

Man Rows and Drifts 850 Miles to Join Canadians.

Calgary, Alta., July 26.—How an ex-British army man rowed and drifted 850 miles in a small boat, on a journey from a remote part of the Yukon in order to join a Canadian regiment, is told by Walter Seath, who arrived here Saturday just in time to be included in the 63rd Battalion.

"I was on a two years' trapping and prospecting trip at the head of the Novikaket River, a tributary of the Yukon, in March," he said, "when I heard of the war. Leaving everything to my partners I started for the Yukon with two dogs and a small sled. Arriving at Ruby, a town about 360 miles distant, in twelve days, I waited until navigation opened, which was earlier than usual this year. I procured a small boat and rowed and drifted to St. Michaels, Alaska. I rowed across to Nome, 150 miles. I took a boat at Seattle and thence to Calgary, which is my old home town."

Previous to going to Alaska, Seath was an artificer in the Royal Garrison Artillery in Malta and Woolwich, and while in Calgary was employed as an engineer.

Six Ships Sunk By German Pirates

London, July 25.—German submarines today resumed their activity in English waters, sinking a British steamer, a French steamer and four British trawlers.

One of the under-sea boats is reported to have been destroyed by bombs and gunfire. Another British trawler was destroyed by a mine and ten of the crew killed.

The French steamship Danae, bound from Liverpool for Archangel, Russia, was sunk off Cape Wrath, which forms the northwestern extremity of Scotland. The trawlers Henry Charles, Kathleen, Activity and Prosper were sent to the bottom in the North Sea. The crews of all the vessels were saved.

The Danae was attacked by two submarines. The crews of the trawlers state that one of the under-water craft was sunk by means of bombs and guns fired from the trawlers.

The British steamer Firth (406 tons), of Aberdeen, bound from France for Firth of Forth, was torpedoed by a submarine in the North Sea. Four of the crew were killed by the explosion.

Reliable testimony has been received in Montreal of the visit of an aeroplane last Sunday night to the vicinity of Rigaud.

Miss Myrtle Peach, bookkeeper, perished in a fire following an explosion in Walker Bros.' garage at Orillia, being caught under furniture.

Miss O. Blanchet, of St. Jacques de Parisville, Que., was killed, and three other persons injured, when a motor car jumped a bridge.

George Switzer, a retired farmer, of Lindsay, formerly of Fenslon township, was struck and fatally injured by a C. P. R. train while walking on the track. A concrete tennis court, with foundation several feet deep, was discovered in a German's garden in a position commanding the Soulanges Canal and railway bridge, near Montreal.

Another story has been added to the imposing array of those told at the expense of newly-fledged bachelors of arts, who have not found the world as eager for their service as they could wish. While waiting for the manager to be at leisure, a young job-hunter took occasion to converse with the office boy.

"Do you suppose there is an opening here for a college graduate?" he asked. "Will, dere will be," was the reply, "if de boss don't raise my salary to tree dollars a week by ter-morrer night."—Youth's Companion.

He Had Intended to Be a Father to Her.

By ESTHER VANDERVEER

"I may not see you again for years. Will you be true to me?"

"Rather ask yourself whether you will be true to me. You are at an age when a man's fancy is liable to great changes."

"I shall not change in my feelings toward you."

"We shall see. Now, come and kiss baby; then you must be off."

Hugh Edgerton, twenty years old, had become enamored of a young widow, Mrs. Clara Pomeroy, two years his senior, with a child, a girl in her third year. He had been offered a position in a banking house in Hongkong, China, and was about to proceed there. Full of the hope of youth, he was intent upon making a fortune and returning to spend what remained to him of life with Clara Pomeroy for his wife.

He followed her into an adjoining room where the child lay asleep in her crib. Bending down, he kissed her.

"Dear little thing!" he said. "When I return I will be a father to her."

He took the child's hand in his, and so soft, so dear was it that he could hardly bear to release it, but the mother admonished him that his time was limited, and drew him away.

"Goodbye," she said; "whatever is in store for you and me in the future—"

"And baby."

"Yes, and baby. I will say this, you are a fine fellow and deserving of a good wife."

It seemed to Edgerton that the kiss she gave him lacked the fervor of a woman deeply in love. But it had always been so between them. The widow, though but a few years his senior, had a far wider range of experience than he, and a woman of twenty-two is usually much more mature than a man of twenty. When he regretted this lack of fervor she always said to him, "When ten or twenty years have passed it will be I who will have cause to reproach you for indifference."

While on his voyage to China Edgerton spent the most of his time writing letters to his fiancée. If an analysis of his feelings were possible it might show more distaste for leaving home and friends for a foreign land than love, but no one has yet been able to isolate love as they say of germs—and, after all, our affections are largely a matter of association. Nevertheless Edgerton pined for his widow and the time when he would be united with her, and the dear child he had seen sleeping so peaceful and innocent in her crib was ever present in his mind.

Edgerton on arriving in Hongkong was given a position of some importance, for he had had several years' experience as a subordinate in business and was advanced rapidly. But unfortunately when he reached a status in which he might begin to accumulate the house he was with made some important losses and wound up their business. Edgerton joined forces with others and formed an independent house. They made money for a time, but one of the partners proved dishonest, and after getting him out of it they had a considerable deficiency to make up.

Meanwhile Edgerton wrote regularly to his fiancée and received letters from her. It was due to her encouragement that he was able to stand by what he had undertaken, for when ill luck befell him he was sorely tempted to give up and go home. He had with him a likeness of his fiancée, and, though the years were passing and each year added to her age, he continued to think of her as she had appeared when he parted from her. He always referred to her little girl as "the baby" and forgot that while her mother had passed the climax of youth and beauty the daughter was approaching it.

Years passed before Hugh Edgerton came to a status wherein he could close out his business in China and return to America with the fortune he had set out to win. Indeed, it was due to a fortunate rise in an article in which he had made an investment that at last enabled him to do so. It was a happy day that he announced to Mrs. Pomeroy that he was independent of the world and in a few weeks would return to claim her as his bride.

Sixteen years had passed since Edgerton had left his native land. He had been so engrossed in business that they did not seem to him more than six. Nevertheless he realized that there must be some change, especially in "baby." He pictured her as a girl playing with her doll, but nearing an age when she would lay it aside. Her mother doubtless would not have changed so much. True, she would be older, but not so very much older. As to Edgerton himself he was now thirty-six, an age wherein a man is supposed to be in his prime. His associations with women in China had been thus far with those who had not yet passed out of young ladyhood. Indeed the mothers of some of his women friends were but little older than he. One young woman of nineteen, an English girl, was hoping to win him when she was disappointed by the announcement that he was about to return to America.

The return voyage seemed endless to Edgerton, so eager was he to meet his fiancée and the little girl to whom he was to be a father. He pictured himself taking his ease in his own house, surrounded by his family. The loneliness of a bachelor life in a foreign country was now to be a thing of the past.

Edgerton was the first passenger to step ashore at San Francisco, and within an hour after landing he was speeding eastward on a railway train. The day and hour of his arrival was known to Mrs. Pomeroy, and Edgerton expected that she would meet him at the station. His impatience to see her caused him to hope that she would, but his aversion to the public witnessing their meeting caused him to hope that she would not.

She did not appear. Calling a conveyance, he drove to her home. A maid opened the door for him, and so sure was he that his fiancée would do so that he came near throwing his arms around the maid. He was ushered into a drawing room somewhat dimly lighted, but there was no one there. In a few minutes, hearing a light step on the staircase, he approached the door and stood waiting. A woman entered the room, and he caught her in his arms.

She submitted to the embrace, but did not return it.

"You are as you were when we parted," he said in a disappointed tone. "You were then without warmth, and you are without it now. I wonder how you could have been true to me all these years."

Standing off from her, he was astonished to see one who looked not a day older than when he had left her.

"Upon my word," he exclaimed joyfully, "you have not changed in the least! It is marvelous how you have retained your youth. I feel almost too old for you."

Now for the first time the lady ventured to speak, but she spoke not as a widow of mature age; she was rather a coy young girl. She haltingly told him that he said what he did in order to flatter her, whereupon he vowed that he spoke the truth, and he embraced her again.

"And now," he said, releasing her, "where is baby? I must see her at once."

"You forget that baby is no longer baby; she is a schoolgirl."

"Where is she?"

"Why, she is at school."

"At school! Not here to welcome her papa? But she will return presently?"

"She is at a boarding school some distance from here." This was said falteringly as a falsehood would be spoken.

"Surely you are deceiving me. It cannot be that!"

"Clara is well; nothing has happened to her."

"Clara?"

"Of course. Have you forgotten that her name and mine are the same?"

"Oh! I have always been accustomed to think of her as 'baby.' For my life I cannot understand how you can have preserved your youth. Are you sure that no rouge?"

"Not a particle."

"Surely by this time you should have a few faint lines around your eyes. I see no trace of age whatsoever. Your lips are as red as they were when I last kissed them."

And he kissed them again.

"But why," he continued, "do you welcome me in this dim light?"

"Perhaps when you see me in a brighter one you may see what age has done for me."

As she spoke lights were turned on from another part of the house, and a woman entered the drawing room whom Edgerton did not remember to have seen before.

"My mother," said Clara Pomeroy.

"Happy to meet you, madam," said Edgerton, bowing. Then, turning to Clara: "Your mother! Why, I supposed your mother?"

"Hugh!" said the lady who had entered.

Edgerton started. He looked again at Clara's mother, and there came to him a feeling that he had made a grave mistake. He turned from her to the daughter. Under the brighter light he saw that she could not be more than twenty. Turning again to the mother, he recognized his fiancée of sixteen years ago turned into a woman who, though not quite forty, looked at least fifty. Her hair was white, her skin was wrinkled, her neck under her chin was shriveled.

"I am Clara," she said, "and that is 'Baby.' When you went away I did not believe that on your return I would be a fit age for you. I look older than I am, but no man of your age should be tied to a woman of mine. Clara so nearly resembled me as I was when you left us that I was tempted to put her forward as myself. The result has been as I expected. In me you looked for the youthful person you left sixteen years ago. You have found an old woman. You supposed that in Clara you would find a little girl. You have found her what I was when you parted from me."

Edgerton listened to this speech with a countenance which, despite his efforts, betrayed that it described the situation. At its conclusion he began to stammer objections, but the lady took his hand, pressed it warmly and laid it in that of her daughter.

"I have no wish to influence you two except for your own good. Clara is what I was at her age, and, as I told you years ago, you are a fine fellow I give you a good wife."

Edgerton married Clara Pomeroy, but she was of a different generation from the love of his extreme youth.

SUSPICION.

Eradication of an invisible enemy requires men who have eyes within their heads as well as on the outside. A germ is trailed by the damage it does. It leaves no track until it has begun to take its toll; therefore the sanitation police must head off the enemy on suspicion. They must get it before it unpacks its grip and starts business.

The man with the eyes inside his head has suspicion as one of his most prominent characteristics. He takes nothing for granted. To him every animal in an infected district is guilty of carrying concealed germs until it is proved innocent.

We want to emphasize the desirability of this quality of suspicion. Federal and state officials are gradually throttling foot and mouth disease. Farmers are beginning to feel optimistic, and the channels of trade are being opened to normal business. But optimism as well as familiarity sometimes breeds contempt, which is another word for carelessness. It may have been this same feeling of security that allowed the dangerous germ to become entrenched last fall. Now when we feel that we are about to be rid of the live stock plague there is great necessity of observing every precaution. If you live in or near an infected or suspected area do not give anyone the benefit of a doubt.

Safety first is a policy that will help the individual and the community. It pays to be suspicious—to use the inner eyes.—Country Gentleman.

Advantages of the Safety Silo

Filling doors have glass windows which light the inside and form part of the roof when closed without wind obstruction.

Cone shaped roof with Galvanized iron ventilator on peak to let out the gas and steam as they accumulate.

Our fasteners being entirely on the door, doors can be left in the opening at any height merely pushed up out of the way and always where they belong.

Easiest to get feed out of. Unobstructed continuous opening, 22 inches wide, makes it possible to shove ensilage out instead of having to throw it up three or four feet in the air to an opening.

Refitting doors unnecessary, a few turns of nuts here and door front is adjusted perfectly to fit doors, making them air tight.

Takes man or boy only one hour instead of a day to tighten or adjust every hoop on Silo while standing on ladder formed by fasteners. No dangerous slipping separate ladder needed as on other Silos.

Our safe fastener makes a substantial ladder right under opening rungs 15 inches apart, stands out 6 inches from the door and is 14 inches wide.

From the above points we leave you to judge as to its superiority over all others.

FOR OUTING WEAR.

Ohio Chapeau of Flexible Straw For the Little Man.

WHITE STRAW HAT.

Smart in the extreme are the outing hats shown this year for the smaller fry. Take the one in the illustration, for example. This hat is of white flexible straw, built with a hexagonal crown and a flexible brim, which may be worn turned either up or down. A band of white grosgrain ribbon ends in a jaunty bow at the side.

HOW TO DRESS.

The Advice of a Famous Actress Not to Be Followed Too Closely.

"Dress your character, not your figure," is the advice of a famous actress—and rather surprising this advice seems at first hearing. But think it over well and the excellence of the idea will appeal to you. Every woman has a certain individuality of her own—a temperament, if you will—that makes her a little, or perhaps a good deal, different from all other women. It is this individuality—this temperament—that woman should dress up to, according to the actress, in order to make the personality more marked and convincing.

But an instinctive carrying out of this advice with no heed to the promptings of reason may result in disaster. For example, there is always the woman who weighs 200 pounds or thereabouts, but whose personality is distinctly kittenish. Is she to dress her character—or her figure? There is also the little woman who ought to belong to the cuddly, appealing class, who yearns to be impressive and stately. If she insists upon wearing the garments of the grenadier woman she may spoil her chances of being fascinatingly charming.

The actress in her part always is dressed in conformity with the character she is portraying, but her costumes—and here is an important point—are made to suit her figure lines while expressing a special sort of personality. Therefore if the delightful founcies of the 1830 period suit your type exactly, but are a bit trying to your too solid figure, adopt the founcies, but see to it that they are so cut and so arranged that the lines of the silhouette are right. This is true also of pert millinery styles, of classic draperies or oriental modes. They all may be worn, when they suit the personality, if their lines are cleverly adapted to the figure that is to sustain them.

LOOK UPON THE BRIGHT SIDE.

Pollyanna is the girl in a story who helped others to look on the bright side of things, however dark they seemed to be, and when she discovered how well her plans had worked realized that she had taught others to play her own game better than she could play it herself. How easy that is for most per-sous, even those who have not the spiritual insight of such a girl as Pollyanna! A mother teaches her child to be brave and to strive for high ideals. All the time she may be sure that she is herself a moral and physical coward and that she often falls below the average in her acceptance of ideals.

"I am not fit to do this work," a man or woman may say on whom devolves something that presupposes not only intelligence, but high moral purpose. The very fact that he questions himself indicates that he is fit in a way and that understanding what is required of him he may at least approximate it.

Those who have not the ability to persuade themselves to look for the bright things of life may at least help others to do it and in the doing may profit by the experience.

Very reverently a mother looks upon the task of leading her children in the right way. "What am I," she asks herself, "vain and frivolous as I am, to be entrusted with the upbringing of a child?" But no doubt the very fact that she does not preach, but leads her children in a sweet, human way, makes better children of them.

Life to be perfect must be well balanced, and the grave must not be allowed to outweigh the gay. A child playing marbles or spinning a top can be taught to be careful and considerate, to play fair and respect the rights of others and many other things, just as well as in his Sunday school class. Moral education is not a matter of a few hours one day in the week, but every day, from morning until night, a mother must lead her child by threads of precept and example, so strong that he cannot go astray and so light that they are not irksome.

Twenty New Vegetables.

There are more than twenty new vegetables that show a likelihood of coming into general use on the American dinner table within the next ten years. The choice of the housewife is going to be considerably more than doubled. She will have forty different vegetables from which to plan her meals instead of twenty. There is nothing of the "fad" proposition about any of these new vegetables. All have been and are being grown and already have some market.

All have been popular wherever they have been tried, and all can now be grown at a profit. In addition, over and above the forty, there are five or six other vegetables not so new, but still uncommon as foods because they have never been put widely upon the market. These latter have passed the public verdict of approval, but in most cities and towns it is difficult to obtain them. But all the new vegetables, the experts say, are going to be possible for the slimmest pocketbook.

The aquatic potato, which jokers, when they get wind of it, are going to designate as a "submarine" because it really grows, so to speak, under water, is one of the most spectacular of the new vegetables. The scientists and the progressive farmers who have looked into it say that the aquatic potato has a very fair chance of becoming one of the great American food products all by itself. It is good to the taste, and it grows where no potato worthy of the name could ever be induced to grow before—in very moist and marshy ground.

Along with the aquatic potato is the roselle. The roselle is almost the star among the new vegetables, for even now it has a brilliant record and has become a distinct commercial success. It is a substitute for cranberry, or really not a substitute at all, but something new and capable of making a jelly that can meet cranberry on its own ground—and some day—of surpassing that delicacy.

It will grow in southern climates impossible for cranberries and, best of all, a market for it is now established; Texas, California, Florida and South Carolina have all become roselle states. One advantage it has over the cranberry is that it is very easy of culture and can be grown in any garden.—Harper's Weekly.

Dairy Inspector T. J. Ellis at the railway meeting on Monday volunteered the information, from statistics in his possession, that over fifty million pounds of milk were produced annually within a radius of seven miles of Chesterville. Can any other section equal that?

Damage estimated at fifteen per cent. has been caused to the oat crop in Ontario by the prevalence of smut, according to information received by the Department of Agriculture. Smut has also caused some damage to wheat, barley and corn, but not to a serious extent. It is estimated that the average yearly loss to the oat crop from smut and rust is about $1,800,000, and to oats, wheat, barley and corn, $2,720,000.

A large crowd assembled from the villages and country roundabout on Herman Hummel's farm, Monday afternoon, to celebrate the commencement of work on a five mile stretch of road bed for the proposed Ottawa & Morrisburg Electric Railway. The Morewood band was in attendance and speeches in support and approval of the undertaking were made by a number of prominent local people who would like to see the project carried through.

A great day's sport and entertainment.
The Annual Picnic and Athletic Contests under the auspices of St. Mary's congregation, Chesterville, will be held at the Driving Park, Aug. 10th.

Junior High School Entrance Results.

The names are given alphabetically and in order of merit. "Honours" means that the candidate made 75 per cent. or more of the aggregate of marks.

The certificates of successful candidates may be obtained after August 1st from the principal of the school at which the candidate wrote.

Announcement will be made later of the winners of the Rural and Urban gold medals given by the Teachers' Institute.

The Department of regulations forbid
the publishing of marks.
