Ramon Campderros Passes Early This Morning

Our citizens were quite shocked this morning to learn of the death of Ramon Campderros at an early hour at his home on Victoria street. Although in rather indifferent health for some time it was not known generally that he was in a critical condition, having been on the street very recently. He is survived by his wife, two daughters Madge of Montreal, Addie of Ottawa and one son Ramon of Tampa, Florida. An only sister, Mrs. Manuel Gonzolez, of Tampa, survives. A brother Miguel Regino Campderros died in Tampa three weeks ago.

The funeral service will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at the family residence.

Cornwall Soldier Has Proof Of Nazi Butchery of Italians

Three Canadian non-commissioned officers are in possession of photographiv evidence of German butchery.

Italian authorities of a town gave to the Canadians photographs showing that the Nazis killed 11 Italian soldiers who were making their way to their southern Italy homes. The town's police chief said the 11 bodies shown in the pictures were removed from an aqueduct where they were thrown by the Germans.

Ten of the Italians, the police chief said, were lined up against a stone wall and shot. The 11th was strangled with a rope.

In possession of the photographs are CSM, David MacAulay, Port Morien, N.S., Sgt. E.C. Direnaeld, Wynyard, Sask., and Sgt. W.B. Lefebvre, Cornwall, Ontario.

Apparenty the mass murder was committed on a farm near the town by a German platoon in charge of a sergeant-major who signed his name "Lahlmann" to a pass permitting the farmer to visit the village. The photographs showed the farm aqueduct piled with bodies, some tied with rope with which the Germans were said to have dragged them to the aqueduct.

The Nazis also were reported to have freed criminals from the town prison and to have looted shops, taking away all they could carry.

McQuaig, son of Mrs. McQuaig and the late Mr. W.C. McQuaig of Ottawa. Rev. Gregory Lee officiated at the ceremony. Mr. L.S. Virr played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attractively gowned in a brown wool jersey dressmaker suit with mink trimmings. Her brown felt hat had a short veil and she carried an arm bouquet of bronze crysanthemums.

Mrs. A. Myers of Montreal, the matron-of-honor, wore a blue suit with matching hat and carried pink crysanthemums. Mr. Walter Joynt of Ottawa was best man.

Following a reception at the Chateau Laurier, the couple left for Toronto and Detroit and on their return will take up residence at Kingston. Lieutenant McQuaig is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. M.E. Hunter of Morewood.

Funeral Held Monday Mrs. Edward Hummel

Marked tribute was paid on Monday to the memory of the late Mrs. Edward Hummel of Orchardside, at the funeral service which was conducted by her pastor Rev. W. E. Wright of Trinity United Church, Chesterville, of which the deceased was a member. She also was a member of the Women's Missionary Society and was always associated in Christian work. The funeral was held at her home, where many from a distance, as well as neighbours and friends, showed the high regard in which the deceased was held.

The deceased, whose maiden name was Margaret Cunningham, was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Cunningham of Grantley. She was 58 years married on September 21st last and was in her 78th year.

"Safe in the Arms of Jesus" was sung, being a favourite hymn of the deceased. The text was taken from the 17th Chapter of St. John, 4th verse. "I have glorified thee on the earth, I have finished the work thou gavest me to do."

Mrs. Hummel was taken seriously ill one week before her death, but after all that a nurse and loving hands could do, she peacefully passed away. She was of a quiet, unassuming disposition and was highly respected by all with whom she came in contact. She is survived by her aged husband, four sons and one daughter. George of Williamsburg; Cora, Mrs. Tupper of Montreal; William of Ogdensburg N.Y.; James at home and Clayton of New York City. She is also survived by 13 grandchildren and 17 great grandchildren.

The floral tributes were many and were very beautiful. The pall bearers were Messrs Geo. Elliott, Roy Elliott, Edsel Merkley, Walter Merkley, Willie Henderson and Wilburn Edgerton. Interment was made in the family plot in Maple Ridge cemetery.

DISTRIBUTION PRICES SHOULD BE SET

All things considered the Retail Merchants of Ontario have maintained a patient and tolerant attitude towards the rationing policies of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board but now they feel that certain regulations injurious to the interest of the retail food dealer should be eliminated. Merchants are convinced that with a reduction in the turnover some steps must be taken to lower operation costs. It is contended that prices of food products should be determined at the point of production and maximum mark-ups set for the distributive trades. The Food Administration has not been happy in its endeavor to compare prices of foodstuffs today with an alleged price prevalent in the basic period of 1941. It is held that a greater opportunity should be afforded to the retail food trade by the Price Board for consultation on placing orders as it is claimed the retailer is closer to the consumer than any other economic group and, consequently, better able intelligently to advise the Price Board on many matters.

USURP POWERS AS LAW MAKERS

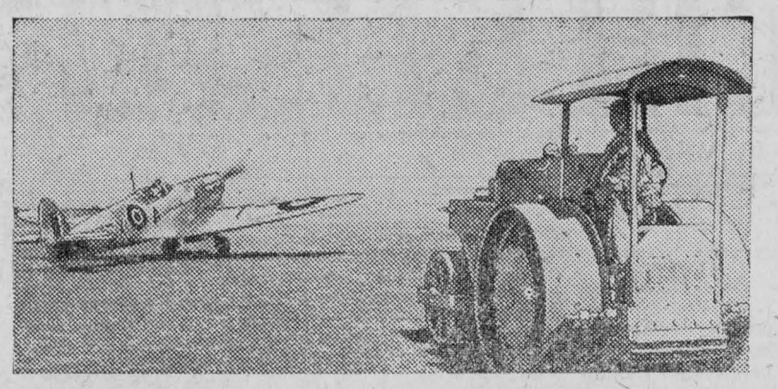
That there has been a stirring among the dry bones at Ottawa is made evident by its forthright criticism of several Ontario Liberal members of Parliament in respect to bureaucratic regulations. As a result of the recent Liberal caucus some of the more petty restrictions have already been lifted and undoubtedly more will follow. It is possible to have cuffs on your trousers if you desire it and you may order an extra pair of pants with a new suit of clothes, if your finances warrant such an outlay. The Member for North Waterloo, L.O. Breithaupt, declares that most of the members at the Liberal meeting felt that too large a percentage of the country's laws were being framed by Administrators and Controllers, who, however sincere, were not responsible to the people, and therefore, very many stupid, unfair and unnecessary regulations were put on the statute books of the country. At the same time Mr. Breithaupt contended that the commodity price policy of the Government was wise and should be sustained with changes in methods of Administration to commend it more fully to the people.

HOURS AND PAY NEED ADJUSTMENT

The new Ontario Labor Minister, Charles Daley, has apparently entered the Drew Cabinet with an open mind in regard to the Labor situation but he is quite emphatic in his opinion that the manner in which the wage freezing system was brought into being was entirely wrong. He declares that the Federal Government should have examined the wage structure before deciding on action, brought rates of pay in comparable industry into line, established a reasonable basic rate for common labor and then proceeded to freeze wages to combat inflation which he concedes in the general interest must be fought. The situation as Mr. Daley finds it today is different basic rates in comparable industry, different conditions as to hours of employment, some getting holidays with pay, some not, and cost of living bonus of various amounts from 60 cents to $4 per week. All this makes for unrest and affords fertile ground for professional agitation and troublemakers.

SACRIDNESS OF MOTHERHOOD

There is something quite inspiring in the figures presented at the annual meeting of the Canadian Public Health Association that the lowest maternal mortality rate ever recorded in the Dominion—2.9 per 1,000 live births—was shown by preliminary statistics for 1942. For the past six years there has been a steady decrease in maternal deaths. In 1936, the mortality rate per 1,000 live births was 5.6; in 1937, 4.9; in 1938, 4.2; in 1939, 4.2; in 1940, 4.0; in 1941, 3.5. Although starting in 1939 with a more favourable situation, therefore rendering improvement more difficult, figures show that during the first three years progress which corresponds to a 30 percent amelioration in the rate was recorded. In addition, in 1942, 796 maternal deaths were recorded instead of 1,192 which would have taken place if the rate of 1939 had prevailed. Just now the security of child life has an added significance. With the very flower of Canadian youth offering itself as a sacrifice to freedom the birthrate assumes an added importance. The casualty lists show that many of the gallant lads seen such a short time ago parading so smartly in this country will not return to their native heath. A new generation must fill their places, thus adding additional emphasis to the sacredness of motherhood.



PACHINO: R.A.F.'S FIRST SICILIAN AIRFIELD.

The first Sicilian airfield captured by British troops was Pachino. The Italians, fearful of invasion, had ploughed the entire field with furrows two feet deep, but the Royal Engineers got to work on it immediately. The first Sicily-based Squadron of Spitfires landed in the morning of the third day of the invasion. The use of Pachino airfield saved tons of petrol, as previously British fighters had to operate from Malta, 80 miles away.

Picture Shows—A Spitfire taking off for its first patrol from Pachino aerodrome while the R.E.'s are still at work with a steam roller.

Not In Society

Lumberjack—What's them things you're unpackin' there?

Merchant (holding up a pair)—They're pajamas.

Lumberjack—What's pajamas fer?

Merchant—Night clothes. Want to buy a pair?

Lumberjack—Heck, no. I'm no social rounder. When night comes I go to bed.

Taciturnity

Two farmers met on a country road and pulled up their teams.

"Si," said Josh, "I've got a mule with distemper. What did you give that one of yours when he had it?"

"Turpentine. Giddap!"

A week later they met again.

"Say, Si, I gave my mule turpentine and it killed him."

"Killed mine, too. Giddap."

In Full Pursuit

Sally—What wartime occupation are you pursuing?

Polly—Well, right now it's a second lieutenant!

Health is the second blessing that we mortals are capable of—a blessing that money cannot buy.—Izaak Walton.

Kitchen Shower For Morewood Girl

A prettily arranged kitchen shower was largely attended in the United Church Hall at Morewood, on Friday, October 8, at eight o'clock, honouring Miss Lillian McLaren one of this month's brides. The hall was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells. The bride was then asked to come to the platform accompanied by her mother Mrs. Peter McLaren, Miss Jean Bogart and Mrs. James Stuart, mother of the groom. Miss Erla Steinburg then read the following address, and Miss Maisie Bilow and Miss Donalda McLeod made the presentation.

Morewood, Ont.,
October 8, 1943.

Dear Lillian: As the date of your marriage is drawing near we felt we must take this opportunity of expressing to you our sincere good wishes for your future happiness. If it were in our power we would give you a life full of joy and contentment and many years of happy married life with the husband of your choice.

In your few years living among us you have made many friends who fully appreciate the assistance you have always given so willingly to all our worthwhile enterprises and we trust you will always continue to help wherever assistance is needed. We trust that our happy fellowship may continue through the years of your marriage.

As we ask you to accept these gifts,
May the future bring fulfillment,
As you go along life's way
Of the plans, the hopes and wishes
That means most to you today.

And may years that lie before you
Be the kind that will bestow

Letter To The Editor

Are We Responsible ?

In past years when all things flowed in abundance—particularly, gas, oil and rubber, a stringently rationed product during these critical days of our war-torn world of today—recreation was never in want, and older and younger groups alike mutually enjoyed, often together all forms of recreation, in all seasons.

The beautiful part of those memories is that these various recreations were enjoyed at home. Seldom did any individual or group of individuals think of hopping into a car and drive out of town to seek their pleasures elsewhere. To do so today, would be a treasonous attitude toward the National War Effort.

Yet the actions and attitude of the older people seem to encourage and condone just such an inclination on the part of the younger groups. Why? Is it because the older people are beginning to lose patience and forget that former sense of comradeship they once enjoyed with the younger folk? This same sense of selfishness is driving the young people away from the control of their parents and guardians, exposing them to alternative temptations, loss of scruples and principals, such as which that only humans can fall in keeping with, and yet when discovered these same elders are shocked and dismayed at the conduct of the younger people.

Why? Because their former means of recreations, that did so much to keep them out of mischief in the past have been taken away from them one by one until today they have all disappeared. Of course, those older, supposedly wiser and more sober older folk do not realize the error of their negligence, until now their faults have been pointed out to them by the same younger folk. Will they be equal to the high plane and reverence in which they should be held by the younger people by taking immediate steps to correct the various faults of their local scheme of things? That remains to be seen if the young people's respect for them is to be returned.

Why are our names continually besmirched for just such actions as drinking, smoking, parked cars in dark lanes, loafing and loitering in public places, foolish waste of gas, oil and rubber while seeking pleasures elsewhere, and various occupations in-the-making. Why? Have we any other choice? If we have, we are not aware of it, and nothing would please us more than to have you older people point it out to us.

Why do you not believe in the old proverb that "young minds can be kept out of mischief only by constant profitable occupation"? And the word "profitable.. does not monetary either. We mean "constructive".

Now we will begin to point out your many failings: Garages are built to replace tennis courts; other courts are allowed to deteriorate from wasting age; every form of summer recreation is discouraged; in the winter time hockey has been entirely discouraged, where Chesterville and district once attained national fame in this sport when you older people were interested in it; and now, —now the straw that broke the camel's back—the skating rink was our last hope during the long winter months. Now the skating rink has been leased to strangers for their profitable use while you older people contort yourselves in an agony of suspense at the deporable conduct of the young people. You call us irresponsible youth. "Irresponsible" is not the word for it. "Not responsible" would be much nearer the truth.

Is it too late? Or can anything still be done about it?

The Chesterville and District
Young People.

Of Like Mind

"Mary," said a lady to her maid, "I don't like the looks of that man who called to see you last night."

"Well, well, said Mary, "ain't it funny ma'am? He said the same about you!"

CANADA WAS INVADED ..

Among the great geological events in Canada's history were the Pleistocene glacial invasions. These occurred within comparatively recent times and the effects are still evident in the existence throughout the Dominion of countless lakes, rapids and water falls. The rich soils of our Agricultural regions in Southern Ontario and the prairie provinces are also the direct result of glacial action.

The cause of this great ice invasion is still controversial but the fact is undisputable. The glaciers spread and retreated at least four times during the Pleistocene period of the last million years. There were mil spells between some of these invasions. when the climate was warmer than at the present time. Warm water shells and fragments of mild climate trees found as fossils to testify to these moderate interglacial climates. Such mementos may be found in the Royal Ontario Museum.

Glaciers form in high land, and around the poles. It is believed that before the great ice invasion Canada stood much higher above sea level than now, perhaps 2,000 feet. The ice weighed down the earth's crust and then melted away. The sea came up into the Lake Ontario basin and extended far into the Ottawa river depression. Later when the land gradually rose the sea retreated to its present position.

Evolution

Two men had just made their exit from the theatre, and evidently it had been a poor picture, judging from the expression on their faces. One of them said, "You know, it certainly is wonderful how pictures have advanced these last few years."

"How do you mean?"

"Well, first there were the silent pictures, then came the talkies, and now this one smells."

EXTEND THE RANGE OF CANNED GOODS

A larger variety of canned goods for winter use than was originally anticipated is affected by relaxation of canning restrictions. Containers set aside for the domestic crop are now available for other uses because that crop was short of expectations. Accordinly, apple pie filler, fruits for salads, mushrooms, sauerkraut, mincemeat, pea soup, pork and beans and spaghetti have been added to the commodities which may now be packed in metal. The amount of baby food packed in metal has been raised to from 125 to 200 per cent of the 1941 pack. This is a temporary provision and expires next March 31.

"HOT DOG" ORDER IS NOW REVOKED

The Order of the Prices Board which planned to restrict the manufacture of certain types of bread, (including "hot dog" rolls) and cakes and to eliminate icing has now been revoked. This order was drafted on the recommendation of an advisory committee representing the baking industry which subsequently advised that the economy in manpower which the order was designed to effect could be obtained without formal regulation.

"SORGHUM SYRUP" IS OFF THE RATION LIST

In some parts of Canada a small quantity of "sorghum syrup" or "sorghum molasses" is produced from cane grown by farmers. As agricultural authorities are anxious that this production by farmers should be encouraged and expanded and as the quantity involved is small, it is announced that these commodities are not affected by the preserves rationing order.

Blackwell Pledges To Stamp Out Rackets

Attorney General Blackwell yesterday pledged Ontario 'law enforcement free of political influence', promised that rackets will be stamped out in the province and charged the Federal Government with failure to enforce the legal ban on the Communist party.

"I promise in Ontario law enforcement free of political influence," he said in an address to a local business association (Yonge and Bloor Association). "If these simple methods are pursued, we establish in Ontario what is known as a rule of law and people will realize what they are entitled to in a democracy—real equality before the law."

Discussing slot machines, he said the machines are "not owned by store keepers who operate them but by people who from their aggregate operation get substantial revenue that is the bread and butter of the rackets that will cross the border into this province as far as we permit."

"No rackets are going to get their clutches on Ontario," he added.

In his reference to the ban on the Communist party, he said it is "absurd to continue the ban as a war measure. The elected representatives of the people should determine whether the party should be banned.

HOW TO PREVENT CATTLE BLOAT

Bloat in cattle causes much loss every year in Canada and the United States. For want of sufficient roughage in the feed, a large quantity of gas accumulates in the stomach of the animal and when it is absorbed into the blood stream often has fatal consequences. Investigations by the Division of Animal Pathology, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, show that the addition of sufficient roughage will prevent bloat and also permit the animal to be pastured on green forage. If ainmals are turned out daily to pasture, they should be fed rough forage beforehand. No rule of thumb method can be given, states the Division, but the prevention of bloat is essentially a matter of supplying roughage to animals feeding on succulent pastures.

Gallingertown Newly Weds Honoured With Presentation

About 150 friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Gallinger in honour of their son Oliver and his bride, the former Miss Ena Rupert. A very pleasant evening was spent, music being rendered at intervals. Later in the evening the bride and groom were called to the floor where the following address was read by Mrs. Robert Colquhoun. Many beautiful and useful gifts, including many envelopes containing money were presented.

The address was as follows:
Dear Ena and Rupert:—It is with great pleasure we come here tonight to honour you and to rejoice with you on this great happy and momentous occasion of your life. The happiness of which we hope may last as long as you both live.

Oliver, we congratulate you on your choice of a bride:—Ena, we welcome you most heartily to our community and hope you may find us kind friends and congenial neighbors as we will try to be. On any long journey in this life, it seldom is all sunshine, but we hope as you journey through life together that the sunshine of God's love and blessings may surround you as much as possible.

On this journey we beg you to accept these gifts and hope you may find use for them and kind thoughts of remembrance of this occasion and the donors.

The gifts are a very small token of our esteem, friendship and a multitude of good wishes for a long and happy wedded life for you.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Mrs. Bert Marcellus and Kenneth Hummel.

Mr. and Mrs. Gallinger replied thanking their friends for the gifts and good wishes. All joined in singing, "For They are Jolly Good Fellows."

A dainty lunch was served by the ladies and the crowd dispersed.

TOO LATE?

"It is too late! Ah, nothing is too late—
Cato learned Greek at eighty; Sophocles
Wrote his grand "Aedipus", and Simonides
Bore off the prize of verse from his compeers
When each had numbered more than fourscore years;
And Theophratus at fourscore and ten
Had begun his "Characters of Men."
Chaucer at Woodstock, with the nightingales,
At sixty wrote the "Canterbury Tales".
Goethe at Weimar, toiling to the last
Completed "Faust" when eighty years were past.
What then, shall we sit idly down say,
The night hath come; it is no longer day?
For age is opportunity no less
Than youth itself, though in another dress.
And as the evening twilight fades away,
The sky is filled with stars invisible by day.

An Important Message to

GROWERS of OATS and BARLEY

Which Demands Your Immediate Attention

More food than ever before in our history is needed for our armed forces, our allies and those at home.

Therefore, due to partial crop failure this year, it is imperative that Ontario Farmers plan NOW for their 1944 SEED REQUIREMENTS.

The Ontario Department of Agriculture requests your immediate co-operation and offers the following suggestions:

1. Secure wherever possible good seed of suitable varieties for your 1944 requirements.
2. Any grain—oats or barley—either of the 1942 or 1943 crops suitable for seed over and above your own requirements should in the National interests be cleaned and offered for sale as seed.
3. If you have surplus seed, give your neighbors the first chance. If not sold by November 15th, advise your Agricultural Representative. Do not feed grain of seed quality. If necessary, replace it with Western Feed Grain.
4. The Directors and members of County Crop Improvement Associations are urged to become actively interested in the movement and supply of seed grain.
5. If you are unable to obtain suitable seed—advise your Agricultural Representative of your seed requirements NOT LATER THAN NOVEMBER 15th.

Your Agricultural Representative for Dundas and West Stormont is

Britain's New Weapon Raids Big Battleship

British midget submarines, penetrating the heavily guarded Norwegian hideout of the German fleet, have crippled the mighty battleship Tirpitz, and left her apparently immobilized. Three of the small subs—a hitherto undisclosed British weapon—are missing. A group of the submersibles, 1000 miles from home, threaded their way some 50 miles into narrow Alten fjord, through minefields and heavy patrols, to attack the Tirpitz September 22nd, an Admiralty announcement disclosed today. They attacked the Tirpitz beneath her waterline.

The size of the raiding force was not disclosed but the announcement said three submarines failed to return and there was a possibility some of their crews had been captured by the Germans.

The Admiralty said it was impossible to assay the damage at the time of attack but reconnaissance photographs taken three weeks later showed the 35,000-ton pride of the Nazi fleet had not moved from her anchorage and oil spouting from her great tanks had spread two miles.

Courage and Skill

Usually conservative to the extreme, the Admiralty's description of the exploit used such terms as "hazards of the first order", "magnitude of the difficulties," and said the crews "displayed the highest qualities of courage, enterprize, and skill."

The announcement stressed that to reach the hiding place of the Nazi warships the submarines were forced to operate more than 1,000 miles from the nearest British base.

Mine fields were penetrated and enemy protective forces were evaded before the midgets could come within striking distance of the fleet in confined waters.

The reconnaissance photographs showed the great battleship surrounded by smaller vessels presumably engaged either in repair work or supplying light and power to the crippled giant.

Two days after the attack, the Germans announced officially that a thrust by midget submarines had been repulsed and that prisoners had been taken.

FAILURE TO REGISTER MAY MEAN NO BEE SUGAR

It is pointed out by the Ration Administration that a beekeeper who fails to register with his Local Ration Board or the nearest branch of the Ration Administration as the case may be, or who, producing 2.000 lbs. or more per year, fails to submit ihs monthly report, may subject himself to the refusal of sugar by the Provincial Apiarist when his application for sugar for beekeeping purposes is submitted. Registration cards are issued only to beekeepers who produce under 2,000 lbs. of honey annually.

The Room At the Top of The Stairs

There's an empty room upstairs, but it is empty only to the stranger. For there are pictures on the walls, and pennants and trophies and knicknacks on the bureau, and the memory of his work and his play dwell there. It can never be merely a vacant room any more.

This is where he grew up. This is the record of his life from the time we moved the cradle out of our room and he was old enough and big enough to demand a room "all my very own."

Within this sanctuary he made his lures and his flies. Here he set up the microscope for which he had long saved his pennies. Here he kept his first goldfish. On this old maple bed he read "The Three Musketeers", "Treasure Island", "The Arabian Nights," "Sherlock Holmes," "King Solomon's Mines," "The White Company", and "Sixty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

The record of his day is mirrored on the walls. In the drawers of the bureau-lying as he left them, are baseball gloves and spiked shoes, photos of hunting and fishing trips, shells he found on the lakeshore, his old catapult, a dozen "inventions" he had designed in evening hours.

On the bureau stands the picture of his "best girl", signed and framed. For this was his own and special "den". How may anyone say this is an empty room. Very neat and trim it is. His mother has a habit of "tidying" it. It is here that her quiet prayers are said. The room has become holy with sacrifice.

Between the boy and us is the span of oceans and the length of far horizons. Yet memory and the companionship wrought in his childhood days bind us in love and communion. So helpless we feel, his mother and I, knowing the little we can now do for him who is our own warm flesh and blood.

Here we are, two people past the crest of the years, whose ambition it has been to watch the boy become a man—a good man—and settle down and be happy in his home. We live in safety and in comfort only because we loved him as a child; now we are in his debt through his love for us.

Yet there is one thing we can do for him. We have bought a bond, a Victory Bond, token of our affection and our loyalty. It shall be his when he returns, a nest egg for his beginning when the storm has passed. If the Spirit of the Good Life has other plans—if we are not to meet again in this world—the bond stands as a mark of our faith in each other which none of us ever for one moment doubted. By this sign he shall know that neither war, nor the far horizon, nor death can destroy our mutual loyalty.

We have bought this bond at some cost. We shall go without comforts and conveniences. We shall buy other bonds. We shall go without more of the satisfaction and privileges that living in Canada has given us. How else could we be worthy of the boy whose little room now stands open to the sunshine and the songs of spring? How else could we prove worthy of the boy whose spirit whispers to us at dawn and at sunset to be strong and loyal and true?

Of course we have a bond—Thank God.

THE OPTIMIST
By Joseph B. Strauss

I love the play
Of every day,
And all the life force that we see;
To build anew,
To carry through,
And just to live is joy to me.

Through grief and ill
My hours may fill,
I shall not say all life is vain;
In spite of woe,
And blow on blow,
I shall not think there's naught but pain.

A touch of spring,
A bird on wing,
And now and then a warming smile;
A friend or two
With trust in you,
These, free to all, make life worth while.

Money Talks

Mrs. Jones (at seashore) —My husband writes that he's feeling good business is good and he loves me.

Mrs. Smith—All on that little scrap of paper?

Mrs. Jones—Yes; it's a check for $100.

Art of Feeding Protein to Pigs

A young pig can be helped to make good growth by feeding it a protein supplement. For this purpose many farmers feed their pigs skim milk and buttermilk, but other farmers with no milk for feeding mix 12 lbs. concentrate in every 100 pounds of the grain ration.

If hog producers were to increase the protein supplements of all kinds. Unnecessarily large amounts of concentrates have been fed on some farms to pigs which could get along without it. Supplies of commercial protein feeds are limited and it is only by using these feeds and dairy by-products in the way to do most good that the large number of pigs required can be raised successfully and cheaply.

A good protein supplement is a body builder. Adequate amounts of protein should be fed to young pigs if their growth is to be normal but any additional amount over that required to give a young pig growth is wasted. A young pig uses excess protein only for energy or fattening. Farmers agree that there are cheaper ways of putting fat on a pig than by laying out money for protein supplements.

Proteins are necessary for young pigs, and pregnant or nursing sows. But when a pig reaches 100 pounds, it will make reasonably good growth on feed grains alone. By limiting protein supplements to young pigs, more hogs can be raised on the same amount of purchased supplements.

I envy no man who knows more than myself; but pity those that know less.—Sir Thomas Browne.

MORE SHEETS AND TOWELS TO BE MADE

Under standardidation and simplification orders announced by the Prices Board, a considerable increase in the quantity of bed sheets, pillow slips, towels, wash cloths and bath mats looms in prospect. The consumer may not be able to obtain these articles in as many sizes, qualities, designs and colors as normally, but there will be more of them available. It is thought that an additional 175,000 towels will be produced as a result of the steps taken, along with a further 30,000 sheets.

WEIGHT BIN OF GRAIN

To find the weight of grain in a bin, first ascertain the cubical contents of the bin (by multiplying the length, by the depth by the breadth) and the weight of one bushel of the particular grain (32 quarts). As one cubic foot measures almost 25 quarts, the weight of one cubic foot will be 25 32nds of the weight of one bushel. Thus one bushel of oats weighs 34 lbs. One cubic foot of oats equals 25 32nds of 34 lb. or 26½ lb.

HAY MOW MEASUREMENT.

To find the number of tons of hay in a mow, multiply the length by the depth by the breadth and divide by 450. In case of straw multiply the same as with hay but divide by 600 to 1000 according to the length of time in mow. The longer the time in mow, the smaller the division to be used.

He—Is she progressive or conservative?

Distractingly Lovely

"Now, girls," said the restaurant manager to the waitresses, "I want you all to look your best today. Add a dash of powder and take a bit more care with your hair."

"Something special on?"

"No; the beef's tough."

True or False

A man's excited voice came over the telephone in the police station. "My wife has disappeared," he cried.

"Describe her, sir," he was asked.

"Tall and broad, 6 feet high, weight 180, steel blue eyes—"

"Just a minute sir; when did she disappear?"

"Three weeks ago."

"Three weeks ago! Why didn't you come to us before?"

"At first I couldn't believe it," came the answer. "I thought I was dreaming!"

Land Girl - -

Gripping her case, the land girl trudged along the lane. It was little more than a cart-track, and muddy underfoot. There was no sign of farm or building, but after walking about a quarter of a mile she topped a rise, and there below her was a farmhouse amid its little cluster of buildings. It was not a very large house and obviously belonged to a small farm. The girl gave a slight shiver as she contemplated its lonely isolation.

The house door was opened by a large, middle-aged woman whose ample form filled the open doorway. She wore an old-fashioned dress with a high collar and a large cameo brooch at the neck. A faint indefinable air of pleasant homeliness, mixed with respectable methodism, seemed to pervade her person.

"Mrs. Drew?" asked the land girl.

"Yes, my dear—come in; come in, do," said Mrs. Drew with warm welcome. "Dada," she called as she bustled the girl into the kitchen, "here's our land girl."

A rather bent old man rose from a seat beside the fireplace. "Good afternoon, miss," he said, advancing a hand. His hand had the rough feel of a manual worker; he seemed to draw it across hers, as though testing the hardiness of the skin.

A voluminous pair of dark-blue bloomers were spread across the back of a chair in front of the fire in unblushing display. "Now, come near the fire, my dear," said Mrs. Drew, sweeping these aside, "and let's have those damp things off your back—what do they call you at home, my dear?"

"Jean," replied the girl.

"That's a pretty name. Now, make yourself at home, and I'll get some tea on—Herbert will be along in a minute. Dada always has a bad time with his back when it rains or he would be outside too."

Conscious of the old man's gaze upon her, the girl turned from the fire. He was appraising her slim figure in the tight-fitting jersey, breeches and stockings, with the dispassionate interest he might give to the examination of a young calf. "Not much to her, Mother," he remarked.

The girl flushed. Amongst the expensive gowns and costumes of Hillier's the slim perfection of her figure had been an asset, but on the land she felt acutely conscious of its apparent fragility. "I'm really quite strong, Mr. Drew."

"Yes, yes, I'm sure you are, my dear," said Mrs. Drew. "What you want to talk like that for, Dada?"

"Can you drive a tractor?" asked the old man, taking no notice of the interruption.

"Oh, yes," Jean replied eagerly. "They said that I was very good with a tractor."

"Ah, well, I reckon that will be a help," he said wtih resignation.

Mrs. Drew went to the back door. "Herbert," she called, "tea's ready."

A few moments later the girl heard heavy steps in the yard outside, the lifting of a latch on the back door, and then a creaking and a splash of water as a pump was worked in the scullery adjoining.

"That's Herbert," announced Mrs. Drew, busy with the tea things; then raising her voice, "Herbert, our land girl's here." By way of answer the girl heard hobnailed boots crossing the tiled floor of the scullery, and Herbert Drew appeared in the doorway, wiping his hands on a piece of towelling. He was tall and well built, with that stoop-shouldered slouch she had come to recognize in those who spend their lives working on the land. He has a good, mouth and chin, she decided, then became conscious of his gaze. It was the same dispassionate gaze as his father's and she was sufficiently feminine to feel piqued.

"How do you do?" he said in a quiet voice and turning to throw the towel behind him, made his way to the table. The men did not speak once of their own accord throughout the meal. Mrs. Drew put one or two questions to her son, which he answered briefly with strict economy of words, and plied the girl with questions concerning her home and previous work.

When the meal was finished, Herbert Drew pushed back his chair and said. "I'll show you round now."

She followed him into the yard and was shown the farm buildings and the stock that was in. "Dad mostly looks after the stock," he explained.

Then they set out across the fields. The largest of these was barely ten acres. Three had barley, two wheat, another was divided between sugar-beet and potatoes, and yet another had mangolds. A good crop of hay was cocked up ready for carting. "We'll start on that tomorrow if it is dry enough," Herbert remarked.

When they reached the farmyard again Herbert Drew asked suddenly, "What made you start this?"

Jean hesitated, finding it difficult to tell him of her real reasons. Of the dissatisfaction with the artificiality of her life which had slowly grown within her; of the increasing difficulty she had found in the infusion of the correct amount of polite enthusiasm into "That, modom is exactly your style"; of her distaste for so many of the wealthy women with so little to do, that she had to serve; and of the whole demoralizing atmosphere of pandering to wealth. Instead, she answered rather lamely, "I always liked the country."

"Well, it's hard work—too hard for you, perhaps—but I had no option. I can't get a man and there is too much for me and Dad."

"I'll do my best, Mr. Drew," she said, a little stiffly.

Then they went in for supper.

After supper, as she tried to read the book she had brought with her, the land girl sensed something of the atmosphere of quiet peace that filled that little farmhouse. Old Mr. Drew smoking his pipe in the corner by the fire, Mrs. Drew patching and darning in the seat opposite, Herbert Drew reading the Farmer and Stockbreeder.

Jean was called at half-past six on the following morning, and went down to help old Mr. Drew in a farmyard still misty with early morning haze. Breakfast was at eight, and afterwards she helped in the yard again.

About 10 o'clock Herbert Drew returned from the hayfield. "Hay's dry enough," he announced and crossed over to the cart-shed, where he started up a Ford truck. "Can you drive this?" he asked the girl. She nodded and he opened the door for her on the driver's side. He took the seat beside her.

"Draw up there," said Herbert Drew, pointing to the nearest haycock. "When I sing out take her on to the next." Jumping out he started to pass the hay up to his father. As soon as the cock was loaded he called out "Next," and she moved the truck on. They worked steadily until the truck was loaded, when Herbert climbed in beside her and told her to drive back easily to the farmyard. Once or twice he pointed out the best part of the track to take; for the rest of the time he was silent. The big load seemed to sway with each lurch of the truck on the uneven track, but all arrived safely at the stackyard.

There they started to build the stack. Old Mr. Drew tossed the hay down to her, and she in turn passed it to Herbert as he moved round the stack, building it up. Jean soon found that the loose stuff was difficult to handle. A large forkful would land at her feet with a soft swish, and she would swing her fork to pick it up and pass it on, but always some of it fell off as she failed to gather it all at the first attempt. Steadily the hay accumulated about her and, swing her fork as she would, it slowly piled up. Then Herbert Drew would step over and with two or three powerful sweeps of his pitchfork clear the accumulation from around her.

The sun blazed hotly, bringing out the sweet, strong smell of fresh-cut hay, which rose in suffocating waves. The soft stuff was difficult to stand in, putting a strain on her legs, which ached behind the knees. The unaccustomed labor soon made her arms and shoulders ache also, so that when the truck was empty she was glad to climb into the seat for the drive back to the field.

Without respite the morning passed, until Mrs. Drew called them in to dinner. Then men spoke rarely throughout that time. When they did so it was usually to give her some instruction. After her labors on the stack it felt strangely peaceful and restful sitting in the truck listening to the men loading, and waiting for the word to move on.

Dinner was the most welcome meal Jean had known, for in spite of the heat her appetite was keen. After the meal the men lit their pipes and smoked for ten minutes; then, with a sudden scraping of his chair on the tiled floor that startled her from a half sleep, Herbert Drew rose and reached for his cap. His father knocked out his pipe without a word and did likewise. With some reluctance she left her chair and followed them.

The afternoon passed in the same unchanging routine, while the stack rose steadily. Soon the land girl was on the same level as the loaded truck, and as it emptied the old man was passing hay up to her. When they reached the final stages of each unloading she found that her arms ached more and more and each forkful of hay gained added weight, so that she watched the bottom of the truck appear with increasing relief. Occasionally the men drank cold tea from a large bottle. Herbert Drew offered her some. "It don't taste much," he said, "but it's good for the thirst". The tea was without sugar or milk and tasted bitter, but she found that it quenched the thirst and refreshed her.

About five o'clock came the call to tea. The land girl sank wearily and grateful into her chair, her whole body one tired ache. But the tea revived her considerably. As soon as the meal was over Herbert Drew lit his pipe and reached for his cap. "Ready?" he said; then, looking at the girl: "Not too tired, are you?" For the first time Jean thought that she detected a note of personal interest in his words, but whether it was through consideration for her or the work that remained to be done, she was not sure.

"I'm all right, Mr. Drew," she declared as she rose from her seat.

"Well, let me know if you want a rest," he said, turning away.

During the next three hours the girl found that the human body contains many reserves of strength. Time and time again she thought that she would have to give in, but managed to keep on, with her thoughts on the rest she would have during the next loading. Her arms became leaden weights that swung the fork with automatic effort, and the work became increasingly difficult as the stack rose. With greater frequency Herbert Drew had to come to her rescue, and several times the old man had to wait for her.

Just before nine Herbert Drew said, "That'll do for today, I reckon." There was the quiet satisfaction in his voice of one who has accomplished a good day's work. Then, to the girl, "Go on in to supper. I'll put the truck away."

The land girl was leaning back in her chair by the fire, when she heard Herbert Drew enter the scullery through the back door and start the now familiar creek of the old pump. Mrs. Drew was in there also and spoke in a low voice to her son. The girl's hearing seemed at the moment to be strangely acute, for she caught the words, "How is she, son?" from Mrs. Drew.

"She'll do," replied Herbert Drew. "She's bred from the right stock."

When they entered the kitchen for supper they found the land girl fast asleep in her chair, a smile on her lips.

Gone

A Traveler was wandering across the Rockies in search of a man to whom he had been given a letter of introduction.

After a long and tedious journey he hailed a wild-looking fellow who was smoking outside a shack.

"Does Hard Pete live near here?" asked the traveler.

"No," said the man.

"Then can you tell me where I can find his friend and neighbor, Roughhouse Joe?"

"I'm Roughhouse Joe!"

"Well, they told me Hard Pete lived within gunshot of you."

"He did."

Good Old Standby Is Hot Meat Pie

Hello Homemakers! Just as soon as the winds pipe a little higher, menfolk (especially) praise a hot meat pie. And we homemakers should smile because its a splendid way to use up those ends from the small roast.

If you are buying meat for pie, choose a piece of round steak or lean brisket and cut into cubes (about 2-inch size). Brown the meat in a little fat, using a frying pan; then empty into a narrow, deep pot with a tight fitting lid so it can stew away without scorching. Add a tin of consomme, or 4 cups tomato juice, or a cube of concentrated beef dissolved in water, or vegetable juices to cover, and let it simmer while you prepare cubed carrots, sliced onions and some diced celery which you put in along with seasonings. Let it simmer (not too fast) until done and serve with a lot of parsley sprinkled on top. For a special pie, put into a casserole, stir in ½ cup sliced mushrooms and top with a good pie crust. Bake until richly browned.

A good old-fashioned beefsteak and kidney pie is a favourite, and its the most savoury of meat dishes with its rich gravy and topping of light fluffy biscuit or flaky pie pastry.

Beefsteak and Kidney Pie.

1½ pounds chuck steak, cut in strips; 3 lambs' kidneys, 1½ teaspoons fat, 6 cups boiling water, 1 large onion, peeled and sliced; 1 large potato, peeled and sliced; 1 teaspoon salt, pepper.

Cut chuck steak into strips; core, split and quarter lambs' kidneys. Sear meat in fat. Add boiling water and simmer 1¼ hours or until tender. Place meat in individual casseroles. Add onion and potato, sliced. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Thicken gravy from the meat and pour a little into each casserole. Bake in electric oven of 450 degrees F. for 30 minutes or until potatoes and onions are tender. Roll pastry ⅛ inch thick. Cut 6 circles the size of the tops of casseroles; slash and place on top of the meat. Bake 15 minutes longer. Yield: 6 servings.

Chicken Pie

Cut up a boiling fowl and stew slowly until tender in a deep pot, using enough water to cover. Allow 3 hours for 4 lbs. Add carrots, onions and potato cubes. Season with salt, pepper and sage. Drain off liquid and thicken; pour over meat and cover with biscuit dough. Bake in electric oven at 425 degrees F. for 15 minutes.

Shepherd's Pie

4 cups cooked beef, cut in 1-inch cubes; 2 cups cooked small onions, 2½ cups gravy, 3 cups seasoned mashed potatoes, 1 egg, beaten.

Arrange the meat, carrots, and onions in 1½ quart casserole or in 6 individual casseroles. Pour over the gravy (or tomato juice and meat extract cube), then top with the mashed potatoes to which the beaten egg has been added. Bake in a hot oven of 450 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

Flank Steak en Casserole.

1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-3 cup vinegar, salt and pepper, 2 onions, sliced; 2 pounds flank steak, hot water.

Make a paste of the dry mustard, vinegar and salt and pepper. Slice onions very thinly. Cover steak with the paste and place in a baking dish. Cover with onion slices. Add sufficient water to cover. Cover and bake in an electric oven for 1½ hours at 350 degrees F.

TAKE A TIP

1. Protect wool blanket by stitching a wide band of heavy cotton at top and bottom.

2. Use two spoons instead of a fork when you turn a roast. The fork permits valuable juices to escape.

3 If water has been spilled on some of the pages of a book, slip a piece of a blotter on each side of the wet pages immediately. Press with a warm iron.

4. The remove fish odour from frying pan add dry mustard to dishwater.

5. Soak a new broom in hot strong salt water to make it last longer.

THE QUESTION BOX

Mrs. R. B. asks: What causes grape jelly to become granular?

Answer: Grape juice should mellow by standing overnight before it is boiled to jellying point. Or, too much sugar may have been the cause.

Mrs. J.T. suggests a small strip of leather makes an excellent button loop on garments that get hard wear. Use scraps from old gloves or handbags.

IN MEMORIAM.

MacGREGOR—In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away October 14th, 1936.

Two loved hands are resting
A voice we loved is still,
A father we loved is waiting for us
Just over the hill.

You left us, oh, so quickly,
You never said good-bye
But we know that you are watching us,
From your beautiful home on high.
Always lovingly remembered by wife and family.
