Henry's Shorthand School
Ottawa, Ont.

On the May Civil Service Examination, this year, we passed more stenographic candidates than the other local business colleges combined.

It is a common occurrence for Henry-trained students to get 100% in Shorthand 100% in Typewriting, and 95% in Composition.

These subjects being the most difficult on this examination, our record of FIRST, SECOND and FOURTH places for the whole of Canada, is at once explained.

During the past two years, more than 235 students have come to us from other local business colleges.

Does it not prove that we have a superior school ?

Our instruction being individual, you may start at any time.

Drainage Case Adjourned.

Judge Liddell held court in the Town Hall Tuesday afternoon, hearing the appeal of a number of those interested, against the award in the Servage Drainage case. The day was mostly taken up in examination of the engineers over the plans and specifications for the work. F. M. Eagleson of Winchester, made the original calculations of the work to be done and which are taken exception to, and the appelants engaged Wm. Moore of Smith's Falls to go over the work for them, the results of which produced figures so much at variance to Eagleson's figures, that the Judge adjourned the hearing and will appoint an independent engineer to go over the work and to submit figures which will be used to come to a decision in the case. In the meantime court is adjourned sine die.

The Late Martha McMillan.

It is our sad duty to chronicle the passing of Miss Martha McMillan, only surviving daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McMillan of Elma, who passed peacefully away on Friday evening, Nov. 5th. Almost the whole of Miss McMillan's life had been spent in Brockville, where she formed hosts of warm friends in both social and business relations. "To know her was to love her," and her stirling character and sympathetic nature called for the highest appreciation from everyone. The deceased had been a very patient sufferer for the past ten months since undergoing a serious operation in the General Hospital at Montreal, but she was fighting valiantly under odds, which were too great and death came rather suddenly but not unexpectedly to end the struggle. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. T. B. McCorkindale, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Chesterville, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Keough, of the Methodist Church, Elma. Comforting and spiritual thoughts were spoken by the pastor on the subject "The Heavenly Home." Clothing the grim idea of death with rest and attractiveness, the hymns used by the Dunbar Presbyterion Church choir were "Asleep in Jesus" and "Blessed Assurance," with two appropriate anthems. The floral attributes were most beautiful, among which were emblems from Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Sipes of Ottawa, Mrs. Cornwall of Rockport, Mr. Larrimer of Brockville, Mrs. Jephcott and Mr. and Mrs. Sproule of Montreal, in addition to those from her parents, brothers, and other immediate friends. A very large concourse of friends followed the funeral cortege to the Elma cemetery where the body was interred in a concrete lined family vault. The bearers were six cousins, viz: Messrs. William of Goldfield, Ezra of Elma and Hosea McMillan of Finch, Andrew Hyndman of Kemptville, James Hyndman of Merrickville, and Andrew Sipes of Mountain. The remaining members of the family are her father and mother, her brother Alex., who has been in the West, and Arthur on the homestead. These will miss sadly a daughter and sister most devoted, her whole life of fifty-eight years being noted for its unselfishness and loving care and sympathy for others, but "To live in the hearts of those who love us is not to die."

Estimate on Electric Ry.

Ald. Pinard of Ottawa will move at the next city council meeting that the city request the hydro-electric power commission to investigate and report upon the cost of constructing and operating an electric railway in Ottawa and from Ottawa to Morrisburg, providing an estimate of the revenue to be derived, the practicability of the undertaking and its economic value to the ratepayers.

High School Commencement Concert.

On Friday evening last a good crowd assembled in the Music Hall to listen to the programme provided by the Commencement Committee of the High School. The hall was tastefully decorated with flowers, flags and bunting, in the colors of the school, orange and black. The students were present in goodly numbers and enlivened the proceedings with their songs and yells.

A piano solo by Mrs. Howard, a violin selection by Miss Marion Casselman, a vocal solo by Mr. Thos. Carpenter, and two choruses by a number of the students, formed the musical part of the programme. Miss Ethel Bogart contributed in excellent style, a reading which was heartily encored, and Mr. James Clement, a former student kept the audience in roars of laughter by his valedictory speech, which was crammed from beginning to end with witticisms at the expense of his former fellow students. Mr. McCloskey occupied the chair, and in his address briefly reviewed the progress of the school since its opening in 1911. The prizes and championship medal won on the athletic field day, Sept. 24th, were presented by Reeve Hamilton, Mr. O. D. Casselman and the chairman.

The feature of the evening was the address of Prof. St. Elme de Champ of Toronto University, on "France at War." Although speaking in a language foreign to himself, the professor showed himself a master of his subject, and his remarks were highly instructive. He reviewed the activities in France on the declaration of war, Aug. 2, 1914, and showed how the French people eagerly seized the opportunity to be avenged for their defeat of 1870. The places of the men in labor and industrial occupations were taken by the women, and thus every man physically fit was free for military service, with the exceptions of those employed making munitions of war. The professor's ardent love for his native land shone forth in every sentence of his address, and it made Canadians feel almost ashamed that they have done so little.

The program closed with the singing of the National Anthem and afterwards the young people enjoyed themselves in the orthodox way for a time.

The committee wish to thank all those who so kindly helped to make the evening a success, as well as those who lent material for the decorations. Special credit is due to Miss Humphries for overseeing the decorations, and Miss Clement for training the students in the choruses so excellently rendered.

Thompson—Ulman.

A very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at Finch, on Wednesday, Nov. 10th, 1915, at 3 o'clock, when Miss Lillian Aggie, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Ulman of Crysler was united in holy wedlock to Mr. Campbell Thompson of Russell, the nuptial knot being tied by the Rev. D. Stewart. The bride looked winsome and handsome in her exquisite gown of ivory messaline satin, with an overskirt of silk chiffon and edged with military braid, her long tulle veil was arranged in cap effect and caught with a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of Irish roses and maiden hair fern. The bride was unattended and well worthy of the name bride. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of white fox furs, and the bride's gift to the groom was a pearl tie pin. The bride travelled in a Belgium blue silk chiffon velvet, tailored in military effect, and hat to match with white ostrich band. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson left on the six o'clock train for Toronto and Niagara. On their return they will reside in Felton, where a host of friends join in wishing them a long, prosperous and happy wedded life.

The Late G. S. Hanes.

(Iroquois News)

After a prolonged illness from cancer of the lower lip and throat, during which he was a great sufferer, our old friend and neighbour, G. S. Hanes, passed away in his 83rd year. Death indeed came as a relief to the sufferer and to his friends who felt keenly for him and their helplessness to afford relief.

"Squire" Hanes, as he was popularly known, was a son of Jacob and Hannah Hanes and was born in Osnabruck township in 1832. In 1869 he married Miss Charlotte Ellison, to whom were born one son and one daughter, Carmi Hanes and Mrs. W. M. Warren, of Toronto. also two brothers and two sisters, Adam Hanes of Hainsville, Wm. Hanes, of Dunbar, and Mrs. McIntosh and Miss Mary Hanes of Hainsville, survive.

In politics Mr. Hanes was a Liberal, and in religion a Prebyterian. For the past 30 years he has been a resident of Iroquois and for a number of years was local Police Magistrate, earning for him the popular sobriquet of "Squire" Hanes, whose activity in keeping peace and order in this corner of His Mayesty's realm gave him quite a prominence. In his early days he took a deep interest in Temperance work in connection with the Sons of Temperance and latter y the Good Templars. Naturally sympathetic and warm-hearted he won many friends.

Mrs. Hanes predeceased him about two monthes ago, thus passing away together just as they had lived happily together for nearly half a century. The funeral obsequies were conducted on Thursday forenoon, Nov. 4th, Rev. Mr. MacArthur preaching words of comfort and consolation to the bereaved family, from the words found in 2 Cor. 5.1. Interment was made in the Presbyterian cemetery, the casket being borne by the same six nephews of deceased who served in a similar capacity at Mrs. Hanes' funeral.

The Week With the Ganadians.

Ottawa, November 14.—General Sir Sam Hughes received the following communique from the Canadian general representative in France.

Canadian General Headquarters in France, November 14.—During the week November 5 to 12, the general situation on the Canadian front has remained unchanged. Rain fell in heavy showers at fairly frequent intervals, and at times fog prevailed, but on the whole the weather conditions showed a slight improvement over last week.

Our working parties have been busily employed throughout the area on repair work and the improvement of our drainage systems. The enemy has been actively engaged repairing his trenches and there has been every indication that his trenches were severely damaged as a result of the recent heavy rains. Continuous sounds of pumping and baling have been heard from his lines, and during the daytime his working parties have offered more than usually frequent targets for our artillery.

As the result of the employment by the enemy of large numbers of men on repair work there has been little machine-gun and rifle firing from the German trenches and only occasionally have German snipers displayed their customary activity.

The enemy artillery has displayed a tendency to bombard certain sections of our front line more heavily than usual, and to concentrate a considerable fire on some of the farm buildings within our area. Very little damage has been done. In every case our artillery has taken advantage of it's superior weight and retaliated with a heavy fire which has effectively silenced the German batteries.

On various occasions during the period an organized bombarment of sections of the enemy trenches and defence works has been carried out by our artillery and several of the German fortified places have been destroyed.

Our patrols and snipers continue to maintain their general ascendency over the enemy. On several occasions officers' patrols have penetrated the German wire entanglement and secured valuable information as to the condition of the German partrols have been found.

The training of our troops is progressing well and continues to receive every attention. A large proportion of the personnel of our infantry units has taken a grenade course in one or other of our schools.

In spite of the wet weather, the health of our troops continue good and all ranks remain in excellent spirits.

Canada's Live Stock Industry

In competing for the markets of the world there is no branch of industry that exceeds in importance that of live stock feeding and raising. Paraphrasing the old Jingo cry, we have the land, we have the will and we have the climate. What is needed is the means and ever more means, and simultaneously the ways of marketing. However divergent in views and theories people may be, it cannot be denied that they are united in a common effort to improve both agricultural and industrial conditions. In helping the one the other is being aided. The interests are being inextricably involved. If either is especially prosperous both ultimately must be, although one may feel the benefits of extra demand and high prices before the other.

In the past few years especially all the provincial governments as well as the Federal government have bent much of their energies toward the improvement and extension of agriculture. While a deal of scientific effort has been devoted to the cultivation of the land and improvement of productions of the soil, sight has not been lost of the needs and necessities of that other branch of inestimable worth—live stock, meaning thereby horses, cattle, sheep and swine. In the latter direction pure-bred animals have recently been placed in various districts where their services were previously difficult to obtain, the registrati n of pedigrees has been nationalized, systematized and subsidized, grants towards greatly liberalizing the premiums at exhibitions have been made, a special branch has been established in connection with the experimental farm system at Ottawa to investigate the cause of disease, to give counsel to breeders and to control outbreaks of infectious or contagious ailments, judges and lecturers have been appointed free of cost, cold storage facilities have been arranged and refrigerator cars equipped and paid for, grants have been made under the tremendously beneficial Agricultural Instruction Act with its ten million dollar attachment, for the encouragement of veterinary education and research and everything possible has been done for the development and increase of co-operation.

Important and valuable as are and have been the efforts above enumerated in the interests of live stock breeding the devotion of the Federal department and the Provincial departmen:s has been by no means limited to them. In fact as far as present human ken can travel little has been left undone. But one of the greatest lines of endeavor has yet to be mentioned, namely the improvement of marketing and transportation facilities. While this object has never been lost sight of, constant attention having been bestowed upon it in various ways, it remained for the present Dominion Minister of Agriculture to take the matter boldly into his own hands and, with the assistance of a capable staff, to advise a policy calculated to lead to definite, distinct and permanent advancement. Without inquiry nothing can be methodically and satisfactorily accomplished. With this principle in view a marketing commission was appointed, the duties of which were to ascertain advantageous points of sale and to effect and bring about the most convenient and economical arrangements for disposal, shipment and carriage to destination. It was in following this policy negotiations were carried on for the purchase by the British government of six and a half million pounds of meat canned in Canada.

Owing to high freight rates, disturbances in shipping and scarcity of boats, unwonted difficulties have recently been experienced in exportation and even in handling across the continent. It is towards remedying these and placing matters in a much better light and on a greatly improved footing that the commission has been cr a ed. In many ways there is evidence that this is being accomplished, although undoubtedly there are obstacles to overcome that will be continually cropping up. Nor is the appointment of the aforementioned marketing commission the only step that is being taken for the advancement of the live stock and agricultural interests, but a commission of influential, widely known and experienced business men has been appointed to go into the whole subject and to report upon the most advisable measures to be taken for the advancement of farming, breeding and raising, shipment and selling and financing, and and for the aggregate prosperity of the country.

Seasonable Hints No. 3

The real test of the farmer is, perhaps, in his ability to make the most profitable use of the various products of his farm and his foresight in getting ready in every way practicable between harvest and seed time for the productive operations of the next season". Thus states Mr. J. H. Grisdale, Director, Dominion Experimental Farms, in presenting Seasonable Hints, No. 3, for November, December, January and February, to the farming public of Canada. A careful perusal of its sixteen pages will amply reward the stockman, the agriculturist, the horticulturist, the poultryman, the tobacco grower and those especially interested in bees. A feature of this third issue is the advice under the caption "Shelter the Implements". The enormity of the vast sum of money spent annually on farm machinery is impossibie of realization. To equip an average farm with machinery costs $1,000. which under ordinary conditions of treatment will not do good work for more than five years. To counteract this waste, for unsheltered implements means waste, shelters should be built. A working plan of a shed 25 by 47 feet outside measurements is given, with directions necessary for its construction. A carerul study of this plan, which as stated, is capable of many modifications, will be helpful to those intending to build. To those therefore, who would have a compendium of information, which outlines many necessary fall and winter duties pertaining to agriculture in all its phases, Seasonable Hints No. 3, is available on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

ALBERT WAS PLEASED.

Verses in His Honor Elicited Letter of Appreciation.

Signal recognition has come to Dr. Thomas O'Hagan of Paisley, Ontario, in the form of a letter from the secretary of the King of Belgium, expressing appreciation of some verses written by him entitled, "Take Off My Hat to Albert." The verses were originally read at a meeting of the Women's Press Club in Toronto, and a member suggested that an illuminated and engraved copy be sent to Belgium's heroic King. This was done through the medium of the Belgian Consul-General at Ottawa. The verses and the acknowledgment follow:

I Take Off My Hat to Albert.

Albert, King of Belgium, is the hero of the hour;
He's the greatest King in Europe,
he's a royal arch and tower;
He is bigger in the trenches than the Kaiser on his throne,
And the whole world loves him for the sorrows he has known:
So I take off my hat to Albert!

Defiance was his answer to the Teuton at his gate,
Then he buckled on his armor and pledged his soul to fate;
He stood between his people and the biggest Essen gun,
For he feared not shot nor shrapnel
as his little army won:
So I take off my hat to Albert!

King of Belgium, Duke of Brabant,
Count of Flanders, all in one;
Little Kingdom of the Belgae star'd with honor in the sun.
You have won a place in history, of your deeds the world will sing,
But the glory of your nation is your dust-stained, fearless King:
So I take off my hat to Albert!

Here is the translation from King Albert's acknowledgment, which was in French:

"Office of the Secretary to the King and Queen of Belgium.
"La Panne, Aug. 11, 1915.

"Sir, — The touchingly delicate words you have found to express to the King your friendly feelings have very much moved his Majesty. The Sovereign whose attention has been drawn by the beautiful illumination adorning the verses composed in his honor, commands me to thank you sincerely and to say that he will be glad to keep this valuable souvenir.

"I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

"J. INGENBLEEK,
"The Secretary."

JUST WHAT WENT ON!

"The Fatherland" Describes the Honors of War Time in Canada.

Under the heading 'Our Barkrupt Lady of the Snows" there appears in the most recent issue of the Fatherland a fantastic, fever-prompted story of conditions in Canada. The Fatherland is a journal published in English in the United States, bitterly pro-German and financed, it is said, by the German Government. It is claimed that it was the mouthpiece of Dr. Bernhard Dernburg. Articles frequently appear from the pen of Albert Kaltschimdt, so well known in Canada on account of his part in the recent dynamiting outrages. The story is so humorous that a censor gave his consent to the publication of extracts.

"This is a story telling how the cruel British satraps of Canada have brought ruin and misery upon a once fair land. With tempting bonuses and honeyed words, they lured simple and honest men from distant lands (Germany and Austria) to hew their woods and till their soil," says the writer in opening his article. The satraps, who he mentions later, are Sir Robert Borden, Sir Samuel Hughes, and Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. The story goes on to say they received an order from Borden to intern all aliens.

"The servile satrap paled at these instructions, but obeyed them. He sat aside and stayed his hand. In all Canadian towns and countrysides, from British Columbia to Quebec, the Canuck ran riot and typified himself with brutal Cossack deeds. He burned houses, plundered shops, and stoned unoffending men, women, and children in city streets and on country roads. No one deterred him. German, Austrian, and Hungarian men and women were dragged from their homes and slaughtered in the open. Native-born sons who defended foreign-born parents were slain—the daughters were brutalized by the mob.

"Then these fathers who survived were dragged to desolate detention camps, old sheds, open to winter winds and rains, flung into factory ovens, starved, and left unclad. The mortality among them wes frightful. The permanent illness was worse. One-third of these men cannot work again, and they have been lured into this country, remember, by the soft persuasions of the men who had done them these wrongs. And their wives and children in rags to-day still roam the streets and byways of Canadian cities, butts of the mocking mob, begging in vain for food and shelter.

"After the mob and massacre in Canada the Canuck stopped, breathless and terrified by his own work. Factories had been ruined, farms burned down, and unemployment began to raise his grisly head. The blow was beginning to recoil upon the mob. The shadow is now dark indeed.

A THRILLING MINISTRY.

Bishop Stringer of the Yukon Has Had an Adventurous Career.

One of the outstanding figures at the recent Anglican Synod meeting in Toronto was certainly Dr. Isaac Stringer, Bishop of the Yukon. He happened, by the way, to be staying with the Archbishop of Canterbury when the present King dined, within the last year or two, at Lambeth Palace—the occasion being the first, since Queen Elizabeth's reign, when the Sovereign has dined in that historic home of the English Primates. And the King expressed a special desire to meet Dr. Stringer.

The adventurous career of Dr. Stringer, who was born at Kincardine, Ont., and who is a graduate of Wycliffe College, would take many volumes to tell fully. He turned to missionary work when Bishop Reeve, then Bishop of Mackenzie River, came to Wycliffe College and told of the Esquimaux, and how untouched they were by light, how cruel, and how degraded. Bishop Reeve asked the students of Wycliffe if any of them would go to the most desolate place on earth, and Stringer and T. J. Marsh volunteered. Stringer went to Herschel Island, and labored there nearly twenty years. When he left there, with his eyesight impaired, to work with Bishop Bompas in the Yukon, he was succeeded by the Rev. C. E. Whittaker. And now, owing to the labors of these two men, the whole English settlement there has become civilized and Christianized. During his ministry both he and his wife (formerly Miss Sadie Alexander, a nurse, and a graduate of the Deaconess House in Toronto) have had many hair-breadth escapes. Their first child, Miss Rowena Stringer, at present a pupil at Havergal College, Toronto, was born in the Arctic circle.

When Bishop Bompas died, Dr. Stringer was chosen to succeed him as Bishop of the Yukon. The story of how, on one of his visitations, he and a companion lost their way when crossing the Rockies late in the season, and of how their food supply gave out and they were reduced to boiling and eating their mocassins, has often been told. They were reduced, almost literally, to skeletons before they were found by some friendly Indians. The story aroused much sympathy in England, So much so that it became a jocular saying among missionaries endeavoring to enlist the sympathies of the English public that "in order to touch the hearts of the English you have to eat your boots!"

Bishop Stringer is, in every way, a man of action, of courage, and of sense. With all his manliness, he has the endearing simplicity of heart of a child. His present work lies not only among Indians, but also among miners and among all the heterogeneous, polyglot population around Dawson City. It is intensely hard work, and is moreover, not without certain features which might well discourage, if not daunt, a lesser man.

THE ANGORA GOAT.

Valuable Animal Can Be Raised in the Canadian Climate.

Most parts of Canada where live stock production prevails are suitable to the raising of Angoras, especially if the land is high and dry the greater part of the year. They will withstand the rigor of even the coldest winter, and do not require any greater shelter than a shed to protect them from wind and storm, providing a sufficient quantity of nutritious food and pure water are supplied. The Angora goat performs a two-fold service in the Canadian scheme of farming. It produces a high grade of mohair and at the same time may be used for the destruction of underbrush on lands to be broken for subsequent cultivation. Such is one of the opening paragraphs of pamphlet No. 12 of the Sheep and Goat Division of the Live Stock Branch devoted to the Angora goat and a general discussion of methods of management, feeding and breeding, and of mohair production, by T. Reg. Arkell, B.S.A., B.Sc., and Horace V. Bent, B.S. The pamphlet gives a brief sketch of the origin and history of the Angora, which from being a native of Turkey in Asia has traveled somewhat extensively into South Africa, is fairly well known in the United States, and not as well known in Canada as desirable. Mohair, of which Turkey, in times of peace, supplies 10,000,000 pounds annually, South Africa 15,000,000 pounds, and the rest of the world 6,000,000 pounds, is the technical name given the hair of the Angora goat. The word is derived from the French "mohere," and primarily from the Arabic "mukhayyar," meaning mohair cloth. This with a vast deal more information about a particularly useful goat, is furnished in the pamphlet. Nature and the necessary treatment for breeding and raising are set forth with details of market possibilities, of shearing, of grading, and of preparation for shipment. Extracts from letters written by successful breeders in Canada and the United States telling of their experiences are printed, as well as some account of the complaints to which the animals are occasionally subject, with advice as to preventives and remedies. Illustrations of types and the fleeces carried at various ages lend impression, expression, and interest.

Allies Gathering Momentum Daily.

Joffre's Guns Are Pounding the German Trenches Day and Night.

New York, Monday, Nov. 15.—A special cable to the Tribune from their Paris correspondent says:

"The great French offensive has not ceased.

"Three days ago I left Paris, pessimistic, doubtful of the results attained in the last thrust, and questioning whether the attack that was to drive the Germans from France would be resumed. I returned to-day after three days spent on the ground captured in Artois since the offensive began. And now I am optimistic, reassured by what I have seen, and confident that the enemy will be rolled back by a surge which gathers momentum every day.

"For Joffre's big guns are preparing the way, just as they prepared the way for the great assault at the end of September. Batteries to the right and batteries to the left, I have seen guns standing on the Artois front almost wheel to wheel, and pounding steadily at the German trenches day and night.

"Many times in the course of my visit I saw the soldiers run from shelters to positions in the trenches, and peer eagerly through the crevaux or cautiously cover the tops of the trenches watching the results of a particularly violent cannonade, as though they, too expected at any minute the order to charge the German lines.

"I returned to Paris more impressed than ever by the qualities of the French soldier, convinced beyond argument that the offensive had not ceased, and understanding from the study of the ground how criminal would be the waste of life in another attack on the grand scale when a little patience under methods in use will achieve the result at the expense of not one per cent. in blood."

"Some Fighters, You Canadians."

Germans Pay Flattering Tribute To Men Who Wear Maple Leaf.

London, Nov. 15. —A numerous party of wounded men of the second Canadian division reached Cliveden this week-end along with a number of sick cases.

"All the boys are just fine," said a man from Preston, Ont. "Our battalion has been taking a turn recently in the trenches, not 40 yards from the Germans. We had been warned to keep quiet about our arrival, but as soon as we reached the trench the Germans shouted: 'Hullo. Canadians!' and yelled out the numbers of our battalions, too. However, we are top dog, and if to-morrow we were ordered to take the German trenches in front of us we could do it. We had not been long in the front line before the Prussians decided to treat us to an offensive movement. Our officers knew their intentions and got busy. Our artillery poured shells, and we kept up a continuous fire from our trenches. The action continued four hours. Then the Germans found there was nothing doing. Their offensive movement collapsed because we forestalled them.

"The Germans vary rifle fire occasionally with flattery, and jolly us a bit. 'Some fighters, you Canadians!' they shout. They like our dietary table better than they do us, and we have been rather concerned for the reputation of the German sausage after the way the Germans appeal for our bully beef, 'Canadians, throw us across a tin of bully,' they shouted, 'and we will let you have these trenches next month.' We had orders, though, to stop feeding the Germans.

"Just Kneel on the Gond Ground and Kiss it For Me."

A Canadian Highlander's Reverence for Home—Plucky Canadian Girl Scrubs Floors—Two Lost Soldiers Ask Way to War.

London, Oct. 29.—He was a big, strapping Canadian Highlander. She, just a "wee bit lassie," a war bride, who was going home shortly to visit her people. "So you are going home to Canada," he said, and his voice lingered reverently on the last word. "Well, when you get there you can do something for me. Just kneel down on the good ground and Kiss it for me. And you can tell it that I miss it so much that I just learn more and more every day what it means to be a Canadian, and how mighty well worth fighting for it is. And we think it is just men like this who have placed the name of Canadians where it is to-day.

There is another "can't be beaten" type, this time a Canadian girl who is at Folkestohe. We hear she went to a hospital there and asked to see the matron.

"Do you need anyone here to help in any way?" she demanded.

The Matron replied that there was always room for a willing worker. "Can you scrub floors?" she asked calmly.

The girl promptly answered that she was quite sure she could, so she was engaged on the spot. And now she toils at this not-very-interesting job every day, and I hear she is soon to be promoted:

There is also a ridicuously mad story of two Canadians who got separated from their company on their first trip to the trenches. They were wildly trying to find their comrades, when the sound of the daily "frightfulness" struck their ears. This was more than they could bear, so rushing up to an English officer who was passing, they saluted respectfully, and then, almost in tears one gasped, "Please sir, can you tell us the way to the war. We are so afraid we are missing all the fun !!!!"

A Call For Economy

A British league on War Economy has formulated a pledge for all patriotic women to sign. It points out that the financial outlook is such that Britain can win only if its people are willing to practise self-denial and bear privations in order to furnish the money so preeminently necessary. Of members it requires.

Imports. To reduce every possible expenditure on imported goods and strictly to limit the purchase of everything that comes under the category of luxuries.

Dress. To buy as few luxurious articles of clothing as possible. To resist all attempts to introduce new fashions.

Motors. To avoid, as far as possible, the use of motors, except necessary or charitable purposes.

Food. To give up all unnecessary entertaining, both at home and in restaurants, and to restrict home consumption to the lowest possible limits.

Household Expenditures. In no case to employ men servants, unless ineligible for public services.

To hold a tight string on all unessential expenditures is wise advice at any time for most people, but most patriotic now. The call for funds within the Empire will be far more severe before the war is over. The British Government will have to raise another three billion or perhaps more early in the new year. The Canadian Government expects to make its next war loan at home calling on the people's savings. That call may have to be made more than once. The demands on the British Treasury, especially from Allies, are now so heavy that the Dominions cannot considerately look to London for further financial aid. Australia has already resorted to a domestic war loan. The war has borne very lightly on Canadian purses. If we were facing a prospect of yielding a third or half, or even fourth, of our individual incomes for the use of the State, we would take far more seriously the warnings to economize.

Lady was Burned While in Hospital.

Mrs. Marjorie Levere, of the village of Winchester, brought an interesting appeal suit before the Second Divisional Appellate Court at Osgoode Hall Monday and the result of which will to a certain determine the liability of hospital management for the safe care of patients. Mrs. Levere went into the Smith's Falls hospital for an operation, and while under the effects of the anaesthetic administered to her, she was removed from the operating table to a bed into which hot bricks had been placed to create a warmth which was considered necessary for her recovery to consciousness. One of the bricks was so hot that it burned one of the lady's heels, and she further asserted, destroyed several nerves. Mr. Justice Britton, the trial judge dimissed Mrs. Levere's action for damages holding that the hospital authorities were not liable, as she had engaged for the operation two outside practitioners, although she contracted to pay for her special room and attendance while in the hospital. The nurses who placed the bricks in the bed were employed by the hospital, but the defence was that they worked under the direction of the two doctors. After hearing the argument the court reserved judgment.

Bears are very active in the Ardoch district, one man, Mr. M. Meyers, having lost 18 sheep as the result of a raid by bears and wolves. Ardoch is a splendid sheep raising district in Addington County but the farmers are discouraged over their many losses. The residents are arming themselves against the foe and one wolf has been shot recently.

The Farmer's Joke

"Hello, Cauliflower!" said a facetious young man to a farmer who was driving along a country road. "Give a fellow a lift to Lumtown?" Without waiting for a reply he jumped into the cart. "I might as well ride with you as walk."

After two or three miles had been covered the young man paused for a moment in his chatter. "It's farther to Lumtown than I supposed," he observed.

"It's a good distance," said the farmer.

Another twenty minutes passed and then the young man inquired. "About how far is it tt Lumtown.

"Well,, replied the farmer," keeping straight on the way we're going now I should say 'twould be a matter of 25,000 miles or so; but if you was to get out o' my cart and walk it back, it isn't much above eight miles."

Where Freaks Come From.

Near Canton, Ohio, lives a man who is a genius in economy. Noting the similarity in appearance of bran and sawdust, he started to use a certan proportion of the latter in the mash he fed to his chickens. The fowls ate the mixture with apparant relish, but the trouble came when the next setting of eggs was hatched.

It is said that two of the chickens had wooden legs and a third was a woodpecker.

Hand Separator Cream.

Patrons of cream gathering creameries frequently complain of the variations which occur in the percentage of fat as revealed by the test of the cream delivered from time to time. These variations have given rise to more or less dissatisfaction on the part of the patrons, and have been the cause of unnecessary friction between them and the managers of creameries. A series of taste and experiments bearing on this point have recently been completed by the Branch of the Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, at Ottawa, and the results obtained are published in circular No. 14 of that Branch. It is desirable that creamery patrons should know the results of these experiments. Managers of creameries may apply for and secure from the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, sufficient copies to supply each patron. Individual copies will be sent to those who apply for them.

A certain minister lately paid a visit to a lady of his acquaintance who was newly married and who was attired in the modern fashion. After the usual compliments he familiarly said. "I hope you have a good husband, madam?" "Yes, sir," replied she, "and a good man,too" "I don't know what to say about his goodness," added the minister rather huntly, "for my Bible teaches me that a good man should clothe his wife, but he lets you go half naked."

A Sunday school teacher asked a little fellow how many commandments there were. To her surprise the lad answered glibly enough, "Ten'madam." "And now Sammy,'asked the teacher, "what would be the result if you should break one of them?" "Then there'd be nine?" triumphantly answered the youngster.

Then He Ran.

A tramp, approaching a comfortable looking home with a doctor's sign in front, thought the place looking good for a touch, and strolled round to the side door. A capable looking lady answered his knock and contemplated with a severe gaze.

"Madam, can you spare me a pair of the doctor's old pants?"

"Sir," she replied, "I am the doctor."

JACK AND THE ENEMY

The Victory Was With Jack

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Jack Trainor, though a small man, was more anxious to be considered an athlete than anything else. In his high school days he was captain of the baseball nine and snapperback of the football team. That isn't saying much when you consider a man professionally, but it is enough to excite his pride and cause him to spend a lot of time swinging Indian clubs and in other exercises to develop muscle.

Jack did not go to college, which saved him a great disappointment, for his size and muscle would not have gained him admission to any of the university teams, and that would have broken his heart. Instead of that he went into business. This did not keep him from punching a bag he kept in his room, and he took boxing lessons. In the course of events he did what most young men do—he fell in love.

Jack was chief clerk in Amos Hilton's office. Amos Hilton was the "enemy" because he was a millionaire and also because he was the father of the girl Jack loved.

In his waking dreams Jack saw himself manfully approaching Amos Hilton, throwing out his chest and asking for the hand of fair Cicely Hilton.

The sharp "tang" of Mr. Hilton's bell usually awoke Jack to the cold reality that the enemy was waiting for some important papers.

As for Cicely Hilton herself, she had met Jack Trainor at his aunt's house, and she was ready to throw up everything and even fly in the face of her parents' objections and marry the man of her choice.

Jack knew this and only adored Cicely the more for her loyal love. Still, he wanted to make a home for her that would be something like her father's palace.

And a man cannot accomplish much in building palaces on $3,000 a year.

Lord! How pitifully small the amount was! Why, Cicely probably had that much for pin money.

He groaned in spirit.

Just then "tang" went the enemy's bell.

"Yes, sir," said Jack, appearing at the door of the inner shrine.

"Come in and close the door, Trainor."

Amos Hilton tipped back in his revolving chair and surveyed Jack through narrowed eyes and a blue haze of tobacco smoke.

"I want you to undertake a personal matter for me," went on the millionaire. "Look down at the opposite sidewalk. Do you see a dark, sinister looking chap leaning against a lamppost gazing up at my windows?"

Jack looked.

The man on the sidewalk was a hulking figure. He was foppishly dressed and quite foreign looking. His head was tilted back as he gazed at the fourth story windows.

"I see him," said Jack.

"He is Count Ignace Mercuto. He wants to marry my daughter." Mr. Hilton gazed thoughtfully into space, while Jack's heart raced between his throat and its accustomed anchorage. At least, it felt that way.

At a moment when his heart had left his throat for its other terminal Jack managed to speak.

"Sir?" he asked, and he surprised himself by the deep growl of his voice. "Sir?"

"Yep, he wants to marry my girl, Cicely. But I say 'No!' He pesters me with his pleading, and he threatens to commit suicide on the steps of my home if I won't consent." He blew a cloud of smoke into the air.

"Yes, sir," interpolated Jack.

"I want you to take him away and get rid of him. Kill him if necessary." Mr. Hilton yawned and shot a look at his astounded clerk.

"Afraid?" he sneered, measuring Jack's stocky form with a cold eye.

Jack's hands clinched.

"Hardly, sir," he said with a grim look about his mouth. "Shall I go out and do it now or wait until he comes up here?"

Mr. Hilton appeared to ponder the question.

"Better wait until he comes up here. Then you can throw him downstairs. But perhaps you'd rather not do the job, Trainor. I suppose I might get Finnegan, the porter. He's quite a husky, and the count is sizable."

Jack threw out his chest.

"I'll do it, Mr. Hilton," he promised.

"Good. It's a sort of personal job, you understand. His attentions are annoying Cicely."

"He won't bother her again," said Jack soberly as he went out.

When Amos Hilton was alone he went to the window and raised the shade.

Then he returned to his seat and shook with silent laughter.

Perhaps he had penetrated Jack's secret love for Cicely and was matching his size and weight against this giant of a count. Cicely's other lover. Who knows?

Who knows the mind of a man like Amos Hilton anyway?

Jack Trainor had barely regained his own desk when the office boy brought him a card emblazoned with a coat of arms. "Wants to see the boss."

"Hum!" said Jack, jerking off his stool. "I'll see him first, James."

In the reception room Jack confronted the huge form of Count Ignace Mercuto.

"Looks like the villain in a movie show," was Jack's mental comment.

The count twirled his waxed mustache, clicked his heels together and bowed profoundly.

Jack salaamed in return.

"Ha!" said the count. "I vish to see ze Mr. Hilton."

"Mr. Hilton begs to be excused," grinned Jack.

"Carramba!" hissed the unfortunate wooer. "I am insult. I vill have satisfaction."

"Get it if you can," said Jack indifferently. "Meantime do you mind going home? I'm busy."

"Busy, busy! You Americans always busy, waiting for money like ze pigs! Ha!" The count uttered a blood chilling laugh.

"Beat it!" said Jack tersely.

"And if I do not 'beat it?'" mocked the count.

"I shall have to throw you downstairs," remarked Jack, though he felt a qualm of doubt whether he could really do it.

The count was twice his size, with the shoulders of a pugilist.

"Come on, then!" exulted Count Ignace, striding into the hall. "Come on, little kitten! I break your bones. Ha!"

Jack reddened about his ears. He leaped at Mercuto's shoulders and pushed him along the polished floor to the stairway.

There, however, Mercuto gave the office man the fight of his life.

But there came a moment when Jack could put his boot quickly forward and impel Count Ignace in an ignominious scramble down the stairs to the first landing.

Then Jack, feeling battered and weary, went back to the office.

Amos Hilton was standing in the doorway. He had witnessed the unequal fight.

"Good boy!" he nodded approvingly. "You better take the rest of the day off."

"Thank you, but I've got a lot of work to do," said Jack as he vanished into the lavatory to remove the traces of the fray.

When he returned to his desk his fellow clerks looked curiously at him.

His face was ornamented by a blackened eye and a cut and swollen lip.

If he suffered any pain it was numbed by the happy thought that he had done Cicely a service.

As a natural reward of heroism Jack was invited to dine at the Hiltons' ten days after the above incident. And Mrs. Hilton was so charming to him that Jack felt that he could almost fall in love with her. Before he went home that night Mr. Hilton called Jack into his library.

"Trainor," he said seriously, "what would you say if I told you that Hilton & Co. are facing ruin?"

Jack looked bewildered. "Why, I'd say it was incredible!" he exclaimed. "I know the ins and outs of the business, and"—

"Do you know them better than I do?" demanded Hilton.

"I should know them as well. Am I not your confidential clerk?" Jack argued.

"You are. Still, what have you to say when I tell you that Hilton & Co. close their doors tomorrow and that I am penniless?"

Jack drew a long breath.

"I'm sorry for you, sir, but I'm mighty glad for myself," he said. "You see, I love Cicely, and I couldn't ask her to leave this luxurious home for the humbler one I could provide. But now we are equals. I can ask your consent, sir?"

Amos Hilton wrung Jack's hand.

"You are very much of a man, Jack," he said heartily. "Remember, a home's a home, and I'm sure that Cicely will be happy with you anywhere. You better go and tell her now!"

When Jack had vanished Mr. Hilton indulged in another one of his long fits of silent laughter.

The next morning when Jack came to the office he seemed to walk on air. All his dreams had come true. He was to marry Cicely in the autumn. He had discovered that his enemy, as he had called Amos Hilton, was in private life a mild mannered, affectionate man.

Jack's encounter with Count Ignace Mercuto had given him fresh confidence in himself. He could never confess to any one—not even Cicely—the fear that weakened his knees when he confronted the huge foreigner.

Jack had barely reached the office when the bell over his desk sounded "tang."

Amos Hilton was dismissing a visitor through the corridor door of his private office.

Jack was sure he recognized the sinister face of Count Ignace.

But Hilton closed the door and smiled cheerfully at his prospective son-in-law.

"How goes it, Jack?" he asked, clapping a hand on the young man's shoulder.

"Happily, sir," said Jack, grinning. "But how about the bad business you spoke about last night?"

"Just a joke, Jack, to test your courage. I wondered whether you loved my girl for herself or the money. I found out. God bless you!"

But when Amos Hilton was alone he unfolded a receipted bill and reread it with twinkling eyes:

GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT

MUSHROOMS.

How to Tell the Good Ones From the Toadstools.

Tens of thousands of dollars worth of mushrooms go to waste in Canada every year, says a writer in The Toronto Star Weekly, just because people do not know mushrooms from toadstools. The writer describes a visit to an expert and repeats the advice the latter gave him as follows:

"How to tell mushrooms from toadstools?" echoed the professional. He was obviously flattered when requested to give safety-first advice to a novice instituting his first quest for edible fungi. He talked well, as they say, and quickly gave proof that he had passed in his own right pupilage in mushroom science, for he tore off some perfectly good data respecting pileus and volva, gills and veils, and such before getting down to business.

"Here, wrap a few of these in your paper," was his invitation. "No; they're not meadow mushrooms we get here; some call them maned mushrooms, or shaggy maned mushrooms. In the book they're 'Coprinus Comatus,' if that makes you feel better. They're among the most nutritious of all, and, I think, the most delicious. Hosts of 'em here; early morning's best time. No, I'm not afraid of giving away my 'lay'; these warm, damp days and nights we've been getting makes mushrooms hump themselves." To be a successful mushroom hunter one must needs be an optimist. "The way to begin—and to be able to eat them without a stomach pump on the chair beside you—is to learn about a few kinds at first," as the owner of the red handkerchief continued. "You can't learn them all; there's at least a thousand different eatable kinds. All are toadstools for that matter; only some ain't good for your insides. Now these 'shaggies' here—there's no poisonous species with any resemblance to them. Learn 'em, pick 'em, eat 'em—first—and there you be! When you learn 'shaggies' perfectly tackle one of the next commonest ones."

The shaggy manes are shaped like a closed umbrella, of a down whiteness, beautifully spotted with brown.

The morel, a buff spheroid which is not umbrella shaped is another mushroom without a treacherous understudy; it is honeycombed and pitted, and the stem is partly hollow.

The meadow mushroom is the most widely known of all. It's white cap and pink gills are familiar. The gills ultimately turn to brown and then black, after which decay sets in. This is the variety from which "spawn" is derived. It is peculiar to pasture lands, especially where sheep run, and in meadows. No observant person should mistake a meadow mushroom for the deadly amanita, but the error is too frequent. The latter is found in woods or new cleared land, and has a white cap, gills, and stem; the lower end of its stem is encased in a cup—beware that cup or socket in any suspected fungus—it is the "poison" label. Among all the known kinds of toadstools not more than ten are poisonous, that should help some.

Canada has still to earn the mushroom game as practised over the herring pond. Mushrooms there are as much staples as tomatoes or bananas are in Canada. Beneath the streets and buildings of Edinburgh a single tunnel 3,000 feet long shelters beds which produce 5,000 pounds of prime mushroom plants per month, worth there only 18 cents a pound wholesale.

Presents for Prisoners.

The Postmaster-General points out that a large number of parcels for prisoners of war abroad are still found to be unfit for onward transmission in consequence of inadequate packing. Parcels should be very strongly packed. Even where proper materials are used, it is important that the contents should be tightly packed, so as not to shake about during transit.

In view of the exceptional conditions of transit, involving several transhipments and exposure to great heat, it is necessary that parcels for the Mediterranean expeditionary force should be very carefully packed. The folowing recommendations are made as a result of the experience of the Army Postoffice:

All parcels should be as nearly round as possible, and should be well padded with shavings, crumpled papers, or other similar protective material.

The outer covering should consist of strong linen, calico, or canvas, or other textile material, and should be securely sewn up.

As an alternative, parcels may be packed in boxes made of strong, double-corrugated cardboard of strawboard.

Parcels merely wrapped in paper, or packed in thin cardboard boxes, such as shoe boxes, cannot be accepted.

No perishable articles may be sent, and anything likely to become soft or sticky, such as chocolate and sweets, should be packed in tins.

Tank Cars for Fire Fighting.

The management of the Government railways has made material progress in fire protection in Quebec since taking over the line of the National Transcontinental for operation. A tank car, for fire-fighting purposes, has been equipped and will be stationed at some convenient point between Edmundston and Quebec. This car has a capacity of ten thousand gallons, and is equipped with hose to reach a fire five hundred feet from the track. The question of placing two similar cars at convenient points between the City of Quebec and the Ontario boundary is under consideration. Special fire patrols will also be necessary, and the details are being considered.

Speed of Destroyers.

The submarine's deadliest enemy is the destroyer, which, at its best, can run forty-six miles per hour.

New Brunswick Oil.

A despatch from Ottawa states that a very favorable report on the oil shales of New Brunswick has been received from Dr. Clapp, the expert who has been examining the situation. Dr. Clapp states that he found the prospects for petroleum in this province very promising. He pronounces the shales as superior to those of Scotland from which oil is produced. The shale belt is chiefly in Albert County, about 40 miles from St. John, N.B.

Art of Building Your Bedroom

The chief points to be considered in planning bedroom accommodation are, of course, aspect and outlook.

Each bedroom should receive some direct sunlight at some time during each day, and, if there be a fine view available, as many bedrooms as possible should command it, unless they be to the north, and a sleeping room with only a north exposure is never satisfactory. The long, narrow country house, with the bedrooms grouped on one side, offers perhaps the best command of a good outlook in any one direction.

The second vital consideration for bedroom planning is airiness. When views in several directions are good the direction of the prevailing hot weather breezes should largely determine the general aspect of the bedroom windows. Every bedroom should have some cross draft, either direct or diagonal. To secure this, rooms not at corners of the house may be situated in wide bays or projecting wings. In localities where the winters are long and cold and the summer heat comparatively brief, a simple and compact rectangular plan is perhaps ideal because it facilitates the heating of the house.

Many prospective home builders still cherish the idea that high ceilings increase the airiness of bedrooms. This idea, however, is nothing short of a fallacy, for, as a matter of fact, the ceiling height has, under ordinary circumstances, little to do with the case. If a bedroom becomes heated during the day the air it contains above the level of the window tops (provided the windows have been opened from the top or, as with casements, are entirely open) remains heated for hours after sundown, retarding instead of accelerating the equalizing of indoor and outdoor temperatures. The room most quickly cooled in the evening has rather low ceilings and casement windows of good height, to insure a rapid change of air up to, say, seven feet above the floor.

Another essential point, but one very frequently neglected or altogether forgotten, is planning definite spaces for the necessary furniture. Even in the most modest bedroom a bed and a bureau are to be looked upon as fixed pieces, and to these may be added as portable pieces such features as a chiffonier, a dressing table, a writing desk, or chairs. The number and character of all these pieces should be definitely decided upon for each bedroom before even tentative plans are made. Otherwise, even in a large bedroom, valuable space may be wasted, or possibly a bureau or dressing table may be adequately lighted only with great difficulty either by day or night.

Assuming that the furniture question has been at least fairly positively settled, there are several points to be borne in mind in planning for the disposition of the furniture in each bedroom. If possible the head of the bed should be square against one wall, with ample free space on each side. The "catty cornered" arrangement of beds and bureaus, so alluring to certain feminine minds, leaves a bad corner for the accumulation of dust, and in addition gives a restless aspect to a room which, above all others, should be superlatively restful in effect. In a very small room it is, of course, sometimes impossible to avoid placing the bed squarely in a corner, but there is no especial objection to this unless the bed be too heavy to move easily when the covers are being changed.

Every bedroom requires careful planning with reference to the future occupants. For example, a boy's room should be so planned and furnished that it will be a cosy and attractive place in which to entertain other boys. Besides the bare necessities of bedroom furniture, it should have a bookcase, a well lighted desk and strong, comfortable lounging chairs, and yet yield sufficient clear floor space for even an occasional boxing bout. In a girl's room there should also be some provision for the occupant's informal entertaining of girl friends, and there should be ample wardrobe and dressing conveniences.

The number and character of guest rooms are largely limited by considerations of building cost, but it is a very humble home indeed which does not boast at least one room readily convertible into a guest room. Where guests are but rarely entertained over night it is, of course, useless to set aside for them and keep vacant probably the best bedroom of the entire house, though this was a religiously kept custom in all communities until recent years. The better plan in a modest home is to turn over one or two bedrooms which are in daily use to the guests while one or more members of the household shift their quarters temporarily, thus showing quite as hospitable a spirit as though a particularly good room were kept unused the greater part of the year merely for the benefit of an occasional visitor.

Of servants' sleeping rooms much might be written. Happily, we are at last beginning to realize that servants are human beings, and that, as such, they deserve proper treatment. As a result of this awakening there has been a vast improvement made in their sleeping quarters.

Stain Removers.

Equal parts of turpentine and ammonia will remove paint from clothing, no matter how hard it is caked on. Borax will remove the leather stains made by shoes on white or light colored stockings.

Ammonia will remove grease stains from white goods.

Ether will remove stains without leaving a ring on the material.

Spirits of camphor will take off peach stains.

A PRACTICAL COAT.

A Topcoat That Has Both Utility and Style.

A CORRECT JUVENILE.

This new fall design is developed in navy velours de laine. The semibelted effect and high snug collar, which buttons, as does the front, with self buttons, give smart finishes. The pannier pockets depending from the belt and rolling cuffs with narrow cordings are interesting details. The tricorn hat is of navy velours felt banded with beaver fur.

Chili of Beef.

Take two pounds of flank steak—the thick, rather stringy meat that lies inside the ribs and which is peeled before being used. Cut the steak in two or three pieces large enough to cover the bottom of your kettle. Rub the pieces with cut onion, pepper, and salt and flour on both sides. Put one tablespoonful of olive oil in your kettle, rubbing it round with a piece of garlic. Lay one piece of steak on the bottom of the kettle. Make a mixture of three pimentos, one medium sized onion, both chopped, and one pint of red kidney beans, previously well soaked and parboiled. Spread a little of this mixture between each layer of steak, leaving the meat on top. Flour and season this well and pour over it one cupful of strained tomato juice or ketchup. Cook in moderate oven three hours. Serve with boiled rice. —Country Gentleman.

Japanese Toys.

The Japanese are now manufacturing yearly about $5,000,000 worth of toys, of which 40 per cent. are for exportation.

Disagreeable people always get their own way, and get it all to themselves, because no one dares to get in it.

Short Leave for Troops.

All the French troops who have been six months at the Front have been granted short leave. A circular has been issued fixing the order in which leave of absence may be granted. First on the list come the men who have won the Cross of War or the Legion of Honour. Next in order come the men who have taken an prisoners, and after these fathers of five, four, three, or two children. Then come "married men" simply and tillers of the soil, and last of all celibates.

Removing Wall Paper.

To remove old wall paper—and this should always be done before putting on new—make a thick pasty solution of flour and a few spoonfuls of salt in boiling water. Then add a few ounces of acetic acid, which is cheap, and apply with a brush to the old paper which will, after a few minutes, readily peel off in large strips.

CZARINA AS A NURSE

War has brought heavy responsibilities to the royal families of Europe. Most of the men are in the field, and the women are busily engaged in the works of charity and mercy endered necessary by the conflict. One of the ablest as well as one of the busiest workers is the Czarina of Russia, who ever since the outbreak of the conflict has been immersed in the labor of nursing the wounded soldiers at the hospitals in Petrograd and Moscow.

The Czarina was the Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt, and was married in 1894. In her twenty-one years of married life the Czarina has seen a great deal of trouble, arising chiefly out of her ill health. Her family consists of four daughters and one son. The disappointment felt by the Russian people as each of the girls was announced is now well known. The Russian people demanded an heir to the throne, and the superstitious peasants were only too ready to believe that the new Czarina was what we Canadians know as a hoodoo. Finally when the young Prince Alexis was born there was great rejoicing, which abated later when it was seen that the lad was sickly.

The troubles of the Russian consort as a result of an accident which crippled her son, combined with her naturally melancholy temperament and her constant fear of harm to the Czarewich at the hands of terrorists have made her an unhappy woman.

With the advent of the war and the necessity thrown upon her of taking up active work in behalf of war sufferers, her temperament has improved and a naturally loving and kindly disposition has asserted itself in a devotion which is endearing her to the Russian people.

In company with her two eldest daughters, all three garbed in the white habits of sisters of mercy, she goes about the hospitals actively engaged in organization work. The above picture shows her in her nurses uniform.

Barb-Wire Injuries.

After a barb-wire accident, do not apply axle grease or any rancid ointment to the wound. Wash the wound thoroughly with warm water. Then clip the hair as close as possible around it, and wash again to remove any hair or other foreign substance. When sand or hair has lodged in the depths of a deep cut, never use a wet sponge to clean it out. Use a piece of absorbent cotton or cotton batting. There will be much less risk of infection. It will be useless to put stitches in a wound that is very deep or ragged, or that is located in a place not in perfect rest when the animal is making natural movements. Dry dusting powder has a healing effect on barb-wire wounds and other large, moist cuts and abrasions. Such a powder may be prepared cheaply by mixing together equal parts of slaked lime, sulphur and charcoal. Prevent lockjaw dangers in nail wounds of the hoof by opening them up freely, which provides drainage for serum and pus. Saturate with a solution of corrosive sublimate and water in the proportion of 1 to 500. Cover with dusting powder, absorbent cotton, and a bandage. This treatment should be repeated daily until the wound is healed.

Potash is Scarce.

In connection with the scarcity of potash as a result of the war, a Kingston man draws attention to the fact that there is a very large deposit of feldspar in Frontenac in which there is about 16 per cent. of pure potash that could be extracted cheaply. This feldspar also contains about 19 per cent. of aluminor, which is very valuable.

Ratio of Casualties.

One officer is killed to every two who are wounded. Among the men, one is killed to every three wounded.

Re-packing of Parcels for Soldiers at the Front.

The public is urged to exercise every care in packing parcels for the troops, as careful packing is absolutely essential to ensure delivery of the parcels in good order.

Parcels sent abroad require a higher standard of packing than is necessary in the Canadian Parcel Post, and this applies with even greater force to parcels for the troops. Those which are inadequately packed run great risk of damage or loss of contents.

Thin cardboard boxes, such as shoe boxes, and thin wooden boxes should not be used; nor does a single sheet of ordinary brown paper afford sufficient protection. The following forms of packing are recommended:

(1) Strong double cardboard boxes, preferably those made of corrugated cardboard, and having lids which completely enclose the sides of the boxes.

(2) Strong wooden boxes.

(3) Several folds of stout packing paper.

(4) Additional security is afforded by an outer covering of linen, calico or canvas, which should be securely sewn up.

The address of the parcel should be written in ink on the cover preferably in two places.

The address of the sender of the parcel should also be stated in order that it may be returned if undeliverable. The contents of the parcel should be stated in writing on the cover.

In the case of parcels sent to the Mediterraneau Force, they should be very strongly packed. They should be as nearly round as possible, and well padded with shavings, crumpled paper, or similar protective material. The outer covering should consist of strong linen, calico or canves, and should be securely sewn up. The use of wooden or metal boxes with square corners is undesirable, as parcels so packed are liable to injure other parcels in transit. No perishable articles should be sent, and anything likely to become soft or sticky, such as chocolates, should be enclosed in tins. Parcels merely wrapped in paper or packed in thin cardboard boxes, such as shoe boxes, cannot be accepted.

Live Stock Judging Demonstrations.

The Live Stock Judging Demonstrations conducted by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Morrisburg, have been the most popular form of meetings that have been arranged during recent years.

At these demonstrations everyone is given the opportunity of judging the classes of animals in the ring and discussing their placing with the Demonstrator in charge and also with their neighbors. This discussion brings out many features that would otherwise be overlooked and serves to give everyone a better idea of the most desirable type and conformation for the various classes of live stock brought before them.

We are particularly fortunate this year in securing two very able men to conduct these demonstrations. Mr. G. A. Brethen of Norwood, Ont., is a farmer who has had more than ordinary success in building up his dairy herd. He is now recognized as one of the most prominent breeders in Ontario.

Dr. H. G. Reed, formerly a veterinarian of Georgetown, Ont., is one of the most widely known horsemen on Short Course work in the Province. His lectures are always interesting, full of valuable information, and right to the point.

The Live Stock Judging Competition for young men under 25 years of age is a feature of these Courses that every young farmer should take advantage of. This occupies the first half hour of each afternoon.

A detailed programme of one of these Demonstrations will be found in another column of this paper. These are the first and only Short Courses that will be held in Dundas and Stormont Counties during this season and it is to be hoped that a large number of farmers will take this opportunity of hearing two prominent Live Stock men give lectures and demonstrations on these important subjects.—F. P. Bradt, District Representative, Morrisburg, Ont.

Mr. Frank Price, the new manager of the Molson's Bank and Mrs. Price and daughter have arrived in town and for the present are at the McCloskey House.

A "Holy Roller" preacher of Fitzroy is alleged to have made some very treasonable utterance regarding the British recently and it is said that he has been warned to desist or he will be placed with other alien enemies at Petewawa.

John Anderson, a well known resident of Cornwall, aged 69 years, died last Wednesday from the result of accidentally slipping when getting on the train at Moulinette. His leg was badly crushed and the foot severed.

Howard, the five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Orrie Beckstead of Morrisburg was found unconscious by the roadside from the effects of drinking some liniment from a bottle which he had found. Doctors had a strenuous time saving his life.

Messrs. Saxon Casselman and N. S. Marcellus of Williamsburg passed through town Tuesday morning on their way home from their hunting ground near Chalk River. They reported a good hunt and game fairly plentiful. Mr. Marcellus was fortunate in securing a particularly fine buck. Geo. McNaughton and Allan Cameron of Finch, were also of the party and each had all the law allows.

John P. Dunne of Ogdensburg was injured in a shooting accident near Prescott losing the first finger of his left hand. When shooting from a rest at some ducks on the river, the recoil caused the gun to slip from his grasp to the ground. Dunne reached over his left hand grasping the gun by the muzzle when it was also discharged causing the injury.

Mr. R. W. Watchorn and Mr. G. B. McGee of Merrickville, were seriously injured in an automobile accident near Perth last week. Watchorn was driving the car and instead of cutting off the gasoline, as intended, turned it on when going along a narrow strip of road. The car crashed into a telegraph pole and turned completely over with the occupants underneath.

Mr. W. J. Wilson of Williamsburg township knows that advertising in The Record brings quick results. Thursday Mr. Wilson advertised a cow for sale and on Monday he dropped in to tell us how well pleased he was with results remarking, "The cow was gone Saturday and I had the money in m pocket." That is the strong point about advertising, it puts the money into your pocket.

T. Pattison of Alexandria Bay, has invented an automobile. It is equipped with four runners, and a gasoline engine which drives a seven foot propeller, furnishes the motive power. On good level roads he claims he can make 60 miles an hour, and 40 miles on ordinary snow roads. A steel rod through out each of the hind runners acts as a brake. Mr. Pattison has secured a patent, and has made arrangements to put two or three of the sleighs on rural mail delivery this winter as an experiment.
