The Late John Saddlemire.

After an illness of three months John Saddlemire died Monday afternoon last at his home Gravel road, Morrisburg, at the early age of 36 years, from a complication of lung and stomach troubles. He is survived by a widow and seven children who early in life are called upon to feel the loss of a devoted husband, and kind, indulgent father.

The funeral was held on Wednesday, at 10 a. m., and was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Lundy, pastor of the North Williamsburg Presbyterian Church, after which the remains were conveyed to North Williamsburg for interment. A large concourse of sympathizing friends were present, as well as members of the Workmen and Chosen Friends societies, of which the late Mr. Saddlemire was a member.

The deceased gentleman was twice married,—first, to Nancy Casselman, daughter of the late William Casselman, by whom he had seven children; she died about two years ago. His second wife was Sarah, daughter of Mr. Sterling VanAllen, who survives, besides whom the deceased leaves three sisters and two brothers—Mrs John M. Casselman of Williamsburg; Mrs. Jonah Beckstead of Morrisburg, and Mrs. John Belway, of Winchester; and Merton and Calvin Saddlemire, of Williamsburg.

The late Mr. Saddlemire had been a resident of Morrisburg only since last fall, he having removed here from his farm in the second concession. He was a man who was esteemed very highly by a wide circle of friends, being always a good citizen and neighbor, and his life, cut off in the prime of manhood, gave promise until recently of being a long and useful one. The widow and young family have general sympathy in their great affliction.—Leader.

Mrs. J. McMahon Passed Away.

On Thursday, May 10th, 1906, at Cannamore, occurred the death of one of the oldest and most respected residents of the community, Mrs. J. McMahon.

The deceased, who was over seventy years of age, has resided at her late home since her marriage. Of a loving kind, charitable and cheerful disposition, she won the hearts of the whole community in which she lived, and long years of suffering from dyspepsia, throughout which she manifested the greatest fortitude and patience of a Christian spirit, could not rob her of her natural cheerfullness and her regard and careful thought for the welfare and happiness of those with whom she came in contact.

A few weeks of extreme illness, sufficed to complete what years of suffering had begun and to bring about her death. A life-long member of the Catholic Church she was fully prepared to die by a life of virtue and suffering, and still further fortified by the rites of her religion.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Saturday from her late residence to the Roman Catholic Church, Crysler, where solemn Requiem High Mass was offered by Rev. Father MacDonald. The pall-bearers were Messrs. M. Curren, J. McMahon, J. McCloskey, M. McMahon, and J. Allen of Chesterville, and Mr. D. McMahon of Crysler.

Besides her sorrowing husband, the deceased leaves two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Cashion and Mrs. E. Moran, one son, Mr. P. McMahon of Cannamore, and a brother, Mr. P. Allen of Chesterville.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community in their affliction.

Another Old Resident Dead.

After an illness of dropsy extending about six months, Adelaine Lockwood, relict of the late Chas. Lockwood, died at the residence of Mr. John Hummel yesterday morning, May 16th, 1906, aged 84 years.

The deceased has resided in Chesterville for the past thirty years, twenty of which she has lived with Mr. John Hummel

The funeral took place this afternoon at one o'clock, service being conducted at the residence, by her pastor, Rev. A. E. Sanderson, after which interment was made in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

One son and four daughters are left to mourn the demise of a mother, being Hiram Lockwood of Chesterville, Mrs. Wm. Tombs of Brockville, Mrs. W. G. Langton of Neche, North Dakota, Mrs. Edward Laycock of Hoquiam, Wash., and Mrs. John Hummel of Chesterville.

Farmers Helped to Capture Escaped convict.

Chartrand, the life prisoner, who escaped a week ago from the Kinston penitentiary, was captured nine miles west of Brockville, about five o'clock Monday afternoon.

Later in the afternoon, Chartrand came to the Davidson farm and asked for something to eat, and had supper with the family.

Davidson, however, had read the papers, and from the descriptions given, concluded that his guest was the man the police were in search of. He quietly sent his hired man on horseback to Detective Foster at Yonge Mill's bridge some two miles away Chartrand finished his meal before the detective arrived, and left the house, but on the road he met a neighboring farmer, who had been informed by the messenger of the presence of the suspected man, and was skilfully held in conversation until Constable Mallory came up. The two then accused Chartrand of being the convict, but he denied it until Detective Foster arrived a few minutes later and identified him at once.

Charrtand offered no resistance and admitted to Foster that he was the man. He was taken to Mr. Mallory's house until the midnight train arrived, when he was taken back to Kingston.

The Late Almeda Merkley.

With the dawn awakening of Friday morning, May the 4th, the spirit of Miss Almeda Merkley passed quietly away. She was the youngest daughter of the late John and Elizabeth Merkley, and is survived by the one brother Adam—and three sisters—Misses Marie and Matilda Merkley and Mrs. Charles of North Williamsburg, Silently one by one we are all gathering home. Only ten months ago her brother Eli passed to his heavenly home, and eight months previous to that her sister—Mrs. Henry Casselman.

The deceased lady was always a zealous adherent to the Lutheran church, where the last service was conducted for her on Sunday morning by Rev. Mr. Maurer, the sermon being preached from the text—"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

Here was a worthy character, the loveliness of which will live on and on. Modest, cheerful, and gentle she was at all times.

During her residence of a quarter of a century at North Willsamsburg, no one ever knew her to be insincere or irritable The true excellence of her nature calls forth unanimously her loving popularity alike with young and old.—Leader.

Knox Church of Cornwall proposes celebrating in June next the sixtieth anniversary of the organization of their congregation, and at the same time the twenty first anniversary of their present church building. The dates fixed upon for this celebration are Sunday, June 17, and Monday, June 18. The Rev. Prof. Mackenzie, B, D., of the Presbyterian College, Montreal, will conduct the services on the 17th and will speak the following evening. On Monday evening a brief sketch of the congregation, now in course of preparation will be read and there will be also special music. An interesting and profitable time is looked for.

Removal of a Good Citizen.

Mr. C. H. Fullerton of the firm of Dunn & Fullerton, engineers of Winchester, left on Sunday's midnight express for Hailebury where he will locate In the departure of Mr. Fullerton Winchester loses an excellent citizen. He was prominent in masonic orders, holding the position of Worshipful Master of the local Masonic Lodge at the time of his removal. He was also a prominent Oddfellow having filled the Noble Grand's chair in Winchester Lodge. He was a valuable member of the Public Library board and took an active interest in everything that tended to promote the social welfard of the community. Mr. Fullerton's removal will therefore be a distinct loss to the town, but his numerous friends hope that he will strike it rich in the Cobalt silver regions Mrs. Fullerton and family will remain here for a time yet.—Press.

Daring Robbery.

A daring hold-up occurred in Kemptville at an early hour on Thursday morning, when Mr. Wm. Jackson, egg-buyer, was held up at the point of a revolver, and relieved of about $300 in money. Mr. Jackson got up at 4 o'clock to feed his horses, it being his custom to make an early start for the surrounding villages to buy eggs. While he was attending his horses two men descended from the mow and, confronting him with a revolver, demanded his money, at the same time threatening to shoot if he made any outcry. Mr. Jackson, apparently had no other alternative but to comply and handed over about $300. The desperadoes then bound the unfortunate man, hand and foot, and gagged him, making off with their ill-gotten gains. A neighbor, Mr. John Davison, some time after, was attracted to the stable by a call as Mr. Jackson had been able to remove the gag from his mouth. The outcry was raised and telegrams sent to the surrounding towns, giving a description of the men so far as Mr. Jackson was able to give it.

THE CRIMINAL'S CONFESSION

OR, SYBIL BERNER'S VINDICATION

"Hush! I know nothing, but that you are guiltless. I can do nothing but save your life."

"You took me away in the absence of my husband. Why could you not have waited a little while until his return, and——"

"Ha! ha! ha!" laughed the girl, breaking in upon Sybil's speech; "waited until his return, and take two strangers, himself and his servant, into our confidence! Moloch would have brained me, or Belial would have poisoned me if I had done such a thing. We are knaves, but not fools, Mrs. Berners."

"But when will you communicate with him, to relieve his dreadful suspense?"

"As soon as it shall be safe to do so. Our first care must be our own safety, but our second will be yours."

Sybil said no more at the moment; but sat looking at the speaker, and thinking of all that had befallen her in the Haunted Chapel. Could this bright, warm, spirited creature possibly be the "damp girl" whose two nightly visitations had appalled her so much? She put the question:

"Tell me; are you the one who came twice to my bedside and lay down beside me, or is there another?"

Her strange hostess laughed aloud, and clapped her hands.

And there immediately appeared before them, as if it had dropped from the sky, or risen out of the earth, a figure that caused Sybil to start and utter a half-suppressed scream.

It was that of a small, thin girl, so bloodless that her complexion was bluish white; her hair and eyes were also very light, and her dress was a faded out blue calico, that clung close to her form; her whole aspect was cold, damp, clammy, corpse-like, as she stood mutely with hanging hands before her summoner.

"For Heaven's sake, who is she?" inquired Sybil, under her breath.

"We call her Proserpine, because she was reft from the upper world and brought down here. She is my maid, my shadow, my wraith, my anything you like, that never leaves me. She it was who visited you in idleness or curiosity, I suppose. She bore the taper before you, when you came through the underground passage. More than this I cannot tell you of her, since more I do not know myself. You may go now, Proserpine. And tell old Hecate to hurry up the breakfast, as we have company this morning. And do you come and let me know when it is ready."

Sybil kept her eyes on the pallid girl to see where she would go, and she saw her slip through an almost invisible opening in the side of the rock. Then Sybil turned again to her strange entertainer, and said:

"There is something more I wish to know, if you do not mind telling me. Why were we drugged with opium that night?"

"Ha! ha! ha! We had some goods to remove from the vault. You were all in our way. We were obliged either to kill or to drug you. So we drugged you," laughed the girl.

"And nearly killed us, as well."

"Yes; we had to make sure of your taking enough to put you to sleep, so I poured the laudanum into your coffee-pot pretty freely, I tell you."

At this moment the bloodless phantom appeared again, and in the same thin, reed-like voice that sounded so far away, she announced that breakfast was ready.

"Come, then; I know you must need nourishment," said Sybil's wild hostess, rising to lead the way.

And now Sybil saw how it was that the pale girl had slipped through the almost invisible aperture like a spirit vanishing through a solid wall; for the rocky partitions of this natural underground place overlapped each other, leaving a passage of about one foot in width and three feet in length between the walls.

Through this they passed into a smaller cavern, which, like the larger one, had its roof and walls incrusted with sparkling stalactites, and its floor covered with living moss.

The cavern was not only beautiful but comfortable. A large charcoal furnace that stood in the middle of the floor agreeably warmed the place, while the appetizing odor of hot coffee, broiled birds and buckwheat cakes filled the air.

But the furniture of the place was the most incongruous and amazing that could be imagined. A wooden table of the rudest workmanship stood near the furnace, but it was covered with a white damask tablecloth of the finest description, and adorned with a service of the purest silver plate. With this elegant and costly array was intermingled crockery-ware of the coarsest pattern. Around the table were placed two three-legged stools of the roughest manufacture, and one piano chair of the most finished workmanship, of carved rosewood and cut velvet.

Waiting on this table stood the "damp girl," mentioned before, and also a very small, dark, withered old woman, in a black gown, with a red handkerchief tied over her head and under her chin.

"Come, Mrs. Berners, you are my guest, and I will give you the seat of honor," said Sybil's nameless hostess, as she led her to the little piano chair and put her on it.

Then for herself she took one of the three-legged stools, saying to her handmaid:

"You may take the other two seats away. Moloch and Belial will not be at breakfast with us this morning. They have gone back to the vault to lay the train."

"Dangerous," muttered the old woman between her shut lips.

"Never you mind, Mother Hecate! Moloch's courage and Belial's craft will enable them to take care of themselves," said the girl, as she set a cup of hot coffee before her guest, and placed a broiled partridge and a buckwheat cake upon her plate.

Sybil's long ride of the night before, followed as it had been by a refreshing sleep, had so restored her strength and appetite that, despite her late fright and her present anxieties, she made a very good breakfast.

"And now," said the young hostess, as they rose from the table, "what will you do? Will you lie down on my bed in the next cavern and sleep; or will you sit down here where it is warm, and talk; or will you let me show you through this network of caverns that underlies all this mountain?"

"You are very kind, at all events, and I thank you much, and I think I would like to look at this great natural curiosity, whose very existence so near my home I never even suspected," said Sybil; for she really wished to explore the wonderful labyrinth, not only from motives of curiosity, but also of policy; for she thought it would be well to know the ins and outs of this underground habitation, in case she should find it necessary to make her escape.

So her hostess took her back into the splendid outer cavern, saying:

"You do not wish to go back through any of those caverns you passed in coming here, so we will go this way."

And she passed behind another of those overlapping partitions of rock, and led Sybil into another small division, fitted up as a rude but clean bedchamber. In one corner was a pile of dried moss and leaves, covered with fine white linen sheets, and soft, warm woolen blankets. On a ledge of rock stood a tin wash-basin, in which stood a pure silver ewer. In a word, the appointments of this apartment were as incongruous as those of the other had been found.

"This is my bed, and if you should be tired when we get back from our tour through the caverns, or at any time, you can lie down here and sleep in perfect safety," said the girl.

"I thank you," answered Sybil, as they passed out of that division into another.

It was as the girl had told her, a network or cellwork of caverns, occupying, as far as it had been explored, several acres under the mountain. All these caverns bore a natural resemblance to each other. All had their roofs and walls incrusted with pearly spars and hung with glittering stalactites, and their floors covered with living moss; and all were connected by narrow passages, with the walls lapping past each other.

But some of these caverns were large, and lighted by crevices in the roof, and others were small and dark. Some of the passages between them were also wide and free, and some narrow and impassable. And in some black inaccessible holes was heard the fearful sound of subterranean waters. In one of the larger divisions of the cavern there were boxes and bales of merchandise, and silver plate and jewels; in another there was the complicated machinery of an underground distillery; and in still another was a collection of burglars' tools, counterfeiters' instruments, and firearms.

"I show you all! I do not fear to do so! You will never betray us, even if you have a chance," said the guide.

"What! You would not keep me here forever?"

"No; for we shall not stay forever. Be comforted, lady! No harm is intended you," said the girl, as having shown her guest all that was to be seen of the caverns, she conducted her back to the bedroom.

"I am very much surprised at all that I have seen," said Sybil. "I had no idea that there was a cave of such extent and beauty so near our home."

"I believe," answered the girl, 'that there are many isles in the ocean, that have never been discovered."

Sybil looked up in surprise. "You call yourself the companion of thieves, yet you talk like a person of intelligence and refinement," she said.

The girl laughed sardonically. "Of course people 'of intelligence and refinement' are all and always honest and true. You should know Belial! He taught me to read. I taught myself everything else. I have read Homer, Dante, Milton, and Shakespeare. But now you are tired; you look so. Lie down on my bed of moss and rest, and I will cover you up warm."

"Thank you, I will do so," answered Sybil, gladly stretching her wearied limbs upon the soft couch.

Her wild hostess covered her carefully, and then left her, saying:

CHAPTER II.

When Lyon Berners and his faithful servant returned to the Haunted Chapel, after having comfortably disposed of their horses for the rest of the night, the interior was still so dark that they did not at first discover the absence of Sybil, especially as the covering lay heaped upon the mattress so like a sleeping form, that even in a less murky darkness it might have been mistaken for her.

As it was now very cold, Mr. Berners, who had found a tinder-box and a coil of wax tapers among his other effects in the wagon, struck a light, with the intention of kindling a fire.

Joe brought some broken sticks and dry brushwood from the far corner where Lyon Berners had piled it up just before the flight from the chapel, and between the master and man they soon kindled a cheerful blaze that lighted up every nook and crevice of the old interior.

Then Mr. Berners turned toward the mattress to see how his wife might be sleeping.

"Why, she is not here! She has waked up and walked out," he exclaimed, in some surprise and annoyance, but not in the least alarm, for he naturally supposed that she had left the chapel for a few minutes, and would soon return.

"Hi! whar de debbil she took herself off to, all alone, dis onlawful time o' de night?" cried Joe, in dismay.

"She really ought to be back by this time," murmured Mr. Berners, with some little vague, uneasiness, as he arose and buttoned his overcoat, and went into the churchyard.

The day was dawning, and the old tombstones gleamed faintly from their bushes in the pale-gray light of early morning.

"She cannot have gone far; she would not venture; she must be very near," he said to himself, and he murmured softly:

"Sybil! Sybil! where are you, love?"

There was no answer.

And now he was joined by Joe, whose faithful and affectionate heart was wrung with anxiety and distress for his beloved and missing young mistress.

"You can't find her? Oh, Marster, where she gone? What have become of her? Oh, what shall we do?" he cried, wringing his hands in great trouble.

"We must search for her, Joe. This is very strange and very alarming," said Mr. Berners, striking off into the path that led to the fountain, and shouting her name at every step.

But only the mountain echoes answered. In an agony of anxiety they beat about the woods and thickets, and climbed the rocks and went down into the glens, still shouting—always shouting her name.

Day broadened, the sun arose, and its first rays struck them as they stood upon the heights behind the chapel, looking all over the wilderness.

"In the name of Heaven, now what are we to do?" exclaimed Lyon Berners, speaking more to himself than to another.

Joe was standing, leaning upon his stick in an attitude of despair. But suddenly he raised his head, and a gleam of light shot over his dark face, as he said:

"I tell you what we can do, Marster; where she's took to, we can find out at all ewents. I say where she's took to, for she never went of her own accords."

"Heaven help my poor darling! no; she never did. But how do you think you can trace her, Joe?"

"This a-way! I'll take the freshest of them horses, and ride home as fast as I can for life and death; and I'll snatch up her little dog as has been pining away ever since she left, and I'll bring it here and make it smell the bedclothes, where she lay, and then put it on the scent, to lead us the way she went."

"Eureka, Joe! The instinct of faithful affection, in man or brute, sometimes puts pure reason to the blush by its superior acumen," exclaimed Mr. Berners.

"I don't know no more'n the dead what you're a-talking about, Marster; but that's the way to find out where Miss Sybil was took," answered practical Joe.

"Come, then, we'll go at once and look at the horses. I think, Joe, that one of your cart horses would be better to take, as they have not been so hard worked as ours," said Mr. Berners, as they ran down the steep in the thicket in the rear of the chapel, where they had left their horses.

In a very few minutes Joe had selected and saddled his horse, and stood ready to start.

"I needn't tell you to be prudent, Joe, and to drop no hint of your errand," said Mr. Berners.

"Well, no, you needn't take that there trouble, Marse Lyon, 'cause you'd be a'cautioning of Joe, as is cautious enough a'ready. Good-morning, Marse Lyon. I'll be at Black Hall afore the fam'ly is out of bed, and I'll be back here with the little dog afore you have time to get unpatient," said Joe, climbing into his saddle and riding away.

Mr. Berners returned to the chapel, where he found the fire smouldering out, but everything else in the same condition in which he had left it when he went in pursuit of Sybil.

"No, sir!" exclaimed the loud-voiced commercial traveller. "I'm proud to say that no house in the country has more men pushing its line of goods than ours!" "What do you sell?" asked a curious one. "Babies' mail-carts!"

About the Farm

PASTURING RAPE.

Rape furnishes fine pasture for horses, cattle, sheep and swine, also fowls, writes Prof. Thomas Shaw. But some care is necessary in grazing it down with cattle or sheep, lest bloating should result. Many valuable sheep have thus been lost and in some instances cattle. They eat ravenously of the plant, as they become very fond of it, and where taken thus freely on an empty stomach, gas is generated to such an extent that soon the animal dies from suffocation if not promptly relieved. But with horses and swine no such danger is present, and probably for the reason that the stomach of these animals is not sufficiently large to take the food in quantities sufficient to produce the result referred to.

The conditions that favor bloat are, much succulence in the rape, dampness on the plants from dew or rain, and feeding upon the rape, while the stomach is empty. I have noticed that the tendency to produce bloat in rape is much greater in the damp climate of Ontario than in the drier climate of the upper Mississippi basin. But the danger is sometimes present in the latter area as well as in the former.

The danger is also greater where the rape plants are immature and especially when the lack of maturity is considerable. When sheep are turned in to graze upon half-grown rape, the danger of loss is much greater than when the rape is well-grown and has a large amount of stalk. The danger is considerably greater when the rape plants are wet.

When sheep and cattle are turned in to graze on rape, the following caution should be observed. They should not be allowed to go into the rape while hungry at any time. This is especially true when the grazing first begins. The plan sometimes adopted is to feed the animals some rape food and then turn them into the rape field and leave them there day and night.

A second method is to turn into the rape for a short time and then remove the animals, leaving them in the rape pasture for a longer season every day until they have become accustomed to the rape. This plan is safer for cattle than the other, but under some conditions it may not be necessary, as when other food is growing along with the rape.

RAPE IN MIXTURES.

Wen rape is sown in grain fields along with the grain and pastured in autumn, sometime after the grain has been removed, the grass, and it may be weeds and other grain growing up in the field, furnish a variety of food along with the rape. Because of this the danger from bloat is very much reduced.

The same is true of rape grown in mixtures. In some instances it is sown along with corn, or sorghum or millet, to provide grazing, and when thus grown the hazard is reduced just in proportion as the other fods are present. It should be remembered, however, that under some conditions the element of hazard may still be present, even when the rape plants grow among other food. Particularly is this true in seasons when the food is very succulent.

A grass pasture at hand is an excellent aid to a rape pasture, even though the grass should have lost much of its succulence. This is apt to be the case in the early autumn, which is the season when rape is more commonly ready for being turned in upon.

Usually the plan is best that turns sheep onto rape when it is well grown. The rape provides more food when grazed down under these conditions than when grazed earlier, and then again after it has grown up more or less. It is probable, however, that swine will do better on rape when turned in somewhat earlier. They prefer rape leaves green and succulent. Sheep fatten better on rape that has produced much of stem. But rape should not be grazed by any kind of stock when young, or the plants may be destroyed.

Grain is sometimes fed to sheep and cattle when grazing on rape, but in other instances none is given. The grain fed in the early morning will likely lessen the hazard from bloat, and it will probably pay to feed it under some conditions, but sheep will fatten nicely on well-grown rape under ordinary conditions without grain. Swine should have some additional grain food.

The owners of pedigreed sheep should be careful as to how they graze them upon rape. If loss should occur, it is heavy because of the value of the sheep. But they may be fed on rape cut and carted to them without any hazard, as the amount fed may be controlled.

FACTS ABOUT SPRAYING.

The problem is to accomplish the most thorough work at the smallest cost in the shortest time. The factors are the men doing the work, the teams transporting the material and the tools to work with. The item of labor is placed first, because in a commercial orchard, that item is far the largest cost and means should be taken to make labor most effective.

The work dictates its needs. First, all mixtures should be made quickly, easily and with the least labor. The spray material making then needs water under uressure and means for delivering the completed mixture by gravity, an elevated tank filled with water supply, steam coils and draw-off valves, a store room for materials, scales and supplies convenient to the tank.

Such a spray house I built at one end of my wagon shed, providing an oblong tank holding 450 gallons and divided into three equal compartments each having its own steam coil and draw-off valve, says Mr. S. H. Derby. At the upper level of the mixing tank, is another platform on which stand a barret containing a stock solution of bluestone, one pound to a gallon, and a lime slaking tank, and also a barrel in which to dilute the bluestone.

Making bordeaux then is simply taking so many gallons stock bluestone and putting into diluting barrel and allow it to fill with water, straining the needed lime into tank compartment and allowing water to run in until it reaches a certain mark; then dump the dilute bluestone over into the dilute lime; then for a moment using a large plunger to thoroughly mix, the poison is put in and also thoroughly mixed. When ready to use, simply drive the spray wagon alongside, put a large brass strainer, 30 meshes to the inch, on the spray wagon tank, open a valve to which is attached a 1¼-inch hose and draw into spray wagon tank.

WATER COWS OFTEN.

The best practice is to let cows get to the water as often as they like. This is not always practicable in winter, but they should be watered at least twice a day. If the water is warm, that is, heated so that the chill is taken off, they will be glad to drink twice daily, even during the coldest of weather. There is no question as to the value of warm water for dairy cows. The animals drink more, the production of milk is not checked by the animal being compelled to drink ice water, and the return at the pail is much greater than when heating of water is neglected.

CORRECTS SOLOMON.

Dr. Escherich Says He Should Have Extolled the Ant for its Cleanliness.

According to Dr. Escherich, a learned entomologist of Strasburg University, German, Solomon erred in commending the ant to the sluggard as a shining example of wisdom and industry. The German savant thinks Solomon would have better justified his claim to be regarded as the wisest man that ever lived had he extolled the ant as an exponent of cleanliness. He has just published the results of an exhaustive study of these wonderful insects. He combats the views of those investigators who assign to them almost human intelligence. But as exponents of that virtue which stands next to godliness he maintains that ants stand pre-eminent, and if the human race would pattern after them in this respect, half the diseases on which doctors thrive would vanish.

Ants, he declares, abhor dirt in any form about their persons. Nature has provided them with implements that serve the same purpose as combs and brushes in the hands of civilized folk, and they make far more effective use of them. They are never too busy to clean themselves. No job is so important to an ant that he won't knock off work to clean himself. He does not wait until the day's labors are finished to perform his ablutions. He is never too tired to lend another ant a hand—or rather a leg—to effect a thorough scouring. He will tolerate loafing occasionally, for the professor asserts it is a mistake to suppose that ants are everlastingly hunting up jobs, but he won't put up with dirty neighbors. Cleanliness is the supreme law of the community.

But the professor rather detracts from the credit one would otherwise be disposed to give them for the practice of this most exemplary virtue by telling us that ants are driven to it by the conditions of their existence. "Without the most scrupulous cleanliness," he says, they could not recognize each other nor communicate anything. The cohesion of the individual with his fellows is maintained solely through the medium of the sense of smell. If the ant is covered with dust the possibility of its being recognized is diminished to an extraordinary degree. The antennae in particular must always be kept clean, for it is only with their aid that the ant remains in close communication with its tribe."

It is their highly developed sense of cleanliness, the professor says, which also explains the ants' "funerals" about which so much has been written. Ants, it is well known, carry their dead to definite burial places, where they arrange them in most careful order. The little creatures do not, however, do this with the object of providing their dead comrades with a last resting place, Dr. Escherich states: "they merely obey the instinct of cleanliness which impels them to remove all refuse from the nest and carry it away to a definite spot."

RAILS TO HUDSON BAY

TERRITORY WILL BE ACCESSIBLE BY STEEL AND STEAM.

Hudson Strait is Navigable From 1st of July Until About the Middle of October.

I understand that the Dominion Government has granted charters to no less than eight different railroad companies to build lines to Hudson Bay, writes Frank G. Carpenter from Winnipeg to the Chicago Record-Herald. It is even said that James J. Hill of the Great Northern has such a concession in his inside pocket and that the various Canadian trunk lines are planning branches in that direction. In going northward over the Ontario Government's new railroad to Cobalt I was told by the engineers that they would soon reach Lake Abitibi, crossing the great clay belt, and that the road would be pushed on to James Bay. At Sault Ste Marie I fell in with the American syndicate which owns the Algoma Central charter, providing for a railroad from Sault Ste. Marie to Hudson Bay, and was told that the line had been graded for ninety miles and that over seventy-five miles were in operation.

Railroads have been surveyed from Winnipeg to Port Nelson and also from Fort Churchill, and there are some who believe that Canada will eventually have a trunk line running from Port Simpson, the western terminus of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to Fort Churchill, and that a great part of the grain will go ever that route to Europe. The Canadian Pacific and the Canadian Northern are, it is said, considering the Hudson Bay route, and throughout the British Northwest it is regarded as one of the mighty probabilities of the future.

According to the last surveys of the Dominion government it has been shown that Hudson Strait is navigable from the 1st of July until about the middle of October, and the bay itself is said to be an open sea the year round. The idea is to build great storage elevators at Fort Churchill and to have a line of steamships moving in and out from there to Liverpool during the open season. If this can be done the saving will be enormous, and it will give the Canadian wheat great advantages over United States in the markets of Europe.

SHORT ROUTE BY HUDSON BAY.

Hudson Bay is so far north on the globe that the distance between it and Liverpool is remarkably short. It is only about 2,000 miles from Fort Churchill to Port Simpson, and, if a railroad should be built, the Hudson Bay route would be by far the shortest from Asia to Europe and very much shorter from parts of the United States to Europe than the routes now used. The distance from Winnipeg via Hudson Bay to Liverpool is 3,600 miles, whereas by Montreal it is 4,228 miles. From Duluth to Liverpool via Hudson Bay is 3,728 miles and the same point by way of New York is 4,200 miles. When this route is opened passengers from St. Paul and Minneapolis can go to Great Britain by traveling 4,100 miles and they will save a railroad journey of at least five or six hundred miles. The distance from Vancouver to Liverpool by Hudson Bay will be 1,300 miles shorter than it is now by the Canadian Pacific Railroad, and passengers from all parts of the great West will be able to go quicker and with a shorter rail journey by that way.

The great advantage of this new commercial highway will be in the transportation of grain and other freight. It will bring the wheat of the new Northwest a thousand miles nearer salt water. The United States produced last year something like 700,000,000 bushels of wheat. It is not extravagant to believe that the great grain belt of the British Northwest will produce as much at some time in the future. Its yield last year was about a hundred million bushels, and not one-fiftieth of the land is under cultivation. If the wheat can be transported by way of Hudson Bay, it is said that the saving might be as much as 15 cents per bushel, and this on a hundred-million-bushel crop would mean a saving of $15,000,000 per annum. Is it any wonder that the possibility of the route is seriously considered?

In addition to grain would be the enormous suplies which will be needed for the British Northwest. This country will eventually support about twenty million people, and they will be among the best customers on the globe. The port would also take away from and supply goods direct to the United States. It would be especially valuable in the shipping of live stock, as the climate is cool and the sea voyage short.

DELAY IN OPENING REGION.

There has in the past been a strong opposition to all schemes for the utilization of Hudson Bay. A great secrecy has been preserved about the bay, and strangers have been kept from exploring it. There have been two corporations especially interested in this matter; one was the Hudson Bay Company and the other the Canadian Pacific Railway. The Hudson Bay Company were anxious to keep matters quiet because they were getting a half million dollars' worth of furs out of this region, which they had monopolized for 200 years. The Canadian Pacific people knew that if wheat and other freight could be sent via Hudson Bay to England their long freight lines across the continent would lack traffic. And, therefore, both were interested in keeping the conditions as they were.

As to the possibilities of navigation, these can only be tested by experiment. There is no doubt but that ships can go in and out of this great inland water way during a part of the year. The Hudson Bay Company sailing vessels have been doing so for 274 years. In that time they have had in operation 750 vessels, ranging in size from seventy tons to small boats, and so far they have lost only two.

The difficulty of navigating Hudson Bay lies not in the bay itself, but in Hudson Strait, which leads to it. Hudson Bay, as I am told, is never frozen. It is like a great ocean, and some short distance from the shore is open all the year round. It is an enormous body of water. It is 1,300 miles long and 1,600 miles wide, and its area is one-sixth as big as the whole United States. It has by far the largest drainage basin of all British America. Some of its waters come from the Rocky Mountains, some from Labrador and some from the Height of Land, on the other side of which the waters flow to the great lakes and the Gulf of Mexico. The basin includes about 3,000,000 square miles.

Hudson Bay has icebergs and ice floes, but its waters are deep, and it has some good harbors. One of the best harbors is Fort Churchill, and it has been picked out as the port for the probable railroads. It will be the best place to reach Winnipeg. A railroad could easily be built along the route and it is said that much of the land through which it would go is suitable for vegetable raising and small farms.

ICE MENACE TO BOATS.

The greatest dangers of the Hudson Bay route lie in Hudson Strait, which forms the entrance to Hudson Bay. It is five or six hundred miles long and about one hundred miles wide, opening out on the Atlantic a little below the end of Greenland. It is right in the track of the great icebergs and ice floes which come down through Baffin Bay and Davis Strait from the Arctic Ocean, and which are liable to be blown into Hudson Strait by the winds. Just as the shores of Ireland, England, and the northern part of the Eurpoean continent are warmed by the Gulf Stream, so the regions here are cooled by the arctic waters, and these icebergs and seas of floating ice. They make Hudson Strait colder than it would otherwise be, and this is added to by the winds from the Atlantic, which blow in the icebergs off the shores of Greenland.

From the middle of October until June this strait is sure to be full of ice, at least it will not be safe to go through it at such times. Captain Wakeman, who was sent by the Dominion government here to investigate its navigation a few years ago, reported that the strait was blocked for about 250 miles from the 23rd of June to the 8th of July. The jam consisted of heavy ice sheets which had drifted one sheet on top of another and jammed up in such a way that a heavily laden vessel could not possibly have gone through it. The sheets were from three to thirty inches thick. Shortly after this time the ice broke and passed away, and the straits were open for the next three months. Captain Wakeman estimated that the open season would be three and a half or four months.

Dr. Bell of the Canadian geological survey says it is not safe to rely upon Hudson Strait being open later than the first week in October, and Captain Gordon, who commanded one of the exploring parties, says that vessels especially constructed for the purpose will have to be used and that they should not be more than 2,000 tons. They should be fortified against the ice and have small propellers well down in the water. It would take a vast number of such steamers to handle the Canadian wheat crop, and unless great whalebacks or the modern grain steamers can be used for the traffic it would hardly pay as a grain route.

VAST TRACTS UNEXPLORED.

There is no doubt, however, that some of these railroads will be completed. The Grand Trunk Pacific, which is now building, will run only 200 or 300 miles from James Bay, and the Ontario Government road will surely be pushed northward to open up the clay belt to settlers. The probability is that we shall have railroad connection with Hudson Bay within a couple of years or so and that a large part of the game for Toronto, New York and Chicago will come down over these roads. The country will then be filled with tourists and the Hudson Bay region may be a favorite summer resort for the North American continent. The woods are full of game. There are caribou by the thousand, plenty of moose, many kinds of deer and no end of wild birds. With steamers on the bay one will be able to take wonderful tours to the least explored parts of the world and a vast mineral region may be opened up. The country is as yet unprospected and unknown. From talks which I have had with Hudson Bay traders and explorers the land about the bay is rocky in places, and in others it is covered with muskeg and swamps. Near James Bay there are vast bogs of peat, some of which are twenty feet deep. This could be made into briquettes such as are used in Europe, and it may possibly form the fuel of the country.

As to hunting and fishing, these Hudson Bay railroads will open up the chief game resort of the world. The fur wealth is so great that the Eskimos bring in several hundred skins of muskoxen every season in addition to bales of polar bear skins, caribou, wolves and foxes. Some of the finest furs of the world may be seen stacked up like hay on the shores of Hudson Bay, awaiting their transportation to the trading posts. In one locality about the bay the Eskimos trapped in one year more than a thousand white foxes, besides wolves, wolverines and other animals.

ESKIMOS IN THE WILDS.

At present most of the hunting is being done by Eskimos and Indians, who make it a life business. These Eskimos are much like our natives of Alaska. The men average about five feet three inches high and the women less than five feet. They have black eyes and hair, and their hair is straight and as coarse as horse hair. They have flat noses, high cheek bones, and eyes which are Chinese in shape. The teeth of the older women are worn almost to the gums from chewing sealskin, in order to make it soft and more easily sewn.

These people live in snow houses during the winter and in sealskin tents in the summer. They subsist largely on seal meat or whale blubber, and their fires are oil lamps. They have but few domestic animals except dogs, although it is said that here and there a moose has been harnessed up and made to work.

I hear much about the fisheries of Hudson Bay. Captain Hall, one of the Hudson Bay traders, tells me that the stories concerning their value are overdrawn, but the explorers sent by the government and the vast amount of whale oil and other products brought out by the fishermen lead one to suppose them about the most valuable on the continent. A large amount of the whaling has been done by Americans from Bedford, Mass. These men go through the strait and winter at Marble Island in Hudson Bay, near the west coast. They spend one season harpooning whales and buying furs and taking their cargoes out the following year. Among the whales caught are the bowheads, which produce some of the finest whalebone known to the world. A full-grown whale will yield about 1,500 pounds of bone, and as the whalebone sells for $14,000 a ton, a whale of that kind brings in bone worth about $10,500. In addition to this the oil of the whale is valuable, so that a single whale may yield $20,000. Our statistics show that our whale fisheries there have already realized in ten years $1,371,000. There were fifty voyages the average voyage realizing more than $27,000.

It is from Hudson Bay that the quill pens of England still come, and this region for generations furnished the most of the pens of Europe. Quills are still used in England government offices as well as in the houses of parliament, and it was with a Hudson Bay quill that King Edward signed his coronation oath. The gathering of the quills have been always done by the Hudson Bay Company, which has shipped as many as ten tons of wild goose feathers in a single year. Only three ounces of such feathers can be gotten from one bird, and it required 120,000 geese to furnish those quills. I had a bunch of the pens presented me, and it may interest you to know that I sign this letter with a feather from the wing of a goose which once ate rice on the shores of Hudson Bay.

RESCUE SEEN BY MIRAGE

REMARKABLE PHENOMENON IN MID-ATLANTIC.

The Crew of a German Sailing Ship Witness a Strange Sight.

A ghostly mirage of a rescue at sea which was happening scores of miles away was seen in mid-Atlantic by the crew of the German sailing ship Sachren, which has just arrived in New York after a long voyage from Hiogo, Japan.

Not only were the smallest details of the rescue plainly outlined in the heavens, although the rescuing ship was invisible on the horizon, but a verification of the phenomenon was had the next morning when the craft shown in the mirage went sailing by the Sachren.

The mirage was seen in the Atlantic 3 degrees south of the equator an hour before sunset. The boatswain, who happened to be on the look-out, suddenly noticed reflected in the sky as in a mirror a four-masted barque, close-hauled on the starboard tack and headed south-east.

She had painted ports and a cloud of canvas set, and the crew of the Sachren aver that they saw even the white water which broke about her bow. The elevation of the mirage was about 10 degrees.

MYSTERY EXPLAINED.

Suddenly the black sides of the unknown barque turned a brilliant red, and assumed an enormous size. Each mast seemed as big as a Cunarder's funnel, and her royal yards appeared as round as barrels.

Three men were to be seen on the weather quarter of the mizzen top-sail-yard. Suddenly one was seen to drop from the yard and strike the water with a splash.

Presently the spars were alive with men, and it could be seen that they were taking in canvas.

As clearly as though the unknown ship were but a mile away, the men on the Sachren could see half a dozen men at the davits. Then the longboat was observed floating alongside.

Men entered the boat, which pulled away a considerable distance and stopped. The man in her bow then reached over the side, clutched something in the water, and pulled it on board. The boat then returned to the barque, and was hoisted on board.

Ten minutes later the rigging again was full of human beings setting sail.

The mystery was not explained until the following morning, when a strange vessel came within view, which was soon recognized as the barque seen in the mirage. She showed an English ensign, and also hoisted a number, which could not be made out, however, in the morning haze.

DRAIN MEXICAN LAKE.

Cortez Had a Fleet on it at Conquest of Mexico.

Historic and picturesque Lake Zumpango, near the City of Mexico, is to be emptied of its waters and its fertile bottom given over to tillers of the soil. This lake is one of the most beautiful bodies of water in the world, nestling above the clouds at an altitude of 8,000 feet. It is considerably higher than the city of Mexico.

In the times of the Aztecs and when Cortez made his conquest of Mexico the lake was much larger than it is now. When flooded, it was a serious menace to the city below.

By means of a fleet which he operated upon Lake Zumpango, Cortez was enabled to push his advance upon the capital of Montezuma. The body of water has an important place in the history of the country.

Much of the basin has been drained since those early days by earthquakes and the work of engineers. Now the water is to be drawn off entirely, and the site is expected to prove one of the world's richest garden spots.

GERMAN GIRL IN LONDON

GIVES SOME QUAINT IMPRESSIONS OF ENGLAND.

Some Advice to Emperor William—Why Britain Is So Great a Nation.

A recent number of the well-known newspaper of Germany, the Reichsbote, published the following letter from a German governess residing in London:—

"I am strongly advised not to remain in England, as this is a very critical time for all Germans. London is crowded with vigorous German men and women, who are willing to perform any sort of work for trifling wages in order to learn the language. Thousands of English men and women are starving on this account, and the hate these people bear toward every German is terrible. Every moment an outbreak of violence can be expected in the East End of London. A new law is said to be in preparation forbidding any one to give Germans work except under very unusual circumstances, in order that the awful poverty of the English workmen and workwomen shall be allieviated. No good commercial house now engages Germans, but only English or French workmen and messengers. Only Jews and mean or poor English people now engage Germans.

"It is quite time that the Kaiser should take energetic steps to forbid or obstruct German emigration to England. It is a disgrace to the German nation that it should cause itself to be despised and mocked by so arrogant a nation as the English. French people are also ill-disposed towards Germans, but in a more good-natured way. In France I have never had to suffer from domestic servants the annoyances which are caused me by English domestic servants, owing to their hatred of Germans. I heartily wish that Germany and France would clasp hands, and not beg so much for

"I am sending you an English hymn-book (Church of England) and the Prayer Book which is used for morning and evening services, so that you can see how religious services are held in the high churches here. Some of the words and tunes are beautiful. What much pleases me about the English is that the men, as well as the women, young and old, regularly go to church. One always sees the whole family in church, even to the baby, with its nurse, and all the servants. The clergyman always prays for England's glory, honor, prosperity, and victory on this earth. The clergy bring every little political affair into the sermon, and continuously stimulate the national pride.

"Through the clergy Parliament is able to get everything it wishes from the people. They know how to persuade their congregations with beautiful and pious addresses, so that every one is convinced that they are right. I wish I could take down one or two sermons for you in shorthand. The clergymen also preach every day in the streets, in Hyde Park, and at every corner and square. There are also the Salvation Army, and a tremendous number of Nonconformist clergymen. It is impossible to walk for half an hour in the streets—Sundays and week-days—without hearing hymns and long sermons in the open air, many of them dealing with politics. At first I also stopped at every such street congregation and listened. For a town so large as London it is really necessary. How many cannot go to church at all, such as the cabmen, newspaper sellers, and others.

"The English are pious, but proud. The Germans might well learn something here in piety, especially the men. I have never seen in German towns so many men at church as I have here. The English clergymen attract the men by the politics which they insert, and thus educate the people for God and the Fatherland at the same time. After the services every English clergyman amuses himself with his congregation in such sports as football and cycling, hundreds of persons often making cycling excursions together.

A WEEKLY CONTRIBUTION

covers the costs for food and drink. Nothing is drunk except tea. And everything is under the supervision of the clergymen. They know so well how to win the hearts of young and old, men and women, that the people can do nothing without their parson. He is their Alpha and Omega in joy and sorrow. I wish it were like that in German towns; in the country it is not unsimilar. Germans might also become a little more proud, and not devote their best efforts to foreign nations merely to earn contempt and mockery for their pains. Or is Germany already so thickly populated that she cannot support any more?

"I have received no answer to my advertisement in the daily paper. They know immediately when I write 'speak three languages' that I am a German, as the English and French very rarely speak three languages. In England it is not as in France and Germany. If one does not do it someone else will. As soon as something becomes public opinion it is no use attempting to resist it. Public opinion is hostile to Germany, so that every individual hates the Germans. Each one speaks, thinks, and acts exactly as the other. Absolute unity of opinion exists here. That is why the nation is so great, so proud, and so much feared."

NEW YORK AND ITS DOCTORS.

In New York there are several physicians receiving more than double the salary of the President of the United States. Six of them at least can truthfully confess to incomes of $125,000 a year. That city also boasts ten physicians with incomes of $50,000, and some fifty more who earn and pocket $25,000. Treading their trail are upwards of 200 who garner $12,500 annually, leaving about 2,000 doctors and surgeons who barely earn a livelihood, the average income of a metropolitan physician not [illegible] year.

What has been characterized as the greatest flood seen in the Badenoch district for the past 30 years was witnessed at Kingussie a short time ago.

Female servants were in request at Dumfries hiring fair, when farmers had to give what they regarded as "a perfect ransom," and kitchen girls, and those able to milk, could dictate terms.

Mr. A. J. Balfour, according to a pedigree-hunter, is fifteenth in descent from King Robert II. of Scotland, and twenty-first in the direct line from King Edward I. of England.

After having been closed for over six months for the purpose of undergoing extensive alterations, the old Ayrshire church, the Dundonald parish church, has been re-opened for public worship.

The Braille Printing Company, of Edinburgh, has brought out books for the blind made of thin aluminum sheets instead of paper, embossed in the usual manner.

The village officer of Tyndrum has entered on his 103rd year. He is hale and hearty, though very deaf, and performs his work in summer, though he has to secure the service of another in winter. He is a Campbell of Argyllshire.

The captain of an Aberdeen liner has just made his seventy-first voyage out and home from Sydney. He has been doing the voyage for over forty years, and has covered altogether about three million miles without mishap.

An enormous shoal of herring was struck recently by the Firth of Forth fishing fleet some miles off St. Abb's Head. Seven or eight boats alone had catches of from forty to fifty crans apiece, and in several instances the nets gave way under the weight of fish.

Extensive alterations are to be made to the shooting ranges on the Mhorrich Mhor for this year's camps. The arrangements are being superintended by Lieutenant G. Mackenzie, Dingwall. A new gallery range is to be erected, fitted up with the most up-to-date appliances, including telephone apparatus.

According to the Rev. R. S. Barclay, Perth schoolmasters are nothing more than mere "thrashing machines." Describing one of the schools, Mr. Barclay said that the head teacher was "engaged from ten in the morning till five in the afternoon, thrashing, thrashing, thrashing. He had taken his M.A. degree in order to thrash boys and girls. The headmaster had not time to punish them all, and he had a week of arrears to make up."

A movement has been on foot in Scotland for some time which has as its object the opening of churches on week days. Glasgow Established Church Presbytery discussed the matter with some thoroughness the other day. In the course of the remarks made by Sheriff Guthrie and others, it was stated that only one Established Church in the city had—and that for many years—been open for daily service, and for the constant use of individual parishioners. A sum amounting to £100 has been subscribed, without advertisement or special pleading, to set the movement on foot in other churches of the city.

ADDITION BY TYPEWRITER.

A German genius has perfected a typewriter which performs the duties of an accountant through an ingenious arrangement of wheels. By the use of this machine a bill may be made out on the typewriter, and, instead of a laborious addition being required to arrive at the total, a set of indicators at one side shows exactly the sum of the columns of figures. The adding device is not new, but the means whereby the figures are registered is exceedingly ingenious.

FRANCE'S LARGEST CLOCK.

The works of a clock made for the cathedral of St. Gervais d'Avranches weigh two tons; there are five sets of wheels, and the hours are struck on a bell weighing over six tons by a clapper of 220 pound. For the quarters and the carillon there are 22 other bells, the weight of the quarter bells ranging from 13 cwt. to two tons. There are four faces to this clock, which is the largest in France.

DISAPPEARING BEDS.

No one ever sees a bed in any of Mme. Patti's private rooms until the evening, when what might be taken to be a handsome wardrobe with a mirror becomes a bedstead. The housemaids, after making the bed in the morning, touch a spring, which causes the bed to sink down into the frame of the bedstead, and it is then drawn up so as to give it the appearance of a wardrobe.

GILDED FOWLS.

In Mexico a gold-mine has just been sold for $150,000, for the discovery of which chickens are entitled to full credit. A few months ago the value of the property was unsuspected, but one day the employes of Albert Palos, a merchant, of Tapalpa, found grains of gold in the crops of his fowls, and immediately took steps to acquire the land where the birds roamed.

CAPTURE OF THE BANDITS.

One of C. P. R. Hold-Up Men a Notorious Outlaw—Graphic Story of Arrest.

Kamloops, B. C. May 15.—One of the three men arrested for robbing the C.P. R. train east of Kamloops on Tuesday has been identified as "Bill', Miner, one of the most notorious bandits in the West, and wanted for a job done on the C.P.R. train at Mission Junction two years ago. Two years before that he held up an Oregon Railway and Navigation train, and altogether there is $20-000, reward on his head An old outlaw chief gives his name as Edwards.

Detective W. Seavey, of Seattle head of the Chief Detective force declares there is no doubt about Edwards being Miner. The second man is alias 'Shorty' who has been around Princeton for some time, and has mining claims in Ashnola camp. He is a heavy chap and put up a fight when arrested. When the doctor was probbing for the bullet which had laid him out, he said "It should have gone through my head; it would have saved trouble. The third man arrested is William Colquhoun, who is said is from Phoenix. He is a quiet refined fellow, the last man one would connect with a hold-up. He is very reticent.

Miner and Dunn are quite willing to talk. They say they left Pothole Lake Aspen Grover two months ago, and worked over to the south of Grand Prairie. They were on their way back and had made camp when the police surrounded them. They claim to be prospectors and deny all knowledge of the hold-up.

Dunn and Edwards correspond in every detail with the descriptions and articles found on them which come from the rifled mail car.

A graphic account of the capture of the desperadoes was given to-day by Constable Fernie who assisted in bringing in the three robbers. He said:—Yesterday Constable Pearse and I had come to the end of the trail, through the timber, and, not being able to decide as to which route was likely to prove the one taken by the robbers, we separated, Pearse going toward Grand Prairie and I going toward Douglas lake. I was moving slowly when I suddenly came upon them.

They had not seen me so in order to make sure of their identity, I went back on the trail they had been until I assured myself that the tracks were the same as those we had been following from the scene of the hold up. There they were two with hobnailed boots and slimb, womanish, smooth shoe on the third. I knew that we were sure of our men; so I rode back towards Chapperon Lake to secure mounted police. It's a good thing I didn't tackle them alone.

After I had made connection with the redcoats we returned to where I had spied the quarry, and, taking up the trail, we came upon them in a thicket where a thin curl of smoke disclosed their lurking place. The camp was quietly surrounded and we commenced to close in on them.

A fusilade of shots from the bush showed that they had spotted us and intended to put up a fight. This intention was altered after some score of shots had been exchanged and one of their men supposed to be the leader, had gone down They surrendered without further resistance. The old man was bleeding badly They were well armed having carbines and three pistols the latter very wicked weapons.

The gang were prepared to put up a big fight, but were overawed by the superior members and cowed by the pitiless persistence displayed by the police in following the trail over the rough country.

Drowned in Ottawa.

Ottawa, May, 18.—John Briden, 20 years of age, was drowned at Quyon, Que., on the Ottawa, early yesterday morning. The accident occurred while the men who work on the raft were at breakfast. It is supposed that Brideau attempted to jump off the steamer Pattee, on which he was employed, on to the boom, and fell into the water. The body was recovered half an hour later. Deceased was not married,

BREAD is never better than the flour it is made of.

Often it is not nearly so good, but that is the fault of the bread-maker.

Without good flour, good bread is impossible, no matter how skilfully it is handled.

Now, good bread must be good to eat, as well as good to see or to taste. Good-to-eat bread is bread that nourishes.

In the matter of nutriment,

Royal Household Flour

is supreme. It represents the best that is in the wheat, ground to a snowy whiteness and purified by electricity.

It produces bread that is light, easy to digest and best of all—nutritious. Ogilvie's Royal Household is to be had at all grocers.

By-Law Carried.

The voting on the by law to grant privileges to J. F. Howard in connection with the establishing of a stove foundry at Morrisburg, in the old Miller foundry building resulted in a decisive victory for the proposition.

There was not a large vote polled, but the requisite three-fifths was out and voted. 166 freeholders marked their ballots, and among them only two voted nay, one being in the west ward, and the other in the east, the centre ward having a clean sheet of yeas.

The foundry works have started and the first castings made, the power being supplied for the machinery from the power house in accordance with the by-law.

The enterprise promises to be, as we said before, an excellent one for the town.

A Million Dollars Squandered.

It is estimated this sum was wasted last year by people trying to find a cure for catarrh. Foolish for suffers to experiment when it's so well known that "Catarrhozone is the only remedy that cures permanently. Other treatments only relieve, but Catarrhozone cures and prevents the disease from ever returning. "I had Catarrh in the worst form" writes G. F. Fadden of Rovan, Que. I was so bad that ordinary medicine didn't ever relieve, but Cararrhozone cured perfectly.' No chance of dissapointment with Catarrhozone—it's certain as death to cure your catarrh—just try it.

Lawrence Wood, who turned King's evidence, testified that Scharder was the financial man in the deal. He provided the money for the enterprise, and after the robbery paid $600 to Heldman for the furs. There were four men concerned in the robbery, Feldman, Scharder, Wood and Helmer. The latter has not been arrested yet. Mrs. Scharder and baby, from Montreal, were here for the preliminaay trial.

A Perth Sensation.

Perth, Ont., May 15—Mayor Foy called the attention of the council last night in an official way to a rumor that gained credence in some quarters to the effect that certain members of the council had been approachod in reference to their assistance in procuring a contract.

Adam Weston, councillor, then arose and stated that a certain contractor had come to his place on Sunday, April 29, and approached him. A conversation ensued. Weston said the contractor stated, "I can make it a little benefit to you. You have quite an influence. A cent or a cent and a quarter will give you a profit."

"He meant a little percentage would help me," said Mr. Weston. The councillor refused to name the contractor and make a specific charge.

Dr. McCullough, another member of the council, said he understood from Mr. Weston that it was a cent and a half to two cents. Mr. Weston stolidly refused to make a specific charge and as a result, all the tenders were opened. None was awarded.

It is noticeable that Mr. Weston has three statements before the public, an interview with The Expositor, in which he says it was "for a consideration of a cent, or perhaps it was a cent and a quarter a foot, for all work done during the season"; his statement to council; and Dr. McCulloughs interpretation of a cent and a half to two cents.

Mr. Weston did not take the council into his confidence at a meeting on April 30, but told the matter to several people in town in confidence. The story was put into circulation on the eve of the election, May 9. The matter has occasioned a good deal of talk in town and opinion is divided.

Make Cornwall a City.

A movement has been started to make Cornwall a city, by incorporating within the town boundaries the adjacent suburbs of Beaconsffeld, Gladstone Lorneville, the G. T. R. station and vicinity, and perhaps Smithville, all of which are now part of the municipality of Cornwall township. These suburbs hold a large population, between 2,000 and 3,000, and they enjoy nearly all the advantages of the town—labor in town, bonused factories, town policemen arrest their lawbreakers, town firemen put out their fires, and they escape from taxes, at the same time getting water power from the town water works, and in several cases connecting with the town sewers. The annexation movement has been taken up by Cornwall's Board of Trade, which has been working hard for the improvement of the town since their re-orginization some time ago. The Board has requested the town council to petition the Lieut.-Governor to annex the suburbs to the town.

The world is full of people who are in constant misery from the racking pains of rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago and kindred diseases. They From Misery to Comfort. would give any money to get relief, but having tried various remedies and been disappointed they have become discouraged and skeptical of all remedies. Does this describe your case? If it does, let us tell you that there is a cure for your trouble, a remedy that will not disappoint you. It is Tuck's Rheumatic Bone Oil. It never disappoints. As it's name implies, it goes straight to the bone or joint, the seat of the disease, scatters the poisonous acid, relaxes the stiffened joints, allays the inflammation and effects a sure and speedy cure. It gives comfort where there was misery, a fact for which we have hundreds of letters from those who have been sufferers. This oil is for internal and external use and while it is a great and never failing remedy for rheumatism, lame back, etc., it is also good for other kinds of inflammation, such as croup, bronchitis and quinsy. It is the most remarkable remedy of the age and should be in every home. For sale by F. J. Baldrey at 50c. a bottle or sent by mail prepaid by the Tuck Bone Oil Co., Limited, Smith's Falls. NEW ERA FOR RUSSIA

A despatch from St. Petersburg says: The inauguration of Russia's National Assembly on Thursday passed off well in two widely contrasting scenes. In the white marble hall of St. George in the Winter Palace the elect of the people listened in the dignity of silence, amid a dazzling display of military and official grandeur, to the Czar's brief speech accepting them henceforth as part of Russia's body politic. Then they proceeded to their own chamber in the Taurida Palace, where they reaffirmed, with enthusiastic cheers, their determination, as expressed by Prof Mouromtzeff, in returning thanks for his election to the Presidency of the House, "to support their work for the wellbeing of the people on two bases, namely, respect for the prerogative of the Constitution, and the necessity for completing the rights of the Douma."

Although the Czar passed six hours in the capital of Thursday, it cannot be said that he went among his people. He disembarked from his yacht at the palace steps and so re-embarked on his homeward journey to Peterhof. Thus he never set foot outside the front gate of the palace, where there was a magnificent display of cavalry, the finest guards regiments parading in the brilliant sunshine, which was all the crowds outside the barriers got for waiting.

The pageant within the Hall of St. George, where the Czar addressed the new delegates, was completely dominated by the presence of the peasant members of the Douma. The gathering of brilliant uniforms was greater than at any time since the coronation of Nicholas II. Assembled in the centre of the picture were the highest clergy of the Orthodox Church, in gorgeous gold canonicals and mitres studded with diamonds, while beside them stood the crimson-robed members of the Imperial choir.

PEASANTS NOT AFFECTED.

But all this display did not affect the emotions of the 150 peasants who were ranged along the hall on the left of the throne. Some of them crossed themselves regularly during the lengthy prayers which preceded the speech from the throne, but none of them joined the vigorous and long-sustained applause by the courtiers on the right of the throne, and few joined in the deep obeisances made to the Czar when he returned through the hall to his apartments.

His Majesty, although visibly nervous, spoke with a steady voice, which was well heard. He seemed to be thoroughly relieved when the ceremony was over.

From quite early morning the streets were scenes of great animation. Houses were decorated with flags, church bells rang, and Te Deums were sung throughout the city. The morning newspapers published special articles joyfully welcoming the new era.

THE CZAR'S SPEECH.

Standing in front of the throne, the Czar read his message to the Douma. It was as follows:

The supreme Providence which gave me the care of our Fatherland moved me to call to my assistance in legislative work elected representatives of the people. In the expectation of a brilliant future for Russia, I greet in your persons the best men from the empire, whom I ordered my beloved subjects to choose from among themselves.

A difficult work lies before you. I trust that love for your Fatherland and your earnest desire to serve it will inspire and unite you.

I should keep inviolate the institutions which I have granted, with the firm assurance that you will devote all your strength to the service of your country, and especially to the needs of the peasantry, which are so close to my heart, and to the education of the people and their economical welfare, remembering that to the dignity and prosperity of the State, not only freedom, but order founded upon justice, are necessary.

I desire from my heart to see my people happy, and hand down to my son an empire secure, well organized, and enlightened.

May God bless the work that lies before me in unity with the council of the empire and the Imperial Douma. May this day be the day of the moral revival of Russia, and the day for the renewal of its highest forces.

Approach with solemnity the labors for which I call you, and be worthy of the responsibilities put upon you by the Emperor and people. May God assist us.

NO ENTHUSIASM.

The reading lasted but three minutes No reply was made to the Emperor's address. When he had concluded the assemblage dispersed, the members of the Douma making no sign of approval or disapproval of what they had listened to Convict Was Being Moved From Kingston Penitentiary to Hospital.

A despatch from Kingston says: A pathetic occurrence was the death, in an ambulance on Friday afternoon of a pardoned convict, who was being removed from the prison to Hotel Dieu. William Ross, aged 48, of Port Hope, was serving a second term of five years He was affected with heart disease, and a pardon reached here on Friday. He was hurried ont of the penal institution, but before he had gone many yards from the prison gate, on his way to the hospital, death came, and his sufferings were over.

FAREWELL TO CANADA.

Prince Arthur Sailed From Montreal on Thursday Morning.

A Montreal despatch says: At daybreak on Thursday morning the Allan Royal Mail steamer Virginian, flying the Royal Standard, sailed from this port with Prince Arthur of Connaught, who has completed a visit of over six weeks in Canada, during which he has travelled seven thousand miles and visited every province of the Dominion. The last day of the Prince's stay in Canada was occupied with a round of visits. During the early part of the day he visited a number of the local institutions, including the Bank of Montreal. Later he was entertained at Luncheon at the Hunt Club by Sir Montagu Allan, and in the afternoon he formally opened the Horse Show in the presence of a large gathering of spectators. After dining at Sir Montagu Allan's, he paid another visit to the Horse Show in the evening and later was escorted to the Virginian. The Prince expressed the utmost gratification at his reception, and his thanks to the Canadian people for the warm welcome he had met in every portion of the Dominion.

TOOK VESSEL FROM UNDER FORTS.

The German Ambassador's Prompt Reply to Turkey.

A despatch from Constantinople says: The arbitrary detention of a German sailing ship, the Odesseus, by the Turkish authorities recently threatened friction between Turkey and another European power, but the energetic action of the German Ambassador quickly solved the difficulty. The Odysseus was discharging her cargo at Chibuklu when she was boarded by the authorities and removed to Kavak, where she was anchored beneath the batteries, the Turks falsely claiming that the vessel had explosives on board. The Ambassador protested urgently, but unavailingly, whereupon he took a few sailors from the German guardship here, the Loreley, boarded the Odysseus, hoisted the diplomatic flag, and took the ship from under the guns of Kavak to her dock at Chibuklu, where a watch was kept over her while she completed the discharge of her cargo. On returning to the Embassy the Ambassador found a State Council awaiting him with apologies and explanations.

LORD STRATHCONA'S GIFT.

A Montreal despatch says: Lord Strathcona, it is announced, has given the sum of $25,000 to the new Alexandra Hospital for contagious diseases.

TURKISH SULTAN DYING.

It Is Very Doubtful If He Will Live Many Months.

A despatch from Constantinople to the Manchester, England, Guardian affirms in explicit terms that, despite official denials, the gravest apprehensions are felt as to the health of the Sultan. The correspondent says that the Sultan almost every day has fits of fever, during which his temperature rises to over 102 degrees. When the attacks, which are very short, are over, he is completely prostrated, his temperature suddenly falling below 97. He passes nearly the whole of every day in his harem, and his advisers scarcely dare speak to him about affairs of State. He pays no attention to the remonstrances of his physician, and refuses to take the remedies that are prescribed for him. Ibrahim Pasha, the Sultan's chief adviser, dare not reveal to his Majesty the true state of his health. It is doubtful whether he will live more than five or six months.

CONTRADICT PROF. MAVOR.

Saskatchewan Legislature Discuss His Report.

A despatch from Regina says: Prof. Mavor's famous report on the resources of the west was discussed in the Legislature on Friday, and a resolution passed declaring it to be misleading and damaging, and endorsing the condemnation it had previously received from western official sources. The discussion developed the fact that while Prof. Mavor had argued Canada could produce only 165,000,000 bushels of wheat, there are in Saskatchewan alone 73,000,000 acres of excellent land, which on the average of the last eight years could produce a billion bushels. If only a quarter is cultivated enough can be grown to feed Great Britain and supply home consumption. It was stated that Prof. Mavor had not endeavored to gather information, and did not know what he was talking about.

SUICIDE'S BODY FOUND.

Saskatchewan Man Disappeared From Home Last Fall.

A despatch from Strassburg, Sask., says: On Monday, while W. Schroeder was hunting for his cattle, he came across a man's body on a bluff about three miles south of the town. Upon investigation he found it to be that of Adolph Schmidt, who disappeared from his home in October last. Mr. Schroeder reported the matter to Coroner Hotham and an inquest was held on Tuesday. After hearing the evidence the jury brought in the verdict that deceased came to his death by hanging himself while temporarily insane.

What may prove to be another murder occurred on the Ridge Road, in the steel plant district, on Saturday night, H. W. Robinson was shot and fatally wounded by an unknown foreigner who escaped.

CASH AID TO RAILWAYS.

Premier Whitney made an announcement of the Government's policy with reference to grants to railways. It had been decided, he said, to grant $3,000 per mile, for 25 miles, or $75,000 in all to the Bruce Mines & Algoma Railway, commencing thirteen miles north of Bruce Mines. This was done to enable the opening up of the copper mines in the Bruce Mines district. A grant of $5,000 a mile was to be made to the Canada Central Railway Company, or any company which would do the work, for a railway from Little Current to a point thirteen miles from Sudbury, where it will connect with a line already laid, a distance of fifty-three miles. At $5,000 per mile the latter means a grant of $265,000, and the two grants would therefore total $340,000.

CUT OUT BOY'S TONGUE.

He Was Dared to Touch One of the Frost Pipes.

A despatch from Millville, New Jersey, says: Albert Travis, while playing at the Millville ice plant on Thursday, was dared by a boy companion to touch one of the frost pipes with his tongue. "I never take a dare," he said, and touched the white pipe with his tongue. In a moment he was writhing in pain. His companions laughed, thinking he was playing a joke. One of the engineers, hearing the cry, found the boy on his knees almost unconscious. Young Travis' tongue was terribly swollen and frozen fast to the pipe. All efforts to release him were futile and his father was summoned. Learning there was only one way to save his son, he spoke to the engineer, and turned away while the man opened a sharp blade of his pocket knife and cut off the lad's tongue. Before Dr. Chas. B. Neal could arrive the boy had almost bled to death. It is now thought his dare will cost his life.

SHOCKS IN BRITISH ISLES.

Earthquakes Reported, but No Great Damage is Done.

A despatch from London says: At the time of the 'Frisco disaster certain seismographists expressed the opinion that the earthquake would, in due course, make its appearance on this side and that Edinburgh, which stands in the danger zone, practically being built upon extinct volcanoes, would be visited. The earthquake has been here. From Devon, Cornwall, from the Channel Islands, and from some parts of Scotland, but not from Edinburgh, have come reports of how the earth had been quaking on different days in the past week, but the earthquake has dealt gently with this country, and, beyond a slight rattling of crockery and glassware, and as it is reported, the displacing of some balls on the putting green of the golf courses, the earthquake passed off, leaving Great Britain as it was and where it was.

GREAT ZULU RISING.

Sanguinary Fighting is Expected Immediately.

A Durban despatch says: Serious news was received from the commander of the colonial forces on Friday morning. A Zulu impi (war expedition) several thousand strong is marching to join the rebels under Chief Bambaata. The colonial troops are hurrying forward to intercept the Zulus and prevent their junction with the rebel forces. Sanguinary fighting is expected immediately.

The Government has no knowledge of the reported annihilation of a detachment of mounted police by Zulus near Helpmakaar, and believes the report to be groundless.

Chief Kula, who is suspected of disaffection and was recently arrested, was placed in jail at Pietermaritzburg on Friday. It is presumed that it was the arrest of this chief which led to the rising of his followers. Before a battle they kill a girl and concoct "medicine" from her body with which they anoint the warriors.

The car next to the horses also had an end burned out, but it was saved by the trainmen.

BLOODLESS GIRLS.

Can Obtain New Health Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Anaemia means bloodlessness. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new, rich, red blood and thus cure anaemia. When the blood is poor the nerves are starved and irritable. Then comes hysteria, neuralgia, sleeplessness and other nerve disorders. Headaches, backaches and sideaches wear out and depress the poor pale victim. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills soon bring ruddy health and lively vigor. They soothe the jangled nerves and give new strength to every organ. Miss Winnie Allen, Montreal, says: "I was so weak and run down that my friends thought I was going into consumption. I was as pale as a corpse, had no appetite and did not sleep well. The least exertion tired me out, and if I walked a few blocks I would be almost breathless. My sister advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after using them for a few weeks I am again enjoying good health, and have good color. I think every weak girl should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure any case of bloodlessness just as surely as they cured Miss Allen. The pale anaemic needs only one thing—new blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood with every dose. That is why they cure all common diseases like anaemia, indigestion, neuralgia, palpitation of the heart, headaches and backaches, St. Vitus dance, partial paralysis and the secret troubles that make the lives of thousands of women miserable. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A BATTLE OF BIRD AND BEAST.

Big Black Dog-Mink and Hawk in a Death Struggle.

Silent as an owl in the black of night, the hawk glided low on whist wings across the little open space cleared by the fallen maple, paused an almost imperceptible instant above the unlistening squirrel, and then, wings closed, dropped upon him with unerring talons. But for some strange reason the harrier seemed powerless to bear away his kill; while his angry, frightened screams drowned out the dying squeak of the squirrel, though of this, because of the blur of his whipping wings, I could not be sure. In a moment he had toppled forward, and then, like a huge, broken-winged partridge, he flopped about among the tangled coils of roots, uttering meanwhile shrill screech on screech that seemed fairly to lascerate his throat. In but little more time than it takes to tell it a dozen kingbirds had gathered, and were buzzing round the struggling harrier like gadflies round a horse, adding their spiteful cries to his harsh din; now a crow appeared out of nowhere, and searched deep in his throat for his hoarsest cry; blue jays flashed across the clearing and back again in a frenzy of clamorous excitement; a swarm of chattering blackbirds rushed into the tree above me till its branches sagged and creaked like those of a laboring tree overweighted with fruit—all in an instant bedlam was let loose round that old wind-wrecked maple.

Under cover of the uproar I crept nearer and saw that a big black dog-mink, his bulldog jaws clamped on the upper leg of the harrier, was grimly fighting to pull him down from behind, while the harrier, with the speed of terror and hate, sought desperately to reach his assailant with his beak. It looked as if the mink must win, for the harrier was perceptibly weakening in his vain counter-attack; but a sudden lift with the harrier's long wings half tore the mink from his hold and swung him for one brief moment within distance of that rending beak. Rip; a big red gash gaped open on the mink's writhing flank, and he let go and tumbled back among the roots. Up leaped the hawk, his pearly-white breast streaked and blotched with blood from his wounded leg. Like the magic the cries of all but the kingbirds were hushed, while, still screaming with rage and fear, the hawk rose heavily skyward and marked his course athwart the wind for the shelter of the woods.

A DANGER TO CHILDHOOD.

No mother would give her little one poison if she knew it, and yet all the so-called soothing syrups and many of the liquid medicines given children contain poisonous opiates, and an overdose will kill. When a mother uses Baby's Own Tablets she has the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or narcotic that it cannot possibly do harm. This assurance is worth much to the mother who cares for the safety of her little ones. Mrs. Chas. McLaughlin, DeBert Station, N.S., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for colic stomach troubles and other ailments of childhood and find them so valuable that I would not be without them in the house." It is stated that the residence of Thomas McInerney, situated midway between Ennis and Limerick, was attacked by parties unknown and several shots fired through the doors and windows. Mr. Justice Johnson, at the opening of the Cork Assizes, commented on the fact that, while the general condition of the county of Cork was favorable, there was a considerable increase in the number of persons under special police protection. He characterized as disgraceful the conduct of the tumultuous gathering which, within a few miles of Cork city, ostentatiously assailed an officer of the court while engaged in serving the King's writ, and dared him to come on.

The Marquis of Dufferin, who was 40 the other day, has given few signs as yet of inheriting his father's brilliant abilities, although he made a good start in the Diplomatic Service. He entered that service in 1891, and served at Constantinople, Paris and Stockholm. He is now an assistant clerk in the Foreign Office. Until a few years ago Lord Dufferin had little prospect of succeding to the title, as he was the second son. His elder brother, however, was killed at Ladysmith during the war.

The report of Mr. Drury, Local Government Board auditor, on the audit of the accounts of the Dublin Corporation for the year ended 31st of March last reveals an extraordinary state of affairs. In accordance with a decision of the King's Bench Division, the auditor disallowed the sums paid to the Lord Mayor during the year ended March, 1895, for his own and his secretary's salary.

A TERRIBLE STORY.

How the Natives of East Africa Are Civilized.

The Hamburg correspondent of The London Daily Mail sends this story to his paper of the triumph of civilization in German East Africa:—

A stirring account is to hand of the valuable assistance which an English elephant hunter, Mr. Southerland, gave the German troops in their fights in East Africa.

A certain station was in great danger, when the defenders determined to attack the oncoming Wagonis. The little exepedition only consisted of two German officers, Mr. Southerland and thirty-two native warriors. The next morning the enemy, 700 to 800 strong, were encountered.

The enemy badly armed, but with fanatical courage, attacked undaunted. Captain Rishter felled their leader with a well-aimed bullet, and the natives on the German side with their fire created great havoc, but still the savages swept forward.

The situation was most critical, when the Englishman, a splendid shot, began to use his heavy No. 12 elephant gun, with expansion bullets. Every shot, aimed at the head, told with fearful effect. The enemy retired, but only to attack again and again. The Englishman, however, stayed at his post until the ground was covered with his victims. The rest of the savages then fled, panic-stricken.

A number of the rifles had fallen into the hands of the rebels, but by a ruse of Mr. Southerland's they were destroyed Forty highly-explosive cartridges, too heavily loaded for the rifles, were placed so that they fell into the rebel's hands. When used they exploded, and several rifles were found later bearing traces of the violent end of those who used them.

AFTER 18 YEARS OF SUFFERING

AN ONTARIO FARMER FINDS A CURE AT LAST IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

The Direct Cause of His Trouble Was a Strain in the Back Which Affected His Kidneys—Dodd's Kidney Pills Cured Him.

Ardoch, Ont., May 14.—(Special).—Mr. Ami Jeanneret, of this place, gives a very interesting account of his experience with Dodd's Kidney Pills. He says:—

"I hurt my back and strained my kidneys and for 18 years I suffered on and off intense agony. I was subject to attacks of Rheumatism and Lumbago. My joints were stiff, my muscles cramped. I lost my appetite, my flesh began to fall away, my nerves were shaken, I could not rest or sleep at night and I was sinking into a deplorable condition when I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used six boxes and I am now as strong and healthy as ever I was. I am certain I owe my cure wholly to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

HOW IT SPREADS

The first package of Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid (the infallible Pile cure) that was put out went to a small town in Nebraska.

It cured a case of Piles that was considered hopeless.

The news spread, and although this was only two years ago, the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it for general use. Now it is being sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles. There is a month's treatment in each box.

Sold for $1.00, with absolute guarantee.

It is for sale by druggists, or by The Wilson-Fyle Co., Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont. 4

GIRL SEES VISION ON DEATHBED.

She Describes the Death of Her Missing Father.

An unusually intresting instance of "second sight" is reported from Accrington, Lancashire, England. A young woman on her deathbed, not only announced her father's death, but described the spot where his body lay, the fact of his death not being known to anybody at the time. The man in question was Isaac Marsden, fifty-three years old, who lived in Stevenson Street, Accrington. His daughter, 25 years old, had been wasting away with consumption for months.

About a week ago Mr. Marsden disappeared from home under mysterious circumstances—that is, no reason was known for his going away, and nothing could be learned of his whereabouts. Miss Marsden was deeply distressed by this event. On Thursday she told those who were at her bedside that she had seen her father's form.

"You will find his body in the water at Aspen Bridge, Oswaldtwistle," she said.

About an hour later Miss Marsden died. Mr. Marsden's body was found in the canal at the spot named by his daughter.

WIDOW BURNING IN INDIA. ....

The Relatives Aid Suicide of Hindu Woman.

The stringent efforts of the Indian authorities have not succeeded in stamping out suttee or widow burning.

According to Hindu custom a widow must immolate herself upon her late husband's funeral pyre and meet death by fire. Two cases of suttee have been brought to light in India within a month. A young Hindu widow at Cawnpore stole away from her home, saturated her clothes with kerosene and set fire to them in the heart of the civil station. She was found with her jaws bound as if for burial and at the point of death.

At the Punjab Court five men and a woman appealed against the judgment of the Sessions judge at Delhi who had sentenced them to ten years' imprisonment for taking part in the immolation of a widow aged twenty.

The suttee was performed in the presence of a great crowd on the banks of the Jumna. Two village chiefs endeavored to dissuade the woman from her purpose, but she calmly mounted the funeral pyre, her relatives piling fuel around it. Then, at her request, they gave her a lighted brand and she set the pile afire. Straw was strewn about the pyre and in due course the body of the widow was consumed. The ceremony lasted six hours.

The four relatives and the headmen were arrested and admitted the main facts.

INSIDE YOUR BONES.

People usually imagine that their bones are of solid mineral construction, without any feeling in them. As a matter of fact, there are blood vessels and nerves inside the bones just as there are outside. During amputation of a limb much more pain is felt when the bone is attacked than when the flesh is being cut through. Through the marrow which is inside the bones run the nerves and blood-vessels, entering the bones from the flesh without by little holes. Nature adapts the bony structure of various animals to their habits in a very interesting manner. Sluggish creatures, like the sloth, have solid bones, whereas the bones of the deer and the antelope are comparatively light, so that they may run fast, and the leg bones of the ostrich are hollow. You will find in the bones of any skeleton the application of mechanical principles which have only become known to man through the processes of laborious and long-considered invention.

THE EMPIRE

Cream Separator

A WINNER.

Now that I have taken the agency of the Empire Cream Separator I wish to advise my numerous friends that I sell one of the best Cream Separators ever put on the market, not only by its appearance but by its close skimming.

The following is a proof that what I say is right:—

D'Israel, Que., Nov. 3, 1905.

The following is the result of a test made in my presence while acting as judge for all concerned:

Butter Fat left in Skim Milk.

EMPIRE - - - .06 per cent.
Delaval - - - .15 per cent.

(Signed) P. R. PLENTE. Judge,
Cheese-maker at D'Israeli.

It will readily be seen by the above letter that signed by Mr Plante, that the Delaval machine left 2½ times asmuch butter fat in the skim milk as did the EMPIRE and that therefore the Delaval wastes 2½ times as much butter fat as the EMPIRE.

The result of the test is plain to any reasonable observer. Mr. Plante is a well and favorably known resident of D'Israeli and farmers in that territory place every confidence in the result of the test made by him. Other points of difference between the two machines such as simplicity, ease of operation, durability and ease in cleaning were all in favor of the EMPIRE. It might also be stated that the bowl of each machine was washed in the skim milk and a composite test made so that there was no possible chance for any further loss than that indicated in the above letter.

PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD.

The Watts Case to be Referred to Synodical Commission.

Ottawa, May 11.—Sitting behind closed doors at the Presbyterian Synod of Montreal and Ottawa district, which concluded its session here last night, heard the appeal of Dr. Watts of Moose Creek against the action of Glengarry Presbytery in refusing to restore him in full membership in Knox church, Moose Creek, except after three months probation. Without expressing any opinion the synod, after hearing both sides, decided to refer the whole question to a synodical commission, which will meet in Moose Creek on May 17th, The commission will have the powers of synod, and was instructed to deal with the question before the meeting of the General Assembly so that if another appeal be made it will not have to stand over for another year,

Dr. Watts is a medical practitioner at Moose Creek, the whole matter arises out of a disarrangement he had with his pastor, the Rev. L. Beaton about a year ago. Dr. Watts charged the minister with professional malpractice, such as neglect to visit the sisk, declaring he received telegrams from heaven, neglect to hold family prayers in Dr. Watt's house since 1900, etc. The Rev. Mr. Beaton made counter charges of false accusation profanity, etc., against Dr. Watts. In the spring of last year the local session dealt with the case and the result was Dr. Watts was excommunicated. He appealed, and the Presbytery of Glengarry, after it had been assured the good fellowship had been restored between the disputants, directed Dr. Watts restoration to membership. The Roxborough session would only agree to this after a three months' probation. Dr. Watts protest against the presbytery, which upheld the action of the session. The appeal was thus carried to the synod and dealt with as stated above.

At the afternoon session yesterday, the Rev. Dr. Kellock presented the report of the augmentation committee. During the past year he reported twenty-three congregations had become self sustaining, four in Montreal and Ottawa synod. The contributation to the augmentation fund were: Quebec Presbytery $900, Montreal $3 041; Brockville. $875 Renfrew, $1,428; Ottawa, $1,152; Glengarry, $522. The total contributions from the synod was $7,759.55, an increase of $1,588 over the preceeding year. The Quebec Presbytery now has seven augmented congregations, Montreal eight, Glengarry, three, Ottawa six, Lanark and Renfrew seven and Brockville five The estimates for the ensuing year was $45,000. A strong appeal for a better support of this branch of the church work was made.

The report of the obituary committee recorded five deaths of Presbyterian clergy in the synod during the year—the Rev. Messrs. James Wilson, Lanark; Colin McKercher, Harrington; P. H. Hutchinson, Huntington; and William Forlong, Montreal.

The Rev. Dr. Campbell, Montreal, read the report on French evangelization work. There are now thirty six mission fields, sixteen in Montreal Presbytery, thirteen in Quebec, and seven in Ottawa, The whole work is satisfactory advance over last year. The synod expressed itself as deeply gratified with the work accomplished during the year. and pledged its united support.

The Rev. N. H. McGillivary, Cornwall presented the report on the young people societies. A general increase both in funds and membership throughout the synod was reported. The total membership was now 4.566, an increase over last year of 229. The contributions from all sources were $8,865, an increase of $2.498, over last year,

Greetings were read from the Dominion Alliance, in which the synod was asked to protest against the local option law which required a three-fifths vote of the ratepayers to carry. The synod, however would not discuss the question at all.

The disposition of a few minor matters of busines concluded the session, and the synod adjourned to meet at Brockville next year.

ENSNARING VICTIMS.

Steps Should be Taken at once to Prevent Further Trouble.

Here in Chesterville as in other large cities and towns, dyspepsia or stomach troubles are ensnaring victims in a most insiduous way.

Nearly every mother's son of us and daughter, too, expects the stomach to accustom itself to all manner of ill-treatment, but the time comes when we cannot abuse it with immunity. How much better it would be to take steps at once to strengthen the stomach and prevent further trouble.

Use Mi-o-na now and soothe the irritated walls of the stomach, and strengthen the gastric fallicies so that they will pour out their daily supply of digestive materials with regularity. Then the headaches, sleeplessness, specks before the eyes, poor appetite, tired feelings and nervousness will disappear, and you can eat what you want at any time you like.

Mi-o-na is a combination of remedies, some of which are but little known in this country, and is a positive guaranteed cure for all diseases of the stomach excepting cancer.

Just one little tablet out of a 50c. box before meals, for a few days, and you will soon regain perfect health and strength, and have no fear of indigestion or stomach troubles.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

Hon Mr. Reamue will go to detroit in a day or two to undergo a minor surgical operation, but he is othewise perfectly well.

Two young children named Creamer wandered away from home at Peacock, N.B., were lost in the woods and are given up as dead.
