Williamsburg Couple Mark 62nd Wedding Anniversary

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Saddlemire was the scene of a happy event on Saturday evening when the members of their family gathered home to celebrate with them the 62nd anniversary of their marriage.

It was on April 26th, 1887 that Miss Minnie Casselman, daughter of the late William Casselman and his wife Sarah Ann Casselman was united in marriage to Stanley Saddlemire, son of the late Amos Saddlemire and his wife, Lucy Deeks, all pioneers of Williamsburg. The ceremony was performer at the Presbyterian Manse, Morrisburg, by the minister Rev. E. Bayne. Following their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Saddlemire took up residence on the farm where they have continued to reside. Foeur childrn blessed their home, Dalton on an adjoining farm; Howard, on the homestead; Mrs. Frank Merkley of Williamsburg and Mrs. Gordon Render of Brockville; there are also 14 grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren.

On Saturday evening the members of the family were all present along with several friends as guests to help commemorate the rare event.

Mr. and Mrs. Saddlemire have been loyal members of the former Presbyterian Church, Williamsburg, (now United) and throughout their lives have taken an active part in all branches of the church work. Mr. Saddlemire has been an elder in the church for many years and seldom are the Saddlemire family absent from the church services.

For this occasion the living rooms were attractively decorated with cut flowers and the table was centered with a beautiful wedding cake, and lighted tapers in silver holders at either end.

Following an enjoyable evening of social intercourse and musical selections, their minister, Rev. Gerald Fee in an appropriate address paid warm tribute to the honored couple and their family. Mr. Frank S. Merkley also gave a short address.

About 10.30, refreshments, consisting of cake, sandwiches and coffee, were served, and the wedding cake was cut by the bride of 62 years ago and passed to the guests.

Letter To The Editor

Editor, Morrisburg Leader:

Dear Sir—If an Old Home Week in Morrisburg in 1949 is an abandoned project, it is probably for the reason that it is supposed the high costs of the present day extend to such affairs. Events of the kind need not be expensive. Former residents do not go trooping back to the scenes of auld lang syne for the purpose of being entertained at the expense of the old folk at home. Without attending a reunion they get all they want in horse racing, baseball, aquatic sports, and so forth in their every-day life. What they desire at re-unions is to meet old friends socially, instead of at competitive sports. A street parade of old boys and old girls would be worth to them a dozen fieldsports. An entertainment in the Music Hall with old time songs and speeches by old timers would be very much to the point, also there might be a museum such as that of 39 years ago. Band concerts, with airs of yesteryear played, would command most appreciative attention.

It cost a few hundred dollars to finance the 1910 reunion, also $2000 came from the Federal Government for the centenary celebration of the Battle of Crysler's Farm three years later, but for both events there was quite an elaborate program. For the latter the program was of course, appropriate, for it was of national interest, but for the former there was more of brass and feathers than the occasion called for.

It is hazarding little to say that Morrisburg old boys and mature girls of former times do not want the old folk at home to go on a spending spree for them, except to provide a fairly good band. In 1910, 30 members of the G.G.F.G. band came out from Ottawa.

It is probable that at least 100 former residents could be circularized in a plan to provide the necessary finances, for which there is the precedent of 1910. Each could be asked for a V. Some would give more, some less, but there would be a five-dollar average. And assuredly $500 would meet all legitimate assets. If not, the hotelkeepers, the restaurateurs and the taxi-men would probably be ready to come to the rescue.

By the way, the death of Irwin Hilliard removes one more of the committee of 1910, which committee had as chairman the late lamented John P. Gormley.

During the service, the church choir led in the singing of the hymns "Unto the Hills Do I Lift Up" and "Come Let Us Join Our Friends Above", and also rendered an anthem "Some Time We'll Understand".

Interment was made in Brinston cemetery. The pall bearers were six grandsons: Bill Fisher, Keith Munro Harold Fisher, Ray Fisher, Jack Munroe and Gerald Norval, Carman Fisher carried the "Gates Ajar"

Annable, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Wellington Durant, Winchester; Elzie Durant, Florida, U.S.A.; Roy Durant Ottawa; Harold Durant, Chesterville.

TURNING THE PAGES OF
"CANADA UNLIMITED"

Europe was hungry and John Cabot brought back news, in 1498, of great catches of fish along the Grand Banks. Soon hundreds of ships sailed to the waters just off Newfoundland—to bring back the largest catches in their history.

When Britain claimed the Island, fishing ports grew up along the coast. For many years the honour of governing the colony was given to the Captain of the first ship entering port each year. It was a strict rule. Then, in 1855, Newfoundland won responsible government of elected representatives.

It took a war for the world to recognize the rich resources of Newfoundland. The demands for the Island's products—fish, seal oil, minerals and lumber—led to a prosperity never before known.

On March 31st, 1949, we welcome into our confederation of provinces a neighbour whose road has always run parallel to ours—Newfoundland. Our interests are common . . . our ideals the same. Together, we shall go forward to greater achievements. We'll prove anew there's room to grow—in Canada Unlimited!

"I trust them more than I'd trust myself"

THE BANK'S the place for my money. I always put part of my pay into my bank account — otherwise it burns a hole in my pocket. I guess I trust the bank more than I trust myself! I figure that's one reason why my savings have been building up the way they have.

Another reason I'm sold on a bank account is that I always know just where I stand. All I have to do is take a look at my pass-book. They're a lot better bookkeepers than I am.

What's more, what's in my pass-book is my business, and I can count on the bank people to keep their mouths shut about it. And that suits me just fine!

Going to your bank is not like having to deal with a state bureau—but that's how it would be under state monopoly.

Waiting for Joe—Although Joe DiMaggio is out of action "indefinitely" with an injured heel, the New York Yankee star's uniform is ready and waiting for him. Cleaned and pressed, the suit with the big number five hangs in the Yanks' dressing room at Yankee Stadium, as the Bronx Bombers prepared for a DiMaggio-less opening day.

SPORTS-&c

by A SIXBIT CRITIC

The day after the late lamented Detroit Red Wings seeped out of the Stanley Cup picture we ran across a friend who is considerable of a hockey fan. We found him in a quandary, which is a tough spot to be in unless you are equipped with a map or compass, or else have a seeing eye dog.

(Which reminds us that the annual campaign for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind is about due, and if there is any organization which better deserves your support, we personally have never run across it.)

But to get back to this friend of ours. When we asked him just what was biting him, he replied that he couldn't decide just what to do in regard to the Maple Leaf hockey team. "If that was the real Maple Leafs we just saw flatten the Detroits," he said, "I am thinking seriously of consulting my lawyer, and I will ask him if I cannot sue the club for the return of all the money I spent on tickets throughout the regular season on the ground of false pretences."

We tried to soothe his injured feelings as best we cound, telling him that maybe it was the real, blown-in-the-bottle Maple Leafs he had watched trying to untrack themselves during the months of October, November, January, February and March. "They wore the same uniforms," we said, "and they looked very much the same when posing for their pictures."

"Then in that case," he made answer, "I feel it is my bounden duty to go and report them to the stewards and demand a saliva test for every one connected with the outfit, with the exception, maybe, of Foster Hewitt and Wes McKnight, who gave their best at all times and didn't spare a tonsil." So we left him still wondering which course to take.

The International League season is just about to start as we write this and there is a long and dusty road to travel ere the pennant race is decided. But if the Toronto Baseball Club keeps up its present gait, we have no hesitation in predicting that ball fans of the Quince City and surrounding territory will have something more to draw them to the stadium than the prospect of watching a lot of noisy sure-thingers parked back of third base trying to chisel one another out of a few small bets.

For one thing, the club has made a real clean-up and paint-up job of the ball park. And we may inform you that it wasn't before it was time by any manner of means, in fact, they say that in their clean-up operations the workmen came across almost everything that has been missing around Toronto for ages, excepting the body of Ambrose Small.

Anyway, it promises to be a baseball layout with considerable class, and one to which a man need not be ashamed to take his wife, or lady friend—or both, for that matter, although maybe not both at the same time.

Then there is the matter of the dope book which the ball club has put out for the information of radio announcers, sports writers and similar trash. It is one of the most complete and well-gotten-up affairs of its kind we have ever seen, and a real credit to whoever compiled it. It—and the refurbishing of the stadium—have convinced us that the Toronto Baseball Club really means business, and intends to give the fans something more than promises of "Better things next summer."

Looking over the volume in question, we couldn't help marveling at how many different cities had been represented—or misrepresented—in the loop since Toronto first became part of it 'way back in 1884—also the different names the league itself had gone under.

First of all, it was the Eastern League. After that, for one season, the New York State League. Then the International League, the International Association, the Eastern Association, the Eastern League, again the International League, the New International League, and lastly—so far—the International League. For changing names, it could give Babs Hutton a real run for her money, and no fooling.

As for the cities taking part—well, to put it briefly, there were no less than 42 of them, all told—and if you think they are going to be all told in detail in this space, you are mistaken. But a hasty glance reveals such teams taking part as the Philadelphia Athletics, Hamilton, Ontario; Ottawa, Saginaw, Bay City, Wilkes-Barre, Lebanon, Long Island City, and a whole lot more that we had long forgotten were ever in there.

However, this will suffice regarding the Toronto ball team and the International League for the time being, but we hope to have more worth reporting at a later date. As a one-time resident of Toronto, and a long sojourner in its vicinity, we would hate to have outsiders get the idea that hockey and form-chart reading cover the full extent of its athletic addictions.

While engineers of the New York Power and Light Corp. pondered plans for a hydro-electric dam on the Cacandaga River, beavers moved in, built one 120 feet wide and 6 feet high, and flooded 10 acres. Confident it can be done, the engineers are completing their plans.

WHAT GOES ON IN THE WORLD

by Norman Blair

PALESTINE

If, as, and when Israel is admitted to the United Nations, 59 flags will fly from 59 flagpoles at the entrance to the U.N.'s General Assembly auditorium in New York. But it seems quite possible, at this writing, that one of those flagpoles will be bare during the current session. The obstacle, of course, is the vexed question of Jerusalem.

Lying in the central region of Palestine, the heart of Jerusalem, is the "old city," a one-mile-square area enclosed by ancient walls. There stand most of the holy places of Jerusalem — places sacred to Christian, Jew and Moslem. Normally the population of the Old City is around 27,500, including 2,500 Jews.

Outside those walls is New Jerusalem, with a population of around 103,000 Jews and 105,000 Arabs.

The United Nations, in its original plan of partition, proposed to establish Jerusalem and its environs as an international area of some 280 square miles. The objective was to assure free access to the holy places of the city for any and all religious groups.

During the war of partition about a year ago, the armies of Israel and of Trans-Jordan divided Jerusalem. Israel occupied the western sector, the modern business and residential quarters where most of the Jews lived. King Abdullah's Trans-Jordan Legion occupied the eastern sector, including the Old City. In the armistice of April 3, 1949, both sides recognized the other's holdings in Jerusalem for the present.

The Israeli Government has said that it will not relinquish its part of Jerusalem, nor the corridor leading from there to Tel Aviv—and it has also proposed that the Old City be internationalized. Actually, however, Israel has indicated that she is not interested in the status of the Old City so long as she retains her part of Jerusalem.

Trans-Jordan has shown equal determination to keep its section of Jerusalem as long as Israel retains its sector. King Abdullah has made it clear that he will not consent to internationalization of the Old City unless all Jerusalem is placed under international administration.

In the United Nations debate over Israel's application for U.N. membership, the future of the holy places was a central theme. One group argued for immediate approval of the application; another wanted it referred to a committee for further study.

The latter stand was suported by an encyclical of Pope Pius in which he urged "internationalization of Jerusalem and all other sacred places." Britain is generally sympathetic with the Arabs' position; and the Scandinavian states are disturbed over Israel's failure to find and punish the murderers of the U.N. mediator, Count Folke Bernadotte.

So it looks, at this moment, very much as though Israel will remain outside the United Nations, officially, for a while yet.

RUSSIA

For centuries there has been great speculation, from time to time, as to whether there is still anything of Noah's Ark remaining. According to the Book of Genesis, the Ark — a triple-decked vessel some 450 feet in length — "rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat."

These mountains are, at present, in Turkish territory, overlooking boundaries with Iran and Soviet Russia. Not long ago three Western archaeologists announced that they had the Turkish Government's permission to go and take a look for the Ark. One of the men is Egerton Sykes, a member of the British Geological Society and former British commercial attache at Warsaw. Another is Hans Roozen, a Dutch student; while the third is Dr. E. A. Smith, of North Carolina. They have been trying to raise money for the expedition and hope to start for Turkey early this summer.

But the Russians see in the proposal nothing more than a spy plot concocted by Anglo-American intelligence agents. Pravda, the Communist party paper, said, "It is quite enough to look at a map to understand the meaning of the Anglo-American imperialists. The true purpose of such an expedition is as far from archaeology as Egerton Sykes is from his great-grandfather Noah."

In London Mr. Sykes stated that the spy story was ridiculous. In North Carolina Dr. Smith said, "We are not going to change our plans."

And there, for the time being, the matter rests.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Quite a number of western diplomats and employees of foreign missions to Czechoslovakia have been "invited" to leave that country during the past year, on what appear to be very flimsy charges of "spying."

One case, which may have serious consequences, is that of Captain Philip Wildash, a British representative in the Allied Military Permit Office, which sanctions visits to and across the three western zones of Germany. He was expelled from Czechoslovakia last March, but the matter is by no means closed as yet.

The British Embassy held that the attitude of the Czech police showed clearly that Wildash's guilt had been prejudged and sent a letter of protest to the Czechoslovak Foreign Ministry. The reply rejected the British protest and asserted that the Government had acted within its rights and in strict accord with diplomatic usage.

How far the three western Governments are prepared to go in pressing the Czech Government for guarantees that incidents like that of Wildash will not occur again is a matter for speculation. If they decide to go all out in support of the fundamental liberties involved, there may be grave trouble stirred up, not only in Czechoslovakia but throughout other "satellite" countries. Probably the whole thing depends on just how the big boys behind the walls of the Kremlin feel about it; although, of course, nothing like that can be said in any way officially.

TIP TO GARDENERS

Plants can fool the best of us. So often a stray seedling is saved as being a choice plant, only to turn out to be a weed. Stray tree seedlings are the worst offenders, coming up among our shrubs or along the foundation of the house, where we forget them until they are so big we have to ruin some good plant or shrub to get them out. Watch out for seedling trees coming up in the middle of a choice lilac or Japanese snowball.

Every woman should remember that no man likes to come home to a supper of cold shoulder and hot tongue.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP
is a lot of little things

During the war the people of England suffered untold hardships. In some ways their lot is little better today. All luxuries and many of life's necessities are rationed. Recently some food allotments per person were again reduced. As Canadians, we live in a land of plenty. Let us share then with the men, women and children of Britain by sending or donating the money for food parcels. Call your telephone operator for the address of your local branch of the U.E. F.B.—and prove your "Good Citizenship".

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

Today we Live in a Greater Canada

They Drained a Lake

to give Canada a Great New Industry

IT HAPPENED in Ontario's Rainy River District. Steep Rock Lake — fifteen miles long and ranging in depth from 40 to 265 feet — was emptied by batteries of giant pumps. Finlayson Lake was lowered by draining from the bottom. The course of the Seine River was completely changed. And one of the richest bodies of iron ore on the continent was uncovered. Providing millions of tons of ore a year — with enough uncovered for years to come — Steep Rock's development has been spectacular, but it is only ONE of many examples of Canada's tremendous modern advance. Today we truly live in a Greater Canada—one with productive capacity vastly increased and diversified, offering to young Canadians greater opportunities than ever before in every field of endeavour.

The iron and steel manufacturing industry presents another spectacular example of development: productive capacity and number of employees have been doubled since before the war, striking indication of Canada's new position as one of the world's great industrial nations.

SO MANY OPPORTUNITIES

"A sound idea and the determination to carry it through—those are sure passports to success in Canada today where there are so many interesting opportunities in so many different kinds of activity" —says MR. LESLIE BUTCHER, of Windsor, Ont.

Mr. Butcher—member of Canada's 1936 Olympic basketball team—after returning from college in the U.S. and being manager of a local insurance office, started his own Butcher Enterprises. Their development provides many examples of this young Canadian's energy and enterprise. They include: a unique and successful service in the wrapping of products for shipping; and the modernization of the Windsor Arena to present outstanding sports and entertainment events with great success.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

How foolish it is to try to cross our bridges before we come to them. For weeks Partner has been worrying about a cow that he was sure would have trouble in calving. And then one morning he went to the barn — and there was the cow with her calf, and everything absolutely normal. And was I relieved! Not only about the cow but because Partner was relieved from further worry.

Later that same morning I went down to see our barnyard family — and upon my word you couldn't move for calves. There were calves everywhere — some having their breakfast, others already finished and taking their "daily dozen" by chasing around the stable. Some were still tied up and a couple were running loose in a pen. "For heaven's sake — how many calves have you got around here?" I asked Partner. "Darned if I know — I've lost track of them," he answered. So I went around and counted them . . . there were nine, even though we had already sent four out. I suppose the reason is that we had eight heifers all pretty much of an age last summer. Evidently they realized their main function in life was to produce — so they did just that. But definitely.

A year or two ago one of my readers said: "I don't believe a week goes by but what you talk about your chickens." I hadn't realized it but no doubt she was right. Now the chances are someone will say that never a week goes by without my saying something about calves. And that, too, is true. But then this column is a chronicle of the doings at Ginger Farm — and right now calves seem to hold the spotlight.

But enough of calves. . . . Today I had one of those unwelcome things that come to all of us whether we want them or not — I mean a birthday. But even a birthday has its compensations. It is nice to have letters, cards and phone calls as if a few people, here and there, get the notion they are glad you happen to be alive. And I have special fondness for birthday cards — they are such nice, personal things. Daughter, for instance, has an uncanny habit of picking out cards singularly appropriate to the person and the occasion. My card this year featured a cocker spaniel tethered to a bone stuck in the ground. As if one cocker spaniel by the name of Honey wasn't enough! This card was one of the folder type with a picture and a bit of verse running on each page. The doleful expression on the pup's face was really clever. The verse, put altogether, ran like this —

A BIRTHDAY MESSAGE
ACROSS THE MILES.

Can't come to see you, can't hear your voice,
Too broke to call you; ain't got much choice.
Can't do a durned thing — "ceptin'
just set —
And hope that this birthday's your nicest one yet!

Daughter underlined "too broke to call you" which I took as a gentle hint that I needn't be expecting a long-distance call.

Another very nice card was from a very special friend—and I knew it had been chosen for the lovely verse that was in it. Little things like that are heart-warming and so very welcome — even if one's birthday isn't. How nice it is to have friends. You know, I often think the best thing about this poor old world is the people in it. So why worry about a birthday — a year, more or less, what does it matter? We are never really old until we think we are. And we never need to think we're old as long as we can take an interest in what goes on around us.

One day I told an oldish person, on her birthday, that I hoped she would have many more happy birthdays. She answered — "Well, I don't know — I'm not sure that I want many more birthdays."

What an unhappy attitude towards life. And yet it is understandable with some older folks. The accent these days is on youth. Young people must be provided with opportunity for education, recreation, and a business or profession. The only opportunity denied them is a chance to stand on their own feet and prove that they have what it takes to make their own way in the world. Old people are not given enough consideration. Surely our whole social structure would be greatly improved if more thought were given to the problem of those, still independent in spirit but unable to fend for themselves. We mustn't have our old folk hoping they will not have many more birthdays. Old people should be accepted as the responsibility of the young Unfortunately this responsibility is not always realized and accepted.

Tickets bearing the following words are being shown in a baker's shop window: "Pies like mother used to make—50c. Pies like mother used to think she made—$1.00."

The Great Moment

The year holds one moment, which may last for a week, when tree and bush and vine are on the breathless verge of leafing out. It is then that you stand on a hillside and look across the wooded valley and see the scarlet and orange of maple blossoms like a touch of pastel crayon across the tree-tops. You see greenish yellow in the tops of the wineglass elms, and the amber green fountain that is the big weeping willow beside the brook.

These generalities, so to speak, you see at a glance; and you know the breathless moment is here. Then you look at particulars. The crab apple trees in the orchard are dressed in green lace, their leaves no larger than your little fingernail. The lilacs are all tufted at their stem ends, each leaf cluster tipped with a faint brownish purple and not a leaf among them as big as a squirrel's ear. The wild blackberries have scarlet tassels not half an inch long, each tassel an unfolding group of leaves whose form can already be faintly seen. The late apple trees have gray silver nubs at their twig tips; draw down a branch and look closely and you see each nub as a young leaf cluster emerging from its bud, each leaf the size of a ladybug's wing and each red-tipped as though blushing. The privet has a leaf tuft like a miniature green magnolia, and the bridal wreath bush is green at every joint with little green rosebud leaves.

These things you see now, this instant. An hour from now all will be changed; tomorrow it will be still different. For this is the trembling moment when life stands between bud and leaf, between promise and achievement. A new world is in the making on these old, old hills, even as we watch.

Nothing is ever accomplished by committee unless it consists of three members, one of whom happens to be sick and another absent.

New — And All Of Them Useful

FOLDING BLEACHERS. Folding bleachers which give maximum seating capacity for public assemblies. Open, bleachers are said to provide adequate, comfortable seating which in many large-room areas can be made revenue-producing. Folded, they become safe playing walls for basketball and indoor games, less likely to injure athletes than walls of standard construction.

PLASTIC INFLATABLE BOAT. Vinylite plastic inflatable boat weighs only five pounds inflated; 6 feet from stem to stern, will carry two adults and two children. Smaller size also available. Plastic sheeting is claimed to be resistant to oils, grease, temperature change and abrasion. Deflated, can be put in part of space of overnight case.

SCREEN-AWNING. New-type aluminum screen, has cooling action of awning, shading value of venetian blind and insect protection of fine-wire mesh screen. Special chemical coating reduces glare and increases corrosion resistance.

AUTOMATIC WINDOW. Double-glazed window disappears into wall at flip of electric switch, brings screen into place. Since it's double-glazed, no storm sash is required. Easy to install in new buildings, makers claim it can be placed by any competent mechanic in building already built.

FAST SILO FILLER. Machine that "blows" forage where farmer wants it. Load is dumped from truck into conveyor-belt trough; 42-in. fan at other end of trough blows fodder through 8-in. pipe where operator aims it. Claim it can handle 20 tons of hay or 25 tons chopped corn in hour.

FOUR-SPEED MOTORCYCLE. Advantages claimed for new motorcycle are: four-speed foot gear shift; automatic clutch; internal expansion-type brakes on front and rear wheels for self-braking use; constant mesh transmission and telescopic suspension springs said to eliminate bouncing.

TESTS STRETCH. How much will a plastic or textile stretch under load? New electronic weighing system is designed so that loads from two grams to 5,000 lbs. can be applied to sample; high-speed recorder, geared to pulling jaw, charts results as load-elongation curve.

AIR WALL HEATING. Prefabricated 4-in. ducts are used in new warm-air heating system; makers claim two men can install system in six-room house in one day. Registers are placed in cold (outer) wall; air is forced through at higher temperature and velocity than present systems, comes out of register in fan-like pattern, heating the wall above the outlet.

SMALL AUTOMATIC BOWLING ALLEY. Built for homes, taverns, and coin-machine arcades, the alley is 18 ft. long 26 in. wide —about one-third the size of the runway. The alley has a maple bed. The player bowls at an illuminated setup of ten pin images. His ball, a little smaller than a duck-pin ball, hits electrical contact plates instead of actual pins. After every two balls, unless he makes a strike, the score is tallied automatically on the screen and is added to in succeeding plays. Balls are returned automatically, there's no need for pin boys or attendants.

Eating Crow

The Washington Biological Survey, which puts metal bands on wild birds to study their migratory habits, recently ordered new bands with different and more detailed wording.

They now read, "Notify fish and wild-life setrvices, Washington, D.C." Formerly the bands said simply "Wash. Biol. Surv."

Unofficial explanation of the change was taken from an irate citizen's letter. He complained:

"Sirs: I shot down one of your pet crows and followed instructions. I washed it, boiled it and served it. It was terrible. Stop fooling the people!"

Non-Starter

A guest conductor was greatly annoyed at rehearsals because at least one member of the orchestra was always missing. After the last rehearsal he tapped for attention and said: "I want to thank the first violinist publicly for being the only man in the orchestra who had the decency to attend every rehearsal."

The first violinist hung his head. "It seemed the least thing I could do," he said in a deprecating tone. "You see, I shan't be showing up for the concert tonight!"

Pyramid Clubs

The "pyramid craze" has been sweeping various parts of Ontario lately.

Of course, no one is fooling anyone—much. All it costs is a dollar and a wild scramble to get two more people with a dollar, each of whom must get two more people with a dollar, each of whom, etc. And there you sit, after 12 days, at the top of the pyramid, frazzle, dazzled, hoping to receive anywhere up to $2,048 from 2,048 people, each of whom dreams of sitting at the top of the pyramid in a few more days receiving anywhere up to $2,048 from 2,048 people, each of whom, etc.

Unfortunately, the chain almost always gets broken, the boom eventually goes bust, the wear and tear on the scurrying slaves who are building up the pyramid for the next goggle-eyed Cheops is terrific, the racketeers move in on the craze (if they haven't started it), the "lucky" few spend the rest of their lives trying to think of new ways to get something for nothing, and the luckless many shrug off their two weeks of frantic telephone calls with the lame conclusion that success is all a matter of chance, anyway.

And for this expensive misconception, ladies and gentlemen, you need pay no more than one dog-eared dollar bill.

Mrs. John W. Mackay once wanted to buy and tear down the famous Arc de Triomphe in Paris because it interferred with her view of the Champs Elysée.

Doggy Outfit.—Irene Boer is really dressed for a stroll in sunny St. Petersburg, Fla. But her sheepdog, Meriedip Duke, is definitely out of place with his heavy fur coat. But passers-by don't seem to take much note of Duke's apparent discomfort. They're too busy eyeing Irene.

It's so different today

Time was no object to Cleopatra when her slave attendants served breakfast. The Cleo of today must be quick off the mark. So no wonder Mother praises the served-in-a-jiffy, eaten-on-sight Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes. They're not only convenient but delicious and nourishing, too.

Yes — Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes provide useful quantities of carbohydrates, proteins, minerals and other food essentials to start the busy day right. Made with two grains — wheat and barley — to give you that glorious Grape-Nuts flavor in crisp, golden flake form. Ask your grocer for Post's Grape-Nuts Flakes.

A Serial Story

JOSEPH LEWIS CHADWICK

CHAPTER I

"May be so," replied McTavish. for towing us just a couple of miles. I think it's scandalous."

"But I'm making sure they earn every penny—I've put the brakes on."

In the seconds it took him to cross to her, her mind leapt back three years—to a dance at Alexandria. To the week that followed, when she had dined and ridden and sailed with this man; to a week that had been ecstasy; to a week when she had been 17 and hopelessly infatuated with a man to whom love was like soldiering — a series of campaigns.

A week only. At its end he had turned to his next campaign. And she had instantly hated him as deeply as she had loved him. The next time they had met, impetuous and bitter with her sense of injury, she had quarreled with him. He had laughed at her, and called her a child. She had sent him away, telling him never to speak to her again. He had obeyed. She had not seen him again—until now.

He was even more dashingly handsome. He was bronzed and lean and strong looking. But three years seemed to have aged him. His lips had turned firmer, his eyes grown strange with an old-young look, as if they had seen too much of life's hardness. He was smiling at her now, his smile still charming. He meant to talk, of course. And recall the past. But, no—

"Miss Virginia Ames?"

She drew a calmer breath. He wasn't going to recall the past.

"Yes," coldly, "I am Miss Ames."

"I am Lt. James Randall," he said crisply. "I am investigating last night's stage holdup. I understand you were a passenger."

"Yes, I was."

"Do you mind if I ask some questions? It will take but five minutes."

"Very well."

He stood before her, one hand holding his campaign hat, the other resting on his saber hilt. The cavalry's yellow stripes running his breeches from boot-top to belt made his legs appear very long. He looked so much at ease it annoyed her. Virginia's own tension was terrific and increasing.

"First, Miss Ames, did you have anything taken?"

"Only a cameo pin. It was not of great value."

"You were the only passenger robbed?"

"I think so—yes."

"The bandits were more concerned with a money box the stage carried?"

She said indifferently, "Yes."

He nodded. "Could you describe the bandits?"

She had difficulty keeping her voice steady; her hatred and contempt for him seemed to come up into her throat.

"Two of them, perhaps. The one —the leader—was masked." With few words she described the holdup men.

Jim Randall regarded her thoughtfully. "The other passengers told me there was a letter involved. You dropped it, and one of the bandits picked it up. The leader made him return it."

"There was a letter," Virginia said, breathless now. "It was — valueless except to myself."

"Oh, something personal . . ." His voice was infuriatingly matter of fact. He was carrying this stranger business too far, making a farce of it. Virginia's lips thinned in anger. She hated his smug conceit. She wondered suddenly how many girls he had—laughed at.

Then he was saying, "I understand you are traveling to Santa Bonita. Have you arranged transportation?"

She gave him a long cold look. "I have. I have hired a carriage and driver. I am starting today."

His eyes were a smoke blue; they were suddenly less mocking. He said, "Do you mind my asking if you have people there, Miss Ames?"

She gave him a bright smile. She relished this; he had lost his post-campaign skirmish. He had left his flank unguarded.

"I have my fiance there," she said deliberately.

"Oh, your fiance." He took it without a change of expression. He had no heart; he'd allow her no tiny victory. Then he was smiling. "Congratulations, Miss Ames. Perhaps I know the—fortunate man."

She held her head high. "His name is Philip Lawrence."

She caught a glimmer of expression in the smoke blue of his eyes.

"Philip Lawrence," he sampled the name. "No, I do not know him. His name is, however, familiar."

How Can I?

by Anne Ashley

Q. How can I bleach sheets?

A. An excellent method of bleaching sheets is to hang them on the line, and as quickly as the sun dries them, turn the hose on them. Repeat this several times.

Q. How can I keep meringue from shrinking?

A. To help prevent meringue on pies from shrinking while cooking, be sure that it covers the entire top of the pie and touches the rim of the crust. Bake the meringue for about 15 minutes in a slow oven.' Too hot an oven will cause shrinkage.

TABLE TALKS

by Jane Andrews

A week or so ago I had some thing to say about veal being especially abundant around this time of year — and cheaper too than many other sorts of meat. Here's another way of serving veal which I think you will find completely to the family's liking. It's an

Oven Veal Stew

- 1 pound lean diced veal
- 2 slices salt pork, diced
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1½ cups water
- 2 cups condensed tomato or mushroom soup
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon paprika
- 6 carrots
- 6 new potatoes

Method — Brown together pork and veal in a frying pan, then remove to baking dish. Brown onion lightly in fat. Blend in flour, add water, soup, salt, pepper and paprika. Cook three minutes, stirring constantly and pour over meat in the baking dish. Add whole carrots and potatoes. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (375 degress F.) for one and a half hours. Serves six.

It's fashionable nowadays to decry anything with a Russian label. But although most of us have no use for their political ideas it's no use denying that some good things have come out of the land that lies now behind the Iron Curtain. Tschaikovsky's music for one—and some of their cooking ideas for another. So you can pretend that this came from elsewhere—which, as a matter of fact it did, for there are one or two added improvements to the basically Russian

Baked Potatoes With Sour Cream

- ⅔ cup chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 4½ cups sliced, cooked potatoes
- ¾ cup ready-to-eat bran
- 4 tablespoons (1 oz.) grated cheese
- 1 cup sour cream
- 2 eggs, beaten
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Method — Cook onion in butter until a golden color. Place half the potatoes in buttered casserole, sprinkle with part of the onion, bran crushed to fine crumbs and grated cheese. Pour over this, half the sour cream and beaten eggs mixed together. Repeat, using remaining ingredients, season with salt and pepper and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) for 30 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

For once I seem to have things in proper order, with a dessert idea coming last, instead of up around the start, as is customary with me. This one is a favorite Springtime dessert with thousands of families —and if you haven't savored it before, I think you'll find it a real treat.

Lemon Cake-Top Pudding

- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 eggs
- ¼ cup lemon juice
- 1 cup milk

Method — Cream together the sugar, butter and flour. Add 2 beaten egg yolks, the lemon juice and the milk. Then fold in the 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in an 8 inch ungreased casserole or individual custard cups, set in a pan of warm water. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375°F.) for approximately 35 minutes. A cake-like top will form, with a layer of creamy custard below. This recipe makes four servings—and you'll probably wonder why you didn't make double the amount.

ANNE HIRST
Your Family Counselor

It is difficult enough to train a child who has been spoiled. "How, Anne Hirst," cries a reader, "do you handle a spoiled wife and mother? She is middle-aged, yet acts worse than her young grandchildren!

"She has no consideration for others. She goes her way without telling anyone of her plans. This is especially bad, since she lives several miles from town and has to depend on her husband or son to take her back and forth. Many a time they've waited for hours on end for her return.

"And it's never her fault! She throws tantrums, and twists facts around to make the other fellow the offender. She never apologizes for losing her temper, and she makes an exhibition of herself in her children's homes in front of their youngsters. Even those youngsters are disgust d with her.

"Her husband is on a diet. She fixes big, tempting dinners for everybody else which he can't eat, then flounces off and takes half an hour to fix his food. In all their 30-odd years of marriage he has never complained.

"She rules the roost. If anyone crosses her, she is very hurt and 'picked on'.

"Her husband should be retired. He is old enough for a pension. But she keeps him in debt, so he works on. Ill and uncomplaining, periodically he has to go to the hospital for a month or two to recuperate.

"This particular situation is getting so bad that something has to be done. None of us can take much more. Especially her husband."

"Undoubtedly she is only one of many middle-aged women who act this way. If you print this, she may read it and take stock of herself.

"I can easily see why the Indians pushed their old women off a cliff. Too bad there isn't some sort of shocking machine today to wake up these foolish females."— FED UP.

Mother Love

Several years ago, during a prolonged drought in Australia, the wild creatures of the bush became so thirsty that they braved even the dangerous dooryards of settlers for a drink of water. So the settlers, whose cattle and sheep died like flies for lack of water, were constantly on the lookout lest these wild creatures drink what little water was left. Each man hung a loaded gun near the doorway to be used at a moment's notice.

Such a call came one hot summer's day. Instantly the settler seized his gun and stood ready. Out of the bush a mother kangaroo, with a young one in her pouch, came loping across the brown, powdery open space surrounding the house. Nearer and nearer she came, her beautiful brown eyes fixed beseechingly on the settler. She made her way straight to the tub of water placed there for the use of the few domestic animals that had survived. Still the settler did not shoot.

The water reached, she waited, her soft gaze still fixed on the man, while the young kangaroo in her pounch drank its fill. Then she turned, without taking a drop for herself, and loped back across the parched open space and on into the tangled depths of the bush. The settler watched her until she disappeared. Then he hung up his gun and, with a choking in his throat, went back to work.
