He spoke on the care of milk and stressed the fact if all milk sent to the cheese factories was the same quality as that taken in the home for use, the cheese makers would have less headache and the farmers more money in their pockets.

Here & There

Trends in our way of life have varied to a great extent during the past fifty years... possibly the greatest advances in mankind's history have occurred in this century. More of travel, communication and our eating habits in our humble opinion, head the list of changes towards our better way of life.

Looking back a few years... and fifty years is not so far back when you stop to think about it the automobile was hatched into something that at the time wasn't expected to be much more than a fad. Now they have become a necessity in most cases; trains move more swiftly, boats are larger, more luxurious and faster, planes are, we might say, "out of this world" and the tin can has replaced the hoghead, the crock and the damp hole under the house used to store pickles and fruits for winter.

Homes are equipped with the latest devices for claiming their fair share of the wages as well as keeping the little woman occupied learning to become a first class button-pusher. Even our clothing has taken a drastic... red flannels were the vogue not too long ago and a conical hat was admired for its warmth. A horse hauled the family to town... at the cost of a small bucket of oats and a little hay. Now it's a small tank of gas and a little oil... aided and abetted by insurance and the odd blow-out.

That old saying "grandpa would turn over in his grave" if he knew what we were doing today is true. The highest grandpa ever got (except for the odd party), was to the top of the hay mow to throw down the daily needs of his stock. Today's grandpa thinks nothing of taking a plane to London or wherever his purse permits.

But back to the tin can... it's the most fascinating of all and the most widely used item on the market today. That and its cohort the can opener, have revolutionized the world. Some people use more than others of course, but in a seven-day period, we'd be willing to bet that some portion of 50% of the meals come from a can. Except for the guy on a liquid diet and his comes from the can's partner in crime, the bottle.

Every week on television we learn there is a new addition... we've all had one for years and never realized it... "can't" you might call it. Personally, when we get to a meal... if there isn't a dozen eggs and a package of bacon around, we starve... or open a can!

Think it over... are you an addict? If you are, then you're a sick man!

During an eclipse of the moon, a young lady arrived at the observatory with her camera. She said that she wanted to take a picture of the moon when it would be entirely eclipsed. The astronomer in charge remarked that she wouldn't get much of a picture, but this didn't bother her in the least bit. "Oh, don't worry about that," she said, "I have a flash bulb attachment."

A television salesman had taken in a lot of used sets and was desperately trying to peddle some of them. "This set is in excellent condition," he reported to a prospective customer who had questioned him about one of them. "Why, it was owned by a little old lady with weak eyes."

A young lady met her maiden aunt for lunch one day. During the meal the aunt asked the girl to deposit a paycheck at the bank for her. On the way to the bank after lunch, a purse snatcher grabbed her pocketbook with the aunt's check in it.

Help, help," she screamed at a nearby cop. "That man has taken my aunt's pay—he's taken my aunt's pay!"

"OK, lady," said the policeman. "Cut out the pig latin and tell me exactly how it happened."

A wealthy New Yorker, in quest of an even wealthier widow, consulted a marriage broker. A candidate described as "a girl who looks like a picture" took the client's fancy, and the broker arranged for them to meet her at a corner table in a certain Broadway night spot.

The client winched as he spotted the woman, conspicuous by her cauliflower ears, a nose that resembled a bent fender and a hank of hair that fell over her head like a dangling particle.

"I thought," she scolded the go-between, "that you said she looked like a picture."

The broker shrugged, "Either you like Picasso or you don't."

HYBRID PULP TREES MATURE FASTER

An Ontario pulp and paper company's experiment with hybrid poplar trees gives hope of producing forests of pulpwood in one-sixth the time taken for black spruce, the prime pulp species. The tree being measured by a professional forester here is only seven years old but is already ten inches in diameter and 42 feet high. It is one of 40,000 hybrids growing on the 61-acre plantation on Manitoulin Island in Georgian Bay. Indications are that it will be possible to develop a tree that will reach maturity in 15 years. Black spruce takes from 50 to 100 years.

High School Variety Show Is Acclaimed

By Pat Sweeney

Thursday night a large crowd of 350 persons filled the High School Auditorium while the students of Iroquois High presented their "Annual Variety Show".

The programme opened with the choir singing, under the direction of Miss B. Disher, "Christ Was Born on Christmas Day", a German Carol "Silent Night", Franz Gruber; "Bells Are Ringing", a Sicilian Tune. The accompanist was Jean Barkley.

The Hula Hoopers — Anne Sweeney, Gayle Casselman, Gale Murphy, Alice Dickson, Camille Fisher and Shirley Johnston danced to the Hula Hoop Song. For their costumes they wore slacks, middys and sailor hats.

John Veenstra entertained with two Christmas Carols, "Deck The Halls" and "First Nowell", on his harmonica.

The High School Quartet sang a negro spiritual "Oh Lord I'm Tired". The Quartet members are: Marilyn Sweeney, Brian Hodgert, Carolyn Baker and Billy Miller.

The band played two selections under the direction of Mr. F. Booth.

A skit, "Shooting of Dan McGrew" with stars — Ralph

Link, bartender; Michael Knox as Dan McGrew; James Lockie, Doug Reynolds, Jack Veenstra, Gary Murphy, Gordon Fairbairn and Barbara Armstrong. Mr. G. Trivett and Mr. R. Desormeaux directed the skit.

A violin solo by Brian Hodgert, was very much enjoyed. He was accompanied by his mother.

Gwen Barkley played two numbers on her accordion.

The choir sang "Cockles and Mussels", an Irish Folk Song and "Joshua Fought the Battle of Jericho", a Negro spiritual, accompanied by Jean Barkley and under the direction of Miss B. Disher.

The tap dancers took the audience back to the days of "Davy Crockett". They were Cheryl Smith and Ronald Johnston.

The band again entertained with selections under the direction of Mr. F. Booth.

Gymnastic Display

The girls and boys combined, put on a terrific gymn display which held the crowd in suspense. The gymnastics were under the direction of "Gym Specialists", Mr. and Mrs. G. Simonetti.

The girls did mat work consisting of cart wheels, back bends, head stands, hand stands, the snail, walking back bend, elephant walk, double rolls, forward and backward rolls, and also jumping from the springboard over the horse.

The boys specialized in head and neck springs on the horse and from the spring board, pyramids, double rolls, forward flips, diving, etc. The gym work was closed with the "traditional" "Squash".

Jean and Lyle Barkley sang a duet, accompanied by Lyle with his guitar.

The picturesque scene was that of the "Umbrella Dance". The girls made sack dresses of "Caldwell" terry towels trimmed with flowers and big bows and sported ribbon trimmed umbrellas. The dance was done by Marilyn Sweeney, Carolyn Baker, Donna Baker, Jean Serviss, Pat Bray and Sharon Smith. The dance was under the direction of Mrs. G. Simonetti.

A trumpet solo by Vincent Danglefield was much enjoyed. He was accompanied by Miss M. Kaine.

Highlight of the evening went to the boys doing the "Can-Can". I'm sure the boys never had so much fun dancing! They sported colourful 'short' shirts, peasant blouses, coloured knee socks and wigs. The members of the newly invented Can-Can were Robert Gillard, Gary Parmer, Charles Stone, Gordon Foster, Bob Garret, Gary Garret, Donald Barkley and Gary Coleman.

The Quartet again entertained with a big hit—"Tom Dooby" accompanied by Lyle Barkley on the guitar. The quartet consisted of Marilyn Sweeney, Brian Hodgert, Carolyn Baker and Billy Miller. Miss Disher directed.

ANNE HIRST Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst:

After being a widow for five years I am thinking of marrying a man I've known a long while—but my three children, all married, are so angered by the idea they will not even meet him. They declare if I insist I shall never be welcome in their homes! I am financially independent, thank heaven, and though I am 54 I hold a good position.

"My husband was hospitalized for three years before he died. I paid the bills somehow, raised the children alone; I never accepted relief nor help from anybody. I had a time finding work that would let me cook their meals and be with them nights; I kept them in church, and sent them through high school where they were all honor students. A favorite aunt died, leaving me quite a bit of money, so things grew easier with the years.

"The man I am fond of is my own age and well-educated; he has a pleasant home, a car, a good business and money saved. Most important, he can give me the companionship I need so much; he is kindness itself, utterly unselfish, and eager to know and like my family.

"What do you think? Shall I keep on working, and live alone? I shouldn't need to ask anybody at all, but my mother always said we are never so wise that we can't question ourselves.

WHICH WAY?"

TOO YOUNG TO KNOW

* Many a woman your age is as vigorous and emotionally alert as when she was 40—yet to her children she is all mother, they see her as an old woman. They are shocked that she feels affection for any man, and longs to grow old with a contemporary beside her. Frankly, they feel a bit ashamed; they think her inclination to marry is little short of indecent.

Too Much Emphasis On Security?

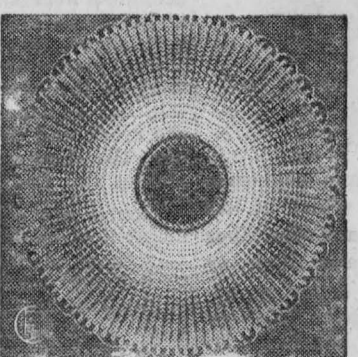

The Amish people, a Mennonite sect, have been here for a very long time. To most of us, the Amish are a quaint group whom we see now and then in the newsreels or the National Geographic driving their horses and buggies slowly to and from farm and marketplace. The men are all bearded and the women all bonneted.

But to their neighbors, the Amish are a law-abiding, God-fearing, industrious farm people who raise their children to respect their elders and to assume a responsibility for their relatives too old to work. In many ways, their way of life might be a pattern the rest of us would do well to follow.

But the Amish are now law-breakers, because America, in its emphasis on security, has transgressed a freedom they hold to be paramount. Recently an auctioneer in Canton, Ohio, sold off livestock seized from Amish farmers by the U.S. Government because the Amishmen refused to pay the Old Age and Survivors Insurance System levies.

The tax, they say, is against their religion. To pay tax is to admit that the Government has a responsibility for aged Amish, and to admit that is to deny their own responsibility and thus one of their strictest religious precepts. The records in the two counties where the Government seized 28 head of livestock from 15 Amish farmers and cash assets of 50 others show that no Amishman had ever sought public assistance of any kind.

Has this emphasis on security,

What is it?

Modern Etiquette

by Roberta Lee

Q. How can I vary the preparation of mayonnaise?

A. Mix with the plain mayonnaise a half cup of chili sauce, cooked tomato, or catsup. A little chopped celery or green pepper may be added if desired.

Q. How can I dry a fur neckpiece or coat that has become wet, without injuring the fur?

A. Do not dry it by the heat of a fire, as this causes the skin to become brittle and the hair to fall out. Shake the fur thoroughly to get out the moisture, then hang up to dry slowly.

touched only the Amish? No; farmers are fined for growing wheat without a Government say-so because other farmers want it that way in their search for security. Congress has permitted the labor law to be so written that men can be forced to join a labor union in order to hold a job.

The laws that require these things are not, it should be remembered, laws enacted to prevent evil or wrongdoing. It is not wrong, we think, for a man to have the freedom to work without having to join any association of other men in order to do so. It is not wrong for a farmer to grow wheat on his own farm for his own use. It is not wrong for the Amish to reject the idea of Government responsibility for their own aged members.

To the contrary. What is wrong is the growing emphasis in our society on security. The wrong comes about when, in the name of the alleged greater good of all, collective security is permitted to disregard or destroy individual rights or beliefs or freedoms.

Furthermore, it wrongs more than the individual. For as one man's freedom is lost, freedom for all men is diminished as well. And though security is one of man's highest aspirations, perhaps we had better remember that security without freedom is history's bitterest jest. And there is a point where over-emphasis on one can slowly, but inexorably, destroy the other.

"HELLO, YOUNG LOVERS . . ." — A new romantic team has come over the Hollywood horizon. They are Susan Kohner and John Saxon. Their tender romance is a theme in the forthcoming film, "The Big Fisherman."

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Skim milk, so necessary in fighting the Battle of the Bulge, has long been recognized as the best source of protein food we can take. And I do mean "food" even though milk in its natural state is a liquid. But do you know there is a variation in skim milk depending upon the breed of cow from which it comes? The higher the butterfat content of the whole milk the higher the non-fat solids it contains. High testing milk contains approximately 16% more protein and 8% more calcium than a quart of milk of the low-fat variety.

My goodness, doesn't it almost throw you when you think of the difference there is in farming now and yesterday. Years ago milk was milk and we were satisfied to let it go at that and asked no questions. We drank it raw, and some asses warm, just as it came from the cow. Pasteurization was little-known — and just a lot of fuss about nothing, so we thought. As for skim milk, that was something we fed to the pigs and poultry. Looking back I am sure most children built up a natural immunity to infection, otherwise how would they have survived? Here is a case in point. Among our herd cows was one Holstein — Katie. She was a good milker and appeared to be in particularly good condition, so it was always some of her milk that was saved for domestic use — and our children had milk at every meal. Then came government inspection of cows and the elimination of T.B. infected animals. We had two re-actors on the first test. One of them was fifteen-year-old Katie! It was quite a shock! A cow giving bacteria-infected milk and our children had been drinking it for years. If they had not built up their own immunity they must surely have contracted T.B. I might add, no one outside the family drank the milk as we were separating and selling churning cream.

That was the first and last time we had any re-actors in our herd. Later we sold fluid milk to a local dairy and never once had a sour can returned. And yet the only way we had of chilling the milk was by dropping the can into a tank of ice-cold water from the well. Then the local Health Unit came into being and before long farmers were told they must build milk houses, install electric milk-coolers . . . or else. A year before we left the farm we put in a $300 milk cooler. I doubt if we got our money's worth out of it. But we were thankful for small mercies. Rumors were afloat that all dairy farmers would eventually be compelled to adopt the no-handling method of milking and ship by tank. That would mean an expenditure of about $3,000 for special equipment. To many small dairy farmers the cost was beyond their means. Some went out of dairy cattle and raised beef instead. We, as you know, got out from under by selling the farm.

Yes, we sold milk when the only requirements were for cleanliness and a healthy herd. But all we got for our milk at first was $1.25 for an 80 lb. can. Now the price paid to farmers is, I believe, $4.60 a hundred. But with all the restrictions, deductions, expenditure and shut-offs it is actually much less. Far, far less than the PLAY SUIT — Chinese beauty Chen Ling models a sack play suit in London. The oriental print suit has elastic bands at top and bottom.

24¢ a quart the consumer pays at the door. So, tomorrow morning when you pick up your milk don't take it all for granted. Remember the work, and expense involved before the milk gets into the bottle—and then maybe you'll find that 24¢ easier to pay.

Well, while we are on the subject of dairy products how about margarine? Do you know there is another campaign for colour in the offing? Many women's organizations are agitating for the removal of colour restrictions, claiming that 7½ million hours during a six-month period are spent in Ontario homes just colouring margarine. And of all the messy jobs that's about the worst. Of course, there is an easy way to avoid it . . . buy butter.

However, with the cost of living so high, and so many wives and mothers putting up lunches, a lot of them just can't afford butter. So, if they are going to buy margarine anyway what's the sense of forcing them to take that unappetising white stuff? We prefer butter ourselves but I certainly don't criticize anyone for using margarine, nor do I object to eating it when I have to.

This war against colour crops up repeatedly and so far as I can see it's a losing battle. I doubt if the removal of the colour ban would increase the sales to any great extent. So I am all for the sale of yellow margarine and let people buy what they will. After all, colour is not the only thing that counts. You can tell margarine by its texture and flat flavor. Margarine and toast, and buttered toast are entirely different. So I say away with the colour ban and the messy job of kneading dabs of yellow into soft masses of goo. However, if and when we do get coloured margarine I'll still buy butter anyway.

Aquamarines Become Popular

Those clear, sea-green, semi-precious stones known as aquamarines have rocketed to popularity since the gift a few months ago to the Queen from the President of Brazil of a $30,000 aquamarine and diamond bracelet with a clip.

"The Queen was given the aquamarine because I found out that she loves it," Brazil's Ambassador in London, Senhor Assis de Chateaubriand, revealed. The bracelet and clip match perfectly a necklace given to the Queen by Brazil for her Coronation.

The aquamarine has always been one of the favourite gems of Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother. It has been poetically described as looking as though it came "direct from some mermaid's treasure-house in the depths of a summer sea."

Many of the largest specimens have originated from Brazil, but recently the sources of aquamarine there were reported to be rather low. In olden days it was worn "as an amulet and was known as the 'stone of safety.' It was also said to bring the wearer solace and comfort in time of stress and trouble. Throughout the centuries women have worn aquamarine to ensure happiness in marriage.

Tasty Licking

The meeting in New York's Henry Hudson Hotel last month was deadly serious, and to a reporter who had gotten into it by mistake, utterly bewildering. The sponsor was the Institute of Environmental Engineers and its purpose was to demonstrate, and discuss, their latest devices for creating the kind of temperatures and conditions that might be encountered, in say, outer space.

Wandering about, the reporter came to something called a Thermal-Test Chamber. It looked like an ordinary icebox but a card on its said it could create temperatures from 200 degrees Fahrenheit below zero to 400 above. "What do you keep in an icebox like that?" the reporter asked a benevolent environmental engineer.

"These, among other things," said the environmental engineer and handed the reporter what looked like an everyday Pop-sicle. It had an unmistakable taste of Scotch whisky.

"That's right," said the engineer beaming and helping himself to one, "it's frozen Scotch. We call it a 'Whiscicle.' Have another?"

The reporter said he didn't mind if he did. "Or maybe," said the engineer, "you'd rather try this one. Frozen champagne. Unfortunately we haven't licked the problem of bubbles yet."

The reporter didn't lick any problems that day, either. Just Whiscicles.

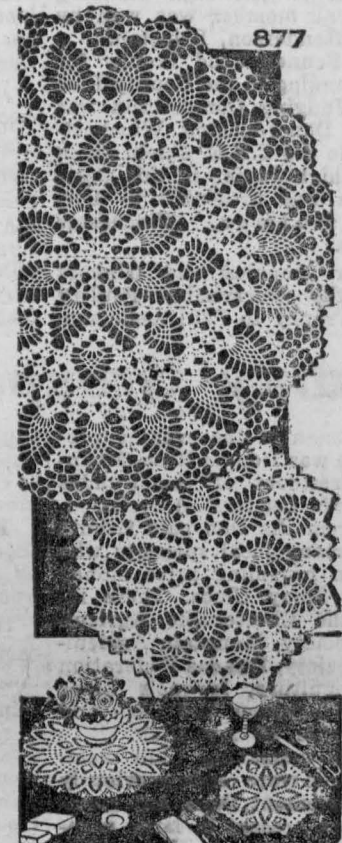

Pills Help Hearing

A simple pill which shows promise of helping many of the hard of hearing was reported last month by a specialist from the Ear, Eye, Nose and Throat Hospital in New Orleans. Called Arlidin, the drug has completely cured half the patients whose hearing complaints were blamed on poor blood circulation.

According to Dr. Wallace Rubin, a quarter of all hearing complaints are caused by blood shortages in the inner ear—but until now, doctors have lacked a drug to open up the tiny constricted blood vessels in the inner ear. When Dr. Rubin gave Arlidin to 75 patients who complained of hearing losses, buzzing sounds, and dizziness, however, 38 of them got considerable relief and all but five showed "significant hearing improvement." Even fewer failures, he suggested, could be achieved if patients were treated before lack of blood caused "irreversible" damage in their ears.

World's Oldest Living Things

Imagine a tree 331 feet high and 90 feet in circumference — a massive sequoia. This forest monster was felled in California in 1891, and was then described as one of the wonders of the world.

A section from this tree has just been put on exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History and naturalists are flocking to see it.

The section weighs nine tons, is 16 feet 5 inches in diameter inside the bark and it shows 1,342 annual rings, proving that the tiny seed from which the tree grew germinated as long ago as the year A.D. 550.

For the benefit of visitors, each century that the tree lived through is marked off by white figures on the section. This fabulous "log" has been carefully seasoned during the 67 years which have elapsed since the tree was felled.

Another name for this sequoia is the California redwood. Many years ago a section of another giant redwood was on view in a Yorkshire museum.

Some redwoods have attained an age of 3,000 years. The General Grant redwood in California was stated by a scientist some years ago to be the oldest living thing on earth. He estimated its age at 4,000 to 5,000 years and reported that its base was 107½ feet round and its height 267 feet.

Three years ago 1,500 fire fighters had to tackle forest blazes which spread so rapidly that they reached within a mile of the trees in California's Sequoia National Park.

A second twist: had the crash occurred seconds later, the jet would have hit the crowded passenger train broadside.

YOU'RE ENTIRELY WELCOME — Fairborn, Ohio, a town of 15,000 between Springfield and Dayton, has done away with straggling welcome signs from various clubs at the outskirts of the city. The Lions Club has erected a series of signs like the above which lump all the symbols together.

Thought Man-eater Was A Ghost

Not a sound came from the tents. But none of the thousand or so Indian and African workmen was asleep. They lay awake with pounding hearts and bated breath — for two man-eating lions were prowling among them.

Every night for the past few weeks the lions had visited the camp at Tsavo, where the men were building a bridge for the new railway line from Mombasa into the heart of Uganda. Each time, they carried a shrieking victim off into the jungle.

Watches were set and traps laid. But the lions eluded them. Now they were back again. The roaring from the jungle had grown louder as the lions neared the camp. Then it had stopped. And the workmen knew the two man-eaters were moving stealthily among the tents.

In the tense, nerve-racking silence, they waited. . . . Presently there came the agonized shriek that told them the night's victim had been selected, that they at least had another day to live.

Not until roll-call next morning was the man's identity established. By now nearly a hundred men had been lost. The morale of the remainder was beginning to crack.

Further progress in the construction work became impossible, so the men were sent back to the coast, leaving only a band of white hunters to fight the lions. Eventually, the man-eaters were shot and work was resumed.

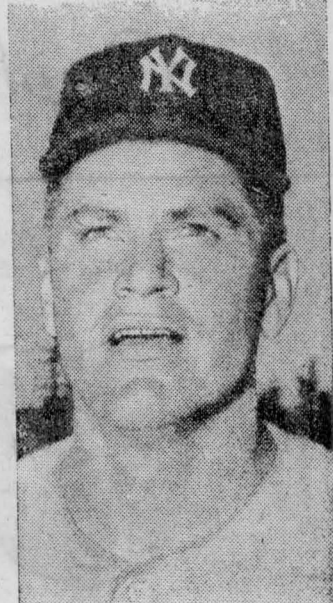

Even after it was opened, lions still caused considerable trouble up and down the new railway line, and were responsible for some very unusual messages between stations.

"Direct driver of two down to enter my yard very cautiously. Points locked up. No one can go out. Myself, sheds-man and porters all in office. Lion sitting before office door," ran one such message.

Later the same day, this station-master had to send a second message: "Extra urgent. Points-man surrounded by two lions. Has succeeded in climbing to top of telegraph pole near water tank. Immediate succour imperative."

In parts of Africa, man-eaters have at times been protected by a curious native belief that, after death, human souls can enter the bodies of wild animals. Lions are often believed to harbour the spirits of departed chiefs. For fear of offending the departed, no steps are taken, therefore, to kill such man-eaters.

One of the most notorious man-eaters of the century, who gloried in the name of Chiengi Charlie, was able to exact a fearful toll of human lives through this belief. And, to the natives of the district where he operated, his first appearance was certainly ominously timed.

A powerful and ruthless chief in the Chiengi district of Northern Rhodesia announced on his death-bed that he would return after his death in the guise of a lion. He would then single out his enemies one by one for punishment.

By a curious coincidence, a man-eater did move into the district shortly after his death, and chose as his first two victims men who had been among the late chief's bitterest opponents. It was more than all the arguments in the world could do to convince the natives that the chief had not remained true to his word. Obviously, he had returned to carry out his threatened plans!

For several months, Chiengi endured a reign of terror, during which the man-eater entered villages and exacted a terrible toll of lives. But, so strong was their superstitious belief, the natives made no efforts to kill or even to frustrate it. At first, the raids were made at night. But, after a time, the lion became so bold that it would walk among the huts in broad daylight to select his victims.

When, however, Chiengi Charlie brought along two more lions and started to instruct them in the gentle art of man-eating, the natives decided they had had enough. Having gone unmolested for so long, he had lost much of his cunning.

Trap guns were erected along the main paths leading to a village he had been raiding regularly and he was soon shot dead. Nothing more was heard of his "apprentices."

A local official once had a miraculous escape when a lion came in through the bedroom window of his bungalow and dragged him out of bed. His shouts brought servants running to his aid. But he had locked his door before going to bed and they couldn't get in.

With great presence of mind, however, he suggested they should fire through the door following his directions. Unfortunately, he was hit in the shoulder. But the noise of the firing scared the lion, which let go off him and jumped out of the window.

Uses Reward To Buy A Wife

When 23-year-old ex-cattle boy Joseph Nthonyanya picked up a huge diamond in a mine at Dutoitspan, South Africa, it meant that he could go home to Basutoland and buy a wife!

Joseph's find was quite accidental. His boss sent him to fetch a tool, lying at the end of a gallery. As he swung his lamp and went whistling on his way, his eyes suddenly spotted a glittering object.

It looked "rather nice," he thought, so he picked it up and showed it to his cronies. They gasped with amazement but Joseph was unmoved. With less than six months' service in the mines behind him, he'd never seen a diamond: his pals might be joking.

But when he took the stone to his boss it proved to be a magnificent 108½ carat diamond. And, because of his honesty, Joseph received a reward of $1,500.

"I want to go home, back to village in Basutoland, and buy good wife," he told his manager. Permission was granted. So now, Josepa is back in his cattle boy haunts, with $1,500 to spend on getting a bride.

A Case of TV-Fright

"When I was a boy I was stage-struck. Later on I became film-struck. So far I have never been television-struck." This was Sir Laurence Olivier, "the world's greatest English-speaking actor," only last summer. When he failed to get financial backing for his projected film version of "Macbeth," however, he reconsidered. "I thought to myself: 'Ah, ah — this needs a bit of thinking about,'" said Sir Laurence last month. "Obviously I am not suddenly going to shoot up again in popularity as a film star. I'm 51 now. . . . So with 'Macbeth' off, I thought I'd taste something new. Just a taste of TV. Try it here. Try it in New York."

Sir Laurence's first taste of TV, a 70-minute production of Ibsen's tragedy "John Gabriel Borkman" over the British commercial network last month, was neither sweet nor particularly pungent. The play, notably bleak, cast him as a ruined turn-of-the-century industrialist, living in grim isolation with his embittered wife and sisten-in-law (beautifully played by Irene Worth and Pamela Brown.) He spoke his first line 30 minutes after the show began, much of the rest of the time he merely hovered in the background while the women bickered. The reviews were mixed. The show "aroused expectations of brilliance not altogether satisfied," said The Times. "Disappointment without dishonor," was The Daily Sketch's reaction. "It was not his greatest performance, but it was a compelling one, powerful, immaculate, and to my eyes without any mistakes," wrote U.S. critic John Crosby who had jetted to London to see the show.

Olivier, who had already confessed himself "nervous, terribly nervous," commented simply: "TV is a most exhausting medium. One must concentrate much more than on stage. There is no audience reaction. I shall not do it often."

However, New York was still likely to get a look at him. Under negotiation arrangements for him to come over this spring to star in CBS's adaptation of "The Moon and Sixpence." — from NEWSWEEK.

Face The Music

Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee defended country music with a counterblast at Billy Rose, who had labeled it "obscene junk."

Clement said that Rose once wrote a song called "Does the Spearmint Lose Its Flavor on the Bedpost Overnight?"

That revelation ought to impeach Rose's standing as an authority on lyrics of delicate sensitivity.

The truth is that silly songs have been with us for a long time. Maybe today's rock and roll is the worst yet but it didn't come utterly without warning.

Before the "Witch Doctor" there was "Bing Bang Bongo. I Don't Want to Leave the Congo."

Only a few years ago there was "Mairzy Doats," and still further back there was "The Hut Sut Song" and "Three Little Fishes."

In fact, these belong to the youth of those who are parents of today's youth. You who scorn "Ting-tang-walla-walla-bing-bang" — don't you remember crooning "Down in the bottom

Composer Leo McCarey has been surprised to find a song he wrote as a satire on rock 'n' roll becoming a hit with the rock 'n' roll set.

Even this has happened before — songs which had satirical meaning in their original setting becoming popular with the very group satirized.

Examples include "Wonderbar" from "Kiss Me Kate" and "Heart" from "Damn Yankees," both of which were intended to satirize sentimentality but delighted the "cornball" set. . . . Yes, anything goes — anything that doesn't make sense. Florida Times-Union.

He Gave Trains A Sporting Chance

When he was younger, Sir Winston Churchill (who was 84 on November 30th) travelled more widely than any other statesman and even today he retains his zest for wandering. Years ago he was sometimes so busy that he frequently missed trains, boats and planes.

When someone asked him to explain why this happened, his eyes twinkled as he replied: "Well, my boy, I'm a sporting man and I always give them a fair chance to get away."

This story of Sir Winston's earlier travelling days came to mind when I read his book, "My Early Life — a Roving Commission" which has been re-issued and is as readable today as it was when it was first published.

Another story of his travels goes back to the occasion when he was invited to dine with Lord Leitrim, chairman of the Tralee-Listowel-Ballybunion Railway. The train on which he was travelling was painfully slow.

After it had stopped in one station without apparent reason for half an hour Mr. (as he was then) Churchill grew impatient, called a porter and asked what could be done about getting a move on.

The porter said he was helpless. Mr. Churchill revealed his identity and told him about his appointment with the chairman of the line. Said the porter: "Your honor, it would not make any difference — not even if you were the son of the stationmaster himself!"

Drive Carefully

If you carelessly run into a sharp Point... you get hurt. The Ontario Department of Transport is adapting this simple principle to legislate more safety into our streets and highways. The penalty that drivers will draw for not keeping clear of the points is... suspension of driving privileges. It's going to hurt, plenty.

The Points System comes into operation early next year. The theory is simple. Every time a driver fouls the law, he gets a black mark on his record. The demerits are graded according to the public danger involved in the offence. When the total penalty points exceed a certain figure, in a stated period, the boom comes down and the gasoline companies lose another customer for the time being.

"Dictatorship... double punishment... infringement of civil rights" are some of the terms that the Transport Department can expect, in volume, as the licence suspensions mount. Every new rule for the benefit of society as a whole is liable to uncover a minority who feel they have been victimized. The new traffic laws, in the view of some pedlars, are contrary to the basic principles of free enterprise. Some men will resist compulsory quarantine, after exposure to smallpox or plague, on the grounds that it is an affront to their right of personal liberty.

Drivers who are not able, or not willing, to conform to a minimum standard of safe behaviour are to be restrained from using the roads. As protection for the many, not as a punishment for the few. They will be treated for what they are... a very real threat to Society. A threat that is translated into 1200 coffins every year in Ontario.

The Ontario Safety League asks responsible people everywhere to support the Points System, because of the new promise of safety it offers. It will remove from the road many drivers who have no moral right to be on it. And it should have a steady influence on everyone who handles a steering wheel. The Government is to be congratulated for introducing this drastic measure. It will be unpalatable to many, and hard to administer. Like castor oil. But some disorders need strong medicine.

BEST OF 1958

Although 1958 is not yet over, Cashbox, a trade magazine, for juke-box operators has published the results of their annual poll, which lists the biggest singers and songs of 1958. This is something I look forward to every year so I had my choices made previous to publication of the results of the poll. I managed to have a majority correct. Here, then, are the biggest and best of 1958:

Best Male Vocalist—Elvis Presley. I picked Elvis, who beat out Pat Boone by over 10,000 votes. Perry Como was third.

Best Female Vocalist—Connie Francis. I picked Connie or Doris Day, who finished third, behind Patti Page.

Best R'n R Male Singer—Chuck Berry. I picked Elvis again.

Best R'n R Female Singer—Laverne Baker. I picked Connie Francis or Jo Ann Campbell.

Best Group—Everly Brothers. Who could guess wrong on this? The Platters and Four Lads followed in second and third positions respectively.

Best Instrumental Group—Billy Vaughn. My choice.

Most Promising New Vocalist—Conway Twitty. I picked him in my first column almost two months ago.

Best Country Male Singer—Johnny Cash. I picked Ray Price.

Best Country Female Singer—Kitty Wells. She was my choice; she has held this position for several years running.

Best Song of 1958—"Nel Blu De Pinto De Blu" by Domenico Modugno. It had to be; it was the only song to hold the number one position nationally for seven weeks. It's All in the Game and Patricia were second and third respectively, with the Everly Bros. in fourth and fifth positions with "All I Have to Do is Dream" and "Bird Dog".

TIME TO PLANT TULIPS

Bulb catalogs remind you that now is the time to plant tulips. However, there are so many kinds and varieties that the beginning gardener is often at loss to know what to plant. As suggestions, the accompanying Garden Graph shows the early tulips, both single and double, which bloom in early May, or in a sheltered sunny spot, in late April.

Except for the species, the tulips shown are the earliest to bloom. The single early tulips have the most brilliant colorings, and range in height from 10 to 16 inches. The flowers of some varieties are fragrant.

One of the best known varieties of the single early kinds is Keizerskroon. Its flower is a bright crimson-scarlet in color, edged with a broad band of yellow.

The early double is entirely different from the early single. In fact, its flower resembles a small peony, as shown in the Garden Graph. The flowers of the doubles last quite a bit longer than do the singles.

The double early tulips do not grow as tall as the single types, nor are their colors as clear and vivid as the singles.

In growing tulips it is of the utmost importance to plant healthy bulbs of the best quality. Although tulips grow best in a sunny location, they do well in partial shade. They prefer a light, friable soil and want it well drained.

RCAF Sqdr. Ldr. Scott E. Alexander stands beside one of the rock cairns which he found in the Arctic's King William Land and which he believes to have been built by men of the ill-fated expedition of Sir John Franklin. Since the expedition, consisting of 105 men, disappeared in the Arctic wastes 109 years ago, many mementoes of their journeys have been picked up by Eskimos, but the eventual fate of the men was never decided. Swine Marketing Good

Charles W. McInnis, president of the Ontario Hog Producers Association, told delegates to the Midwestern Swine Marketing Conference program that the average prices paid in Ontario for hogs have increased in relation to previous spreads between western and eastern Canada by three dollars per hog. He said that this was due to salesmanship and competition, "which were previously smothered".

Mr. McInnis spoke to the conference today in Ames, Iowa, after coming from a convention of the Consumers Co-operative Association in Kansas City, Kansas, on December 4, where he was a guest speaker. He told delegates at both meetings the story of the hog marketing plan in Ontario and how it developed because of a need for producers to obtain bargaining power on the market place. "Our hog plan has gone a long way toward correcting very unethical and undesirable practices in livestock marketing which were not only unfair to producers but detrimental to our free enterprise system," he stated. For the future, "new methods of production, marketing and retailing will be presenting new challenges," Mr. McInnis said. "It has been suggested that we slaughter all hogs and sell hog carcasses to the trade. Such a step would be a forward move and certainly increase our bargaining position."

Mr. McInnis gave credit to Canada's hog grading system for improving the quality of hogs, and claimed that Canadian consumption of hogs would be much less than at present, as well as prices being lower, if it weren't for the grading system.

Ontario Department of Transport announces your

POINT SYSTEM

Effective February 1, 1959

to make Ontario's streets and highways safer

The Point System is designed to protect pedestrians and the millions of careful motorists from the small minority of negligent drivers who abuse the privilege of operating a motor vehicle.

Protects good drivers—corrects bad drivers. The good drivers will be safer than ever before. Forgetful motorists will be encouraged to improve their driving habits.

Proof of the effectiveness of the Point System in reducing accidents is provided by its success in other provinces and in the United States.

It is designed to save lives—including yours.

How the POINT SYSTEM works

Points will be added to the driving record of motorists upon conviction for offences as listed below.

12 points within a 2-year period will bring licence suspension for 3 months. An additional 12 point accumulation within a 1-year period will bring 6 months' suspension.

A driver with 6 points will be advised of his record and asked to improve his driving. At 9 points the motorist will be asked to attend an interview and show cause why his driving privilege should not be suspended. He may be placed on probation or have his licence suspended if his attitude reflects irresponsibility.

Points are deducted from the record 2 years after the date of conviction. After a period of suspension, a motorist will begin with no points against his driving record. Each motorist will receive a folder describing the Point System in detail when applying for his 1959 Driver's Licence.

POINT SYSTEM SCALE

POINTS	VIOLATION	POINTS	VIOLATION	POINTS	VIOLATION
12	Criminal negligence involving the use of motor vehicle	5	Exceeding speed limit by 30 m.p.h. or more	2	Improper turns
12	Driving while intoxicated	3	Exceeding speed limit by more than 10 m.p.h. and less than 30 m.p.h.	2	Failing to signal
12	Driving while ability to drive is impaired	3	Failing to yield right-of-way	2	Improper driving where highway divided into lanes
12	Obtaining licence by misrepresentation	3	Failing to obey a stop sign or signal-light	2	Failing to stop for school bus
	Upon conviction for any of the above offences, suspension is mandatory for at least 3 months	3	Failing to report an accident	2	Unnecessary slow driving
9	Failing to stop at scene of accident	2	Exceeding speed limit by 10 m.p.h. or under	2	Following too closely
5	Careless driving	2	Improper passing	2	Improper passing of street car
5	Racing	2	Failing to share road	2	Improper opening of vehicle door
				2	Pedestrian cross-over violation
				2	Any other driving offence when vehicle in motion

HOUSE PLANTS IN WATER

People who live in over-heated apartments, or the busy business woman with little time to fuss with plants, will find that those which thrive in water alone can be useful in providing decorative greenness indoors.

The Chinese evergreen is one of the handsomest and most satisfactory house plants for growing in water alone. As a matter of fact, it will grow in water or soil.

The decorative foliage of the Chinese evergreen is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph. This plant is sometimes called the east-iron plant because it does not require either soil or sunlight; its roots do well in glass, copper or crockery receptacles. Not infrequently it will produce blooms when growing in water.

Nephytis is another good indoor plant with aquatic tendencies. It is not fussy about atmospheric conditions and will grow well in either water or soil.

The plant produces distinctive arrow-shaped leaves on a rather woody stem. Bright light or shade make little difference to this plant, for it will flourish under either condition.

Kemptville Report

LET'S TALK ABOUT GROUSE
By J. B. Dawson, Biologist

The Ruffed Grouse, or "partidge" as he is known to many sportsmen, is a spectacular game bird. Wary and elusive, the grouse is more than a match for most gunners, and to bag a day's limit of grouse on the wing is an accomplishment.

Grouse hunting on a warm, golden October afternoon is a pleasant and rewarding experience. Put together a man, dog and gun—the soft rustle of frost-painted leaves, golden tamaracs—the ever-anticipated roar of a grouse, thundering from some sun-drenched thicket or vine-covered hedgerow—a good clean wing-shot—man that's living!

It seems to us that many sportsmen are missing a great deal of good hunting and general outdoor pleasure. This past autumn we encountered only a handful of grouse hunters; along the back roads, cars of hunters were conspicuous by their absence; grouse hunting pressure was very low.

Some may argue that birds were too scarce to warrant much effort. This may have been true for some localized areas, but in general, grouse populations appear to have been far from poor. During the deer hunt in November, we checked over 1,000 hunters, many of whom stated that they had not seen as many birds in a good many years. (Why grouse are often seen in abundance while one is carrying a big game rifle has not been satisfactorily explained to this writer yet!)

It's true that grouse have not been plentiful during the past few years and we have, on occasion, heard disgruntled sportsmen advocating shorter, or closed seasons for grouse. Past experience, however, has shown that these measures make little difference to grouse numbers. Grouse are cyclic and their periodic increases and declines have been studied for a good many years; there just isn't much we can do about it. In Michigan, study areas were set up and some were intensively hunted, others not hunted at all. This didn't make much difference. Hunted plots had populations which equalled non-hunted areas. Most states have found that closed or shortened seasons just don't pay off. While we were on a recent trip to New York State, game managers told us that although there were over 500,000 licensed small game hunters in the state, the Division of Game considered that grouse was one of the most under-harvested small game species!

Most northern states now provide long seasons to provide the grouse hunter with as many opportunities to go afield as possible. Why not, if the birds can stand it? Michigan lengthened their grouse season from 21 to 41 days in 1952, and aren't the least bit sorry they did so.

Even when populations are low, grouse can be safely harvested. Did you realize that the average age of most small game species, including grouse, is less than one year! Hard to believe? Well, consider what would happen if two pairs from each grouse family survived to raise broods the next year: the grouse population would double! This just doesn't happen, and many factors combine to prevent us being knee-deep in grouse! If the hunter doesn't take a few, something else will.

We aren't saying that grouse can't be over hunted, but this doesn't happen very often, and never over large areas under present hunting conditions.

So—whether plentiful or scarce, we hope that the sportsman will enjoy grouse hunting year after year. What?—You still think overhunting causes low populations?—Brother you're a lot better shot than I am!

No Such Animal As Truthful Man Say Experts

Do you consider yourself a truthful person? Psychologists tell us that the average person tells at least three untruths a day, or more than 1,000 a year, reports Stanley S. Jacobs in the current issue of the Star Weekly. But, with most of us, it's not a case of out and out dishonesty.

A Good Driver?

Masters of a trade do not feel they have to advertise their supremacy on every occasion. A heavyweight champion does not set upon a man who beats him to a parking spot. The professional poker player expects to be bluffed out sometimes when he has the better hand. Great musicians have been known to listen to the bagpipes with every appearance of polite interest.

Similarly, a first class driver does not feel a need to be out in front all the time. He does not seek the limelight, because there is no advantage or attraction in doing so. He has the relaxed satisfaction of having extra competence, that needs no display.

The essence of good driving, points out the Ontario Safety League, is inconspicuous efficiency. And the key word is "inconspicuous". Everything that attracts undue attention to the man at the wheel is bad driving. Competition has no place in good highway driving. There are no world champions. There is plenty of room at the top for everyone.

The bulk of these prevarications rate as "harmless", "polite" or even "socially useful", according to some of the experts who conduct extensive research into lying—and why we do it.

Says one of them—"We don't condone lying or try to judge what is 'permissible' falsehood and what is vicious. Actually, from a moral viewpoint any lying is wrong but it's tough to avoid!"

Every age group is guilty of "polite" or "prestige" prevarication and this fascinating Star Weekly article delves into the interesting reasons which give rise to our varying standards of honesty.

No Such Animal As Truthful Man Say Experts

Do you consider yourself a truthful person? Psychologists tell us that the average person tells at least three untruths a day, or more than 1,000 a year, reports Stanley S. Jacobs in the current issue of the Star Weekly. But, with most of us, it's not a case of out and out dishonesty.

You'll always be remembered when you give electrical presents because they bring lasting service and pleasure. With so many wonderful new electric appliances to choose from you'll have no trouble at all pleasing everyone on your Christmas list. Modern electric appliances are handsomely styled for today's carefree living. They're easy to use and cost so little to operate. There are no finer or more thoughtful gifts to help your family and friends "live better electrically"—the safe, clean, modern way.

ORGANIZING
EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN

In accordance with instructions from the annual meeting of the Ontario Hog Producers Co-operative, the board of directors has set up an educational committee which is now laying plans for a campaign with a view to informing them more completely on the hog marketing plan and its aims and methods, as set up under the Ontario farm marketing act. The committee members are Ben Steers of Simcoe county and Clare Curtin, of Victoria county. They will shortly lay before the board of directors a plan for the board's approval. It is the intention to make provision for organizing study groups in the counties to study all phases of producer marketing and the legislation under which producer marketing boards are set up, and the conditions under which they operate. It is also planned to make a more extensive use of both press and radio for informing producers on the basic principles of producer marketing.

Said President McInnis of the hog marketing co-operative — "our directors, who attended the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, were much encouraged with respect to the progress of farm marketing possibilities and with the fine support which is being

REGAINED FREEDOM

Addressing the Napanee Concentrated Milk Producers' Association recently, Chas. McInnis, president of the Ontario Hog Producers Co-operative, said, among other things, that producers have now regained the freedom they lost 25 years ago when they failed to organize for producer marketing and permitted the trade to gain control of milk trucking the livestock trucking routes, and the trucking and marketing of farm produce. More use should be made, he said, of the provisions of the milk industry act and the farm marketing act, which enable farmers to collectively become business men and to market their own products in a business-like way. He said that dairymen had shown concern over surplus problems. But at the present time, said Mr. McInnis, the surplus of dairy production comprised only two percent of this year's total production. Such a percentage of surplus, he said, was not even a safe reserve in the dairy industry. He felt that if surpluses were under control of producers, they would not be facing threats of lower prices. "The fine marketing legislation which has been provided by our provincial government can be useful only to the extent that our producers use it," said Mr. McInnis, "to handle the marketing of our own products and of surpluses which may arise." "Powerful interests are attempting, through court action and other means to keep the freedom of collective marketing away from the producers. The freedom to be able to do this is vital to the agricultural community and to the welfare of the farming industry as a whole."

TO ADDRESS AMERICAN
ORGANIZATIONS

American livestock organizations have for some time displayed considerable interest in the hog marketing plan now in operation in Ontario. Invitations have been extended to President Charles W. McInnis, of the hog marketing co-operative, to speak to the Consumers Co-operative Association in Kansas City on December 4th and to the Mid-West Swine Marketing Conference Program at Ames, Iowa December 5th. During 1957 and 1958 several delegations from the United States have visited the hog producers' agency's headquarters and sales offices in Toronto for a study of the system of marketing used by the Marketing Board.

GOOD SAMARITAN LANDS IN JAIL

When Martin Koch of Willowdale, Ont., was given a ticket for speeding at 41 mph after being trapped by police radar equipment, he decided to be a good Samaritan to fellow motorists. He had this sign lettered and showed it to motorists passing the spot where the police trap was set. But police took a critical view of Mr. Koch's behaviour and took him into custody and are considering laying a charge of obstructing.

difficulties, it is an extremely bad idea. Keep windshield, windows, mirrors and headlights clean. This will be particularly important in the bad-visibility weather ahead of us, notes the Ontario Safety League.

2. The best way to neutralize the extra dangers of winter driving, in the opinion of the Ontario Safety League, is to go to Florida for four months. The next best thing is to remember that you cannot operate with the same efficiency in conditions of snow, rain or fog. Neither can your tires, brakes or lights. Equal safety is possible in all circumstances, if drivers adjust to poor conditions by using less speed, and more care.

3. Partygoers who delude themselves that they can drive equally well after a few drinks, are merely indulging, says the Ontario Safety League, in wishful thinking.

4. Everyone tries to avoid accidents. The trouble arises, points out the Ontario Safety League, when they don't try.
