HIGH SCHOOL CONCERT

On Friday evening the High School pupils again pleased and delighted a large audience,, who had assembled in Hamilton's Hall by eight o'clock. The occasion was the annual concert which our own boys and girls gave us before leaving for their respective homes for the Christmas festivities This year the programme was about equally divided between Dicken's "Cricket on the HHearth" as dramatized by Albert Smith, and a number of dances and drills.

To Miss Henry we understand belongs the credit for the training of the characters in the play while Miss Mullet devoted her time and talents to perfecting of the drills and danes. To our mind though both the lady teachers did excellent work and judging by the whole concert they had excellent material with which to work as everyone performed in the best possible manner.

The concert opened with a club harmony in which the following girls excelled themselves—Cora Droppo, Nellie McDonald, Marion Gray, Erma Durant, Grace Cunnngham, Helen Forward, Eldred Edgerton, Lou Sullivan,, Mary Kearney, Julia Heveran, Hilda Casselman Grace Barkley Julia Flynn, Christena MMasterson, Alice Beckstead and Carrie Servage.

This was followed by a parade of the following wooden soldiers—Brock Harper,Captain; Privates, Oran Robertson, John Blacklock, G. Weegar, Wm Brown, Alison Graham and Eric McMillan,Drum Sargent. This parade was sowell done in such an automatic way and without any change in expression on the part of the wooden men. Miss Florence Millea now delighted the audienceby singing with her fresh young voice "Forgotten" followed by the encore "Duva."

The first act of the play was now introduced in which John Perrybingle (Arthnr McElroy) Dot(Mabel Barret) and Tillie Slowboy (Aura Graham) delighted the audience with their superb characterizations.

The next three items on the programme represented the Scotch, English and Irish elements of civilization these being the Highland Fling as exhibited by the inimitable Minnie Neelin.

The Sailors Hornpipe —by Donald McMartin and Willie Tate.
Dixon, Willa Ellis, and Muriel Haley

The Irish Lilt— by Dora Bogart, Rae —much was added to these last two numbers by the excellently tastful costumes worn by the artists. The Hearth now portrayed to us the histrionic ability of Mathew Flynn as Caleb Plummer Lillian Tate as his blind Bertha, Karl Bowman as Mr. Tackelton and Hosea Droppo as the son of Caleb Plummer,the toy maker. The portrayal of these several characters by these boys and girls was unique and although the work was difficult it was done in an excellent manner by all.

At the close of this act the audience which like many other audiences has been satiated and sickened by the repetition of "fox-trots" jazz, etc., was treated to that delightful and graceful dance the French Minuet,a court dance. The ladies and dandies of the age of chivalry, who so delighted the audience in this splendid number were Hazel Droppo, Gladys Fairbrass, Lola Hummel, Helen Merkley, Harold Barret, Alex McMMilian Bruce McMillan, and Stuart McMillan The old time costumes were strictly and added much to its charm.
in keping with the age of the dance

Principal Barlow now read out the names of the graduates of the school for the year 1922 and 1923, and in a lence for their appreciation of the entertainment being given.

The third and concluding Act of the playlet was now given in which besides the other characters already mentioned. Mrs. Fielding (Edith McAvoy) May Fielding Eva Gillissie) and the porter (Clifford Coyne) also demonstrated to the audience that though their parts were not so prominent as some of the others their ability was of the same high order.

The concert the best the High School has ever had—both as regards material presentation attendance and financial success— closed with God Save the King sung by the audience all standing and at attention.

The whole concert again reiterates the idea—Chesterville has an amazing array of excellent concert talent, Chesterville citizens have a keen appreciation of good entertainment and Chesterville and its environs will ever and alwaysare anxious to support all such.

HE PUT CHAIRS IN AISLE

At the Peterboro Police Court, Harry Bickle was charged with obstructing the aisles and approaches of the Grand Opera House, of which he is manager. Through his counsel Mr. Gordon, Bickle pleaded guilty with extenuating circumstances. At the show on the night in question the seems that owing to the popularity of house was crowded so he allowed chairs to be placed in the passageways. It was a first offence. Bickle was given the minimum fine of $25 and $8 costs and warned by His Worship not to allow a recurrence or next time there would be $200. There was given the minnimum fine of $25 time there would be $200. eTher would be no second warning.

FEEDING THE WEANING FOAL

(Experimental Farms Note)

The most important period of a horse's life is the time from weaning until the foal is a year old. The amount and quality of feed fed during this period will largely determine his future developement. Many potential draft horses are so checked and stunted in growth from a lack of proper feed and care as colts that they never attain the size which would raise chunk into ahigh priced profitable them from a low--priced, nondescript drafter.

The first step is to get it feeding regularly on grain before weaning it from the mare. When the foal is feeding regularly it may be weaned without danger of a severe checkin growth which will always occur if weaned without being taught to feed first. If two foals can be put together in a roomy loose-box they will fret less than if kept by themselves.

The best feeds to use are oats—preferably rolled, bran, a little linseed meal and a good clean, well-cured alfalfa hay. The concentrates are readily procurable anywhere but the alfalfa will not be available over a wide range. It is, however, more valuable than any other roughage and horse breeders would be well advised to make a special effort to grow enough of this feed for their foals and also the brood mares, if possible. Other good quality hay ranks next to alfalfa in value as roughage and good results can also be obtained from them.

Regular exercise each day is just as important as plenty of good feed and should be regarded as part of the feeding operations for, without exercise , the feed would not be utilized taught to drink before feeding and if the habit is formed no further trouble willbe experienced. S. It should be available at all times. A small block of rock salt in the corner of the manger is the most satisfactory method of supplying it.

The amounts of feed necessary will vary with different animals. A foal will very seldom eat more than it san properly assimilate, differing in this point from older horses. Reasonably generous feeding will be amply repaid in the extra growth and development. Good sound thirteen hundred pound horses flood the market for low prices while well built, sound horses of seventeen hundred pounds, or over are readily seleable in the same districts at from one hundred and eighty dollars upward in price.

Feed should be given three times a day at as nearly as possible regular intervals and the foals should be watered before feeding. The foal is easily properly.

.....FIRE NEAR EMBRUUN ....

Mr. Adelore Tessier, who lives about four miles north of Embrun, met with a serious loss on Sunday morning of last week , when his house and contents were destroyed by fire. The fire had made considerable headway when discovered in the upper part of the house. It is supposed to have started from an overheated pipe up stairs. Mr. Tessier is the father of Mrs. Napoleon St. Denis, of Cornwall.

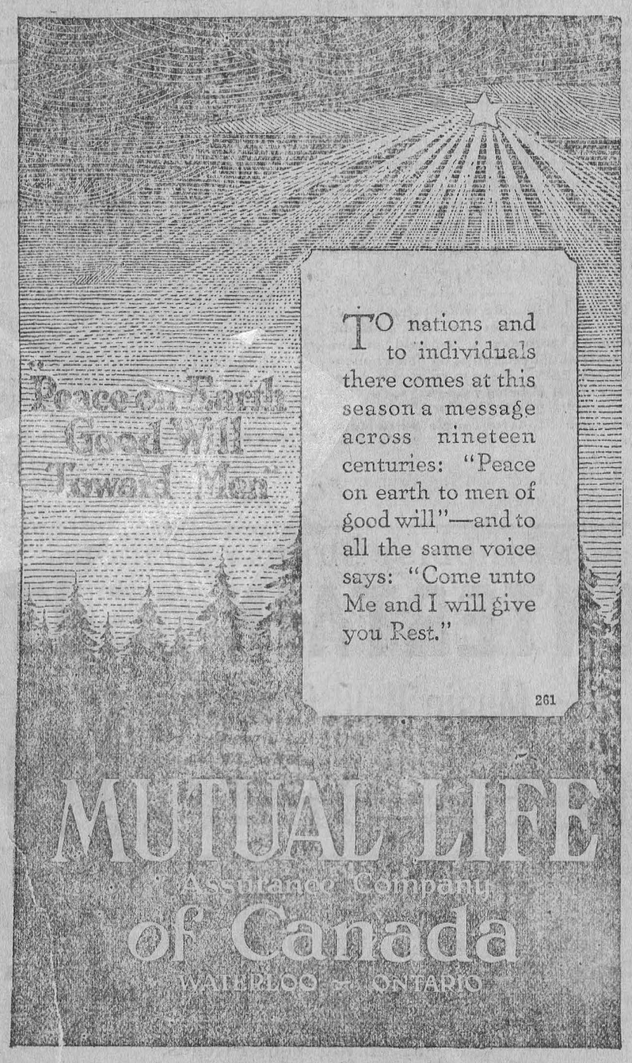

A : "Why does your daughter sing in the dining-room ?" B: "It's the only way to get theguests to leave the table."

BESTOWED BY GREAT SPIRIT

Indian Legend of the Origin of the Calumet, Better Known as "Pipe of Peace."

When the North American Indians made peace or formed an alliance, the high contracting parties smoked together to ratify the arrangement.

The peace pipe was about two and a half feet long, the bowl was made of highly polished red marble, and a stem of a reed, which was decorated with eagles' quills, women's hair, etc.

Legend has it that the Great Spirit at an ancient period called the Indian nations together, and standing on the precipice of the red pipestone rock, broke off a piece which he moulded into the bowl of a pipe, and fitting it on a long reed, filled the pipe with the bark of red willow, and smoked over them, turning to the four winds. He told them the red color of the pipe represented their flesh, and when they smoked it they must bury their war clubs and scalping knives. At the last whiff the Great Spirit disappeared.

To present the calumet (peace pipe) to a stranger was a mark of hospitality and good will; to refuse to offer it was an act of hostile defiance.

WOOD CARVING ANCIENT ART

Ample Evidence That It Was Common in the Earliest Days of Egyptian Sculpture.

Wood carving was common in very early Egyptian sculpture. Some of the most realistic statues of the ancient empire were carved in wood, such as the so-called "Sheik-el-Beled" and his wife, and a number of others. Wood was a convenient ground for polychromatic decoration; that is, treating the carved figure with a thin coating of plaster upon which the artist has placed his colors. This was very popular among Egyptian artists. In Greece wood carving probably was the earliest form of archaic sculpture. The later Greeks and Romans used it comparatively little, but among the most remarkable works of early Christian sculpture are the carved wooden doors of Santa Sabina, Rome.

Wood carving was revived in the Eleventh century in the north of Europe—Scandinavia, Germany and parts of France. The material was not only used in its native simplicity, but was covered with canvas or cloth, stuccoed and painted. Wood carvings formed the most important part of German sculpture in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth centuries, and stone sculpture was influenced by it.

Differences of Opinion.

A little woman came into one of the University new style cars with her big husband. "Nice cars," said the husband, spreading out his legs contentedly. The little woman felt for the floor, but her feet were two inches at least above it.

"The seats are too high," she declared.

"Oh, I don't think so," said her husband, "they are low enough for the average person."

"I don't think so," insisted the woman. "I think the company should provide foot rests."

"Yes," replied the husband sarcastically, "velvet hassocks would do."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Stealing Home.

Hale—Did your wife hear you when you sneaked in the house last night?

Hardy—Yes, but she thought I was a burglar. When she woke up this morning, she said she would never scold me again because I had scared the burglar away and saved her life.

Wireless Startles Natives.

Humors of wireless telephony in the wilds of Africa are recounted by a Marconi house official.

Throughout the demonstrations given the apparatus was regarded with the greatest awe. The Swazis refused to believe it possible to speak from one place to another without the medium of wires. A certain gallant major spoke from Mbabane, and at Stegi, 52 miles away, there were assembled a number of Swazis, including several petty chiefs. Conversations then commenced, and the natives were dumbfounded. Straight away they held an "indaba," a sort of extra special mass meeting. Presently a deputation appeared and asked if there was to be a white man's war, because if there was they wanted to be on the white man's side.

If the practically illimitable interior energy of the atom could be liberated and controlled, we should not have to worry about the steadily decreasing coal supply.

Another Extra Dividend.

"Did you ever steal apples when you were a boy?"

"Sure," said Mr. Grabson. "Watermelons, too. And that reminds me."

"Eh?"

"I've got to attend a directors' meeting. The boys are going to cut one."

CARE IN CHRISTMAS DECORATING

The Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association has sent out the usual warning to merchants and others re-Christmas decorations, such as draperies, scenery, cotton to represent snow, etc. It is suggested that material of this kind should not be hung over heating or lighting devices, and that all electric circuits should be examined to see that they are not over loaded by the addition of temporary lights ,and also to examine fire extinguishing appliances to see that they are sufficient, in good order and readily accessible. In the same connection, the National Fire Protection Association and the Ontario Fire Marshall recommended that all frabsrics for decoration purposes should be immersed in a solution of Commercial Ammonium Phosphate in the proportion to one gallon of water. If then slightly wrung and dried they will offer considerable resistance to fire until again washed.

McCormick and Deering
CORN BINDERS

Cutting corn by hand is very hard work, as all men know who have tried it. In fact it is out of the question to fill a silo with hand cut corn. Yet corn stalks either green for the silo or stacked dry for fodder are the best food for cattle and horses.

The use of the McCormick or Deering Corn Binder will solve this problem You can cut and bind seven acres a day and do it much easier than by the hand method.
