Modern Equipment
Modern Methods

Gone are the crude, harsh methods of conducting funerals used in the past. Modern methods and equipment have taken away much of the coldness. The funeral is conducted by us in such a way that the last memory is always a beautiful one. Those whom we serve are invariably impressed with with the calm, quiet dignity of the funerals–a fitting way to pay a last respect to a lovedone.

HENRY'S
Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

No school in Eastern Ontario offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. It leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by 580 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to HENRY'S.

It is not surprising then that business men, in advertising for stenographers, specially say, "Graduates of Henry's Shorthand School preferred."

Write for particulars about our course.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Mrs. Frank Carruthers, who died March 10th, 1926.
We think of you, dear Nelda,
And our hearts are sad with pain;
Dreary earth would be heaven
Could we have you back again.

Just two years ago you left us,
How we miss your smiling face,
As you left us to remember
No one on earth could take your place.
Mother and Father.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Mrs. Frank Carruthers (nee Nelda Presley) who departed this life March 10, 1926.
Today recalls sads memories
Of the loved one gone to rest,
And those who think of her today
Are those who loved her best.
Sister Mabel.

Chesterville Juniors Defeated By Roamers

Friday evening hockey fans of Chesterville had a chance to compare the brand of hockey put up by the city juniors with that of our boys, and although the score was somewhat one-sided in favor of the Ottawa boys they had very little on Chesterville when the latter got down to business. Roamers three to one in the opening session, four to none in tne second and in the final when Chesterville came strong they doubled the count for the period on the visitors. The outstanding difference was not a matter of speed and shooting but an apparent lack of coaching and a knowledge of how to take advantage of every break of the game. Jack McAvoy netted the first goal in the opening period for Chesterville. The second added nothing, but in the final Eddie Gillissie, "Swede" Olsen, Bill Tate and Arnold Lynch rammed the puck home and threw a scare into the Roamers. Matt Flynn played a good game on defence and is a bright prospect for senior company after another year or so of experience. Ronnie Lynch and Cecil Gillissie both did effective work when in the line-up, while Sam Campderros in goal stopped them high, low and sidewise.

Presentation At Beckstead

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 29th, about forty neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Barclay gathered at their home to bid farewell to them before leaving for their new home at Maple Ridge.

Music and games were indulged in until about eleven-thirty when Mr. and Mrs. Barclay were called to the floor where the following address was read by Miss Alice Beckstead and the presentation of a well-filled purse made by Mrs. Fred Beckstead:

Chesterville, Feb. 29, 1928.

Mr .and Mrs. Bernice E. Barclay,—

We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here to-night on the eve of your departure from our midst, not to say farewell as we all expect to see you often, but to spend one social evening with you .

We shall miss you ,the community will miss you as well, and the church where you, Evelyn, have proved an efficient and willing worker.

As you go to your new home at "The Ridge" we hope and pray that you may enjoy many years of good health, prosperity and the richest of Divine Blessings.

Please accept this gift, not for its mere value, but as a token of the esteem in which you are held.

Signed on behalf of those present.

Mrs. Barclay thanked all those present and invited everyone to visit them in their new home. All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," after which refreshments were served and the evening brought to a close.

THE BOYS FROM "THE STICKS" SHOW 'EM

(The Citizen)

Gunner Juniors are the only Ottawa team which will get out of the District in the hockey playdowns. Here's hoping that that little group of fighters get somewhere. They are all we have left.

The "City Fellows" are having a hard time in athletics. First, Agnew and Tate, of Winchester and Chesterville ,take them for a ride in track and field events. Then Renfrew came from nowhere and smote the Metropolitan hip and thigh, to best them for the District baseball title. And now come Arnprior to crush the hopes of Ottawa amateur hockeyists. They are not so bad—for country boys. The titles in all major sports in the District except rugby, are now gone to the Valley to spend the summer.

SAW-MILL BURNED AT WINCHESTER SPRINGS

At 2.30 o'clock Sunday afternoon a saw-mill at Winchester Springs, owned by William McDonald, was the scene of a $1,000 blaze when hot ashes which had been removed from a boiler furnace set fire to slabs of wood in the yards of the mill.

The flames spread rapidly to piles in the yards and were only checked after a strenuous fight on the part of a volunteer fire brigade.

BRINSTON HOCKEYISTS HERE TO-MORROW NIGHT

Local hockey enthusiasts will have a chance to-morrow evening of comparing the respective merits of the hockey played in the St. Lawrence league of which Brinston are the champions, and that of the work of the champions of the Rideau circuit. Back here it has always been claimed that the hockey at the front was not quite up to the calibre of that which attracts the fans hereabouts. Now we shall see for ourselves. If this game don't produce some pretty fast stuff we miss our guess.

THE BAND AT HOCKEY GAMES MUCH APPRECIATED

During the hockey games of the season about closing Chesterville band has come in for many compliments and the hockey club for much praise in having the band at every game for the entertainment of its patrons. It may not be known to many who have attended the games here, but Chesterville is the only club in the district having the enterprise to provide a band concert with every game. Friday night the Ottawa boys and their supporters could not get over the fact that a band was present for a junior game . The occasion was also the first time the city boys had had a rink to themselves for a game, all other occasions they were in the curtain raiser for more important games of their seniors.

Hummel---Hanna

A very happy event took place at the manse, Finch, on Saturday, Feb. 25th, when Miss Loressa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hanna of Finch, and Mr. Kenneth Hummel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hermon Hummel of Chesterville, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. A. D. McIntyre officiated.

The bride was gowned in a peach georgette dress trimmed with radium lace and rhinestones.

Immediately after the ceremony they drove to the home of the bride's parents where a dainty lunch was served to a few friends of the bride and groom .

Mr .and Mrs. Hummel left on the 5.45 train for Montreal and eastern points amid showers of rice and confetti showing the esteem in which the young couple are held.

The bride travelled in a Raphael blue crepe gown trimmed with metallic black satin, black satin picture hat, shoes and stockings to match.

The popularity of the young couple was manifested in a large number of costly gifts including silver ware, cut glas and cheques . While in Montreal the young couple were tenedered a party at the home of the groom's uncle. The bride is one of Finch's most popular young ladies. Heartiest congratulations of the community are extended to them for a long and happy wedded life.

Russell Leaves Ice When Finch Leading

The two old valley rivals, Russell and Finch, clashed in Finch Tuesday night when Finch trimmed Russell by 4-3. Rombough started the ball rolling after fourteen minutes of play, but Preston evened things up in 15 seconds later when he made a beautiful play. The second period was the same brand, when Rombough again tallied and Fader duplicated, sending Russell two up. The third period became very to-end rush and placed the rubber behind Carter for the second counter. W. Ouderkirk took a pass from Preston and evened things up again after a few minutes play.

Villeneuve slashed at Dickie and Referee Robinson handed him the balance of the game when he refused his penalty. Russell became angry and all left the ice. The referee faced the puck and Preston scored, Finch winning, four goals to three. Starring for the visitors were Seguin, Rombough and Villeneuve. For Finch Preston, Dickie, Brownlee all worked well, while McDonald played his usual game in the nets .

Line-up:

Russell—Goal, W. Carter; defence, Seguin, H. McArthur; centre, Rombough; wings, Villeneuve, D. Kinchen; subs, C. Fader.

Finch—Goal, C. McDonald; defence, W. Brownlee, Dickie; centre, G. McLean; wings, B. McIntosh, H .Gove; subs, Preston, W. Ouderkirk, H. Ouderkirk.

He was a generous supporter of all missionary work and was greatly respected in that community where he had spent all his life. His wife, who was Miss Gertrude Dixon of Pendleton, survives with one daughter, Fern. Besides these he leaves an aged mother, and one sister, Mrs. Mildred Franklin of Riceville, also one brother, Rob, a High school teacher in Hamilton.

A BLIZZARD STRIKES TOWN

Sunday afternoon this place and district were treated to an old-fashioned blizzard for a few hours with snow so thick whirled in a fierce gale that objects but a few yards distant were blotted out. With the wind changing to the north the snow ceased and the mercury began to fall until Monday morning when one of the coldest mornings of the year was experienced.

Up around Toronto the catching of the first suckers in the Humber is said to presage an early spring. We don't put much faith in that as a few "suckers" have been landed here all through the season with a select line of "mining" bait.

Last season the ice in the Nation was moving freely on the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth of March. This year it is pretty heavy and no signs yet of a break up.

Former Morewood Pastor Appreciated at Seeleys Bay

(Kingston Whig, Feb. 28)

At the annual meeting of the Seeley's Bay pastoral charge, held at Lyndhurst, recently, the usual reports were received from the various departments of the three co-operating churches within the pastoral charge. It was noted with much gratfication that marked progress had been made during the year in most of the departments. Reports of the church membership rolls showed sixty-two new members received. The spiritual life of the congregations has been much stimulated by the various activities, including evangelism, during the year.

The total receipts for the nine months covered by the report, April 1 to Dec .31, 1927, approximated $4,500, and the balances maintained in the various treasuries indicate clearly the progressive condition of the pastoral charge. Deep appreciation was expressed by resolution for the splendid work done by the various ladies' organizations. Besides the valuable contributions to the spiritual and social life of the congregations, the sum of $680.00 was raised.

A resolution moved by G. N. Bracken, inviting Rev. Mr. Cooke to remain as minister of the pastoral charge was unanimously adopted. The resolution expressed to Mr. Cooke the deep appreciation of the charge for his faithful and untiring efforts to advance the Kingdom of God and he was assured of most loyal support in the future.—Rec. Steward.

Thrifty Freda.

Freda, aged five, came marching home from Sunday school, carrying a small paper bag half full of chocolates, which she flaunted in the startled eyes of the family.

"Freda!" exclaimed her mother, on beholding the chocolates, "wherever did you get those?" She had given her daughter a dime for collection and suspected the worst had occurred.

Freda looked up in great surprise.

"I bought them with the dime you gave me," she said. "The minister met me at the door and got me in for anything."

The happy merchant

Never before in the history of the world has it been possible for a merchant in good credit to do so much business with so little capital locked up in stock.

One important reason for the present prosperity is, that instead of having to buy a big stock at the beginning of each season, he is now able to buy small stocks and replenish them promptly by Long Distance.

Keep your customers for miles around coming to you for whatever they need. Invent ways of inducing them to visit your store, or to order from you by Long Distance and — they tell us —you will not be seriously bothered by competition.

Long Distance is making happy merchants in some towns. Don't overlook its great possibilities.

Suitability of Red Clover

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Few seem to realize that a large percentage of the losses due to winter-killing of red clover seedings can be and to a certain extent are being controlled by the selection of seed, the resulting crop of which is sufficiently hardy to withstand the climatic conditions in a given region .

Climatic conditions cannot be changed so we must choose strains which are best suited to our conditions. Data from experiments carried on at the Dominion Experimental Farm at Nappan, N.S., show that there is a great difference in the winter hardiness of crops grown from seed produced under widely varying climatic conditions. Seed has been sown which was grown in France, Italy, Sicily, Sweden and Canada and of these only that of Swedish and Canadian origin was suitable for our conditions. In 1923, eleven lots of Swedish and Canadian origin produced an average yield of 3 tons and 18 pounds of cured hay per acre, while from French and Italian lots the yield was only 1 ton and 1823 pounds per acre. In 1927 the difference was even more marked with nine Swedish and Canadian lots yielding an average of 3 tons and 258 pounds of cured hay per acre and five lots from Italy and Sicily averaging only 1962 pounds per acre. During the winter of 1922-23 the ground was well covered with snow and there was very little freezing and thawing which will account for the fairly good showing of the less hardy lots. The winter of 1926-27 was much less favorable and the less hardy lots were unable to withstand the winter .

It should not be inferred that all imported red clover seed is non-hardy but from results at this Farm practically all of the Italian and a very large percentage of the French seed would be condemned because of lack of hardiness in the resulting crop. Seed from Swedish sources, other parts of Canada and Northern United States seems to produce a crop sufficiently hardy for normal years in the Maritime Provinces. Clean, plump local seed, however, offers the best chance of securing a perfect stand.

Alexander J. McEwen Passes At Maxville

The man who turned an eye-sore adjoining the station grounds in Chesterville into the site of three beautiful homes, passed away in Maxville, Wednesday morning of last week in the person of Alexander J. McEwen, at his late residence there. He was in his 64th year. The late Mr. McEwen had been ill for the past two months.

He was born in Maxville 63 years ago, the son of the late John and Kathleen McEwen, pioneer settlers of the Maxville district, and had resided there all his life. As a lumberman the late Mr. McEwen operated extensively throughout the Maxville district and was widely known in lumbering circles in the Lower Ottawa Valley.

He was past master of Maxville lodge, A.F.&A.M., a member of L.O.L. No .1063, and a member of the Sons of Scotland, Maxville lodge. As a prominent Conservative he was several times mentioned for parliamentary honors in the provincial and federal houses. As reeve he represented Maxville in the counties' council of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry for a number of years and was always prominent in political circles.

In religion he was a Presbyterian, being a strong adherent of St .Andrew's church in Maxville.

The late Mr. McEwen will be greatly missed by a large following of friends by whom he was held in high respect. He was always admired for his great generosity and sterling qualities.

Interment took place Friday afternoon in St. Andrew's cemetery, Maxville .

ELECTRICAL FARMS

A forward-looking movement reported from Winnipeg is that to establish in the province of Manitoba a dozen electrical test farms. The plan is sponsored by representatives of power, agricultural and manufacturing interests, and will probably be aided by a general committee headed by D .L. McLean, deputy minister of public works.

The idea is to foster, through practical demonstrations, the extension of electricity to the farms of the province, in order that agriculture may share the benefits which industry and urban life have received from this potent force for economic and social improvement.

Farm electrification has already made considerable headway in the United States, through the cooperation of interest similar to those behind the Manitoba movement. That it will spread rapidly in all sections where conditions are in any way favorable for its adoption can not be doubted.

No Need to Worry.

Propose Tariff Increase Canadian Milk and Cream

"The United states tariff increase of 50 per cent., or perhaps less, against Canadian milk and cream will likely go into effect," said P. C .Armstrong of Toronto, just back from Washington, where he represented the National Dairy Council of Canada at the United States Tariff Commission hearing, regarding dairy products. "At least ,that seems to be the general impression at Washington," he added—"that the increase would be added as a sop to American agricultural interests."

Mr. Armstrong stated that the methods used by the investigators of the commission in making comparative cost studies were not correct as regards Canada, and he appeared somewhat resentful of remarks made by some of the speakers at the hearing to the effect that the standard of living among Canadian farmers was not up to that of the United States farmer.

The hearing in question was that held in Washington the latter part of February to consider an application of a 50 per cent. increase in duty on Canadian milk and cream . Under the law the Tariff Commission was authorized to investigate production costs in exporting countries, and in the event of these being lower than United States production costs ,the President is authorized to levy an increase in duty up to 50 per cent. of the existing scale. The investigation was conducted in regard to the costs of producing milk and cream in Canada, and a report was prepared showing these to be appreciably lower than in the United States.

Trinity College School At Port Hope Burned

Spreading from the skating rink, fire Saturday afternoon completely destroyed Trinity College School. The damage, well covered by insurance, is placed at $750,000. It was the worst conflagration Port Hope has experienced since the previous Trinity College was destroyed by fire 33 years ago.

The fire started at 2.30 Saturday afternoon and spread with alarming rapidity. By 6 o'clock at night the skating rink, gymnasium and the college itself were a mass of seething flames.

The school is situated on a hill to the northeast of the town, and when the fire alarm was sounded and it became known that the finest building in Port Hope was in serious danger every available man in town made his way to lend assistance . The fire brigade were quickly on the scene but it was found the water pressure was inadequate. The fire was deep rooted in the frame skating rink, and before any measures to confine it to this building could be taken the adjoining building—the g y m n a s i u m — also caught fire and inside of half an hour was a total wreck.

A strong northwest wind fanned the flames and they spread to the chapel at the northeast of the building, and to the house of the headmaster, Dr. Orchard. The efforts of the firemen were then directed to saving the headmaster's house, and in this they were successful, but not before furniture and valuables had been removed .

By this time the chapel was a mass of seething flames, which darted to a height of 100 feet fanned by the breeze. In a very short time the east part of the school proper also caught fire on the roof and it ate its way at an alarming pace through all the floors of the building.

Stopping Chicken Stealing

There does not appear to be the slightest doubt but that the vigorous advocacy some time ago of the payment of wages by cheque fairly stopped payroll robberies from being profitable ventures and so the practice is dead.

The games of brains versus brains appears to be the most economical and decisive card to play in the everlasting war between crime and community interests, and we must strenuously continue to make the law, the banking system and the police guard so quietly effective that the present agitation for more and more expense in patroling roads and generally uprooting all the normal practices of commercial and farming life will become as unnecessary as it is humiliating to Canadian honor. The more the weapons of cheats and thieves increase in skill and volume so the parries and guards of the detective departments gain in rapidity and strength, so that even as things are now their "lightest" touches are very serious to young beginners, suspects or even compaions of suspects.

Our police possess courage, good manners and intensive training in all the arts and sciences of criminology and this, coupled with their own professional pride ,makes them possessors of a royal flush hand and the public should back them up right well, for after all they are the community's representatives and it is a "draft-dog that bites itself."

Dealing with the present position of poultry farming it is becoming so troublesome that many will give this food-producing business up and our cost of living will increase enormously. It is suggested that our Provincial Minister of Agriculture, bankers and country police shall get together and without somewhat useless threats of severe punishment formulate plans that will make chicken stealing a very difficult business to make any money at, and we all know what happens when things don't pay. This is not a soldier's battle. It is a community affair and a very serious one.

There is an old proverb that if there were no receivers there would be no thieves, so let us get after the receivers and force the business into the hands of recognized market-men and dealers ,and insist that payment for all consignments shall be made by cheque payable through the "payer's account" at his bank only. This would entail no handicap on a small licensed dealer as bank accounts are very open to honest men—and if any bank refuses to open or continue an account, up goes the danger signal.

Cheques of a protected nature and their cause identified can be made semi-negotiable, or in other words, can be cashed by any tradesman in money or goods who is in that way willing to act as payee's private banker and taking all the risk of this confidential knowledge of the payee. It is worth while in the interests of auditors and all of us to get down to an impregnable system of identity and it can be very easily done .

He: "Do you care for dancing?"
She: "No."
"Why not?"
"It's mere hugging set to music."
"Well, what is there about that you don't like?"
"The music."

CHICKEN THIEVES MAKE APPEARANCE

Chicken thieves are making their appearance around Kemptville. Monday night Mr. David Curry had his roosts thoroughly cleaned out, over 60 valuable hens being taken. The loss was not discovered until the following morning, when Mr. Curry went to his farm to do his chores. As he lives in town about two miles from his farm, the thieves had a fine chance to operate and make a clean getaway. There are no clues, although owners are reporting locks tampered with and all are keeping a strict lookout.

HOME DESTROYED NORTH OF WINCHESTER

While Henry Lang and his family were sitting down to supper about five o'clock Sunday evening in their little home three miles northwest of Winchester village, fire caused from overheated stovepipes broke out in the hallway on the second floor. Before the smoke and flames were noticed the whole upstairs was ablaze, and the occupants had only time to snatch a few personal belongings and flee for their lives. Despite every effort of a volunteer fire brigade formed of the farmers in the district, the house was burned to the ground. This is the second time Mr. Lang has been burned outi n recent years. No insurance was carried.

James Collison, Iroquois

The village of Iroquois and the township of Matilda lost one of its oldest residents in the death of James Collison, J.P., in his 81st year.

The late Mr. Collison lived his whole life in the township of Matilda and village of Iroquois, and was very prominent in municipal politics in the township a few years ago, serving as councillor, deputy-reeve and reeve several terms, and also as county councillor under the old system .

The greater part of his lifetime was spent on the farm, being recognized as progressive and prominent among farmers.

He went to Iroquois to reside about 25 years ago, was appointed clerk of the sixth division court of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, which position he held for about 20 years. He was also Justice of the Peace, and before the present act came in force, was quite prominent on the local bench.

Mr. Collison was greatly interested in dairy circles and has been president of the Iroquois Cheese Board for more than one term. In politics he was a staunch Conservative ,and a great admirer of the late James P. Whitney. He leaves to mourn his loss two sons, Dr. John, at present wintering somewhere in California, and Barney, barrister, of Calgary, Alta., also one daughter, Miss Nellie, with whom he lived. The funeral service took place Saturday at 2.30 at St. John's Anglican church, of which deceased was a member, the rector, Rev. J. Lionel Homer, conducting the services, thence to the vault at Dixons Corners, to await burial in the spring .

The 22nd regular meeting of the Chesterville Peptimists was held in Room "A" Friday March 2nd. Clara Cassidy, Minnie Cameron and Bert Colquhoun were appointed as program judges.

The program was on muscles and bones:

A reading by Pauline Pomeroy.

A song by Lillian Shaver and Pansy Harper.

"The Muscles and How They Do Their Work," Willie Nash .

Illustrated exercises by Rodney Hummel .

"Our Unseen Servants," by Roy Marcellus.

"How to Grow Strong," by Dwight Perrault.

"The Different Kinds of Muscles," by Pansy Harper.

A song by Annie Sorrell, Pansy Harper and Lillian Shaver.

Illustrated Lecture on the Bones by Mr. Boyd.

A Drawing of the Bones of the Arm by Wyda Maloley.

The Attendance Committee's report was then given. The mite box donations amounted to 42c. Pansy Harper was awarded the merit badge for the best prepared part on the program. Mr. Boyd read the March News Letter. Clara Cassidy, Stanley David, Rodney Hummel received the merit badges for the Merit Badge Contest. Our meeting was closed by singing the National Anthem. Helen Barrie, Reporter .

Two for One.

"Sonny, why don't you get up and let one of the ladies sit down?" asked a portly man of an urchin on the street car.

"Why don't you get up an' let 'em both sit down?" was the boy's prompt comeback .

Business First .

"Are you engaged to him?" asked Miss Cayenne.

"Yes," answered the prudent girl. "But I have requested time to verify reports on his title and fortune."

"That is not an engagement. That is an option."

The pity is that "unthinkable" things are not also untalkable.

Grain Mixtures for Ensilage

(Experimental Farms Note.)

In districts where, owing to cool moist weather during the summer months, corn is uncertain, mixtures of grains such as oats, peas and vetch will usually give better results as an ensilage crop. In general such mixtures will grow at lower temperatures than corn, and on land where surface water is readily disposed of, are not harmed by frequent precipitation and continued dull weather. Although comparatively low yielding on a green weight basis, grain mixtures are relatively high in dry matter, and at the Dominion Experimental Station at Lennoxville, have during the past five years, produced more dry matter, or material of actual feeding value per acre than corn and slightly less than sunflowers. Being sown in the same manner as an ordinary grain crop, they have proven excellent nurse crops for seeding grasses and clover, and of course, do not require hoeing and cultivating during the growing period. Accordingly, such mixtures can be grown with less labour than other ensilage crops, but owing to the high cost of the seed, particularly peas and vetch, the cost of production per ton of dry matter, as determined at Lennoxville, is on the whole high, having proved to be more than sunflowers but less than corn.

Another desirable feature of grain mixtures is that although they are an excellent ensilage crop, they need not be used as such if space in the silo is not available. If cut while green and cured they make excellent hay, and, if standing well, the crop may be allowed to ripen and will give a fair yield of grain of high feeding value.

The most commonly used grain mixture for ensilage purposes is a combination, of varying proportions, of oats, peas and vetches, generally known as "O.P.V." As a rule the varieties used are Banner oat, Prussian Blue or Golden Vine pea and spring vetch, commonly known as Black Tares. From the results obtained, during the past three years, at the Dominion Experimental Station at Lennoxville, Que., it is apparent that such a mixture is not the most satisfactory that may be used. From information at present available it would seem that the value of a mixture is goverened by its ability to remain standing for, if the crop lodges badly while quite green, pea and vetch vines rot quickly. If much of the foliage in this condition it will make an ensilage of inferior quality with a very disagreeable odor. Accordingly, though a mixture may make the best ensilage while in the dough stage, if it lodges while quite green it should be cut and ensiled without delay. Of a large number of mixtures that have been tested, all those containing Banner oat, peas and vetch, in varying combinations, have invariably lodged before the oat reached the dough stage. On the other hand, mixtures containing Gold Rain oat, and Golden Vine or Chancellor pea and vetch have proven satisfactory in this respect, and would apparently come to full maturity without lodging. Also the substituting of fifteen pounds of the oats by fifteen pounds of spring rye has given excellent results.

It has been observed that although vetch is commonly used in such mixtures it actually forms a very small percentage of the total crop. Of eleven mixtures containing vetch that were tested in 1927, the percentage of this species in the seeding ranged from 11.1 to 17.6, but the analysis of the foliage showed that it formed a much smaller percentage of the crop, the range being from 1.04 to 7.83 per cent. In view of the high price of vetch seed it is doubtful if its use is advisable in this district. Better results have been obtained by increasing the amount of peas, but if this is carried beyond a bushel of peas to two bushels of oats, the mixture will lodge very easily.

Experimental work with grain mixtures is being continued at the Lennoxville Station and additional information will, no doubt, be available each year for several years to come. For the present, however, it would seem that the best results are to be obtained with a mixture composed of two bushels of a stiff strawed tall oat, such as Gold Rain and one bushel of a strong growing pea such as Chancellor or Golden Vine. This mixture should be seeded at the rate of from three to three and a half busnels to the acre according to the fertility of the soil. On very fertile soil or on low-lying situations, where a crop would lodge easily, it is advisable to substitute fifteen pounds of the oats by a like quantity of spring rye.

Henpecked Husbands

Henpecked husbands were applauded by Dr. C. K. Kimmins, a British educational leader, in an address before a women's luncheon club in York recently. His tribute must have been gratifying to both the wives and husbands concerned. He said:

"The henpecked husband is the most delightful and childish person in the world. Some hen-pecked husbands are not really hen-pecked; they are hen-protected."

Another encouraging s t a t e m e n t which he made in this connection was that "hen-pecked husbands live longer than those who are not hen-pecked."

We must agree that even though they may not actually live longer, it no doubt seems longer.

Saving The Tree Trunk In Removing Big Limbs

The pruning season is at hand, and many amateurs are already at work on their trees. It would be well if these people would follow the present practices of commercial growers, who no longer do a great amount of heavy pruning on any tree in one year. A word might be said, perhaps, about the method of cutting off big limbs if they must be removed. Even farmers sometimes use a method which results in causing the limbs to rip off a large section of the bark below the point where the cut was made. Here is a way to avoid that happening. First an undercut is made at a distance of a foot or more from the trunk. This should be about half the thickness of the limb. Then another cut should be made from the top and close to the trunk. When this cut has been partly completed, the limb will break off at the spot where the first cut was started without any tearing of the bark. The stub can then be removed close to the trunk, leaving a clean wound, which, if properly painted, will soon heal over. This is a simple plan which is ,of course, perfectly familiar to all practical orchardists, but which is not understood by many men who are not familiar with trees.

ANOTHER MORAL TALE

Once upon a time there was a very wealthy woman who was also very economical. She would shop all over her home town and haggle for hours to save a nickel.

After years of scrimping and saving she and her husband decided that they could afford a trip to California. In fact, the doctor had ordered her to go to a more gentle climate for the winter, for the years of penny-watching had begun to tell on her.

Then the hectic weeks of preparation: The house to set in order; the trip to arrange; the clothes to buy.

Toward the last the strain of always counting the cost was beginning to have its effect, but our lady kept relentlessly at it. Finally, the day before her departure she had everything —bougt at great savings—except the hat. So forth she fared to get a hat at a bargain. To one hat shop after another she went, trying on every hat in the house, critical, more and more short tempered, haggling over prices. This hat was too dull. This hat was too bright. This one too expensive. This one made of too cheap materials.

By five o'clock she had reached the place where a twenty-dollar hat for fifty cents would not have pleased her.

At five-fifteen she collapsed in the midst of a storm of protest at the price of a hat she wanted. She was rushed home and put to bed. The doctor was called.

In the morning she was dead.

Or Spilled Water.

Blinks: "I'd like to pick up a little easy money."

Jinks: "Well, that isn't any harder to pick up than an egg that has fallen on a cement walk."

Of Course.

"Oh, Jones," said the botanist, "I see a pair of overalls working in the field. I wonder if it's a man or a woman?"

"You say it's working? Then it's a woman."

One of Greatest Pastimes Is Curling

I am not aware that any book on curling has ever been written. If there has been I must confess I have never seen it. This is not going to be a book . I do not see how I could fill a book on what I know about curling. Other players might, however, and I have no doubt they could from certain conversations I have heard in other places than on the ice.

Curling you must understand is similar to golf in one respect at least, On the ice and behind the plate glass in a warm and comfortable smoking room.

Not A Money Maker.

I have never heard of very much money wagered or expended on curling . The game originated in Scotland.

Be it understood, however, like that other great Scotch game golf, it is not only Scotchmen who play it.

From my observations I would say that the Irish are particularly adverse to wearing the Tam. This, however, is not to be wondered at as they are usually adverse to everything. It would seem they prefer derbys.

If a "skip" loses a game he invariably blames it on either the condition of the ice, his "lead", his "second" or his "third." These latter gentlemen in turn blame the "skip." You will see it is a fair game.

"Skips" are usually elected by members of a club at the annual meeting, and like Governments are then criticized an damned by the very people who elected them. How alike human nature is in many things.

There is an old time custom in many rinks "to stack the brooms," about every other end, always the end next the anteroom . This is the same idea as the ninetheenth hole in golf. The difference being that the anteroom comes within reach of players more often than the nineteenth hole does in golf. It is most interesting to participate in, or watch a game in which this custom is carried out. This is where the Scot puts it over all comers.

Now I honestly believe curling is as fair and clean a game as there is played; providing always that it is played that way.

A "skip," "third," a "second," or a "lead" could very easily throw a game away, but as the common herd are ambitious to be made "skips," and "skips," are jealous of their positions, the chances of such a thing happening are very remote .

We have, however, seen some supposedly good players put down their iron in such a way that we might well wonder if he was not like Nelson—blind of one eye and shut the other so that he could not see the skip's broom.

A "fluke" made by one of the rank and file is treated as a joke. Made by the "skip," however, it is a serious affair, and must be treated very diplomatically, so that the skip's dignity may in no way be injured.

Popular Pastime.

You might well wonder why curling is so popular. I have never heard of it being played for money. The public interest is practically nil, the fans being conspicuous by their absence, and it has never been professionalized. Yet witness the numerous curling clubs all over Canada ,even to the smallest towns. The answer would seem to be it is just popular among curlers. Rather a unique position.

Curling is about the only game I know of that is played in ordinary business suits. Some enthusiasts make an attempt at a distinctive costume by wearing a sash or a scarf about the waist or a Tam-o'-Shanter. They are seldom worn together. It is either one or the other. I sometimes think this is one of the reasons why it is not so popular with the general public. If some genius would design an attractive costume for this game, it might be that gate receipts would be the result. .

It is, however, such a gentlemanly game, morning coats and top hats might be appropriate.

The "third" in a rink has to be a real diplomat if he ever expects to be asked to play third again. Oh, so many times he is so sure the skip's judgment as to what he (the skip) should play is rotten—yet he dare not argue. Then if the following shot of the opponent's "skip" proves that he (the third) was right does he say—"I told you so." No ,not al all. Not if he is ambitious.

It is very interesting to note the peculiarities of the different "skips."

The "lead" puts his first iron through to the hack. "Skip" scratches his head and has a look at how the rink on his right or left is going on—or "Just a little too heavy, Bill; hold your hand;" or "alright, alright, never mind." The "skip" asks his player for a long guard. His player manipulates his iron to a spot just outside the hog line. "Thanks, Jack, that is a real gool long guard." The enemy has two irons right on the "tee" making a splendid pair of pants. "Now, Bill, just draw through that port a yard over "tee high," and move those two out and lie yourself shot." Bill drops the iron—"Oh ,well laid down," and then a roar, "sweep, sweep, sweep, hard, hard, hard." The iron comes to rest just in front of the objective completely plugging up the port and making an effective guard for the enemy. The nature of the "skip's" remarks on an occasion of this kind would most likely depend on his personal feeling and relations towards Bill in private life.

It the "skip" thinks ,however, he is above criticism he should just hear some of the remarks passed between the two hog lines by the common sweeps.

Weekly Review Of The Legislature

The session of the Legislature may be said to have reached its "peak" of interest and importance, possibly, this week, in view of the fact that the address debate was concluded, the budget brought down, first report of the Liquor Control Board tabled, and two divisions held in the House. Debate on the budget commences Tuesday, with R .F. Miller, of Haldimand, Liberal financial critic, leading off. Adjournment before Easter is still in prospect.

On Tuesday the House disposed of Frank W. Wilson's resolution for legislation at this session permitting sale of beer by the glass, under the local option plan. The member for Windsor East made quite a presentation of his case, as the Prime Minister later commented, but Hon. Mr. Ferguson made it clear that the Control Act could not yet be considered to have had a fair trial, and that the government was not prepared to amend it in any material way. He commented also upon the fact that Mr. Wilson had argued that men usually became the worse of liquor in public places, and not in the home, yet he was calling for establishment of public drinking places for the sale of beer. The Premier having disclosed the government's attitude toward the resolution, and Mr. Wilson still demanding a poll of the House his motion was snowed under, 92 to 4. Besides the mover and his seconder, W. G. Weichel, North Waterloo. only T. Legault and E. Proulx, Liberal members for Sturgeon Falls and Prescott, voted for the beer resolution.

Unlike last session, there was a division on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, due to the fact that W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal Leader, had proposed an amendment calling for old age pension legislation at this session. Premier Ferguson pointed out in closing the debate that a survey of the situation in the province was absolutely essential; the government would not be rushed into a project involving the spending of millions without knowing where it was going. He remarked also that Alberta, with a Progressive government, had declined to be stampeded on the issue. He expressed hope, however, that before next session some progress would be made before next session toward finding a sane and sound plan. The House thereupon voted 68 to 27 in favor of the government subamendment expressing satisfaction at announcement that steps are being taken to gather information regarding the better care of our dependent and aged population, so that the people of the province may have a proper understanding of this great problem and of the financial obligations to be assumed by them under a plan of old age pensions, framed to meet the needs of the province and receive the approval of the Legislature. The U. F. O. members voting with the Opposition, it was a straight party vote, in which the government had a majority of 41. It is understood that arrangements for the proposed survey will be made soon after the Session closes.

The deadlock in the Privileges and Elections Committee, over the South Ottawa ballot incident, arising from refusal of W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal Leader, to produce the 19 stray ballots in his possession before the official ballot boxes should be opened, was overcome by Premier Ferguson's announcement on Tuesday that the investigation would be turned over to a judicial body, composed of Mr. Justice Magee and Mr. Justice Hodgins, of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The Prime Minister said that strong party feeling had quite evidently developed in the committee, and rendered it unlikely that a finding would be reached which would be acceptable to the House and the public. He did not wish a pronouncement to be made as would leave the impression that it was the result only of a party majority in the committee. Their lordships may get to work next week, and will no doubt have a report before the session closes. Meantime, there is a general impression that the matter ,as one member said,, is a lot of fuss over nothing, and the only criticism of the government's decision heard is that it is much like killing a fly with a sledge hammer.

First report of the Liquor Control Board has been brought down, covering of course operation only to the end of the fiscal year, October 31st, last, a period of five months. Total sales of $17,533,000, were divided as follows: Store sales, wine and spirits and other counter sales, $11,942,000; beer, $44,702; beer sales by breweries and warehouses, $5,122,000; warehouse sales to hospitals, $23,238. The board, generally speaking, is satisfied with the actions of distilleries, wine producers and breweries in observance of the law. It is noted that a stand has been taken against indiscriminate establishment of clubs along the international boundary, and no permits for use of beer or wines at banquets have been issued. By way of general conclusion ,the commissioners, after expressing appreciation of public co- operation say, "It is not by any means claimed that perfection has been attained, but the board does believe that many good results have been achieved—notably, a marked cutting down of the bootlegging evil; a lessening of youthful temptation to break prohibitory laws; the bringing about of greater respect for all law; a decrease if not an elimination of the making of homebrew, and, it is hoped, a real stimulation to temperance in all things by education and home training rather than by prohibiting which does not prohibit. Recent rumors of the forthcoming resignation of Chairman Hanna and Commissioner Manion have been denied .

Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General, delivered on Tuesday a noteworthy review of the whole situation in regard to the operation of the Control Act, and quoted copious statistics proving that infractions of the law had decreased, as compared with conditions under the O.T.A. With continued co-operation of the public, he said, there would undoubtedly be further improvement. The Government is intent upon enforcing the new law, the Minister pointed out, but deprecates the attitude of former supporters of the O.T.A. who seek to put the present measure in bad light. "It should be the right thing," he said, "for all our citizens to be anxious to see this Act a success, not because it happens to be the policy of the Government, but because we want to have law-abiding citizens, people drinking less, and we want to control what they do drink. You can do a great deal by moral suasion, and the Government desires to have behind the Act the great body of public opinion." He announced that the Control Board was paying into the treasury $2,800,000 from profits in the first five months of operation .

The provincial treasurer has budgeted for receipts of $7,000,000 from the Control Act in the present fiscal year. Hon. J. D. Monteith, in his budget speech on Thursday, made a noteworthy presentation of the finances of the province; announcing not only a balanced budget but a surplus of $359,000, in addition to $3,000,000 paid off the debt. In the present year a similar amount will be applied to the debt, and a surplus of $177,000 is estimated. Relief from taxation, directly and indirectly, in the past fiscal year, the treasurer placed at over $5,000,000. Ordinary revenue, $56,306,000 was the highest in the history of the province. Revenue for the present fiscal year is estimated at $55,790,000, and expenditure reduced accordingly to $55,613,000.

"The Treasury of this province, under the present Administration," he said in conclusion ,"is no special prop for any particular class or section; it is the financial bulwark of the entire province. The trinity of financial virtues—patience, prudence and perserverance— has affixed to the Ferguson regime another recording year of outstanding achievement. Supremacy of the law and the interest of the people are the Magna Charta of the British Constitution. Efficiency, economical, honest and businesslike administration are the Margna Charta of Ontario's finances. There are no secrets or tricks in our financing, and it is based on strict adherence to the financial laws. Sound administration over a period of four years has restored Ontario to the happy financial position she now enjoys .

Honors For A Killer

In all ages mankind has showered honors upon killers of their fellowmen. But in order to obtain those honors it has generally been necessary to kill on a grand scale; to wit, in war.

In Beeton, Ont., however, the good townsfolk have deemed it proper to honor a killer who killed only one fellowman. The honoree in this instance is Alex. Hodge, who was given an elaborate reception, a purse of money and a gold watch in recognition of his achievement. And these attentions were fully deserved.

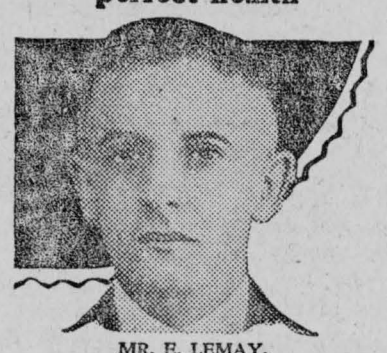

One night last summer Hodge boldly attacked one David Forsythe, who was caught in the act of robbing the Hodge farm home, and with no weapon but his two good fists, beat the bandit to death.

Besides Hodge was instrumental in rounding up a gang of cattle thieves in his section, causing their arrest and punishment. For this he has been given a good position by the Ontario Government in connection with the province experimental farm at Whitby.

No right-minded person applauds killing as a general proposition, but it would be well for human society who, in the face of an emergency, might match the resolute courage and physical stamina of Alex Hodge.

Master Farmer's Plan

Among the ten outstanding farmers of Alabama upon whom the degree of Master Farmer was conferred last year is John R. Witt, who was for several years vice-president of the state Farm Bureau Federation. His success in conducting profitable farming operations under difficulties makes his views interesting and important to all farmers, wherever located, as the general principles he advocates are applicable anywhere.

In a recent statement Mr. Witt outlines his farm program for 1928, which is briefly summarized thus:

" First, produce crops economically by intensive preparation, cultivation and fertilization.

' 'Second, conserve and improve your soil, realizing that the safety of our nation depends upon its productiveness.

"Third, strive to be an intelligent farmer by close operation with the agricultural departments of the county, state and nation. Read our agricultural papers.

"Fourth, co-operate with farm organizations in buying and selling. This organized effort will better the conditions of our farm people and place them on a parity with people of other vocations."

These points, coupled with a policy of raising food and feed at home, through gardens, cows, hogs, and poultry, embrace a safe and sound program which may be profitably followed in any farming community.

Genius In Prison

From Georgia comes another story of a convict who has improved his opportunities for thinking while detained within prison walls.

Jeff Harrison, while working in the cotton mills of the Atlanta Federal penitentiary under a sentence for mail robbery, has invented a device whereby a loom is automatically stopped whenever a thread breaks, or some other accident occurs. Without such a device, much damage is frequently caused by such accidents. According to a press dispatch, Harrison's invention may make him wealthy.

This calls to mind the many manifestations of genius which have occurred among prisoners. Some of the great works of literature have been composed behind prison bars and many useful ideas have been evolved through the undisturbed meditations of convicts so confined.

All of which suggests that persons whose movements are not so restricted might profitably take time to do some concentrated thinking. In the hustle and bustle of everyday life we are prone to neglect the beneficial results of such concentration . Possibly it would be a good idea if more of us were shut up occasionally with nothing to do but think.

A Line Fence and a Lawyer With Common Sense

"He's got eight feet of my land and I want to commence suit against him right away!"

It was with these neighborly remarks that he busted in on our lawyer friend one morning several weeks ago.

"I think," said the lawyer, "that I will write to your neighbor and ask him to come in and see me. Perhaps there is a little misunderstanding that can be ironed out, save both of you some money, and you can still be friends."

"Misunderstanding nothing! He's got eight feet of my land, he knows it and I'm going to have it back if I have to go to the highest court and mortgage my farm."

Our legal friend told his client that that was about what would happen to him if he had his way about it. And, so, with this as a background, we shorten the traces and tell you just how the thing turned out.

The lawyer and both parties met in his office, and after a little preliminary talk, the offender said: "You see, it's like this, Mr. Lawyer. I've always lived in town until I bought this farm, and when I went there I found the fences in bad shape. I didn't know who my neighbors were. but I wanted to be on good terms with them. And so, when I came to this particular fence, which was half down, I supposed of course it was on the line and I thought I would build it through at my own expense, rather than say anything to my neighbor about it. I'm awfully sorry this happened, but friendly neighbors are more to me than a few feet of land, so I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll set the fence over ten feet at my own expense."

The farmer who claimed the land jumped up, grabbed his neighbor by the hand and said: "You won't do anything of the kind! You leave that fence right where it is—and, by the way, I've just butchered a hog, and when I get home, I'm going to bring you over half of it. And now let's all go out and get something to eat on me."

This is a true story, all of which goes to prove that with fairly decent people most of life's troubles are caused by misunderstandings.

REV. DR. RUNNELLS WILL GO TO WINDSOR

STEAL SILVER FOXES FROM FITZROY FARM

Twelve silver foxes were stolen from the fox farm of John A. Lytle, in Fitzroy township, about nine miles from Arnprior, during a raid last Wednesday night. The foxes are valued at about $7.000, and so far there is no trace of the thieves.

LONG BOW AGAINST CAMERA

In the little village of Woodbury, Martin Custer was accounted queer.

The stranger, meeting Martin casually, would have seen nothing to justify this local reputation of his, unless to be a bit shy and tacticurn was to be queer. But if the stranger had ventured in Timothy Peeble's general stored and happened to mention Martin to the leading citizens gathered there, he would quickly have been informed of the lad's queerness. Even more: he would have been enlightened by Jasper Huffcut, the Dr. Samuel Johnston of the little group of serious thinkers who daily gathered at Peeble's for reflection, debate and such light refreshment. Jasper Huffcut always spoke first and loudest and left the matter settled when he finished.

"Ah-r-r-r!" Jasper would have cleared his throat explosively. "Well, yes. Yes . I reckon you might say that we know young Custer. Might you be any kin of his? No? Well, I'm just as well relieved to hear it. Now there's a boy who has a chance to make something out of hisself. The Custer farm is as fine a farm as any round here. The boy's father runs it, and the young feller lets on to help him. Due to inherit that farm some day, Martin is, and you might think he'd take an interest in it and try to learn something about how to make it pay. But does he? Understand, I ain't saying he don't never do any work there. Puts in a fair day's work. like as not, 'cording to what they call a day's work nowadays. But what do you think he does with all his spare time? And his money? Ah-r-r-r!

"Well, sir, I'll tell you what he does. Fotygrafting! Fotygrafting! Every blessed minute he can get he's out tromping about through the woods with one of them cameras slung on his back. Works harder doing that than he ever works on the farm. Never raised no sweat toting firewood like he does that camera over the hills. And that ain't the worst. It ain't only a matter of wastin' time. Why, sir, every last cent that young feller can lay his hands on goes for fotygrafting truck—fillums, plates, pizen in bottles and what not. Never saves a cent 'cepting what he wants to buy a new camera or the like. Nothing put by for a rainy day. Nothing to put back into the farm. Well, sir, since you ask me, I'll say that us folks here has decided that the boy is a mite cracked. And I guess we're in a pretty good position to jedge. Ah-r-r-r!"

Thus spoke Jasper Huffcut if given the opportunity. To do him justice it must be admitted that his opinion of Martin about jibed with that of the other observers of men and events at Peeble's. Martin, as we said before, was generally accounted queer in Woodbury. But there is this to be remembered: Jasper Huffcut's frequent criticism of Martin, like all his other expressions of opinion, was somewhat irritating to his fellow villagers—even to his cronies at Peeble's.

"The trouble with Jasper," said Abner Truelove one day when Jasper wasn't round "is the same as the trouble with the fellow who yoked himself up with an ox and started out to plow. He takes himself too seriously."

Not a little of the irritation Jasper caused was owing to his continual tales of his remarkable experiences in the West. Jasper had left his native village in his youth and had spent some ten years roaming in the West, with profit to his self-esteem if not to his pocketbook. He had come back East to settle down and achieve his comfortable income, but the East remained forever tame in his eyes.

Somebody, it might be, would touch upon the weather . "Well, yes," Jasper would say, "right smart wind yesterday—for these parts. Ah-r-r-r! I remember one time when I was out in Kansas we had a little wind for a day or two—nothing much for Kansas. The boss' wife kept complaining because there was sand blowing into the house, though that warn't a sandy [illegible] can outrun a bullet. Why, I remember I shot at a jack one time when he was going directly away from me and by and by he tumbled over. Where do you think I hit him, Tom? Bang in the nose! Yes, sir, that bullet passed over his head when he was getting his start, but he caught up with it and stunned hisself running against it. Jacks can run, Tom; they don't act like they was hunting for four-leaf clovers.

"But, after all, rabbits ain't fitten for a man to hunt, Tom. Buffalo! Bears! Moose! Catamounts! Ah-r-r! Them's the varmints for real sport. Why, I remember one time out in Nevady I was trailing an old grizzly bear that had been stealing cattle. He was a wary old critter, and I trailed him for four days and nights without getting a shot at him—never got a bite to eat or a wink of sleep all that time. Wore out all my dogs and lost them. Well, sir, come night of the fifth day I couldn't go a step further. So I just crawled into a little cave I come to and leaned up against some moss and went to sleep. Well, what do you think woke me up in the morning, Tom? That bear snoring! He'd gone into that cave first, and there I'd been leaning up against him sound asleep. He was too dead beat to wake up. I hadn't the heart to shoot him, Tom. But that'll show the possibilities of hunting big game in the West, Tom, just show the possibilities. Wisht I could get a chance at hunting like that again. Ah-r-r-r!"

Well, to sum up the general opinion, it was that Jasper could be taken down a peg or two with benefit to himself and to the community.

To return to Martin, it will be seen that his reputation for queerness had been acquired because he had a hobby that he rode intensively and to no practical good that the village could see. As a matter of fact, it turned out later that it was of practical value, for in time Martin turned into cash the excellent photographs of wild animal life that he obtained. That was the branch of photography in which Martin was so deeply interested—photographing in their natural haunts all the wild animals that the region offered.

So that is why when Martin went into Peeble's store one day to ask Tim, who was postmaster as well as storekeeper, whether a parcel of photographic supplies had come for him he pricked up his ears when a farmer came in and informed the usual circle that he had seen bear tracks on Cider Mountain. A chorus of incredulous comment broke out, but the farmer stood his ground. He knew bear tracks when he saw them, he said. Presently he convinced the company that he was telling the truth, although bears had not ventured so far south as Cider Mountain in many years. At that point Martin, who had no relish for the long reminiscences that now began to flow, quietly asked the farmer for the exact situation of the tracks. The question brought the attention of the group upon him.

"Going to get a picture of the bear, Martin?" asked Abner Truelove jocularly.

"I'll try to,' 'said Martin briefly.

That started Jasper. "Young man," he said. "Hold on a minute. Ah-r-r-r! Let's get this thing straight now. We don't want to make no mistake. Are you a-standing there in your right mind—leastways in such mind as you've got—and saying that you're going to fotygraft a bear with a camera?"

"I'm going to try to, Mr. Huffcut."

"Young man, can you shoot straight? Can you look a ton of r'aring, tearing bear flesh in the eye and put a bullet where it'll stop the critter when you've got only one bullet to do it with?"

"I never carry a gun."

"You nev—Ah-r-r-r! But I might have expected it. That's the sort of thing we're coming to. Why, young man, do you understand you're a-going to shake hands with sudden destruction? Do you know that a bear first, Mr. Huffcut ,you or I."

"Hey? How's that, young man? Well now, I guess you won't get ahead of me."

But Jasper's voice lacked its usual authority, and he fell silent soon afterward. He left Peeble's earlier than customary—perhaps to escape the shower of advice given him—and wended his way thoughtfully home.

The news of the bear's advent and of Jasper's appointment as slayer of the creature quickly spread over the village and the situation made a strong appeal to the popular sense of the fitness of things. Jasper realized this, and whatever his real feelings may have been he saw there was nothing for it but that he should go bear hunting. So he let it be known that he would surely go the next day, and he sent to borrow Brad Tewfick's dogs the best to be had, though Jasper complained that they were not "genuwine" bear dogs.

Bright and early the next morning Jasper made his start. He wore a coonskin cap, deerskin jacket and leggings and carried a long-barrelled rifle. Many jocular greetings were called to him as he drove away towards Cider Mountain, but he was too busy, seemingly, looking after Brad Tewfick's obstreperous dogs to reply to to them.

"Bear steak for supper, Jasper," called Abner Truelove cheerily.

"I wouldn't chase him more'n five or six days, Jasper," advised Tim Peeble.

"And don't go to sleep on him," added Tom Roraback.

It was quite an ovation that Jasper received. He grinned feebly and drove away in a cloud of dust, "talking to them dorgs," as Abner Truedove said subsequently, "as if they owed him money."

It was after dark that evening before he returned. Few people saw him—only those waiting at Peeble's in some anxiety lest something had befallen him. He did not pause at and a desperate close encounter in which the power of the human eye alone saved him from a maddened bear.

"He come a-charging at me, as wicked a looking brute as ever I see," with a gun that warnt' no more use said Jasper, "and me standing there than a fiddle bow. Well, sir, it's lucky I warn't no green horn at the game. So I just stood stock still in my tracks and fixed the critter with my eye. 'Twas more'n he could stand. When he got about three yards from me he turned tail and sneaked off. Coolness was what saved me, the coolness and backbone that I got hunting wild animals out West. Ah-r-r-r!"

Just as Jasper reached this climax Martin Custer entered. Jasper fixed the young man with his compelling eye and snorted.

"Well, young feller, have you got your bear picture yet? Because if you haven't I reckon it'll be a still-life picture. That bear must be deader'n a doornail now."

Martin looked a little embarrassed. He glanced around the little group and then, seeming to take courage, spoke.

"No," he said quietly, "I haven't taken any picture of the bear, but you took one for me, Mr. Huffcut."

"Hey? Whats' that?" said Jasper, bristling. "Don't try no monkey-shines with me, young man. What do you mean, I took a picture. I never handled a camera in my life, and I never will."

"I mean that I had a camera set in a clump of laurel beside the ridge trail, and you struck the trigger string I had stretched across the trail and took a picture."

"Martin," said Abner Truelove quickly, "are the bear and Jasper both in that picture?"

"Yes."

"Let's see it."

Martin took a half dozen prints from his pocket and distributed them round the circle. The picture showed about thirty feet or woodland trail. Along this trail Jasper Huffcut was running madly; his fists were clenched on his chest, his jacket was flying loose in the wind of his passing, his face was strained with great effort. About twenty feet behind him a fair sized black bear had apparently paused in the path while pursuing the fleeing hunter and there stood with Jasper's rifle crunched in his jaws.

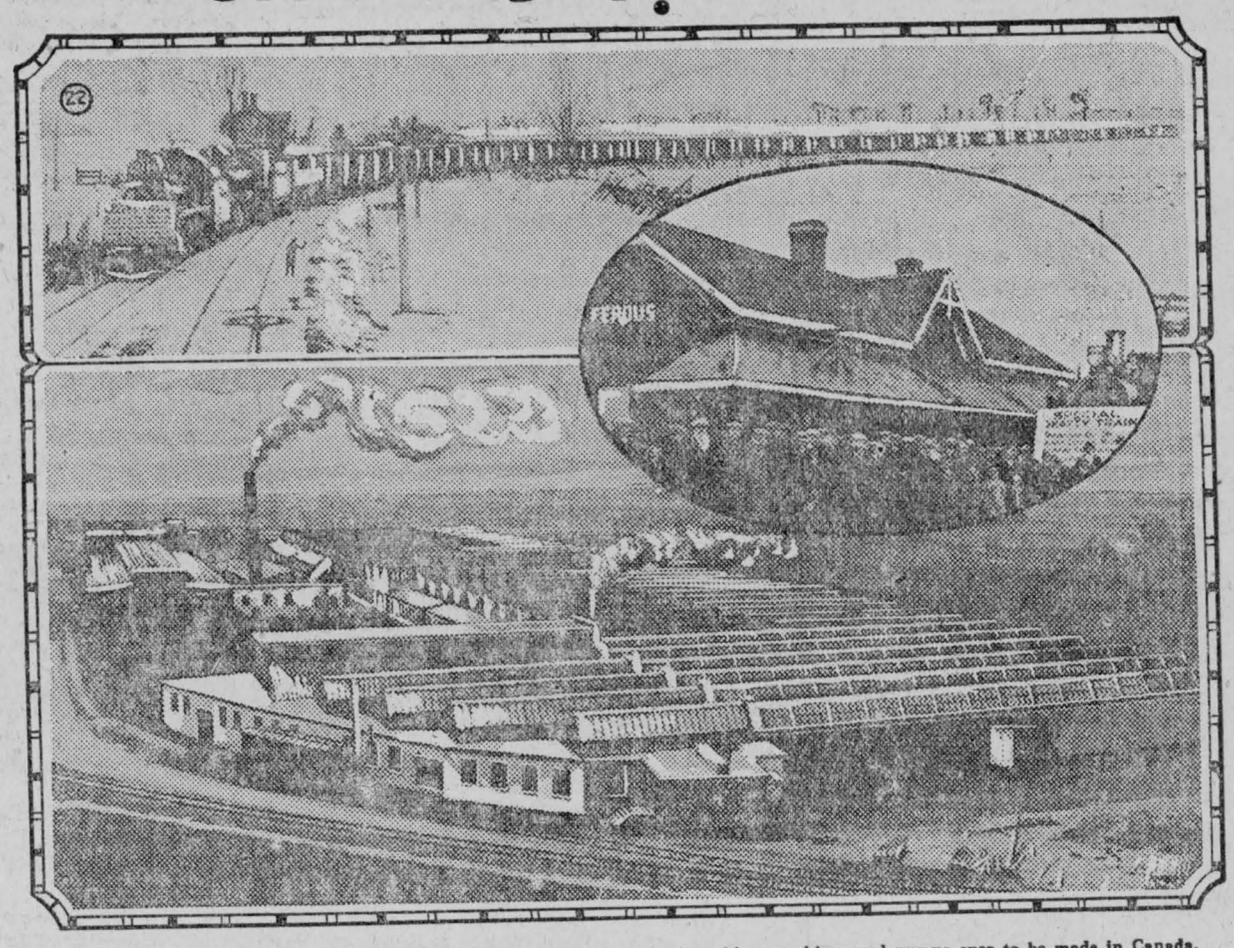

Well, presently they pried Abner Truelove out of the cracker barrel, dried off the ham upon which Brad Tewfick had been weeping, restored Tim Peeble to sanity,—he had been turning the coffee grinder furiously,—help Tom Roraback get his foot out of a churn and thumped Jasper on the back until he stopped saying "Heh, he, he," in a strained, painful, sort of way. Then Martin gently but firmly insisted upon collecting all the prints he had distributed. He took a photographic plate from his pocket and presented prints and plate to Jasper.

"They belong to you, Mr. Huffcut," he said, "you took the picture."

"Thankee kindly, Martin,," said Jasper humbly.

Only two things remain to be told. One is that a few weeks later Martin received with Jasper Huffcut's compliments a fine new camera. The other is that thereafter, if Jasper showed any tendency to draw too long a bow about his Western experiences, somebody had only to enquire innocently, "How's the prospects for bear, Jasper?"

Cleaning up the West

Upper—The C.P.R. train of 35 cars carrying the record shipment of washing machines and pumps ever to be made in Canada. Lower—Plant of Beatty Bros. at Fergus, Ontario. Inset—Fergus station, the Special C.P.R. Train about to leave.

Fergus, a little Ontario town of 2,500 people is making a large contribution to the cleaning up of the West. Recently the whole community turned out to see the despatch of a special train of 35 cars, double-headed with motive power leave for the West with the largest consignment of washing machines and pumps ever to be made in Canada. There were churns, hay carriers and ladders, but the bulk of the eleven thousand individual shipments were pumps and washing machines which had already been sold by Beatty Brothers in farm and rural communities. Fifteen hundred merchants in Western Canada participated in the shipment which was handled as a special train by the Canadian Pacific through to Vancouver. Cars were dropped at Winnipeg. Calgary, Saskatoon, Regina and Edmonton, distribution being fairly general.

The large number of pumps going forward suggests that the Western farmer has decided to carry no more water if his housekeeper will do no more washing.

Plant Tomatoes Now

Early tomatoes sown during March will be ready to plant out as is consistent with safety during May or early June. On the hot bed they should have a frame or a compartment to themselves. They are of a tender nature and require more heat for their successful culture than the hardier subjects. Where only a few are required they may be sown in small pots and pans. These latter should be plunged to the rims in the bed. In case the heat should not be sufficient or the bed should fail, the plants may without being disturbed be removed to a warm window of the house. Good average temperatures for these plants are 70 to 80 degrees by day and 65 to 70 degrees by night.

Lettuce—Lettuce does well when started on the hot bed and later is transplanted in the garden. Sow the seeds very thinly so that little thinning will be necessary. Three or four dozen lettuce planted out so that they will head will be ample for the first small crop in the garden. Two rows across the frame will produce a sufficient number of plants. Both the ordinary cabbage headed lettuce and the less known but equally excellent Cos varieties should be shown.

Spare Tires.

"Maude says her husband disgraced her on their honeymoon."

"How?"

"On the steamer she wanted the other passengers to think an ocean trip was an old story to them, but almost as soon as they went on board he pointed to a row of lifebuoys and asked the captain what was the idea of all the extra tires."

About one hundred friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hanna of Finch on Thursday, Feb. 23rd, holding a miscellaneous shower in honor of their daughter, Loressa, whose marriage would take place shortly. The bride-elect received many handsome and useful gifts. Music was given by Miss Jennie Cameron and Mrs. Earl Droppo, sister of the bride. Games were indulged in till about 11.30 when Miss Loressa was called to the floor and an address was read by Miss Winnie McElheran as follows:

Dear Loressa,—We, your friends and neighbors, have gathered here this evening to spend a social hour together and to offer our best wishes for your future happiness .

We all take the keenest pride in our young people, and although the step you are about to take brings much responsibility with it, yet we are glad when life's cares shared with the right person are a means of strengthening and developing the purity and nobility of character .

We felt we could not let this, the most eventful time of your life, pass without manifesting in some tangible way our love and good-will to you. For this we ask you to accept these gifts, not for their intrinsic value but as a token of the loyal friendship they represent.

May they always be a remembrace of those present here this evening, and may kind Providence so guide your life, that health, happiness and prosperity may be yours always.

Loressa thanked her friends in a few well chosen words. Ice cream and cake were served by a few of the bride-elect's girl friends. About midnight the guests departed after having spent a very pleasant evening and singing "For She's A Joly Good Fellow."
