MR. HUGH A. WILSON

(The Huntingdon Gleaner)

Hugh Angus Wilson of Valleyfield has passed from the sight of men. After a short illness, he died early Tuesday morning at the Hotel Dieu, where he had been admitted for an emergency operation. Valleyfield has lost a citizen whose influence touched every stream of life. The Montreal Cottons Ltd. finds itself without an official whose loyalty and ability were pillars of strength, his family is bereft of a devoted son, a loving husband and a kindly father. He was affectionately known to his friends as "Hughie," and among them there will be a sense of irreplaceable loss, for his quiet, unassuming personality cheered and warmed any gathering that was fortunate to be graced by his presence. In his position as Secretary-Treasurer of a large corporation, he was easy of access to highly placed and lowly alike, who came to him with their problems and left him smiling and happy in the feeling that no deaf ear had been turned to their troubles. He was one of those rare, understanding individuals who went about doing good, never letting his right hand know what his left hand did. He sought no limelight of praise, but in his modest way he was in the vanguard of every charitable enterprise that was calculated to help the community uplift whether in church, civic or school undertakings. His sympathy, his patience, his tact, his steadiness, his sincerity and above all, his innate goodness will be sorely missed not only by the humble who never appealed to him in vain, but by his close friends to whom were revealed in greater measure, those outstanding, sterling qualities that gave him the exalted rank of character. His was the inspiration of faithfulness to duty his was the precious jewel of forbearance, his was the mantle of a genuine practical Christianity. He was one of those people who was universally loved and emulated; his bearing and example, in joy or difficulty, were faultless—sans peur et sans reproche. Everyone will recall those lines, written by a great Englishman, as peculiarly fitting:

"His life was gentle; and the elements
So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world This was a man."

He lived respected and died regretted.

Hugh Wilson was born and reared and lived out his effective career in Valleyfield, in the shadow of the great trees that grace the corner which for more than 60 years, as boy, man, husband and father, he knew as home. Beginning his life's work in the office of the Montreal Cottons Ltd., he rose steadily, step by step, through conscientious attention to the interests of his employers, until he became Secretary-Treasurer, enjoying, in this capacity, the confidence and respect of the worthwhile nobility of the business world. Of recent years, his load of responsibility became heavier, often to the point of making unusual demands upon his personal need for rest, but each pledge was redeemed in a manner which commanded the acclaim and admiration of those whom he served. His illness was a major event, of sufficient importance to the Montreal offices to request a daily report of his condition, and in Valleyfield no bulletin of the King's sickness was asked and awaited with more anxiety and interest. On one occasion, when he was apparently on the high road to recovery, the patient was told of the great numbers of inquiries about him, and his eyes filled with the tears of simple, heartfelt acknowledgment.

No appreciation or biographical sketch of Hugh Wilson would be complete without reference to the part he played in that stranger than fiction drama that was enacted four decades ago in the offices of the Montreal Cottons—the Shortiss case, which wrecked the robust health of Hugh and rocked the political strongholds of both Ottawa and Quebec. The story is well known. Hugh's cousin and another lad were murdered, and a desperate attempt made upon Hugh's life, when he was shot by Shortiss and left for dead. After a long and critical period, he recovered, but the affair undoubtedly undermined his health.

His activities, in spite of his offical duties, were many. He was a member of the Board of Managers of the United Church at Valleyfield, trustee of the School Board and an officer of several social and fraternal organizations. He was an Oddfellow and was prominent in Freemasonry. His death was the signal for half-masting the flags of Valleyfield. His body will be in state in the United Church, where a funeral service will be held on Thursday afternoon prior to his being committed to Mother Earth, amid the surroundings he held so dear. And so has passed from his family and friends a gentle spirit, a noble gentleman who was a loyal friend, a good companion, a rock in a weary land. The memory of him will ever be green. His like will not be seen again. He joins the choir invisible compassed about by a great cloud of witnesses who bear testimony of his worth. Hail and farewell, Hugh Angus Wilson.

OPERETTA PROVES SUCCESS

A large crowd packed the basement of St. Peter's Lutheran Church at Williamsburg, on Saturday evening, to witness the operetta, "The Governor's Daughter," presented by the members of the choir. Every character was well interpreted by a member of the cast.

The first act had its setting in the home of Governor Goodspeed. Heber McIntosh as the Governor, appears as a quiet, unassuming man, but having a keen sense of humor. Mrs. Frank Whitteker, playing the part as the Governor's high-brow wife, is the one who rules with an iron hand. She writes the Governor's speeches, and makes the decisions in the home. Their daughter Jane (Ruth Barkley) must break her engagement with John, a promising young writer (Rex Casselman), because the Governor's wife thinks that old Senator Snow (Wm. R. Whitteker), with his wealth and influence, is a better prospect. Senator Snow, a foolish old man, who likes the girls, proves to be a real comedian. John, the young suitor, pretends to be deranged. In haughty imperial scorn, he wreaks his vengance on Senator Snow, compelling the Senator, who is thoroughly frightened, to go through many hilvarious gymnastics. Jane's girl friends, Beatrice McIntosh, Eileen Trickey, Vivien Barkley and Verna Barkley appear in several pretty scenes. Particularly amusing is the scene in which they are accompanied by Senator Snow.

The reporters, Howard Whitteker, Frank Merkley, Ernest Merriken and Elbourne McIntosh, who are constantly dogging the heels of the Governor and the Senator, seeking news and always alert for any scandal, prove entertaining. Aunt Mary, a mystery character, with a high pitched voice and queer antics, drew forth much hilarity, especially in the final scene, in which she plays side by side with the Senator.

The audience was very expressive in applause and praise of the operetta. The excellent acting was interspersed with several fine solos and choruses.

ARTHUR FLYNN Morrisburg, Ont

THE TUDOR HOUSE

By MRS. STANLEY WRENCH

(Author of "Sing for the Moon," Strange Lovers," etc).

Bending, this time she laid her hands over his, her eyes blinded with sudden tears, as she noticed how the skin was stretched over the knuckles, and saw the patches of grey behind his ears.

"My dear," she whispered, "there is so much to tell you, so much to explain, and I scarcely know where to begin."

Her warm hands pressed his, he felt new life run through him. It was no dream. Withdrawing his hands from hers, he pushed himself back a little in the invalid chair and looked up at her. She was older-looking, too, there were shadows beneath her eyes; there was a seriousness, a tenseness, that had never been there before, but when she smiled he held up his arms, and the next moment she had laid her lips on his.

"You haven't said yet you forgive me, Michael," she said.

"Forgive . . . who am I to forgive?" he said. "It's I who should ask forgiveness, my dear."

Then in a few quick sentences she told him of Denis Birch's confession, the letter that had never reached her; and he in turn related the tryst he kept, the accident, and his meeting with Diana Hamil-Hardy, and there his eyes grew hard.

"I've been a fool, Daphne, and worse, but through it all I know now I never stopped loving you," he told her. "I tried to forget, some times I believe I managed to forget for a little while, and then something would happen, or you'd come slipping back to me in dreams . . ."

She saw his face change, saw the shadows creep back to his eyes, and kissed him again.

He had remembered Werburge Lucy. Now the house was his no longer. To-morrow the documents would be signed that would dispose of it elsewhere; he would not even be able to go there again except as a visitor.

"There's one thing I must tell you, Daphne," he said. "When I met you I was a rich man. Well, that's over, my dear. "I've lost my money, how much I hardly know yet, but I've been an awful fool, and messed things up pretty badly. Multi-Motors nearly crashed through my stupidity and lack of judgment. I've always prided myself on keeping my head; it's been a one-man business with everybody owning a spoke in it, everybody who worked for me had a say in it, and a share. Well, I nearly let the whole lot down, Daphne."

He was stroking her hair then, and did not see her smile, but somehow he imagined her heart was beating a little more quickly.

"To cut a long story short Daphne, I'm a comparatively poor man today," he said. "I'm not ruined, thanks to the way our chaps have pulled together lately; I owe a lot to my firm, decent fellows they are; the team work they have done lately has been marvellous. But it means that for some years yet I shall have to be careful. I . . ." he hesitated. "You know I bought Werburge Lucy, Daphne? I loved that house, every stone there . . . I can't explain what it meant to me . . ."

"I know," she said softly. "Yes, Michael, I know."

He bit his lips for a second.

"I've had to part with it my dear," he said. "Dare not lock the money up, it was needed to carry on Multi-Motors. So you see, Daphne . . "

He waited. She lifted her head, and he saw she was smiling.

"You can just see it from here, Michael, can't you?" she said. "Yes, I remember, because . . . oh, my dear, I looked down there so many times and thought of you . . . "

She held his hand more tightly. There were the twisted chimneys, and by the time the beechs had faded, and trees were bare again, they would be able to look down and see the whole of the grey Tudor House.

"I've always loved it, too," she said softly. "And now, Michael, I've things to confess as well."

"Yes?" he said, and smiled up at her, for she waited. "You don't mean that you got engaged to another man, Daphne?"

Smiling she shook her head, and then her eyes grew serious.

"It's about Werburge Lucy, Michael," she said. "You've sold it, you say. Do you know who has bought it?"

"Not until to-morrow. My solicitors were down to-day, and they will let me know to-morrow. The man wanted the affair kept quiet until after to-day. To-morrow . . . "

"To-morrow it will be ours . . . for ever and ever and a day," she said. "I said I had things to confess, Michael. . . now listen."

But was there need with her eyes like stars? Together they looked down at the chimneys of the old house. Blue smoke rose slowly, winding upwards.

"I've told Barton he may expect us . . . home soon, Michael," she whispered, and her cheeks were rose-red. "You won't think me terribly modern and tell me I've usurped your privileges . . . "

He drew her down and kissed her lips.

"The dream come true. I've wanted a home all my life, but I never knew I could find it till I met you," he said. "Now go on tell me the rest. . ."

But Michael Borde laughed happily.

"Don't hurry, Daphne, we've got the rest of our lives for its telling," he said. "Look," and he pointed to the smoke rising higher, "It's a fine day to-morrow. I don't care now what the doctors say. Tomorrow you and I will go home."

Lady Duff - Gordon Is Dead

Famous Dress-Designer Known As "Lucile" Was a Sister Of Elinor Glyn, The Novelist—They Were Born In Canada, Daughters Of The Late Douglas Sutherland, Of London Ontario.

London—Lucy Lady Duff-Gordon, who as an internationally famous dressmaker gave the world the merry widow hat before the world war, died recently. She was a sister of the novelist Elinor Glyn.

Lady Duff-Gordon was 71. She had been in retirement for years. She founded the firm of society dressmakers, Lucile. She was well known in the United States.

Lady Duff-Gordon was the forerunner of the dress designers of today. She emancipated the women of London from the woolen stockings and flannel undergarments of the Victorian era and substituted glamorous chiffons and silks. She coined the word "chic" as it related to clothes, created the split skirt for comfort, and was the first to stage a mannequin show.

In her time she achieved the most noted clientele of any designer. Queen Mary and the Duchess of York were among her customers and so were such famous actresses as Sarah Bernhardt, Ellen Terry, Gaby Deslys and Lilie Langtry.

But while as "Lucile" she was an acknowledged genius of dress design she had considerably less success in business. She was in bankruptcy in 1922 and several times was sued for various sums. She once told a recorder in bankruptcy that she did not know what a "share" was when he asked concerning her shareholdings.

Perhaps the most sensational incident in which Lady Duff-Gordon figured was the sinking of the Titantic on which she was a passenger with her husband, Sir Cosmo. A special commission in London investigated charges that they were among 12 persons who were rescued in a lifeboat built for 34. It was charged Sir Casmo objected to having more persons in the boat for fear of endangering those already in. It was said he gave each member of the crew a $5 note after they were taken off by a steamship. The court exonerated Sir Cosmo.

Lady Duff-Gordon was born in London, Ont. Her father was Douglas Sutherland. In 1900 she married Sir Cosmo after the death of her first husband, James Wallace. Sir Cosmo died in 1931.

Vancouver Votes To Lower Tax Rate

Vancouver—The City Council recently voted to reduce Vancouver's 1935 tax rate by two mills, bringing the levy down from 39.88 mills to 37.88 mills.

The reduction, asked in a resolution by Alderman W. W. Smith at the request of Mayor G. G. McGeer, will lop $501,189 off civic revenue, but Mayor McGeer said he expects the city will benefit through more prompt payment by taxpayers under the reduced rate.

Ald. A. G. Harvey opposed the reduction, declaring that it would make little difference to the small taxpayer, but would make considerable to the large property owner.

NO WORD WASTAGE.

An affable English tourist came upon an ancient grave-digger in a Scottish churchyard, and, anxious to be sociable, remarked: "I suppose things are very quiet here?"

"Not so quiet as them there," was the discouraging answer.

Unabashed, the Englishman tried another. "Yes, indeed," he said, "but I suppose people do not die often here?"

"Only once, sir," replied the gravedigger.

"No doubt," rejoined the other. "I suppose you have spent all your life here?"

"Not yet, sir?"

And that was as far as the Englishman got.

Geoffrey St. Clair
Graphologist

(Editor's Note: Here is another of those human interest problems with which this well-known writer has to deal in the course of his work. It will, we believe, interest many of our readers. Can this writer help YOU as he has helped so many others? See the close of this article for his invitation to YOU).

I am giving part of a letter which I have received from a young lady of 28 years of age. Not for a long time have I received a letter which presents such a vital problem, having in it all the elements of romance, pathos, unhappiness, and in essence, generosity of heart. It goes as follows:

"My problem is one which may be more prevalent than is thought nowadays. I have for about eight years been living with a man who loves me devotedly and whom I love with all my heart. His wife gave him a lot of trouble and unhappiness, finally leaving him to go abroad. She consented to divorce him, but when it came to the final point she refused. Now she is back again and wishes to resume her life with him. In the meantime, he and I have been living as husband and wife, and we have one child of whom we are both passionately fond. My "husband" does not want to have anything to do with his wife, and insists on a divorce, and he now has evidence which will enable him to obtain a divorce, if she will not do so herself. The point that I would like to have your opinion on is whether this woman or myself would make the better wife to him. As I have said already, I love him with all my heart, but if I thought his happiness depended on this other woman, I would leave him, despite all there has been between us, and in spite of our boy. Please give me your frank opinion, and whatever the cost, I will carry out what I decide is my duty to him."

I am going to refrain from dealing with the moral angle of this case, because these people are living and carving out their own lives—and I am going to confine myself to the question of compatibility of temperaments.

I am profoundly happy to be able to say at once to this correspondent that, in my opinion, judging from the various characteristics revealed to me in the specimens of handwriting she sent to me, she is the one who will make the man happy. She is of a warm-hearted and affectionate nature, sympathetic and generous, and has a very even temperament. She will, I am convinced, make a companionable wife and a good mother.

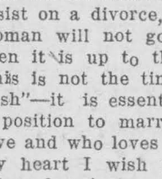

The other woman's writing shows that she has a very strong temper, is of a markedly self-centred type, and has very little time or inclination to study the interests of others. She is nrarow-minded and selfish, and undoubtedly through all this affair she has been actuated solely by her own desires and self-interests.

I say advisedly that my correspondent should encourage the man to insist on a divorce, and if this other woman will not go ahead herself, then it is up to the man to do so. This is not the time to "beat about bush"—it is essential that you be in a position to marry the man you love and who loves you—and with all my heart I wish you success and future happiness.

I am writing at greater length direct.

Do YOU wish to know what YOUR character is from your writing? Have you any problems that are perplexing you? The writer of these articles can help you just as he has been able to help so many other readers. Perhaps you wish to find out the truth about your friends, too? Send specimens of the writing you wish to be analysed, enclosing 10c coin for each specimen, and stating birthdate in each case. Enclose with a 3c stamped, addressed envelope to,: Geoffrey St. Clair, Room 421, 73 Adelaide St. West, Toronto, Ont. All letters are confidential and readers may be assured that they can write on their personal problems with complete confidence. Letters will be answered as quickly as possible.

Lobar Pneumonia Preventive Vaccine Ready for Human Use

Philadelphia. — Discovery of a vaccine against lobar pneumonia was reported by Dr. John A. Kolmer recently before the 19th annual clinical meeting of the American College of Physicians.

The physician, who gained prominence through his discovery of an infantile paralysis vaccine, said the new serum was the result of three years' investigation at the Research Institute for Cutaneous Medicine.

"So far we have had a very large degree of success in the treatment of dogs, monkeys and other animals," he said. "We feel that the time has now come when the vaccine can be used successfully on human beings, particularly those who are exposed to pneumonia because of their occupations."

He said the group included such outdoor workers as policemen, firemen and others.

"The vaccine is purely a preventive one," he said.

Dr. Kolmer said the vaccine was made from five types of germs which cause the disease. He added that it had been successful in from 80 to 85 per cent of the cases in which it was used.

Unemployment Among U.S. Women Waning

Washington—Asserting that her mail reflects decreasing unemployment among American women, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said recently, women were showing great ingenuity in solving depression problems.

Among her 2,000 weekly letters, however, there is an increasing proportion from "white collar" women seeking help on individual problems rather than just any kind of a job.

"While there is a decrease in the number of people who want jobs, there is a change," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "Their problems cannot be fitted easily into categories because the individual requests are more for some specific thing that will help them get back on their feet, some way to carry on a business they have started, or help them get something they need on the farm, or find ways to educate their children. To many of them, these things seem the last jump over their difficulties."

Each request is investigated, she said, and some way usually is found to aid those who really need it.

FOR FLAGGING APPETITES

Spring is here, and appetities have become rather bored with winter fare. Food with a savory, refreshing tang is the order of the day. Introduce the family to this ham and celery loaf for Sunday night supper — eyes will sparkle with anticipation and flagging appetites will take on a new lease of life.

Ham and Celery Loaf.

1 package lime-flavored gelatin.
1¾ cups warm water
¼ cup vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup cooked ham, finely chopped.
1½ cups celery, finely chopped
1 tablespoon onion, scraped or finely minced.
2 sweet pickles, finely chopped.

Dissolve gelatin in warm water. Add vinegar and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened fold in ham, celery, onion and pickles. Turn into loaf pan. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve in slices. Garnish with crisp water cress. Serves 10.

Stuffed Tomato Surprise
(Serves 6)

6 medium size tomatoes
1 tablespoon gelatine
2 tablespoons cold water
½ cup lemon juice
¼ cup boiling water
¼ cup orange juice
½ cup shrimps
¼ cup diced celery
Mayonnaise
Mint sprigs (or stuffed olives or pimento)
Lettuce.

Peel tomatoes and remove centre. Invert and chill. Soak gelatine in cold water 5 minutes. Add boiling water. Stir well. Add lemon and orange juice. Pour into a pan of the right size to make a gelatine layer ½ to ¾-inch thick. Chill until jelly is solid. Cut in cubes. Half fill tomato shells with shrimps and celery blended with mayonnaise. Then pile shells as full as possible with lemon jelly cubes. Garnish with mayonnaise, which may be colored green with spinach juice or vegetable coloring, if desired. Decorate with mint sprigs, stuffed olive slices or pimento. Serve very cold in lettuce cups.

DELICIOUS SIDE DISHES

An attractive side dish or two will change a drab meal into an attractive one. Try either or both of these recipes and see how true this is:

Stuffed Eggs.

Shell hard cooked eggs and cut in halves lengthwise. Remove yolks and mash well. Add to mashed yolk a small amount of soft butter, finely chopped mustard cucumber pickle, sufficient of the mustard dressing from the pickle to moisten the egg yolks, and salt to taste. Fill egg whites with prepared mixture. Sprinkle lightly with paprika.

Cole Slaw

½ small cabbage, shredded
½ pimento, chopped
1 cup home-made style pickles, chopped
½ to ¾ cup mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing.

Mix lightly together, cabbage, pimiento and pickles. Add enough mayonnaise to moisten the mixture. Serve cold.

Many wonderful dishes may be prepared by combining various fruits with meats. These are the kind of balanced unusual dishes that are ideal for guest service.

Baked Ham Entree

Place six slices canned pineapple in a buttered pudding dish. Cut 3 sweet potatoes lengthwise and cover pineapple. Add a third layer of 3 sliced apples, topped with 2 ham slices. Pour over layers either pineapple juice or ½ cup of water, depending on sweetness desired. Cook in a slow oven in a covered dish for 2 hours, or until tender. Dredge the top with brown sugar, dot with bits of butter, and return to the hot oven or broiler for browning. Sprinkle with parsley before serving.

ECONOMICAL DAINTIES.

Delicious desserts need not be expensive. Here, for instance, are some recipes for dishes that are decidedly economical—and just as decidedly delicious:

Baked Prunes

Cover 1 pound of prunes with cold water and let stand for 4 hours. Drain prunes and reserve the liquid; add ¾ cup sugar to the liquor and boil until the sugar is dissolved, skimming if necessary. Place the drained prunes in a covered casserole, cover with hot liquor and bake in moderate over (425 degrees F.) 40 minutes.

California Prune Betty

2 cups cooked prunes
2 apples
3 cups soft bread crumbs
1/3 cup granulated sugar
¼ cup butter
Cinnamon
1/3 cup prune juice.

Pit prunes and slice. Pare, core and slice apples. Arrange one-third the bread crumbs in baking dish, cover with half the prunes, sugar, apples and butter. Sprinkle lightly with cinnamon. Add half of remaining crumbs, then remaining prunes, sugar, apples, butter and more cinnamon. Cover with crumbs and add prune juice. Cover dish and bake about 1 hour in a moderate over (375 degrees F.).

Orange Milk Foam
(Serves 1)

6 tablespoons orange juice
6 tablespoons evaporated milk
6 tablespoons cold water
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon grated orange rind

Beat or shake thoroughly. Serve at once in a large glass, chilling with ice if desired. Fresh milk may be used in place of evaporated milk.

This is an excellent mid-meal drink for children who are undernourished. It is also a good beverage accompaniment for meals. Evaporated milk makes the drink very economical.

Club Plate Salad
(Serves 1)

On the large section of an ordinary grill plate, arrange bed of crisp lettuce and centre with a scoop of cottage cheese. Circle cheese with segments of orange, making a double row of segments. (Segments should have all enveloping membrane removed.) Garnish with a maraschino cherry. Serve with a sweet French dressing.

On smaller divisions of plate, arrange a mound of potato salad, garnished with olives and a slice of hard cooked egg, and two small peanut butter jelly sandwiches.

Accompany with a beverage, preferably orange juice.

Household Uses For Sale

Moths can be driven out of rugs or carpets with greater speed and more certainty if salt is sprinkled over the surface before sweeping, making certain, however, that all salt is removed in the cleaning.

Shampoo the scalp weekly with dry salt, sprinkling it liberally on the hair and massaging thoroughly for 5 to 10 minutes. All salt should then be removed. This stimulates circulation, removes dandruff and gives the hair a natural lustre.

Baths may be cleaned in half the usual time if dry salt is used as a rub before washing. This also applies to washstands, lavatories and polished stone or slate surfaces.

If the iron seems rough and dirty, just when the clothes are all ready for ironing, sprinkle some salt on a newspaper and rub the hot iron over it. It will be like new. When washing, too, if you discover clothes or sheets with iron rust or ink stains, these may be easily removed by a mixture of salt and lemon juice.

There will be no smoke nor odor when making pancakes if the griddle is rubbed with a little bag of salt instead of grease.

Sometimes a broom will wear shorter on one side than the other. If this is the case, dip it in hot water and trim evenly. The broom will be as serviceable as a new one.

When flakes of soot blow onto a light felt hat, do not try to rub them off, nor wet the spots. Merely cover the spots with some dry salt, then remove with a stiff brush.

When the oven seems to be too hot and one fears the contents of the casserole may cook too quickly, place a sheet of wax paper under the casserole cover and it will slow the process of cooking.

"TRUST YOUR OWN JUDGMENT; NOT WITH THE WHIM OF A CHILD"

(By Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways.)

Even the most casual observer as he travels along the highways may see plenty of evidence of the errors in judgment and hasty decisions on the part of drivers which are the fundamental causes of the majority of accidents.

The actions and behavior of such motorists seem to indicate that the safety of themselves and others is of small consequence in comparison with the possibility of saving a few minutes, or even a few seconds.

The statistics of accidents also point to this lack of a proper judgment of values. . . .

As an example of this, we find that December—about the least favorable month for pedestrian travel—is the second worst month from the standpoint of pedestrian accidents. Also, the non-collision type, which includes mishaps in which vehicles run off the roadway or overturn, might be expected to be most frequent during the Winter when road surface conditions and poor visibility make proper control difficult. Yet, actually, the peak in July during the past four years was 142 per cent. greater than the total for December.

The explanation would seem to be that drivers generally will reduce their speed on roads that are obviously unsafe, but cannot resist the temptation to travel at speeds beyond reasonable control when road conditions are good.

In other words, allowance is usually made for obvious dangers but a clear road breeds a false sense of security which too often leads to accidents.

This is especially true when children are at play. Apparently many drivers assume that tne child on the sidewalk will stay there until the car has passed. Thus, all through the Spring and Summer months accidents are reported in which the driver states, "The child darted from the sidewalk into my path. I didn't have a chance to stop". In almost every case this is the truth, but what such drivers fail to realize is that the child on the sidewalk is a danger signal which must be passed with caution and reduced speed if safety is to be assured.

The great increase in accidents involving children during the late Spring and Summer months, an increase which is to be observed in accident statistics year after year, is conclusive evidence that drivers still place too much reliance on the judgment of the child in such circumstances.

"Trust your own good judgment, not the whim of a child," is an excellent rule at all times and especially during the sunny days of Spring and Summer when the number of children on the street is much larger than at other times.

Show Slight Decline

Ottawa. — There were 874,556 persons at work on April 1, according to reports rceived from 9,066 employers by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. On March 1 the number employed was 902,138. The slight curtailment as compared with last month, the report states, was due to a between seasons' contraction, the logging program being completed before any considerable number of workers were absorbed in the outdoor industries.

Despite the falling off in employment on April 1, the index showed a gain of more than two points compared with April 1, 1934, when it stood at 96.4 against 91.3.

WHEN MARK TWAIN SPOKE IN QUEBEC

"In 1881 Mark Twain visited Montreal and Quebec. In the former city he was given a dinner by leading citizens" writes the Winnipeg Tribune.

Prof. Stephen Leacock, who has recently written a book, analyzing the humorist's characteristics, who is interesting in the centenary doings connected with Clemens' natal celebration, now in progress, has unearthed the speech Mark made in Montreal from the files of a local newspaper.

In dealing with his Quebec visit he injected a quizzical touch unmistakably his own to the accompaniment of irresistible laughter and loud applause.

And despite the lapse of time the picture he drew in 1881 still holds good of the Ancient Capital, with some non-essential modifications. He said (in part):

"I have seen the calashe which Champlain employed when he arrived overland at Quebec. I have seen the horse which Jacques Cartier rode when he discovered Montreal. I have used them both; I will never do it again.

"Yes, I have seen all the historical places; the localities have been pointed out to me where the scenery is warehoused for the season.

"My sojourn has been to my moral and intellectual profit; I have behaved with propriety and discretion.

"I have meddled nowhere except in the election. But I am used to voting, for I live in a town where, if you may judge by the local prints, there are only two conspicuous industries; committing burglaries and holding elections—and I like to keep my hand in, so I voted a good deal here in Quebec.

"Where so many of the guests present are French, the propriety will be recognized to my making a portion of my speech in that beautiful language, in order that I may be partly understood. I speak French with timidity, and not flowingly—except when excited. When using that language I have often noticed that I have hardly ever been mistaken for a Frenchman, except perhaps, by horses; never, I believe, by people.

"I had hoped that mere French construction — with English words— would answer but this is not the case. I tried it at the door of a gentleman's house in Quebec, and it would not work. The maid-servant asked, 'what would Monsieur?' I said, 'Monsieur So-and-So,' is he with himself?' She did not understand. I said, 'is it that he is still not returned of his house of merchandise?' She did not understand that either. I said, 'he will desolate himself when he learns that his friend American was arrived, and he not with himself to shake him at the hand.'

"She did not even understand that; I don't know why, but she didn't, and she lost her temper besides. Somebody in the rear called out, 'Qui est donc la?' or words to that effect. She said, 'c'est un fou,' and shut the door on me. Perhaps he was right; but how did she ever find that out? For she had never seen me before till that moment."

Latin Class

(Gerald Raftery in the New York Times)

"When Caesar was in Hither Gaul,"
Says boring Angelo
Translating in a careful drawl
The way the words should go.

When Caesar was in Hither Gaul,
A horseman, racing free,
Bore this page to the Senate Hall
To tell of victory.

Perhaps that horseman on his way
Stopped at a Tuscan farm
That has been tilled, a later day,
By this lad's father's arm.

It only means to Angelo
That, armor-clad and grim,
A red-haired Roman long ago
Set out a task for him.

Hearts Courageous

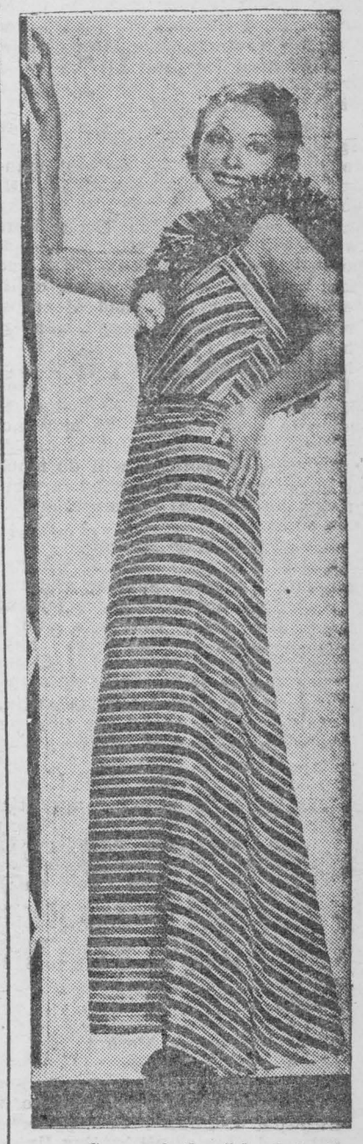

There's a little old lady who lives down the way
Who has never a word of her sorrows say.
She has buried her husband, her children and friends,
Still bravely her gay little garden she tends,
And bravely she smiles as if never a care
Or the anguish of sorrows had silvered her hair.

One morning as downcast I wondered along,
Because some little plan of my own had gone wrong,
She noticed my frown as I came to her gate
And asked me my burden of trouble to state.
"Oh I know how you feel," she said with a smile,
"But don't bear a grudge, for it isn't worth while!"

I thought of her sorrows and stood there, ashamed
To think that my own petty troubles I'd named.
She passed me a rose bud to pin on my coat,
And I couldn't say thanks for the big lump in my throat.
She patted my arm and she said to me there:
"Remember we all have some burdens to bear."

Dear, brave little lady, thought I, as I left,
Of all who had loved you so swift-bereft.
Yet smiling and cheerful and hiding your woe
'Neath a manner so gentle that no one may know,
Should I be the last of my circle to stay,
God grant me such faith as I've seen you display.

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Autumn Wheat Showing

An examination of the autumn wheat plots at the Central Experimental Farm reveals striking differences in their ability to survive severe winter and early spring conditions. Such standard varieties as Dawson's Golden Chaff have been practically wiped out, while a number of newly developed varieties, bred chiefly for hardiness, have come through almost perfectly.

The Starling Menace

The steadily increasing number of starlings in Ontario is causing considerable alarm in some regions. Hon. Duncan Marshall recently stated that Ontario Agricultural College authorities are now conducting research in chemicals which may eventually be used to cut down their numbers. While admitting the danger of loosing poison gas on the roosts of the birds, he believed it to be. he said, about the only satisfactory method of dealing with them.

Liquid Fertilizer for House Plants
(By John F. Clark)

This fertilizer is given in response to an oft repeated request for a liquir fertilizer suitable for house plants, sweet peas, etc.

Nitrate of Soda .....3 parts
Sulphate of Potash .....1 part

Dissolve the mixture in water at te rate of 1 ounce per gal. of water. For garden crops this may be used every two or three weeks, at the rate of 5 gallons per square rod: for potted plants at the rate of one tto five fluid ounces per 6 inch pot, repeated, if necessary, every 2 to 3 weeks.

If the soil is very rich, as from heavy applications of rotted manure and the plants run to foliage, omit the nitrate of soda from the formula.

Best Farm Competition

While the Richmond Hill Agricultural Society does not conduct a Fall Fair, it is very active in other projects. In March, a Seed Show was eld, and a Spring Horse Show is announced for May 24t. A Field Crop Competition is being conducted with Registered Oats.

One of the objects listed in the Agricultural Societies Act is "Competitions for the best or best managed farms," and the Richmond Hill Society is the only one functioning in this respect in 1935 The officers were well pleased with a similar competition, conducted in 1933, and now offer prizes based on te cultivation and apparent yield of crops, freedom from weeds, crop planning, the condition of fences and gates and the neatness and general appearance of the farm. A score card has been planned to permit a good farmer to compete even though he may not have a heavy investment in buildings. This competition will do much to encourage all-round good farming in the Agricultural Society area.

The Hay Market

There is a poor demand for hay generally. A large number of farmers who are out of hay are feeding straw and other roughage due to lack of funds to purchase hay. There is still a fairly large supply of hay unsold in the Ottawa valley and northern Ontario. It is selling at prices as low as $7 per totn delivered to the car at Ottawa valley points. There is also a fair quantity of good hay available in the Bruce peninsula. In most other localities of the province, there is either a shortage or barely sufficient for local needs, but delivered prices are regarded as too high to entice farmers to buy it.

Current prices ex-tract Toronto are: No. 2 Timothy and mixtures, $14.50 to $15.50; No. 2 $12 to $13; wheat straw $10; oat straw $8.50 to $9.50.

Livestock Market

As a result of drought conditions in the United States, there is now a real shortage of beef and pork. The rapid diminution of supplies of cattle and hogs at all leading United States stock yards indicates that our good neighbours in the south will be forced to readjust their meat eating to include a larger portion of lamb.

In Canada, the situation is likely to follow along somewhat similar lines. Already as a result of the rapid rise in the price of beef across Canada and the firm condition of the og market due to heavy exports of bacon to Great Britain and lower hog deliveries as compared with a year ago, the position in regard to te consumption of lamb is becoming increasingly favourable.

Lamb in both Canada and the United States is, at the moment, a bargain counter meat. In the United States, sheep flocks have withstood drought conditions much better than other live stock, while in Canada, as a result of a definite and constrturtive sheep policy, lamb has been greatly improved and is available the year round as early spring lamb, as grass-fat lamb or as finised feedlot lamb.

Potatoes in Simcoe County

Grading regulations and modern marketing conditions have done much in recent years to improve potato growing. Standard varieties are being planted and better care is being given to the crop. In Simcoe County, the Dooley potato has been adopted wit the object of improving quality and yield now that shipments have to be graded. Stewart L. Page, district representative of the Department of Agriculture att Barrie states that from 10,000 to 14,000 acres are under potatoes in Simcoe county, a muc larger acreage than in any county in the province. The price this year is so low that it scarcely pays to haul them to market, even if there were a market for half the quantity now stored in the cellars of those who produced larger than usual, owing to so much wheat and clover being winter killed a year ago, and the land thus made available sown with potatoes. There was good weather for potato growing, and the crop was a large one.

The Usefulness of Famr Accounts

To the many obvious reasons for keeping farm accounts should be added the folowing one, at least under present conditions. Farmers seeking credit are being required to furnish an increasing amount of information. A statement of net worth as obtained from a farm account book is the basic credit statement. In addition, borrowers may be required to furnish a budget of expenses and income in order to arrive at a schedule of borrowing and repayments. Without adequate records of his farm business, the borrower cannot do himself justice or present his application in the most favourable light.

Furthermore, over a period of several years, farm account books bring out an increasing number of useful facts. The records suggest that different fields need different soil treatment. They give definite standars of performance in the use of feeds, in the production of butter-fat and other livestock products, and do much to change the yearly plans of the farmer from a matter of chance and guesswork into reasoned plans based on demonstrated facts and relationships.

INTERESTING ADDRESS ON HORTICULTURE

Representing the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Mr. John F. Clark of Toronto, delivered a very instructive address on "Gardening," in the United Church hall, Williamsburg, Wednesday night. Using exceptional y fine coloured lantern slides, the speaker carried his audience through the entire summer with flowers. Valuable hints on gardening were enumerated by Mr. Clark, including propagation of various flowers, insect and disease control, together with winter protection. A plea was made for the protection beautify their homes in order to bring about a more attractive Ontario.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS RECEIVE NO MERCY!

THE man who takes a drink when he knows he is going to drive a car is deliberately asking for trouble.

It is time for strict discipline on this . . . on mad speed . . . on all forms of road selfishness that lead to accidents.

Persons convicted of being intoxicated while in charge of a motor vehicle will receive no mercy. It is better to drive carefully than to lose your driver's license . . . perhaps permanently . . . in addition to receiving a severe court sentence.

IT IS BETTER TO BE SAFE... THAN SORRY!

ADOPT A BABY

While Moses, the most famous adopted child in history, was a boy and, the chances are, no Nordic blond, recent records of the Children's Aid Branch reveal that blue-eyed, golden haired little girls are most desired by prospective adoptive parents.

With the wide attention centred on the condition of forlorn children in shelters by Hon. David Croll's plan for "Adopt a Baby Week" in connection with the first birthday of the Dionne quintuplets, the brunettes and the boys may now get a better break. An olive skin and dark hair may flourish into a beauty as rare as Goldilocks; and no one knows the qualities of character and leadership latent in any of the lonely lads in Children's Aid shelters awaiting only development by the affection and guidance of home life.

Prefer Girls

The better chances for adoption enjoyed by girls is indicated by the record of the branch for the year ending last October 31. There were 398 girls adopted and only 310 boys. There is no analysis of the complexion or color of eyes and hair of the babies involved, but on the word of officials of the department, girls, blue-eyed, pink-cheeked and blond were the favorites.

In the matter of age, adoptions for 1934 show children between one and two years of age were the favorites. Of the total number of 703 children adopted in 1934, there were 115 born during the year 1932. The next most popular age for adoption would seem to be between two and three years—109 of the children adopted were born in 1931. Seventy-five children were born in 1933 and 16 little tots were adopted under a year old.

"Adopt a Baby Week"

Mounting public interest in the "Adopt a Baby Week" inaugurated in connection with the celebration of the first birthday of the Dionne quintuplets has roused widespread curiosity as to the initial steps to be taken by prospective adoptive parents.

"It's simplicity itself," said Hon. David Croll, Minister of Welfare. "The first thing anyone wishing to adopt a child should do is to go or write to the nearest Children's Aid Society. An application form will be provided. Both this application and the subsequent negotiations are treated in the strictest confidence.

"Of course it is the bounden duty of the societies and the department to see that children are adopted into suitable homes. This involves certain friendly and confidential enquiries. The financial stability of the prospective adoptive parents is of course considered. It is not a matter of wealth, but simply a provision that the child can be looked after. The other main considerations in these enquiries are the health and character of the adoptive parents and a decent home environment.

Naturally Harmonious

"The other side of this picture is the baby. And quite as great pains are taken to assure prospective parents as to the qualities of the child. The children are passed upon by competent baby specialists and psychologists and these opinions are available to the adoptive parents as well as all records as to background and heredity.

"The whole idea is to reach an adjustment whereby the adopted child and the new parents and home will be as mutually harmonious as possible.

"To insure that this new relationship is at least approximated, the home is visited by representatives of the aids and the department from time to time over a period. But this is not in any sense an officious 'investigation.' On the contrary, experence has shown adoptive parents are eager to talk, and as bubbling over with news of their 'child's' exploits as any proud mothers and fathers".

The next meeting will be held in South Mountain on June 24th.

ONTARIO RESTORES HOSPITAL GRANTS

Restoration of the government grant of 60 cents a day to Ontario hospitals for each indigent patient was announced on Tuesday by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, after a deputation from the Ontario Hospital Association stressed the necessity of the grant being renewed.

The former government cut the grant by 7½ p.c. and provision for the reduction was contained in this year's estimates. Dr. F.C. Routley, secretary of the association, estimated restoration of the grant would mean an increase of $300,000 in the government's contribution to hospitals.

Premier Hepburn was told the average cost of maintenance of indigent patients was $2.97 per day, and the amount paid by municipalities, supplemented by the government contribution, totalled only $1.75 a day. As a result, the hospitals lost $1.22 a day on every indigent patient.

WAR BABIES

It is almost 21 years since the Great War broke out and almost 17 years since it concluded. Yet it comes as something of a shock to read the news that France is now calling its "war babies' to the colors. There has been time for a whole new generation to come to manhood and yet the world is still suffering from the repercussions of the late war and is living in fear of another. —Sault Star.

PENALTY FOR SPEEDING

A reader sends us a clipping from an Aberdeen newspaper reporting a traffic case tried by the Reigate magistrates. A Sussex motorist was charged before them with dangerous driving. He had travelled, it was said, all speeds varying from 35 to 70 miles an hour, he took a dangerous corner at forty miles. It was brought out that in 1932 he was convicted of a similar offence, his driving license suspended for a year. The Reigate court thereupon fined him £100, disqualified him from holding a driving permit for five years. —Ottawa Journal.

CAUSES OF WAR.

Increasing populations, not armaments are the most potent cause of war, in the view of Col. Fraser Hunter, M.L.A., Toronto. The Colonel had in mind particularly the rapidly growing population of Japan, which is becoming too great for the narrow confines of the island empire. Thus it would seem that babies, not bullets, are a prime cause of war. The Colonel also takes the view that the greatest dangers to peace are economic. "Unemployment," he says, "is clearly not a national but an international problem as is the distribution of goods and service and unless our numerous conflicting policies can be reconciled we shall inevitably be fighting each other again." It is the job of an organization such as the League of Nations to reduce these irritations, but the outcome of recent disarmament and economic conferences has not been very encouraging. —Sault Star.

DENTAL CAVITIES.

The hardy cave-dwell of old never mad modern delicacies like cake, creamed chicken and ice cream. He gnawed his meat o the bone and ate unhulled grain—and, according to some modern theorists, because of that fact he had healthy teeth. However, Dr. E. B. Renaud, professor of enthropology at Denver University has been looking at the skulls of ancient cliff dwellers in Mess Verde National Park, and he finds evidence to the contrary. These old-timers, who lived on coarse, tough foods all their lives, had cavities in plenty, suffered from toothache just as we do, and also had pyorrhea.—Vancouver Sun.

AN OMINOUS WARNING.

A complaint comes from the north end of the town of hens over-running the neighbors' gardens. This is particularly annoying at this time of year, and if the hens are not kept at home something may happen to them.—Goderich Signal.

COALS OF FIRE.

I have three cacti, the long straggly kind that just will not stand anywhere without support and take up more than their share of space. So, early last winter, I carried them all up to the attic to get them out of of the way, and promptly forgot them, never watering them.

A few days ago I was searching for something in the attic and took a casual glance at the cacti. Imagine the prick of my conscience. I found every one of them loaded with buds in spite of my shameful neglect.

We hastened to make amends, and now the cacti are occupying the largest window in the house, and receive every attention. Two large red blooms are out in full, with ten more to follow, while the smaller plants have a score of buds just showing color, some white, some pink.—Letter in Woodstock-Sentinel-Review.

BROCKVILLE SHOWED WAY

The keeper of the archives at a Siberian point solved the problem of accommodating half a million old documents by selling them for waste paper, a crime almost as heinous as that committed a number of years ago, when old papers from Brockville's court house, all of them interesting and some of them valuable from the standpoint of local and provincial history, were carted off to the dump for disposal.—Brockville Recorder.

TO FIT THE CRIME.

It is suggested that there should be a law whereby anyone who addresses a stranger as "Say Mac," should be put in the stocks.—Regina Leader-Post.

USING ALL NAMES.

In order to make its court reports accurate and fair as well as more interesting, the Whig-Standard has adopted the policy pursued by most of the prominent British newspapers in regard to all court proceedings. The names and addresses of individuals or firms before the public law courts will be used in all cases without regard to the charges preferred, the cause of action or the outcome of the case.

The news of the law courts, both civil and criminal, has long been a matter of public interest, because it is only through the newspaper reports of the courts that the citizens in general are kept informed of the administration of justice in the community. The prevailing practice of using names of individuals in court reports in some circumstances and omitting them in other circumstances leads, despite the most honest intentions and diligence, to inequalities. Using all names and allowing no special circumstances to alter the practice will be absolutely fair to all concerned. Those persons who attempt to influence the newspaper to omit names, lost sight of the fact that the newspaper does not make the news, it only prints it.

The new policy of the Whig-Standard with regard to court news will apply to all police courts, county judges' courts, division courts, or sessions of the Supreme Court of Ontario anywhere in the district served by this newspaper. With the adoption of this policy people will, of course, realize that it will be useless to appeal to this paper to have names omitted from court proceedings.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

A NATIONAL THEATRE.

Lord Bessborough in closing the Dominion Drama Festival at Ottawa said he hoped the time was not far distant when Canada would have a national theatre.

During his term as Governor General rapid and consistent progress toward that goal has been made. This has been due in no small part to the sustained interest and help His Excellency has given the movement.

In addition to the discovery and development of acting talent, the movement has also encouraged Canadian playwrights, and it is much easier now to envision a distinctive Canadian type of drama than it was five years ago.—Winnipeg Tribune.

SPRING CLEANING.

The province possesses numerous antique attractions which are a source of pleasure and interest to visitors from all over the continent, and it behooves hotelkeepers throughout the province who benefit from the passage of these tourists, to do all they can to make their stay more agreeable, so that when they return home, they will advise all their friends to visit Quebec.

Not only does the necessity of spring cleaning apply to hotelkeepers. It applies to everybody in the province, whether they live in city or town, or country, since spotless houses and buildings, streets that are clear of rubbish and litter of all kinds, etc., will only serve to enhance Quebec's reputation, and result in an even larger number of tourists visiting the province in future years.—Quebec Tourist Bulletin.

WHEN HE COMES OUT

If a man has been in prison five or ten years he has become a victim of routine. He has never had to think about earning a meal or he has never had to worry about where the next meal is coming from. He gets a bath and a change of clothing on a certain day. He rises when he is supposed to and goes in when that hour comes.

On the day he walks out all this changes. He must again do something on his own initiative, and his initiative has become dulled by routine. He must work if he is going to live, and work is hard to find. He must face the handicap that he is an ex-convict and that narrows down to a small number the people who will give him a chance.

We believe the man who leaves a prison has a greater problem on his hands than the man who is in prison.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

THE EMPIRE

IN TRINIDAD ALSO.

There has hitherto been far too much laxity in regard to the use of pedal cycles by juveniles. Many parents seemed to feel that the rules of the road were all very well for motor traffic, but that their children who rode bicycles could go as they pleased. If parents and others responsible for the care of the young do not impress upon their charges the importance of observing safety rules, or will not continue this instruction in a manner to ensure its being effective, the Constabulary will soon be forced to take action against child cyclists in the interests of the safety both of the children themselves and of other road-houses. —Trinidad Guardian.

DOMESTIC SERVICE.

No fewer than 4,000 girls, it was stated recently, have entered Britain from abroad during the past two years in order to take up posts as domestic servants. Since all applications for permission for these girls to enter the country have to be made by their prospective employers, the invasion goes to emphasize the difficulty which is experienced by the housewife in obtaining domestic help near home. That, in turn, points to continued disinclination on the part of British girls to "enter service." Surely, it is time for this ridiculous attitude towards domestice service to cease? It is today, as it has always been, an honorable calling. In the eyes of any reasonable person there can be no stigma attached to those who follow it.—London Sunday Pictorial.

Repays Loan Of $100,000

Walkerville Wipes Out Indebtedness In Record Time —Five Year Plan.

Windsor—Repayment of a bank loan of $100,000 was completed by the Town of Walkerville recently, wiping out all the town's bank indebtedness on 1934 current account, Mayor Farrow announced. It is the first time in seven year's that the town has been able to accomplish this, Mayor Farrow explained.

CURRENT ACCOUNT

"Repayment of this $100,000," Mayor Farrow said, "was in keeping with the provisions of our five-year plan, which provided that bank loans on current account should be paid not later than May 1 of the year following the year in which they are incurred. Repayment of this loan places Walkerville in a position, with respect to our bankers, which we have not been able to achieve since 1928. Prior to 1928 borrowings at the end of each year to meet current expenses, were not necessary."

The $100,000 loan was contracted by the town in December of 1934 to pay interest on the town's debenture debt. Such borrowings have been necessary each year since 1928. Each year Walkerville has paid back during the course of the year the borrowings made the previous December, but the town has not previously been able to make the repayment as early as was accomplished this year, the mayor said.

SEPARATE BORROWING

These December loans, made each year to pay up the town's debenture principal and interest, are quite apart from the annual borrowings, made early in the year, to tide the town over until the taxes come in. Borrowings against the current year's taxes, prior to tax collection dates, have always been repaid during the same years.

Walkerville owes its bank approximately $275,000 on capital account—money borrowed for construction of the Pere Marquette subway. This indebtedness will eventually be taken care of as was originally intended, the sale of debentures appears to be good business.

In repaying the $100,000 loan as quickly as possible, Mayor Farrow pointed out, Walkerville is living up to the agreenment made with the bond-holders as quickly as possible, to be followed by the building up of a cash reserve against the resumption of debenture principal payments.

AUTO WAGES NEVER HIGHER

Payrolls Are Huge—Data Is Given Richberg By Alvan Macauley

Detroit—The automobile industry during the last 13 months has paid the highest hourly wage rates in its history; has increased payrolls 131 per cent. above 1932, and is paying more to labor, per car produced, than it did in 1929.

These statements are made in a letter sent by the Automobile Manufacturers Association, through its president, Alvan Macauley, to Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board.

Because of the marked shortening of working hours resuired by the industry's code, however, it has not been possible to pay weekly and annual wages approaching those of 1929, the letter declares.

Average work hours per week under the code have been cut 13 a week from the 1929 average—from 45.6 to 32.6 hours. As a result, despite higher rates and higher relative payrolls, the individual's average weekly pay envelope has contained only $24.70 during the 12 months ended in March, instead of $32.74, as in 1929. These figures were compiled from reports made by members of the industry in connection with their code.

The code sets 40 hours as the annual average permissible weekly hours, with an absolute mixmum of 48 hours for any one week. But, Mr. Macauley pointed out, any number of uncontrollable causes, including the impossibility of fully regulating the flow of materials from parts suppliers, makes it impossible for the industry to approach the allowable maximum working time.

He asserted that if the workers are to regain the weekly wage of 1929 they must be allowed to work more hours per year. Further limitation of hours only will reduce weekly pay, and greater flexibility than now obtains is needed.

Addressing himself to the proposal of a forty-hour limit which could be exceeded by paying time-and-one-half for overtime, Mr. Macauley said:

"The great mass of these automobile manufacturers could not avail themselves of the permission to employ their men for longer hours at the higher rate of pay for the simple reason that their financial condition does not permit it. To enable them to pay overtime, it would be necessary to raise the prices of the cars to the public. This would certainly bring about a reduction in sales. That in turn would mean smaller volume of employment, and, so, lower earnings for the workers."

The actual average hourly wage rate paid during the year ended March 31, 1935, was 75.7 cents. In 1929 the average was 71.2 cents.

Light After Darkness

Light after darkness, gain after loss,
Strength after weakness, crown after cross,
Sweet after bitter, hope after fears
Home after wandering, praise after tears.

Sheaves after sowing, sup after rain,
Sight after mystery, peace after pain;
Joy after sorrow, calm after blast,
Rest after weariness, sweet rest at last.

Near after distant, gleam after gloom,
Love after loneliness, life after tomb;
After long agony, rapture of bliss,
Right was the pathway leading to this.

NEW CURE FOUND FOR SEASICKNESS

Involves Holding Paper Bag Over Nose To Raise Acidity

Philadelphia.—If you get car-sick buy a bag of peanuts, throw the nuts away, and hold the bag over your nose while you breathe. It's a cure, announced recently at the American College of Physicians meetings.

Try it also on seasickness and plane sickness. Any kind of paper bag will do and it should cure these as well as car sickness under a theory of these ills described today.

The treatment was found during a study of "hypervention" of the human system described by Dr. William J. Kerr of San Francisco. Hyperventilation shows itself in the taking of big breaths and the familiar long sighs that follow. They are the body's way of regaining its alkalinity-acidity balance.

In studying the ills due to this balance Dr. Kerr found that too much alkalinity may cause convulsion like those of tetnay, and other troubles, included in this same cycle are the varying forms of seasickness. The remedy for them would be an increase in acidity. This he obtained for car sickness sufferers by increasing their breathing of carbon-dioxide. As carbon-dioxide is a natural product of the human breath, holding a paper bag over the nose effectively raised the carbon-dioxide, and acidity.

$5,300,000 Paid In Income Tax

Ottawa. — A total of $5,300,000 was received by the Income Tax Branch of the Department of National Revenue as the first day's receipts from income tax. This was approximately $2,000,000 more than the amount received on the first day's returns last year.

Millions of dollars in bank drafts are on their way to Ottawa from all parts of Canada to swell the yield from the tax on incomes.

It is anticipated by May 15 that no less than $35,000,000 wil be collected and the yield for the whole year may be double that amount.

Crash Deaths Up 44.1 P. C.

522 Killed in Ontario For 11 Months Ending With March, 1935

Toronto. — Increase of 44.1 per cent. in the number of fatalities from automobile accidents in Ontario during the 11-month period ending March 31, 1935, compared with the previous 11 minths was noted in a statement issued by Minister of Highways, T. B. McQuesten.

There were 522 persons fatally injured by motor cars in the period ending last March 31, compared with 362 persons in the previous period.

Last March was the 11th successive month in which the death total exceeded corresponding months of the previous year.

In March 1935, 31 deaths were reported. There were 613 accidents as against 538 in March 1934.

The injury total ran to 571 and property damage was estimated at $53,870. In March 1934 there were nine less persons killed, 109 fewer injured and property damage was less by $10,029.

WHEN FROGS HAVE MUSIC IN THEIR SOULS!

Calgary Herald

There is happy music these Spring days along the margins of the sloughs and ponds. In them are the brown and green musicians whom Mother Nature has endowed with tiny bagpipes to make this waterside harmony. As merry a tune it is as any Highlander ever piped among the glens of his homeland this vernal chorus of the frogs.

Piping it is, for the sound is made by inflating their little throats until they look like tiny sacks blown to the point of bursting as their mating song bubbles out in an exurbance of feeling.

Particular interest is attached to the songs of these amphibians, because as we ascend the scale of animal life frogs and toads are the first species we discover, which have a voice in the proper sense of the word — sound produced by the passage of air across the vocal chords.

Insects, such as the cricket and grasshopper, are reputed to "sing", but the term is hardly correct; "fiddling" would more aptly describe it, as their sounds are produced by the rubbing of one surface across another. But in the frog we find real voice, the beginning of the power of expression through the scale of animal articulation, which reaches its climax in human speech.

Should one approach a pond in the daytime while such a frog orchestra is practicing, the music around that particular spot will instantly cease, although all round the chorus continues. Shift location and it starts up again from the very spot one has just left.

But at night it is quite different; one can approach as closely as he will, and with the aid of a flashlight observe the two song pouches on either side of their throat dilate to produce the familiar "gallump"!

It is serious business with the frog. He may cut rather a laughable figure as with distended throat he sits in the chilly water. But after each straining of his vocal chords he closes his jewel-like eyes and his mouth for a brief moment of complete self-satisfaction. Love is stirring in his heart, and there is music in his soul!

London's Herb Garden

Lying on the Embankment, London England, but walled from prying eyes, is Chelsea's Garden of Herbs, founded by that famous old doctor, Hans Sloane. Thousands pass it daily without realizing that here lies a link with every corner of the globe, for in this walled plot grow little-known herbs culled from gleaming coral islands, far-off jungles, and the sides of precipitous tropical ranges. Eminent scholars journey to London to study the lore of such plants, and shoots and seeds are packed with care and exported to innumerable medical centres. Every plant that is tended there has some curative value.

Immediately a new medicinal herb is discovered, a specimen is sent to Chelsea, where it is nurtured. Experiments are made with seeds, roots, and bark, and its species is determined and catalogued.

If your work is distasteful, love it into shape, and keep in your mind a desire for something better and more congenial and make yourself worthy of such work when it comes your way. No matter how uncongenial your task is today, consider it a blessing that you have employment and push along to better things.

Little self-denials, little honesties, little passing words of sympathy, little nameless acts of kindness, little silent victories over favorite temptations — these are the silent threads of gold which, when woven together, gleam out so brightly in the pattern of life that God approves.—F. W. Farrar.

Imperial Veterans

The Provincial Command held a general meeting on May 1st, to appoint Provincial Committees for Welfare, Pensions, Finance, Parades, Instrument and Pipe Bands and Publicity. A congratulatory cable was sent to the King and Queen on their Silver Anniversary. Two parades have been staged this year. The Gallipoli one, which was all Imperial, and the best one the "Immortals" ever had—thanks to W. Watson, Assistant Secretary of the Eastern Zone in Toronto, and the attendance at the Provincial Parliament celebrations in Toronto, also made possible by the same chap. Repercussions from these parades reflect the need of bands, and more recognition of Imperials as an organized body by the authorities, steps being taken to remedy both of these matters now. Now that Toronto Imperials are organized and have created a Provincial and Dominion Command, a constitution also drawn up and accepted, will be printed shortly. Copies will be sent free to anyone in the province outside Toronto, who is interested in promoting growth of a solely Imperial organization, on their formal request to the Provincial Secretary, Chas. E. Marley, Imperial Veterans' Corps in Canada, at the Corps Headquarters, 453 Broadview Avenue, Toronto. The Royal Coat-of-Arms Corps Badge will soon be available also.

Toronto Zone news reports a general meeting of the Western to be held at St. Julien Hall, 1330 Bloor St. W., on 15th inst, and the recently elected officers for 1935 as follows: B. Feist, president; W. G. Stevens, vice-president; W. Armstrong, recording secretary; G. Horton, financial secretary; W. Bailey, honorary treasurer, and S. Gilchrist and H. Huggett as Sergeant-at-Arms, and organizing secretary has still to be appointed.

Central will have a bi-monthly general meeting at Cumberland Hall, 3 Cumberland Street, 1 north of Bloor, on Tuesday, 14th inst, and on Friday. 17th inst, a concert and dance in the same hall. The Northern are throwing a social benefit Scotch night for the Eastern, at the former's clubhouse, 1315 Yonge St., on Friday, 10th inst, and hold their bi-monthly general meeting on Thursday, 16th inst. The Eastern will hold their Thursday social night on 16th inst also. Card games being the main activity on such nights, at the clubhouse on 453 Broadview. Let's mingle and multiply, boys.

POTATOES FOR STARCH URGED

Premier Tilley Complains Of Research Group's Attitude

St. John, N.B. — Protesting against what he turned a discouraging attitude taken by Dr. G. S. Whitby, chairman of the potato research committee, towards potato starch development in Canada, Premier L. P. D. Tilley of New Brunswick announced recently he had asked Hon. R. B. Hanson, minister of trade and commerce, to look into the matter.

"I have asked Minister Hanson to take this matter up because it seems to be a move to influence the public against potato starch development," the premier said.

He stated that New Brunswick with extensive potato - growing areas is vitally interested in Canadian manufacture of potato starch.

Dr. Harold Hibbert, industrial chemist at McGill University, stated a short time ago there was not a single product now made from corn starch that could not be made from potato starch, the premier added.

Dr. Whitby is head of a joint committee appointed by the federal department of agriculture and the national research council to find new uses for Canadian potatoes.

Applying Fertilizer Varies With Variety

In experiments that have been conducted in Eastern and Western Canada for several years by the Division of Field Husbandry, Dominion Experimental Farms concerning methods of application of commercial fertilizers, with particular regard to the placement of fertilizer in relation to seeds, it has been demonstrated that for wheat, oats and barley more economical yields may be obtained by applying commercial fertilizer directly in contact with, or slightly below, the seed than by applying it broadcast.

In certain crops, the germination of the seed is checked and in some cases completely ruined by contact with commercial fertilizer. While this does not apply to wheat, oats and barley, it is not advisable to seed corn in contact. The fertilizer should be applied in bands about two inches to the side and slightly below or level with the seed.

In the case of peas, the fertilizer should be separated slightly from the seed, preferably below the seed with one-half inch of soil between.

Good results have been obtained with fertilizer or potatoes, both broadcast and in drill or row. It is recommended, however, to apply fertilizer in bands at either side of the row and level with, or slightly below the sets or seed.

"For A Rainy Day"

According to a despatch from Ottawa, the supply of the new Canadian silver dollar is not to be limited. A new output is to be minted immediately to meet the demand. The original issue of 100,000 coins was early acquired by eager citizens, and the feeling has developed that the silver dollar would become a collector's coin.

It seems that thousands of people who wish to retain souvenirs to mark special events exchanged ordinary currency for the silver coins with the intention of putting them away as mementoes of the King's Silver Jubilee. Countless others who do not yet possess the novelty will be pleased to learn that they will shortly have the opportunity of doing so.

Maybe it would be a good stunt for some of us to put a dollar aside "for a rainy day." If we don't have to spend t, we can some time show it to our grandchildren as a lesson in British history, and Canadian thrift.—Border City Star.

City Life At Sea

Pictures of the interior of the new French liner Normandie which will start on her maiden voyage to New York next month show that the apartments and public rooms look the same as the apartments and public rooms of city dwellings and big hotels. The Normandie has penthouses, bowling alleys, gardens, a church, theatre, shopping arcade, and, of course, several swimming pools. The accommodation in the Queen Mary will be very similar.

The directors of the French line claim that city dwellers boarding the Normandie will not know any difference in their mode of living from being at home. There will be telephones in every room, elevators, a newspaper, stock market board room and everything else that could be thought of.

All that is very wonderful, but isn't it rather taking the pleasure out of an ocean voyage? Not to know you are at sea unless you look out of the window, or over the side, seems to destroy the value of being at sea at all. Probably it is becaue people like to feel they are at sea that the medium-sized liners, which are not quite so much "citified," are full when the biggest ships are running with half or two-thirds of their suites and rooms booked.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Gardening

By Gordon L. Smith

An open position sloping towards the south or east and well drained loam makes the best garden. Of course it is impossible to secure these ideal conditions, and Canada is fortunate in possessing a climate which will produce good vegetables on almost any kind of soil. If possible an exposure towards the south or east should be arranged since the sun is supposed to be the best for encouraging growth. But with soil, any kind can be built up to meet the ideal of a loose loam. Sand is better than clay because the former is warmer and it also gives quicker returns from fertilizer. It should be made to retain moisture, and to do this plenty of humus, or rotted vegetable manure must be incorporated. Digging in strawy manure, green crops of oats, clover or even weeds, will prove a wonderful help both to sandy and clay soils, especially after this additional material has rotted. If the clay is very heavy, and the garden area small, sand or ashes can be added. Drainage is essential. Well rotted barn yard manure is the best fertilizer, but of course is not always obtainable and it is sometimes objectionable. Commercial, chemical fertilizer will take its place.

Under perennial screens there are all sorts of shrubs grown for both foliage and flowers, ornamental trees and herbaceous perennials which will come up from the ground year after year. Where screening is wanted both winter as well as summer, evergreens should be chosen. Of the vines there are the Virginia Creepers, some of which will cling without support, Dutchman's Pipe, Boston Ivy, Trumpet Vine, Clematis and others.

New gardeners should guard against planting too deep. Very fine seed like that of the poppy and alyssum, for instance, is best mixed with a little dry sand and the mixture sown. With small seed merely pressing into finely prepared soil will be sufficient. The general rule is to sow to a depth of three times the diameter of the seed. This will mean pressing in most flowers and vegetable seeds, except things like Beans, Nasturtiums, Peas, Corn and Squash, which are large and should be covered about an inch and a half deep. Bulbs or corms, like the Dahlia, Gladiolus and potatoes may be put down quite a piece, from four inches to a foot.

6 MEN HAVE JOB KEEPING U.S. SENATORS' ENGLISH PURE

WASHINGTON—When a senator says "Ain't"—and it appears some of them have been known to—it appears in the Congressional Record as "are not."

Prettying up the grammar of the senators is one task of six of the best shorthand reporters in the nation, who record the torrent of words in senatorial debate.

The six reporters, headed by James W. Murphy and Percy E. Budlong, are only beginning their duties when they feverishly scratch pothooks in their notebooks.

With an average experience of 25 years behind them, they take 12-minute turns in note takeing on the Senate floor. Then they hasten to their headquarters in a room nearby and dictate the remarks they have just heard.

Cylinder recordings of their dictation are "played" slowly to a staff of five typists, who turn out rough drafts, quadruple-spaced to permit correction and interlining.

Then the "reporter" becomes what newspapermen call a "copy reader". With pen and ink, he corrects typographical errors, grammatical slips, and "obvious" errors of fact.

Walls of the room are lined with reference volumes which he consults frequently. He checks on the accuracy of poetical and Biblical quotations, proper names and dates, makes sure that the senator isn't quoted as saying something occurred in the Civil War when it actually occurred in the Revolutionary War.

"We are especially careful of the names of towns and cities," Budlong explained. "A senator once used the town of Portal, Washington, in a speech. I made it Portland, and of course, there was a complaint.

But in correcting and clarifying, the reporters are careful to preserve a senator's oratorical style.

Dollars And Love

"Couple Who Haggles Over Money Not Much in Love," says Dorothy Dix. And we suppose, a couple who spend too much time talking about their "love" will never have much money. Love may make happiness, but it takes beefsteak and bacon and beans, and such like to get one into a frame of mind akin to their great accomplishment. There's not much love wasted on a man by a family if he doesn't supply them with the necessities of life.—Durham Chronicle.

Street Car Speed Up Accidents Decreased

Toronto—Despite a 12 per cent. increase in the travelling speed of street cars since the T.T.C. assumed control of the tramway system in 1921, the number of accidents involving street cars has been reduced by 44 per cent. since 1922, according to statistics published in the current issue of "The Coupler," T.T.C. news journal. A 10 per cent. reduction in the volume of accidents was effected during the past four years, it is shown by the survey, which is based on the number of accidents recorded per million car miles.

WAS CONSTIPATED FOR 30 YEARS

Woman's Long Search For a Remedy

The trouble with most remedies for constipation, as this woman found, is that they give only temporary relief. Having at last found a permanent corrective, she writes to tell us about it:—

"For upwards of 30 years I was a victim of acute constipation. I tried practicallly everything that it was possible to try. I admit I was a chronic case, and every new remedy I tried helped for a day or two—after that I was just as bad as ever. Three months ago I took my first taste of Kruschen Salts, and every morning since, and every morning so long as I live, my first daty upon rising is my Kruschen. I honestly feel a different woman. My bowels act to the clock, and my friends remark how well I am looking. My only regret is that I didn't try Kruschen years ago."—(Mrs.) A. M.

Kruschen Salts is Nature's recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your system is thus kept clear of those impurities which, allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

U.S. Potato Tariff Not To Be Changed

Washington—The Maine Congressional delegation was assured by President Roosevelt that the proposed Canadian trade agreement would contain no reduction in the present tariff on potatoes.

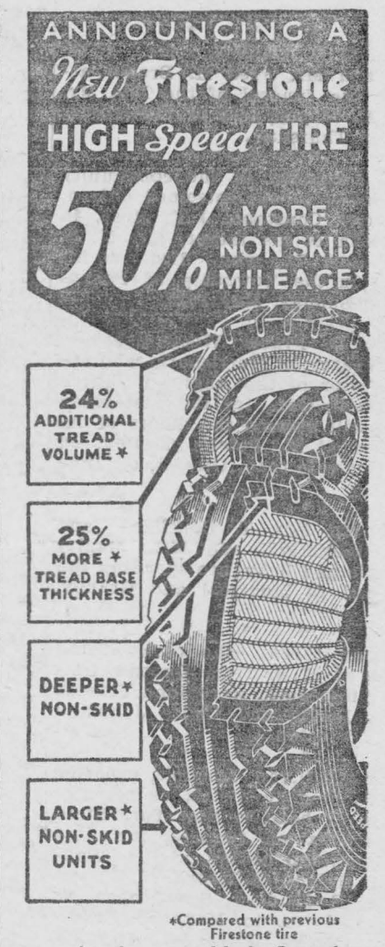

Governor Louis Brann, who conferred with the President together with the entire Maine delegation and with five spokesmen for the Maine textile interests, said their entire conference was devoted to discussion of the proposed Canadian treaty. He would not say if the President had made any statements regarding tariffs on products other than on potatoes.

Mr. Eugene Rose, traffic officer, had a somewhat unusual experience while discharging his duties on Saturday evening last. The officer was in the act of warning a motorist having only one front light, and had parked his motorcycle along the roadside, when another car, driven by Victor Clavette, of Cornwall, crashed into the motorcycle, completely demolishing the machine. Clavette claimed he did not see the light on the motorcycle. He also failed to take notice of the officer, who with a flashlight gave him the signal to stop as he approached the machine.

The Morrisburg Driving Club announce their first horse races of the season, to be held in Morrisburg on Monday, June 3rd. Purses include: Free-for-all, $100; 2.25 class $100 and Colt Race $30.00. Among the added attractions will be a softball game between Cardinal and Morrisburg Ferry, of the Junior St. Lawrence League. Many outstanding horses have already made application for entry, and this track, after its recent repairs, is equal to the best in Eastern Ontario. Should the weather prove favorable, it is anticipated the attendance will be equal to that of similar meetings held in Morrisburg in former years.

MR. GARNET GEO. HUTT

The tragic death of Mr. Garnet George Hutt, which occurred on Sunday morning, May 19th, has caused much sorrow to his relatives and friends. Mr. Hutt, who was walking east on the Canadian National Railway, with a basket in his hand on Sunday last, was seen to drop the basket and fall across the rails, just as the westbound train approached. The engineer, being unaware of what had happened, did not learn of Mr. Hutt's death until the train reached Brockville.

Mr. Hutt was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hutt. He was born in Matilda Township in 1880, and spent the early part of his life in his native township. Eighteen years ago he moved to Morrisburg, and has been an employee of the Canadian National Railway for the last fifteen years. In 1904 he was united in marriage to Miss Elda Mattice, who survives. He is also survived by two daughters, Mrs. Dan Barton of Almonte, and Mrs. Geo. Moulton of Cardinal; and four sons, Isadore, Beaumont, Sparling and Dwane, all at home. Four sisters and three brothers also survive, namely Mrs. J. Duvall, Morrisburg, Mrs. Archie McDonald, Watertown, Mrs. Jas. LaPierre, Brinston and Mrs. Hattie LaPierre, Morrisburg; Mr. Ranson Hutt, Morrisburg, Mr. Frank Hutt, Winchester Springs, and Mr. Elmer Hutt, Brockville.

Another sister, Mrs. Alex Smith, predeceased him one year ago.

The funeral service was held at St. James Anglican Church on Tuesday, Rev. Mr. Holmes conducting the service, after which the remains were placed in St. James cemetery.

Floral offerings were received from the following: Mrs. Hutt, Sparling, Dwane and Mr. and Mrs. Beaumont Hutt; Mr. and Mrs. E. Hutt and Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Charland, Brockville; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Barton, Almonte; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Robbertson, Winchester; C.N.R. section employees, Morrisburg and Iroquois; Alga, Isabel, Claud and Oliver Woods; Mr. Rance Hutt and family; Mr. and Mrs. J.A. Mattice, Richville, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Mattice, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Matttice, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mattice, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mattice, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Mattice; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. The couple left by motor for a trip to the States, and on their return will reside in Toronto.

The bride was charmingly gowned in aqua blue chiffon crepe. She wore grey shoes, hat and other accessories. Miss Winnie Duvall, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and chose green crepe for her costume, with matching shoes and hat. Mr. Hubert Duvall was groomsman.

Following the ceremony, a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's parents. The following out-of-town guests attended: Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Duvall and daughter Dorothy, Mr. and Mrs. Matt Thompson, of Brockville; Miss Betty Clark, Cornwall.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear mother, who departed this life May 20th, 1930.

May brings back sad memories
Of a loved one laid to rest,
Long, long nights she bore her pain,
In want of cure, but all in vain.
But God Himself alone knew best,
He took her home and gave her rest.
Deep in my heart is a picture,
Worth more than silver or gold,
It's a picture of you, dear 'Mother.'
Who in memory will never grow old.

Sadly missed by her daughter,
Mrs. Kemp. Beckstead.
