Eggs

We have emphasized, on several occasions the importance of marketing your Eggs fresh. Still, for all, we are getting a very large percentage of held eggs, and Montreal is getting overstocked with that kind of Eggs. One big Wholesale House told us that they had over 1000 cases of held firsts they could not sell without a big sacrifice. Consequently the price is dropping in that particular stock, and instead of the price going up like it usually does at this time of year, the market is very quiet, with an easy undertone to the market.

Flour and Feed

We have a good supply of Millfeed and Flour on hand. The market is firm with no millfeed accumulating at the big mills.

Argentine Corn

FORMER MORRISBURG BOY ADDS NEW INVENTION TO HIS RADIO RECORD

For several years Roy A. Weagant was engaged in commercial radio work. At present he is closely associated with Dr. Lee De Forest. He has contributed a number of improvements in radio work and his most recent invention of a method of eliminating static interference is, perhaps, his most important and interesting patented ideas. Mr. Weagant is a Canadian, having been born at Morrisburg, in 1881. He was educated at Stanstead College at Stanstead, Que., and is a graduate of McGill University in 1905. He studied physics under Sir Ernest Rutherford and first became interested in wireless through witness ing some of his experiments with Hertzian waves. He gained his engineering experience while employed with the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Company and with the Westinghouse Company of Pittsburg. He took up commercial wireless work in 1908 and entered the service of the Marconi Company in 1912 where he gained the position of Chief engineer. He was appointed chief engineer of the Radio Corporation of America in 1920.

DEATH BY STARVATION FACES HALF A MILLION CHINESE PEOPLE

Hankow.—Penned up more than a month before by the Red Cantonese armies besieging the city, a half million Chinese people face death by starvation, cold and gunfire in Wuchang. Large numbers of dead lie in the streets. Those remaining have eaten dogs, cats and rats and are dropping in public places or dying miserably in shelters into which they have crawled.

The northern troops of Marshal Wu Pei-Fu, garrisoning the city, having been refused terms of surrender, are holding on desperately, hoping for armies of their ally, Sun Chuan Feng, to break through the Cantonese cordon.

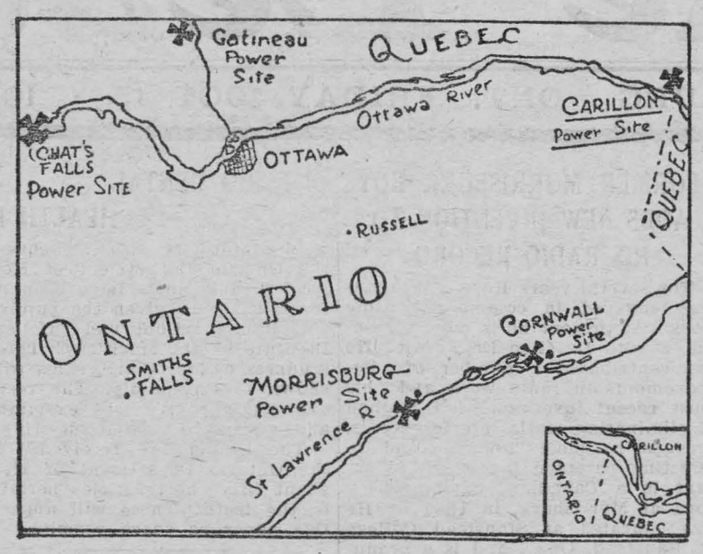

Meanwhile the relentless and well-fed Cantonese outside the walls rest patiently on their arms, having blockaded all exits from the city, and await the time when they shall enter. What will happen then is not known.

The Cantonese have notified the defenders that next Sunday they will loose a general bombardment upon the city of misery, firing from Hanyang arsenal across the Yangtse River and pouring shells from Pagoda and elsewhere in the iron ring upon the suffering people.

A vestige of mercy has been shown. Beginning last Sunday, women and children of the impoverished classes have been permitted to pass through the gates of the river, seeking passage across to Hankow. Thirty-eight thousand have been rescued by boats bearing the emblem of the Red Cross and taken to Hankow to be cared for.

Scenes of horror are witnessed each trip of the boats. In the fight for places on the boats, several hundred have been trampled to death as the maddened hordes struggled for rescue. Many, thrown into the river, are drowned. Next Sunday, if they have not escaped, the rain of fire will pour upon them, for the gates will be closed.

Only a few miles away are the troops of Sun Chuan-Fang, ruler of the five provinces of Eastern China, trying to thrust aside the Cantonese who oppose their march to the relief of beleaguered Wu Chang. Seemingly relief must come to the Wu Chang defenders within a few days.

BIG POWER DEVELOPMENT WORKS AT CARILLON

This map indicates the location of the Carillon power site which is on the Ottawa river, 260 miles from Toronto, at the point where the interprovincial boundary leaves the river and turns southward towards the St. Lawrence. The relative locations of other power sites in eastern Ontario are shown, including that at Morrisburg, where Ontario could obtain 750,000 h.p., and Chat's Falls, where Ontario's share might be 150,000 h.p. The development at Carillon may reach between 250,000 and 300,000 h.p., and it is believed that Ontario will be given 100,000 h.p. of the total. Ontario is now under contract to take 260,000 h.p. developed by private interests on the Gatineau at the point indicated on the map. Inset appears a small map of the Carillon vicinity. The border at that point is shown on maps to run along the shore whereas elsewhere it is in midstream. Ontario claims that the maps are faulty and that half of the water at that point belongs to her. This contention probably obtains partial recognition in the arrangement now agreed to by Premier Ferguson.

DEVICE TO PREVENT RAILWAY ACCIDENTS INVENTED BY VANCOUVER MECHANIC

Vancouver, B.C.—Joseph W. Saunders, 40, Vancouver inventor, announces that he has perfected a device through which he believed it would be possible to eliminate 99 per cent. of all railway accidents.

Saunders explained the device as consisting of a low voltage electrical wire running along railway tracks, which, when affected by open switches, broken rails, washouts, slides, or burned bridges, will automatically bring approaching trains to a halt in time to avert accidents.

Two railway accidents such as he hopes his invention will eliminate have played important parts in Saunders' life. Both his parents were killed in a wreck near Hamilton, Ont., 38 years ago, while his own career as a locomotive fireman was cut short by injuries received when he was 28 years of age, between Port Arthur, Ont., and Duluth, Minn.

"It was an open switch that caused the accident," said Saunders. "I saved my train by reversing the engine and applying the air brake, but with the loss of eyesight in one eye and several broken ribs my railroad days were over. I became a mechanic."

ONTARIO HOLSTEINS WIN MANY PRIZES

Detroit, Mich.—Canada scored a fine clean-up in the Holstein cows, judged Thursday afternoon in the National Dairy Show, when it took prizes in nearly every class, just as it had in the morning session when bulls were judged. The stalls which housed the twenty-five head of cattle sent by the members of the Ontario Holstein Breeding Association had so many ribbons in the fore that it looked like a decorative scheme.

The best showing was made in the class for heifers not in milk, one year and under eighteen months. Here the Ontario men scored one, two, for the Dominion, the blue ribbon going to J. W. Innes, of Woodstock, on his fine animal, C. V. Alcarta Tortilla Ormsby, and the second prize to Haley and Lee, of Springford, on Tensen Teake Abbekerk.

Thirty-two animals competed in this class, the largest number seen during the day in one group. Judge Moscrip took great care in his selection when he picked two animals from the Dominion to lead the line.

Other wins in the cow division were: Aged cow, ninth place, to Pontiac Gerken Queen, owned by Arbogast Brothers, of Sebringville; sixth place, same class, to Gypsie Posch Ruby, owned by Saley and Lee. Cows, between four and five years, fourth to Belle Abbekerk Dewdrop, owned by James Rettie, Burgessville. Cow, between three and four, fifth place, to Ourvilla Rhetta Echo, owned by Haley and Lee. Heifer, between two and three years, third, to Belldine Johanna Spofford, owned by J. W. Innes, Woodstock; sixth, to Pauline Banostine Ormsby, owned by Haley and Lee; ninth, to Bessie Posch Pontiac, owned by Arbogast Bros. Heifer, between 18 months and two years: ninth, to Aggie Sylvia, owned by J. W. Innes. Heifer calf, sixth place to Daisy Mercena, owned by D. A. McPhee, of Vankleek Hill; while third in the same class went to Sprucedale Jemima Burke, owned by D. Smith and Son, Glanforth Station.

King Abbekerk Susie, entered by Haley and Lee, was awarded third place in class one on the day's program. This class is for bull calves, four months old and under one year. In class two for bulls one year and under eighteen months, Maplecrest Albert Canary Sylvia, another Canadian bull entered by Leroy Siddall and J. F. Gibbons, of Denfield, took fourth prize.

Third prize in the fourth class for bulls between two and three years old also went to the Dominion when Abbekerk Sylvius Lad, owned by J. W. Innes, of Woodstock, was awarded the ribbon. The red ribbon for aged bull went to Sir Francy Mercent Burke, owned by D. A. McPhee, of Vankleek Hill. Ivan Burke, owned by T. O. Dolson, Brampton, Ont., won second place in contest for eighteen months to two years old Holstein Fresian bulls. King Abbekerk, owned by Haley and Lee, Springfield, Ont., won third place in bulls under one year, and Abbekerk Sylvanus Lad, owned by J. W. Innes, Woodstock, Ont., won third place in class two-year-old and under three.

Canada's Mineral Prosperity.

Victoria, B.C.—"Conditions in the mining industry of Canada are better throughout the whole country than I have ever known them in my time," said Charles Camsell, Canadian Deputy Minister of Mines, and chief executive officer of the Canadian Government in mining matters, who has arrived here after a coast-to-coast tour. "The coal industry is free of labor troubles. Production in the metalliferous mines promises to be the greatest on record this year. Since about 1900 our production has been steadily increasing at the average rate of $6,500,000 annually, and it is probable that the increase this year will be even greater."

French Chefs to Sign Menus as Works of Art

Paris.—Restaurant menus are to be recognized as works of art in the great restaurants of Paris. They are to be signed, like great pictures, with the name of the artists—the chef who prepares them. Demands from the customers for the names of the men who have prepared superb dishes that have pleased, as well as a ralization on the part of the proprietors that it is good business to make the names known, have led to the step.

Peasant Suddenly Enriched As Car of King Kills Dog

Berne.—Caesar was a fine dog, of no specific race or creed. However, he was a good watchdog, and when a friend recently proposed to acquire him to guard his house, the owner suggested 60 francs might be considered a reasonable price. The matter was being argued on a Berne street when suddenly, like a juggernaut, a big motor car swung round the corner. All financial discussion ended, for Caesar had wagged his tail for the last time. While the irate owner threatened dire vengeance the chauffeur conversed in an undertone with a tall gentleman reclining in the motor car, and then handed him a bank note. And as the car disappeared down the street Caesar's astonished master found himself richer by 1,000 Swiss francs, while the gossips gathered around the market pump to discuss the generosity of King Albert of the Belgians.

England Guards Secret of New Giant Airship

London.—The utmost secrecy is being maintained in building England's giant airship, the R-101, for England-India-Australia service. Armed guards keep all visitors away from the hangars and each one of the 300 persons employed in its construction is sworn to secrecy. Various groups of workers are strictly confined to separate parts of the erection work and not more than half a dozen persons know anything about the complete plans for the airship, which it is hoped will gain for Great Britain the supremacy of the air.

London Ancestor He Traced 300 Years Proves Absconder

London.—Mayfair is having a laugh at the expense of an American who came all the way to Europe to trace his ancestor of some three hundred years ago who was a taxpayer in Holborn, a section of London.

The books were brought down from their dusty shelves and in due time the name of the ancestor was found. Opposite his name was the remark: "Absconded without paying his rates."

Indians Saved Themselves in Florida Hurricane

Washington.—Not one of the 500 Seminole Indians whose homes were destroyed by the recent hurricane that wrought so much damage in Florida was killed, an agent of the Dept. of the Interior reported to-day. The Indians saved themselves by abandoning their homes and lying flat on the ground, and holding on to palmettos with their hands until the storm was over.

DROWNING ACCIDENTS IN VARIOUS LOCALITIES

Two C. P. R. Conductors Perish—King of Bootleggers and Mechanic Believed Drowned in Lake Erie.

North Bay, Ont.—W. P. Flemming and Emmett Trahan, both conductors on the C. P. R. and residing in North Bay, were drowned in a lake near Kipawa while fishing. Their bodies were recovered. As there were no witnesses to the drownings it is not known how they occurred.

The men, after completing their run from Mattawa to Kipawa, went to the lake to fish, as they had done many times in the past.

Conductor Flemming was one of the older conductors on the C.P.R., having entered the service in July, 1905. Conductor Trahan became connected with the railroad in 1908.

Niagara Falls, Ont.—It is feared that Aaron Vandevere, Port Colborne, popularly known as the king of bootleggers, with an unnamed mechanic, have lost their lives in the waters of Lake Erie. They have been missing since Tuesday morning. Vandevere, with his son, own a fleet of eight boats. He left Port Colborne on Monday night for Dunkirk and reported out of that place at two Tuesday morning and has not been seen since. It is believed that his craft, a cabin cruiser, took a nose dive in the lake. All the Vandevere boats with the Dunkirk fishermen are searching for the missing men.

Mr. Vandevere is rated as one of the best navigators of Lake Erie. He will be remembered for his part in the fight in Canadian waters with the United States coast guard vessels earlier in the summer and appeared a few days ago on a charge of stealing a machine gun from the United States patrol boat.

Port Dover.—Captain Duncan MacDonald, of the fishing tug Dimmie John, picked up the body of a man ten miles east of Long Point and brought it to this port.

The man, who was apparently about 60 years of age, had a clearance for the four-ton gasoline boat Tourist from Port Colborne to Erie, Penn., with 150 cases of whiskey made out in the name of H. Gibson and dated Monday.

It may be safely conjectured that the Tourist has foundered, and that the other occupant of the craft is also dead.

The man had a life-preserver on, and, in the opinion of Coroner Dr. A. H. Cook, had died in the early hours of the morning. In the pockets of his clothes were $84 in bills, some loose change and a car owner's license for a car made out for A. F. Vandeveer, 233 Charlotte Street, Port Colborne.

London, Ontario, Honors Brave English Girl

London, Ont.—Honoring Ethel Langton, 15-year-old daughter of the keeper of St. Helen's Fort lighthouse, Bembridge, Isle of Wight, for her courage and endurance in keeping the light burning for three days during a gale last March, the St. George's Society of this city has sent her a unique medal of recognition. The medal is in the form of a Canadian $5 gold piece, set in gold maple leaves. It bears the following inscription: "To Ethel Langton, for courage and endurance. By St. George's Society, London, Canada."

It will be recalled that Miss Langton's parents made a dash to shore to replenish provisions just previous to the Isle of Wight storm and were not able to get back. For three days and nights their daughter was alone with only her pet dog for companionship. She kept the big beacon burning, climbing 20 feet up a steel ladder at intervals to replenish the oil. All the food she had was a loaf of bread.

Date of Royal Wedding is Set for November 20

Stockholm.—The wedding date of Princess Astrid of Sweden and Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium has been set for Nov. 20 in Brussels.

Newly revealed details of the courtship show that the young couple met oftener than hitherto realized. While the world press was linking the name of Princess Astrid with the Prince of Wales she was maintaining frequent correspondence with the Belgian heir. Last summer he spent a considerable period at the country estate of Princess Astrid's parents, Fridhem, in Osthergothland, and in Denmark they met at the baptism of a common relative.

The young Prince has made an excellent impression on the Swedish public, and the match meets with overwhelming popular favor.

Former British Officer Earns Living Making Telephone Directories.

London.—One of the queerest jobs in London is thumb-slotting telephone directories. The work brings the man who does it, an ex-army officer, an income of about $5,000 a year.

He hit on the idea through having difficulty in finding an address in the telephone book. Thinking that much time could be saved to city firms if each alphabetical section was thumb-slotted, he bought a concave chisel, a hammer, and a small steel stamp for each letter of the alphabet. He calls on clubs, business firms and private houses and charges 2 shillings for each book thumb-slotted. The task takes him about ten minutes. He can easily index fifty book a day and is never out of work, as new directories are frequently issued.

Good Reception.

Tides and volcanoes, it appears, are two of the latest culprits that have been caught in the act of disturbing the radio peace. At least this is the theory advanced by a man who has spent the last year investigating radio conditions south of the equator. But this does not mean that reception in South America is not in many instances of the very finest. "I found reception best," this man wrote in reporting to the concern for which he has been working, "in Saltillo, Mexico, a place 5,000 feet high. Here on a five-tube set were received the Canadian stations and North American stations from the Atlantic to the Pacific." There are not many radio enthusiasts in Canada who could report on any better success than this.

GOD KNOWN BY SPIRITUAL SENSE

Material Knowledge Alone Interferes.

Christian Science Doctrine Explains its Growth in Favor.

The lecture broadcast from Massey Hall, Toronto, last Sunday afternoon, as advertised in these columns, was given by Charles I. Ohrenstein, C.S.B., a Jew who saw that in Christian Science the teaching and practice of Christ Jesus should not antagonize Judaism. He said in part:

A great many people may now be said to know something about Christian Science. They know that many have been healed by it; that many have been made more useful men and women since becoming Christian Scientists; better husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, children, neighbors, friends, citizens. Many reputable doctors now acknowledge that Christian Science heals, and recommend it to patients whom they cannot cure. Many clergymen acknowledge that it is reforming a great many people, and that it is accomplishing a great deal of good in the world. But because most people are still unacquainted with the method by which these good works are brought about, with the teachings and application of Christian Science, its good works are still quite frequently attributed to other causes than that of which they are the demonstration and result,—to other causes than to the power of God and of His Christ. The reason, it is but fair to assume, is not always the desire to be unjust to Christian Science. For generations upon generations people have become so used to trusting only material means to overcome troubles and to restore and maintain health, and so disused to trusting God to help them that they find it difficult, if not impossible, to believe the Bible promises and assurances that God is "a very present help in trouble;" that He "healeth all thy diseases," and that in reality it is God who does so whether He is credited with doing it or not. Nor can the prevalent distrust in God be looked upon as strange when the training and customs of mankind through centuries upon centuries are taken into account; for, as Shakespeare said, "Use almost can change the stamp of nature," and the true nature of man is to trust God.

The reflection of any of you here in a mirror must be obedient to you; or it could not be your reflection. Just so the reflection of God, man,—which means every one of us,—must be obedient to God, to good, in order to be man. Obedience to God, then,—that is, obedience to all that is right, and good, and beautiful, and pure,—constitutes the true man, and no one can be, nor is, man without this obedience. It is by the true teaching as to what we really are, that Christian Science encourages and spurs us on to reclaim and to regain ourselves. It not only promises; it fulfills. Listening to it and obeying its demands, we mount higher, become more able, and more free; and through complete obedience to its teachings can that complete freedom for which we long, the kingdom of God on earth, be gained.

A Composer.

A woman was taken the other day to see the composing-room of our printing works.

"This," said her escort, "is the composing-room."

"Do ask him," she said, "to play something of his."

Still in the Distance.

A very small boy was standing in the middle of a country lane with a large shot-gun, when a stranger came along and asked him:

"What are you hunting, little man?"

Rub your scalp with Minard's Liniment

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

In the days of our grandfathers rheumatism was thought to be the unavoidable penalty of middle life and old age. Almost every elderly person had rheumatism, as well as many young people. It was thought that rheumatism was due to exposure to cold and dampness, and it was treated with liniments and hot applications which sometimes gave temporary relief but did not remove the trouble. In those days there were many rheumatic cripples. Now medical science understands that rheumatism is a disease of the blood and that with good red blood any man or woman of any age can defy rheumatism. There are now many elderly people who have never felt a twinge of rheumatism, because they have kept their blood in good condition, and there are many who have conquered it by building up their weak, watery blood. The blood-enriching qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is becoming every year more widely known and the more general use of these pills has robbed rheumatism of its terrors. At the first sign of thin, impure blood protect yourself against the ravages of disease by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have helped thousands—if you give them a fair trial they will not disappoint you. Their value in the case of rheumatism is proved by the statement of Mr. Finlay Beaton, Blackstone, N.S., who says:—"I feel it a duty to tell you of the wonderful benefit I derived from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I suffered untold agony from rheumatism and a run-down condition. The trouble left me incapable of work of any kind, and for a part of the time I was unable to move without the assistance of a cane. I took different medicine from doctors, and also other remedies that were recommended, but did not improve and had about given up hope of getting better when a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did this with the result that within four months I was as well a man as ever I had been. I can say that I was a complete wreck when I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and that this medicine completely built up my health. This was some years ago, and I have had no return of the trouble since. I give this statement hoping it will benefit others."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

And Everything Moves in Curves.

Hubby (explaining late arrival)—"Just as soon as the lodge meeting was cut I came on a straight line for home."

Cultured Wifie (doubtfully)—"Well, I suppose that is technically the truth. Astro-physicists say straight lines are only parts of curves."

The Likeness.

The near-sighted man and his wife were inspecting the latest art exhibit with critical care.

"That's the ugliest portrait I've ever seen," he cried angrily, striving vainly for a better view of the abomination.

"Come away, you fool," replied his wife. "You are looking at yourself in a mirror."

"We Have Been Friends."

Caroline Norton, who wrote the following verses, was a granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the dramatist. When very young she married the Hon. G. C. Norton, but the marriage was unhappy and ended in separation. This unhappiness led her to devote her life to literature and to the cause of women and children, and much legislation of recent years received its earlier impetus from her.

We have been friends together,
In sunshine and in shade,
Since first beneath the chestnut trees
In infancy we played.
But coldness dwells within thy heart,
A cloud is on thy brow;
We have been friends together:
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been gay together,
We have laughed at little jests;
For the fount of hope was gushing
Warm and joyous in our breasts.
But laughter now hath fled thy lip,
And sullen glooms thy brow;
We have been gay together:
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been sad together,
We have wept with bitter tears
O'er the grass-grown graves where slumbered
The hopes of earlier years.
The voices which are silent there
Would bid thee clear thy brow;
We have been sad together:
O, what shall part us now?

The First Mirrors.

Into a pool of clear water a woman (probably the first woman) gazed with quite as much satisfaction as her daughter of later years did into a glass of crystal clearness. That was the first mirror. Because a woman demanded a looking-glass that would be satisfactory on cloudy, windy days as well as on quiet, sunny ones was no doubt the reason why polished metal became popular and looking glasses were fashioned of burnished gold, silver and bronze, set in elaborate frames incrusted with precious stones. These were, of course, owned only by persons of great wealth, while the poorer folk used looking-glasses made of the baser metals.

Glass mirrors were not introduced until the fifteenth century, and during this century steel and crystal were favorite materials, while mirrors of glass were occasionally made. At first glass mirrors were very expensive. They were always made small and were often carried as an accessory of dress on a chain or ribbon. Many were beautifully mountedd and were given as tokens of friendship among persons of high degree.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS USE NO OTHER MEDICINE

Baby's Own Tablets Are the Ideal Remedy for Babies and Young Children.

Canadian mothers are noted for the care they give their little ones—the health of the baby is most jealously guarded and the mother is always on the lookout for a remedy which is efficient and at the same time absolutely safe. Thousands of mothers have found such a remedy in Baby's Own Tablets and many of them use nothing else for the ailments of their little ones. Among them is Mrs. Howard King, of Truro, N.S., who says:—"I can strongly recommend Baby's Own Tablets to mothers of young children as I know of nothing to equal them for little ones."

Boats.

How lovely is the sound of oars at night
And unknown voices, borne through windless air,
From shadowy vessels floating out of sight
Beyond the harbor lantern's broken glare
To those piled rocks that make on the dark wave
Only a darker stain. The splashing oars
Slide softly on as in an echoing cave
And with the whisper of the unseen shores
Mingle their music, till the bell of night
Murmurs reverberations low and deep
That droop towards the land in swooning flight
Like whispers from the lazy lips of sleep.
The oars grow faint. Below the cloud-dim hill
The shadows fade and now the bay is still.

Famous Wax Works to be Rebuilt.

Madame Tussaud's Wax Works, internationally famous ever since Dickens wrote his "Old Curiosity Shop," which was burned out in a great fire more than a year ago, is to rise again.

The new company, Madame Tussaud's (1926) Ltd., which was formed recently to take over the century-old interests of the show, has now actually taken possession of the immense building, which has been an empty shell ever since the fire.

A new building costing $1,000,000 is to be erected on the old site, and this, in adition to the wax figure exhibition, is to hold a motion-picture theatre and a restaurant. The famous "Chamber of Horrors," which was in the old exhibition miraculously survived the fire, and the other wax figures, representing the world's famous people, are to be reproduced.

Madame Tussaud's was originally started in France during the French Revolution. It came to England in 1802, traveled about the country and about ninety years ago settled permanently in London. Since then it has been the mecca of London's youth and of young and old from the provinces.

A visit to London without seeing Madame Tussaud's has never been considered complete. A great-grandson of the original Madame Tussaud is one of the directors of the new enterprise.

Motoring Luxury

In Its Highest Form

It is significant that a great proportion of Hupmobile Eight owners formerly drove far costlier cars.

For the Hupmobile Eight makes instant and compelling appeal to men and women constantly seeking new heights of luxury and performance.

To those well able to judge the finest in motoring, the Hupmobile Eight reveals the utmost of smooth performance, united to almost startling economy of investment, operation and upkeep.

The straight-eight, as Hupmobile has perfected it, brings to them silent, fluent power such as they had never before known, an ease of handling, a quick-footed acceleration totally new in their experience.

Drive the Hupmobile Eight yourself if you would realize why engineers, as well as seasoned owners, regard it as the highest development of the eight-in-line principle.

Compare its beauty, its driving facility, its outstanding performance, not only with higher priced cars but with those at or near its price.

Only in this way will you understand why this higher expression of motoring luxury is changing the buying trend in the fine-car field.

Ontario is Ablaze with Autumn's Splendour

Mr. City Dweller, where did you spend your boyhood days? Was yours the privilege of wandering through the fields and woodland where every tree and bush had been painted by the divine artist?

Today you say 'tis but the hectic flame of a dying year. Then it contained all the mystery of an enchanted palace.

Ontario's highways lead you to the land of yesteryear—over white roads flecked with fallen leaves, patterned here and there by checkered shadows of trees. Field and hillside are gay with fiery sumach. Maple groves aflame backed by the darker evergreen.

Through this lovely panorama, in every direction, leads Ontario's splendid system of highways. You are entitled to enjoy them, for they are yours. Keep in mind, however, that upon you will come the expense of maintaining them in proper condition.

Speeding eats away road surfaces. It "milks" your pocketbook for both motor and road upkeep. Moderate driving is far more economical and pleasurable.

By so doing you will greatly assist the traffic patrol who operate for everyone's safety — who have instructions to enforce the law rigorously.

The RED RAIN MYSTERY by HEADON HILL

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY.

Samuel Honeybun, known to his neighbors as a retired countryman who passed a great deal of time in studying the weather, finds a red fluid, which proves to be human blood, in his rain gauge. Five miles distant is the home of—

Sir Francis Lathrop of Lathrop Grange, whose dead body, with a knife wound in the neck, is discovered just back of the house the same morning Honeybun finds blood in his rain gauge. Suspicion is directed toward Sir Guy Lathrop, nephew of the murdered man. Sir Guy is betrothed to—

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Klyne shaped his pedestrian course for the Rectory of the village in which Lathrope Grange was situated.

That moment came when he was half way between the entrance gates and the front door of the Rectory. A buxom girl in a sky-blue overall, and wearing a sun-bonnet, was culling roses within a few feet of the carriage drive he was traversing. As he passed she looked up from her task and two pairs of very bright eyes clashed. The eyes in the alluring head of the rose-culler were of the distinctly "glad" variety. At least they assumed that state before they were demurely dropped to the basket of blooms.

"Miss Larkin?" he said, raising his hat.

"Yes. Did you want me" The eyes sought his again, no longer "glad" but charged with curiosity.

"Your name"—Klyne managed to convey that his business was a secondary consideration with him—"was given me by a gentleman whom I am not at liberty more definitely to refer to. I will be quite open with you, Miss Larkin. I am a detective, endeavoring to solve the mystery of Sir Lathrop's death. I was told that, as a friend of the family, you might be able to render me valuable assistance."

He left it to be inferred that he was an official detective from Scotland Yard, or at least from the county town, and to his joy this attractive young lady accepted him at that false valuation.

"I have never spoken to a detective before," she cooed. "Of course, I have read about them, though"—with a delightful blush—"I was not aware that they were gentlemen."

"There are exceptions," replied Klyne dryly. "Most of us try to live up to very high ideals—with more or less success, I hope."

"In your case the success is undoubted," Miss Larkin's fine eyes once more reinforced the silver tongue. "As to these Lathrops, now. I don't see how I can help you. They are very nice people, but you have been misinformed if you have been told that we are intimate. County magnates don't hunt in couples with poor clergy folk."

Was this the green-eyed monster of jealousy peeping out?

"I have been at the Grange already." Klyne pursued testing tactics. "Miss Margaret struck me as—" He purposely broke off, as if at a loss for the proper word, though inviting confidence with a knowing look.

"As a stuck-up minx?" Miss Larkin fell into the trap and supplied the hiatus, then stopped in confusion. "I oughn't to have said that," she murmured. "A regular little cat, ain't I?"

Klyne was about to question her as to the suspicion locally rife about Sir Guy, when a diversion occurred. A dog-cart turned in through the gates from the main road.

"Mr. Samuel Honeybun from Latchfield," Miss Larkin explained. "He is our great authority on rainfall and has probably come to compare notes with my father, who is his understudy in these parts."

"The man whose gauge contained human blood after the night of the Lathrop murder?" said Klyne.

"Yes, but you had better get it out of your head that there was any connection between the two occurrences," replied Adela sharply.

"It was never in my head," Klyne rejoined, while mentally noting the girl's resentment against the popular conception.

"Well, some of the wiseacres about here hold that idea, preposterous as it is. Latchfield is five miles away, and what purpose would the murderer gain by putting the blood of his victim into old Honeybun's rain-gauge?"

Adela's friendliness returned.

"None at all that I can see," said Klyne mildly. "Has your father got a gauge, Miss Larkin?"

"Of course, father has a rain-gauge, but don't you drag him into it."

"My dear Miss Larkin!" Klyne repudiated any such intention with all the force of face and gesture at his command. "On the contrary, I was building a theory to demolish the rain-gauge idea once for all. It is a sound argument that if your father possesses a rain-gauge and such an instrument was necessary to the scheme of the murderer the latter would have used the Rector's container close by instead of seeking one at a distance."

Adela's friendliness returned. The glad eye was in evidence again. "How clever of you," she purred. "I feel quite sorry for that murderer. I am sure you will catch him."

With a flourish of his hat the criminologist retreated in good order, and his thoughts were not wholly of crime as he struck into the road.

"Fetching little miss!" he muttered. "And as deep as the sea."

Back at Lathrop Grange, Klyne's ruminative gaze wandered round the cozy apartment and finally settled on the little wooden horse on the mantelshelf. Somehow the sight of the toy reminded him that Margaret Lathrop had given him permission to search her father's files on the chance that he might discover some record among the deceased baronet's papers that would bring to light from his earlier career a clew to his murder.

As usually happens to most of us, it was from the last drawer that he came to that Klyne extracted something that gave him pause. This was a faded cabinet photograph, dated by the costumes for the penultimate decade of the last century. It portrayed a handsome young man standing behind the seated figure of a pretty young woman holding a child two or three years old.

Klyne turned the photograph over and saw on the back the name of the "artist" with his address, also a number which probably was that of the negative registered for reference. He slipped the photograph into his pocket and half on hour later was in the train on his way to London. He was going to look up the antecedents of Sir Francis Lathrop's little wooden horse.

That day it was destined to lead him no farther than the studio of the photographer, whose name was still over the door in Beavis street, Brixton, a courteous, white-haired man in a velvet jacket adjusted spectacles and bent over the picture of the handsome young man, the pretty young woman and the child hugging the wooden horse.

"My work," said the veteran photographer proudly. "But I cannot remember the faces of the group. Just a moment, please, while I refer to my register."

"All right, Mr. Boscombe," replied Klyne affably. "It's you that's doing the favor. I'll wait as long as you like."

"This photograph was taken to the order of Mr. Frank Holloway on the 16th of April, 1889," he announced. "The half-dozen finished prints were sent to Mr. Holloway at Baralong Cottage, Putney Heath Road. Presumably the gentleman in the photo was Mr. Holloway and the lady and child were his wife and little son."

After a series of devious "connections" by train and tram he found himself in Putney Heath Road.

He had passed through a gate on to the sidewalk, when he had the feeling that he was being stared at. Looking up, he caught the gleam of aged, but undimmed and rather fierce eyes watching him from the window of a ground-floor room in a small house on the opposite side of the road. Acting on impulse, he went across and was met on the threshold by a gaunt old woman leaning on two sticks.

"I saw you coming," she quavered at him through toothless gums. "Anyone who is interested in Baralong Cottage interests me. Were you asking about the Holloways? Ah, I knew that sooner or later someone would do that. And of course they could tell you nothing. Come in, sir, and I will tell you what I know. It isn't much, but I was living in this house forty years ago, when the Holloways were over the road."

Klyne found himself in an old-fashioned parlor, of threadbare carpets, springless chairs and Victorian engravings. His hostess introduced herself as Miss Arabella Beazely. Folding her mittened hands, she proceeded:

"I am a very old woman, and though it is so long ago I was quite elderly when that young couple came to reside at Baralong Cottage. I always like to be neighborly, and I went across and called on them. They were both at home, and I quickly formed the opinion that Mr. Holloway was better born than his wife. In fact I had not known them many weeks when Mrs. Holloway told me so, and that they had made a runaway match of it to avoid offending her husband's family.

"That, I suppose, accounted for Mr. Holloway's long absences from home, frequently as much as a fortnight at a time, spent no doubt under his father's roof. In due course a boy was born, after which the young husband made longer stays, being from my observation much attached to the infant. But a great sorrow was in store for him, for the boy died when he was between three and four years old.

"The poor mother was broken-hearted, her one solace being, as she often told me, her husband's sympathy and kindness. Then trouble of another kind swooped upon them, though they were very reticent about it, and I never really learned the rights of the matter. A man called at the cottage one day and there was a dreadful quarrel. He remained inside half an hour, and when he came out he was cursing and shaking his fist at Mr. and Mrs. Holloway who had followed him to the door."

"What age was he?" Klyne interrupted the narrative.

"He wasn't old," replied the spinster primly. "I am no judge of men's ages, but he might well have been Mrs. Holloway's father. That is what I took him to be. I guessed that he had only just discovered their retreat and had been giving them a bit of his mind. Well, whether it was cause and effect I cannot say, but Mrs. Holloway died a month after that visit. Mr. Holloway at once sold the house, and I have never seen him since."

"Can you tell me who bought the cottage?" Klyne inquired.

"The purchaser was a City man of the name of Jessick—member of a firm called Jessick & Co., wholesale haberdashers," the aged spinster replied, with evident pride in her knowledge. "He bought the house as an investment and not for residence. He owns it still, I believe, and my acquaintance with every successive tenant has informed me that Mr. Jessick is not a good landlord. The tenants have great difficulty in getting him to do any repairs."

"That is what I have been endeavoring to convey to you, sir."

IN RADIO, YES, THIS IS A BATTERYLESS YEAR!

Judging from public demand and the report from the various Radio Shows in the United States and at the Canadian National Exhibition, the tendency in radio this year is undoubtedly towards Batteryless Sets. The real and only truly batteryless set is, of course, one that uses the raw alternating current in the tubes direct from the light socket—in which batteries are totally eliminated from the set—and it so happens that the only real set of this character that is exhibited this season is a Canadian achievement known as the Rogers Batteryless Radio.

This set exhibited at the Canadian National Exhibition probably attracted the most interest of any Radio, including many from the United States. Not only is it a Canadian development, but with over a year's steady progress behind it and now entering on its second year it has proven an undoubted success. The 1927 Models of the Rogers possess every convenience, including single-dial control, super-power amplification, volume control, metal-shielding and elimination of the aerial in most cases, in addition to the total elimination of all batteries.

A very interesting book entitled "Evidence" containing letters from owners of Rogers Batteryless Radio Sets throughout Canada, can be secured by anyone on request to the Q.R.S. Music Company of Canada, Limited, 590 King Street West, Toronto, Ont.

Throw away the Washboard—Use Rinso

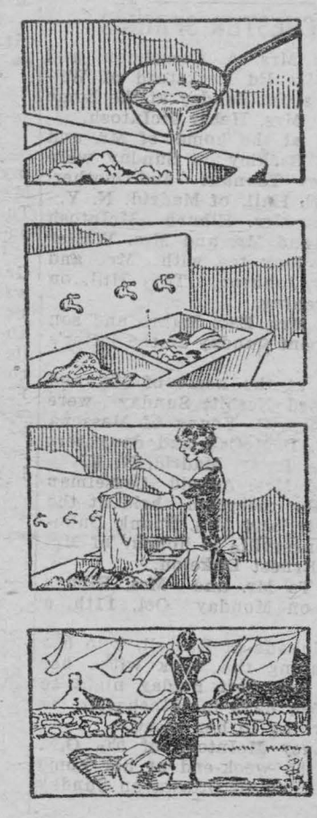

THE old-fashioned wash-day is gone. With it has gone the everlasting rub-rub-rubbing and ugly hands, lame backs, frazzled nerves and short tempers and a soapy odour all through the house.

You change the hard work of washing to just rinsing.

Just soak the clothes a couple of hours or overnight in Rinso suds, rinse, and that's all. Simple. Efficient. Time saving. Labour saving.

WAYS YOU CAN SAVE PLUMBING BILLS THIS WINTER

BY H. L. PATTERSON.

I am a practical plumber, and for several years have been working for farmers almost exclusively. Here are some cold-weather tips, picked up in this work, that might help you prevent or remedy trouble brought on by your water pipes freezing this winter. I received the following letter from a farmer who has his home lighted with acetylene:

"Dear Sir: My gas machine froze up, and I went down cellar with a light to thaw it out with hot water. I supposed the gas was all out of it, and thought there was no danger. I was mistaken. As it began to thaw out, there was an explosion, and the bottom of the machine blew out. Fortunately nobody was hurt."

The gas machine referred to in the letter is one of the approved acetylene generators; there is no better acetylene generator made.

I know of several fatal accidents resulting from the indiscreet use of some kind of light around these machines, but have never known of one to be blown up from any other cause. An electric flashlight is absolutely safe to use, it cannot ignite any escaping gas; but a lamp, lantern, candle, or match, must be taboo.

CAUSE OF EXPLOSIONS.

Last winter many water fronts in kitchen ranges exploded. These explosions were caused by the pipes between the water front and the range boiler freezing solid, thereby shutting off the circulation. Then, when a fire was started in the range, steam formed in the water front with sufficient pressure to burst the water front.

One range that came to my notice looked as if a stick of dynamite had caused the destruction. The range was beyond repair, the front plate being torn out, the fire brick knocked through into the oven, and one of the stove lids had gone through the ceiling. It is well to make sure that pipes between range and boiler are warmed their entire length before a fire is started, if there is any possibility that they are frozen.

VARIOUS PROBLEMS.

Thawing out frozen pipes presents a different problem in almost every case. One man, living miles from any plumber, successfully opened a frozen sewer by pushing a garden hose in the pipe. The other end of the hose was elevated and hot water poured in through a funnel. This brought hot water in direct contact with the ice; and, as it melted, the hose was pushed forward until the ice was passed. The idea is borrowed from the plan plumbers use in steaming out frozen pipes; and, while slower, it is just as effective.

In locating the frozen section of a pipe underground I always look for places where the pipe runs under wagon roads, cowpaths, or walks. Where the earth is packed hard the frost strikes much deeper than in soft earth. Sod offers double the protection of plowed ground. A foot or two of loose small stones placed over a pipe, and the rest of the trench filled with earth, is excellent protection. The dead air spaces between the stones are the insulating medium.

It is important to exercise every precaution against freezing of underground pipes if a considerable thaw follows a very cold snap, for the frost drives in farther than ever when the weather first turns warm. I have known pipes to freeze up in April that had been all right throughout the winter.

During the first warm days it is well to keep the water running where possible, and use the same precaution that was observed during the coldest weather.

THE WILFUL CHILD

BY MRS. J. KUBISTA.

Not until I was married and had children of my own did I discover how my mother overruled our wilfulness when we were children and got us to obey her without causing any disturbance; however, once I had learned her method I immediately applied it in the training of my children, and my success has won the admiration of all those knowing our family.

When my little daughter insists on wearing a certain dress contrary to my advice I don't stop to argue with her as to why she shouldn't wear it. I simply ignore her wilfulness, call her attention to some other matter and then go away apparently quite unconcerned. She may put the dress on and even wear it a while but her mind will be on the wrong she has done, and she won't be able to play with ease; back she'll go and put on the dress she knows I wanted her to wear.

If Robert fusses about going on an errand for me or insists on my waiting until he feels like going, I don't "nag" him; I simply go out-of-doors and get some little boy on the street to run the errand for me and as sure as can be, Robert will run the errand with him, a little ashamed of his disobedience.

When the children quarrel, I don't allow them to malign one another, nor do I wait for explanations of causes of the disagreement; I simply distract their attention with something else and they go back to their play, no one the victor or the loser.

There's a lot in that little trick of changing the subject or ignoring with deliberate calmness the stubborn willfulness of children. It certainly does more good than a lot of angry words giving rise to the children's temper and your own. My mother used to say, "My children have no temper," and I now can say almost the same thing for by not arousing their temper I have not made them aware of its existence and what they have is abated by my diversion or my silence, unconsciously teaching them to control themselves by their own thinking and reasoning.

Of course, not all children can be governed with equal ease by the same method. Child psychology teaches that we should constantly study each boy and girl with the purpose of giving the timely aid that the individual, developing thought needs. But in every case quietness and confidence are strong influences towards obedience, thoughtfulness and pleasing manners.

Bathroom Suggestions.

The bathroom cabinet is frequently filled with a varied assortment of articles, some of which can be replaced by more useful implements. Small outfits for polishing and cleansing shoes can fill one corner of the cabinet, while a small clothes brush finds its place near by.

It is convenient to have on another shelf a small brush for cleaning the bathtub, together with a tightly corked, plainly labelled bottle of kerosene. If a gas flame of any kind is used in the room care should be taken not to open the kerosene while a flame is burning. Gasoline is splendid for cleaning tubs, faucets, etc., but it must not be kept in the house nor used near a flame. A small box of some cleaning powder added to this shelf saves many steps.

On the outside of the cabinet two small brass hooks, one on either side, will prove useful. Upon one can be hung a strip of canton flannel about five inches wide for wiping dusty shoes. It is more sightly if hemmed on all sides, and it must have a loop or ring fastened to one corner. The words "Shoe Cloth" embroidered in an outline stitch are a protection against misuse. At the other side of the cabinet can be hung a similar strip of cloth for wiping razor blades. This can be cut from old face towels or bath towels. Such strips also should be hemmed and a loop sewed to one corner.

The commode brush can be kept neatly in an oblong bag made of pretty cretonne or linen and lined with oilcloth or rubber sheeting. A number of large eyelets should be embroidered in the outer covering and in the lining near the brush end of the bag in order to allow the brush to dry. The top of the bag can be finished with a hem and draw-tape or ribbon. The tape or ribbon ends can be used as loops for hanging.

The rubber mat for the shower bath should be thoroughly dried after using. In order to have the mat in a convenient yet out-of-the-way place, it may be hung on two small brass hooks placed near the shower. Two loops of rubber can be vulcanized to each corner of one end or a piece of tape can be sewed across one entire end and a tape-loop or a brass ring attached to each corner. Another easy way to keep this mat is to have a small glass towel rod near the shower on which to hang the mat, without any loops.

In a bathroom with walls tiled half way up, one mother found it a problem to place towel racks low enough for the smaller members of the family. She solved this problem by fastening inexpensive towel rods to the bathroom door so each little one had her own towels within reach.

Wintering the Tractor.

When the tractor is to be laid by during the winter months, see that it does not suffer from its winter idleness. Give it a dry winter home under a tight roof. Neglect during the off-season causes more rapid depreciation than hard work.

In getting the tractor ready for wintering, drain out all of the water from the cooling system. To remove the water from the radiator alone is not always sufficient. Many makes of tractors have two or three drain cocks and all of these should be opened to remove all the water. Consult the instruction book given to you when the tractor was purchased. If the machine is equipped with a water pump instead of the more common thermo-syphon system, run the engine for a time during and after the water cocks have been opened. A very little water allowed to remain will do untold damage. If the engine is run, all this will be forced out.

See that all important bearings and highly polished parts are well oiled to prevent moisture from rusting the surface. To insure a good film of oil on the inside cylinder surface, run the engine at full speed, then cut the spark suddenly. This will leave the piston rings and cylinder walls well coated with oil.

Essentials in French Polishing.

A perfectly smooth surface to work on is the first essential for successful French polishing. Nail-holes, cracks or other blemishes should be filled in and the article then treated with fine sandpaper. Every particle of dust and grease must also be removed.

If wood of a porous nature is to be polished it should first be gone over with a filler, made from whitening and turpentine mixed to a stiff paste and colored to the appropriate shade with burnt umber or other coloring matter.

The composition of French polish varies according to the nature of the work and the desired effect, but the simplest form consists of 60 oz. of shellac dissolved in a pint of denatured alcohol. Should any gum be included in the formula, the quantity of shellac must be proportionately reduced. Place the shellac and alcohol in a bottle and allow them to stand for about 48 hours. The bottle should be kept in a warm place. Before use, the mixture must be strained to extract any sediment.

A polisher's pad is required and is made from a piece of cotton-wool firmly folded into the shape of an egg, pointed at one end. This is inclosed by a piece of soft linen, not too fine, the ends being gathered up over the cotton-wool to form a handle. Open the pad and pour in a little polish at the back, never at the front. Dab the pad against the palm of the hand and bring the polish quickly through to the surface.

Cover the surface of the wood with polish, using a gentle, circular motion forming large figure of eight marks. Plenty of polish must be applied to the wood, but this needs to be done by successive coats, as the pad should never be more than moist. As soon as the coat becomes tacky it should be left to dry thoroughly before the next coat is applied.

To prevent the pad from sticking, the tip of the finger should be dipped in linseed oil and lightly dabbed once on its face. Do not stop in the middle of applying a coat or the polish will be liable to "pull off."

This process is known as "bodying in," and entails the application of about five coats, by which time a substantial shell of polish will have adhered to the surface. This will have a glossy appearance on which the traces of the rubbing pad will show. These marks disappear, however, and are replaced by the lustre when the final operation, known as "spiriting off," is carried out.

In spiriting off, the polish is gradually reduced by the addition of denatured alcohol till all the polish has worked out of the pad. The alcohol also must be put in at the back of the pad. Rub a trifle harder than before, still in the figure of eight method, until only alcohol is in the pad. Finally take a clear new pad and put a drop of alcohol into it, and rub fairly hard in the direction of the grain until the smears have disappeared and the surface has acquired the desired polish. The article should then be left to dry in a place free from draughts and dust. Great care ought to be taken at this stage to exclude grit, as scratches cannot be satisfactorily removed.

Packing Bees for Winter.

When packing bees to winter outside, a few precautions should be taken as follows, says Prof. Eric Millen of the O.A.C.: If possible, bees should be wintered behind or inside a natural windbreak, as this tends to very much more successful wintering than where bees are wintered without windbreaks. The packing materials used should be some material that will pack fairly close and shed water to some degree. Leaves and shavings are the two most economical, and most readily obtained packing materials that the beekeeper can use. Care should be taken to see that mice cannot enter from the top, and this is usually avoided by placing a queen-excluder between it and the tops of the frames. A bridge or tunnel must be provided from the hive entrance to the outside of the packing case, so that the bees can fly when conditions are suitable. The outside entrance should not be deeper than ⅜ of an inch, but can be 4 inches or more long. This will prevent mice getting into the entrance. The colonies should have four inches of packing all around and underneath, with eight or ten inches of packing on top. Bees can be packed in cases singly, in twos or fours, but should not be packed in long stands with more than six in one stand. Packing should be completed by the middle of November, and earlier if possible. Never attempt to winter colonies in a room above the ground, unless an outside entrance is provided.

Embroidered Short-Cut.

Outline designs may be embroidered on the sewing machine if the pattern is simple. The result is pleasing and a real short cut.

Wind the bobbin with heavy mercerized thread of any suitable color. It is best to loosen the lower tension to give an outline stitch effect. For cable stitching the upper tension should be loosened and not the lower. Lengthen the machine stitch and stitch on the wrong side of the goods. The pattern, of course, must be traced on the wrong side. The colored bobbin thread traces the design on the right side. Different effects may be obtained by experimenting with white or black thread on the spool.

FLOWERING BULBOUS PLANTS FOR WINTER CULTURE

By Henry J. Moore.

October is the month to buy and to pot bulbs for culture in our living rooms. As a rule these winter flowering plants are not difficult to grow to perfection. There are, however, certain principles which much be observed in this as in other branches of endeavor.

The kinds of bulbs which are more generally grown in the home, than others, are Hyacinths ordinary and Roman, of which the latter may be forced into flower earlier. Tulips of many kinds, including early and late ones and Narcissi. These are the most popular of the so-called Dutch bulbs. Then we have Snowdrops, Crocus, Glory of the Snow, Meadow Saffron, Dog's Tooth Violet and Scilla. These last mentioned are all hardy and excellent for culture in pots where they should be planted close together. The Hyacinths, Tulips, and Narcissi being much larger should not be crowded so much in their pots.

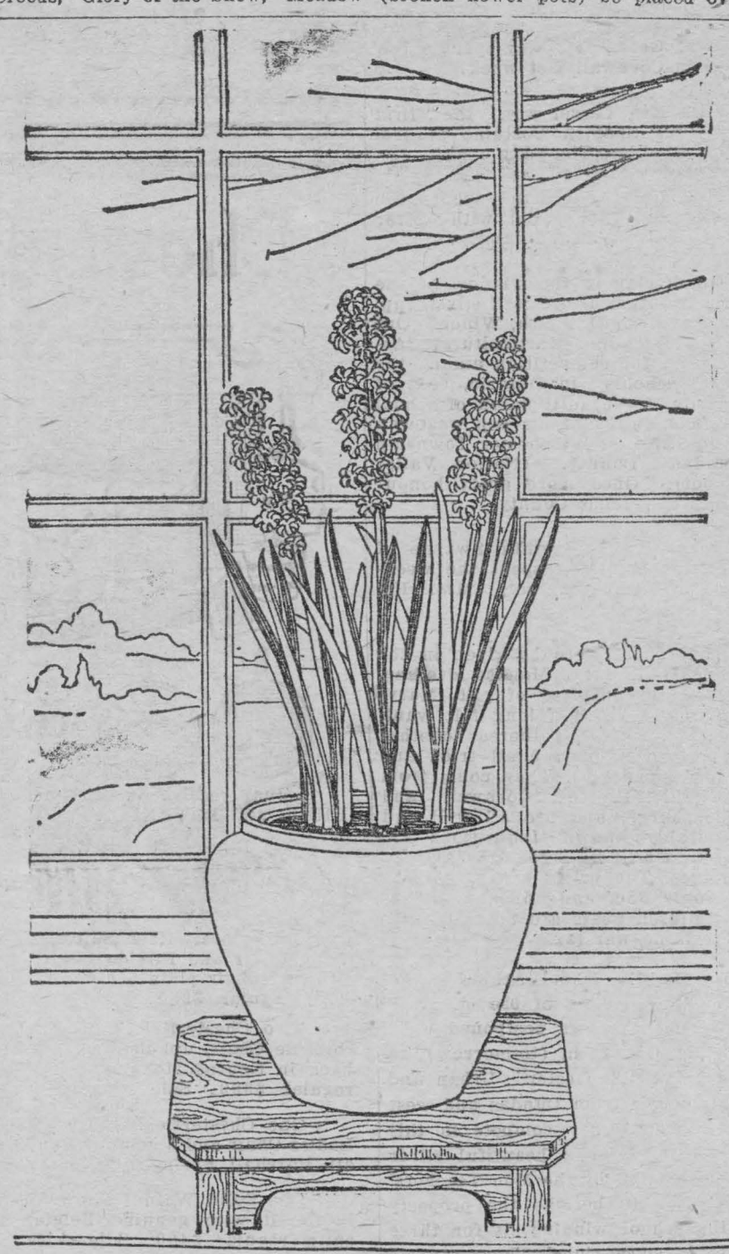

The best potting soil for winter flowering bulbs is one composed of one part of loam, one of leaf soil and a little sand. It is true the plants may be flowered in garden soil to which is added leaf soil or a little old and well rotted stable manure, as that for instance from an old hot bed. The pots used should be thoroughly washed inside and out and a layer of crocks (broken flower pots) be placed over the drainage hole to afford drainage. Upon the crocks should be placed a layer of fibrous material, that screened from the loam will do or leaf soil, or moss. This to prevent the potting soil from sifting down and clogging the drainage.

The potting soil should be uniformly mixed and be sifted through an inch screen, the fibrous screenings being used as forementioned for drainage. Upon this fibrous material should now be placed a layer of potting soil up to within two or three inches of the rim. This should be pressed down firmly and the bulbs be placed in position and then more soil be added and be firmed. With the exception of the Hyacinths and Tulips, the tops of which should protrude from the soil, the other bulbs may be entirely covered. In all cases, however, the space of about an inch should be left at the top of the pot to allow for the application of water. After thoroughly watering the soil the plants should be placed in a cool and dark position for a period of five or six weeks to allow of the formation of roots, before they are brought to the light to flower. Success will largely depend upon this, therefore, do not be in too great a hurry to have the plants flower. While the plants are going through this period of root formation the soil should be examined at least weekly to ascertain if water is again necessary.

When well rooted the plants may be removed to a cool, well lit room with a temperature of about 55 deg. F., and later, when the leaves and flowers become inured to temperature and to light, in perhaps a week the plants may be placed in the living room to flower and be enjoyed.

The longer the plants are left in the cool dark storage the longer will they be retarded, and it should be the practice to remove them to the room three weeks or so before the time they are required to flower. For instance if a few pots of bulbs were required for Christmas, these should be removed, leaving the others for later flowering to be removed to flower at any later or special time. In this way the time of flowering may be controlled.

With the exception of the Hyacinths and the early flowering Tulips, which should be discarded after flowering as they deteriorate (the Darwin Tulip however may be saved), all the bulbs mentioned may after they have been carefully and gradually dried off in their pots be saved. If stored away in paper bags they may in the Fall be planted out in the garden. Bulbs as a rule will not force successfully into flower in the living room two years in succession, but may after a period of recuperation (three or four years) in the garden be again used for indoor culture.

Soap Shampoo.

The writer has discovered what she thinks is an excellent way to make soap shampoo. Take a half-pint fruit jar and a cake of the kind of soap preferred for washing the hair. If the soap does not go into the jar easily, cut it into two pieces. Fill the jar over half-full with water, screw the top on and shake it till it is full of lather. Let it stand for a while, but every now and then shake it well. Add more water as the soap gradually softens and thickens it. This shampoo can be made any consistency wanted, and as it is used more water should be added to the contents of the jar. A cake of soap diluted in this way will last for several months.

Liquid soap can be made in the same way. If enough water is mixed with the soap, it will rise to the top after the jar has stood for a day or so, and can be poured off and put into a separate container.

Chicken a la King.

This is a particularly fine recipe for the always popular chicken a la king. Another nice thing about the dish, the directions for which are given below, is that it is just as good, even better, when reheated the following day.

Four tablespoonfuls of butter, 3 tablespoonfuls of minced green pepper, 3 tablespoonfuls of flour, ¼ teaspoonful of paprika, 1 tablespoonful of minced pimento, ¾ teaspoonful of salt, 2 cupfuls of thin cream, 2½ cupfuls of diced cooked chicken, ½ can of mushrooms.

Melt the butter and cook in it the green pepper until the latter is soft. Stir in the flour and seasonings. Add the cream gradually, stirring constantly. When boiling, set over hot water and add the chicken, mushrooms and pimentos.

Serve in ramekins, patty shells, or on toast.

One judges with his reason, but acts according to his character; that is the cause of most human inconsistency.

Fresh-water eels travel a distance equal to a quarter of the earth's circumference, about 6,000 miles, in their lives.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR WALL PAPER LIVE LOTS LONGER

BY JESSIE CRAWFORD.

If your wall paper is faded or soiled and you can't afford to repaper this fall, you may be interested in the cleaning stunts our Interior Decoration Department has worked out.

This letter from a farm woman started us experimenting:

"Dear Editor: Decorators are always telling the housekeeper that dingy walls make dingy rooms! Goodness knows we can't doubt the fact with evidence on every side. The question is, what to do about it?

"One can't repaper every year, yet with flies and dust and coal smoke walls refuse to stay clean.

"What do you advise?"

CLEANING FACTS.

Here are the cleaning facts we discovered:

The first paper we cleaned was dulled with dust and coal smoke. It had a greasy feel. This paper was scrubbed with small burlap bags filled with bran. The bran seeping through the meshes of the burlap cleaned the paper spotlessly. Oatmeal gives just as good results.

Another cleaner for this kind of dirt is made of one-half ounce of powdered borax, one pint of boiling water and enough flour to give it a doughy consistency. This substance is used on the wall like a gum eraser. You can buy a similar commercial cleaner if you don't want to bother mixing it.

Grease is easily removed by placing a piece of blotting paper over the spot and pressing it with a hot iron. Another remedy is a paste of whiting or French chalk mixed with water. Apply this to the spot and allow it to dry overnight. The next morning it should be brushed off.

To avoid spots it is advisable to varnish the kitchen and bathroom wall paper. This is easy to do and gives a durable wall that can be cleaned with soap and water. Apply two coats of white waterproof varnish, allowing each to dry thoroughly before putting on the next.

PAINT ON PAPER.

When the background of a gay bedroom paper has faded into gray you can paint the entire wall with blue size, tinted with dry kalsomine water-color paint. This gives a warm glow over the paper, the brighter colors of the design showing through in an interesting pattern.

In one small bedroom where the flower design had faded we painted the flowers over with oil paints and a small brush. It made the whole room bright and new. The hand-painting process is a long, hard piece of work if your room is large, but over a small wall space it is well worth the time.

If your paper shows any tears or mars from leaks try patching it. Take a small piece of paper and cut out the new piece around the design instead of shaping it in a circle or square. The piecing will not show so much this way. If the old paper has faded put the new piece in the sun for a day until it has faded the correct color.

When it is necessary to mend a plain paper, the best way to conceal the line of the patch is to scrape the edge down to a very thin surface, tearing it irregularly instead of cutting it evenly across.

Surprised.

Harold and Elvin went to their first party. As it was a party for little people, their mother told them they would no doubt get only simple refreshments. But the refreshments were quite elaborate. After the party the mother of their small hostess said pleasantly:

"Well, boys, did you have a nice time?"

"Yes, thank you," said Harold.

"And did you get enough to eat?"

"Yes, thank you; much more than mamma thought we would get."
