Henry's Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school ?

Our instruction being individual, you may start at any time.

"Bill" Valley Instantly Killed

Tuesday morning the west bound fast express from Montreal struck and instantly killed William Valley on the crossing just west of the station here. At the time of the accident the east bound way freight was standing with the rear part of the train about opposite the station and it is supposed that Valley did not notice the approach of the express that hit him on the other track. He was proceeding north driving a team hitched to an empty coal wagon and as he approached the tracks his was the first of three rigs, the others being a single rig driven by Miss Servage and the other a team driven by Webster Edgerton. Almost at the edge of the south track the single rig was turned out and passed Valley right on the crossing and barely got safely over when Valley's wagon was struck fairly in the centre, smashing it into kindling wood and scrap iron and hurling Valley with such force that he was landed under the platform of the tool house twenty or thirty yards west of the crossing at the north side. He was very badly mangled and it is said practically every bone in his body was broken.

The horses were freed when the wagon was struck and were unhurt although tumbled into the ditch at the west side of the road.

The Coroner was at once notified and had the remains taken care of and afterwards a jury was empanneled and after viewing the body an adjourment was made until next Tuesday evening.

The train was in charge of conductor Wellington Boyd and Engineer Hartney of engine 2228.

William George Valley, who was in his forty-ninth year was a well known laborer of the town, unassuming and respected by ever one for his faithfulness to his duty. He was unmarried and lived with his brothers Robert and Thomas on Victoria Street.

The funeral took place from the family residence yesterday to Maple Ridge Cemetery and was very largely attended. Services were conducted by Rev. H. E. Warren and Rev. T. B. McCorkindale at the home.

Mr. And Mrs. Geo. Marcellus Honoured

It was with feelings of deep regret that the residents of the Ninth learned of the intended departure of Mr. and Mrs. George Marcellus and family from this community to return to their farm in the Boyne whence they retired some two years ago. During their sojourn among us they have made many friends, both young and old as was shown by those who gathered last Saturday evening to express their good wishes for the family.

The fore part of the evening was spent in social intercourse, games, etc. but towards nine o'clock these gave way to a livelier pastime. The one drawback of the evening was the fact that one's eye had to be continually on one face—that of the clock—lest the Sabbath be broken. The fourth command however, was well regarded-

After a few hours' dancing,—music being ably provided by Mr. Mahlon Swerdfeger and Master Arthur Casselman,—the entire company did justice to a bountiful supply of refreshments.

About 11.35 all assembled in the drawing-room where the esteem of the neighbours for their host and hostess took tangible form—a Rayo lamp being the token. The presentation was made by Mrs. Arthur Marcellus while a short address, which was as follows, was read by Mrs. Malhon Casselman.

To Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Marcellus

We are assembled here this evening as friends and neighbours. It is with regret that we learn of your departure from our midst We ask of you, to accept this little token as a slight remembrance of all your kindess to one and all. May all our good wishes go with you and your family to your future home. Signed in behalf of friends and neighbours.

Melvin Marcellus
Mahlon Swerdfeger

The recipients, being taken wholly by surprise gave a short address of thanks and the pleasant evening came to a close in the singing of God Be With You Till We Meet Again.

Honoured By Their Neighbours.

On Friday Evening Dec. 3rd, friends and wellwishers to the number of fifty met at the home of Mr. Sylvester Cheney to do honor to his son Hiram and his bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheney in their most gracious manner received the guests and entertained them to a sumptuous dinner.

During the evening Mr. Jas. Fetterly in a very appropriate speech and on behalf of those present presented the newly married couple with a handsome Quarter Cut Oak Dining-room table.

Mr. Fetterly in the course of his speech refined to the friendly intimacy that had existed between the family of Mr. Cheney and a very wide circle of neighbour, who had taken this opportunity to show their esteem and express their sincere hope that the young couple would be long spared to each other and that they would enjoy a large measure of prosperity.

Mr. Hiram Cheney in acknowledging the gift expressed in feeling terms, the gratitude he and Mrs. Cheney felt towards their neighbour for their friendly greetings.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Berkin of Crysler, the parents of the bride.

A very pleasant evening was spent in music and games.

Canadian Foresters Annual Supper.

A most enjoyable and profitable evening was spent at one of their regular meetings of the Canadian Order of Foresters last evening. It was the annual turkey supper which generally brings out every member of the society.

The meeting was a very profitable one, as the organizer, Mr. Croskery being sent here by the High Court, for the purpose of securing new members, gave a very pleasing address in which he inspired every member present, to be up and doing and secure as many new members as possible before the new year. The membership at present is about 125, and it is expected 150 will be secured before the closing of the year 1915.

After partaking of the turkey and other delicacies which were prepared by Mr. E. McMillan in a most satisfactory manner, a very sociable evening was spent which consisted of music and singing by different members of the court.

A repetition of this is expected when on Thursday night next. the court expects to initiate into its mysteries between 10 and 15 new members.

Prominent Among Canadian Business Educators.

(Cornwall Standard)

A glance at the records of the Employment Department of the Cornwall Commercial College will convince even the most skeptical that thoroughly prepared young men and women are required in large numbers to fill the vacancies in business offices. During the past three months these records show an increase of over 50 per cent. In eighteen years over 2,000 graduates have been sent out to fill the most exacting positions in business offices as bookkeepers, stenographers, secretaries, private amanuenses etc., and the future will offer still greater opportunities, as it is a well-known fact that the resources of Canada have only been scratched, and the next few years will see undreamed of developments.

In this age of opportunity a man is limited only by his capacity. His capacity is limited only by his unwillingness to devote time and attention to increasing it. But each successive step demands diligent study and thought. In this ever changing strife there is likely to be confusion and disorder. Especially is this true in the case of the young man and woman who desires to prepare for business life. They stand at the portal, perplexed and bewildered—not knowing which way to turn—yet they well know that the services of the thoroughly prepared will always be in demand and that a vast army of C. C. C. graduates are now on the firing line of business. The Cornwall College has helped to remove obstacles which have handicapped young people for many years, it has brought bright boys and girls into closer contact with real business life. Those who transact the business of Canada have the greatest opportunity ever offered to influence and control the entire ethics of the business world.

The Cornwall Commercial College is engaged in a work that means much to Cornwall and vicinity. The greatest enterprise in the world for splendor, for extent, says Emerson, "is the building of a man."

If we were close enough to the C. C, C. organization we could get an idea of how the excellent results are secured. But to learn what is back of the organization, what animates and inspires it, you must know the Principal of the school. The Principal of the Cornwall Commercial College has surrounded himself with a strong staff, who contribute their share to the excellent work being carried on.

So long as George F. Smith and men of his stamp direct the work of the business colleges in Canada, the young people of our country can be assured of an open door to business success and the business men can depend on getting capable, efficient help.

PARISIAN SAGE

PUTS HAIR ON YOUR HEAD AND KEEPS IT THERE

What's the use of being bald? What sense is there in deliberately allowing your hair to turn gray!

Do you want to look old before your time? Give up the thought; old age will come only too soon.

Look after your hair. PARISIAN SAGE will kill the dandruff germs, and is the only preparation, so far as we know, that is guaranteed to do so.

Man or woman, no matter how old you are, PARISIAN SAGE will make you look young.

Come in and get a large bottle to-day, it only costs 50 cents, and your money back if it does not cure dandruff, stop falling hair, or itching of the scalp. It will make your hair luxuriant, bright and beautiful, and it is the most refreshing, pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made.

From The Trenches.

Private Ernest Carter writing to The Record from "Somewhere in Belguim" under date of November 16th, says that winter is just setting in and that the trenches in some places are knee-deep in mud, but that the men take it in good heart and do the best they can. The following verses of Private Carter's were written in the trenches.

To the first Canadian Contingent

Here's to the gallant Canadians,
The boys who are always true;
They started out to fight for right,
And fight they sure can do.

At "Neuve Chappelle" and "Langemark"
They fought like heroes brave;
Each man that fell at "Neuve Chappelle"
Has earned an heroe's grave.

And then they fought at "Festubert,"
'Twas in the month of May;
Ne'er was there such a battle fought
As the Canadians fought that day.

They beat them at "La Basse,"
And at "Langemark" too;
They gave them Hell at "Neuve Chappelle"
And fought like Canadians true.

That was the first contingent.
And they sure have made a name,
They fought and died for Britain,
Now they're on the scroll of fame.

There still are some of them out here,
Who never did get hit;
They still keep up their courage,
And still they do their bit.

And there in dear old England,
There are quite a lot,
Who were out here and got wounded,
But they're proud of what they've got.

And some there are who'll ne'er come back,
Because they fought and fell;
But they'll never be forgotten,
For the work they did so well.

Side by side they fought and died,
Each man out there that fell
Was fighting for England's glory,
And that they did right well.

Now here's to the first contingent,
Who did their duty do,
And bravely did go under,
As many more will do.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system They offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Banquet Given by Mr. J. C. Simser to the Members of his Organization.

Mr. J. C. Simser, the popular and successful representative of the International Harvester Company, gave a banquet in honor of his salesmen and agents, at the Dominion House, on the evening of Dec. 1st. Like everything that Mr. Simser undertakes, the banquet was carefully planned and carried to a successful conclusion; every arrangement was made for the comfort and pleasure of his guests.

During the course of the evening, after the dinner, which was a gem of culinary art, Mr. Simser presented prizes to the two successful candidates in a contest of salesmanship. The period of the contest was the month of November; the object to sell Deering machines. Mr. E. M. Beckstead, Williamsburg, was successful in winning the first prize, a beautiful gold-headed cane; Mr. McIntosh, Finch, a handsome umbrella. Mr. Simser, in making the presentation, spoke of the hearty support and co-operation of the members of his organization, of their loyalty to him and his Company; he attributed to them, to their help and intelligent work, the high position he now held in the Company and the fact that he was now regarded as the Company's most successful blockman.

Covers were placed for forty persons, nearly all of whom are connected, in some way, with the International Harvester Company and most of whom belong to the territory over which Mr. Simser has charge. Mr. Simser has been very successful in his work for the Company. He has built up a selling organization that is held together partly by mutual profit but largely by good fellowship; this was plainly shown through the whole proceedings of the evening.

The following program was well appreciated;—

Chairman's address—Wesley Hamilton.

Piano solo—Mrs. Howard, Chesterville.

Toast "Our Country"—Proposed by A. McNairn, Aultsville; responded to by J. G. Adams, Reeve of Osnabruck.

Song—C. Miller, Dickinson's Landing.

Toast, "Our Parliaments"—Proposed by S. A. Mason, Montreal; responded to by Irwin Hilliard, K. C., M. L. A.

Song—P. Flynn, Chesterville.

Toast, "Trade & Commerce"—Proposed by G. W. Bogart, Chesterville; responded to by O. D. Casselman, Chesterville.

Piano solo—Mrs. Howard.

Toast, "Agriculture"—Proposed by C. S. Colquhoun, Morrisburg; responded to by J. G. Adams.

Song—Thos. Carpenter, Chesterville.

Toast, "Our Manufactures"—Proposed by S. C. Wendell, South Bend, Ind.; responded to by M. J. Laughlin, Asst. Mgr. I. H. Co., Ottawa.

Song—Carson Simser, Chesterville.

Toast, "The Professions"—Proposed by L. Jordan, Chesterville; responded to by W. B. Lawson, K. C., Chesterville.

Toast, "Our Blockman"—Proposed by H. A. McMillan, Finch; responded to by J. C. Simser, Chesterville, who said:

"I assure you that I would be delighted if I could address you tonight from the sentiments of my heart. I fail to find language to address you thus. I feel that I am not worthy I may say, of the very kind things that have been said of me tonight. I have been entrusted with a duty and all I have done is to perform that duty. I assure you gentlemen that King George of England, when the Canadian contingents arrive on British soil, could not have greater joy than my joy tonight in meeting with the men with whom I have worked hand in hand, arm in arm, for the last number of years. I anticipated for some years giving an entertainment of this kind but the years passed by. As I grew to know my men better, I grew to love them more and I felt that 1915 should not pass without my entertaining them in my own home town. Now, owing to the lateness of the hour I may say that I will refrain from saying the main things I proposed saying to my organization tonight. They are good things too, and I will just retain the mental part of it and will tell you those things personally when I meet you a few days hence.

The contest which I put on during the month of November has proved very successful indeed. I congratulate each and every one of you for your good work not only for the present month, but for the years that are passed and gone. I thank you gentlemen that I have the honour of knowing that our trade in the county, over which I have the honour o presiding, has never gone back one year during the time I have been in the organization work, It has been going on and I thank you men for it. I do not take the credit, not in the least. You, gentlemen, are the foundation of the whole affair. You have laid well the foundation and I will tell you how you have laid it—by treating your men fairly and squarely. —This is the secret of your success. You have been fair and square with your customers and the customers have been fair with you. You have performed your duties fairly and squarely and you have won the admiration, not only of our Branch Office at Ottawa but of our home office at Chicago. I will not go further into this matter.

As I said a minute ago I congratulate each and every one of you men who have performed your duties last month. You have put forth your best efforts and I feel that such a work has not been performed by you, I feel that I am quite safe in saying this and I think that I can be backed up by higher authority. Now gentlemen, I wish you to understand that these sales made during the last month are not to be placed on our books for 1915. They go to the credit of the block for 1916. And I say that I appreciate the work, I appreciate it with all my heart.

I take great pleasure in thanking my organization for the manner in which they have responded to my call. They have left home and families to come across a long stretch of country at a great expense and I assure you gentlemen I appreciate your kindness. I also take great pleasure in thanking those who kindly consented to be with me, in the person of Mr. Hilliard, as he said a minute ago, an old classmate in the Township of Osnabruck, playing on the same school-ground, playing, bare-footed on the farm, and I attribute Mr. Hilliard's coming here to those earlier days. I also thank him for driving a distance of eighteen miles to be present at this entertainment. I also thank Mr. Adams, Reeve of Osnabruck. Mr. Adams, I have not known as long as Mr. Hilliard, but he is a man for whom I have great respect. I formed his acquaintance in '88 and from that time we have been bosom friends. I am very proud to have with us Mr. Wendell. Mr. Wendell's home is at South Bend, Indiana. He came to our town and purposed leaving shortly, the following day. He kindly consented to remain and we have him with us tonight. We also have Mr. Mason of the collection dept., Montreal. I am very proud to have Mr. Mason with us: also Mr. M. J. Laughlin, our assistant manager. I thank you one and all for the kindness you have shown me this evening and I want to say before closing I take pleasure in thanking the men of our town, our home talent. These men have business affairs to look after, they have set them aside to be present with us tonight. I thank them from my inmost soul. Now I will present the gifts.

Me. Beckstedt I present you with this gold mounted cane and you have not won it by sitting at your fireside. You have done honour to yourself, and no such work was ever accomplished in the Province of Ontario in the brief time. I hope that when you grow old this stick may be the means of steadying your step. I also present you, W. A. McIntosh of Finch, with this umbrella, in recognition of your most valuable work. You indeed were a good second to Mr. Beckstedt. May this gift protect you from the chilly wind, also the falling rain.

Song, "This is the End of a Perfect night"—Miss Laura Simser.

Burned While Cleaning Gloves

Mrs Soule, of Cobourg, was painfully burned about the hands and arms while cleaning a pair of long gloves with gasoline. Mrs. Soule had the gloves on while cleaning them and was reaching over the stove for a cloth when the fumes ignited. She had the presence of mind enough to wind her hands in a large roller towel, extinguishing the blaze else she would have deen burned more severly. As it was her hands and arms were painfully burned.

Canal Guard Killed At Iroquois

A sad and fatal accident occurred on the Iroquois locks on Monday alternoon whereby Private Herbert Barber, of the 56th Reegt., Lisgar Rifles, lost his life He was patrolling the north side of the lock through which a boat had just passed and stopped to assist in closing of the gates. He lifted the dog on the ratchet wheel of the crab, and caught hold of the handle to let off the chain when he was struck in the forehead with the handle of the crab. Lockmaster Geo, E. Caloren was the first to reach the unfortunate young man but he was unconscious and remained so until death relieved him of his suffering at 12.10 o'clock Monday night, although all that was possible was done for him. Pte. Barber was the second youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Barder, of Merrickvllle, who are prostrated with grief. He was 17 years of age and came to Iroquois with Capt, Kyle 16 months ago. He was a bright young man of good habits and always attentive to his military duties which won for him the admiration of the officers and his fellow private. Only two weeks ago he was married to Miss Maude Mellon, of this place to whom the sympathy of the community is extended. The remains were taken to Merrickville yesterday, where a military funeral was held after which interment was made in the family plot.

The Record:—

I made a promise last July, when I was home, that I would send a few lines, so here goes. First of all I am glad a few more of the Chesterville boys have enlisted, and although a small place in comparison with some places, we are doing very well. There are a few of the boys out here whom I should like to get in touch with, as all the Canadians are pretty well all together. John Foster is here. He used to be clerk in the Bank of Ottawa. He is in good health so far. We have been in the trenches and believe me, the shells and rifle bullets fly around in good style. We have not had a bayonet charge yet but expect one very shortly and we are ready to meet them any size or weight. These trenches are a very curious arrangement with their dugouts. We are feeling as well as can be expected. I will try and keep my promise by fixing a German for Joe Fisher.

It is a great sight to see them trying to bring the aeroplanes down, but we have the Germans beaten all ways by aircraft and hope soon to beat them in everything else.

I shall close wishing all the Chesterville boys who are wearing the King's uniform the best of health and luck, and hope that we all return to our home and friends safely after doing our bit.—Will Lambert.

District Dairy Meeting

The attendance at the District Dairy Meeting held Tuesday afternoon was not what might be expected in a dairy section such as Chesterville can boast of. Mr, J, A. Campbell, director, occupied the chair.

Mr. T. J. Ellis, Dairy Instructor for this district presented his report for the season as follows :

Number of factories in the group —40 ; one burned during season.

He made 28 full day visits, 284 call visits, 640 tests for fat with average test of 3.62. ; 22 tests of whey from vat .21; 18 tests of whey from whey tank .17, acidity 40. 720 tests for sediment. He reported conditions good considering the size of the factories and general conditions.

Improvements were recommended in the method of selling cheese so that they would be sold on merit.

Instructor Norval reported that 43 factories in his group had 1364 patrons with 14290 cows which produced 49,377;522 lbs. of milk ; an average of 4164 lbs,' or 23 lbs. per day. 4,572,322 lbs. of cheese worth $686,550.

Factories making whey butter made 58,964 lbs. and received $14, 716 for it

Mr. Norvall recognized the many places and methods by which improvements could be made, and was willing to assume his share of the responsibility for defects. The present large number of small factories were regretted and larger outlay would have to be made by patrons indirectly in order to better conditions and put business on a more healthy basis.

Mr. Bradt, District Representative, spoke briefly but to the point on "Selection and Care of Seed Grain" making special emphasis on smut and how its evil effects might be overcome. Assuming a loss of 10% throughout the County it would show a loss of $51,200 estimating at forty cents per bushel on the basis of amount as found from report of Bureau of Industries. This could be practically overcome by a small outlay for formalin and an intelligent treatment which he thoroughly explained.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Instructor, gave a practical address to the producer and manufacturer and prefaced his remarks by referring to the increase of production during the past season and exceptional high prices which would easily show a gain of 25 per cent over 1914.

He cited the problem of to-day in the dairy business was to get the indifferent to do as well as the progressive man. Particular reference was made to necessity for better care of milk and demonstrated by actual results in practical experience by means of a tabulated chart how developement of objectionable bacteria varied according to temperature of milk, and showed the effect upon quantity and quality of cheese produced. As a result of experiments conducted by 21 instructors during past season in ordinary factories the above statements were clearly corroborated. Strong competition for our markets demanded our best and with the proper application of our ability, in production and manufacturing, had nothing to fear.

In closing he gave the makers some timely advice on the proper use of pure culture.

J. A. Campbell was again nominated as Director for Dundas County.

Ottawa Winter Fair

The prize list of the Ottawa Winter Fair which has just been received from the press shown a decided increae over previous years in amount of prize money offered, and also in classification. The classification for all classes of live stock and poultry has been increased. The Eastern Ontario Seed Fair has also been combined with the winter Fair, and embraces a complete classification for all kinds of grain, clover seed and potatoes.

The classes for grades in connection with the various kinds of live stock has been considerably increased. The grade animal is undoubtedly the best suited for the average farmer, and a very high percentage of our meat and dairy product supply is produced by grade animals. The grade classes have, therefore, been given more recognition than previously in the Ottawa Winter Fair prize list. The pure bred classes have not been lost sight of in this recognition of the grades, as the pure bred is essential in the improvement of the other.

The Secretarv, W. D. Jackson, Carp, Ont. ,will furnish prize lists on application.

Curious to See The Big War

He Saw More Than He Cared to.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Desiring to see something of the great European war, I resolved to go abroad and visit the armies of both opposing forces. Fortifying myself with a passport from the state department at Washington, I sailed for England on an American steamer. The change in the conditions from peace to war were evident from the time I went aboard the ship. Baggage was searched for explosives, passports were examined – indeed, every precaution was used common among peoples who have thrown off that confidence in each other that results from peace.

As soon as our ship reached the zone that the Germans had proclaimed to be in a state of war the boats were swung out over the water, into a position to be stepped into from the deck, an evidence of the fact that though we were on an American liner we were in danger. Then the passengers began to strap on their life belts, and some of them did not again turn in while we were on the water. Every night an enormous American flag was hung so that its full length and width would be displayed, illumined by rows of electric lights. This was to show commanders of submarines our nationality.

Since I had come from home to see something of war I confess all this interested me. Time came before my return when I had had quite enough of war and was glad to return to a country where a condition of peace existed.

Having crossed the channel, I approached the rear of the English army. The deadlock in the trenches had by this time settled down upon all the armies in France and Belgium. The great drives of the Germans for Calais were over, and during a good deal of the time the men in the trenches were idle. While visiting the British trenches a truce occurred between the men of both sides. The Germans put up a sign: "Let's have a rest today. No firing!" The British assented, and the men were swapping articles in common use. This gave me a more quiescent view of war than when I was in danger of being blown up on the ocean. As I proceeded my own individual experience became more and more peaceful, though I was unknowingly in the greatest danger of my life.

From visiting the English lines I went to the French. Of course I visited headquarters, showed my passports and asked permission to inspect the trenches. On my way there I met a fellow countryman, who told me that it would be impossible for me to get a permit, for he had just been refused. Either an attack was expected or one was to be made. At any rate, there was some reason why all permits were refused. However, I resolved to try, and, assuming a look of confidence I did not feel, I approached the officer charged with the granting of passes and asked to be permitted to visit the trenches.

He looked at me inquiringly, then, asking me to wait a moment, went into another room—for the officers were in a house—and upon his return sat down at a table and wrote me the desired permit. I was very much astonished. However, I gave no sign of surprise and after thanking him was walking out when he said to me:

"You will need a guide. If you will wait a moment I will provide you with one."

Calling an orderly, he sent him out, and the man returned in a few minutes with a young lieutenant, whom he introduced to me, but before sending me forth under the lieutenant's guidance he took him into another room.

I visited the trenches nearest headquarters and found a different state of affairs from what I had hit upon on the British line. We were obliged to descend before reaching those at the front in order to avoid being shot. Every man was on the qui vive, ready to put a ball into any enemy who showed even the tip of a finger. When I had seen all I wished to see I left the trench and, thanking my conductor, was about to set off in an opposite direction from headquarters when he said politely that Colonel Arnoux, the officer who had given me my permit, would like to see me again. Of course I returned with him, and when I entered the colonel looked up from the table at which he was writing and bade me sit in a chair beside him.

"Have you visited the other side?" he asked.

"What other side?"

"The Germans."

"Not yet, but I expect to do so."

"Let me see your passport."

He had examined the document which I had shown him when I first met him. I took it from my pocket and handed it to him. He glanced at it and tossed it on the table.

"How do you expect to get to the other side?" he asked.

"By hook or crook," I replied, "unless you will have the goodness to pass me through your lines."

He thought a moment, then said that he would have to refer the matter to one of higher rank than himself, but he thought it possible that I might be accommodated. But, of course, the authorities must have confidence that I was all that I purported to be. Firstly, he would keep my passport for awhile. American passports had been forged, and it would be advisable to have mine critically examined. Meanwhile the colonel would be pleased to provide me with quarters. There was a vacant room in the house which would be at my disposal, and he would be happy to have me eat at his mess.

This suited my plans exactly. I would be a guest at headquarters and might get passed through the lines without having to go to Holland or some other neutral region. The colonel showed me to my room himself and later took me to lunch with him, introducing me to the officers of his mess. Having lunched, I was permitted to go where I liked and spent the afternoon visiting all things, not on the firing line, pertaining to war, in which—they being new to me—I was greatly interested. During my perambulations I noticed a sergeant who seemed to be everywhere I was. If I stood gaping at some enormous guns that had recently reached the front, he was not far away examining a pile of firearms taken from the enemy in a recent fight. If I was curiously observing an armed auto he was tossing about some empty shells and fragments that had been sent from German guns. However, presuming that my seeing him near me so frequently was coincidence, I thought nothing about it.

At the evening meal Colonel Arnoux rallied me on the softness of my voice and the absence of a beard, saying that I would make up well for a woman. I told him that during my university studies when a Greek play was given I was assigned a woman's part. Thereupon the colonel remarked that German men spies had been captured disguised as women and laughingly suggested that I might make a good thing doing secret service work for the French in woman's clothes. Seeing that I did not take kindly to the suggestion, he turned the subject.

The next morning I was awakened by an officer—one I had met at the mess table—opening my door, carrying some articles of woman's apparel. He ordered me in a very decided tone to put them on. Astounded beyond measure, I asked him what he meant, whereupon he told me to do as he bade me and at once. Being impressed with the fact that he meant me harm if I disobeyed, I robed myself in the articles and was ordered out into another room where a dozen officers and men stood staring at me critically.

After they had looked me over I was ordered back to my room and left to change my clothes. When I attempted to emerge again I found a sentry at the door who pushed me back with his gun.

It was evident that something had gone wrong, but what it was I could not tell. I remained in confinement all day, but when evening came it brought Colonel Arnoux, who, dismissing my guard, invited me to come out.

"I must apologize to you," he said, "for the treatment you have received. The truth is, a woman who greatly resembles you came into our camps a few days ago and mysteriously disappeared. I gave her a permit to visit her brother in the trenches, but it was learned that no such person was there. It was apparent that she was a spy, and we suspected that she was a man in woman's clothes. This afternoon she was caught hiding in an abandoned trench in our rear."

I shuddered, at the same time breathing a sigh of relief.

"I congratulate you," the colonel continued, "upon having escaped death, and I admit that your escape was a narrow one. Upon your inspection in woman's apparel by a number of persons who had seen the other party nine out of twelve pronounced you the same person as she. For my part I was convinced of your identity with her the moment I saw you. You were to have been shot tomorrow morning."

Pale as death, I caught at a mantel for support. The colonel went to a closet, took out a bottle and a glass, poured out a tumbler half full of liquor and bade me drink it. Having been thus tided over the shock, I pulled myself together and told Colonel Arnoux that, with his permission, I would take my departure.

"Would you like to see the person who you were supposed to be?" he asked.

"Thank you, no. Is the party man or woman?"

"Woman—a refined lady."

"I suppose, in that case, she will not be proceeded against."

The colonel's face took on a curious expression.

"She is not a spy?" I asked.

"A very flagrant case of spying."

"But," I stammered, "you would not execute a woman?"

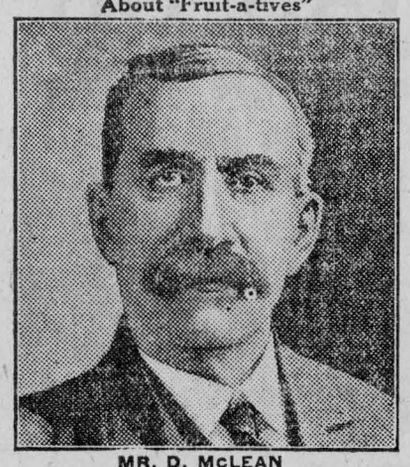

The reply came after a brief silence.

"My friend," he said, "in this war we have gone back to those times when this country was Gaul. Our warfare has dropped the veneering it assumed under civilization. We are fighting a life and death struggle."

My curiosity had vanished. I did not request to be passed to the German lines. I took the first passage I could get for England. Before I got a ship for America a Zeppelin dropped a bomb within a hundred feet of me. I was picked up senseless and taken to a hospital. In a week I sailed for home, and just before leaving port a liner was torpedoed and the wrecked survivors were brought in, the most pitiful lot I ever saw. All the way over I sat up with a life belt about me, my shoes and outer clothing loosened so that I would be ready for the water at any moment. Upon my arrival at home I was beset by questions from eager persons to tell them all about the war. My invariable reply was that, to get a clear idea of it, they must go and see it themselves. Asked how I liked it, I replied that it was splendid.

He Contradicts Nansen.

Much stained with smoke and seal oil, a letter has come to Prof. W. H. Hobbs, of the University of Michigan, from the Canadian explorer, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, from his camp on the south-east coast of Banks Land in about 73 degrees north latitude. This letter was written January 13 last.

Stefansson says that the floe ice of the Beaufort Sea, which is originally salt, becomes so fresh after two seasons weathering that the tongue can detect no saltness in it. Bay ice in a single season is rendered fresh. Continuing, Stefansson says:

"On a little trip during the absence of the sun I have with me your 'earth features' to read, something profitable when one circumstance or another keeps me in camp.

'I cannot find the reference now, but I think you speak somewhere of Nansen's statement that pressure ridges of sea ice are never over 30 feet high, at any rate I remember he says so in his 'Farthest North.'

'I have seen many pressure ridges 60 feet high. I have a photograph of a man on top of a single piece that is over 60 feet high. I know several whaling captains who consider it a matter of common knowledge that pressure ridges may be as high as their crow's nests, 85 to 100 feet over the sea.

"Apparently Nansen never saw—and it seems Peary never saw—ice pressure that compares with that on the Alaska far north coast. Ice there is frequently so rough that a dog unhampered is unable to follow a man who by use of some sort of Alpine method makes his way along."

In instructing a youthful class in mathematics, the pretty young teacher turned to John Jones.

"Johnny," she remarked, "can you tell me what an average is?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the prompt response of Johnny; "an average is what a hen lays eggs on."

"What!" exclaimed the amazed teacher. "What on earth are you talking about?"

"That's right, Miss Mary" was the persistent rejoinder of Johnny. "Most every lesson in our arithmetic starts off. If a hen lays two eggs a day on an average

An old lady who lived alone outside a small village was nervous about Zeppelins, so she made careful inquiries as to her best course.

"I don't think there's much to worry about," replied the vicar in answer to her question. "But, if you like you can do as some folk are doing—sleep in the cellar

With profuse thanks the old lady went off to alter her domestic arrangements. But in half an hour she was back again anxiety once more wrinkling her brow. "The cellar's all right for Zeppelines, sir" she said "but suppose one o' them there submarines comes instead?"

A Lesson For Us All

What can a schoolmaster do for the state? He can teach most of us would say. But he can do more. Two schoolmasters are doing wonderful things for the Army.

One is shoeing our horses and the other is shoeing our men.

The story was told in the Record in September of how a London school-teacher Mr. A. E. Hill, came to the rescue of the War Office by organising the blacksmiths of the country to produce millions of horse-shoes; now the story is told of how a professor came to the rescue of the War Office by enabling it to provide shoes for the army.

When we think of the huge British Armies now in the field and the gigantic task of suppling them with proper equipment our minds naturally turn to arms and ammunition and possibly to clothes.

One of the greatest generals is said to have declared that he won his battles on shoe-leather Never has the task of shoeing an army been such a problem as with the British Army now. Our allies and enemies with great conscript armies were more or less prepared but for the first time Great Britain has raised an army of millions and boots had to be found quickly.

But for one man the problem never could have been solved and it is well that the country should know what it owes to him. He is Professor H. R. Procter of Leeds University who has made the Department of Leather Industries at Leeds the headquarters of the world's leather science.

The old method of preparing leather by means of vegetable tanning is a tedious process taking months to complete and had we been dependent upon it for our leather our armies could never have taken the field as they did. But the modern chrome process of preparing leather demands hours instead of months and it is this chrome taning that Professor Procter by his researches during recent years has brought to perfection.

Before the war the military authorities insisted that all Army boots and accoutrements should be made of vegetable-tanned leather It is true they had conducted one or two experiments with chrome-tanned leather but that was as far as they had gone, Suddenly to turn out boots by the million from vegetable tanned leather was impossible and the War Office quickly recognised the value of chrome leather and agreed to its use. All this is due to Professor Procter and although a year or two ago he retired from his post at Leeds University for a well earned rest he has returned and placed his services at the disposal of the authorities. His name should have an honoured place among those whose efforts have saved their country and civilisation.

Bruce County publishers agreed at a convention in Goderich recently to raise the annual subscription price of their newspapers from $1.00 to $1.50, owing to the increased cost in production and the higher prices of all kinds of commodities that a publisher has to buy for office and family use. It is only a question of time when all country weeklies will be forced to follow their example.

Every conductor on the C, P. R is now required to wear on the sleeve of his uniform golden bars indicating the length of service he has given to that company. The first bar indicates fifteen years of service the second twenty the third twenty five and so on.

The editor of a newspaper may blow his town sky it may soar in rhapsodical flight to the stars, but if the paper is without your advertising, comparatively few people know that you are in business.

Great Quantity Of Steel Shipped Via Prescott

Large shipments of bar steel, which is manufactured by the Algoma Steel Co., is now being handled over the C. P. R. and ferried across the river. Some days as many as twenty-five and thirty cars are handled here. This steel is consigned to the French War office and is used in the manufacture of high explosive shells. Some of the steel bars with which these cars are loaded are twelve inches in diameter. They are cut into blocks about six feet long and bored out to receive the charge for the great field guns of the French Army.

The steel industry in America was never in better condition than it is at the present time. The steel is shipped to New York where it is loaded for the French ports.

SCAVENGER TO POET.

"The Burns of Ireland" is Serving Somewhere on the Mediterranean

Somewhere with the Mediterranean Forces, serving joyfully and strenuously with the 5th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers as a lance-corporal, is a man whose life provides the strangest story in the world of literature. The poetic genius of this soldier, Lance-Corporal Francis Ledwidge, has at last shone through his struggles with poverty, and those who have read his 'Songs of the Fields," a book published by Herbert Jenkins, Ltd., are proclaiming him "the Burns of Ireland," an exaggerated compliment maybe, at which Mr. Ledwidge himself will doubtless smile. But there can be no doubt of his genius as a poet, and the best literature of the day is all the richer for the enterprise of Mr. Jenkins, who has by the publication of this book given the public an opportunity of learning of the work of Francis Ledwidge.

It was really Lord Dunsany, dramatist, poet, philosopher, critic, and now captain of the 5th Inniskillings, who discovered Mr. Ledwidge.

"I never thought," says the latter, "I was a poet, nor did I believe it at all, until Lord Dunsany said so. I burnt all I wrote for years, because I thought it might as well die young and be happy."

Born twenty-two years ago in a little cottage in Slane, County Meath, Mr. Ledgidge was the youngest but one of nine children. His father died when he was two years old, and he has bitter memories of his mother struggling fiercely against hunger, bailiffs, and the other woes of the very poor.

A deep love of the beauties of Nature led him to write poetry at a very early age, but it was necessary for him to earn money to provide food for the family, and he was sent to Dublin to earn his living in a grocer's shop. He hated the work, however, and ultimately, when he was sixteen, walked home, a distance of thirty miles. In the meantime, however, he had continued to write poetry, and Lord Dunsany, in his introduction to "Songs of the Fields." quotes a verse of a poem which Ledwidge wrote while working in a grocer's shop and which was inspired by his dreams of Slane:

Above me smokes the little town
With its whitewashed walls and roofs of brown,
And its octagon spire toned smoothly down
As the holy minds within.
And wondrous, impudently sweet,
Half on him passion, half conceit,
The blackbird calls adown the street,
Like the Piper or Hamelin.

Preparing Casualty Lists.

Battles take place over such a long front nowadays, and are spread over so much greater a time, that the preparation of casualty lists is much more difficulty than in previous wars. As soon as possible after a battle comes to an end the regiments concerned are paraded, often enough in the battlefield itself, and the roll called by the adjutant. The names of those who do not answer are carefully noted and sent to the headquarters of the brigade to which the regiment is attached.

The names of the wounded who have been sent to hospital by the Royal Army Medical Corps men are taken and marked off on special forms. Even if a soldier is so seriously wounded that he cannot give details of himself the doctors have no difficulty in discovering them from the identity disc and badge each soldier carries. It is from these badges that the names of the dead are noted and forwarded to headquarters. A certain amount of time is allowed for stragglers to return to camp before they are reported as missing and the lists completed. They are then cabled to England and checked again at the War Office from the regimental rolls which are kept there. Then and not till then the lists of dead, wounded, and missing are published.

When Swearers Were Taxed.

It may not be generally known that money was at one time raised by the State by imposing fines on those given to the habit of swearing. Laws against swearing were passed in the reigns of Elizabeth and James I., and were strictly enforced during the Civil War by Cromwell, who says of his Ironsides. "Not a man swears but pays his twelve pence." Almost a century later Swift, in his "Swearer's Bank," remarks that "5,000 swearing gentlemen of Ireland, at one oath a day at a shilling each, would furnish an annual revenue of £91,250." Swearing is much less common now than in the old days, but a Chancellor of the Exchequer at the end of his resources might still be able to raise some money from the objectionable habit.

A Relief.

A chap had just gone to the Flanders front from the training camp in Devon, and his calmness and cheerfulness under German fire impressed everyone. So much so, in fact, that his corporal declared:

"I never saw a new hand settle right down to it like George."

"Oh," said another recruit, "if you knew George's wife, corporal, you'd understand how the poor fellow enjoys a quiet day among the vitriol sprays and poison-bombs."

License Commission Meeting.

The new Provincial License Commission met in Cornwall last week to consider the applications for licenses in the United Counties, for which they received six applications from the county of Dundas. Among other business before the commission, Rev. Mr. Warren read a petition from the temperance people, praying that the law should be so amended that county local option would be placed in force as soon as possible, and admitting that while the 3-5 clause was a hindrance, yet it was not entirely void of benefit. For purposes of temperance it was asked that the three counties be separated. The congratulations of his petitioners were extended to the Board on their appointment to their honorable position. and the hope was expressed that they would see their way clear to recommending the prayer of the petition to the Department and Government.

Mr. J. W. Flavelle, the chairman, in explaining the powers of, the commission said he could state frankly that the Commission was a unit on the matter of bars being left open to public view day and night, as suggested by Mr. Hilliard. If a man wished a glass of liquor he would go in and take it, but it must be open to public view. If he was ashamed to be seen there, he should not go in.

The Commission was delegated with broad powers, and could cancel any license at any time. They might also act as a court, and mete out punishment as they think best. He warned licenses that the "club" would be used to compel them to live up to the law. Law breakers might be summoned before the Commission in Toronto instead of before a Police Magistrate. The man who broke the law would have a short life to live.

They proposed to make a live issue of the law relating to drunkenness and riotous conduct on hotel premises or the selling or delivering of liquor to a drunken person. In future he wished Inspectors to report the first of every month as to how hotels are being conducted in this regard. If any "drunken loafers" are found about, the proprietor of the house must show a good reason why they are allowed to loiter about. When a man shows the effect of drinking it is time to stop serving him. The Inspectors must also jot down the names of all found drunk on any premises. The Commission has power to cancel licenses in such cases, and would do so, No two men define drunkenness in a similar way. A man in the West told him once he did not know when a person was drunk in other places, but in his town he was drunk when his pockets were empty.

He defined the law regarding the sale to soldiers. No soldier must go into a shop at any time, and only into a bar between 6 and 8 on week days, except Saturday, when the limit was between 6 and 7 only.

The findings of the Commission would not be made known until after the New Year.

ANOTHER WOMAN TELLS

How Vinol Made Her Strong

Beallsville, Ohio.—"I wish all nervous, weak, run-down women could have Vinol. I was so run-down, weak and nervous I could not sleep. Everything I ate hurt me, and the medicine I had taken did me no good. I decided to try Vinol, and before long I could eat anything I wanted and could sleep all night. Now I am well and strong, and in better health than I have been for years." —Mrs. ANNA MILLISON, Beallsville, Ohio.

We guarantee Vinol for all run-down, weak and debilitated conditions.

The Heintsman Co. Piano is without a peer in its class.

Yet, that does not constitute our appeal for its favor. Too many inferior articles are being sold to-day whose only merits are that they are made in Canada. The Heintzman & Co. has maintained its own standard of excellenee for 60 years.
