Miss Minnie McLean, Chesterville.

Friday evening last Miss Minnie McLean passed to her eternal home after a two weeks illness. The deceased, for the past twelve years, lived with her mother in their comfortable home on Main St., having moved there from the homestead in Williamsburg.

Beside her sorrowing mother she is survived by four brothers, William of Chesterville, John on the homestead, George of Dakota, and Walter of Governeur, also two sisters, Mrs. Ross (Lizzie) of Calgary, Alberta and Mrs. Hill (Lou) of Ottawa, all of whom have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

Deceased was born on November 4th, 1869 and while still a child met with an accident at school which seriously affected her health and deprived her of that physical freedom and activity which had been her birthright, yet her indomitable spirit emerged triumphant from this trial, which she accepted in humility and refused to allow it to change her naturally sweet and lovable disposition. Nor was her ambitious nature quelled for she continued her studies ercutually obtaining a teacher's certificate at the Morrisburg High School. She spent several years in the teaching profession always winning the respect and esteem of those with whom she came in contact. She was a Presbyterian by faith and of a deeply religious nature, lending her ready sympathy and support to all church work especially in the Sunday School and Missionary Society where her spiritual outlook will be a decided loss.

On her casket was placed a pillow of beautiful flowers from friends in the congregation, also one from the family. The funeral took place on Sunday at the Presbyterian Church where service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Mullin after which interment was made in Maple Ridge Cemetery.

Presentation at Morewood

The residence of Mrs. Robert Rainey, Jr., was the scene of a pleasant function on Monday evening when a company of the friends and neighbors of her sister, Mrs. Geo. Moffat, gathered to bid her and Kenneth farewell on the eve of their departure for Vernon, B.C., where she will rejoin her husband and make her home in the future. After an enjoyable hour of music and social intercourse, Mr. Jake Steen read to Mrs. Moffat the following address and presented her with a very handsome club bag for herself and a neat safety razor for Mr. Moffat and handed Kenneth a pair of mocha gloves. Mrs. Moffat expressed her admiration of the timely gift and her deep appreciation of the kindness of her friends, at the same time assuring them that no such token was necessary to keep her and her husband mindful of the good friends left behind in Morewood. Lunch was served by the ladies and proceedings were brought to a close by uniting in some verses of "Blest be the tie that binds."

Dear Mrs. Moffat :—

It is with feelings of regret and sadness that your old friends and neighbors have assembled here this evening for the purpose of bidding you farewell and of wishing you "bon voyage" to your future home in the broad prairies of the west.

You have gained a very important place in the hearts of your neighbors because of your sterling qualities and the high and noble ideals you have cherished and lived up to. You have been a worthy example to us and your memory will be ever fresh for years to come. Your place in our midst and in the church and community life at large will be hard to fill; but life is an ever-changing drama and we are continually shifted about by the Great Master Mind, who holds our destinies within His grasp. Therefore we must submit to his will.

We know that you will make many new friends in the circle of your new home, friends no doubt just as staunch and true as those you leave behind, but we feel that in your moments of ease and reflection

"When memory's chain brings
The light of other years about you,"

the faces of the old friends in the East will ever crowd in upon you and your heart will fill with joy in the knowledge of the lasting bonds of friendship formed in our midst. and on our part

"We'll remember you still, tho' far away
You'll still be dear amongst us."

And as a very slight token of our esteem, love and friendship for you, we ask that you accept this club bag. We do not present it because of its intrinsic value but because of the fond associations and memories it will recall each time you gaze upon it.

We also ask you to kindly bear this small remembrance to you husband. It will serve as a material emblem of the feeling of friendship and brotherly love we cherish in our hearts for him. Convey to him our rejoicings in his recovery of health and our best wishes for the future.

And Kenneth accept these as a remembrance of the friends of your birthplace.

And now your beloved friends and neighbors bid you a fond farewell for the present, be assured of our continued friendship, and interest in your welfare. We shall meet again—shall we not? Where parting is unknown.

Again wishing you prosperity and health. Farewell and a bon voyage, we still remain, your friends and neighbors.

The Late Mrs. Walter Bogart

Death has claimed another old and respected resident in the person of Margaret Allison beloved wife of Walter Bogart. Deceased was born in the Township of Williamsburg in the year 1840 and was married Nov. 5th, 1868. She had been in delicate health for a number of years but her sufferings were born with calm resignation and christian fortitude which won the love of all who witnessed her sublime patience. During her lengthy illness her husband and family were untiring in their attentions but all was of no avail. She will be greatly missed by her family and the community where she resided, as her broad sympathies were always extended to the afflicted and sorrowing.

The funeral which was largely attended took place on Saturday afternoon last at Trinity Methodist Church service being conducted by her pastor Rev. J. B. Hicks assisted by Rev. C. A. Mullin, after which the remains were placed in the Maple Ridge vault. A husband and four sons and four daughters as well as a large circle of relatives and friends are left to mourn the departed.

Another loved one has departed
To the region of the blest,
Leaving one and all sad-hearted
Yet glad to know that she's at rest.

For many years she bore with patience
The sickness God was pleased to send,
Until at length she heard him saying
Your sickness now is at an end.

So she passed from earth to heaven.
Leaving us without a sigh,
Filling us with keen desire
Soon to meet her in the sky.

Nation Valley Boy Visits First Place Destroyed By Huns in France 1914

Mars-la-tour France Feb. 18th.

Dear Dad:—

Another month has passed and we are still in France, but I hope we won't have much longer to stay here as I am getting awfully tired of this place and the weather we have been having.

The other day I spent some time at a place called Audun-le-Roman, one of the first places shelled by the Germans in 1914. It is in the mining section which was almost the first of France occupied by the Huns. It is said here that after driving the defenders away from the town that the Germans burned it and also burning the women and children who were left in it, after committing many other outrages. The French had no artillery to stop the Germans, the bestthey had being machine guns and only a few of them and a few rifles. The Frenchman who was telling me said he had lived in that place before the war and when the Germans came they took the Machine guns and went out to meet them, but could do very little against the artillery and the masses of infantry the Germans brought up, and were forced to retreat to about three-quarters of a mile south west of the town where they dug themselves in on a hill top. Audun is on the north side of a valley or small canyon, about three-quarters of a mile wide in the bottom of which is a railway of four main tracks and a narrow stream. With the French on the top of the opposite bank the Germans made a good advance in daylight across this hollow and when mounting the other side were met by the French Machine gun fire and lost hundreds and hundreds of men in a strip about a mile, where the dead lay so close that they almost touched each other. The same day they burned the village and this man who was telling me said his sister, small brother and mother perished in the flames. His father was killed in 1916, another brother he does not know whether he is dead or alive. This man speaks very good English and we had a long talk about the outbreak of the war.

This part of France is dotted about every two miles with great buildings at the iron mines and at many places one can count as many as ten groups of these buildings in the surrounding country. It was in this section where the Germans kept many of their airplanes, as all through it can be seen many hangars (airplane sheds). Usually from five to eight planes are kept at each field but I don't know what kinds were kept here although I imagine they were scout or observation planes.

I was up to a town called Esch a short time ago, a clean little place where everything looked nice and where there are good looking stores. It is in Luxembourg. French Military police are stationed there where the boundaries of Luxembourg, Lorraine and France meet All civilians require passes from one country to the other and all parcels are inspected by the M. P. We do not need passes and can come and go as often as we wish.

I expect to be able to send you a souvenir in the shape of a German automatic pistol. The kind I want is about twelve inches long and has a stock with it so you can have a shoulder rest if you want it. It also has a big magazine and you can fire thirty-two shots as fast as you can pull the trigger and has a good long range. It would make a good outfit for a prospector to have if a pack of wolves got on his trail.

I have much more to tell you but will have to leave it for a later letter.

Your son, John Barkley.

Thanks Red Cross Society

Dear Mrs. Lawson:—

I wish to thank you, and through you the members of the Red Cross Society for the splendid services you have given during this struggle we have just finished victoriously. All prisoners of war with whom I had conversation are sincerely grateful to the Red Cross which we believe to be the finest institution organized during the war, as the funds were certainly well spent.

Had it not been for the splendid work of the Red Cross there would have been very few' if any, repatriated Canadians who had been prisoners of war, to put it plainly then, I do not hesitate to say that I owe my life directly to the Red Cross. From the time that I was registered at the German Prison Camp, parcels from the Red Cross societies began to arrive and they came regularly during the four months that I was a captive, these parcels contained both food and clothing as well as the ever necessary to the soldiers, cigarettes. The hospital work of the society too is wonderful.

Again thanking one and all who contributed work or money or both. I remain, yours respectfully Pte. Clifford Merkley No. 177340, Can. M. G. C.

Registered their protest against interference with the time and also the neglect of the Cy., Roads as the following resolutions show. By Quart and Hamilton.— Whereas the part of the County Road leading north through the village of Winchester to Ormond is in a condition rendering travel thereon almost impossible. It is therefore requested that the attention of the County Road Engineer be directed to this and care should be undertaken promptly to avoid damage claims through accidents.

Quart and Hamilton:—

Whereas the adoption of the Daylight Saving time by a number of the cities and towns of Ontario is causing a great deal of inconvenience to the farming community, therefore the Municipal corporation of Winchester Township protest against any interference, with the operation of standard time.

Next meeting May 5th, at Winchester.

An Interesting Relic

Tweed Advocate— A relic of by-goue days and one that might well be termed a curio to the present generation was left at our offlce this week by Mr. J. E. Johnston and has since been exhibited in our offlce window. We dare say that had we not labelled it, explaining what it was, that 90 per cent of those who examined it would have passed without knowing to what use it had ever been put. The relic is nothing less than an ox shoe such as oxen were shod with in the early history of this district. The toe and heel alike are still intact and the shoe was for the left half of the hoof. The way it was found by Mr. Johnston is also interesting. An old apple tree in his orchard had passed its usefulness and it was cut down and converted into firewood. When splitting one of the blocks the shoe was found imbedded in the wood near the heart of the tree and must have been there for many years. it is in a good state of preservation.

SERBIA'S ASPIRATIONS.

Claims for Slavic State Before Peace Conference.

Serbia is at the Peace Conference in the hope of being treated not only justly but generously, and no state better deserves such treatment. Though her aspirations also come into conflict with those of Italy, they are to be realized chiefly at the expense of Austria-Hungary. Had Serbia been able before the Great War to secure Bosnia and Herzegovinia, with an outlet to the sea, she would have been very contented. It is true that there existed a Pan-Serbian agitation for a union of all the South Slavs outside of Bulgaria under the crown of Serbia, but there were many obstacles to its realization. The Montenegrin dynasty did not look with favor upon its own extinction. The Catholic Croats considered themselves more advanced economically and culturally than the Orthodox Serbs. The Slovenes wanted autonomy within Austria-Hungary, not change of allegiance. The Pan-Serbian movement received a great impetus as the result of the splendid victories of the Serbs over the Turks and the Bulgarians in the Balkan Wars, and the Great War has practically removed all obstacles. There cannot be any doubt that the majority of the South Slavs of all branches look upon Serbia as the Slav Piedmont destined to unite them in a strong national state. They have given evidence of this not only in the Declaration of Corfu of July, 1917, wherein they outlined the constitution which is to be the fundamental document of a state under the crown of Serbia, but later in the year at the Rome Conference of Oppressed Nationalities of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy. When Serbia asks at the Peace Conference that all the South Slavs be permitted freely to select their political allegiance, she has every reason to expect that the vote will be overwhelmingly in favor of union with herself. And this will probably be true not only of the South Slavs of Austria-Hungary, in which there is a party opposed to union with Serbia, but of independent Montenegro, whose king insists upon a federal state, not a unified state.—Asia Magazine.

German Hold on Roumania.

Germany is not an immediate neighbor of Roumania, but her relations have had particular significance. The old German, that which existed up to 1871, the sentimentalist and culture-seeking Germany of Goethe and Schiller, was loved in Roumania. At the beginning of the nineteenth century many Roumanian boys were in the universities of Leipzig and Munich, and many German merchants and professional men were established in Roumania. When Roumania elected, as King, Prince Carol Hohenzollern, these relations became still closer. But almost coincident with his arrival, Prussian arrogance began to make itself felt and Roumanian antipathy towards Prussia was aroused. Before the war the Germans, in spite of the Roumanian dislike for them, were attaining a strong economic hold on the country, which was the largest market in the Balkans for their trade. Most of the oil business was in their hands, and the greater part of the public debt was floated in Germany. But not because the Roumanians preferred it so. Since 1863, when the last Roumanian loan was floated in England, in spite of every effort, Roumania has been unable to raise a penny anywhere else. Roumanian loans, however, were always in British and French money, but they passed through German hands first. The Germans were Roumania's brokers and took advantage of them. Even the financiers of France did not help Roumania. The present Premier of Roumania, Marghiloman, who was Minister of Finance in 1913, after the Second Balkan War, went to Paris to negotiate a loan of 250,000,000 francs. He did not succeed and after some days in Berlin, the German Bank Disconto put at his disposal the money required, provided by French capital! I mention this fact because, whatever kind of peace we may have, if the Allies continue along the same lines, the Germans will again have economic and consequently political influence; and the German political influence means was and disaster again and again. The humiliating conditions of the Treaty of Bucharest imposed by the Germans have left a painful scar in the Roumanian heart.

Wood Cellulose Feed.

Extensive experiments in Sweden have shown that wood cellulose is an excellent cattle feed, and the Swedish Government is pushing its manufacture as much as possible. On account of the difficulties of exportation, Sweden has a supply of about 500,000 tons. The Agricultural Society has requested the Government to fix a maximum price for this feed of 22 crowns per 100 kilos ($5.90 per 220 pounds).

Fruit.

A fruit is the same as a vegetable, considered botanically; popularly a fruit is a vegetable production that may be eaten without cooking; a vegetable is such a production which is cooked before it is eaten.

The female brain begins to decline in weight after the age of thirty; the male not till ten years later.

A Great Work for School Children Carried out in Peel County

"The Miracle of Medical Inspection" is the title of the report on the campaign of medical inspection and follow-up work to insure the protection of the health of the children in the schools and medical treatment for those needing it that was carried out in Peel County, where 77 schools were inspected under direction from the office of the agricultural representative. The preparation andpublication of this report was the last work of the late J W Stark, who died February 1st. the proof was delivered to his sick room the last week of his illness. His last message therefore is a plea for the health of others. In regard to the carrying on of the campaign, Mr Stark in his report, acknowledges the cordial and helpful co-operation of the Women's Institutes Branch of the Department, of local members of the Women's Institute, the school inspector, and of trustees, teachers and parents generally.

Quoting Dr. Mary Mackenzie Smith, who was the doctor in charge of the inspection of the 2,100 children reached in the campaign, the report says: "I found 77 per cent. of the children suffering from decayed teeth and 12 per cent. who had lost the third molar or the tooth they get between the ages of five and seven years. Very few mothers know that this is a permanent tooth," and further, "the examination showed a high per cent. of children whose eyes needed attention, and twenty-three who could only read at 8 inches what they should, see at 15 feet.

Bad conditions in the school buildings was found to be a frequent cause of the ills and defects of the children; poor lighting, too high seats, dusty and dirty floors unsatisfactory heating systems and want of proper ventilation, being among the undesirable features mentioned. "When the doctor who examined the children explained that the bad heating system and the impossibility of getting good ventilation in the schools were responsible for most of the bad throats and poor lungs and that the wrong arrangement of windows was ruining a lot of children's eyes the trustees left their teams standing in the stable right in seediug time and came to the school to discuss with the doctors just what they could, do and as far as it was possible they almost invariably did it," says the report.

A complete survey of the county was made four months after the doctor had finished her work, and it was found that "from the total of twen y-one hundred pupils who were examined. five hundred and fifty-one had been treated and thirty-five of the seventy-seven schools had been improved in various ways to make them healthier places for the boys and girls."

What varieties of Grain are you Growing

(Experimental Farms Note)

This is a question that should not be dodged by any farmer. The conntry is full of varieties about which nothing is known. These varieties have gotten into a district and they find a friend who continues to grow them year after year, occasionally supplying a neighbor with seed. This has occured in almost every locality unless an active propaganda has introduced modern high yielding sorts. The result in most cases is that these various grains have degenerated and the farmer is losing bushels per acre through the use of obsolete varieties.

This condition is a survival of the days when one could find in any seed catalogue, numerous varieties with names suggestive of big yields and lucrative profits. The travelling agent with his high priced grains who appeared annually with old varieties under a new name shares the guilt of the enterprising seedsman.

This multiplicity of varieties, especially of those about which nothing is known, is a serious and unprofitable condition. The remedy is simple. There has just been issued by the Experimental farms a revised list of recommended, varieties for the various provinces of Canada. Only those that have demonstrated their superiori'y for a number of years are recommended, and without a doubt they are imm ensely superior to the archaic sorts now being grown in many localities. If you have not already recieved it, address a letter to the Dominion Cerealist, Experimental Farm, Ottawa, and a copy will be forwarded immediatly. The Dominion Cerealist is also glad to assist any person in procuring of seed of these varieties. Every farmer should, while there is yet time before seeding, consider carefully the sorts of grain that he is now growing, and if in the light of the revised list of recommended varieties, they are weighed in the balance and found wanting, he should take steps immediately to procure fresh seed of standard sorts.

"Pa what is a Socialist?" "A Socialist, my boy, is a man who thinks he ought to have as much as you have." "But supposing he is earning more than you are, dad?" "Then my boy, he ceases to be a Socialist."

Commemorating the Soldier

(Saturday Evening Post.

The soldiers are coming home. You would like to see a lasting memorial of their service to the nation and of the grateful admiration in which you hold them. Many communities will be moved by that worthy spirit. Many communities were so moved after the Civil War. The movement mostly resulted in apopulation of cast-iron effigies of the volunteer leaning on his musket—apparently all factory-made and sold at so much a pound. in Boston Saint-Gaudens designed a soldiers memorial that will be cherished as long as the bronze lasts, because in it a great artist fittingly embodied a great feeling. There are a few others, but mostly the Civil War soldiers are commemorated—with the best of intentions—in a cheap and tasteless and uninspiring way. Looking over the national exhibit a foreigner would conclude that we thought any sort of sculptural junk, just so it had a proper inscription, was good enough for soldiers. Our soldiers ought to have the best—especially when good costs no more than bad. That means some care, some organization, some expert guidance. The several states might well take it up appointing expert commissions with which local communities could consult A fine road, a fine bridge, a fine public building suitably ornamented and inscribed, would make a most fitting memorial—for a village or rural township as well as for a metropolis. The movement, turned in that direction, should be expertly guided by a capable state commission. Especially in the very risky domain of sculpture is expert counsel needed. It would be a great pity if the fine feeling that prompts communities to commemorate soldiers should shoot itself off at random, with results anything but fine artistically. We urge every community to take a little time, seek sound advice, make sure that it is going to get a memorial as good as its intentions.

Good Roads Contract

At the regular meeting of the subcommittiee of the Good Roads Committee of the Council of the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, held in Cornwall tenders were opened in connection with the work proposed to be done on the County Road System during 1919

A deputation consisting of Mayor Fetterly, R. J. Craig and others representing the Cornwall Board of Trade and Cornwall Automobile Club was present and addressed the committee asking that some action be taken regarding the front road East and west of Cornwall.

Mr. G. H. Davy of Iroquois, chairman of the committee promised that the matters complained of would be attended to.

Edgar Irvine, of Hunti igdon, Que., was awarded a contract on the Military Road from Green Valley South to connect with work done last year, a distance of four miles; also on Road 25, North and South of Glen Robertson, four miles.

Frank Quinn, of St. Andrews, a distance of six miles. An appropriation of $12,000 was made for this work.

Stidwill and McLean, of Cornwall, received the contract for repairing roads in and around Chesterville Village: repairiug the road from Cdesterville to Finch and Finch to Crysler: work on the Wales road through Concession 3, 4 and 2, in Osnabruck Township, and the road from Eamers Corners to Williamstown and from Road 17 to Martintown, the latter covering some fourteen miles.

J.V. and James J. Mc Donald, of Williamstown, were given the contract for gravel on the Military Road, Lancaster Village North (one mile) and on the road from Lancaster to Williamstown (two miles.)

Frank Milligan, of Matilda was awarded work on the County Provincial Highway, Morrisburg to Williamsburg (six miles) and from Inkerman North (three miles.)

Work on Roads 1 and 2, Matilda, was not awarded. The Howick Paving Co., of Howick, Que., were the lowest tenderers, and will probably be awarded the contract at a subsequent meetlng of the committee.

The committee decided to start on a tour of inspection of the system, commencing at Iroquois on Monday, April 14th, weather and roads permitting. Mr J, G-Cameron, County Road Superintendent, was instructed to purchase 20 road drags from the Ontario Bridge Co., Ltd., Toronto, for use on the clay roads in these counties.

The committees adjourned to meet on Friday May 9th, at 1pm.

English as its Spoken

Even the children are beginning to talk more jargons. "Look, mother," said a little fellow, pointing to a hole in his stocking. "I've had a blowout." A little girl being asked' how she caught a chicken replied; "I just runned him till his gas gave out an' then I picked him up." A third youngster who was usually slow in obeying his mother's call came quickly enough when she called him to dinner. On her pointing this fact out to him, he said; "Oh I always change to high, when I come to meals."

BALLAD OF IFS AND BUTS.

I might have been a millionaire
And led an autocratic life,
With power and wealth beyond compare.
Had I not married me a wife.
(Also I might be doing time
For leading a career of crime.)

I might have been the president
And over all the land held sway,
Not a suburban resident
Who's got to labor every day.
In politics I might have risen.
(But, then, I might have gone to prison.)

In certain of the sciences
I might have shone had I not wed,
Invented new appliances
Or found microbes that make men dead.
(I'm glad I didn't anyhow.
The world is much too sickly now.)

I might have been a dramatist
Or some such literary guy
Or would be epigrammatist,
Wearing a most outrageous tie.
But matrimony my light hid—
And I am rather glad it did.

Insects and Strangers.

Naturalists for a long time were at a loss to understand how it was that insects were enabled so quickly to recognize an intruder among their family or settlement. It has been determined that in most cases they recognize each other by smell. Among the bees each distinctive class of workers—the guard, the fanner, the pollen carrier, the waxmaker, the architect, etc.—has its own distinctive odor. And besides this each bee has its own separate hive odor, which is its passport into its own particular home.

Special instrumental music was rendered and Miss Jean Beach and Mr. Harry Rae of Chesterville sang solos. Mr. Howard Nesbitt of the Springs made a short but splendid address also Captain Baker, the latter held his audience in breathless silence. The Captain is some orator. Before refreshments were served the chairman Mr. John Bogart made a few remarks and immediately afterward Mr. Norman Moodie read the following address:

Dear friends:—

We are assembled here tonight to pay homage to our friend and neighbour Sapper Warren Rae who nobly answered his country's call and responded when our country was imperiled by the declaration of war on liberty by the most ruthless War Lord ever known, we all know what privations and disappointments our grand laddies have gone through and with what thrills we read the glorious news of peace and the defeat which was inflicted by the armies of the greatest liberty loving people. The history that has been made which will be emulated will be a glorious monument to the efforts of a determined people. who made their own laws and cast their own destines. Our forefathers who fought and died for freedom have handed down to the generations to follow the importance of guarding our national existence and safe-guarding this glorious country. We are impelled by the eagerness shown by the 154th., Infantry to defend its birthright and to protect the sancity of their homes from the intruding menace and the challengar of our liberty, to impress upon them our heartfelt appreciation of their efforts, and we cannot convey our real feeling and desire to our army just how their services are appreciated and with what joy and relief due to their unselfish service to their nation. Your friends Sapper Rae have gathered here to-night to show their appreciation of your services and it is with great pleasure we have the honor to present you a token of gratitude and esteem. May God permit you and your life partner to live and enjoy the fruits of your labor to a long and prosperous life.

Signed on behalf of your Nation Valley friends—Geo. Riddle, Enos Munro.

At the proper moment a purse of gold was presented by Mr. Geo. Riddle. Sapper Rae made a few well fitting remarks and also thanked his old friends for their kindness.

Memorials That Serve Mankind— Theodore Roosevelt's Ideal.

The futility of mausoleums as memorials is not debatable. In the new idealism which is now revivifying the world, places of highest honor will no longer be given to structures whose purpose is beauty or grandeur alone. Indeed, beauty can no longer dwell apart, sufficient in itself; its highest function is fulfilled in the adornment of service to mankind.

No more earnest advocacy of perpetuating a noble life by good deeds has ever been expressed than in the words of the great American whom the whole country has recently sought to honor —Theodore Roosevelt. It is especially impressive at this time to read some extracts from his letter of May 19, 1916, to Dr. H. Holbrook Curtis, Vice-President of the National Institute of Social Sciences, regarding the value of memorials which "take the form of doing good for the living."

My dear Doctor Curtis:

I wish to back you up as strongly as I know how in your effort to build a "memorial hospital for good works" as a protest against the erection of meaningless mausoleums and monuments to the dead. There is an occasional great public servant to whom it is well to raise a monument—really not for the man himself but for what he typified. A monument to Lincoln or Farragut is really a great symbolic statue to commerate such qualities as valor and patriotism and love of mankind, and a willingness to sacrifice everything for the right. There are very few men in a generation who have the character or the widespread reputation which makes a monument to them symbolize all these things. As for the rest of us who, with failures and shortcomings, but according to our lights, have striven to lead decent lives; if any friends of ours wish to commemorate us after death, the way to do it is by some expression of good deeds to those who are still living. Surely a dead man or woman who is a good man or woman would wish to feel that his or her taking away had become an occasion of real service for the betterment of mankind, rather than to feel that a meaningless pile of stone no matter how beautiful, had been erected with his or her name upon it in an enclosure crowded with similar piles of stone—for such a tomb or mausoleum often bears chief reference not to the worth, but to the wealth of the one who is dead. No better form of monument can be imagined than such a hospital as that of which you speak, where the wards, the clinics, the operating rooms, the endowed beds and the like will bear names suggested by the donors.

You and I have known of many cases where good, but by no means especially distinguished, men of great wealth have, when dead, been commerated by mausoleum or tombs costing in some cases half a million dollars. Those that loved them needed no such mausoleum as an aid to memory. To the immense multitude who did not know them the mausoleum meant absolutely nothing, and could mean absolutely nothing. To the many suffering souls whom the money could have helped if it had been wisely and beneficiently used, the mausoleum represented a loss exactly as great as if it was sunk in the ocean.

The Society of Friends use only plain stone slabs to commemorate the dead. Surely this is a good custom. Surely it is not well that there should be after death great monuments erected by the family of the dead, testifying really not to the good deeds, but the wealth of the dead. Surely if the dead man or woman is of such a character as to warrant a memorial, then that most grateful to his or her spirit will take the form of doing good to the living whose need is urgent.

Faithfully yours, (Signed) Theodore Roosevelt.

Cultural Methods For Eastern Canada.

(Experimental Farms Note)

On the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa and several of the branch Experimental Farms in Eastern Canada an exhaustive study of methods of cultivation has been conducted for the purpose of improving soil condition and thereby increasing crop yields. The results obtained warrant the accompaning recommendations and explanations being made which are applicable to average conditions on Eastern Canada farms.

Underdrainage is without doubt a most important factor and is indispensible where the rainfall is great and soil conditions warrant. The carrying away of surplus water allows the entrance of air tnto the soil which aids in raising the temperature. On the whole underdrainage improves the mechanical condition of the soil; assists in the liberation of plant food elements and facilitates the working of the soil.

Ploughing is the basic cultural operation and for this reason should be performed with the utmost care and judgment. Poor ploughing, including unevenness in depth and width of score, imperfect backs and finishes, cannot be rectified by seeding operations of discing and harrowing no matter how efficient the implements available. No clear rule can be laid down defining the best methods of ploughing. A safe rule is to plow only when the soil is in shape, not too wet, especially if of a heavy clay nature. Plough deeply in autumn, as deeply as the surface productive soil will allow, turning an up-standing furrow. Plough shallow in spring, turning a low-lying or flat furrow. Plough well, turn all the land and finish with straight, even furrows and lands. Last season, in some localities, fall-ploughing was not completed. Very thorough treatment is necessary to insure a crop of grain on spring ploughing. The following general treatment is suggested.

Plough shallow, four to five inches, when the soil, especially of a clay type is in condition, not too wet nor too dry. Disc harrow within a day after plowing. Disc often enough to establish the connection between surface and subsurface soils necessary for the unchecked passage of soil water to the seed-bed. Roll and drag harrow to pulverize the soil. Ploughing may be speeded up by using two-furrow ploughs. Spend the time saved in extra seed-bed preparation.

Harrowing or seed-bed preparation may be preformed most economically by means of the disc-harrow. Thorough cultivation at this time is indispensable and should be continued until the seed-bed is level, uniformly deep and loose

The drag or spike-tooth harrow, too, may be employed advantageously in seed-bed preparation especially following the disc or roller to restore a mulch, or blanket, of loose soil, a couple of inches deep, to check evaporation of moisture. A light or slant-tooth harrow of this type is also useful in the cornfield a few days after sowing and after the corn is up to stimulate a rise in temperature in the soil, to destroy small weeds and encourage germination of weed seeds and to restore the essential mulch.

Seeding.—This operation is now satisfactorily done by means of seed drill. Several types are on the market but the single disc drill is probably most popular. Do this work carefully and accurately. Misses between drill widths are wasteful, unsightly and furnishing breeding places for weeds; excessive variations in rates of seeding from too light to too thick, may result in heavy losses in yields.

Rolling.—The roller is too frequently used to put a finishing touch to the fields after seeding. It may be so used to advantage on light soils but even then should be followed by the drag harrow to break the quickly crusted surface. The chief use of the roller should be to firm and crumble the soil before seeding. It should not be used on very damp soil, especially clay; let the surface dry first, then use the roller to break the crust.

A good seed-bed may be defined as one mellow, uniformly level, fairly loose and fine at the surface but firm below, and well supplied with plant food suitable for the crop to be grown. To get such a seed bed means thoroughness and judgment in carrying out each step in its preparation.

"These $6 shoes suit me all right," said the young man who had enough in to feel a bit gay. "I'll take two pairs, size No. 9."

When they were wrapped up the young man tendered three $2 bills.

"Say, you're a poker player, aren't you. Well, three of a kind beat two pair."

"Yes, but they don't beat four nines," said the salesman. "Twelve dollars, please."—(San Francisco Chronicle.)

Co-Operative Experiments In Weed Eradication.

This experimental work was commenced in 1912 and has been conducted now for seven successive years. The object of this work is to have carried on by men on their own farms experiments in the eradication of weeds, the results of which will furnish data from which definite information may be obtained regarding the best methods of controlling the various troublesome weeds of the province. Before the results of these experiments began to accumulate there was very little or no definite knowledge concerning the eradication of weeds.

The weeds experimented with are Perennial Sow Thistle, Twitch Grass, Bladder Campion or Cow Bell, Wild Mustard, Ox-eye Daisy, Field Bindweed or Wild Oats and Chess.

Each spring leaflets are sent out to numerous farmers of the Province inviting all who have any of these troublesome weeds on their farms to co-operate with us in this work and try the experiment outlined for the particular weed which is giving them trouble. Application forms for the experiments accompany the leaflets. To those who fill in these and return them detailed directions for the carrying out of the experiment selected are sent and in the fall they are supplied with blank forms on which to report the results of their work.

In the past seven years (1912-18) over sixty farmers have co-operated in this work and some valuable information has been obtained. It may be briefly summarized as follows:—

1. That good cultivation followed by rape sown in drills provides a means of eradicating both Perennial Sow Thistle and Twitch Grass

2. That rape is a more satisfsctory crop to use in the destruction of Twitch Grass than Buckwheat.

3. That thorough, deep cultivation in the fall and spring, followed by a well cared for hoed crop, will destroy Bladder Campion.

4. That Mustard may be prevented from seeding in oats, wheat and barley by spraying with a 20% solution of iron sulphate without serious injury to the standing crop or to fresh seedings of clover.

The following are the experiments outlined for this year.

1. The use of rape in the destruction of Perennial Sow Thistle

2. A system of intensive cropping and cultivation, using winter rye followed by turnips, rape or buckwheat, for eradicating Perennial Sow Thistle.

3. The use of rape in the destruction of Twitch Grass.

4. A method of cultivation for the destruction of Twitch Grass.

5. Method of cultivation for the eradication of Bladder Campion or Cow Bell.

6. Spraying with iron sulphate to destroy Mustard in cereal crops.

7. A method of cultivation for the destruction of Ox-eye Daisy.

8. A method of cultivation and cropping for the suppression of Field Bindweed or Wild Morning Glory (requires two years to complete).

9. A method of cultivation and cropping for the eraducation of Wild Oats (requires two years to complete).

10. A method of cultivation for the destruction of Chess.

All who have any of these weeds on their farm are invited to join with us in this work. By so doing they should be able to clean the field of the weed experimented with and demonstrate to their own satisfication the effectiveness of the method tried and at the same time their results will be of great value to others. Full information can be obtained concerning these experiments by writing to the Director Co-operative Weed Experiments, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

War Savings and Thrift Stamps Beat the Money Box

The childrens' money box on the mantel shelf has, in the past, done good work, having gathered in tens of thousands of dollars, which, had it not been there, would never have been saved. To many generations it has been one of the best possible object lessons of the value of saving of thrift better than almost any teacher could have done.

But the money box, though it has rendered splendid service, has its limitations. All that it does is to take care of the pennies, the dimes, or 25 cent pieces, preventing them for a time being squandered. But, in comparison with later saving devices, its chief defect is that while it holds money, it does not enable the money to earn anything.

This is where War Savings Stamps have a decided advantage over the money box. As soon as $4 is put into one of these it begins to earn at the rate of 4½ per cent compounded half-yearly. This means that if allowed to remain in Stamps, it would double itself within less than 15 years. Money put into a box and allowed to remain there would earn nothing. The moral is— buy War Savings and Thrift Stamps and let your savings work.

Boosting His Business

The vicar's appeal had been a most eloquent one, and had even penetrated the depths of Mr. Blackleigh's granite organ. The latter came forward and offered $50 for the fund. The worthy cleric was overjoyed.

"I don't know your namesir," he cried; "but I thank you from the bottom of my heart. I thank you! May your business prosper sir!"

Then there was a solemn hush, and the committee looked askance at their vicar

What's the matter?" whispered the clergyman, turning to the chairman.

"Well—er—that donor is an undertaker!"

Illict Stills

Perth Expositor—Since the first of the present year officers in Perth Division of the Inland Revenue have made twenty three seizures of plants where illict whisky was being made. The great majority of these did not contain a still, but merely a mixture of grains, raisins, etc., with some means of fermentation introduced. The liquor as a result of this process, is vile stuff, but the manufacturers found a ready sale for it. In a few cases perfect miniature stills were in operation, and of course the brand of whisky turned out was much better than that where the "mash" or "wort" only was used. All the seizures made in Perth Division were in the northern part of the province in the wilds around Sudbury, North Bay and New Liskeard. Heavy fines, ranging from $100 and costs to $300 and costs, were imposed, and in nearly every case the offenders paid, only a few going to jail. Many really funny incidents are being brought to light by reason of the insatiable desire on the part of those fond of a little drink, to get next to the stimulent. About the most amusing we have yet heard was a stunt pulled off in this locality within the past few days. Some get-rich-quick Wallingfords secured a number of "Rye" and "Scotch" whisky bottles, and filling them with sap, set forth to introduce their wares. They always made it a point to get in some backyard or stable to dispose of their refreshments in a stealthy manner, and by their tactics caught a number of thirsty individuals. The "rye" was sold at $2.00 per bottle and the "Scotch" at $3.00. A citizen, not an English speaking one, was among those who bit, and he took it as a good joke. Here is about his conversation to a confiding chap: "Say, I got one put over me last night". "How's that?" "Say, what you call sap or something lak dat?" The explanation was made and then he told his yarn. He was given the prices and, as he says, "for dollar I tak de Scotch, sure ting, but—, I tak drink and it sure be sap. Three dollar for one small bottle of sap! What you tink tat, eh?" The boys did a thriving business for a few hours, and the beauty of the deal is that the bitten dare not squeel.

Girl or Game

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

It had got to the point where Steve Mason had to know where he stood—on the deck of a sinking submarine ship or on a flying field preparing to soar among the clouds in a winged machine.

If Hazel Norrin said "yes" then it would be aviation; if she replied negatively that meant the plunge. All this about soaring and plunging, you must understand, had to do with Steve's mental state. The war had not yet stretched its steel-scaled arm to America, and Steve was considering neither aero journeys nor ocean voyages, literally speaking. He was still in Clifton college, a senior, and his favorite form of combat was baseball.

After being with Hazel once on the occasion of a theater party early in his senior year his admiration for her increased to a friendship which became so warm as the time for graudation approached that it finally ceased to be friendship, as far as his feelings were concerned.

Steve reached the "point" mentioned in the first paragraph at the same time his hand found the point of a picket in the fence inclosing the garden of her home. He had met Hazel late that afternoon by an accident, ostensibly. She was not supposed to know that he had lingered a full half-hour near the millinery store where she worked, waiting for her to appear so he could walk nonchalantly toward her and be surprised to meet her.

Steve had no real reason for believing that she cared for him. He was aware that some six or eight students were reported to have proposed to her and been rejected during the last three years, but he was willing to take a chance on being the seventh or the ninth, or even the thirteenth.

Steve knew that his red head and freckles didn't jibe with her creamy complexion and black hair, but he was not to blame for the contrast.

He picked a splinter from the fence, realized he was more nervous than he had been at any time since his initiation into Tau Beta Chi, floundered desperately for words, then got a grip on himself and let it out with:

"Hazel, I'm not going to beat about the bush. I'm not capable of pouring out sentimental gush and crawling on my knees, but I want to marry you, and I hope this is not 'so sudden' that you can't decide my fate here and now."

She laughed lightly and placed her hand over his as it rested on the fence and replied:

"I'm glad you're not capable of 'sentimental gush,' because I'm rather tired of it myself. I like the way you go about this, without moons or babbling brooks and I'll admit I care a lot for you, but I can't answer now. First I must have proof that you are the kind of fellow I would marry and that you really care as much as you say. But I am not saying 'no'—just remember that."

The next day he received a letter from her. It read:

"Dear Steve—Remembering what you told me yesterday I am giving you a chance to prove your affection. Tomorrow Clifton meets Alton for the state college baseball championship. My cousin, Will Forbes, will pitch for Alton, and in a letter I just received he told me that it means everything for him to win the game, as he expects to try for a professional league.

"Here's your chance to prove that you love me. If the opportunity offers to miss a ball or strike out at a critical point of the game and you can help Alton to win you surely can prove beyond doubt that you care as you say you do."

The letter stunned poor Steve, with his heart eating itself out for Hazel and the rest of him all wrapped up in the national game. Steve would rather play baseball than anything else in the world except have Hazel for a wife. Then, too, his love for his alma mater was strong, and his regard for honor and fair play was stronger.

"How can she ask such a thing?" he groaned aloud as he sank back in the only rocking chair his apartment of the rooming house afforded. He longed for his pipe, but he was in training.

"I can't do it," he repeated over and over. "It wouldn't be honorable or square; and I simply can't bring myself to it. But Hazel—I can't give her up. She means too much to me even if she does ask impossible—almost impossible—things."

The day of the game turned out bright and clear in spite of Steve's wish that a deluge might visit the diamond. He saw her in the grand stand as he jogged out to center field for practice, and tipped his cap in answer to her jaunty wave of the hand.

The contest started with prospects of a close struggle. Each side scored a run in the second inning, and Alton pushed another across in the fourth. Clifton evening it up in the fifth. Thus the score stood a tie at the opening of the eighth.

The first Alton man to bat was retired on a pop fly to third.

But his successor hit a clean Texas Leaguer which landed him on second. He achieved third on a sacrifice grounder, knocked between second and first by the next man at the plate.

Two men were out and another on third. The Alton catcher advanced to the batter's box, and after two strikes and two balls hit one back of third which the Clifton left fielder came up on, but not fast enough to take it from the air. He picked it up on the bound and by a quick throw to the plate forced the Alton base runner to stay on third; but while this play was being enacted the Alton catcher reached second.

The Alton pitcher was next to bat. Here was a chance for him to win his own game, and the set of his jaw showed he was determined to do it. Steve, out in center, watched him anxiously as he swung and missed the first ball.

"Hope he doesn't send it out this way," Steve muttered, his mind still troubled by Hazel's request. His wish, however, bore no fruit, for the Alton pitcher knocked the ball high in the air toward center.

Steve, gauging correctly, saw that he would not have to move more than a few paces from his tracks to catch the ball. He braced himself and watched the sphere descend. It seemed as if it would never get to him. He held out his hands, cupped for the catch. Some of his teammates, displaying a supreme confidence in him, already had left their positions and were on the way to the bench.

"He's got it!" roared an enthusiast on the bleachers. "That boy never misses 'em!"

The ball struck Steve's glove, and at the same instant he seemed to see Hazel's face rise before him. The sphere bounded from his hands, and, while he chased it frantically, two Alton baserunners scored. Steve recovered the ball and threw it to second in time to stop the Alton pitcher, but the tie was broken, with the score 4 to 2 in favor of the enemy. The next batter struck out, and it was Clifton's turn at the bat.

The last half of the ninth opened with the tallies unchanged. The Clifton captain went among his players pleading with them to "do something for the old school." And they responded. The first man up knocked a sizzling grounder past second and got to the initial base. The one who followed duplicated the feat, back of first, and succeeded in acquiring possession of that sack, while his predecessor landed safely on second.

The next man hit one nearly to the left field fence, and the Alton man holding down that position scurried back and nailed it; but each of the base runners moved up a notch after the catch. Clifton's prospects were good, but her stock declined somewhat when the following batter fouled out.

Steve came to bat. With two men on bases, two out and two scores needed to tie, a more critical period of the game would have been imagined with difficulty. His face was pale, he clutched his bat nervously, his lips trembled. He did not even glance at the grandstand, but simply waited for the pitcher—Hazel's cousin and the man whose skyscraper he had missed—to throw the sphere.

* * * * * * *

As Steve was about to enter an automobile after the game he heard his name called and saw Hazel coming toward him. She drew him to one side and he motioned for the car to leave him.

She opened her mouth to speak, but he got ahead of her with:

"Miss Norrin, I wish you to understand that I got your letter all right, but I also want you to know that I didn't miss that ball on purpose in the eighth. I love you, just as I said, but I couldn't betray my teammates and my school in such a dishonorable manner."

Her eyes glistened unnaturally, and one big tear started down each cheek. There was a remarkable softness in her voice when she said:

"I knew you didn't try to throw the game, Steve. I wouldn't have had you do it for the world. I said you would have to prove that you were the kind of fellow I would marry, and I hope you didn't think I could have a traitor for a husband. If you had thrown the game I would never have spoken to you again. I was almost afraid, I must confess, that you had yielded when you missed that fly, but when you—you knocked that home run in the ninth and redeemed yourself and won the game for Clifton, I just cried—for joy—as I am crying now."

Points in Cooking Cereals.

There are several practical points to remember in cooking cereals. One is that there is more danger of not cooking them enough than of cooking them too much. Uncooked cereal preparations, like cracked wheat and coarse samp, need several hours' cooking, and are often improved by being left on the back of the stove or in the fireless cooker overnight. Cereals partially cooked at the factory, such as the rolled or fine granular preparations, should be cooked fully as long as the directions on the package suggest.

Flavoring is also an important part of cooking cereals. The flavor most commonly added is salt. Such added flavor is perhaps less necessary in some of the ready-to-eat kinds which have been browned at the factory and have thus gained the pleasant flavor which also appears in the crust of bread and cake or in toast, but in the plain boiled cereals or mushes the careful use of salt in cooking them may make all the difference between an appetizing and an unpalatable dish. A good general rule is one level teaspoonful of salt to each quart of water used in cooking the cereal.

Interest in the welcoming back of some of our boys seems to be on the increase instead of on the wane for the hall was filled to its utmost capacity forthe reception last Friday night and quite a number of persons were present who were at none of the previous receptions. This one was planned for Gnrs. G. D. Hunter, and S. Shaver, Ptes. H. Popplewell, and E. Dillabough and Lance Cpl. O. Collins, and it gave general surprise and pleasure when sister N. Glasgow, arrived in time to participate in it also. After a program, which included speeches by the local clergy, and Rev. J. B. Hicks, B. A. of Chesterville, and the presentation of the usual signet rings, we were favored by short speeches by the recipients. Gnr S. M. Shaver told of the friendly treatment received from the Germans by the Army of occupation east of the Rhine, while Sister Glasgow praised the British Tommy and Gnr. Hunter dwelt chiefly on the pleasure of being home, and made a comparison between London and Morewood very favorable to the latter place.
