Place For Him

The Scotch Minister had preached for an hour and a quarter on the prophets—all the greater prophets and then the minor ones in turn.

"Now we come to Habakkuk," he said. "Where shall we put him?"

"He can have my seat," said a weary listener. "I'm awa' hame."

$20,000 Fire Loss In Morrisburg Business Section

Fire of undertermined origin at 4.20 a. m. Wednesday, December 27th, destroyed the Flynn block, at Main and Locke streets, Morrisburg. in the main business district, driving two families into sub-zero weather and causing damage estimated at $20,000.

Prompt action by the fire department under Chief Herbert Clark prevented the blaze from spreading to the St. Lawrence Hall Hotel, the Post Office and the Bradfield Hardware, across the street from the Flynn- block.

Saves Baby

Pte L. Stada, home on Christmas leave, snatched his four-months-old baby from its carriage which was already on fire and fled with his wife from their ground floor apartment to safety in the street. Pte Stada suffered minor cuts and burns, but the baby was uninjured.

The only other family residing in the two-storey brick veneer building was that of William Adams, his wife and five children, all of whom escaped uninjured from their second floor apartment. The Adams family managed to save some of their equipment from the barber shop and beauty parlor, which they operated on the ground floor, but their household furniture was destroyed. The furniture of the Stada household was also a complete loss. Neither was coverered by insurance but the policies were burned along with the contents of Mr. Flynn's office. The loss to the Adams household was estimated at $4,000. The Stada loss has not been determined.

It was the second fire in the Morrisburg business district within eight days.

Living Example

Down in the South Seas an American soldier was discussing his favorite subject, food, with a native.

Men are largely what they eat, remarked G. I. Joe.

You are right sir, affirmed the native. Look at me—I am a living example of that fact. Once I was a cannibal but what do you suppose I am now? I am a missionary!

ELECTORS TWP. WINCHESTER.

As Dep. Reeve I desire to send a personal message to each of you, especially to all the men and women in His Majesty's Forces.

It is so easy and natural to say a Happy New Year. Some have been away five years, for others this is the first year, while still others the chair may be permanently taken from its place. Yet surely a Happy New Year is not an idle wish and I pray and hope that all will be with us next year.

Thanking the electors for the confidence that you have placed in me in the past years and assuring you that the Township interest will always be considered, I am

Your Sincere Servant,
E.R. Summers,
Dep. Reeve.

Grantley

This winter and especially the holiday season will be remembered as the "struggle with the snow." We have had the Wedding of the Winds, with Jack Frost and the snow maidens holding high carnival and laughing at such prosaic things as snow ploughs, blocked roads and humans eagerly watching for that important person the mailman and he not coming for days on end. However all this didn't keep folks from getting together for Christmas feasts.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McMillan entertained the following guests on Christmas, Pay. Lt. Don and Mrs. Fulton and little daughter Barbara Ann, Vancouver; Sgt. Donald and Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. Pearl Schmidt, St. John's, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Munro and Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne Munro, Nation Valley; Reeve Geo. If this letter reaches you will you please write and let me know. I have a feeling that you may think I do not appreciate these boxes but I really do. IN MEMORIAM.

CASSELMAN—In fond and loving memory of our dear father Mahlon Casselman, who passed away December 30th, 1940.

Gone dear father gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face,
The blow was great, the shock severe
We little thought the end was near.
Time speeds, four years have passed
Since death its gloom, its shadows cast,
Within our home where all seemed bright
And took from us that shining light;
We miss that light and ever will,
His vacant place there's none can fill
Down here we mourn but not in vain
For some sweet day we will meet again. Wife and family.

In loving memory of our dear daughter Florence Harradine, who died December 27th, 1942.

The one we loved has gone to rest
Her fond true heart is still;
The hands that always helped
Now lie in death's cold chill.
A life made beautiful by kindly deeds,
A helping hand to other's needs
To a beautiful life came a sudden end,
She died as she lived everybody's friend. Mother, Dad and family.

A Runt of A Horse

My wife and I were in Oregon some years ago for the annual Pendleton Round-Up when we first met Frank and Katie Frazier. We have visited them many times since. They are now strong and active at 91 and 83. In their home we have learned much of the big and little things that have spun the remarkable fabric of their long life together: their pioneering struggles in early Oregon, their single-minded devotion to each other—they never had children—and finally their one great love.

Here is the story of that love, for a little runt of a horse, as Frank and Katie told it to me.

"Poker Nash called me one day," said Frank, "and asked if I wanted to buy a horse. I told him I didn't want one of his because it probably didn't have any teeth. He said "All right, you old fool," and hung up. So of course I called right back to see what it was all about. Well, he'd seen a colt he was all het up about and he'd seen me racing against the Doc's trotting horses, and I always got beat. He didn't like the Doc too well. Maybe that was it.

"Well, I wrote to a friend who knew horses to go see this colt and next day I got a wire to send $600, so I did. In a few days I got the bill of sale for Chehalis.

"Like a fool, I went blabbing around town that I'd got me a real Kentucky two-year-old — and then he came in a boxcar and I almost died. He was the littlest, puniest thing I ever saw. I led him up the back streets so the boys wouldn't see him.

"But the minute Katie saw that that poor little potbellied horse she began to talk baby talk to him and damn if he didn't muzzle her neck as if she had brought him up on a bottle. She didn't know if he was good or not and didn't care. She kept saying, "Oh, Frank, I just love that horse and at the crack of dawn she was out talking to him again.

"I bought an old high-wheel sulky and took the ilttle runt out on the dirt road. I hit him one lick with the whip—and my God! I pretty near had the seat of my pants taken off. That little devil went like a bat out of hell. When I got home Katie thought I'd gone nuts.

"At first I didn't show him off much, pulled him down when anyone was around; and then one day Doc came along the road with his bay trotter and called out 'Hey, Frank, is that the beautiful new horse I been hearing about—or is it a kangaroo?'

"Chehalis must have heard him, too. I spoke once, and in a split second we was high-tailing after him. We caught up so fast I was afraid we'd step on him. I yelled, 'Git out of the way, you old coot, and let the knagaroo go by.' Doc looked around with his eyes bugging out and lit into his horse with the whip, and that's all I saw when we passed him. I knew that I had a real racer, and that he knew racing was to beat the other horse. Sometimes a horse never learns that.

"We trained Chehalis all summer and I drove him always. That was Katie's idea. She said if he never knew the feel of any other hands I could talk to him and tell him what to do. After his exercise Katie'd be waiting, and he'd hunt around for the piece of sugar that she had carried out for him. One day she put the sugar in her pocket and tucked a handkerchief on top of it, not thinking and that horse took the handkerchief out of her pocket and stood there holding it, Looking silly to me, but Katie thought it was wonderful and she did it every day.

'When I figured he was ready I took him down to Sacremento. There were 16 horses in his race, and that little black horse flashed by 'em all so fast they looked like they was tied. So we made a tour, Katie and Chehalis and I, around the western tracks and he won 12 ot of 13 races. The papers were filled with stories about the little black Oregon wonder that 'floated through the air.'

"Well, the next spring at our first meet, in Montana, Chehalis won his race easy, so I slowed him down a little at the wire—and then the head judge announced we came in third! The crowd nearly mobbed the judge's stand, and a Texan, a big the decision. I was so disgusted I was ready to quit.

"But the Texan says, 'Listen to me, son, you won't quit if you've got any guts. You got a fine little horse. Mebbe if you were to train him over a little longer distance—' and then he talked to us very earnesily about an idea that might mean something wonderful.

"Right away Katie and I began making new plans that took our breath away. We kept Chehalis in shape for the mile races but every morning I began to train him over a two-mile stretch. And along toward the end of the season we went down to the big fair at Salem, Oregon. But we couldn't get a race—wasn't a horse there fast enough to give Chehalis any competition. My little horse was a great drawing card and the judges wanted the crowd to see him in action. Of course the early morning 'clockers' had seen us going that two-mile stretch. So the judges asked me if I was figuring on breaking the two-mile pacing record—4:24¼. Told me if I could, they'd give me $500 and another hundred for each second we took off. We took them up. It seemed like the little horse was ready."

"Yes, and you were ready, too," Katie interjected. "You should have seen him—he had a light blue satin jacket, a navy-blue cap with a long holding that handkerchief in his visor, white linen pants, all shining new. He and the little black-velvet horse certainly made a picture.

"I sat in the judge's stand and I thought I'd die waiting. Didn't anyone think he'd make the world's record—he was so little—except maybe Frank and me, and maybe Chehalis himself. Then away they went and I just held my breath. I heard the judges say, '30 seconds at the first quarter . . too fast, going to get tired . . . 1:04 at the half . . 1:35 third quarter.' And they came down the stretch on the first mile, the little horse going steady as a machine.

"My heart almost choked me when the judges yelled, '2:09 for the mile—can't keep it up!" And then they almost screamed, "My God, see that hoss go!' and pretty soon they began to cheer just like they weren't judges at all. Frank and Chehalis came tearing down the stretch—Frank didn't even have his whip out but I could see him saying, 'Boy, Boy, Boy'—that's all.

"And then they flashed by and the judges began to dance around and they kept yelling, '4:19¼!' That was the fastest two miles ever paced against time in the world. Frank and Chehalis had taken five seconds off the record. The crowd howled when Frank came back with the little horse, jaunty as you please. They hung a great wreath of red roses around Chehalis's neck and I began to cry. My, it was wonderful!" Katie's voice choked with emotion.

Then she whispered, "And that wasn't all. Going to the hotel Frank had a great big package under his arm, with a red string around it. The moment we got in our room he tore the package open and there was the wreath of red roses they'd put around Chehalis's neck at the track. Frank dropped it around my shoulders and it reached the floor.

world's champion!"

Then Frank spoke. "Doctor, Chehalis's record stood for six years until Dan Patch broke it—and that record has stood for 40 years now.

"Well, after that we had to hit the Grand Circuit. Those harness races still seem more wonderful to me than the running races of today—the wheels of the sulkies flashing in the sun and the society crowd all dressed up in Prince Alberts for the men and wonderful lace dresses with big bustles under them for the women, and those dinky parasols.

"Near the end of the season Katie took sick in Buffalo. She talked me into going on to Boston without her. I left orders with a florist to send her yellow roses every odd day of the month with a card saying, 'With Love from Chehalis' and every even day red roses 'With Love from Frank.'

"We kept on winning, but half hte fun was out of it. Every time I went to the stall, Chehalis would look around as much as to say, "where's Katie?' And then one day there was a letter from Katie's doctor telling me I must move her to southern California for the winter. Said it might mean losing her if I didn't.

"I sat down and tried to think I was no millionaire and I'd been offered $5000 for Chehalis —and Katie was sick. I knew she wouldn't ever agree to sell him if I asked her, so I wrote her that I had already sold him. I told her I was going to race him Saturday for the last time and then I'd come and take her home.

"There wasn't a letter on Saturday and I thought she must be sicker. I pretty near decided not to race. Then I thought of all the money that had been bet on Chehalis and knew I couldn't be a quitter. I was going to sell him after the race.

"So I got up in the sulky and we walked past the grandstand. The crowd cheered Chehalis, they always liked the little black tike, and looked up to touch my cap to them—and by God, there was Katie! I saw first the dinky striped parasol I had bought her in Chicago, and then her face. She was pale as death, but smiling.

"She waved her hand. A minute before I hadn't cared, but now I kept saying' to Chehalis, 'Katie's here,' and maybe he understood.

"We got caught in a pocket at the start but the little horse fought his way up from behind and began to fly. I'd seen him go but never like that. There were three horses ahead. He passed the third and he passed the second and when he came down the last hundred yards I thought the stands would go crazy. There was a roar like Niagara with thousands of people on their feet, and papers and handkerchiefs and hats waving—and then we were across. We won by a head.

"I looked up in the box and Katie wasn't there! I dashed up to the stands and there she was, lying in a faint in the middle of a circle of people. The excitement had been too much for her.

"That night in the hotel the man who wanted to buy Chehalis came up to me and said, 'Frank, $7200 cash.' I thought of Katie's white face and answered "Chehalis is yours, mister.'

"Next morning Katie felt strong used to do back home, and nuzzled her, and she began to cry. He reached across the bar of his stall and picked her handkerchief out of the pocket of her dress the way he used to, and the last we saw of him he was standing there watching us mouth, a white blur against his shiny black coat."

"That was more than 40 years ago," Katie said. "I'm a one-man woman and Chehalis was a one-man horse. He never won a race after Frank gave him up—not one single race—and he died of a broken heart."

She ran across the room to Frank and nestled in his arms, her head on his shoulder. He held her tenderly, patting her cheek. And then—I couldn't see anything clearly any more, but in my mind I saw a vision of Frank, dapper in blue satin jacket and white trosuers; of the little black Chehalis flying down the track before cheering thousands to make a world's record; and of that day in Boston, a bit of white fluff in his mouth, looking vainly after them as they walked away, their only great sorrow and their only other love.

THE MIXING BOWL

Hello Homemakers! Once more the holiday season has gone the way of all good things and if you feel as we do; "you'll feel like one who treads alone, some banquet hall deserted; whose lights are fled; whose garlands dead and all but he departed." How else could one feel after the magpies are off to school and the house looks as if a tornado had struck it. But it's been fun to have so many doing dishes and things that had to be finished and the table has been set as soon as it was cleared away for a week.

Food is the last thing I wish to speak of today. Surely it can't be that there are tidbits that we can't decide what to do with. Left-overs are problems in most households and until one can master the knack of using them, we haven't proven ourselves good cooks.

There are endless possibilities of using every bit of the carcass of the fowl. After you've scraped off the bones, they go into the soup pot. With the addition of a little onion, seasoning and rice, they make a delicious hot broth. The meat goes into a casserole dish along with diced celery, and an egg sauce topped with crumbs and grated cheese.

Mashed potatoes seasoned with salt, pepper, a whiff of sage and combined with a beaten egg may be fashioned into little sausages, rolled in crumbled corn flakes and heated in the electric oven until piping hot. Diced turnips make a tasty salad when moulded in clear gelatine using a little lemon juice for zest.

Slices of stale sponge cake may line a serving dish and a good boiled custard poured over them, the dessert is ready to be decorated with a spoonful of jam. Left-over fruit served over flavoured blanc mange.
