

Here & There

by Kay Kay

The other day we caught one of the greatest fishing "acts" in years. A hawk circled along the river for five minutes or so, then swiftly swooped to the water's edge, picking up either a carp or bass. The fish was of a fair size and it took the bird a mile upriver before it could gain much altitude. Now that's the way to fish!

The last week of summer-time holidays for the youngsters is coming up. For many of them, it will mean putting on shoes and long pants; putting away the fishing tackle, and the raft; getting a bath in the tub every Saturday (instead of taking a dip in the river) and back to regular bed-time hours.

When you stop to think of it, regimentation sets in with the start of school. As a second thought, we wonder just where the summer went?

When you look at all the well-tanned hides it takes you back in memories to the days of your own frisky youth.

Somehow, while youngsters really enjoy the summer holidays, there's a certain thrill to the first day of school that can't be matched by any other event in our lives. It's an exciting day, both for the youngsters and the parent who has to watch their youngster take off in the world on that first day. Sometimes we think it takes more out of the parent than it does the child!

This week ahead will be taken up by preparing the children's clothes for school. Now is when you realize that clothes which fit in the Spring are a little too tight this Fall. That the shoes which looked as if they would do 'till Christmas, just won't fit any more.

There'll be a lot of happy faces that first day of school—and a lot of long ones at home!

One thing we have noticed this summer: there hasn't been as much smashed glass and debris around town. Council's announced decision at the first of the summer to clamp down on such actions, took effect. It makes for a much better community all 'round.

Every once in a while we get advice on what we should print in these columns — and sometimes we take it. The kind we don't like is that which is intended to do harm to someone. The same people who suggest we take a crack at this or that have every opportunity to send us a letter to the editor and if we feel it is constructive, we'll print it word for word. If not, in the waste basket it goes for that's where we put all our trash!

Funeral Services For C. McMillan Well Attended

The residents of Iroquois and surrounding communities were deeply shocked on Tuesday morning when they learned of the sudden passing of William Cecil McMillan in his 52nd year at the Brockville General Hospital. He acquired pneumonia due to a mysterious gunshot wound believed to have been self-inflicted.

Cecil was possessed with a very pleasing personality which coupled with his kindly nature, and sterling honesty, made for him warm friends of all with whom he came in contact. He was a member of LOL No. 698 and served in World War II, having enlisted in 1940 in the Governor General Foot Guards, later transferring to the Canadian Engineers.

He was the eldest son of Edward McMillan and the late Laura May Sayyeau, and was born in Pittston, January 21, 1911, and was of the Protestant faith.

He is survived by his father, one sister Hilda Wilson, Iroquois, and one brother, Clarence, of New York City.

Members of the LOL No. 698 and the Iroquois Branch of the Canadian Legion performed their last rites according to their order for the departed brother on Wednesday night, at the funeral home.

The funeral was held from W. E. Fitzsimmons' Funeral Home, Beach Street, Iroquois, with the Rev. Mr. Green, Cardinal, officiating. Rev. Green delivered words of condolence and regret in behalf of the bereaving ones.

Pallbearers consisted of local friends of the deceased in the persons of Ralph Tousaw, Ernie Swardfeger, Clifford Hunter, Peter DeJone, Dwight Merkley and Robert Casselman, all of Iroquois.

In attendance from a distance was brother Clarence of New York City; Mrs. Ruby Hick, cousin, Brockville; Mr.

REMEMBER—DEATH TAKES NO HOLIDAY!

Save Our Children!

Two small children suffocate in discarded refrigerator . . . Baby found dead with plastic bag over face . . . Youngster crushed under old stove in backyard. Such headlines are all too common. They never fail to arouse many of us to begin crusades aimed at stamping out such carelessness, because all such accidents are due to carelessness. But somehow, when the story is forgotten, the crusade fades away as well.

One of the first suggestions usually coming out of such crusades is for "Legislation for Control". On the surface this is good, but legislation that cannot be enforced is of little value and indeed may be harmful because many people believe a "law" looks after everything.

The real prevention of such tragic accidents lies with the parents or the guardians of young children. This calls for constant care and vigilance, and even with all this some accidents will happen. Children are active — they're inquisitive — nearly all of them have the urge to explore and be adventurous. And we as parents would not want them otherwise.

To help them live and act as normal children is a great responsibility of adults, but to help insure as far as is humanly possible that they continue to live and not be maimed by accident is an even greater responsibility of every adult.

If you discard an old ice-box or refrigerator or any appliance with doors, take the doors off even if you have to pound them off with a sledge hammer. Be certain that old stoves, washing machines and such, if stored in the yard are so placed that they cannot fall over on youngsters climbing over them.

Always try to get rid completely of discarded appliances. If you do that your children will be protected from some possible dangers.

Remember your Ontario Department of Health wants all our children alive and healthy. Won't you help?

Upsurge In Tourism

Headed "Upsurge in Tourism", The Prescott Journal noted last week that this area is experiencing a wonderful upward trend in this line of business. The Journal goes on to say "The fact comes about through several accumulative efforts, and has thrust upon the staid people of this area that there is real attraction for the tourist in Eastern Ontario.

There is no doubt that pegging of the dollar has brought many more American tourists into Canada, and this area has received its share. Upper Canada Village and Chrysler Memorial Park are bringing hundreds of thousands of visitors to Eastern Ontario, and the string of Parks, beaches and camping sites operated by the Ontario-St. Lawrence Development Commission is also assisting in attracting tourists.

A news release from the commission this week tells us that almost a million visitors were taken care of in the fourteen parks during five months of the summer operation last year. Many more are expected this year as the parks' facilities are improved and as more and more Canadians discover the fun of a family camping holiday.

Locally, motels are experiencing a good season, and expansion of facilities is underway with the sod-turning on Thursday of the new motel to supplement facilities at Grenville Lodge.

The Journal goes on "With building of the great Hydro power dam at Cornwall and the creation of man-made Lake St. Lawrence with its new islands and parkway and camping sites, the summer business of this part of Ontario was given an abrupt change, and the tourist business is of increasing importance. One has but to watch the car licences go by for a half hour or so to realize the far-reaching pulling power of the area.

SUGAR and SPICE

By Bill Smiley

Summer is running past with the feverish anxiety of a horse-player heading for the wicket with a hot tip.

We've had so many visitors that I've spent more time in the supermarket and the liquor store than I have in my own house. However it hasn't been all one-way traffic. We've picked up a nice lot of loot from the guests. Total haul has been: a half bottle of Pimm's No. 1; one alarm-clock; one pair dark sun glasses; one box jig-saw puzzles for age six to 10; several combs; one pair ladies pants. In addition, we managed to unload one kitten from our last batch.

Our daughter has been to camp for the first time in her life, and that produced enough crises to keep things lively. She's been talking camp since last winter. And one day in April, she came home from school and blared, "Do you know what I am, Mom? I'm just a freak!" Her mother absentmindedly asked why. "Because I can't ride a bike and I've never been to camp!" she snorted. Apparently these are status symbols in the pre-teen set, just as fracture-boards in twin beds are for the pre-middle-aged set.

Well, she got a bike for her birthday, and now has been to camp, so it's nice to report that we've got rid of one freak in the family. Getting a feckless 11-year-old ready to go away for two weeks is quite an experience. And the parting is horrible. When we saw our baby, who had never been out from under the wing, taking off in a boat from the town dock, with a lot of other wild-eyed little girls, we had a desperate, sinking feeling.

It wasn't improved much by her first letter, from which I quote. "Last night I brought up all over the floor five times, but today I managed to get out in time. I've got the flu and am having a terrible time. Right now I'm in my cabin all alone crying. I want to come home. X X X O O O Love, Kim. P.S.—I hope you are both having a good time, but I don't worry about my pain. Kim."

Her old lady nearly lost her marbles in the next few days. We couldn't phone or get in touch. There was nothing to do but sweat it out, with the vision of the child dying on that god-forsaken island. Every time the telephone or doorbell rang, we jerked like spastics, positive it was the undertaker.

Then came the second letter from which I quote bits. "I can dive. I got my first star today. Last night we had an Indian ceremony where everybody dressed up as an Indian. Pickles took me under her blanket, and now I am an Old Camper. I have been worried about piper and the kittens. I hope they don't go away before I get back. This week is going much faster than the first week and pretty soon it's going to be all over. I hope we can afford a month next year but that's too much to ask. I'd certainly appreciate some eats—a lot. Hope you're having a good time, because I certainly am."

Not a word about her illness. Not a mention of her pain. Her mother could have beaten her.

Kids are a real millstone around the neck when you're planning a holiday trip. When they're small, you can't leave them and it's too much trouble to get them ready and it almost doubles your costs. When they're big, they wouldn't be caught dead on a crummy trip with their parents.

Both our kids have had a good holiday this summer. The old lady and I haven't been anywhere or done anything. The other day, I got out the folders and started figuring out a trip to the newspaper convention in Winnipeg, for the four of us. It looked great. Part way by steamboat, part way by rail. We could just manage it, if the banker was in a good mood.

Then my wife took the pencil. By the time she had finished, I'd neglected to include several days of hotel accommodation, the convention fees, new clothes for the gang and board at the vet's for one cat, one kitten, one dog. Right now, it looks as though the big deal this summer will be a five-day motor trip, lurching from one set of relatives to another, for sleeping quarters.

Even that, as I know perfectly well, will fall through, because one of the kids will get sick, or the old car will develop the heaves, or the Old Battleaxe will get in one of her moods. However, it's nice to have the whole crew—dog, cats, and kids—under one roof again, after a mixed-up summer, and if I can manage to sneak away for a whole day's fishing, without having to take anybody, or be home sharp at six for dinner, I'll be home sharp at six for dinner, I'll be home sharp at six for dinner, I'll be home sharp at six for dinner.

Suggests Beef Imp. Assoc.

Poplar Hill, Ontario, August 16—Envisaging a greatly increased demand for beef in Ontario, Hon. Wm. A. Stewart, Minister of Agriculture, today issued an invitation to Ontario Beef producers to establish an Ontario Beef Improvement Association along similar lines to that of the Ontario Soil and Crop Improvement which has been so successful in the development and increase in field crop production.

The Minister recommended that the Association be composed of producers elected by those associated with the industry with the Ontario Department of Agriculture supplying a full-time beef specialist to act as secretary. The Minister suggested that the Provincial Association could have county beef improvement groups. The Minister emphasized that his proposal envisaged a voluntary organization, with a strengthened approach to beef industry problems through a complete co-ordination of all policies and efforts with the practical producer of commercial beef.

"For some time now it has been apparent that the demand for beef in Ontario will continue to grow," said the Minister. "With our human population increasing at the rate of one million and a half a year it is likely that by 1969 or 1970 we will not be producing sufficient beef to meet the present per capita consumption rates in North America."

Paying tribute to the Ontario Beef Producers' Association for their efforts in the past, the Minister felt that their work could be intensified through the proposed new organization.

He visualized close co-operation between the proposed Beef Improvement Association and the Ontario Department of Agriculture which could recommend to the government research activities and policies felt to be of benefit to the producer. The development of a beef cow and calf herd policy and investigation of the feasibility of community pastures were also suggested as areas of joint investigation. Referring to the great strides made in poultry nutrition, the Minister suggested that the animal nutrition field offered almost unlimited possibilities of improvement. "We often use the expression—three blades of grass where one grew before"—the Minister commented, "from the standpoint of nutrition and rate of gain, and money in the farmer's pocket, perhaps we should also aim at three pounds of gain where there was one before."

The Minister felt that the research of the suggested organization would result in better information as to consumer preferences. In addition, studies could be undertaken as to the cost of beef production and other ways and means of ensuring the economic stability and strength of the beef industry.

Indicating the extent of the potential market, Mr. Stewart said that if Canada's total beef herd was doubled it would only increase beef cattle production by eight per cent. He further emphasized this point by stating that Ontario feed lot operators and farmers last year brought into Ontario some 282,000 head of feeder cattle.

"Obviously Western Canada can do little to increase the cattle carrying capacity of the range country owing to the weather condition," said Mr. Stewart. "Except in relatively isolated areas where irrigation could be practical we can expect little increase in cattle population". He said that increasing demand from the Western U.S.A. was also using up some of the feeder cattle normally available to Ontario.

Mr. Stewart felt that Eastern Canada offered the only sizeable area for increased beef cattle production. Eastern and Northern Ontario regions with abundant grass and adequate rainfall are suitable areas for the increased

Mrs. George Norton. Mr. John Smith, South Mountain, spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Robt Grant.

Mrs. Wm. Pancluk is at present visiting friends in Montreal.

production of beef, particularly cow-calf operations.

Touching upon the many problems facing the industry, the Minister issued an invitation to the executive of the Beef Producers' Association to meet and discuss the formation of the new Association at the earliest moment.

"The proposal that such an association be formed has to my mind many advantages," said Mr. Stewart. "It will provide a close co-relation between the producer and the Ontario Department of Agriculture and will strengthen the market through unity of purpose and co-ordination of efforts."

A wild Cat considered to be a large one was seen in the field close to the county road on the Robert Nelson farm. It is a rare sight in this district. It resembled a dark tiger striped cat but a lot larger, and showed no signs of fear when the horn blasted, and finally and leisurly sauntered off into the bush. Care should be taken by parents to warn their children of this dangerous animal.

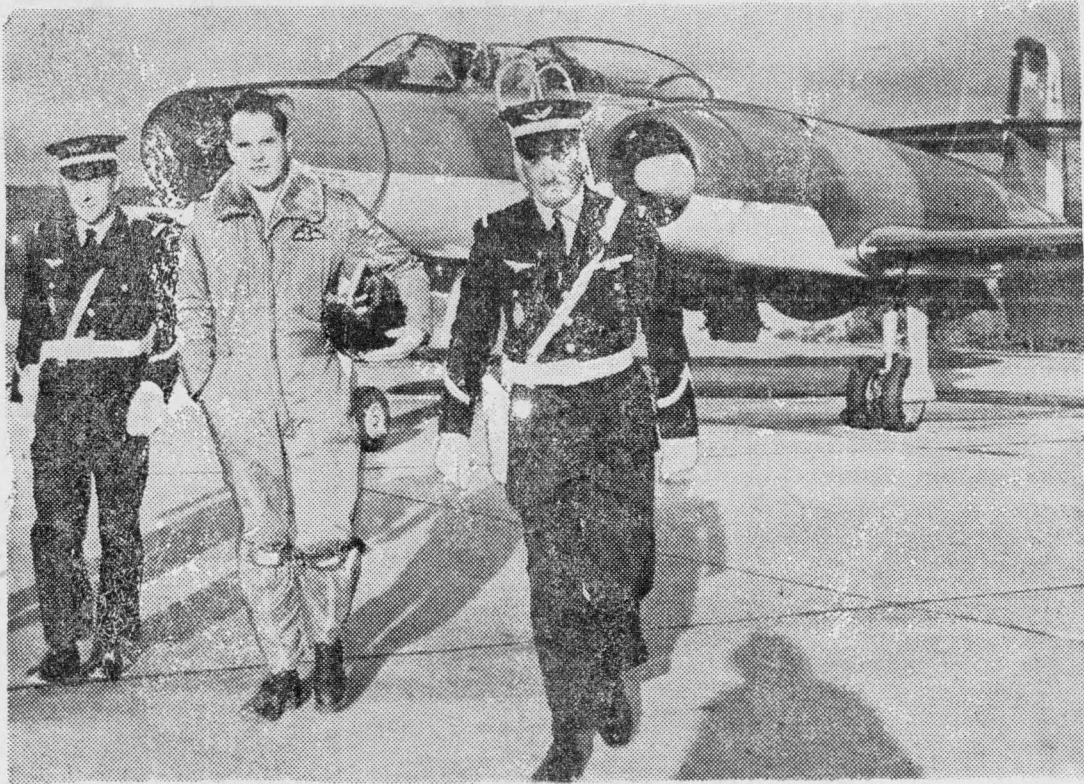

People hardest to convince they are of retirement age are children at bedtime.

Don't expect to be paid dollars an hour for your working day if leisure hours are spent as if they were worth of nickel.

Hunters Resentment Towards Posted Land

"POSTED FARM LAND"

M. J. Martin, Conservative Officer. Up to recent years, Ontario has been free of posted farm land. Many hunters feel resentment towards the owner of posted land without giving the matter a second thought.

First of all, we must consider the farm for what it truly is, a place of business as a factory or a store. All cattle, beasts or fowl wounded or killed by stray bullets, or every bit of cash crop that is trampled down or the fence that is broken by a careless hunter is a deduction from the farmer's income.

to the posting of farm land is vandalism by irresponsible hunters who think it great sport to shoot to the posting of farm land is shoot lightning insulators from barn roofs, shoot knob insulators from electric fences, shoot barn windows out and blast mail boxes with shot guns. These acts of vandalism show poor sportsmanship, basic ignorance, and poor judgment.

For the hunter, there is a way to stop the posting of farm land: become a sportsman, share your game with the farmer and report any acts of vandalism you may see.

"DO IT NOW"

W. A. G. THURSTON, R. P. F., District Forester In this age of fast moving events and machines, the word "planning" has become a by-word and has assumed great importance for most of us. It is necessary, at times, to plan activities far in advance so that preparations may result in smooth performance and completion of a job. Plans have been drawn up, for instance, to guide the future expansion of our Provincial Parks. Without such planning it would be impossible to adequately provide facilities for the public to meet the growing demand at the time the demand is felt.

We would suggest that persons interested in reforestation should, at this time, engage themselves along with the rest of the country in planning next year's plantation. These plans should lead to positive action in the form of submission of an application for forest trees. Here, has elsewhere, Planning will lead to the smooth completion of a project. Our Department nurseries are shipping trees each year which are up to four years old. It is not possible for them to increase their production within one season and therefore, at times, tree supplies may be limited. As our tree production is allocated on a "first come - first served" basis, orders should be submitted now to assure the availability of trees for next spring's projects. Every spring people are disappointed because they find that trees are not available on short notice.

In planning for reforestation projects, it is well to remember the many benefits which trees may give to the land and the landowner. They are a money-earning crop for poor land; they rejuvenate springs and restore water tables to productive levels, destroy deserts, shelter farm crops and animals, provide habitat for wildlife, protect fishing and streams, prevent floods, and provide beauty and recreation for man. The list is endless, the values are seldom thought of by most of us.

Planning for reforestation is a necessary preliminary to a successful project. Why not do your planning now? Why not assure the success of your planning and tree ordering.

Any person who has not previously held a hunting licence must have instruction in firearm safety and qualify for a certificate of competence before a licence is issued to

Rural Beauty

If my pen could only record,
All the beautiful things I see:
As I sit beneath an azure sky
With my faithful dog by me.

It would take a book to hold it,
For I'm sure I couldn't tell,
All the scenes that are before me,
In a poem very well.

But I'll try as best I know how
To explain the things I see,
For I know such rural beauty
Could not be explained by me.

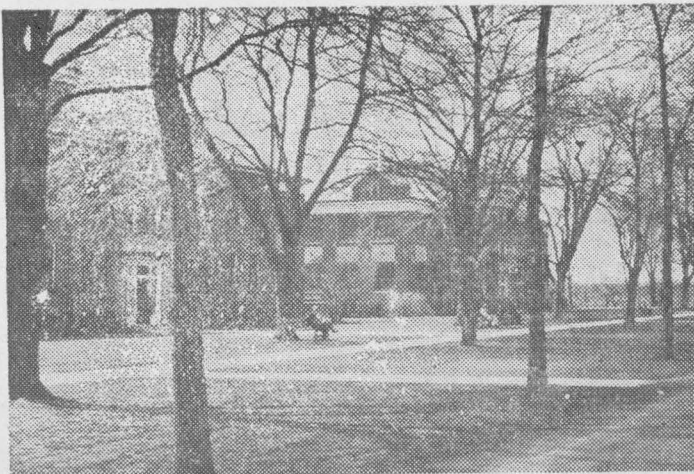

Yonder in the fields there grazing
Are some cows, some red and white—
All the fields are green about them,
And the clouds are snowy white.

I can hear a robin singing
Gayly in his merry tone,
And its song seems very cheering
As I sit here all alone.

Now I see a field of ripe oats,
For you know its harvest now—
All the crops are being gathered
E'er cold winter makes her bow.

And with all these scenes about me,
I am sure I cannot tell,
The reason it is my good fortune
In this countryside to dwell.

Ontario's Hospitals for the mentally ill "a safe, quiet refuge" away from the cares of the world.

Dymond Discusses Health in Ontario

Mental Hospitals

Article 1 of a 3-part series.

Matthew B. Dymond, MD, CM,
Ontario Minister of Health

Have you ever wondered about Hospitals where the mentally ill are treated or about the people who work in these Hospitals caring for the patients? I'm sure you have and no doubt many folk think often of them now-days when society is more and more looking upon the mentally ill as sick people, as they really are.

All of us at some time or other have had "queer" ideas about the "Mental Hospitals" most likely because we didn't know much or anything about them or probably these ideas were born out of weird tales often concocted by others who "fancied" what might go on in the Hospitals. These Hospitals used to be called Asylums—the dictionary defines this as "a secure place of refuge". So although to-day this word "asylum" is disliked and not often used, it has a warm and comforting connotation. But, till relatively recently, almost all Medical Science could provide for the mentally ill was security—refuge—a safe "haven away from the world".

Just as great strides have been made in all branches of medicine, so in the field of psychiatry—the care of the mentally dis-ordered, we have moved and are moving forward and the mental hospital of even 25 years ago no longer exists in this province of Ontario.

The hospitals for the mentally disordered have been the responsibility of the Department of Health ever since the Department came into being. There are now in the province 12 hospitals for mentally ill and two new ones will be opened this year. There are also 3 hospital-schools and three hospitals for mentally retarded. All of these provide accommodation for some 26,000 patients. In addition to these the Department operates two highly specialized research units—one at London for research into mental retardation and one at Thistle-town for research into the problem of emotionally disturbed children. Out of these latter are coming new knowledge as to causes—new ideas and methods of treatment, care and management of these patients. All this is helping push forward the quantity and quality of our knowledge and giving us hope that even greater success will yet attend our efforts to treat these patients still better and more successfully.

Next week I'll try to tell you more about our hospitals.

FAVOURITE "RECIPES" AROUND OUR HOME

To us, sour cream never sounded too tasty, but when mixed in a cake it really — "makes the cake". Mrs. Mary Gore, R.R. 1, Iroquois, sends us a recipe for "Sour Cream Cake" which is one of her favourites. Maybe it will become one of yours.

Ingredients call for: 2 eggs; 1½ teaspoons baking powder; 1 cup sugar; ½ cup thick sour cream; ¼ teaspoon salt; 1 teaspoon vanilla; 2 cups sifted cake flour.

Beat eggs until thick and piled softly; beat sugar, gradually sift flour, baking powder, soda, salt, together. Stir in alternately with combined cream and vanilla. Pour into 8x8x2 inch pan, greased, and lined. Bake at 350 degrees for 35 minutes.

After you've got the Sour Cream Cake in the oven, and before you clean up all the dishes, you might like to take a try at Mrs. Addie Eichner's "Lemon Bread".

It calls for 6 tablespoons shortening; 1 cup of white sugar; grated rind 1 lemon; two eggs well beaten; 1½ cups of flour; 1 teaspoon baking powder; pinch of salt; ½ cup of milk.

Mix all ingredients together

- We cut up, wrap and quick freeze meat of all kinds for your deep freeze.
- We can supply the meat in sides or quarters.
- We have lockers to rent.
- We can supply containers for fruits and vegetables to be frozen.

W. A. G. Thurston, R.P.F.
District Forester

A single drop of water appears to be a small, inoffensive thing which should cause no one any great amount of concern. In fact life itself depends on little drops of water—multiplied many times over. On the other hand the same little drops of water can deal death and destruction to people, animals and the land.

Have you ever noticed the vast power, in relation to its size, embodied in a single drop of water? Have you ever closely watched the surface of your garden or flower bed in a very heavy rain storm? Have you not been awed at the amount of soil particles moved from their place by a single drop of water hitting the soil's surface? If you have not observed the action of water drops at such close range, we know that you have observed muddy water running off a garden, muddy water in ditches and in streams and finally in rivers. This muddy water is simply the result of the action of countless little drops of water.

The erosive force created by falling and moving water can ruin our land if it is not controlled. Agriculturists have learned to grow crops and cultivate fields in a way that will reduce or at least control erosion. Strip cropping, contour farming, mulching, terracing, sod cover, etc., are all means of reducing this terribly destructive force.

Forests are one of nature's best ways of controlling erosion, and, at the same time, producing a profitable crop from the land. Who hasn't sought shelter from a sudden summer shower under large trees? At those moments we give little thought to what is going on around us, only realizing that this tree which is sheltering us is a friendly thing—helping to keep our shirt dry. Reflection shows us many interesting things! The leaves of the tree have stopped or slung the headlong earthward plunge of the little drops of water. Frequently the short shower gets no water through to the ground under the tree at all until after the shower is over. Then the drip from the trees may start to reach the ground. Thus nature has allowed for a longer time for the water to percolate into the ground rather than run off over the surface. Have you ever walked through an unpastured woodlot after an all-day rain? Not likely, as most people don't want to get their feet wet and this is bound to happen because the floor of the woodlot is thick with years' accumulation of fallen leaves. This leaf mat is a wonderful sponge protecting the soil. Falling rain has not been able to move the soil and is, in fact, soaked up and absorbed by this leaf mat.

Snow, in a forest, melts slowly because it is sheltered from the sun. Since it melts slowly, the resulting water has a chance to soak into the ground rather than run off the surface, as it does in many fields in the spring. We must establish and manage forests which prevent erosion!

Little drops of water are both life-giving and life-destroying. Man's intelligence can determine to a large extent which it shall be. Intelligent use of our forests will protect our land from erosion so that our greatest blessing will be those "little drops of water."

FISH AND WILDLIFE

Our summer fisheries and lake survey programmes will soon be drawing to a close.

During the summer, with the help of two biology students from the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, we have been continuing our lake surveys and fisheries studies. Data for lake contour maps has been secured in lakes in Leeds and Lanark Counties to further fill out our lake studies in this area. Gill netting projects have been carried out in many waters in the district to study fish populations, growth rates, species compositions, availability of food, etc.

PARDON ME, but there's something you should know whispers cute little Mabel Moscrip to boyfriend Neil Kellar. The two went wading in a pool and Neil's elastic snapped without his knowing it. One quick tug removed the embarrassment, however.

On Mississippi, Christie, Upper Rideau, Sand, Upper Beverly and other lakes and in the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers, creel census data has been secured by our students. Conservation Officers and district office staff. The analysis of this data will take time and it will result in a better understanding of our sports fisheries and further lead to the establishment of adequate management projects.

TIMELY TIPS

The grain auger is rapidly becoming recognized as efficient and economical method of moving grain. With reasonable care there should be no accidents with this piece of equipment. However, warns Hal Wright, Farm Safety Specialist with the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Ontario farmers lost fingers in 1960. These accidents resulted in loss of 500 days of work and a medical bill of $2,200. As with most machines, the auger does an excellent job when handled safely.

Records of farm business operations, along with analysis of these records can pinpoint weak areas that might be robbing you of extra profits, advise economists with the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Records let you assess your operation accurately, and pick the right answers to your farm business problems.

When selecting gilts or sows for future breeding, look for a disease-free herd, as well as for well developed udders, sound teats, long deep sides, full hams, and large size for age, say swine researchers at the Ontario Agricultural College.

Shrew Is Fine Brew

By Dorothy Barker

I was invited to attend "The Taming of the Shrew" by a confessed addict of the now famous Stratford (Ontario) Festival. I had seen this particular play no less than three times on the legitimate stage, being forced to memorize passages from its text while in high school and, never on any occasion had I considered this so-called comedy uproariously funny. Besides, the day we chose to attend a long period of drought was broken by grey skies, even though predictions had been for another fair day.

By the time we reached the Union Station in Toronto to board the CN's weekly special festival train it was raining. Once inside our coach the dampening effect on our spirits was raised by the holiday mood of other paying guests and the presentation to each lady of a rose. The coach soon looked like a garden in full bloom and whether we realized it or not, a tempo of pleasure was set which lasted until we arrived back again to the wee small hours of the next morning.

This was a tour of miniature, well organized and conducted from the instant the train pulled into the metropolitan station until our return. Nothing was amiss from our transportation between Stratford station and one of the town's large churches where we had a wonderful home cooked meal, or on to the Festival theater and back again to the train after the performance. Not even dreary skies and intermittent showers could dampen our pleasure and admiration. We were agreeably surprised at how smoothly everything for our enjoyment was managed.

Stratford has developed the spirit of the Festival to some considerable and admirable extent. Directional street signs are all marked with the Festival's symbol, the letter "S" in the shape of a white swan. Residents have enhanced the flower arrangements on light standards throughout the business section (which are also in the shape of a graceful "S") and embellished with hanging baskets of flowers! by placing white swan planters on their lawns. These are filled with bright coloured blooms.

Perhaps I was in a more sensitive mood than previously when I had attended the first Festival production of the "Shrew". From the moment the bugle warned that it was five minutes to commencement, I felt a flutter of excitement. The gun boomed, lights dimmed and I instinctively knew this would be a performance to be remembered.

Grand Variety Viewer

I do not pretend to be a critic, or assume the role of a highbrow intellectual just because I am exposed to this type of theatre. I am completely honest with myself, either I enjoy a production, or I am bored. One can assess what I thought of this year's "Taming of the Shrew". I bought the entire family of number two son tickets for the package tour. I considered the three youngsters are old enough to appreciate the delightful interpretation Michael Langham has given his direction of this play and their parents will delight in the uninhibited, gay acting of Kate Reid and her co-star, John Colicos. This play within a play, far

DOUBLE TROUBLE. Timbo, a circus elephant, caught a cold from riding in a truck with the covering off. Then to complicate things, he found an unattended refreshment stand and stuffed himself with candies. Now he's nursing an upset stomach as well.

THEY'RE ALL MINE. TNS shouts Steve Burke of New Westminster, B.C. The stork, in co-operation with a local vet, just delivered a rare litter of 13 pups to his pet, Flag Princess, a champion greyhound. Thirteen may be an unlucky number — but not when the pups are valued at $150 each!

Three travellers registered at a hotel which was crowded, on account of a convention. The clerk told them there was only one suite available at $30.00. The boys, peeved, said alright, and paid $10.00 apiece. Later the clerk told the manager of the situation. He said: "Make it $25.00 instead of $30.00"; so the clerk sent the Bell-hop to make a refund to the men. As Bell-hops do he said: "Who will know the difference?" So he gave each a dollar bill and pocketed the difference. So the three men really paid $9.00 each, which is $27.00 the Bell-hop got $2.00 which makes $29.00 Now! where did the other $1.00 go?

A very proper young lady tried to say Expectoratesbergen because she didn't like the sound of Spitzbergen.

Have you heard the story of the Scotsman who would not send his boy to school because he would have to pay attention?

from being stilted or too dramatic, is really funny, not just merely humorous.

I was in accord with the crowd that packed the theatre and stood in a whistling, stamping, clapping ovation as the cast took bow after the final scene.
