Mrs. George Long, of Albany, Former Chesterville Girl, And Husband Killed in Motor Accident on Sunday

Relatives Left Monday to Attend Funeral Which Was Held Yesterday

Mr. Simeon Droppo and his family were cast into the deepest grief Monday morning when they were advised by wire from Mrs. Albert Hooks, formerly Ethel Droppo, that her sister, Linda, and the latter's husband, Mr. George Long, of Albany, N. Y., had been killed on Sunday in an automobile accident. There were no particulars of the accident given nor have any been received here since. Immediately on receipt of the news Mr. Sim Droppo, Mr. and Mrs. Alf Jarvis and other relatives left for Oneonta, N. Y., the home of Mrs. Albert Hooks, from where the funeral was to be held Wednesday morning. None of the relatives have yet returned home with the particulars of how the accident occurred.

Mr. and Mrs. Long were married in Oneonta three or four years ago and but recently moved to Albany. Mrs. Long visited her home and other members of the family here for several weeks during the summer, having but recently returned to her home in Albany.

Purtelle---Clement

St. Mary's Church, Chesterville, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Monday morning, October 12th, when Miss Isabella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clement, was married to Mr. Robert J. Purtelle, a prominent resident of Picton, Ont.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Keaney, and preceded the nuptial mass. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, played by the organist, Sister Mary Lourdes, and proceeded to the altar where the groom awaited her.

The bride was gracefully attired in pink blue georgette with lace coat, and hat of navy blue. She carried a bouquet of pink Rapture roses.

The couple were unattended. A dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, the happy couple leaving later by motor for Montreal. The bride's travelling suit was a fashionable model of brown crepe with touches of rose, with coat of broadcloth trimmed with Jeanette fox and hat with ostrich feathers.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Purtelle will reside in Picton.

Sunday, November 8th, special services will be held in Chesterville United Church when Mr. W. H. Goodwin, of Montreal, will be the speaker, followed on Monday evening by a supper and sacred concert under the auspices of the men of the congregation when Mr. Goodwin will also be the speaker.

Hand Injured in Wriuger

Monday last Mrs. Frank Merkley, Queen street, met with a rather unfortunate mishap when operating the family washing machine. As she was in conversation with Mrs. Sharkey, a neighbour, her right hand became caught between the rolls of the electric wringer and was quickly drawn in, badly bruising her hand and laying the bone bare between the second and third joints of the index finger before the machine could be stopped.

Fifty Years Married Finch Couple Celebrate

Surrounded by all the members of the family and a large number of friends, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Empey, of Finch, on Saturday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Empey, both of whom were natives of the district, are in splendid health and look forward to many future anniversaries.

Guy Empey, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Empey, of Finch district, and Adelaide Eligh, Finch, were married on October 17th 1881, the briesmaid being Miss Annis Empey, and the groomsman, J. S. Pollock. The officiating clergyman was the late Rev. G. C Poyser, Methodist minister.

Mr. and Mrs. Empey were for many years residents of a farm north of Finch village but of late have lived in town. They have two daughters and two sons and six grandchildren, all of whom are living.

Mr .and Mrs. Empey were the recipients of many beautiful gifts and hearty congratulations, the home being tastefully decorated with many bouquets of roses and Autumn flowers.

During the day many vocal and instrumental selections were rendered.

Mountain Twp. Barn Burned With Many Pure Bred Cattle

Fire of unknown origin destroyed the barns, milk house and hen house of Floyd Riddell, about three miles west of Winchester, Tuesday morning at three o'clock.

The barns were built about two yeas ago after Mr. Riddell's first barn had been burned.

It was the most modern and best equipped building of its kind in the county of Dundas; was electrically equipped throughout; had running water and was furnished with the latest implements and accessories.

The inside of the stable was finished with matched lumber, painted with white enamel.

Forty-three head of pure bred registered Ayrshires were burned to death and four horses, as no one was able to enter the barn due to the intense heat. A large number of hens were also burned to death as efforts to save the hen house were in vain.

The structure was filled to capacity with hay, while several hundred bushels of grain, along with many pieces of machinery ,which were stored on the floor and near the barn, were also destroyed.

Happening to awake, Mr. Riddell saw the barn in flames from his bedroom window. He at once called for help from his neighbours and a bucket brigade was formed but the fire gained too great a headway. Then all efforts were turned to saving the milk house and hen house but due to strong wind and intense heat their efforts were in vain.

Mr. Riddell estimates his loss at $12,000 partially covered by insurance.

Cars Crash on New Road

Saturday last Miss Helen Robinson's auto was considerably damaged when struck by another car on the cement portion of Highway 31 about a mile north of Winchester, when she had accompanying her Mrs. Carmen McIntosh and her two daughters and Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. McIntosh's mother, of Winchester Springs, none of whom were seriously injured although Mrs. Henderson received a slight bruise. As they were proceeding north on their way to Ottawa, a car coming from the opposite direction dropped off the cement on to the soft shoulder of the road as it approached Miss Robinson, and when the driver swung quickly back on to the cement his car shot across and struck her car. Constable Helmer, of Winchester, investigated the accident and found that Miss Robinson was not at fault.

Two Barns and Contents Near Berwick Burned

Fire from an unknown cause broke out in the barn of Carmel Smirle, one-half mile north of Berwick Tuesday and completely destroyed two frame barns, a shed, 90 tons of hay, 10 loads of sheaf oats and 600 bushels of threshed oats.

The loss is estimated at $6,000 with insurance of $1,800. Mr. Smirle and family were eating their mid-day meal, when a traveller who was passing on the road, some 20 feet from their home, stopped his car and informed Mr. Smirle that there was a fire in his barn, as smoke was gushing out of the westerly side.

Mr. Smirle left his meal and sent an immediate call for help. This, along with the fire engine of Finch village, succeeded in saving the house but could do nothing toward putting the fire out in the barns and shed, which was well fanned by a south-westerly wind.
strong south-westerly wind.

McMartin---Barkley

A very pretty autumn wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, October 21st, at high noon at the home of A. N. Barkley, Elma, when Miss Hilda Edith Barkley was united in marriage to Mr. William Donald McMartin, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. McMartin, of Chesterville, Rev. Mr. Morrison officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was becomingly attired in a blue georgette gown trimmed with radium lace, with slippers to match. She carried a shower bouquet of Sweetheart roses and Lilies of the Valley.

The bridesmaid, Miss Helen Barkley, twin sister of the bride, wore a gown of brown crepe-back satin with shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of Baby Mums. The bridegroom was attended by his cousin, Mr. Dalton Henry, of Berwick. The bridal party stood under an arch of evergreens and autumn leaves.

The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. Morrison. During the signing of the register, Miss Alice Beckstead sang very effectively "My Happy Day," Mrs. Morrison playing the accompaniment.

The wedding dinner was served to about thirty-five guests at the bride's home, which was attractively decorated. Mrs. Graham McPherson and the Misses Pearl McMillan, Stella Herriman and Gertrude Barkley assisted in the serving.

Amidst showers of confetti and the best wishes of their many friends, the happy couple left for a motor trip to Toronto, Niagara and western points.

The groom's gift to the bride was an "Aeropack" wardro-box, to the bridesmaid a gold vanity case, to the soloist a silver jewel-box, and to the pianist a jardinier. The bride's gift to the groom was a pair of gold cufflinks.

Guests from a distance were: Mrs. Benton and son James, of Maxwell; Mrs. Henry and son Dalton, of Berwick; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth MacDonald and family, of Winchester; Mrs. Hodgson and Mr. E. G. Brownell, of Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Kyle and family, of Colquhoun.

Still at It!

Meeting the local doctor, Brown inquired: "How is the lawyer going on, doctor?"

"Poor fellow!" returned the medico, with a shake of the head, "he's lying at death's door."

"There's grit for you," commented Brown, "at death's door—and still lying!"

Glasses for 'In-Between'

You don't drive a golf ball at twenty feet from your eyes, nor at twelve inches. Yet your bi-focal glasses are focused at these distances.

You don't climb over the bridge table to see the cards, nor gaze at them from across the room. Yet your bi-focal glasses are focused for this sort of work.

We are not content with the ordinary examination that stops at these extremes. We believe that glasses should be adapted to all the jobs of the eye and should focus sharply on the work at hand—whatever that work may be. Let us make an occupational analysis of your eyes and prescribe glasses for your various eye-jobs.

Little Girl Struck by Auto

Monday afternoon as a stream of automobiles was returning to town from the Doering Stock Farm sale, little Gwennie Elliott, four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Elliott, South Main street, was struck and severely bruised and cut but fortunately without broken bones. She had evidently been playing with her dog and as the latter ran across the street she started out in pursuit and ran in front of the car, the driver of which could not stop in time to avoid striking the child. The little girl was badly bruised on the chest and back with cuts on the face and the back of the head.

Liquor Permits Ready

"Don't buy a permit unless you can afford it," is the advice furnished by Sir Henry Drayton, chairman of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, in announcing that liquor permits for 1932 will be available on Monday, October 26th.

Many municipalities and relief organizations have adopted the ruling that those who require relief and are in possession of liquor permits must surrender the permit for cancellation or safe keeping until the applicants become self-supporting, says Sir Henry.

$1,000 Fire Loss In Morrisburg Blaze

The repair and storage departments of Fetterly's Limited, Morrisburg car dealers, and several adjoining buildings were damaged by fire of unknown origin early Sunday morning to the extent of more tnan $1,000, the loss being partly covered by insurance.

The alarm sounded shortly after midnight, and in a few minutes many volunteer fire fighters were at hand, who got the blaze under control, preventing damage to the larger and more important sections of the buildings.

The contents of the buildings were saved, with the exception of some tools and battery equipment in the repair department of Fetterly's Limited. A shed belonging to Mrs. D. Becktead also was considerably damaged.

Ontario Village Recalls Thos. A. Edison As a Boy

St. Thomas, Oct. 21.—The death of Thomas Edison famed inventor, is of particular moment to a number of his relatives in this district.

Edison's boyhood home still stands as a landmark on the banks of the Otter River, 25 miles east of St. Thomas, in the little village of Vienna.

It was to this triving little lumbering town that Edison's family fled when their lands, on Manhattan Island, were confiscated along with those of other United Empire Loyalists. The Edisons owned 800 acres of rich valley soil in East Elgin, and it was here that Thomas Edison as a boy roamed the picturesque countryside, had his boyhood dreams, learned to swim and built up a rugged constitution that death had taken so long to wear down.

Edison's chief companion in those days was Oscar Edison, his uncle, head of the present Vienna family which still occupies the ancient homestead. Oscar Edison was the youngest of a large family, and was not so much older in years than Thomas.

The future inventor was delicate in health in those days. He did not go to school early, but his mother was Nancy Elliott a school teacher who undertook to teach the young Thomas.

Many stories are told of Thomas Edison's early life in this district. He was always tinkering, experimenting with something. One of his first jobs was that of a train news agent, but one day the water dried off a bottle of phosphorus he had in the car with him, and it set the car on fire, costing him that job.

In Port Huron, it is said, he joined his father's printing house, but some man became offended at an article he wrote and threw him into the river, ending his career as a reporter.

While still in Port Huron he and a companion are said to have experimented in the generation of electricity, making use of two cats which were rubbed vigorously together, but the cats objected so strenuously that the experiment had to be abandoned. At Fort Gratiot, Mich., where he was visiting relatives, he became incensed at one of the men who told ghost stories, so he wired the chair and succeeded in giving the story-teller a real shock as he approached the climax of a story.

His relatives at Vienna have many keepsakes by which they treasure the memory of the old inventor.

Payne Valley

Mr. and Mrs. Hughie D. McMillan and Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Cameron spent Sunday with friends at Chute au Blandeau and other points.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McMillan, of Beachburg, spent the past week with Mr. Donald McMillan and daughter, and Mr. and Mrs. James McMillan and other friends.

Miss Rose Cameron, of Prescott, spent Monday with Mrs. Kennie Cameron.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Eligh spent Thanksgiving with Mr .and Mrs. Elburn Shaver, Finch.

Mr. and Mrs. George Eligh spent Friday with Miss Marguerite Duval and Mr. Charlie Steen, Newington.

Mr. and Mrs. George Eligh attended the fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of the former's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Empey, Finch, on Saturday, October 17th.

Miss Esther Cameron, from up North, teacher, spent Thanksgiving and the week end at her home here, Mr. Kennie Cameron's.

Callers at Mr. George Eligh's last week were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hough and children, Rush City; Mr. and Mrs. Mernie Empey and son Cyril and Mrs. Phil Empey, Finch; Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacIntosh and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Shaver and Mr. Duncan MacIntyre.

Mr. and Mrs. George Eligh ,accompanied by Mr. Leslie Stephenson, of Cornwall, spent Sunday with their daughter at Brockville, who is a patient in the hospital there, and found her recovering nicely. All hope for a speedy recovery.

Quite a number from here attended the funeral of Mrs. John Markell at Newington on Saturday.

"The average woman wears better than the average man," says a writer. But not so much.

KING OF PIES PIE OF KINGS

By Etta Bitta Pye

PIES COME—pies go—but when all is said and done, the apple pie remains the monarch of all the pastry it surveys. Perhaps it is nutmeg that you favour when it comes to spicing—and very good it is; some people are very fond of it with a touch of grated lemon rind or a dash of juice. Don't hesitate to substitute them for cinnamon, if it appeals. And this way of teaming up cheese and apple pie—you will fancy it for a change.

Apple Pie

Pastry
4 to 6 tart apples
¾ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter

Pare, core and slice the apples. Line a deep pie pan with pastry, spread a layer of apples over the bottom, sprinkle with a mixture of the sugar, cinnamon and salt, dot with butter, and repeat until all are used. Add the top sheet of pastry. Put the pie in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 10 minutes, lower the temperature to more moderate heat (375 degrees F.), and bake the pie for 30 to 35 minutes, or until the apples are tender and the crust is golden brown.

Pie With Melted Cheese

After an apple pie is baked, lay thin slices of cheese or grated cheese over the top, and put in a very moderate oven (325 degrees F.) until the cheese is melted. Serve at once while the cheese is warm. Either a freshly-baked or a cold pie may be prepared in this way.

Apple Turnovers

Roll out pastry dough into rounds about the size of a large saucer. On one-half of the pastry round, arrange layers of thinly-sliced apples, sprinkle with a mixture of sugar, cinnamon, and a little salt, and dot with butter. Moisten the lower rim of the pastry, bring the other part over it, press the two edges firmly together with the tines of a fork, and prick the top crust so the steam can escape. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees to 400 degrees F.) for about 20 minutes, or until the apples are tender.

SHEEP AS A SIDE LINE

Experimental Farms Note

ALTHOUGH there is no apparent relief in sight for the general depression in agricultural conditions, farmers are naturally looking for ways and means of improving these conditions. A few sheep as a side line on many farms would not only bring in some casual revenue from both wool and meat, and provide the household with delicious lamb and mutton, but in most cases would earn their board as a scavenger of weeds and rough forage crops.

The investment incident to establishing a small flock is relatively small compared with the amount and rapidity of the returns. A few good grade ewes can be obtained in the fall and bred to a good sire, preferably one of the Down breeds that combine early maturity and deep fleshing to a high degree. At the Windermere Experimental Station the Hampshire breed has given excellent results either as a pure breed or when crossed with grade ewes. The Hampshire, as a breed, is gaining rapidly in favour. The ewes should be bred from October to December, depending upon when the farmer can best handle the young. The gestation period is approximately five months, and from data gathered at the station, the average increase has been from 170 to 175 per cent, and around 150 per cent increase has been raised.

As previously intimated, sheep are unsurpased as scavengers of weeds. There are few varieties that they will not consume, while some of the worst weed pests, such as sow thistle, are eaten with relish. They will pick up a living around summer-fallow and stubbles, and will make economical returns from otherwise waste products. They will help to diversify the products of the farm, utilize rough forage, reduce the weed menace and enrich the land.

U. S. CATTLE BUYERS BENEFIT BY EXCHANGE

WITH the Canadian dollar quoted at .88 on New York, United States cattle buyers are coming north again to buy dairy and feeder stock. The advantage the present depression in Canadian funds affords just a little more than offsets the U. S. tariff barrier which has kept them at home for some time past. A buyer came to Ottawa the week of October 1st looking for dairy cattle and presented a letter of credit for $1,500 for which he was given a deposit account of $1,650, according to one of the leading buyers. This situation provides an attractive new outlet for Canadian producers as the Canadian dollar has full value here, and the United States buyer is again able to do business. The present prospect is that a considerable demand for Canadian livestock will develop.

News and Information For the Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Buy Clover Seed Now

Farmers anticipating the purchase of clover and alfalfa seeds, would be well advised to do so now. The situation is that there are many Ontario growers who are in need of ready cash, and who will accept sacrifice prices. Obviously, then, this would seem to be the time to buy clover seed, rather than wait till spring when prices may be considerably higher.

In the purchase and sale of small seeds, the Dominion Seed Act requires that such seeds must be sold by grade. The Dominion Seed Branch will examine samples free of charge.

Titular Horseshoe Pitching

A climax for horseshoe pitching this season will be reached in the Dominion championship contests at the Royal Winter Fair, Toronto, Nov. 24, 25, and 26. Players eliminated in the championship series will have a second chance for honours in the consolation singles and doubles. Ontario doubles championship ,open to winning teams at county and rural fairs in 1931, will be run off at the Royal at the same time. Teams in this contest will represent one rural fair only. Where a team has won at several fairs, the runners-up will be eligible for the final contest. The fees will be one dollar for each team. They must accompany entries, which should be in the hands of A. P. Westervelt, Manager of the Fair, Toronto, by November 6th.

British Apple Market

Not for many years have Ontario apples commanded such excellent prices on the British market, and this year a greater quantity of apples will be sent overseas than ever before, Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, declares. Cold storage, grading and careful packing have resulted in the selling of Ontario apples on the British market for from two to four shillings a barrel more than the Virginia apples and from four to eight shillings a barrel more than the product of Nova Scotia. "This year Ontario will produce 750,000 barrels of apples for commercial purposes, not including the apples sold in boxes, hampers, and in other forms," states Hon. Mr. Kennedy. "Of this amount about 250,000 barrels will go to the British market, as compared with only 87,000 barrels last year. Ontario's apple crop this year is the finest in the province's history." Due credit for the splendid showing in Britain is also given to Mr. Andrew Fulton, fruit growers' representative overseas.

A Prolific Apple Tree

An apple tree that will give 24 barrels of first-class apples this year is the pride of Kenneth Cameron of Lucknow, who has one of the finest orchards in Western Ontario. It is a Spy tree and Mr. Cameron's favourite in his 300-tree orchard. In the past 13 years it has produced 193 barrels of saleable apples and is to-day a splendid, healthy specimen of the Spy variety. Mr. Cameron, one of the ardent orchardists in Western Ontario, sprays his trees five times a year, and cuts the grass in his orchard for a mulch. He uses more than 1,500 props to hold up the limbs of his profit-making trees, and finds his markets chiefly in Montreal and in latter years to some extent in the British Isles. His orchard contains Baldwins, Spies, Ben Davis, Manns, Wolf Rivers and Russets.

Ploughing Match Dates

J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent, announces the following ploughing match dates: Lincoln County, at Caistor, Nov. 5th; Eramosa Tp., Nov. 4th; Frontenac Co., at Kingston, Oct. 28th; Haldimand, at Hagersville, Oct. 29th; Halton, at Milton, Oct. 30th; South Huron, at Exeter Oct. 23rd; South Perth, at Mount Pleasant, Oct. 27th; Muskoka, at Bracebridge, Oct. 23rd; Norfolk at Langton, Oct. 28th; Waterloo Co., at North Dumfries, on Oct. 23rd; South Ontario, at Claremont, Oct. 28th; Peel County, at Brampton, Oct. 23rd; Perth County, at Stratford, Oct. 23rd; Six Nations at Ohsweken, Oct. 31st; Sullivan Tp., Grey County, Oct. 23rd; Wellesley Tp., at Croshill, Oct. 27th; York East at Agincourt, Nov. 4th.

R. O. P. Poultry

With over two months to go, entries in Record of Performance for poultry are reported by R. W. Zavitz, supervisor at Ottawa, to be well up to last year, with every prospect of a substantial increase.

The final day for receiving entries is November 30th, but in view of the fact that production records can only start one month following the receipt of the entry at Ottawa, farmers and poultrymen who want to get the full benefit of the record year should have their entries in the hands of the supervisor not later than October 31st.

Anyone who has the time ,inclination and ability to undertake poultry breeding work will find Record of Performance one of the best ways in which to get established on a sound basis. The records kept are simple and practical, and are accepted for the issue of certificates to those hens which lav the required minimum number of eggs to qualify. In addition to this the visits of staff inspectors at regular intervals provide a source of information and advice always available to the breeder, which is helpful in carrying on the work for best results, and is really worth many times the cost of the nominal entry fee.

Grain Show Postponed

Owing to general conditions in Western Canada, the world's grain exhibition which was to have been held in Regina in 1932, has been postponed until 1933. The decision was announced by Hon. Robert Weir, chairman of the committee, only after mature deliberation had been given every angle of the situation. More than two score countries had promised to take part in the show, for which plans had been started two years ago. Exhibits of all varieties of grain had been promised by many European countries, from Asiatic countries, Australia and New Zealand, the United States, and all provinces of Canada.

An Ideal Fall

Ontario has experienced an unusually mild and pleasant fall. Farmers have benefitted by being well advanced with their fall work. Improvement in pasturage, due to warm weather and rain, is reflected in improved condition of cattle and other live stock. An excellent crop of turnips, mangels and sugar beets is being harvested. Mangels, particularly, are of high quality. Fall ploughing has been practically completed. Fall wheat is looking exceptionally well. Late potatoes are a heavy crop, of good quality, but the market so far is very disappointing.

The Potato Situation

The delegates at the recent Potato Growers' Conference came to the conclusion that the potato situation can be cleaned up providing there is combined effort on the part of the producer, trade, and the consumer, as follows:

"That the producer send to market only the high grade portion of his crop." The quality of this year's crop averages very high, so the amount of potatoes left on the farm would not constitutes a grave hardship to the farmer.

"That the trade feature Ontario grade potatoes exclusively until such time as our home-grown crop is exhausted." With the ungraded potatoes left on the farm, the dealer will be able to serve his customers with potatoes of a quality which leaves nothing to be desired.

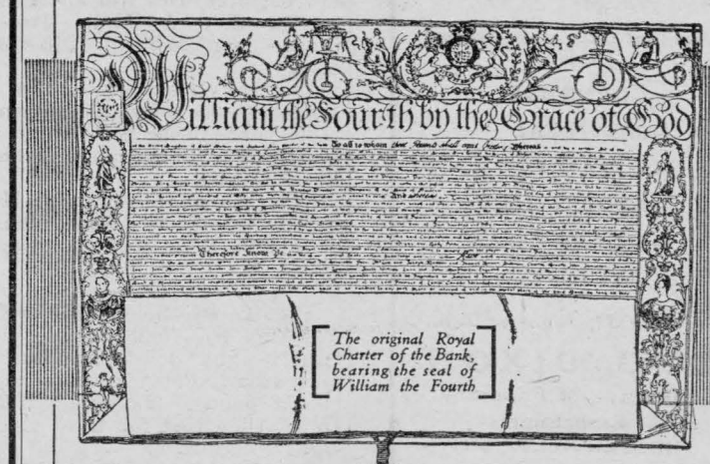

"That the consumer do his, or her part, by insisting on being served with nothing but Ontario graded potatoes."

Red Deer Do Dish-Washing For Geologists in North

A brand-new type of dish-washer has been discovered in the Lake of the Woods district by a geological survey party from the Ontario Mines Department. It is none other than Deeribus redibus—in other words, the red deer, common to all parts of the North, but particularly plentiful this season in the northwest corner of the Province.

More than 1,000 deer were seen by the mines party in the short time they were around the Lake of the Woods. So plentiful and so tame were they that at night they used to come down to the party's camp and lick to the cleanliness of a boar's tooth all the pans and pots hanging outside. Some of the party say it was salt they were after. Some say it was just a hankering to get better acquainted with their two-footed companions of these days of depression. The last-named theory is the more widely supported, in view of the report that the tent flap was left open one night, and one geologist who had retired with a coating of beard softener (prepartory to a long-delayed shave next morning) suddenly awakened to find a ten-point buck standing over him, removing the soapy film from his face with the greatest gustatory delight.

Edison Dwelt on Hereafter During His Last Hours

The last conscious hours of Thomas A. Edison, who passed away on Sunday morning, were cheerful and at intervals his mind turned to thoughts of the hereafter, it was stated in a copyrighted story for the Associated Press by Dr. Hubert S. Howe, the late Mr Edison's personal physician.

On one occasion, after remaining for some time in an attitude of deep contemplation, Mr. Edison said: "If there is a life hereafter, or if there is none, it does not matter." When asked if he believed in immortality, he answered briefly, "No one knows."

A few days before he passed away he was sitting in his chair apparently enjoying a pleasant dream. Suddenly opening his eyes and gazing upwards into space, his face illuminated with a smile, he said, "It is very beautiful over there."

Had the great inventor climbed the heights which lead into eternity and caught a glimpse beyond the veil which obstructs our earthly vision? Who will answer? Must this question always remain hidden in the mystery of death?

Family's Statement

Answering the oft-asked question whether the inventor changed his religious views before death, the members of Mr. Edison's family issued the following statement:

"The question has been asked whether Mr. Edison changed his religious views before death. Members of the Edison family state this is a difficult question to answer because of the widespread misunderstanding of what his beliefs actually were. Mr. Edison cannot be said to have changed views attributed to him which he never held.

"He never was an atheist. Though he subscribed to no orthodox creed, no one who knew him could have doubted his belief in a reverence for a supreme intelligence, and his whole life, in which the ideals of honest, loving service to his fellowman was predominant, indicated how faithfully he followed those two commandments wherein lie 'All the law and the prophets.'"

Quotation From Matthew

The statement then quoted five verses from the 22nd chapter of Matthew:

"Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked Him a question tempting Him and saying:

"'Master which is the great Commandment in the law?'

"Jesus said unto him, 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind.

"'This is the first and great Commandment.

"'And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

"'On these two Commandmnets hang all the law and the prophets.'"

Kill Cattle at the Roadside

Several cases have occurred recently within a radius of a few miles of Fredericton, N.B., in which cattle and sheep have been stolen from their pastures, and butchered and dressed near the roadside. A gang is believed to be responsible, the members of which have detailed knowledge of the countryside, and also means of marketing meat. A motor truck is used in the operations. Provincial police are working on the case.

Immense Crowd Attends Sale of Pure Bred Cattle

The sale of pure bred Holsteins at the Doering Stock Farm on Monday attracted an immense crowd with representatives present from three or four provinces of the Dominion and several of the nearby states. The day was ideal for the occasion, but the preparations had evidently been made in anticipation of a contiuance of the wet weather of the week before, and the actual selling took place in a shed of limited accommodation where elevated seats had been erected. The only glimpse many got of the animals offered was as they were taken to and from their quarters in the barn. Prices are said to have averaged better than one hundred dollars per head right through the list of ninety, with a top price of $305 for a cow with outstanding breeding and conformation. One or more of the animals will find their new home in British Columbia while the others will be scattered throughout Ontario Quebec and New York state.

Picture Bought For $1 Had $70 Hiddden in Frame

A one-dollar "art" investment has yielded J. Polowin, of Ottawa, a profit of $69. Last week he bought a picture at a local auction room, and upon getting it home he found the frame was loose. He opened the frame and found $70 in $10 bills, which it is believed were placed there forty years ago.

At the auction room it was stated the picture had been sent in for auction a short time ago by an Ottawa family.

Vere: "Bill's proposal was so sudden it made me jump."

Gwenn: "At it, of course."

Avonmore Garage Burns

Fire breaking out Saturday, destroyed a garage in Avonmore owned by Joseph W. Arbuthnot with its contents. The alarm was given by a neighbour who noticed flames in the front part of the structure, a two-storey frame building. The loss is estimated at $4,500, partially covered by insurance. A battery charger, which was left running in the building during the absence of the owner, may have had something to do with causing the outbreak. Adjoining buildings were badly scorched but no further damage was done.

SAVING SEED

MANY PEOPLE at this time are tempted to save their own seeds. They may have had remarkable success with some particular vegetable or flower, so much that they have decided to save the seed of this variety and plant next year. While the production of seed is an interesting hobby for any amateur one should not run away with the idea that it is a simple one. Unless one is prepared to take all the care that professional seed growers with years of and sometimes generations of experience, must take, it is safer and decidedly more satisfactory to buy from some Canadian seed house which only offers that seed which has been found satisfactory for Canadian conditions in their own extensive test plots and by Government authorities. In the average amateur garden little provision is made for saving seed. If we allow flowers, for instance, to set seed they immediately cease to bloom and that is a condition we do not want. If we allow the late bloom to set seed and we use this then late blooming flowers are the result. It is exactly the same with vegetables. What your average gardener is after is earliness and the first vegetables are eaten with greatest relish. Seeds saved from the later ones will only produce late crops. But this is not the only thing we are up against. Bees, other insects and wind mix pollen indiscriminately and unless we are prepared to screen and shelter blooms on both flowers and vegetables and mix the pollen carefully by hand we are going to get seed which is a mixture of varieties and therefore very much unlike the parent plant. Professional seed growers either go to this trouble of screening and hand pollenating or else they specialize on one variety in one huge plot.

Byron Timmins, Inkerman

The funeral of Byron Timmins was held Sunday afternoon from his late residence to the Inkerman United Church, where Rev. T. F. Townsend, B. A., B. D., officiated at the service. A trio, composed of Mesdames E. Brown, T. Keyes, and T. F. Townsend, rendered two sacred selections.

The church was crowded to capacity while a large number were obliged to wait outside.

After a brief illness, Mr. Timmins died Thursday morning, October 15th, in the Cornwall General Hospital, aged 58 years. He had spent his life on the farm where he was born.

Mr. Timmins was highly respected by a large number of friends in Inkerman and surrounding country, also by many in Kemptville and Ottawa, where he was well known. He was an active worker in all church affairs and for several years was a member of the official board of the Inkerman United Church. He took a great interest in the weae o t effyhrloTH terest in the welfare of the young people and was largely responsible for the promotion of athletics and amusements in that vicinity.

He served on the Mountain Township Council for a period of seven years and was an honourary member of the O. Y. B. No. 127, Inkerman.

He is survived by three children, Mrs. Cecil Rae, Delmer and Claude Timmins, all of Inkerman; two brothers, Andrew, of Kamloops, B. C.; W. G., of Inkerman, and three sisters, Mrs. Joseph Powell, and Mrs. Hugh Donelly, of Kemptville, and Mrs. John Patterson, Winchester Springs.

The pall bearers were A. T. Allison, John Baily, Iran Ennis, W. M. McMenony, W. M. Higginson and Roy Pollock.

Winchester United Church Anniversary Services

Unusually large congregations attended both services last Sunday on the occasion of the 48th anniversary of the church. All were greatly impressed with the inspiring messages of a former Winchester boy, Rev. Dr. Geo. McIntosh, of Pembroke.

A full choir, under the direction of the organist, Miss Helen Smith, rendered special music in which they were assisted by Mr. Harry McKercher of Toronto, and Mrs. Ross McMillan, of Avonmore. These latter were the soloists of the day and their selections were very much enjoyed.

The church was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves, ferns, salvia and red geraniums.

On Monday night the annual anniversary supper was given by the ladies of the church. Following the supper a splendid programme was given in the auditorium of the church, Rev. J. A. Waddell, the pastor, being chairman. Besides an opening anthem, several well-rendered solos were given by Mr. Harry McKercher. Greetings were brought from St. Matthias' Church by Rev. G. O. Davies, from St. Paul's by Rev. W. D. Turner, from Chesterville by Rev. R. E. Newman, from Williamsburg, by Rev. A. M. Russell, and from Morewood by Rev. R. W. Armstrong. Mr. J. D. Stewart gave an enjoyable reading.

The speaker of the evening, Dr. Geo. A. McIntosh, after giving some reminiscences, spoke on "Life's Philosophy," to which all listened with interest. He said what makes the difference in people is the spirit in which they take the experiences that come to them.

After a hearty vote of thanks tendered to all those who assisted in the programme ,the singing of the Doxology closed the programme.

IN MEMORIAM

McLean—In sad and loving memory of my dear father, William McLean, who entered into eternal rest on Monday, October 20th, 1930.

We miss you at a thousand turns
Along life's weary way,
For life is not the same to us
Since you were called away.
You left behind some aching hearts
That loved you most sincere
That never have, or never can,
For get you, Father dear.

Sadly missed by his loving daughter, Mrs. Thos. A. Loucks, and family.

IN MEMORIAM

Barkley—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. John H. Barkley, who departed this life on October 25, 1930.

Her work in the vineyard here is done,
The Master hath called His beloved one home.
Softly the Angel of Death drew nigh
And pointed the Beautiful Bye and Bye.
Her soul was ready to join His guide
And she drifted out on the Beautiful tide.

Pre-Nuptial Shower For Elma Bride-Elect

In honour of the bride of the week, about one hundred guests gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew N. Barkley at Elma on Monday evening, October 16th. A very pleasant evening was spent in music and social intercourse. About ten o'clock the gathering was called to order by Rev. W. A. Morrison and Miss Hilda E. Barkley was presented with the miscellaneous gifts. The following address was read by Mrs. Graham McPherson:

Elma, Ontario, October 16th, 1931

Dear Hilda,—

We consider it a great privilege to-night to be present at this happy gathering which is to be one of the brightest landmarks along your pathway of life.

It is good to know that our gladness on this occasion will not be tinged with sadness, since we are not really losing you, and in this we are truly happy.

Hilda, you have been throughout the past years always ready and willing to cheerfully lend your assistance in brightening the social life of the community In choir, Sunday School, and Church affairs you have been helpful and entertaining.

Because of the great respect in which you are held, we are gathered together to-night to tell you of our appreciation of these things and to offer to you our warmest congratulations ,which come to you with a deep neighbourly love.

We are quite sure that you will not forget us. but wo do want you to have something which we, your friends, have given you, some tangible gift to carry with you to your new home as a happy remembrance of this glad night.

And so we ask you to accept these miscellaneous gifts with the hope that you may sense all the love and good wishes for a bright and happy future which accompany them.

Signed on behalf of your friends—
Pearl McMillan, Alice Beckstead.

Miss Barkley very fittingly replied and all joined in singing "For She's A Jolly Good Fellow."

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor, of The Chesterville Record.

In the report of the Village Council published in The Record on October 8th, the following occurs:—"The application of the High School Board for debenturing the cost of the permanent improvements made to the school buildings this year, $1311.21, was passed on motion by Councillors Allison and Barrie. One change was made, that of the date of the first payment, which was advanced from December, 1931, to December 1932. The reason given for this was the fact that the requisition to the Counties' Council has already been made for 1931 and, as the counties pay 80 per cent of these improvements the delaying of the first payment will thereby save the municipality a tidy sum."

The requisition or statement of expenditure in connection with the Chesterville High School sent to the Counties' Council must be accompanied by the vouchers and therefor cannot be sent until the year has expired. The statement for the 1931 expenditures will be sent in 1932 to the Counties' Council. The first payment of this debenture having been advanced to December, 1932, it cannot be included in the 1932 statement but will appear in 1933. In making out the statement for 1933 80 per cent of the first payment of this debenture will be included. The 80 per cent will be divided between the village and Counties' Council in proportion to the attendance at the Chesterville High School. The counties will pay probably about 37 per cent and the village 63 per cent of the debenture.

The last High School building debenture was paid in 1930 and had the first payment of the new debenture been left December, 1931, it would have tended to equalize taxation from year to year and would have saved the village "a tidy sum." By deferring payment of debts to the future we are enabled to get along with a lower tax rate this year.

Sincerely yours,
T. HOULEHAN,
High School Trustee.

Prince's Ranch Damaged Valuable Cattle Lost in Fire

Edmonton, October 20.—Damage totalling $18,000 was done by fire which razed two barns on the Prince of Wales' E. P. ranch last night near High River, Alta. The fire claimed the $1,000 champion cow, Balcairn Laverta; the $600 champion heifer, Princeton Lily; the $600 yearling heifer, Princeton Jessie, and seven young bulls.

Professor W. L. Carlyle, manager of the ranch, believed that spontaneous combustion caused the outbreak. All the ranch hands battled the flames but the high wind blocked their efforts and the fire spread rapidly. For 12 hours the fire was fought before it was prevented from spreading to other buildings of the ranch. Prof. Carlyle said the champion cow and heifers were being prepared for the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto. He said all entries would be withdrawn now because of the conflagration.

38 Carloads Shipped; More to Follow

Since the national emergency relief committee of the United Church of Canada was formed last August, 38 carloads of cloth, fruit and vegetables, mostly from Ontario, have been shipped to drought-stricken areas of the Canadian West. Definite promise of 27 more carloads from this province has already been secured, according to officials of the committee.

UPS AND DOWNS OF ONTARIO'S FARM PRODUCTS

CHANGES in the agricultural production of Ontario in the past half century, during which time the population increased by over a million, are noted in the cold statistics of the Department of Agriculture. The significance of the figures is not explained, but the changes in the products must indicate certain alterations in social life.

Between 1882 and 1930 fall wheat production declined from 31,255,202 bushels to 18,047,207 bushels, and spring wheat from 9,665,999 bushels to 2,179,204 bushels. The deficiency required for an additional million mouths was supplied probably by the western prairies, but one result was that many of the small local flour mills in Ontario went out of business. We cannot guess why peas declined from 11,006,115 bushles to 1,581,468 bushels; or rye from 3,473,799 bushels to 937,302 bushels; or carrots from 4,009,975 bushels to 236,642 bushels. Neither do we know why buckwheat increased from 1,262,973 bushels to 5,675,616 bushels unless people have developed a liking for pancakes. An increase in the number of cattle to be fed doubtless accounts for the increase from 7,711,240 bushels to 10,626,135 bushels of mangels. In the midst of all these ups and downs the production of potatoes remained about the same, namely 18,000,000 bushels. If the new population since 1882 contined to eat a fair share of potatoes the increase must have been imported from other provinces. Notwithstanding the advent of motor cars of all kinds, horses have actually increased from 503,604 to 606,719, and their value from $55,812,920 to $60,606,827 during the half century.

We do not feel competent to deal with these and other striking changes in the department's statistics. As economists are now somewhat under eclipse perhaps an agronomist or some other expert can give at least plausible explanations.

ENGLISH LAD BRINGS HONOUR TO CANADA

E. H. NEEDHAM, an English farm youth working his way through Guelph agricultural college, brought distinction to Ontario this week by winning, at the National Dairy Show in St. Louis, Mo., the highest place in the judging of Holstein and Ayrshire cattle. At the same time he captured the $250 scholarship for post-graduate work, offered in the Holstein competition by the American Holstein Breeders' Association. In the completed standing for all individual judging work, Needham came eighth, as a member of the Guelph agricultural college judging team.

Needham, who hales from Sheffield, Eng., came to Canada several seasons ago to engage in farm work. For a while he was engaged on the experimental farm at Kapuskasing, and for the past two seasons has been working on the college farm at Guelph in order to pay his way through the college. The college authorities state that the young man has an excellent record and is destined to go far in his chosen calling.

The National Dairy Show is the greatest event of its kind on the continent, the best talent from both Canada and the United States gathering there, so that Needham's distinction is no mean one. His record is but another evidence of what green young Englishmen, with determination to succeed, can accomplish in this county. We want more of them.

MR. PEASLEE DEFENDS A NEIGHBOUR

I S'POSE it's well 'nough for a man to rely on Providence for somethings," Deacon Hyne observed in a tone that showed he supposed nothing of the sort, "but I'd like him better if he dusted around and done some things for himself and left them things to Providence that he hadn't the power to help or hender."

"Dust round and do what kind of work f'r instnce?" asked Caleb Peaslee.

"F'r instance, his farm work," replied the Deacon acidly. "Gather his cider apples himself 'stead of waitin' for a wind to blow 'em off'n the trees —same's Jerry Wilder's doin'!"

"Oh, Jerry Wilder!" said Caleb. "Jerry does sort of look to the weather to favour him in most of his undertakin's; I'll give in to you about that. What's he been doin 'now?"

"It's his cider apples," said the deacon. "I went by his orchard this mornin' on my way over here, and his trees were hanging full of apples fit only fer cider: so I asked him why he wasn't shakin' 'em off. And he jest canted his eye up at the sky and let on he figgered the line gale'd be 'long in a day or so and save him shakin' himself to pieces. It kind o' thorned me to see the critter so conf'dent," the deacon admitted, "and I come away 'thout waitin' to hear what other job he had laid by for the weather to do f'r him."

"That's jest Jerry's way," Caleb said after a pause. "It ain't shiftlessness; he's only sartain things'll come out all right, so he don't worry about 'em."

"It's a shiftless way of doin', to my way of thinkin'," the deacon contended stubbornly.

"Mebbe so — for anybody but Jerry," agreed Caleb with easy tolerance. "The p'int is, it works for Jerry; I'm willin' to allow he'll get a gale that'll drop off them apples for him, by the looks of the clouds."

The deacon after a furtive glance at the heavens kept silence.

"I call to mind one time," Caleb went on, "when Jerry bought a cow of Eb Drake and give a chattel mortgage for the cow, Jerry not havin' the ready money to pay for her. Drake had a sort of hard name for collectin' debts when they fell due, so it stood Jerry in hand to be ready to pay when the time come.

"It was late in the spring 'twixt hay and grass ,and no money comin' in steady to Jerry except when he worked a day here and there between gettin' his own crops in. He'd got a job with Sam Carter that'd just about cleverly take care of his payment due Drake, and the night 'fore he was goin' to start on the job he stuck the corner of the axe into his foot and laid himself up so he couldn't take a step. His wife was dreadful upsot about it; she couldn't see any way out but that Drake would take the cow away from 'em and they'd lose whatever they'd already paid him. But Jerry never had any such thought, seemin'ly.

"'Don't you fret a mite, Sadie,' he sas. 'I'm laid up for a few days, but there ain't any reason why I shouldn't set outdoors, and if I'm settin' out there I might well be shavin' some axe handles. They sell ready 'nough, and by workin' busy I can get out pretty near 'nough to square that payment when it falls due. It ain't but ten dollars anyway.'

"Sadie was hard to persuade, but she helped him outdoors and brought him a drawshave and some maple wood he had in the shed, and between 'em they rigged up a shavin' horse, and Jerry fell to work. W ell, he'd got a good share of enough out to make the payment when in working a knurly piece of wood he yanked too hard on the drawshave and broke it short off at the handle; and of all tools I sh'd guess a one-handed drawshave would be the nearest useless. He couldn't get down to the blacksmith shop to get it mended, so he left it layin' on the horse.

"Sadie was all down-hearted again, but Jerry cheered her up, told her how many handles he'd already got made and made her b'lieve axe handles wa'n't the only things; anyways he'd be sure to turn somethin' up in time to pay Drake. So she got over snifflin' and made ready to get dinner on the table.

"There was a big maple tree in Jerry's side yard,—it don't stand there now for the reason I'm goin' to tell you of,—and he'd been shaving his handles under it to be in the shade. Whilst he was eatin' he heard a sort of choppin' noise and asked Sadie what it was. She went to the window, and as soon as she got there she hollered, 'Quit that! Quit that this minute and go away!' and then she come back to the table and told Jerry. Seems it was the Bascom twins, and one of 'em had got the broken shave and was chippin' the bark off'n the maple tree with it. 'He'd dug off a piece as big as my two hands,' she says, 'and no knowing how far he'd have gone if I hadn't ketched him!'

"Jerry looked anxious, not wantin' the tree sp'iled, and after dinner she took him by the arm, and he hobbled out to look. He stopped 'fore he got to the tree, it bein' hard work to get along, but Sadie kept on till she got where she culd see clear round the tree, and she r'ported that the bark was all right on the fur side. 'But it's sort of funny lookin' under the bark,' she says, 'all little nubbles about as big as birdshot. I never saw any maple wood like that b'fore,' s' she.

"When Jerry heard that he straightened up quick and says, 'Come here and help me over to the tree! I want to see them nubbles!' So she helped him along to the tree, and Jerry run his hand over the wood where the bark was gone, and then he grinned and sighed contented-like.

"'Well,' Sadie says kind of short, 'what are you lookin' so pleased about?'

"'That tree's a bird's-eye maple!' Jerry says. 'Wuth fifty dollars, mebbe twice that. And that pays Drake twice over and some b'sides! We'll have to set out another shade tree,' he says. 'We can't afford bird's-eye maple to keep the sun off'n us. And just see how things work out if you don't worry,' he says.

"Thinkin' back over that happenin'," concluded Mr. Peaslee, "makes me b'lieve Jerry'll get his apples shook off if he waits a day or so. Them streaky-lookin' clouds up there makes me sure of it."

The Canny Scot

The annual trout-fishing match between England and Scotland took place at Loch Leven and was successful enough to prove the truth of the old adage that "trout will out." The secretary of the Propagation of Truth Among Anglers told a good story of the event. It seems an Englishman and a Scotsman had a bet that the first one to catch a fish should pay for the drinks. After fishing for nearly an hour the Englishman caught a fish and lost the bet. Then the Scotsman decided to put some bait on his hook.

HEALTH SERVICE of the Canadian Medical Association

ADENOIDS

ADENOIDS are growths which are sponge-like in consistency, and which develop in the passage which joins the nose and throat. They occur at all ages, from early infancy to adult life, but they are most commonly found in young children.

The presence of adenoids is frequently responsible for what appears to be a chronic head-cold, with a considerable discharge from the nose. The child who has adenoids will likely be bothered with a cough and snuffles during the cold weather.

Because of the location of the adenoids they may obstruct the Eustachian tubes which connect the middle ear with the throat. Adenoids are the most common cause of ear-ache in young children. If the condition is not treated it frequently leads to disease of the ear and permanent loss of hearing.

Breathing through the nose is the right and natural way to breathe. If the adenoids are large, the child will become a mouth-breather because their growth will block the nasal passage and prevent breathing through the nose. Certain serious results follow. To begin with, the child has the uncomfortable feeling associated with a head-cold.

Continued mouth-breathing, which means that the nose is not being used, results in a high-arched palate and the deformity of the chest known as "pigeon-chest," and almost surely there is some disturbance of the proper, orderly arrangement of the teeth in the upper jaw.

In advanced cases the child has a characteristic appearance—the adenoid face. The open mouth, the small pinched nostrils and thickened upper lip all give a fish-like, stupid appearance. The voice may have a nasal twang and, in young children, bed-wetting may be a symptom.

The spongy adenoid growth provides an excellent breeding-place for germs. This is helped by the mouth-breathing which brings unprepared air into the throat and tends to dry out the tissues and so lower their resistance.

The child with adenoids may seem to be mentally dull, and this is not to be wondered at when it is remembered that his head feels stuffed up, his hearing is interfered with, likely suffers from ear-ache, and is quite possibly being poisoned by germs which are present in the adenoid growth.

Any child who is a muoth-breather, or who suffers from repeated colds or ear-ache should be examined to see if adenoids are responsible and, if so, to have them removed. The sooner they are removed, the better it is for the child.

No child need suffer the handicap and danger of adenoids. Their complete removal is a simple surgical procedure and is the only treatment.

A Fine Crop

"How has your potato crop turned out, old chap?" asked one ardent amateur gardener of his neighbour.

"Splendid, old man," replied the other; "some are big as marbles, some as big as peas, and, of course, quite a lot of little ones."

Fine Feathers

TERESA was on the platform of the station almost before the train stopped. For a second she held her breath with a warm, proud feeling of satisfaction. The whole crowd was there to meet her! Pretty good, that, when she had been away only two weeks! She was sorry she hadn't worn the scarlet cap and scarf that her grandmother had given her as a Christmas gift . Ellen and Dorothy had new ones almost like them, and Trudie's set was green.

"Hello, everybody!" Teresa called.

"Oh, hello, Tresa!" said Dorothy. "I didn't know you were coming today."

Teresa lifted her head a trifle higher. She might have known that the girls hadn't come down to meet her! They never did! She kept the smile on her lips by sheer force of will.

Dorothy rattled on: "You know, Rita's going to Florida to live; her mother's not any better. They are all going, and Dr. Canfield said—There's Rita now!" she interrupted herself.

"Why, hello, Teresa," said Trudie. "Have a good time?" Then without waiting to her Teresa's reply she turned to wedge her way in toward the centre of the group that had formed round Rita.

Teresa followed her. Rita turned with her quick smile and threw her arm round Teresa's waist. "Good-bye, Rita," Teresa said shortly, "and good luck!" Then she added coolly, "You might have sent me word that you were going, Rita."

Rita's face flushed.. "Oh, Teresa, dear, I'm sorry, but—"

"Of course, if you didn't care," Teresa said icily, shrugging her shoulders.

No one paid much attention to her iciness; the girls were used to it.

Teresa's first impulse was to walk home as fast as she could. Everyone was hateful! Tom might have brought the car. Just then she saw the car parked at the other end of the platform, and Tom at her elbow was saying, "'Lo, sis. I'm glad the train wasn't late. I brought Rita down and about a hundred bags."

"Come on," said Teresa abruptly, and she gave him her travelling bag to carry.

Tom looked at her in a disapproving way. "Dont you want to see Rita off?"

"No!" she said sharply.

"Well, I do." He took hold of her elbow. "It'll be only a jiffy until the train leaves."

Teresa bit her lip in vexation. Rita had lived next door to them all their lives, and she and Rita had been fast friends—before she had found out that Rita really liked Ellen and Dorothy better.

"I wonder," said Ellen as the train disappeared down the track, "I do keep wondering if the new girl will take Rita's place in our crowd."

"What new girl?" asked Teresa.

"Oh," Ellen explained, hooking her arm through Teresa's "the one who is living in Rita's house. The Griswolds—they are Kansas people, and they have bought the place. She's just our age, Rita says. I wonder whom she'll chum with. Dorothy and me probably, just as Rita did."

There they were again ,thought Teresa, always leaving her out in the cold!

"I think I'll look out for her," said Tom. "I'm the only one of us who has seen her."

"What does she look like, Tom?" asked Ellen.

"Pretty good to me," Tom replied. At the same time Teresa heard Jim, who was walking a few steps behind with Dorothy, say in an undertone, "I suppose Teresa will have a try at palling with her—for about two days!"

And Dorothy, giggling, answered, "Um-hum. That's about the usual length of Lady Teresa's friendships."

Teresa's cheeks burned, and unconsciously her hands clenched. She half-turned and looked at Jim and Dorothy scornfully, coldly, just to let them know that she had overheard the remarks. In her heart was a sudden fierce determination to "chum" with her new neighbour. She would show them that she could! She would make the new girl follow her round like—like a little dog!

"Here's the car," Tom said. "Want to drive, Tess?"

Teresa nodded and slipped in behind the wheel. "See you to-morrow," she said shortly to the others. Then to Tom, "About this new girl—what's her name? Tell me about her. Have you talked with her?"

"Oh, some." Tom answered her last question first. "Her name is Donna Griswold. She's pretty, Tess, but I don't think you'll like her much."

"Why not? Oh, I know what you mean, Tom. You mean she won't like me! You think nobody could like me!"

"I wish you wouldn't everlastingly carry a chip on your shoulder!" cried Tom. "I believe you'd rather quarrel than eat!"

Teresa's eyes blazed. She stepped on the accelerator and, swinging round the next corner at a perilous rate, whirled the car into their own driveway.

As she jumped out she heard a faint little meow, and there, huddled in the corner of the garage, was a little gray kitten. Teresa snatched it up and it spit at her and hooked its claws into her sleeve.

"Look out, Tess," Tom warned her.

"It's half starved!" exclaimed Teresa and carried it, scratching and whining, into the house. "There, puss," she said, "I don't blame you much. I'm supposed to be sort of scratchy, myself."

Promptly at half past eight o'clock the next morning Teresa rang the bell of the house next door. As the first step in her campaign she was going to take the new girl to school. The door opened, and Donna Griswold stood smiling shyly at Teresa. She was a little thing with hazel eyes that looked into Teresa's so directly that Teresa scarcely noticed the shabby blue serge dress and the odd way her light brown hair was bobbed.

Teresa smiled back at her. "I'm the girl next door," she explained. "I came to take you to school. You're in the Junior High, aren't you?"

Donna nodded. "Your brother told me you were coming. Oh, I'm so glad!" She reached for her coat which was hanging on the hall rack.

It was not until she turned away that Teresa noticed how shabby her dress was, though it was no shabbier than the coat that she was putting on. Then she took her hat from another hook; Teresa always afterwards thought of it as "the hat." Donna put it on her head, pulled it down well over her ears and, still smiling, turned back to Teresa.

At the first glimpse of the hat Teresa was filled with a sort of horror. It was a hat unduobtedly planned for a grown woman; that was why it fitted down so easily over Donna's ears. It was made of once gorgeous purple velvet, and it had a fancy green feather arrangement that stood up dashingly in front and hung in a dreary, mournful festoon off the back. It was awful! Teresa could hardly believe that any girl with straight, neatly bobbed hair could intend to wear that hat to school. Like a flash she could see in her mind's eye the grins and uplifted eyebrows that would greet the hat. And this was the girl she had chosen ,sight unseen, for her chum! For once in her life Teresa could not think of a word to say.

"You see," the little girl went on, "I never lived next door to a girl before. I never lived next door to anyone. Our next door in Kansas is three miles away."

She looked up at Teresa again with her clear, direct gaze, and all at once a lump came into Teresa's throat. She couldn't have a chum who wore such an utterly silly hat, and yet—

Teresa swallowed hard and tried to smile. "Do you know, if you'll trade hats with me to-day, your first day, it'll bring you luck! It's like finding a pin, you know,"—she hesitated—"or seeing the new moon," she added triumphantly, snatching off her red cap as she spoke and holding it out to Donna.

"Really?" asked Donna. "Oh, I know I'm going to have good luck, now. Here, let me put mine on you. I made a wish! Was that right?"

"Yes! And you'd better wear the scarf too. They go together. Don't tell anyone we've traded. That's part of the game. Promise! I've wished yours on—for a week!"

Of course Teresa knew that there would be giggles and grins at the hat ever if she wore it, but she could look out for herself. As a matter of fact most of her friends were a trifle afraid of her. She was "scratchy." Their ridicule would not be very open not so open that Donna would notice it.

The two walked on for a block without saying anything more; Teresa was busy thinking how she would silence anyone who even so much as mentioned that she was wearing a new hat. Then she saw Dorothy and Ellen and waved to them to wait. They both looked in amazement at her hat, but they were so plainly delighted with Donna that Teresa was more than satisfied. She kept wondering just how quietly polite and amused they would have been if Donna had worn the purple hat. She knew they would have said afterward, "Well, naturally you can't expect her to take Rita's place. You can see she doesn't belong in our crowd, can't you?"

Trudie was waiting for them on the next corner. "Hello, Donna Griswold," she cried. "Anyone could tell at a glance that you belong in our crowd. We've been quarrelling already about which one of us will be your particular chum."

Donna laughed shyly, and her cheeks were red, but seizing Teresa's hand, she gave it a little squeeze and flashed her a look that said more plainly than words that she had already chosen her chum.

"Isn't that a new hat, Teresa?" asked Trudie, tilting her head a little and looking at the hat in mock admiration.

"I never wore it before," Teresa replied, astonished to find that she was not angry with Trudie. She was only hoping that Donna would not see that Trudie's admiration was not real.

"Your cap is new, too," Teresa went on quickly. "That green is so becoming."

"And isn't it fine," said Ellen, "that Donna's cap and scarf are like mine and Dorothy's!"

"But they are not!" cried Dorothy. laughing. "Hers are hand-knitted, Ellen. They are much prettier than ours."

Donna's eyes danced, and she squeezed Teresa's hand again.

Once in the schoolhouse, Teresa with a sigh of relief concealed the purple hat in her locker, but to Donna she said, "Maybe you'd better keep the scarf on; you might be cold."

She was thinking that the scarf would hide the shabbiness of Donna's dress.

But when Teresa came home at noon and slipped in the side door, hoping that her mother wouldn't see the hat, she had more explanations to make.

"I can't see that it will do any good, Teresa," her mother argued. "I don't like to have you wearing such a hat for a week—and then the new little girl will have to wear it eventually."

"I know that." Teresa sat down at the table and unfolded her napkin with a jerk. Then she smiled. "But, mother, Donna is such a dear! Don't you see? By next week everyone will love her, and they'll be used to the hat, seeing it on me."

"Well, I don't like it!" Tom said. "It's disgraceful. You look like a freak in a side show. All the boys were making fun of you this morning. You're not popular enough to get away with a thing like that,Tess; you know you're not!"

"Kindly pass the bread, Tom. You make me tired. I'll wear any kind of a hat I want to. Nobody asked you for your opinion."

"Now look here," said her father, offering a compromise. "Why can't you give the new girl your old woolly hat that you wore before Christmas?"

"Father, I couldn't! She'd be hurt. Oh, why can't I ever do anything I want to?"

"Well, for Pete's sake,' don't wear the thing again, Tess," said Tom. "It's awful."

"That will do, Tom," said his mother, and the meal went on in silence.

In spite of protests Teresa wore the hat back to school again, but that afternoon she thought of a scheme for giving Donna her cap and scarf without hurting Donna's pride. She would buy another set and send it to herself so that even her mother would think it was a gift—from Aunt Teresa perhaps; then ,since she would have two of a kind, Donna wouldn't care, and her mother couldn't object.

Her courage was not quite equal to wearing the hat into a store, so she went home first and put on her best hat. Her pocketbook was in the usual after-Christmas state of flatness, and her monthly allowance of five dollars would not be paid for ten days; but she argued that she was justified in having the cap and scarf charged, although that was against her father's rule.

But when she had chosen a set that looked much like her own and had priced it her courage failed her. She looked so wistfully at the soft woolly things that the clerk said, "We have an odd cap here ,if you don't care for both of them. You can have the cap for a dollar."

Teresa turned slowly and walked out of the store. It is a terrible thing to be fourteen years old, to belong to a well-to-do family and to have almost no resources at all.

After she was home again, as she was hanging her coat and hat in her closet, her glance fell on her old red sweater, and she realized that it was the same shade of red as the coveted cap and scarf. How she had loved it when it was new! Now the elbows were worn through though it had not faded for it was made of good yarn.

She sat down on the floor by the window and began to unravel it. She would knit a scarf and a cap for Donna! Surely there would be enough yarn ,though of course she would have to wind it into skeins and wash it to take out the kinks. When twilight came Teresa turned on the light and went on working until her mother called her to supper.

As soon as she had washed the dishes she hurried back to her room and her sweater, which was fast changing into a heap of red yarn. She was nearly frantic when she thought of the time it would take her to knit merely the scarf. She did not dare to think about the cap.

Then she heard voices in the front hall, and Tom cried, "Tess! Tess, come on down. We're going out to the hill!"

"Can't!" Teresa called back.

Then she heard some one coming upstairs two steps at a time. "Oh, I say, Teresa, you aren't sick, are you?" cried Trudie, rapping on her door. "We thought you and Tom would go with us, and we'd ask Donna Griswold. Jim has his new bobsled, and—"

Teresa opened her door and came out into the hall. "Honestly, Trudie," she said, "I can't; I'm busy."

"But, Teresa, we'll be home by eight."

"I can't spare the time."

"Have I offended you, Teresa?" asked Trudie.

"No,' 'Teresa laughed. "Go on and tell all of them and specially Donna that I am angry to think I can't go too. There!" And she gave Trudie a little shove and retired once more into the solitude of her room. She was busy, and moreover she couldn't quite imagine herself flying down the hill, hanging on to the purple hat! Still it didn't make her feel very happy to hear Trudie explaining to the others that Teresa had "an awful grouch."

That was Tuesday; the next Monday night Teresa finished the scarf. Her head ached, and her eyes burned. The yarn was all gone; and the cap was as far away as ever. And for a week everyone had grinned whenever they looked at her and the purple hat—everyone, that is, except Donna. Teresa smiled grimly. She had not gone coasting once and had failed in her history recitation three days running all because a new girl next door had an outlandish hat! But it had been worth it. Why, Donna was her chum! Had she done all that because she loved Donna? It didn't matter much anyway.

She overslept the next morning, and when she came downstairs her father was telling Tom and her mother about a concert. "It's to be a week from Friday, and the tickets are one dollar, and father is going to take us all!" Tom explained hastily.

"A dollar!" Teresa echoed. "But, O father, I'd a thousand times rather have the dollar. Oh, I do need a dollar!"

"What do you want a dollar for, Tess?" asked Tom. "Would you buy a pink veil to drape over your purple hat?"

"If I can have a dollar now. I'll never wear that hat again."

"Give it to her, father! Oh, I say, give it to her quick!"

Father handed a dollar bill to Teresa. "Though I hate to have you miss that concert," he added.

Tom burst out laughing. "Pretty slick, I'd say, father. They only traded hats for a week, and the week's up this morning, isn't it, sis?"

Teresa nodded and pushed back her chair. "Mother, may I be excused? I have an errand to do before school."

At a quarter to nine Teresa was waiting at Donna's door for her. In her hand was the purple hat, and her cap and scarf almost matched Donna's.

She handed Donna the hat. "But I want you to keep mine," she said. "You see, I have another set just like that one."

Donna took the hat, but stood for a moment looking straight into Teresa's eyes. "How did you happen to get two the same?"

Before Donna's clear eyes Teresa had to tell the truth. "I bought the cap; and I knitted the scarf. I wanted us to have them just alike."

"Oh, you darling!" cried Donna, hugging her. "Can't we trade back again for good luck? Because I want the scarf you knitted for me. And I'll make the purple hat into a—sofa for the cat's cradle!" ,

"What!" cried Teresa.

Donna laughed. "O Teresa, last night while we were coasting Jim and Trudie began to talk about that hat. If you could have heard the things they said! I know now why you traded, and so do all the rest of them. I told them. And Jim said, 'I'll take my hat off to Tess! If that girl isn't a good sport!' "

"Oh, nonsense!" said Teresa, turning very red. "It was nothing!" But she looked happy. "Aren't we chums?"

"I'll say we are chums," Donna agreed.

Very Particular

After the third addition to the family it became necessary to secure the services of a permanent nurse.

"Now, my husband is very particular whom I engage as a nurse," said the mistress to a girl who had applied for the position. "He wishes me to go into the most minute details about your qualifications. Do you know how to prepare food? Can you sew and mend? Do you mind sitting up late at night? Are you faithful and devoted, and have you a kind, loving disposition? Will you——"

"Excuse me, ma'am. Am I to take care of the baby or your husband?" asked the girl.
