MR. JACKSON HONORED

On the evening of April 30th, over eighty immediate relatives and close friends assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andy Jackson, to assist Mr. Hugh Jackson commemorate the 90th anniversary of his birth. Despite Mr. Jackson's ninety winters he is hale and hearty, can read without glasses and delights in taking long walks to call on his friends as he was accustomed doing 80 years ago.

Mr. Jackson was born in Derry County, Ireland, and came to this country seventy-nine years ago with his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. David Jackson. Their ship was 8 weeks on the ocean and was at anchor in Quebec harbour at the time of the big Quebec fire of 1845. Mr. Jackson remembers the instance distinctly although only eleven years of age.

When landing in Canada he came with his parents to what is known as Toyes Hill, then after three years moved to Nation Valley where he still resides. Canada was then in the making. It would have stretched the most vivid imagination to the breaking point to comprehend such an advanced state of civilization as he sees in it to-day. Had the pioneer of seventy-nine years ago noticed an automobile wending its way along the bush road toward his shanty home, he would no doubt thought it another specimen of the animal world.

Mr. Jackson draws our attention to the advance in communicating with his neighbors and the world at large. They went to Chesterville on horse back once a week for the weekly newspaper now our daily paper and rural delivery. Telephones only at large centres, now at most every farm house, besides telegraphy in all its stages and most wonderful of all the inventions the radio. Mr. Jackson thinks these and the victrola have crowded out the community spirit of seventy years ago when all men were brothers and logging, binding, paring and quilting bees were in vogue, all of which ended with a dance. Now it is electricity, tractor and water power. Mr. Jackson remembers when the first trees were cut on some of the surrounding farms. The only way of travelling was walking bush paths mostly on logs, or horse back. Later the ox-cart was discarded for the lumber wagon in which they went to church, visited their neighbors or did their shopping at Morrisburg or Ottawa. Women at that time were known to go several miles or even to Morrisburg and carry their basket of eggs through the swamp and woods.

Sixty-eight years ago Mr. Jackson cut the first tree on the farm where he resides and left it lay where it fell then, cut down others and hauled them up with ox-teams and built his first home in the woods. Since then by hard work, patience and preservence his land was cleared by making potash and pearlash to get rid of the timber, which was not sold for lumber, and a modern house and barns built a comfortable residence for his declining years. Our old pioneer chose for his partner to sail the matrimonial sea, Elizabeth Toye of Matilda, the place known as Toyes Hill, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Toye.

To this union was born twelve children, seven sons and five daughters, seven of whom survive.

In 1906 Mr. and Mrs. Jackson celebrated their fiftieth anniversary of their marriage and ten years later were priviliged to enjoy another family reunion at their diamond jubilee.

Three years later Mrs. Jackson was called home to that "Beautiful Land o'er the Jordan" where numberless stars adorn her crown as she was one of God's elect in her home and abroad.

Six of Mr. Jackson's surviving children namely: Mrs. Case Thomas, Mrs. A. Loucks, Mrs. Elmer Baker, Messrs. Jas., Andy, and David were present at the birthday party. One son, Mathew, of Barrie; was unable to be present. There are also forty grandchildren and twenty-five great grandchildren, most of whom were also present on this festal occasion.

Mr. Jackson was pleasel to welcome his big family with the other friends and neighbors who had remembered his many kindnesses and had not forgotten to show their appreciation by surprising him on his birthday, and to wish him health and God's blessing to follow him throughout the remainder of his sojourn in this vale of tears.

A full course dinner was served by the host and hostess from six to eight o'clock. The tables were prettily decorated with cut flowers and Azalea.

After dinner Mr. Walter Rae was called to the chair and a programme was carried out consisting of several speeches and then special music was rendered by the grandchildren. We will mention specially the quartette from Ottawa who rendered beautifully "The world is not my home" and "Alone with God", and a duet that deserves special mention by little Eva and Mildred Jackson captivated the audience. Before leaving the guests all joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again" and while clasping the hand of the old pioneer in goodnight all wished him many returns of the day.

The guests left that home all feeling it had been an evening well spent and enjoyed by all and wishing social evenings and birthday parties would come more often.

McCADDEN—MORAN

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place Wednesday morning at nine o'clock in Crysler at St. Mary's church, when Mary Patricia, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Moran was married to Thomas McCadden son of the late James McCadden and Mrs. Michael Walsh.

Rev. Father Leahy officiated, and the bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister Miss Rose Moran, of Ottawa. Mr. James McCadden, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The bride looked charming in a tailored suit of navy tricotine which opened over a blouse of sand silk floral crepe. Her hat and shoes were of sand shade. A sable choker was worn.

A fawn suit with hat and shoes to match, was worn by the bridesmaid, who wore a stone-marten choker.

The corsages, worn by both the bride and bridesmaid, were of roses, pansies, lily-of-the-valley and maiden hair fern.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl rosary; to the bridesmaid a black patent leather purse, and to the best man a pearl tie pin. After the ceremony, a sumptuous dinner was served to about fifty guests, at the home of the bride's parents.

The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Montreal midst showers of confetti.

The gifts, among which were many substantial cheques, were numerous and costly, and show the esteem in which the young couple is held.

FARMERS VICTIMIZED

About fifty farmers of the Chesterville district are bemoaning the fact that they fell for the wiles of a glib-tongued stranger with whom they thought they were insuring the lives of their cattle at a valuation of seventy-five dollars for their milch cows and twenty dollars a head for their young heifers, regardless of breeding. Notes were given in payment for what was supposed to be the premium, at fifteen and thirty days from date. In reality the notes were given as payment for some so-called stock tonic or stock food, shipments of which have arrived at the station, and in practically all cases have been refused by those to whom they are addressed. In the meantime the due dates of the notes are arriving but we understand they are not being taken up and that it is the intention of those who signed them to stand a suit, pleading misrepresentation on the part of the salesman to whom the notes were given. The salesman on his arrival at a farmer's place is said to have immediately made his way to where the cattle were stabled, complimenting the owner on his fine herd and making inquiry as to whether he carried an insurance on his stock in case of death from natural causes, which very few farmers do except on high class pure bred animals. The rate for the insurance was stated as a cent on the dollar of valuation, which the salesman proceeded to show was ample for carrying the risk as the government held a sufficient portion of that to cover all loses. The receipt given in exchange for the notes does not state that insurance has been paid for but on the contrary clearly says that seventy-five pounds is the quantity purchased.

BOYS BROKE ALL THE WINDOWS IN SCHOOL

In Sturgeon Falls Police Court on Saturday, before Magistrate Cockburn, Raoul and Dennis Maxwell, two brothers, aged 13 and 14 respectively, were found guilty of damaging the public school of the township of Caldwell and were fined $5 and costs or $79 in all. Practically every pane of glass in the building had been smashed. On April 28 shortly after the occurrence, both boys, who are pupils at the school, admitted to License Inspector Gagne and Constable Robinson, in presence of the teacher, that they were the culprits, but on Saturday they repudiated the confession. Although the family name is Maxwell, the boys are unable to speak English. Practically the whole population of the township was in Sturgeon on Saturday for the trial which lasted for hours.

CANADA'S SUNSHINE

Kingston Standard:— It is to be doubted if Canadians, generally speaking, fully recognize and appreciate the sunshine which is such a characteristic of their country. Here is a contrast. A coroner in London, Eng., said last week, "In this country we are all suffering from the want of sunshine, which is causing general depression." The sun has not shone there for weeks past. Think of the sunshine Canada has had during that time. People talk of having bright wall papers to promote cheerfulness: the sun comes in all its brightness and glory to cheer the whole of Canada. For the fun of the thing keep a record for a few months, and see how few days there are that the sun does not show its cheerful face, if only for a short time. Then be thankful you live in Canada.

PARENTS WARNED

Following a discussion regarding the freedom permitted pupils of the Smiths Falls Collegiate Institute, Dr. E. H. Wickare, chairman of the Board of Education of that town, was at the last meeting of the Board instructed to form a committee to draft a circular letter to be distributed to the citizens of the town, drawing their attention to the temptations to which their children were exposed when out at night unaccompanied by parent or guardian, and asking their co-operation to better conditions in the town in this respect.

FEES UNDERGO REVISION

The Ontario Gazette contains notice of a revision in the fees which issuers of hunting and angling licenses are entitled to receive. The new schedule is as follows: $1 on each non-resident small game license; $1 on each non-resident general hunting license; 50 cents on each resident moose-license, each resident camp deer license, and each non-resident angling license. The issuer's fees are to be collected by the issuer in addition to the license fee.

SOME PEOPLE

Such people as are described in the quoted paragraph from the Parish Visitor are with us in every town: "A man sat in the pew. His new hat was beneath the seat! it had cost $7. His gloves were beside him; he paid $4 for them on Friday. He had stopped on his way to church to have his shoes polished and had paid 15 cents for a shine. He had taken friends to the theatre the night before, had a little supper afterwards, and had not thought the bill of $8 too much for the fun. He had a shave and paid 15 cents for it with alacrity. He had bought a box of candy for his wife and it had cost him $1, but he had only a nickel for God."

ONE PAIR NUMBER PLATES USED ON TWO CARS

A strange case came under the observation of both the Cornwall and Provincial police on Sunday, April 20 th, when two Alexandria residents were found operating cars in town with the same license numbers. One license was on the front of one car and its mate which should have been on the rear of the same car was fastened on the back of car No. 2. Summonses were issued and the two men appeared before Mr. Cline and the one who suggested the idea of operating two cars with one set of markers was fined $15.00 and costs while the man who fell for the idea had to pay $10.00 and costs. It was the first time that such a case came under the eye of the authorities, and it is safe to say the same dodge will not be tried again by the same parties.

CHEESE EXPORT REGULATIONS WILL NOT BE SUSPENDED

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, has notified the Dairymen's Board of Trade at Brockville, that he cannot accede to its wishes for a suspension of the new regulations regarding the branding of export cheese.

The Minister adds: "I believe the regulations will be beneficial and enforcement will be carried out with as little inconvenience to dealers as possible.

"No doubt the placing of a grade mark on No. 2 cheese will make it more difficult to sell, but No. 1 cheese will undoubtedly bring better prices and thus more than compensate for the loss on No. 2."

It is stated that the dairymen of the district, which produces more cheese than any other section of Ontario, will next week hold a mass meeting of protest against the action of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association in setting what they claim to be an abnormal margin between the price of first and second grade cheese under the new regulations.

KEMPTVILLE IS AWARDED SUM OF $1 DAMAGES

The village of Kemptville has been awarded $1 damages and costs against the Kemptville Milling Company, and Levi Daniel Bowen, as the outcome of lengthy litigation in which Mr. Justice Kelly has just given judgment.

Up to 1921, the Kemptville Milling Company supplied light and power to individuals in the village from its plant at Andrewsville. The adoption of a municipal hydro system that led the village to warn the company off its streets. A law suit followed and Mr. Justice Rose gave judgment in favor of the municipality. While appeal was pending the parties came to an agreement whereby the company was to remove its electric plant, distribution system, poles and wires from the village and was to cease supplying individuals.

The poles were cut down and the lines removed when Daniel Bowen, owner of a grist mill at Kemptville, leased the system from the company at $1,200 a year to supply his mill. A new action was entered by the village to compel the defendants to carry out the agreement to dismantle the plant and for damages.

Mr. Justice Kelly grants the village an injunction restraining the defendants from operating the plant and awards the villages damages. As no evidence was offered as to the extent of the damages, these are fixed at $1.

A CURE FOR DESPONDENCY

Despondency is as fatal in a hospital as the use of the wrong anesthetic. A cheerful patient, it is always claimed, is half-cured. This explains the notice in one London hospital:

HIGH SCHOOL BOARD

The regular meeting of Chesterville High School Board was held Friday evening, May 2nd.

Present: F. McCloskey, Thos. Houlehan, W. N. Fulton, R. J. Barrie, E. B. Lynch, Jno. King.

1. Moved by Jno. King, seconded by R.J. Barrie minutes of previous meeting as read be adopted.—Carried.

2. Moved by E. B. Lynch, seconded by W. N. Fulton that bill of $7.00 presented by Mr. Barlow for purchase of gladiolas be paid.—Carried.

3. Moved by Jno. King seconded by W. N. Fulton that the purchasing committee be empowered to purchase a duplicator, not to exceed in price $125, provided it will meet the requirements of the school.—Carried.

4. A letter from Mr. Barlow re the introduction of Upper school work for next year was read by the secretary but the Board considered it advisable not to take any action until they could obtain more information on the subject. Mr. Barlow's letter follows:—

The H. S. Board, Chesterville.

Re., introducing of Upper School work into the High School next year I submit the following information. In Form III—which is our Entrance to Normal form the following pupils whose names are submitted—are desirous of securing U. S. work in the Chesterville H. S. next year.

Lillian Tate, Brock Harper, Clifford Coyne, Douglas McGee, Florence Millea, Mathew, Flynn, Eva Gillissie, Marion Gray, Aura Graham, Mabel Barrett, Hosea Droppo, Wm. Servage, Karl Bowman, Julia Flynn.

The following are in Form II now who would be requiring U. S. work in 1925-26.

Wm. Brown, Rae Dixon, Will Tate, Muriel Haley, Merrit Hess, Jean Houlehan, Hazel Droppo, Oran Robertson.

The above is respectful submitted for your information regarding the need of this class.

It would cost at least, I think, an initial outlay of $200 to $300 for desk accommodation, apparatus etc., and you would also require an additional teacher at a salary of $1800. An U. S. would also involve a greater amount of outside work (preparation of lessons) an account of the Principal and also more executive work.

I would also respectively draw the attention of the Board to the subject of a duplicator.

Yours truly
Fred J. Barlow,
Prin.

5. Moved by E. B. Lynch, sec. by Dr. Seymour that meeting adjourn until next regular meeting or at the call of the chair.

INFANTILE CONVULSIONS ....

Convulsions, except those that result from hysteria or epilepsy, are seldom to be observed in adults; but in children especially infants, they are common and may be induced by slight causes. The nervous system in young children is unstable and reacts sharply to disturbuting influences that in the case of adults would cause any of a number of symptoms other than convulsions.

Indigestion, either gastric or intestinal, is one of the most common of the exciting causes of fits in babies and children under five or six years. Naturally, therefore, bottle-feed infants are more prone to convulsive attacks than infants that are nursed. The milk that gets into the bottle may be stale if not actually sour, or the artificial food that is given may contain too much starch. During weaning a convulsion may be provoked by the child's changing too suddenly from liquid to solid food. Constipation is a possible cause, and the presence of worms another. Teething is a natural process and should not cause trouble in a healthy child; nevertheless it sometimes does; a tooth erupting with difficulty may greatly upset the nervous system. Sometimes a fit may usher in a fever; what would be a chill in the adult becomes a convulsion in the child. Convulsions are not unusual in children with rickets.

If convulsions occur repeatedly and no adequate cause can be discovered, we must think of the possibility of epilepsy. Convulsions usually begin without warning, though occasionally there may be premonitary symptoms of restlessness for a day or two They begin with twitching in the face; the head is drawn back, the eyes roll upward, and the spasms soon extend to the arms and legs. The face may be dusky or pallid, and the child perspires profusely. The little sufferer loses consciousness; its pulse is weak; its breathing is rapid. That condition usually lasts only a short while, and then the child regains consciousness, but for some time is drowsy. In severe cases the fits come in rapid succession.

In treating infantile convulsions the child should be placed in a warm bath to the water of which some mustard may be added, and the cold cloths should be applied to the head. That usually suffices, but, if the fits persist, it may be necessary to give a few whiffs of some anaesthetic. After recovery a diligent search should be made for the cause of the convulsins that it may be removed if possible. In any case it is well to give the child a dose of castor oil as soon as it has returned to consciousness.

Charity begins at home, but reform begins elsewhere

A small boy says that the road to knowledge is a switchback.

Health Restored by The Fruit Treatment

Fourteen years ago, Mr. James S. Delgaty, of Gilbert Plains, Man., was a nervous wreck. His system was shattered by Nervous Prostration, and he was reduced in weight from 170 to 115 pounds.

He wrote on May 15th, 1917, "Every medicine I tried proved useless until a friend induced me to take 'Fruit-a-tives.' I began to mend at once. After using this fruit medicine for three months, I was back to normal. I have never had such good health as I have enjoyed the past six years. We are never without a box of 'Fruit-a-tives' in the house."

Writing again on September 27th, 1923, Mr. Delgaty says, "I stand by my letter to you in 1917—I still recommend 'Fruit-a-tives'."

"Fruit-a-tives" is a complete fruit treatment—being made of the juices of fresh ripe fruits and tonics.

25c. and 50c. a box—6 for $2.50—at druggists or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

FAREWELL AT NATION VALLEY

The people of this vicinity with a few outsiders assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. McCollum on Friday evening last to say good-bye before their departure to their new home in Winchester. About midnight the following address was ably read by Mrs. J. A. Munroe.

To Mr. and Mrs. McCallum and family.

Dear Friend,—

For a time this little white house stood empty; like a little white skull; its windows like the empty holes where the eyes had been.—Horrid? sure 'twas horrid—and ghost-like and ch, like one drawn out funeral, like an empty house always is.

And then one night we saw the light in the windows again and a warm feeling of interest stirred our hearts as we asked who were our new neighbours. To a few of us you were well known; to the most of us total strangers. Well, "Time" went on and your lights have continued to shine sending forth their bright rays of welcome and good cheer. To night you are no longer strangers to anyone in Nation Valley. Now at the name "McCollum" kindly feelings of friendship and neighbourly interest warm our hearts. For we have come to think of you as one of our number; we have learned that in your make up are combined a good many of the characteristics that are required in a worthy citizen, a good neighbor, and a true friend. Diligently attending to your own business, not busying yourself with the affairs of others yet ever ready to lend a "helping hand" and entering heartily into all community interests, you have proven yourself the sort we are glad to call neighbours whose daily lives are an uplift wherever their influence is cast; the sort we are always glad to welcome; the kind we grudge to let go. And now you'll forgive us if we are a bit selfish when we tell you we are sorry you are leaving. Whereever you go from here please ever remember that, though your sojourn with us has been all too short, our feelings are akin to those of the lad sitting alone in a big pew in church, when a chum came in little tardy and shared the pew with him, this lad wrote on the fly-leaf of 'the Book' and held it for the other to read "good you came," honestly we are sorry to see you go.

Kindly accept this purse as a little token of our sincerity of this expression of our feelings towards you, and may it serve to remind you that our good wishes shall follow you wherever you may fare.

We want you still to 'bave a care'
Even still to have a thought,
Like that sweetest sweetest little flower
Whose gentle whisper stirs the air
Safely singing forget-me-not.

Signed on behalf of Nation Valley friends. James Arnott Johnston, Donald D. Darling.

The presentation was made by Mr. Donald Darling. Although greatly taken by surprise Mr. McCollum made a very appropriate reply on behalf of Mrs. McCollum and himself. Immediately after coffee, cake and sandwichs were served by the ladies. The chief amusement of the evening was dancing by the young people. Before leaving all joined in singing "They are jolly good fellows" and a vote of thanks for the host and hostess for the pleasant evening spent by all.

Belated Sense of Humor

"I hear you had McPheson staying with you for the week end. What did you do with him on Saturday evening? Take him to a music hall?"

"No. I didn't care to take the risk. You see, he might have laughed in church on Sunday."

HOW BIRDS ARE PROTECTED

Migratory Birds Convention Act

Lesson No. 2.

For many years birds have been protected in Canada by the various provinces which made their own laws. In United States the same method was employed, but for many reasons this system did not work for successfully for these birds which migrate from one country to another, and are known as migratory birds, comprise nearly all that are of value to man. Notable exceptions are the Ruffed Grouse (commonly known as "Partridge"), and the Prairie Chicken, both of which are still protected only provincially, not being migratory birds.

Therefore, in August, 1916, after several years of untiring effort on the part of the leading bird lovers and true sportsmen in Canada and the United States these two countries signed a solemn agreement or treaty to protect all birds considered worthy of protection, which twice annually cross the border. This agreement is known in Canada as "The Migratory Birds Convention" and it is already working out so well that it will in all probability be extended indefinitely.

All the birds that are protected by this treaty are named in the posters that have been distributed throughout Canada so that anyone may know it is unlawful to kill these useful birds at any time, to take their eggs or to harm them in any way. It is also unlawful to take the eggs of game birds or to molest them on their breeding grounds and they may not only be killed for food or sport during the open season which the law provides.

Milliners are not allowed to offer for sale or even have in their possession the feathers, which used to be so much worn by women on their hats or any other part or parts of the birds protected by the Act.

Some people do not like this new law, but it is because they are either very selfish or do not understand. The aim and purpose of this law is not to stop legitimate shooting, but rather to make it better in the future and for all time, so that when you boys grow up you will not have to be content with listening to your fathers talk about the good shooting that used to be, but can still enjoy a good days sport with your own gun.

Do not forget that the boys who disturb or kill birds protected by this Act, either by stone-throwing or shooting with the .22 rifle may be punished and so may the boys who molest the nests of protected birds. By respecting this law you will be doing your country a service and at the same time will prove yourself a good citizen.

The birds which are protected under the Act are divided into the three classes: Migratory insectivorous, Migratory game, and Migratory non-game birds.

We are not allowed to kill any of the birds in the first or last class at any time of the year, but in the case of the game birds certain months of the year are thrown open, and in those months sportsmen may shoot game birds for food or sport. But among this class there are certain kinds of birds which for various reasons are more or less in danger of extermination and the authorities of both countries are very wisely giving such birds a chance to increase again by protecting them for a period of years. One of these, the Eider Duck or "Sea Duck" as it is often called is specially protected. The Curlew and many other shore birds are protected until 1928. Among this class will be found the small sandpipers, commonly called "peeps" which used to swarm on our beeches in the autumn and which still come to some sections in great flocks.

Sanctuaries

The Dominion and Provincial Governments have set aside certain pieces of marchland, woodland, lakes and islands, in different parts of Canada where birds may breed undisturbed under careful protection. These reservations are called Bird Sanctuaries. A number of bird lovers also have made their woodlots and farms into bird sanctuaries and these will do a great deal towards increasing our useful birds.

The balance of this lesson should be taken up studying the protected birds named in Poster.

Next week the Third Lesson "How Children Can Assist" will be published.

SAVED HIS BROTHER

Perth Expositor—Stewart, the four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Allan, Scotch Line, fell off the bridge the other Sunday afternoon into the river, and was saved through the presence of mind of his brothers Bert and Willie, aged eight and six years. Noticing what had happened, Bert, aged eight years, called to Stewart to grab the branches which he did. Then Bert tried to get his brother out of the water but was unsuccessful but told him to keep his mouth closed and hang on while he (Bert) ran to tell the father and mother, the house being a quarter of a mile away. In the meantime the other brother, Willie, aged six years, kept a watch on Stewart and as he happened to have a ring attached to a string, he threw it to his brother who grabbed it and eventually Stewart was pulled close to the shore. Willie grabbing his hand and then succeeding in getting him to hold his head above the water until Mrs. Allan arrived on the scene a short while afterwards and she pulled her son out of the river. The child was taken home and put to bed and although he was chilled and became feverish his condition now is almost normal again. Must credit is due Bert and Willie for their bravery shown, and also to the younger brother, Stewart who had the presence of mind to do just as he was told while in his precarious position in the river.

FATHER L. MINEHAN ISSUES HIS PROTEST

Easter Monday—Rev. T. Albert Moore, D.D., Secretary of the General Conference of the Methodist Church, received a letter from Rev. Father L. Minehan, parish priest of St. Vincent de Paul Church, Toronto making emphatic protest against any attempt to make Church Union a political question.

Preliminary reference is made in the letter to the moral and national decline of the Roman Empire consequent upon the Pontifex Maximus, the highest religious authority in Pagan Rome, becoming Emperor at the same time. Proceeding, Father Minehan says that, at the present time there is a minority who seek to have the civil power wreck a purely religious measure carried decisively after exhaustive deliberation by the sole authority competent to deal therewith.

"Church and State have each a well-defined and independent sphere of activity,' he says. "Tariffs and creeds are widely different. Synods are not supposed to make the former, nor Cabinets the latter. At the same time both alike receive their authority from God and are required by Him to respect His laws and aid one another by friendly co-operation."

Happily, the letter goes on, our civil authorities have recognized this to their own great advantage; but a departure from this wise and just policy is being advocated. "It is proposed to make Church Union a political pawn, to wreck it by denying to it the incorporation which is freely given to any body of private citizens to carry out a proposed industrial scheme."

In conclusion Father Minehan says, "As one who realized something of the cost of religious liberty, I wish to register my emphatic protest against any attempt to make Church Union a political question."

Beattie and Rev. (Dr.) Smith the Presbyterian Minister. At 6.30 all sat down to a bountiful repast provided by the ladies. After the wants of the inner man had been satisfied, the guardian, Mr. Wesley Patterson, acted as Toast Master. Various toasts were proposed and very fittingly replied to, after which a short program was given, consisting of musical numbers and recitations. Everyone present was pleased with the humorous stories told by Rev. Mr. Smith. The gathering broke up at 11.30 with the singing of 'God Save the King.'

THE MEANING OF WATER

Two women who had the hardihood to undertake a camping trip in Death Valley, California, felt more than once the thrill of new experience. In the White Heart of Mojave Mrs. Edna Brush Perkins writes entertaingly of their adventure and enriches it with not a little pleasant philosophy.

That was our first genuine dry camp, she writes, though it was the third time we had depended on the water carried from Furnace Creek. Water is the commonest of all commodities, so common that we fail to realize its value until we are without it. All the camps thus far had been resting places, homes. We had come to feel that any spot where we built our fire could be home, for the essentials of home are simple: a little water, something to eat, a bit of fire and good friends. When we had made camp in the forbidding inhospitality of Salt Creek we had had them all and had been at home; but that night when the Worrier began to unload the wagon in the starke middle of the solitary waste we were not at home. Nor could we make it home, however brightly we urged up the fire or however cheerfully we talked. One of the essentials was missing. No water, not even bad water, not a drop! That mesa was not a human resting place; we were aliens in it, transients, one-night-standers.

In the hot miles between Furnace Creek Ranch and the mountain spring we learned the meaning for our little lives for the commonest of commodities. We had never been so thirsty; no amount of water could satisfy us, and the supply was limited. We had enough of all our needs; yet we never could forget that there was an end to it. When the jolting of the wagon slopped some out round one of the corks we could have wept. Using any for cooking or washing dishes seemed terrible. Until then we had thoughtlessly turned on a faucet or drawn a bucket from a well or dipped water out of a stream. Now there was no water. The miles were not only hot, they were dry. The diminishing supply of warm, unattractive water in the dented gasoline cans was our most precious possession. We would have parted with everything we had rather than lose it.

THE DESERTED VILLAGE

The economic disturbances of the past few years have shown how unwise it is to allow all our industries to become centralized in the larger centres and for farmers to place themselves unreservedly in the hands of the big combinations. The village blacksmith, carriage builder and miller have gone, while the village or cross-roads merchant is struggling against the handicap of small patronage, or the one hand, and the pressure of big business on the other.

Farmers can well afford to patronize their local industries, for without the village and cross-roads community the farm home is still further removed from those social and economic advantages that should form a part of rural life. The village or small town is an asset to the farm, and every rural family should remain loyal to local institutions. The village is a rallying point for the youth of the community, and unless the village stores and shops are patronized by the farmers of the community it will become deserted and a blot on the landscape, rather than a thriving community centre.

From the economic point of view farmers have lost considerably through the closing down of the village shops and small industries. The village blacksmith is now almost a thing of the past. The smiths who are left are to be found in the towns and cities, and the farmers there are obliged to pay city prices for the service they purchase. Wheelrights and carriage makers have gone out of business and are selling their labor to the manufacturer at so much per day. Competition is eliminated between the village product and the output of the big manufacturing plants, with the result allready too-well known.

The closing down of the small mills places the farmer at the mercy of the big millers, regardless of the fact that he has wheat and grain of his own from which flour might be made and wheat by-products secured.

There is also a difference in standards beteen farm and industrial life. When the grower must sell his product according to one standard of prices the practice becomes irksome and, in the end, unprofitable. The village shop and local mill, in the past, provided a partial escape from the strangling influences of big business and where there are any of these still left they should be patronized and encouraged.

AGNES McPHAIL, M. P. VISITS U. S. PRESIDENT

"Calm at 5 o'clock in the morning as an Ontario farm," was Miss Agnes McPhail's description of President Coolidge, who received her at the White House at 10.15 Saturday morning. "Silent Cal" and Canada's first woman member of the House of Commons spent their precious three minutes talking about the farm—and the President expressed some sympathy with Miss Macphail's belief that the farmer is an abused man when it comes to buying and selling.

How does a Canadian greet the President of the United States? Presenting Miss Macphail, Mr. Merchant Mahoney, who is Canada's very happy semi-official representative at Washington, spoke of the President in the British fashion as "His Excellency." After that, Miss Macphail called him "Mr. President," and told him that she had felt a sense of kinship since she knew that the day before he became President he had been pitching hay on his father's farm, where he later received the news of his high calling.

She had passed through three secretarial offices before she reached the inner sanctum, and from the rush of people she wondered how the President could stand the life.

"And I was a comparatively simple visitor, since I didn't wan't anything," she added.

"After having shaken hands with the President twice, Miss Macphail made the usual visitor's tour of the White House, which, by the way, is now dazzling white— and placarded with "fresh paint" signs.

Practically an unbroken succession of visitors passed along the first two floors of the presidental home, and looked out upon the beautiful gardens, with their flaming tulip beds. They saw the reception rooms at the entrance, the wall cup boards wherein are displayed the dishes used by various Presidents. And upstairs the great white and gold ball room, sitting rooms—and even peeped into the somewhat sombre dining room, where the table was laid for luncheon.

Miss Macphail came away beaming —for she had not talked with a President who had lived on a farm, and who had ideas about helping the farmers to help themselves!

BURNT-LAND POTATOES

Did you ever eat any burnt-land potatoes? In Albert County, New Brunswick, there are people who would not think of growing potatoes for their tables on anything except a piece of hardwood timberland that had been freshly burned over.

The farmer clears the land during the winter. He fells the trees all in the same direction and cuts the limbs and distributes them evenly over the ground so that the fire will burn everything clean. In the spring, as soon as the frost is well out of the ground, he burns the piece and then, taking his seed potatoes and his grub hoe, proceeds to plant. He digs a little hole and loosens the earth round it, plants the potato and hills it up. Later he may treat the vines with Paris green for bugs; but that is all the attention he gives the crop until it is time to dig.

In viewing all the stumps and roots you might expect that the farmer would get only a small crop. As a matter of fact the burnt land gives him an unusual crop. With the grub hoe the farmer puts his seed into every nook and corner, close up round the stumps and between the crotches of large roots. By the time the potatoes are in blossom the entire field is covered with dense foliage, even the stumps are hidden from view.

The blue varieties of potato grown on those burnt-over areas are particularly curious. The correspondent who sends as these facts says that he has seen potatoes grown all the way from New Brunswick to southern Georgia, and that nowhere else has he seen any of those blue varieties either growing or on the market. Not only is the skin blue but there is a blue ring about aquarter of an inch beneath the skin. Sometimes all the flesh of the potato has a bluish tinge. The color disappears when the potato is cooked.

In the near-by towns burnt-land potatoes have a reputation that makes them sell at an advance of the usual price. It is customary to cook them in their jackets; in fact, it is necessary to do so, for they are so dry and mealy thatif pared they fall to pieces. Even when cooked in their skins they have to be carefully watched, and the water must be drained off as soon as their jackets begin to crack. No words can describe the superior texture and quality of burnt-land potatoes; to be appreciated they must be eaten.

Early settlers probably brought the dark-skinned potatoes with them to that part of New Brunswick. There are several different kinds, among which are seal's foot, kidneys, early blues and nigger toes. Nearly all of them grow seed balls, from which the farmers frequently raise new kinds.

AN OLD ONE

("The Raconteur' in Montreal Gazette.")

I suppose it is pretty nearly the oldest joke in the world, but I own I never saw this version of it until I read it, as told by Father Tom Burke, in Judge Bodkin's Recollections: "Pat Mahy, me brother, was goin' down the road fair and aisy to his work when he saw in the field, a bit from him, a girl milkin' a cow, and an old one be the look of her. Pat was in no hurry, so he stopped awhile smokin' his pipe lookin' over the fence. Then all of a suddin' a bull comes rampagin' out of another field straight at the colleen. Pat roared meelia murder, and the girl looked round for a minute, then, if you'll believe me, she went on milkin the cow as quiet as ever.

"But there was a querred thing than that happened. When the rampagin' bull was within twenty yards of the girl. he stopped short, let down his tail that he had cocked up, faced right round and ran like a redshank from the field. It was no wonder that Pat was surprised and wanted to know the rights of the story, so he crossed into the field and spoke to the girl, who went on milkin' as if nothin' had happened.

" 'Did you hear me roarin, at you?' he said.

" 'Tisn't deaf I am.'

" 'And you seen the bull?'

" 'Of course, I did, why not?'

" 'And weren't you afeard?'

" 'Not the laste taste in the world; sure it was the bull that was afeard.'

" 'Then why should the bull be afeard?'

" 'I was milkin' his mother-in-law.' "

A New Source

Dr. Lubig had passed on and many of his patients were employing Dr. Pond. A little girl who had a good many brothers and sisters proudly announced to a neighbor: We have a new baby at our house."

"A new baby!" said the neighbor. "Where did you get it?"

"Well, we used to take from Dr. Lubig; now we take from Dr. Pond."

WHEN WE GIVE GOD A CHANCE

The minister drew up a chair quietly by the bedside of a sick man and grasped the pallid hand that stretched out to him. "How are things going today, John?" he asked.

The sick man shook his head. "Slow, slow," he replied in a discouraged tone. "This plaster cast feels as if it weighed a ton. And just think! I've got five more weeks of it anyway. Who'd have thought a broken hip would cause all this trouble? Worst of all," he added impatiently, "I'm wasting a lot of valuable time on this sick bed. I can't afford it."

"Yes I know," said the minister kindly, " but time spent on the sick bed isn't always lost by any means. Coming to the hospital this morning I passed a shoemaker's shop and there was a sign across the window that read, 'Repairs made while you wait.' Now that wouldn't be a hard sign to put up over this bed of yours, would it, John? You see, we're such busy people in this world that a lot of us don't like to take care of ourselves properly,, and so wise nature steps in and makes us do it. While we're stretched out helpless upon our bed nature takes the worn and frayed edges of our lives and patches them together again. Repairs go on while we wait, and the first thing we know we're as good as ever again.

"The fact is, John," he added, "I sometimes think that's a sign I'd like to tack up over the doors of our churches and our homes. Too many folks seem to think that time spent in prayer and in the study of God's Word is time wasted. But it isn't! Repairs go on while we wait. Sin is a stealthy disease. Pay no attention to it and the first thing you know it will undermine the very foundations of life and character. God is a great healer, but we must give Him a chance. He alone can take the frayed and worn edges of our spiritual natures and knit them together."

Again the pallid hand stretched out as the minister started for the door. "I think I understand," the sick man said thoughtfully. "I am one of those men who always feel they can't take time, but from now on I will. I will give God a chance!"
