Harold J. Hamilton, 49 Successful Business Man Paid Tribute Wednesday

The funeral took place Wednesday, April 15, of the late Harold J. Hamilton, of Chesterville, who passed away Monday at Winchester District Hospital in his fiftieth year. The service was conducted by the Rev. R. A. Mitchell in Trinity United Church. Interment was made in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Harold J. Hamilton was born in Chesterville, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hamilton. He received his education in local schools and Albert College, Belleville. A sporting enthusiast all his life, Mr. Hamilton was an outstanding hockey player for the Chesterville teams in the years of their successes. His goal keeping was a pleasure to see. The automotive trade was the chosen business field of the deceased, and in this he was notably successful. Until a few months ago, his agency was distributor for Chrysler and Plymouth in this district.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton had spent the winter in Florida, returning a few weeks ago. Last week a heart attack sent Mr. Hamilton to the hospital and proved to be fatal.

The political arena of Chesterville found Mr. Hamilton in the running for councillor in 1947. He was successful at the polls and served the one term. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce here.

He is survived by his wife, the former Marguerite Everett, of Iroquois; a daughter, Joan, at home and one son, Leroy, with the RCAF in England. Three sisters also survive: Mrs. Clifford Powell, Hagersville; Mrs. David Perry, Holstein, Ont., and Mrs. Lloyd Phillips, Brockville.

Pall bearers were friends and employees of the deceased: Alf Jarvis, A. Jennings, John Lynch, Herbert Fyke, Garnet McLean and Clare Miltimore.

Mike O'Malley, Morrisburg, proved the winter in 1952 of the J. J. Gilroy Trophy and Minature for the largest number of points gained with wining entries in the annual contest. Lt.-Colonel J. P. Donihee, officer commanding the S.D. & G. Highlanders, has announced the selection of WO2 C. J. S. Fenton to represent the regiment at the Coronation ceremonies in London, England, on June 2nd.

Charlie is the husband of the former Violet McMurray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. McMurray, Chesterville.

CSM Fenton has rendered long and distinguished service to the battalion and because of his excellent record and capabilities and his soldierly conduct at all times, he was unanimously chosen a delegate to represent the regiment in the Canadian contigent which will attend.

CSM Fenton was born in Dublin, Ireland, and went to Cornwall, Ont., in 1926 where he attended local schools. He served in the NPAM from 1931 to 1934 and re-enlisted in 1940, attaining the rank of sergeant. EASTER SEAL CAMPAIGN STILL OPEN CONTRIBUTIONS SLOW

The Easter Seal Campaign for crippled children is running a bit behind in contributions this year as compared with other years. The committee feels the largest reason is forgetfulness on the part of those who intend to contribute, and appeals to them to send in the pink envelope with their contribution enclosed.

The good work of the Crippled Children's Committee never stops. Their aim is to be able to answer every worthy call for help as they have in the past. Your contributions in past years have allowed them to do this. They are confident the coming year will see no slackening in the good work through lack of funds.

If you haven't made your contribution, do it now.

Fire Razes Farm House Ed Wheeler Loses All Tuesday Afternoon

Fire swept through the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wheeler on Tuesday afternoon and left a smouldering ruin and the ashes of all their household goods and clothing. Only a few blankets and a mattress escaped the flames.

Dwaine Wheeler, a son of the family, noticed a spark on the roof of the house at about four in the afternoon as he came from the barn. He dashed a pail of water on it and seemingly extinguished the fire. His father, ill in bed with the 'flu, was told at once and he had Dwaine check the attic of the north of the house.

The young an found the whole area a mass of flames and smoke. Mr. Wheeler and his daughter, also ill, made their way downstairs with difficulty and managed to get outside before the flames spread into the front of the house. Mrs. Wheeler had departed a few minutes before in the car to get another daughter from school.

High winds of the afternoon fanned the blaze out of control in a matter of minutes. Chesterville Fire Brigade arrived promptly after the siren blew but the flames were sweeping the frame structure and nothing could be done to halt their progress. Fortunately the wind was blowing away from the barn and no danger was experienced in that quarter.

The loss was partially covered by insurance.

WILL CRACK DOWN ON FIRECRACKER THROWERS

(Daily Standard-Freeholder)

Cornwall city police have served notice they are going to crack down—and hard—on children, and others similarly inclined, who throw lighted firecrackers at other children or adults. Police Chief Frank H. Hunter has reported the firecracker situation locally has reached the point where the police no longer are going to let off offenders with a warning. Instead, they plan to prosecute anyone who indulges in this highly dangerous practice. Police are planning to do everything possible to curb wanton and indiscriminate use of firecrackers as a public safety protective measure.

Authorities here report they have received several complaints about children setting off firecrackers in private mail boxes and tossing the explosives at other kiddies and grownups. Police finally decided to take appropriate action when they were advised a girl's coat had been badly burned after a firecracker had been thrown at her by a hare-brained youth. In this particular instance, parents of the girl are seeking damages for the coat, which was practically destroyed.

Police point out they can prosecute offenders under a city by-law which provides that fireworks can be set off only during a time prescribed by the mayor and city council. They can also be charged with assault, where injury is sustained as a result of their firecracker-tossing activities; and with causing property damage. If the offenders are juveniles, they will be ordered to appear in juvenile court. Adults, of course, will be summonsed to appear in magistrate's court.

Although many of the violent types of fireworks have disappeared in recent years, there still is considerable danger in handling the kinds currently available. Most of the firecrackers in common use today haven't the explosive force which those in past years had. However, all firecrackers, no matter what the explosive qualities, form a definite menace to public safety when they are tossed at people. Serious injury can result when a lighted firecracker is thus handled.

In the best interests of all, parents should make it a point to supervise the use of fireworks by their children. Only in this way can there be any assurance that the fireworks will be set off with a minimum of danger to the kiddies themselves and to others.

The British Comet

Colin Wills, the Australian broadcaster, recently went to De Havilland's Aircraft Factory to see how the British Comet jet air liners are made. On the nearly finished planes were the colours of the companies which had ordered them, scarlet and silver for Canadian Pacific Airlines, and for a French airline dark blue, white and yellow and the tail adorned with the national colours. The Comet is now in great demand and those Wills saw were the first to be sold to foreign airlines.

His talk was illustrated by BBC recordings made in the various shops of the factory and listeners heard the noise of a jet engine at close quarters. "Oddly enough, when you're flying in a jet plane like the Comet", he said, "there is no more noise than in any other aircraft, less than many."

A jet engine was so simple in essence, so vast in power that after the war De Havilland's were convinced that a jet airliner was a possiblity. They set to work to design an aircraft which, while suiting this engine, would also be as like an ordinary aircraft as possible. Experts worked ceaselessly on perfecting their new idea and countless tests were made. Because the strain on the aircraft would be very great every part was tested under far greater strain than it would ever have to bear in practice, while the engines went through exhaustive tests that were quite impossible to describe. "And all this was done in just three years" said Wills. De Havilland's chief test pilot, Group- Captain John Cunningham, took the vrst Comet for its first flight on his birthday, July 27, 1949. It was a triumphant success, but the trials were not ended because the Comet had flown. Cunningham took it up again and again to test the behaviour of engine and aircraft in all conditions, and engineers, designers and other experts went up as well to ask him to make various tests to prove things they wanted to know. Wills went on such a flight when the experts on board were particularly interested in stalling. "It is necessary to know just what happens to a particular aircraft if its engines lose flying speed in mid air." Cunningham did exactly this and for a few moments the plane glided gracefully on in silence. Then the speed dropped and it began to tremble and shake all over, ever more violently, and then to turn on one side and drop straight down through space. "Believe me," said Wills, "I've never been so frightened in my life. And they did it over and over again."

That was little more than a year ago and now the Comet is a part of everyday life in Britain. Passengers hardly know they are in a jet plane except for the strange absence of vibration, the stranger absence of propellors and the wonderful speed. On the test flight Wills took they were over Hatfield, Wales, France, Belgium and the North of England before he realized that they were moving at a speed of more than eight miles a minute. The men who designed, built and tested the Comet and had the courage to try it out on B.O.A.C. Airlines when all other airlines were sticking to piston-engine aircraft have done more than speed up flying. The planes Wills saw were the last of Comet type one; Comet two, better still, was already being built and Comet three, greatest of all, will be flowing off the assembly line by 1956, and De Havilland's said that improvements were still going on. It is not only designers and test pilots who have contributed to the Comets greatness, but also the ordinary men and women who have to be so careful, skilful and above all have their hearts in the job. They are all, said Wills, "essential and important factors in the making of the Comet. And that's something to be proud of, because the Comet is a British invention that is bringing both profit and prestige. The first jet airliner in history, brilliantly successful from the start and still improving."

UNSINKABLE FABRIC

Unsinkable and highly secret clothing is about to become Britain's newest dollar earner. British manufacturers of a type of clothing which is secretly processed to keep its wearers afloat, have announced a £100,000 deal with a U.S. firm to produce unsinkable vests, bathing suits, belts, underwear and other garments in the United States.

Made of a buoyant substance sandwiched between water-repellent material, the product's unsinkability has been tested in:

A pair of men's trunks capable of keeping a 200-pound man afloat.

Underclothing capable of keeping a fisherman in all his winter gear, including waders, afloat in rough seas for forty-five minutes.

Suits for infantile paralysis patients undergoing water treatment.

WHO'S MAKING MONEY?

Who's making the money now? The Financial Post supplies the answers.

Corporation profits in 1952, before taxes, estimated up only slightly, almost unchanged, from the year before. Total investement income was up 2% though, because of interest, rents to ondividuals and income of government-owned businesses up by 8% and 14% respectively. Wages and salaries are up 12%. Accrued net income of farm operators is down 12%—because of low livestock prices and 10% boost in farm operating expenses.

The national income—all earnings from current production—is up 6%. Wages and salaries are up 12%.

Weed of the Week—

Yellow Rocket Spreads with Speed

Man-made aircraft are consistently breakng the sound barier these days, thereby establishing hitherto unknown records but despite this progress man has yet a lot to learn from Mother Nature when it comes to speed.

This is especialy true as far as the rapidity with which noxious weeds can be distributed across the farm lands of Ontario.

Designers of aircraft might well have taken a leaf from the book of yellow rocket for there is a weed that spreads as if jet propelled.

A few years ago considered a "mere nuisance" farmers are now realizing that it plays a real part in lowered production and, as a result, a lower return per acre.

Known variously as winter cress or St. Barbaras herb, the weed usually appears as an impurity in grass or clover seed. First warning of the unwelcome visitor is usually towards the end of May.

"Chemical control is not practical in a clover field, but on the road-sides or waste places 24D at 6 or more ounces of acid per acre will control yellow rocket in late May or early June," says C. H. Kingsbury, of the Crops, Seeds and Weeds branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. "When clover is in the mixture, early cutting is the most effective method of stopping the spread of seed. Yellow rocket cut in the 1st week of June and cured for hay or ensiled doesn't get a chance to go to seed. If only a few plants are present, hand pulling not only removes the rocket, but reduces the waist line."

"Good drainage, thorough fall and spring cultivation will rapidly clean up yellow rocket. If permitted to go to seed, however, mature seeds are dropped by the end of July and in September a second wave of yellow rocket seedlings are present to plague the unhappy farmer."

YOU CAN TAKE IT WITH YOU

HE BUILDED IN SORROW,
He builded alone,
A Temple whose beauties
Will never be known,
And in Its erection
On grounds where He stood,
He fashioned It neither
With stone, nor with wood.

Foundations of Faith,
Its sills are of Love,
The walls are of Service,
And anchored Above,
The roof of the Essence
That springs from the Soul,
An unseen effervescence
Encases the whole.

This Temple if filled
With a Peace undefined,
And room more than ample
For all of mankind,
No need to prepare,
Nor to journey afar,
You can be within It

Grass Farming Interest Reaching New Heights

Ontario farmers are finding that there is no part of the farm that will return as much net income per acre with as little cost as properly laid down, well managed pasture the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture reports.

Interest in grassland farming has reached a new high throughout the province as farmers have learned by experience that proper management of grassland will conserve the soil, save labour and provide the highest possible food value at the lowest cost.

The Department points out that improved pastures, properly balanced hay mixtures and highly nutritious grass silage all fit together towards an efficient livestock feeding programme for the entire year.

In the past years some farmers felt that initial costs and difficulties in obtaining small seeds provided a handicap to increasing or improving their grass acreage. That is not the case this year. Plentiful supplies of all grasses and clovers are now available at prices considerably less than have been obtained for many years.

"Therefore " says the Crop Branch, "This is a good year to seed down."

Regular mixtures can be improved by stepping up the content of alfalfa, Ladino or some of the improved grasses such as meadow fescle, brome and reed canary grass, according to their adaptability. With such favourable seed conditions this year an opportunity is provided for seeding down a greater acreage. As a result it is expected that many farmers will take advantage of the opportunity to improve their seeding practices.

As many meadows and pastures have this winter due to lack of snow, attention to grassland improvement is timely,

"There is no part of our farms that will return as much net income per acre with as little cost as properly managed pasture," said the Crops Branch, "It is important to our economy that pasture, hay and silage crops be given an important place in our planning of farm operations. 'Grassland is Cashland'—a slogan to be kept in mind."

Weekly Farm Report For Dundas County

With the frost out of the ground and the country roads again passable, spring operations on the farm are nearly ready to commence, with the exception of certain areas in the county where most agricultural land is still too wet to work. However, with continuing dry weather work on the land should commence in a couple of weeks. With this prospect of an early spring and with new seeding and pastures coming through the winter in tip top condition, cattle will be able to go to pasture much earlier this year. Farmers should be cautioned regarding the turning of cattle out on pasture while the land is still too wet as any saving in feed would be offset by the trampling of the small, new seedlings into the ground. Those who wish to increase the carrying capacity of their pastures, an application of barnyard manure or commercial fertilizer is recommended. Grass pastures respond best to a high nitrogen fertilizer, clovers to a high phosphorous fertilizer. For more information on pastures Bulletin No. 469, "Better Ontario Pastures" and Bulletin No. 463 "Soil Management and Fertilizer Use," are available at your Agricultural Representative's office.

Prospects for farm labour are not very good. Fewer immigrants are arriving and this year, through the Department of Citizenship and Immigration, only six families are available for the three United Counties, whereas, last year, there was a surplus of fifteen or twenty families who could not be placed. Single farm help is practically non-existent. This year the farmers will have to make use of many of the more expensive labour saving machinery and co-operate just a bit more with their neighbour.

At this time of year comes the organization of 4-H Clubs. Boys and girls between the ages of 12 and 20 who wish to participate in this work and who have not previously belonged to 4-H Clubs should send their names to the Agricultural Representative at Morrisburg. Clubs being organized in the county this year include Mountain Senior and Junior Calf Clubs; Chesterville Calf Club; Williamsburg Calf Club; Iroquois Poultry Club; Chesterville Poultry Club; Dundas Grain Club; Chesterville Tractor Club and Mountain Swine Club. Organization of these clubs will be held during the latter part of April and the first of May.

Events of interest in the future will be the Spray Days to be held at the Kemptville Agricultural School on Tuesday and Wednesday, April 21 and 22. Featured at these days will be Weed and Brush Control on farms and roadsides by spraying with chemicals. The will be demonstrations of sprayers and special speakers.

Patrick, suffering from toothache, got up enough nerve to visit his dentist, but lost it again when he was about to get into the chair. The dentist told his assistant to give Pat a tot of whiskey. "Got your courage back now?" he asked.

"No," replied Pat. So a second tot was brough and a third.

"Now have you got your courage?"

Pat squared his shoulders. "I'd like to see the man," he said, "who'd dare to touch my teeth now."

Two British Workers Each Win $210,000 In Soccer Sweep

Two men lost interest in Tuesday's British national budget. Their tax troubles were over.

They are William Foyle, a construction worker, and Geo. Meakin, electric welder, both winners of $210,000 in soccer sweepstakes.

Each had forecast correctly eight drawn games in last Saturday's professional soccer games.

Such winnings are not subject to income tax in England.

Foyle, 55, and his wife have brought up a family of seven children, five of whom are married. Meakin, 35, is single and lives with his parents.

Rideau Canal To Be Filled April 27

It was announced Tuesday by the Department of Transport that the water in the Ottawa section of the Rideau Canal, including Dows Lake, will be raised to its usual summer level starting Monday, April 27. The water wil be raised about seven feet and will be at full height on April 30th.

The section of the Canal between Hartwells and Hogsback will be filled on April 25, and between Hogsback and Long Island will be raised commencing on April 22. All sections of the Rideau system will be filled by Friday, May 1.

The spring freshet which reached its peak during the last week in March, passed over with less damage than usual this year.

TALKING DOG!

Some weeks ago the "Manchester Guardian", one of the most famous of all British provincial newspapers which also has a national curculation, published a report of Nicky, an allegedly "talking" dog which lives in Australia, in the Maitland district of New South Wales. This sagacious animal is said to be able to talk like a human being and, moreover, to have aped the human being's unfortunate propensity for including an occasional rude word in his conversation.

Oliver Hogue, a journalist who wrote about Nicky in the Sydney "Sunday Sun," said that his words come out "as clearly as a bell and just like a human voice." The authenticity of this astonishing beast is vouched for by the Anglican Archbishop of Newcastle, New South Wales who, after hearing Nicky's performance, said "I would not have believed it possible if I had not heard it myself. It was a most extraordinary experience." Nicky has been trained to his present pitch of vocal dexterity by his owner, wife of the Newcastle diocesan registrar, who taught him to speak from puppyhood days by mouthing words and then saying them to him.

The BBC, ever anxious to make interesting and informative sounds from whatever source available to its listeners, wrote to its Australian representative and asked for further details of Nicky and, if possible, a recording. The BBC man on the spot contacted Nicky's owner and reported that her talented pet found the heat somewhat trying and was not prepared to consider performing for the BBC until March or April at the earliest as he was "inclined to puff and blow a little in the humid weather we are having at present."

As soon as climatic conditions permit it is to be hoped that Nicky will consent to put his voice on record omitting, it must be devoutly hoped, the dubious word that has so regrettably slipped into his otherwise unexceptionable vocabulary.

SOME TRENDS IN FARM MACHINERY SALES

While increasing industrial activity has tended to reduce the supply of labour in rural communities, the industrial expansion has increased the supply of goods available, including a wider selection of new and improved lines of farm equipment. This has enabled farmers to more effectively mechanize farm operations, says J. M. Armstrong of the Agricultural Engineering Division, Central Exeperimental Farm, Ottawa.

Some of the consumer preferences in choice of this equipment are of interest. In general, there has been a trend to heavier farm power with a larger demand for standard tractors in the 2-3 and 3-4 plow sizes and for row crop tractors in the 2-3 plow size. Sales of one-plow and garden tractors have tended to fall off while sales of diesel tractors have increased to about 10 per cent of the wheel tractors sold.

The most striking changes in the tillage tool group have been the rapid trend to tractor mounted units, including tool bar type cultivators and the large reduction in the sales of horse-drawn tillage equipment. There has been a heavy reduction in the sale of one-way discs, a corresponding increase in the sale of diskers and an increase in the sale of heavy duty cultivators.

In haying equipment, sales of horse-drawn mowers are down to less than half their former volume or to about the same as the number of tractor units sold. Sales of tractor drawn mowers have increased sharply to exceed the sale of other classes of mowers. The number of side-delivery rakes sold now exceeds the number of dump rakes and sales of hay loaders have steadily increased. These chnges hve contributed to the speeding up of initil haying operations. Sales of hay balers have approximated three thousnd a year with an increasing proportion of engine driven units, while sles of forage crop harvesters have risen to between thirteen and fourteen hundred a year.

Trends in other lines of harvesting equipment have included a sharp increase in combine sales with self-propelled units accounting for over half the combine sales and an increase in the sale of corn pickers. Over eighty per cent of these have been pull type machines and less than twenty per cent tractor mounted.

SOIL EROSION— A THREAT TO AGRICULTURE

Wastage of soil by erosion on agricultural lands in many countries has seriously depleted their productivity. At present, Canada is one of the more fortunate countries, because the amount of permanent damage caused by soil erosion is comparatively small. But such damage is clearly evident in all parts of the country where conditions permit the washing or blowing away of soil. Most farms are affected by soil erosion to a greater or lesser extent and many farmers are faced with the difficult problem of trying to restore fertility which has been depleted, because of the removal of soil by natural agencies.

While it is impossible to determine exactly how much damage the arable lands of Canada have suffered by loss of topsoil or by gullying, a recent estimate by soil surveyors indicates in a broad manner, the present situation. According to this estimate, reports A. Leahey, soils expert at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, the productivity of about one-quarter of the arable lands of this country has been lowered to a moderate extent by soil erosion. Severe damage has occurred in many agricultural areas but the total amount of land so affected is relatively small. While about three-quarters of the arable land has escaped any appreciable damage as yet, erosion is occurring on some of this land, which if unchecked, will lead to noticeable depletion of its productivity.

Farmer: "How did it happen that you got home so late last night?"

Daughter: "Oh, it was that new horse of Bill's—it's too dumb to know the difference between 'Oh' and 'Whoa'."

SUGAR PRODUCED FROM PALM TREES

The people of Burma, along the Irrawady River, have solved the sugar problem. They make their own from the sap from palm trees. In this way they supply themselves, and have a surplus to export. The process is not too easy, but is workable and illustrates the adaptability of natives to use what they have on hand.

The palm trre which supplies the sap for the making of this sugar is called the toddy palm. It is much like the palmetto palm of Florida, or like the fan palm of the south-western States. It grows to a height of eighty to one hundred feet, and is a very graceful tree. It is in the groves of these trees, which dot the landscape, that the sugar camps are established.

Sugar-making is in the dry season of the year. It is the female tree of the species which supply the sap, which comes from the flower stock. First, all the flower stalks of the male trees are completely wrapped up or cut off, to render them inactive. Then the flower stalks on the female trees are wrapped up in long rolls with only the tip showing. This tip is then cut off, and the wound bleeds sap, which is caught in a vessel. This liquid, which would otherwise go to mature the seed, has a sweetish taste, and when boiled produces a sort of sugar.

To each tapped tree is fastened a permanent ladder, extending within some six feet off the ground. The sap gatherer carries a short ladder and a receptacle for the sap. On his short ladder he reaches the permanent one and climbs up to gather what has been collected, twice a day. This sap, called "jaggery" in the native tongue, produces a sugar much like maple sugar in taste and colour. The native people are very fond of it and prefer it to other kinds of sugar.

BETWEEN THE EARS

The average human body is made up of the folloling:

Fat enough for seven bars of soap; iron enough for a ten penny nail; sugar enough to fill a small shaker; lime enough to whitewash a hen coop; phosphorus enough to make 2,200 matches; magnesium enugh for a ten cent skyrocket; potassium enough to explode a toy cannon; sulphur enough to rid a small dog of his fleas.

Your value, therefore, depends upon what goes on between your ears."

A woman in Cranbrook, Ontario, who picked up a thirteen-heart hand in a bridge game worked herself into a bid of seven hearts redoubled. She cleaned up over 2000 points.

LETTER WRITING CONTEST FOR ONTARIO HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

High school students are eligible to win $2,000 in a letter writing contest just announced by the Honourable Louis P. Cecile, Minister of Travel and Publicity for the province.

Mr. Cecile said the contest is sponsored by his Department to encourage Ontario students to write inviting friends and relatives who live beyond Ontario, either in Canada or the U.S. to come to Ontario this year. Contest rules are now being advertised throughout the province.

First prize is $400; second, $250; third, $100; followed by 50 prizes of $25 each. All students enrolled in Grades IX to XIII or their equivalent are eligible. Letters are not to exceed 200 words and may be written in English or French. Students must have their teacher certify that the letter submitted is their original work. There is no limit to individual entries.

Mr. Cecile pointed out, however, that each entry qualify must be accompanied by the name and address of a non-resident of Ontario to whom a free map and literature will be sent by the Department.

The contest closes on May 15th next. Contestants are invited to ask the Department of Travel and Publicit y to send them literature if they feel it would assist them in preparing their letters. Mr. Cecile said that originality of thought and expression would be one of the principal ponits upon which the letters would be judged.

The address of the Department is Room BB1, 67 College St., Toronto, Ontario.

London Bus Driver

A. W. Selwyn, mathematics master at an English school, had always felt about buses as most school boys feel about trains and one day he signed on as a bus driver with London Transport and began taking training at Chiswick. Until then he had thought he could drive quite well, he said talking of his experiences in a radio broadcast. He spent his first week's training in forgetting this while the instructor in turn swore at and cadjoled his four pupils. Before being let loose in the London streets to take their part in maintaining the finest transport service in the world, they had to negotiate the skid patch. This wide, well-watered expanse was easier than they had expected and they left it full of confidence. This was rudely dispelled a few days later by an uncontrollable front wheel skid on some wood blocks in the centre of London, which scattered a bus que with great speed. The pupils failed their first test which meant a dressing down and an extra week's training, "for which I was personally thankful," said Selwyn, "as I didn't feel at all confident in my ability to carry five hundred passengers a day through London in safety."

There was much more to learn than mere driving. There were lectures on the Highway Code, duty rotas, gears, brakes, punctures, accidents and so on. "Our instructors were magnificent and patient men with hearts of gold and throats of brass," said Selwyn. Many of the men at Chiswick had been driving for twenty-five years and spared no effort in training their successors to do the job properly for the next twenty-five and were full of fearful cautionary tales about the perils lurking in wait for careless drivers. Selwyn was schooled in the vitally important business of running his bus on time. Running early is an unforgivable sin for if the bus in front is early the one behind has more to do. It was perfectly possible to run to time in normal traffic conditions but at rush hours it took so long to get people on and off the bus that it was often impossible to keep to schedule without driving faster than he should. Late at night or on Sundays it was difficult to go slowly enough in top gear and often the only remedy was to hang around at the bus stops. The same thing was not true in the early morning and on his first journey, when he left the garage at five-fifteen a.m., he found that within four stops the bus was full with women cleaners going to turn out offices. "Its surprising how soon after that you're into the factory crowds, the school rush and the shopping ques," he said. At all these varying rush hours the conductor has to move about the bus collecting fares in a very short time and he needs a comfortable ride. "I was always interested," said Selwyn, "to see whether we could do a whole journey without a single jerk of any kind—stopping, starting or changing gears. I don't thing I've ever succeeded but I know it can be done."

He could not easily forget his first day as a qualified driver when he pitched his conductor on the floor within thirty seconds, missed several stops within thirty minutes, was full all day and came in three quarters of an hour late with record takings. He ached all over, particularly in his feet and right hand, which was sore from squeezing the handbrake so often, but he was proud of his new job and pleased to discover what seemed impossibly difficult at Chiswick was possible after all. There were, of course, frequent moments of boredom but there was sheer poetry too, notably the Houses of Parliament in the driving mirror, lit by the rising sun on a perfect October morning. That was magical, and he said "so were the Deputy Chief Inspector's words when I neglected to tell him I was reading Norwegian on top of a spare bus, and he looked for me for twenty minutes without success. They were also distinctly unfriendly, but I think they were the onuly unfriendly ones I ever heard."

Seeing much, suffering much, and studying much, are the three pillars of learning.—Disraeli.

MORRISBURG MEN HURT IN CRASH

Harold Crawford, 22, and Robert Henophy, 23, were in Brockville General Hospital following injuries received Sunday night when the car in which they were riding left the road a mile east of Iroquois and rolled over several times.

Both men came from Morrisburg. Crawford suffered concussion while Henophy sustained scalp and face lacerations. Two other men in the vehicle escaped injury.

Dr. J. R. Miller, of Iroquois, treated the victims at the accident scene. They were rushed to hospital by ambulance.

The car, property of Henophy, was almost a total wreck. Constable E. MacDougall, OPP, investigated.

NET PROFIT

In 1213 King John wrote to the Sheriff of Dorset and asked him to cause to be made at Bridport as many ropes, cables and twisted yarns for cordage as was possible. The people of the district set to work and they have stuck to the trade ever since and as Michael Brown told on a BBC programme, every kind of net, from big fishing nets to the little ones for keeping flies off ponies' ears, is still made in Bridport homes and exported all over the world.

The craft of net-making has been handed down from mother to daughter for hundreds of years and the work produced is of a very high standard. Bowen talked to Mr. Sanctuary, whose firm does a flourishing trade in nets, and he told the BBC representative that women not only make nets in their homes but that many come in to work in the factories as well. The outworkers number about three thousand, for while bulk netting and large sheets can be made and cut out on machines, articles like billard pockets, landing nets and anything in the shape of a hose or a bag cannot properly be made on a machine and must be done by outworkers. Bowen went to call on some of these workers and met Mrs. Legg, who was sitting at a table at work on a net for a luggage rack. She worked with a large, hollow wooden needle filled with twine, making the mesh by following directions rather like a knitting pattern. The firm's van called twice a week with a fresh supply of twine and a pattern for the next job and took away what had been done and paid for it, the payment working out at about two shillings an hour. Mrs. Legg considered small net-making the ideal job for housewives as it was brought to the house and the workers could sit down to it in comfort while at the same time they attended to what was going on in their homes. "I think it is a very nice hobby myself," she said, a statment with which many women in Bridport agree.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Home-makers-to-be! You, the summer bride of '53, will be day-dreaming about keeping house. Your mind's eye may see your new kitchen with such photographic clearness that you have mentally wrung out the dish cloth, put back the pretty dishes on the shelf and settled back to enjoy it. But face to face with your first actual shopping trip for utensils you won't know where to begin! Soon, someone (planning a shower) will be quizzing you as to what you want in kitchenware.

The kitchen section of your hardware is a fascinating place. Look around and decide on your preference in material and colour, then you may dream "out loud" to those who may enquire about what you would like to have.

TAKE A TIP

1. If you and your fiancé decide on the stove, then you can take the measurements of the oven as a guide to cookie sheets, roast pan and drop cake tins since cookie sheets should be 2 inches less in each dimension than the oven shelf. The size of muffin pans and layer cake pans should permit placing two on one shelf with a little space at ends and sides of the oven.
2. With a rangette the best buy will be a set of saucepans in steamer design or wedge shape, and small baking pans are advisable.
3. Your choice of kitchenware should be considered from a standpoint of cost, durability, care required, satisfactory performance and appearance.
4. Efficient cookie pans fit the small or large electric element, have straight sides and lids that set into the rim.

SUGGESTED LIST OF KITCHENWARE

A. Cutlery

Bread knife, carving knife, utility knife, 2 vegetable knives, meat fork, pair shears (all stainless steel), egg lifter, can opener, bottle opener, knife sharpener, set of cookie cutters, set of measuring spoons, wooden spoon, cutlery box and set of stainless steel knives, fork and spoons.

Desirable Cutlery: Pastry blender, krimper, 2 funnels, egg slicer, set of skewers, cookie press, vegetable peeler, tongs, onion chopper, nut mincer, skimmer, ladle, apple corer, spatula, biscuit cutters, pancake turner, extra set measuring spoons.

B. Mixed Utensils

Nest of mixing bowls, 1 cup and 1 pint measures, rotary egg beater, potato masher, grater set, wire strainer, reamer, bread board, rollingpin, food chopper, flour sifter, rubber scraper.

Desirable mixing utensils: Set of measuring cups, pastry cloth and cover, 2 pitchers, 2 scoops, portable electric mixer, potato ricer, puree, household scales, beverage shaker.

C. Top of Range Utensils

GEORGE MURRAY

Winipeg-born tenor George Murray made up his mind to be a radio singer before he was out of high school and after years of hard work he is now considered one of the top entertainers in the business. After making a name for himself in the West, he went to Toronto in 1939 to find a larger audience. Since that time he has been gaining recognition as a successful singer on a number of CBC network programmes. On top of this, he has turned up in a number of CBC dramas, particularly in parts calling for an actor who can sing. Murray likes to get out with rod and reel. In Toronto sporting circles he's known to be a very enthusiastic fisherman.

Time Changes

It is wonderful how people's taste change with the years. When boys are small they have a yen for soldiers and small girls love dolls. When they get older the girls are crazy about soldiers and the boys fall for the dolls.
