Traffic Regulations Continue to Trouble Council By-law Amendments to be Instituted to Further Program

Tuesday night Chesterville council grappled with the old bugbear of traffic regulation and finally came up with some suggested amendments for the by-law that will afford a measure of relief in certain sections of the town.

The regular August meeting was attended by all members of council and the reeve. Clerk H. C. Hummel was present to record the minutes.

Hydro business consisted of consideration of the minutes of the last meeting and the passing of the accounts. The village electrician was instructed to investigate the street light situation on Mary St. and instal a new light or two if they were needed.

Chesterville council business considered the annual grant to the Chesterville and District Agricultural Society and made the usual grant of $75. Notice was given by the clerk that the annual per capita grant for Fire and Police protection had been received. It amounted to $1641. Fees and fines amounted to $3.99 for the month of June.

Chesterville Legion was represented by the president, Mr. Carl Merkley and the secretary-treasurer, Mr. Hubert McCloskey. These gentlemen appealed to council for a grant of land at the old skating rink site as it is the Legion's intention to erect a 50x36 ft. frame hall. Council look with favour on the appeal and by motion of Mrs. Marcellus, seconded by Mrs. Campbell, the grant was made of enough land to suit the Legion's purpose at no cost to the recipients.

Fire chief John Hehir presented his monthly accounts for the Brigade. He also asked the opinion of council on the matter of dumping the water from the pumper. It has been his custom to clear the tank periodically in order to arrest any possible rust formation and at the same time flush out any troublesome sewer that needed attention. A citizen of the town had objected to the pumper being used for that purpose and the chief hoped for council's counsel. Council found the alternative to dumping the water in the sewers was dumping it in the river; they gave Mr. Hehir a free hand on the matter and closed the subject.

Conctable Hunsburber had surveyed the streets and he presented members of council and the reeve with a list of suggested improvements to the present traffic by-laws. Members of council questioned the constable closely and at length on the suggested changes. Disagreement on certain points in the list were ironed out by compromise, a general review of the situation was undertaken once again and good came from it all. The constable was instructed to continue the marking of the streets with white lines to designate the parking areas, including parallel parking along the abutment—a rather heated decision that was eventually solved by a show of hands. Three hands showed for parallel with two on the angle side. The present by-law is to be amended and presented to the Municipal Board for approval. The following items are to be incorporated in the amendments where an amendment is needed:

No U turns at the junctions of King, Water and Main Streets; at Queen and Main Streets and at Victoria and Main Streets.

No parking on the north side of Water Street from the intersection of Main Street to intersection of Casselman Street.

No parking on north-east side of Main Street South to William Street at the Thos. Moran corner.

White line zoned parking spaces on all business streets as has been done on Victoria Street in Community Hall area.

Council adjourned at 10.30 p.m. to meet again Sept. 7th. or at the call of the chair.

OPINIONS . . .

Ours and Others

Traffic Improvements

Tuesday night Chesterville council took a forward step in easing some of the traffic congestion of our streets. Their desicions were not easy and were only arrived at after long discussion and compromise.

Constable Wm. Hunsburger offered a list of suggestions to council with the explanation that he felt benefit would be gained if they were incorporated into an amendment to the present by-laws.

We have felt and expressed through these columns that some measure of relief has been needed for some time. Council has made a beginning and some of the troublesome spots will be eliminated. Much remains to be done but the present method of doing it by stages will probably prove the most satisfactory method.

Dangerous Milk

With all that is known and has been made public about the dangers in raw milk, it is strange that there is still resistance to pasteurization. It is not necessary to pass laws to prevent automobile manufacturers from building cars with wheels that fall off at 50 m.p.h. If a manufacturer built and sold one such car it would be his last one.

Yet pasteurization, which is infinitely simpler and cheaper than building cars is still resisted by some dairymen who are well aware of the fact that raw milk can and frequently does kill people more painfully and slowly and tragically than can an auto crash. Some years ago the excuse of ignorance was a valid one, but this is no longer true. The educational efforts of the Health League Committee on Pasteurization have wiped out most of this ignorance, though there are still backwashes of it here and there. It is now taken for grante d that almost any parent with any claim to education will insist on pasteurized milk. Two provinces, Ontario and Saskatchewan, now have province-wide pasteurization laws, thanks to intensive programmes of public education. Many cities outside these provinces have municipal pasteurization laws. Still it is possible, even within rifle-shot of Toronto, to buy raw milk. Moreover, there are large areas where it is virtually impossible to obtain pasteurized milk, even if one is properly informed about it and insists upon it.

Why, in spite of the proofs that have been offered, some dairymen persist in deluding themselves and others about the need for pasteurization, is a mystery.

Question:

Ordinarily at home I have pasteurized milk for the children, but on Sunday when we visit my brother, who is a dairy farmer, we all drink quantities of fresh raw milk, just at milking time. My brother says since his herd is certified, there is no need to worry about pasteurization. Is this true?

Answer:

No, decidedly not. The trouble about certified milk is that although the milk may be produced under ideal conditions from tuberculin tested cows, one cannot avoid the possibility of this milk being infected with, perhaps, tuberculosis or undulant fever, despite all precautions. There have been various instances of these diseases being caught from drinking certfied milk.

To be safe, all milk for home consumption should be pasteurized whether it is certified or not.

Be Quick to Cure Injured Furniture

Mass produced furniture comes into being at a faster pace than the fine hand wrought pieces of Grandma's time, and is perhaps a little easier for the average homemaker to come by. But it still pays to take good care of it and make it last at least a lifetime if possible. Good care usually means that you can afford finer, better looking pieces that grow on you as the years vass until you hate to part with them if ever you must.

So it's a good habit to keep after household furnishings, making easy repairs as son as necessary. It's easy to fix chips, splinters and corners. That is if you have the missing bits. Some folks with good intentions have been known to put these away and postpone the repair job until they were lost or thrown out—or their place of safekeeping forgotten.

Glue these pieces firmly back into place and apply cellophane tape tightly, extending well beyond the glued portion to hold repaired piece until glue sets. Leaving tape on overnight.

Many households have one or two chairs tucked away in a closet, or half concealed in a corner, because they're wobbly, with missing rungs or worn joints. A nice trap for some shy visitor looking for an obscure spot to park himself.

They should be fixed. One method is to remove old rungs, scrape off the glue from inside the hole, push in rung tightly, bind chair firmly with twine until glue has set and hardened. If rung fits to loosely for gluing, get small metal rung fasteners, slip over end of dowel and push into place.

If you would rather not bother, give the chairs to someone who will.

Replace drawer pulls and door pulls as soon as possible. Apart from the blemished and uncared for look of the thing, operating only one pull spells eventual ruin. That practise wil pull the drawer out of shape and finally break it. Shaky drawers should be made sturdy befor they come apart beyond repair. Triangular wood blocks glued and nailed to corners are a good reinforcement.

Unless it is absolutely necessary to get at their contents, don't force open drawers or cabinet doors that have stuck. If you do you stand a good chance of spoiling the piece. Usually it is because the wood has swelled owing to excess humidity. Wait if you can until dry weather permits opening, then rub stuck surfaces with hard soap, paraffin or stick lubricant. If trouble occurs again, edges that are prone to stick should be sandpapered or planed down.

Dents and gouges that are not too deep on wood surfaces can be repaired almost invisibly with wood putty or plastic cement, applied carefully to an absolutely dry surface, according to directions. Most fillers come in the various wood shades.

And you who like to rearrange furniture, here's a tip. Much damage is suffered by pieces that are pushed and pulled around. So always remove bureau and desk drawers before moving. Never push or pull. Always lift.

THIS BUSY HULL BOY KEPT POLICE HOPPING

A 15-year-old Hull boy's adventurous and lawless spirit that has led him astray the past four months ended in Hull court chambers Monday when Judge Jacques Boucher ordered him held in custody until he can be admitted to a provincial rehabilitation school.

He had previously been allowed to remain in custody of his father until his admission to the school to serve a two-year period but events that have occured since then resulted in a new order by Judge Jacques Boucher Monday morning.

In March a two-year rehabilitation term was ordered for car theft.

Last Wednesday this boy was spotted riding a stolen bicycle on a Hull street by City Detectives Jacques Charron and George Dompierre.

The detectives took the boy back to his father.

Saturday afternoon the boy took a partly-filled tractor tanker from the Hull Petroleum Company and drove it around for a while. While he was at it he caused some $300 damage to the cab of the vehicle.

Sunday morning he took a car from in front of a Hull church, drove it for a little while, and then returned it.

Later in the day he took a car parked on Langevin street.

It was reported stolen to Hull police and not long afterwards was spotted on Massonneuve street.

When the boy saw he was being chased he drove into the Hull Transport Company lot and while the car was still running he jumped out, only to be found a short time latter by police.

Taken to the police station he was questioned, then returned to his father.

Monday morning he was brought to Judge Boucher's court chambers where the case was explained to the judge.

MECHANICAL COW PRODUCES TOP GRADE MILK

The mechanical cow has arrived. It is lodged in a quiet room at Runcorn, across the Mersey River from Liverpool, and all day long it is delivering a fluid that may one day save millions of people from starvation.

This invention of a brilliant young Welsh biochemist, R. S. Roberts, may be the answer medical science is seeking to the problem of how to step up world meat production. Future giant commercial plants, which can convert cheap and over-abundant vegetable material into valuable animal foodstuffs, will enable large herds of cattle to be available for slaughter far sooner than if they were retained purely because of their valuable milk yield.

Robert's mechanical cow does just what a natural cow does—and turns carbohydrates into proteins and vitamins. The mechanical cow uses raw ingredients, together with the germ that lives in the intestinal tract of all animals, to produce a valuable food containing, as well as protein, several of the B vitamins, including the recently discovered B12.

There have been numerous attempts to find a nourishing food to take the place of cow's milk. Milks of vegetable origin or made from mixtures of cereal and meat have been devised, and some of them have been used for long periods without ill-effects. But Robert's mechanical cow would seem to be a distinct improvement on any of its predecessors.

Already a large pilot plant is being designed, and,from the knowledge that is gradually being gained, still larger plants will be evoved which will be capable of producing millions of gallons of top-grade milk a week.

ANOTHER VARIETY OF PIKE IN RIDEAU DISTRICT?

Could it be that we have a new variety of pike in the Rideau District? A few days ago, a Mr. Coleman requested the Ottawa office of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests to identify a fish he had caught in the Mississippi Lake area.

Never having seen a fish like it before, and being unable to find any reference to its likeness in books at hand, and because of the condition of the fish, it was taken to Dr. William Sprules, Assistant Director of Conservation and Development Service, Department of Fisheries, Ottawa. After examination and consideration, the Doctor decided to fast freeze the fish and send it to Doctor W. B. Scott, Curator, Division of Icthyology and Herpetology, Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto. The following is Dr. Scott's report in part:

"I believe there is no doubt but that it is a mutant of the Northern Pike, "Esox Lucius." The only good write-up describing this varient, that I know of, is in "Northern Fishes," by Eddy and Surber, pages 188 and 189. In Wisconsin where this colour phase is apparently uncommon, it is found to breed true.

"I have had only a few scattered reports, one from Heming Lake, accompanied by a Kodacolor print. The colour of the photographed fish is precisely as you described for the Mississippi Lake specimen—i.e. 'deep blue on the back shading through lighter blue and grey to white on the belly. The fins, particularly the lower ones, are tinted red and orange'."

Mr. Coleman, who caught this fish, reports that it put up a much harder fight when hooked than any of the other fish (pike) taken in the same water.

The authors, Eddy and Surber, suggest that "Silver Pike" is an appropriate name, although it is sometimes called "Silver Muskellunge" by fishermen.

This variety has the same body shape as the Northern Pike, but has none of the usual colour or markings. The cheek and gill covers have scales only on the upper half like that of the muskie.

The contractor was in need of a new foreman, and an applicant appeared for an interview."

"I might give you a trial," said the contractor, "if I thought you could handle the work."

"Work?" said the applicant, reaching for his hat, "I thought you were looking for a foreman."

Frendlee Farm Chats

By Lillian Allison

It was fortunate I didn't have to write this column last week. I was feeling much too blue. In fact I'm so lonesome yet and miss the familiar sights and sounds which were becoming part of life around the farm. Things just aren't the same all because of a fatal accident.

It happened a week ago Sunday night. We'h had visitors for supper. It was shortly before 7.30 and all was calm and peaceful except for the almost continuous line of traffic that zipped by. Mrs. Guest and I were busily washing dishes and chattering away like a quilting bee. Harry and Mr. Guest were enjoying the comforts of two rocking chairs on the front veranda.

Suddenly the general hum was broken by a terrific bang. That's a flat tire, I noted unconsciously. But before I could speak Harry shouted, "There goes your big dog." I rushed out as fast as I possibly could and there was Cindy lying on the road above the garden fence. She was badly injured and died just as we reached her. It's pretty hard to see a dog one really likes breathe her last breath.

She had been over into the neighbour's field and was coming home when she was struck. At first when excited and call and whistle frantically until she was home again. But she crossed the road I used to get when I saw how smart she was I didn't worry any more. Time and again I've seen her go to the edge of the road, stop, look east and west then cross over like a well-trained child. She didn't chase cars or follow them and always proceeded so slowly with such practised caution I felt she was quite safe. But apparently that car on Sundy night was coming faster than she calculated.

I couldn't go to sleep that night. Every time I shut my eyes I could see Cindy. I saw her as I did every morning from the back kitchen window. As she was never untied until after breakfast I'd see her as soon as I came downstairs, lying in the doorway of her house with that pretty, big head and her two white paws sticking out.

I could see her as she lay in the barn door every night while Harry milked. She considered it her duty to guard the door and she almost dared a cow or heifer to stick its head inside.

I saw her as she'd come up beside me and shove her big head under my arm as a sign that she wanted me to pat her and tell her what a nice dog she was. She was getting to be a beautiful dog too.

When we first got her three months ago she wasn't too attractive, I admit. She had all her old hair which was coarse and dirty from having been shut up most of the winter. In fact, for a while as big wads of straggly hair gradually became loose I was hesitant to admit she was mine. But a few weeks ago I borrowed a curry-comb from the stable and in spare moments I combed out her coat. How she loved it too! Her new hair was sleek and shiny and as soft as a kitten's. Her big tail was clean and fluffy and her white breast was getting broad and full. I grew considerable each time someone in a passing car would point to her as she stood at attention in the yard. I was proud of my big dog.

And she was my big dog, too. Every time she'd bark at night Harry would say, "There's your big dog barking.' He"d point to the huge, muddy tracks on the veranda and remind me, "Look at the dirt your big dog left." When she was bad she was always mine. But she was a good dog most of the time.

Cindy was a splendid watch dog. Of coure, she wouldn't bite the worst thief in the world; St. Bernards are naturally friendly. But by her mere size and the sound of her "Woof, Woof" when she turned on the volume, people were frightened stiff of her. One man said he wouldn't go near her for a hundred dollars. Besides, she always warned us if there was anything unusual around.

We still miss Cindy. She was a constant companion. She followed Harry to the fields and never went out of his sight. She went with me to the garden and put her big feet on all the plants. She lay on the veranda and watched me through the screen door. She put her cold, wet nose against my hand or tried to lick my face in her enthusiasm to express her affection. And even yet I can see her in her house and hear her climb the veranda steps.

But Nature still abhors a vacuum. Yesterday Judy presented us with some brand new puppies. They are under the floor of the barn. We can't see them but we can hear them there. Surely she'll soon bring them out for our approval. I hope so, anyway.

Calling All Sportsmen

* O.W.A.A.

Can Ruffed Grouse Be Raised In Captivity?

The answer that I have always been given to that question has been "No!" and Dominion Wildlife Officer Bob Harris, an acknowledged expert on game birds can find no record of partridge that have been raised in captivity. It was, therefore, with considerable interest that I learned back in the spring that, while fighting a forest fire in the area of Torbolton Township, Carleton County, Ralph Smith, a local farmer, had come across and rescued a nest of ruffed grouse that would have been soon consumed by the fire. A good sportsman and lover of nature, Farmer Smith brought the nest to his home and placed it in the care of a bantam hen. In due course he found himself with eight young grouse or partridge and that they were more than he and the bantam could care for. At this point he contacted Wayne Robinson, Department of Lands and Forests, who in turn took over the young and placed them in the care of Jack Clark at his Black Rapids farm about ten miles to the south of Ottawa.

Jack Clark Has Made History

Well, that was back in the spring. Being curious as to how the experiment was working out I got in touch with Jack Clark and here is what he told me in a letter I received from him a day or so ago, Jack got the young birds, eight of them, when they were only a few days old. At the beginning he lost two from an unknown cause, but following this mishap the remainder of the clutch came along very well until on a rather cold evening in June when Jack's heat lamp gave out. In the morning only two were left alive. These to, however, have done splendidly and at the present time are about half grown and fairly tame. All of which is quite encouraging and seems to point to there being a distinct possibility that partridge could, given a few breaks, be raised in captivity. Chances are that Jack Clark might very well have still had six birds today but for hard luck with the heat lamp.

Hunters Readying For Approaching Season

Reminded that it won't be so long till the ducks start flying, when I stopped by to admire neighbour Harley Walsh's new decoys. Harley whittles his own and his black and blue bills, about fifty of them, looked mighty good to me. Quite something to see Harley go to work on a block of cedar with his axe, his only tool except for a heavy rasp—and the rasp is used only to finsh off the blocks.

I've got another shooting pal who is putting in spare time between fishing trips in working out a young Springer bitch that he hopes to have ready to shoot over this fall. Others might profitably follow this fellow's tactics and for several good reasons. To start off with, it is grossly unfair of anyone owning a hunting dog, I don't care what kind, to leave until opening day, taking it afield, and then expecting it to be in condition and to perform to their satisfaction. Conditioning a hunting dog for the real work to come requires a build-up of regular exercise and, just as important, that the dog be exercised where there is game so that

Designing Fellow

It was an army intelligence test which had to do with fitting pieces together in a sort of jigsaw puzzle manner to effect a series of definite pictorial designs. The usual score obtained in its working was 25; 50 was considered quite good. But one morning a quiet young recruit scored an incredible 100.

A special board was immediately convened to probe into the mental processes of this marvellous young man. But the proceeding's opened and closed with one question.

"What was your occupation before entering the army?" the soldier was asked.

"Wallpaper designer," the young man modestly replied.

"Is this hair grower any good?"

"Look, Mister, do you see this hair brush I'm using? Until some of this hair grower got spilled on it, it was a ping-pong paddle."

IN MEMORIAM

HARPER—In fond and loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Dena Harper, who passed away July 26, 1951.

She little thought when leaving home
That she would no more return.
That she so soon in death would sleep
And leave us here to mourn.
We do not know what pain she bore
We never saw her die.
We only know she passed away
And never said goodbye.

Ever remembered by Mr. and Mrs. Willis Paul.

Mrs. W. J. Bush Hostess At Auxiliary Meetng

Wednesday evening, Mrs. W. J. Bush was hostess to the Women's Missionary Society Auxiliary of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Miss Jean Morrison and Mrs. Neil Bush had charge of an interesting program. Following the devotional period they delighted the members with a interesting missionary dialogue depicting refugee or welcome and welfare work. Miss Morrison and Mrs. Clarence Shaver took part in the dialogue.

Mrs. Cornelius Paauw, a new member from Holland, gave an interesting talk in connection with overseas work in her homeland.

Mrs. Hugh Morrison, president, taking charge of the business period, discussed several phases of the work, referring to the excellent state of the finances.

Prayers were offered by Mrs. Donald C. MacDonald and Mrs. Ford Warner. The members joined in the singing of several hymns.

Before adjourning the hostess, Mrs. Bush served refreshments during the social period. She was assisted by Mrs. Neil Bush and Miss Jean Morrison.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the hostess, as well as to all who contributed to a successful meeting.

R. H. Milliken Speaker At Avonmore W.I.

Guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Avonmore Women's Institute held at the home of Mr. B. C. Lang, was R. H. Milliken, fieldman of Kraft Foods Limited, Newington, who had an interesting talk and showed an educational film on agriculture, entitled "All The Things We Want."

Mr. Milliken was thanked on behalf of the members by Mrs. Glyn Watkins, convenor of agriculture.

Motto of the meeting, which was largely attended was "What Canada Makes, Makes Canada." The roll was answered by "A Canadian Manufacturing Company and What it Manufacctures".

The members again decided to canvass the district on behalf of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Canvasser's were appointed.

BIRDSFOOT TREFOIL FOR PASTURE

Birdsfoot trefoil, especially the Broad-leaved type such as the Empire variety is proving to be very useful pasture legume, says F. S. Nowosad, Forage Crops Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. This legume can make its greatest contribution to pasture in many situations which are unfavourable to other commonly grown legumes. But, while trefoil has the ability to grow reasonably well on moderately acid, droughty, imperfectly drained soils, it should not be considered a "cure all" for soils or conditions where no other Birdsfoot trefoil, like any other legume, does best on fertile, well drained soils and readily responds to lime and mineral fertilizers if these are required.

There have been some unfavourable reports about birdsfoot trefoil, resulting as drawbacks to a more popular or general use of this crop. This has been largely because of— (1) Unfavourable publicity that this legume will grow in very wet situations, which in many cases can only grow canary grass; (2) Good stands have been expected in a short time and (3) Seed of recommended varieties has been costly and hard to obtain.

Since Birdsfoot trefoil has been widely tested, we now have some information on the above three points.

1. Birdsfoot trefoil can grow on land which is not sufficiently well drained for alfalfa, or where the soil is too droughty for good growth of Ladino clover. That is probably where the farmer would want to grow birdsfoot, for if alfalfa grows well there is no reason to change to trefoil. Since birdsfoot trefoil has a finer but not as deep a root system as alfalfa, it can often survive where the water table is too high for alfalfa. But as stated already, it will not grow on land which is flooded for any length of time.
2. It is true that it is difficult to get a good stand in a hurry. This is because this plant grows slower than alfalfa or red clover. It may be also because birdsfoot has been sown under much more adverse conditions than provided for other forage crops.
3. Quite often in the past, birdsfoot trefoil seed has been imported from Europe. This was not as hardy as the Empire or Viking variety developed in the New York State. It is possible too that a specific nodule-forming inoculum had not been used at the time of seeding. This is very necessary for good growth of birdsfoot trefoil.

If given any reasonable chance, birdsfoot trefoil is an excellent pasture elgume. It produces many fine stems which form a dense pasture sward under grazing. It is palatable and persistent under good management.

Empire variety of birdsfoot trefoil is the only one recommended at the present time. Last year Ontario produced 30,000 pounds of seed of this pasture legume.

Mother sought to effect an improvement in the deportment of the children by offering a reward each Saturday for the most obedient of the family during the week.

"Shucks, thats' not fair," young Oscar complained, "Daddy will win every time."

"Can you read and write?"

"I can write, not read."

"Write your name then," said the manager to the new job applicant.

The applicant took a pencil and scrawled on the page.

"I don't know," replied the applicant, "I told you I couldn't read."

HIDE GOOD UPHOLSTERY FROM SUN RAYS

There are ways to protect good upholstery and draperies from sticky stains and sunlight, and at the same time humour summertime laziness.

One woman hit upon a simple way to improvise slip covers. She uses striped bath towels. They make attractive, comfortable and protective covering for upholstered chairs.

She pulls one towel over the back of the chair, pinning it firmly all around and tucking it in where the back joins the seat. Another towel covers the seat, is pulled to the underside of the chair frame and thumbtacked in place.

Striped terry towelling is also available by the yard if you want to cut and hem strips to just the right length. These are easy to launder and need no ironing.

Best way to protect draperies in summer is to take them down, clean and store them. In their place hang curtains, panels or drapes that can be washed and will need very little ironing.

Some homemakers have used coloured or white sheets, trimmed with rick-rack for summer drapes.

A tip, if you're to use sheets for curtains or drapes: Allow for shrinkage in length, not width, or launder before you cut them.

Seersuckers and slubbed linen are also colourful, cool and easy to handle.

Ready-made plastic panels are the easiest to care for, if you like them. They come in pretty patterns and need only occassional wiping with a damp cloth.

FEWER WEEDS MORE GRASS, GOOD PASTURE

Pasture lands in one form or another comprise almost half the agricultural acreage in Ontario, according to the Field Crops Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Much of this land, unfortunately has deteriorated with thin sod, slow growth, low yields and invasion by such weeds as Ox-eye-Daisy, King Devil, Paint Brush, Blue Weed, and even thorn shrubs. Any significant improvement on these areas should have a marked influence on the total grazing available in Ontario.

Reclamation of these areas involves weed control, fertility, and clovers suitable to the location. If the land is tillable, these steps present no great difficulty. However, where steep slopes, poor drainage, or rocks prevent any tillage or even mowing the weeds, alternative measures must be taken.

Since weed themselves consume large amounts of fertility and interfere with the establishment of new grass, the first step must be directed toward removing weed competition. Good weed control can be obtained by spraying with 2-4-D. By using the broad jet type of nozzle it is possible to do this on any land on which it is possible to drive a tractor.

To get maximum results at least two treatments will be necessary, the first in late spring or early summer, the second early in September. Avoid spraying during periods of extreme drought and try to pick a calm day, as wind will cause uneven application of spray, particularly with the "broadjet" nozzles.

Control of most pasture weeds require from 12 to 1 ounces of 2 4-D acid per acre, the ester type usually being the most suitable. Reseeding to suitable grasses should follow weed eradication to retard soil erosion and reinfestation.

A man was standing outside a pawn shop examining the window display of banjos, saxophones, tubas, rifles, shotguns and the like, when the proprietor came to the door.

Man: Quite a bunch of stuff you've got there. Do you ever sell any of it?

Proprietor: Sure. Every week or so somebody comes in and buys a saxophone or tuba. Then a day or so later, a couple of his neighbours come in and buy shotguns.

Light Luggage

"Always ask for money in advance when people have luggage that is over-emotional," said the hotel manager to his new receptionist.

"Over-emotional?" she queried.

"Yes," came the reply. "Too easily moved."

WHAT ARE YOU WORTH?

For many years scientists valued the chemical content of the body at 98 cents. But now that atoms have come into their own man's worth has been revised considerably upward. Recently, an expert estimated that the atoms in the human body have an energy potential of 11,400,000 kilowatt hours per pound, valued at $570 millions. In other words, nowadays a 150-pound man drags down some $85½ billion. Feel any better?

Each American, according to Dr. John Q. Stewart of Princeton University, has about 3,000 tons of "social mass." This is the amount of material that has to be moved or manufactured to keep you going: 2,174 tons of soil to grow your food eighty tons of home, 125 tons of highway, two tons of railroad, and a few miscellaneous tons. In contrast, the Australian aborigine tips the scales at a measly 200 pounds of social weight. But don't feel superior: yours is not the kind you can throw around very well.

If you are an average American male you weigh about 160 pounds, making your weight in gold about $88,000. Assuming that you earn $5,000 a year over the span of your earning period until ritirement at 65, you will take home approximately $175,000—i. e., not once but twice your weight in gold.

And while you're figuring up what you're worth, don't forget to count your manners too. According to telegraph companies, you and others who send telegrams pay more than $10 million a year just to add the word "please" to those messages.

No Failure

The two tramps sat with their backs to an old oak tree. Before them was a rippling stream. The day was delightful, yet one of them looked disconsolate.

"You know, Jim," he mused, "this business of tramping your way through life is not what's it's cracked up to be. Think it over; nights on park benches or in a cold barn. Travelling on freight trains and always dodging the police. Being kicked from one town to another. Wondering where your next meal is coming from. Wandering, unwanted everywhere, sneered at by your fellow men...."

His voice trailed off as he sighed heavily. His companion shifted slightly.

"Well," said the second tramp, "If that's the way you feel, why don't you go and find yourself a job?"

The first sat up with a jerk.

"What?" he scowled. "And admit I'm a failure."

hunting interest be maintained. This shooter combines his training work with a bit of exploration for likely game cover to re-visit when the season opens. I'll wager that right now he has a pretty fair idea where the birds are and more power to him. More power to him particularly because he hunts with a dog, for hunting with a dog spells better conservation and better shooting sport for the gunner.

The third meeting of Finch Girls' Garden Club was held at the home of the leader, Miss Leila Nephew, who presided, assisted by Doris Duff, who recorded the minutes and read the minutes of the last meeing. The roll call was answered by the control of one insect by all members.

The next meeting will be held at the home of the president, Miss Jean MacMillan, on August 7th.

A discussion led to a decision on a name for the club. "Gardenettes" was chosen.

A discussion of the reference file was brought up. The leader demonstrated the canning of tomatoes.

The meeting was honoured by the presence of Miss M. McPhail, Home Economist, and the president of Finch W.I., Mrs. Donald Casselman, Mrs. Duff and Mrs. MacLean.

Army Worms Appear In Dundas County

Armyworms have made their appearance in Dundas County during the past two weeks. These insects when present in large numbers feed on oats, barley, corn and other crops, defoliating them. The caterpillars migrate by crawling from field to field stripping everything in their path.

When mature, the caterpillars are about 1½ inches long, greenish brown in colour with longitudinal stripes. They feed at night or in the late evenings. During the day they usually lie in a partly curled position under lumps of earth or other cover. They climb the plants to feed on leaves and frequently cut of the heads of grain. The insect is a brownish grey moth with a single white spot in the centre of each front wing.

Control

1. Poison Bran Bait: Bran, 25 lbs.; paris green, 1 lb.; molasses, 1 - 2 quarts; water, about 2½ gallons.

The molasses should be stirred into the water and this then mixed with poisoned bran until it resembles damp sawdust. The amounts given above will prepare sufficient bait to treat one acre.

1. Sprays: DDT (50% wettable powder), 3 to 4 quarts in at least 20 to 30 gallons of water per acre or DDT (25% emulsion concentrate), 3 qts.

3. Dusts: DDT (3%), 40 lbs. per acre or DDT (5%), 25 lbs. per acre.

When low volume weed sprayers are used for application, adjustments, (pressure, speed or nozzles) should be made so that a minimum of 30 gallons per acre will be delivered.

In general baits seem to be the most reliable method of control. The bait should be spread on fields in the evening and replaced as it dries cut, if the worms are moving from one field to another a furrow with the straight edge towards the crop should be protected and sprinkled with the poison bait on the floor of the furrow.

When feeding corn, the Armyworms seldom go down to the ground surface, remaining in the leaf sheath during the day. Thus poison baits may not be as effective in controlling them there as in spring grain. A DDT spray or dust applied so that some gets into the leaf sheaths should give effective control.

IN MEMORIAM

HELMER—In loving memory of a dear husband and father, John L. Helmer, who died August 6th, 1945.

There's an open gate
At the end of the road,
Through which each must go alone.
And there is a light we cannot see
Our Father claims His Own.
Beyond that gate our loved one
Finds happiness and rest
And there is comfort in the thought
That a loving Father knows best.

Ever remembered by wife and family.
