Mr., Mrs. G. McPherson Mark Silver Wedding Honoured at Elma

A surprise gathering of about fifty immediate neighbours and relatives met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Graham McPherson, Elma, on Friday evening to extend congratulations and good wishes on their Silver Wedding Anniversary.

During the evening the following address on behalf of those present was read by Mrs. Egerton Barkley:

Dear Gladys and Graham:

It is with th e deepest feeling of pleasure that we, a few of your intimate friends, together with members of your family, have gathered here this evening to honour you.

We are happy to have the opportunity of congratulating you on the occasion of your Silver Anniversary. We all feel that it is an honour indeed to have a couple such as you in our community. Your interest and willingness to help in all church affairs and community activities should be an inspiration to all of us.

Both of you have the ability to carry out whatever you are called upon to do. In your quiet way you always seem to be there when needed most.

We all hope and pray that you may be spared to celebrate many more happy anniversaries. In the hustle and bustle of daily living we are apt to lose sight of the things which matter most. You have set us an example of how to enjoy the best things in life, namely, the blessings and comfort of a happy Christian home and the love and respect of family and friends.

As a token of this love and respect we ask you to accept these gifts and may you find enjoyment in their use. May they serve to remind you of this evening when we met here:

To greet you on this special day
That means so much to you,
With five-and-twenty happy years
Now passing in review;
And then to wish you all Life's best
As future years unfold;
To bring still greater happiness
As Silver turns to Gold.

Mrs. Don and Mrs. Melvin Dillabough made the presentation of a trilight floor lamp and a matching smoking stand.

Mr. McPherson, on behalf of himself and Mrs. McPherson, expressed his thanks and all joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Two very fine and appropriate solos were rendered by Mrs. Bernice Barkley after which pictures were taken of Mr. and Mrs. McPherson.

Immediately following a dainty lunch a nicely decorated wedding cake was served by the hostesses.

A pleasant evening was brought to a close by the Rev. Mr. Bowering expressing his congratulations and wishing them many more years of happiness.

Irwin Cross in Hospital Trampled by Horse

Irwin Cross, well-known Maple Ridge farmer, is hospital today with a broken leg, after being trampled by a horse early last Thursday evening, at his farm 4 miles west of Chesterville.

Mr. Cross was about to unharness one of two horses that had been used in the fields during the day. On approaching the horse, without saying anything, Mr. Cross was suddenly knocked down and both legs were severely trampled and crushed by the enraged animal which was apparently frightened.

Mr. Claude Bilow, who was at the scene of the accident, helped the injured man to the house and Dr. Howard Justus, Chesterville, was called. Later, Mr. Cross was removed to the Ottawa Civic Hospital where it was discovered that both legs were badly crushed and the left one broken. At present he is progressing favourably, but will remain in hospital for a few days until doctors are certain his legs will heal correctly.

Cadets Home Interesting Summer At Army Camp

Six students from CHS have returned home here after spending the past eight weeks at Camp Ipperwash on Lake Huron. They are John Durant, Eivind Klingvall, Brian Gilbert, Douglas Black, Earl Johnston and Donald Brownlee. The boys had a busy summer. Training included the usual field exercises and leadership training.

A couple of boys arrived home with abbreviated crew hair cuts that raised envious remarks from some of their fellows. So much so that one of the newly-returned cadets turned to Dad for a solution and Dad demonstrated a hidden talent for cutting hair.

Truce Officers from Area

The war in Indo-China may be over but much remains to be done in that troubled country. Canada has been named as one of the countries to act on the peace commission that will see to the rehabilitation and settlement of the terms of the peace instrument.

Chesterville and district enters the far-away picture with the announcement that Major K. D. McQuaig, 38, at present with the No. 25 Field Dressing Station in Korea, will be the permanent medical officer for the Canadian delegation. "Mickey" McQuaig is the husband of the former Phoebe L. Graham, a sister of the editor of this paper. The McQuaigs have been in Winnipeg for the past year. Major McQuaig joined the 25th Canadian Field Dressing Station in Korea, in April of this year.

Col. R. J. Nodwell, Hillsburg, will be in charge of medical facilities for the commission. Col. Nodwell spent his youthful years on a farm at Hillsburg, Ont., and had as playmates the twin daughters of the Publisher of the Record, Mr. G. C. Lacey. "Bob" was a member of Varsity of the University of Toronto in the same years the Lacey daughters were in that institution of higher learning.

One of the other administration officers to be posted to Indo-China is an officer from Kemptville, Maj. James G. McMurdo.

The Record joins their many friends in extending these officers every success in their new duties.

OPINIONS . . .

Ours and Others

A Dampening Effect

The appearance of the black and white police car on our streets has signalled a decided change in driving habits of some of our citizens. A very marked decrease in the number of "gun 'er, zip, squeal" specialists can be laid directly to the dampening effect of the "Holstein" car and its long-needed mobility.

Council were rightly concerned in the matter of putting the car on the village streets. Appeals had been made to alleged traffic offenders to little avail, Constable Hunsburger had warned and asked but not too much attention had been paid. The OPP car was finally procured for a trial period to determine its ability to slow up and control the elements of traffic that have shown a fine disdain for normal traffic rules.

The police car costs the village six cents a mile and a heated garage in winter. No other charges. If it is to be used after the trial period, the car would be on a yearly contract basis. When we consider that a neighbouring municipality pays 15 cents a mile for the hire of a private car for the constable, the OPP auto is a bargain with two-way radio thrown in.

Some Planning Called for Now

Last week the first sods were turned to start the $600,000,000 St. Lawrence Power and Seaway Project. By early next spring it is expected to have a great labour force working on the project.

Now is the time for the village council to examine the future and decide what the Seaway will mean to Chesterville, especially for the next six years. In that period a labour force of thousands will be in Eastern Ontario. Re-location of whole communities will follow the progress of the work and a percentage of the labour and displaced homeowners will be looking for a community to let down their roots.

Communities such as Chesterville, only eighteen miles from the Front, are bound to feel the impact of dislocation. Eighteen miles is only a puddle-jump for commuting workers these days and there is little doubt permanent workers will spend the rest of their lives on the Seaway. Projected townsites will not necessarily appeal to all the persons moved out of the way of the rising waters.

Council should consider seriously some presentation to these prospectime homeowners to make Chesterville appeal as a new hometown. Tax relief on new homes for builders, trailer parks with public utilities laid in and areas defined for permanent parking, a survey made of available land for building purposes, facilities in our town that would appeal to small industry—these are but a few of the problems that need to be considered.

The Seaway has begun. It has taken nearly fifty years to reach this point. From now on little time remains to hook on the bandwagon as it travels by. It is to be hoped Chesterville will not be asleep before the last van rolls. Planning is called for and council and its members are the logical ones to make the first move.

Farmers Urged to Protect Stored Grain

With drought conditions likely to result in lower yields, the Ontario Department of Agriculture, through its extension services, is advising farmers to protect their crop against the ravages of stored grain insects.

An extension bulletin from the Ontario Agricultural College, issued in response to many enquiries from Ontario farmers, recommends the thorough cleaning of the granary before threshing the crop as as the first step.

O.A.C. officials urge that after the empty bin has been thoroughly cleaned, the walls and floors be sprayed iwth insecticide.

"While DDT has been used for this purpose, it is preferable to use materials that are less toxic to man and animal such as lindane or methoxychlor," say college officials. It is suggested that the ceilings walls and floor be sprayed to the point of runoff (about 1 gallon to 1,000 square feet) with one of the following:

1. 25 per cent lindane wettable powder 2 pounds in 5 gallons of water.
2. 50 per cent methoxychlor wettable powder one pound in 5 gallons of water.
3. 50 per cent DDT wettable powder one pound in 5 gallons of water.
4. 25 per cent emulsion one quart in 5 gallons of water.

The above rates makes a spray of approximately one per cent.

Coal oil or fuel and coal oil mixed are satisfactory for bins where grain for milling is not stored. Care must be taken to guard against fire if these materials are used.

Attention is also drawn to a new method of treating grain by means of a wheat protectant before or at the time the wheat is binned. The protectant contains pyrethrum and piperonyl butoxide, two chemicals poisonous to insects but not poisonous to grain or animals. It may be added to grain without affecting it for seed or milling. Although the name implies its use for wheat only it may be used on all types of grain.

FRENDLEE FARM CHATS

By Lillian Allison

There have been a lot of man-hours, and woman-hours too, wasted in this world by folks who were trying to answer a very familiar question: "If you were marooned on a desert island what books would you like to have along?" Well, people have, after long consideration, chosen everything from the Bible to Robinson Crusoe, from Shakespeare t o a cook book, from a book on common diseases to a book of jokes.

Now I've never spent much time figuring out what books I'd like but I think when I packed my toothbrush and pyjamas for a stay on a South Sea isle I'd tuck in a few road maps. For few things, I'm sure, are more fascinating than a collection of maps dotted with towns, cities and lakes which are connected by lines of various colour and thickness. I couldn't get along without all the free maps that share a cupboard with the catalogues.

Take the other day, for instance. I'd been hearing a great deal about a conference that was being held at a place with the unspellable name of Lake Couchiching but where it was located I couldn't say. So I dug out one of those road maps.

It seemed reasonable to believe that a place with a name like that would be in some of the resort areas of the province. So I glanced around Peterborough, Gravenhurst, and Algonquin Park. I found Lake Scugog, Opeong Lake, Mississagua Lake, Catchecoma Lake but Couchiching always evaded me. Finally I got the index of place names down in the corner. And there it was right beside Orillia. Now had it not been for a road map I'd have never known where that conference was held.

Just let somebody mention that her sister's nephew's daughter teaches school at a place called Osceola and immediately I'm off for a road map to locate the little hamlet. I look to se where Cousin hamlet. I look to see where Cousin and where Uncle Mortimer goes to hunt.

And supposing an ad in a magazine states that John de Jung, of Mitz, Ont., has collie puppies, born heelers, for sale. Out comes the road map to find out where they are. If I read that William Overton and Sons of Roseacre Farm, Woodford, Ont., paid $9,000 for a Shorthorn cow, I immediately look to see where in Ontario a man can make money like that.

I don't stick to Ontario, though. Through the years our collection of maps has come to include all of Canada and most of the U.S.A. They're all fascinating too. I've spent hours figuring out trips to places I'll probably never see. For instance, I've found that I could motor to Minneapolis, Minn., and back without covering the same ground twice, going by North Bay and returning by Chicago. And by adding up the mileages on the map I found one way would only be a few miles farther than the other.

There's a red road now north of Quebec City that leads up through lakes and mountains to places like Chicoutimi, Arvida, Kenogami and Shipshaw Dam. I wonder if we could go some time. Malartic, Rouyn and Noranda appeal to me too and I see there's a road up through the Laurentians leading to them.

Of course the roads I like the best are not the big, red, dual highways. What's interesting about driving along a road that was bulldozed through acres of pasture and corn? And where is the excitement in driving through city after city with their similar hotels, stores. factories and fields of tiny houses? I like roads that wind their way through hills and bush. I like hairpin turns and curves that let you see your back bumper occasionally. I like to drive lake shores, to follow rivers, to watch the sun drop behind hills. The Alaska Highway is the road I'd like to travel.

And I like the side roads too. I've spent hours trying to chart a course to Toronto via the back concessions. In fact, I thought I had it all mapped out once and we tried it. But we got hopelessly lost before we were 50 miles from home and when we arrived in a mudhole which was some farmer's barnyard we thought we'd wasted enough time so we headed for No. 2 Highway with its road signs.

Road maps are worth their weight in gold. They show us the vastness of our province, our nation. They arouse our curiosity to see what the country is like along Highway No. 28, how long it would take to drive to Winnipeg, how people live near Sault Ste. Marie. They while away the long winter evenings for many an armchair traveller like me. I'm sure I could use them on a desert island too if ever I should happen to be marooned there.

Back from the Dead

The early explorations of the Health League Artificial Respiration Committee created an uproar in some circles. The committee was formed not to teach methods of artificial respiration (this is being done satisfactorily by other organizations) but to study the potentialities and the "whys" of artificial respiration. The com'mittee found itself in a field that was and still is rather awesome and mysterious. In fact, some of the findings (which now are taken for granted) seemed in the beginning almost occult, and were therefore resisted by the kind of people who are happy in the belief that human life and death is as simple as 2 plus 2 equal 4.

It had been generally known that artificial respiration could often revive a victim of drowning or shock when other signs of life were present. The Health League Committee opened a door into a mysterious area by its collection and presentation of undeniable evidence that artificial respiration could do no more than that. It could revive people who were literally dead by every test known to medical science. In other words, people whose lives could have been saved had often been permitted to die unnecessarily because of a mistaken belief that artificial repiration was useless without the presence of signs of life. When these findings were first broadcast, there was some pooh-poohing; it was expected. However, there was no denying the concrete evidence, and today most medical men recognize that life can be revived even after "death" in many cases if there is a certain amount of patience and doggedness in the administration of artificial respiration. There is still a great deal of exploration and public education needed, and this is the present function of the artizcial respiration committee.

Another phenomenon brought to attention by the studies of the committee was laryngeal spasm. A large number of so-called "drowning" victims are found to have not a drop of water in their lungs. At one time this was considered a rare occurence and an indication of foul play. There is at least one case on record of a man who would have been charged with the murder of his wife and children, if one of the children had not been revived. The man had driven off a pier into deep water with his wife and children, and had managed to escape through a window. When police found no water in the wife's lungs they were prepared to charge the man with murdering her before driving off the pier, but the statement of the child who was later revived, plus the awakening knowledge of the fact of the laryngeal spasm, made it evident that the occurrence was entirely accidental. It is not known how many innocent persons may have gone to the gallows because of a misinterpretation of laryngeal spasm.

QUESTION:

"If a drowning victim has laryngeal spasm, can he be revived by artificial respiration? What causes laryngeal spasm? Is it very common in drowning?"

ANSWER:

Laryngeal spasm does occur in a certain percentage of drownings according to observations made by Banting and others in Toronto. When this does occur artificial respiration may not be successful unless the airway is cleared or the spasm relieved. Physicians are aware of the possibility of spasm and can deal with it. Unfortunately they may not arrive at the scene of the accident in time. The spasm is said to be reflex in nature. It is not known how common it is. Artificial respiration in any case offers the only hope of saving life.

New Wrinkle for Crow Shooters

Blinds and neutral coloured clothing have long been part of of the serious crow shooter's strategy and wily as crows are, this is as it should be. This wariness is in fact one of the fascinations of crow shooting as a between-seasons sport and I am quick to respect anyone who can consistently go out and bag a few of the scoundrels. A friend of mine,G rant Campbell, despite the wailin g and gnashing of teeth from some of our local "balance of nature boys," continues to wage war on these predators and very successfully too. The other day, following a bout with the hand traps, we got to talking over anti-crow tactics and he let us in on his latest device for luring crows within range of his pump.

Better Than A Blind

Using a blind presupposes the shooter has a spot all picked out ahead of time in an area frequented by crows, or constructing one on a fly-way or near a roost. No matter how carefully constructed, there is always the possibility that the hunter's eager upturned face will act as a giveaway to his hiding place. Grant now pretty well dispenses with a blind and, instead, tops off his hunting garb with an army surplus "sniper's mask," made from camouflaged netting. With this rig and using only such natural cover as may be handy, crows can be called into range, with the added advantage that the hunter has much greater freedom of movement to shift from one shooting stand to another. Although I've never considered myself any great crow caller, I tried out one of these masks almost in my own back yard and was amazed at the number of crows that I shortly had wheeling overhead.

Useful Addition to the Duck Shooter's Esuipment

I'm going to give one of the snipers' masks a go in the duck blind when the season rolls around. If it works for crows, it should be good for waterfowl too.

Has His Hands Full

Picture Peter Peterson—if you can—another friend of mine, and his amiable spouse; and amiable she must be with a litter of ten, I counted them, Irish water spaniels ensconsed in Pete's gun room. Gun room is a fancy name for an outdoor enthusiast's rainy weather indoor retreat, like my own and ours is also a well disordered household, suffers from the infiltration of the gentler sex. Sundry items of sewing and other feminine activity are evident. The addition of the ten baby water spaniels and their straw-filled pen really gives it a homey touch.

Irishman Is Little Known Breed

Irish water spaniels are not too well known in eastern Canada and it is perhays a pity, since they come very close to being the ideal dual purpose gun dog if such is possible. First and foremost, of course, this spaniel is a water dog and I was amazed, though only one month old, how closely this litter resembled their parents, of which they are almost exact replicas in minature, complete to the close-knit curly coats. It is this curly coat, not so unlike that of the Chesapeake retriever, that acts like

Bullet in Head For Three Days

A 64-year-old handyman walked around for three days with a bullet in his head because he didn't want to "get into trouble" for having accidentally shot himself with a home-made revolver finally sought medical aid and was placed under arrest.

Roman Hilewitz was taken to Kings County Hospital where surgeons removed a .38 calibre bullet from his temple. Police booked him on charges of carrying a concealed weapon, but emphasized that they would leave the determination of the bizarre situation to the court.

For more than a year, Hilewitz explained to police, he amused himself during lonely evenings by constructing a revolver from bits of scrap metal, wood and plastic that he came across during his daytime duties as an odd-job man.

Finally he finished the weapon to his own satisfaction. It had a plastic handle from a toy gun, a wooden barrel and various pieces of aluminum, brass and nickel in the mechanism. It was just the size to handle a .38 calibre bullet.

He had such a bullet—a 35-year-old souvenir of his service during World War I. He fitted it into place and, with a manufacturers curiosity, peered down the barrel to see how it fitted.

The weapon went off and penetrated the right side of his head, lodging in his temple.

For three nights and two days Hilewitz tried to medicate himself, afraid to seek a doctor's help for fear that he had done something wrong.

Finally, he could bear the pain no longer and called on Dr. Max Silberman. Dr. Silberman recognized the by-then infected wound as one inflicted by a bullet and notified police.

"Wiggle Test" Clue To Film's Reception

The likes and dislikes of children—as far as movies are concerned, anyway—are best determined by wiggles rather than words. Working on this theory, the film library of the Motion Picture Association of America, has devised the "wiggle test" for selecting pictures to be shown at the children's Saturday matinees at neighbourhood movie theatres.

As children invariably answer "yes" when asked outright, whether they enjoyed a movie, the wiggle test enables library observers to gauge the actual reactions of the small fry to selected films.

According to Mrs. Marjorie Granger Dawson, chairman of the film library, "we let the boys and girls have the last word. Unaware of what they're there for, they come to a preview and do the final picking."

As the children view the movie selected, two adult observers watch and listen carefully, drawing zigzag lines on charts. These charts list the varying degrees of interest, active participation, close interest, passive acceptance, boredom, restlessness and open revolt.

Results of the tests show that most children prefer adventure, action and scenes of lively happenings. "Movies must move — and fast — for children,' says Mrs. Dawson.

Didn't Have a Number So Couldn't Run

A man whom nobody knew tried to runin the British Empire Games held recently in Vancouver.

The unknown, said to be a recently arrived immigrant, clad in green shorts and white shirt in regulation fashion, lined up at the start. If he had had the foresight to pin on a number, he might have got away with it.

Officials asked him "Where's your number?" They didn't ask "whats your number?"

The would-be marathoner was halted then and there. He became indignant. The nhe threw himself on the ground and pounded it with his hands. He rolled about and turned backward somersaults.

Officials patted him gently on the back and persuaded him he just couldn't get into the marathon. He then was led from the field.

District Teacher Attending Special Course At Queen's University

A district teacher will be at Queen's University, Kingston, from August 16th to 27th, attending the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation Course in School Administration and Supervision.

He is Duncan Ferguson, of Nation Valley School. Seventy-five teachers from forty-two centres throughout the Province of Ontario are enrolled. The staff of instructors is drawn entirely from the ranks of the Federation membership and all are outstanding principals or experts in supervision.

A Federation official, commenting on the special course said, "Noteworthy is the fact that the teachers are paying the entire cost of this course themselves—no government assistance has been given or requested." Teachers on the course pay all their own transportation and living expenses and their Federation has budgeted $3,000 to cover the remainder of the expense.

Until a year ago, Ontario teachers aspiring to be principals had no course of instruction available to them for advance preparation. Then the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation, representing the Province's 4,800 men grade teachers and principals in public schools, stepped in with their answer—a two week course in School Administration and Supervision.

Now in the second year, the course is still described as "an experiment" but enrollment figures and approval of education authorities indicate that next year the term "experiment" will be dropped.

During recent years the Federation has frequently stated its concern over the lowering of teacher qualifications in Ontario. This course, then, is tangible evidence of the Federations' intention to do more than talk about teacher training.

TV-EQUIPPED CAR

Ontario Provincial Police are certain they have seen everything now. Not long ago they stopped a car for a routine check at Victoria Harbour. Installed in the centre of the dashboard was a 10-inch television screen. On the roof of the car was a two-foot extension aerial. One more part was needed to put the set in working order.

Police took a long, unbelieving look at the set, and ordered it removed. Television in cars is forbidden in Ontario.

In Dartford, Eng., six men broke into a toy factory and made off with 700 teddy bears.

Saving money... and writing cheques

A bank offers you two types of deposit account, Savings and Current.

If your main purpose is to save, to accumulate funds, it's good to have a Savings account.

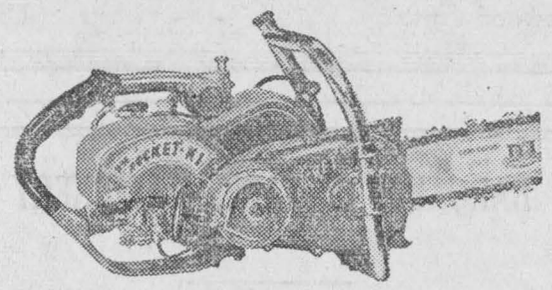

If you write cheques frequently, you will like the many advantages of a Current account.

The money you leave in a Savings account earns interest, and your bank book gives you an up-to-date, continuing record of your financial progress. If your funds are active, with frequent deposits and withdrawals, a Current account provides a special service; a monthly statement, together with your cancelled cheques—useful as receipts and a ready reference for budgeting, bookkeeping and other purposes.

Nominating Convention To Be Held At Finch Arena

Members of Stormont Liberal Association Monday night voted to hold a delegated nomination convention at Finch Arena on September 7th to find a candidate to contest a Federal by-election caused by the resignation of Transport Minister Chevrier.

Such conventions have been open for the past 20 years. Monday night's decision means that a fixed number of delegates, representing the riding will vote at the nomination meeting.

Date of the byelection is expected to be some time in October.

The seat became vacant with Mr. Chevrier's resignation from the government last July to become president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority.

Sixty-eight members of the 80-man executive attended the meeting.

Clocks will go as they are set; but man, irregular man, is never constant, never certain.—Otway.

$800 DAMAGE TO CAR IN WINCHESTER CRASH

A late model car driven by an Ottawa army officer was badly damaged when it left Winchester's main street Monday night, plowed through a steel pipe guard rail into a five-foot ditch and crashed into a cement culvert.

The driver and lone occupant of the vehicle, Capt. Jas. W. Baldwin, Ottawa, was unscathed. He reurned to Ottawa by taxi following the accident. Damage to the car was estimated at $800.

Chief Constable Gilbert Raistrick, Winchester, investigated.

The accident occurred on the paved county road that runs through Winchester. Baldwin told police he was driving to Petawawa Military Camp.

The car left the road and plunged into the right hand ditch. It was coming out o f the ditch again when the right side of the car crashed into the culvert. A piece of steel pipe guard railing was driven through the right side of the windshield and speared into the right front seat from the force of the crash.

He forgot that a bit of wood preservative, applied at little cost when the fence was put in, would have saved him the cost of new posts now.

In the telephone business, as around your own home, we find it's better to do the job right in the first place and then look after it. It's the best way we know to avoid heavy repair and replacement costs, to save expense and give you most service for your money.

That's why we treat telephone poles against rot; why we keep our trucks clean and in good repair; why we put up exchanges and offices to last.

It's common sense if we are to keep our costs down—and the price of your telephone service low.

If you would like to get useful information on the preservative treatment of wood we suggest you write Forest Products Laboratories of Canada, Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources, Ottawa.

WARNS EARTH TO GO EASY

The third International Congress of Star Gazers, Palm Readers and Students of Things Unseen closed recently after hearing a warning to the world not to throw its weight around.

Awful things happen when it does, said Dr. Raphael van Eeche, a dental surgeon from Brussels. He declared before the group, meeting in Sorrento, Italy, that troop movements generally disturb the world's equilibrium, and added:

"If the Russians were to attack Europe and march toward the Congo, they would move the axis of the earth so much that Moscow would become the North Pole and Australia the South Pole."

Crowding of Poultry Breeds Cannibalism

One of the most undesirable habits that often develops in a flock of hens is cannibalism. This trait is more prevalent in flocks which are confined past the brooding stage because of adverse weather conditions or lack of range, says R. H. McMillan, Poultry Commissioner, Alberta Department of Agriculture.

Cannibalism may range in severity from a little harmless pulling of feathers and toe picking to the more serious head, wing, tail and vent picking. Vent picking often ends in disembowling the bird with subsequent death. Cannibalism is more common among the light breeds, but it may start at any age in any breed.

Overcrowding, overheating, poor ventilation, lack of water, lack of exercise and excess light are the most common causes of cannibalism in poultry. Smearing the backs and wings of a large number of birds, including those which are bleeding, with pine tar or a commercial "stop-pick" compound will discourage this vice, at least temporarily. Painting the windows and light bulbs in the poultry house red to reduce the light may also reduce cannibalism.

Nutritional deficiencies are often associated with cannibalism. Adding or increasing oats in the ration has had beneficial results and extra salt is often used by some poultrymen. This latter can be dangerous, however, and is not often recommended.

Beak guards and debeaking are effective, but are recommended only as a last resort.

Good flock management is an important "must" in controlling cannibalism in poultry. Avoid overcrowding—provide ample range, hopper space and feed, waterers and lots of fresh water. Keep the building well ventilated so that the birds have fresh air at all times and do not become overheated.

OUTDOOR ROUNDUP—

a protector against cold when retrieving ducks. To some people contemplating the purchase of a gun dog, the thick curly coat might present a mental hazard and whilst admittedly it a catcher of burs and will ice-up in freezing weather if the dog is hunted in full coat, clipping down to a close curl all over the body eliminates most of the trouble and yet the dog is protected enough for all hunting purposes.

A Good All-Rounder

Although thought of mainly as a waterfowler's hunting companion, the Irishman has over and over again proven himself adaptable to the needs of the upland gunner and will flush and retrieve on a par with any of the other spaniels. Takes to training well and appears to take pride in polishing his own performance. Every bit as satisfactory as a household companion, he is gentle and gay of disposition and readily adaptable to any environment.

Volcanoes May Vary With Phases of Moon

New Zealand's volcanoes may vary in activity with the moon's phases, according to scientists who have been studying them.

The most active New Zealand peak, 7,515-foot Mount Nguaruhoe, has been erupting for two months. The periods of greatest activity, when lava has been hurled skyward and new flows have coursed down the mountainside, have coincided with the new moon, the period when the moon exerts the greatest pull on the earth.

Study of the chief periods of activity in the last 10 years supports the theory that phases of the moon influence the eruptions. There have ben eruptions at other times, but the chief upheavals have mostly been at either new or full moon.

Before lava reaches the crater of a volcano it is a molten mass in the bowels of the earth. It is thought possible it may be subject to tides through the movement of the moon, in the same manner as a large body of water.

KNOCK DOWN BUNGALOW —DIDN'T CONFORM

News comes from Hamilton, Ont., that Saltfleet Township authorities demolished a 2½-room cottage with a bulldozer because it did not conform to building regulations. The action left Mr. and Mrs. Lary McNea and their 21-month-old daughter homeless.

Building inspector Harold Barry commented:

"McNea moved the house here from Barton Township and didn't even apply for a permit. He was warned several times that the building didn't conform to regulations but he ignored the warnigs."

Oil-from-Coal Plant To Open in South Africa

The Union of South Africa has successfully combined German and American experiments for extracting oil from coal and will begin operation of the world's biggest oil-from-coal extraction plant by the end of this year.

The estimated annual output of the plant is 76,000,000 gallons of liquid fuels, mainly gasoline. This is equivalent to one-eigth of the Union's annual consumption all of which is now imported.

Although the Union is fabulously lucky in its resources of gold, diamonds and uranium, it has not yet discovered oil beneath the empty veld. But the Union is compensated by being endowed with great coal reserves.

The Department of Mines estimates proved reserves at 75 billion tons. Because the coal is near the surface and native labour is cheap, the cost of mining is about 70 cents a ton, compared with a minimum of $4.20 in the United States.

The new extraction plant is situated at Coalbrook, Orange Free State, on a vast coalfield near the great water reservoir of the Vaal River. It is a state-owned concern called the South African Coal, Oil and Gas Corporation.

This will be a new industrial and it will save the country an immense amount in foreign exchange.

"Whooper's" Nesting Grounds Uncovered

Bilologists have uncovered one of the most frustrating secrets of the bird world: the summer nesting grounds of some of the almost extinct whooping cranes.

But, the Canadian wildlife service, which discovered the secret, is keeping it.

For years, wildlife experts have been following the bird for thousands of miles across northern Canada. Each time it has ended in a wild crane chase.

But recently, six of the birds, including young, were spotted from a helicopter in the 17,300 square mile Wood Buffalo National Park, straddling the border of northern Alberta and the Northwest Territories.

The canes—only 24 are known to exist in the world—were seen by wildlife experts who were surveying the park's buffalo population. W. W. Mair, chief of the service, said the exact location of the nesting ground is known but it won't be revealed for fear the birds might be disturbed.

Biologists say the discovery will enable wildlife experts to help the propogation of the whoopers.

The latest discovery of the birds' nesting ground is the first in Canada since 1922 when one was found at Kerrobert, about 100 miles southwest of Saskatoon.

The whooping crane, so-named for its loud trumpeting call that can be heard for three miles on a good day, once darkened the skies of the lower Mississippi Valley and Northern Canada by its numbers. Through the years its population has diminished to a point where now the bird's preservation is of concern to wildlife departments of both Canada and the United States.

The crane, the tallest of North America's migratory birds, stands four feet high and has a wing spread of seven feet. In flight, its long neck and beanstalk legs are completely outstretched. Its body is white, its wingtips black with red markings and its crown and cheeks are bald.

When the first whooping crane inventory was started in 1938, only 18 birds were counted at the Arkansas waterfowl refuge in Texas. The number increased from 21 to 24 during the past year.

Each spring the flock flies north across Oklahoma, over the salt plains of Kansas, into the stubble fields and on the sand bars of Nebraska's Platte River, across the Dakotas and on into the farming districts of Saskatchewan.

There the migratory trail ends. Biologists have been unable to keep an orderly tab on the birds' movements.

In 1948 a team of U.S. wildlife officials attempted to follow the whoopers by airplane but over Saskatchewan the birds gave the experts the slip.

For weeks after the cranes were reported seen in widely scattered areas. Eleven were reported near Weyburn, Sask., 60 miles south of Regina. Two were believed nesting at Flin Flon, on the Manitoba-Saskatchewan border. Two more were spotted 30 miles north of Saskatoon and another two in the northwestern corner of Alberta.

The next year, three pairs were reported nesting along the western boundary of Prince Albert National Park in northern Saskatchewan.

In 1950, biologists were elated over the birth of a whooper in the Arkansas refuge, the first crane born in captivity. It disappeared a few days later.

Then in 1952, a new nesting ground was reported in the marshes north of Great Slave Lake.

Last November F. W. Lahrman, field worker with the Saskatchewan Museum of Natural History, obtained a widely publicized photo of three whoopers taking off at Francis Lake, 125 miles southwest of Regina.

This year, as usual, the birds have been reported over wide areas.

Officials estimate that from 1939 to 1953 a total of 57 young were born. However, in the same period, 53 cranes were lost, many of them victims of hunters who couldn't resist the temptation of lining up such a huge bird in their sights.

Tips on Glassware

Most housewives content themselevs with inexpensive glassware, and that's alright. An authority on tableware has come right out and declared you can achieve glamourous effects with dimestore purchases as the town's richest hostess does with her costly imported crystal. But there are a few simple rules to follow:

1. Judge clear glassware against a dark sleeve or purse a few feet away from the display for a better idea how it will look at home.
2. Be sure your glassware is well proportioned, functional and balanced.
3. Buy double-duty glassware. Put milk, iced drinks, etc. in tumblers; fruit and pudding in sherbert glasses.
4. Thin k about heat-resistant ovenware which can go to the table as sparkling dishes.
5. Store stemware upright on the shelf with different sizes in rows from front to back, so they'll be easy to get at.

Silks will last longer if soap is never applied to them directly when they are washed. Wash them in sudsy water and use a gentle squeezing motion to wash out the dirt. Rinse well in lukewarm water several times.

Before storing new lumber for any length of time, give the ends a coat of shellac to prevent them from splitting.

Steinburg—Burns

Miss Gertrude Anne Burns, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Burns, became the bride of Mr. Lyle Steinburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ford Steinburg, Morewood, Ont., in a ceremony at two o'clock Saturday afternoon in the rectory of Our Lady of Fatima Church, Woodroffe.

Rev. John Smith performed the ceremony and the rectory was decorated with yellow and pink gladioli for the occasion.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Mrs. Terrence Kenny and the bridegroom by Mr. Terrence Kenny.

For her wedding, the bride chose a floor length strapless gown of white nylon tulle over satin with an insert of wide Italian lace in the skirt, an Italian lace jacket and long sleeves coming to points over the hands. Her Queen Anne lace cap with its border of seed pearls held her fingertip veil. She wore a single strand of seed pearls and tiny pearl earrings.

Following a reception at 95 Echo Drive, the couple left on a motor trip through the New England States. For travelling, Mrs. Steinburg wore a suit of champagne linen, a brown velvet hat and matching gloves. Her shoes and bag were brown metallic. She wore a corsage bouquet of yellow carnations.

The couple will take up residence in Ottawa on their return.

Among the cut-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Burns, New York City; FO and Mrs. W. L. Sunstrum, Bagotville; Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Burns, Deep River; Mr. and Mrs. Ford Steinburg, Mr. and Mrs. Carman Swerdfeger, Morewood; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Steinburg, Ormond; Mrs. Max Palmer, Smiths Falls; Mrs. Gordon Steinburg, Richmond.

'Lunging' On the Rideau

It is our envious pleasure about this time of year to report on the prizes successful fishermen haul from the teeming waters of the Rideau and the mighty Nation. Envious because we seem always to end up with the proverbial fisherman's luck and few fish. Last week-end, though, we had the vicarious pleasure of assisting in a fish-catching deal that is one for the book.

Supper time Sunday night, Harold Durant left his cottage at Little Chesterville, rowed out about fifty feet from shore and cast a few times to get warmed up. Suddenly he spotted a big tail break water back of his plug, and saw a moving shape tailing the bait to the boat. It was a fine fat muskie, interested, but not too much. The next cast produced the same thrill. The third time the ex-warden decided to take things into his own hands and that included one of the oars of the boat. On the third trip in, just as the bait and the fish reached the side of the boat, the fish struck the plug and Harold clonked the fish, smack behind the ears, with the oar. Mr. Fish did an immediate blackout, disgorged the bait and sank gently to the bottom in eight feet of water.

The problem then arose to get the 'lunge up within reach. We were watching the show from our cottage and about this time joined Charlie Graham, son of Allison Graham, in a rush to the canoe and row boat to offer some assistance. Charlie's father made it three to converge on the Durant craft to offer all kinds of helpful hints. Finally the fish was spotted in the not-so-clear water, a gaff hook was lowered and the big fellow stirred up so he could be lifted into the waiting hands.

The fish weighed in at 13½ pounds and stretched 38 inches long. The next time we go after muskies we are going to take an oar instead of a paddle. T'would seem that is the proper medicine for hungry 'lunge.

Hubert Dixon, son of W. O., and his small son, Jimmy, almost duplicated the "hit them and drag them" system just the week before and only one hundred yards fro m Sunday's episode. Hubert latched on to a smasher, played him to a standstill with 6-year-old Jimmy cool as a veteran at the motor. When the fish finally came to gaff, it broke free and started the fight all over again. When boated at last, "Joe' had a lovely 20½-pounder to be proud of. Jimmy is thinking of setting up as a guide if there is such a thing for 6-year-olds.

IN MEMORIAM

FROATS—In loving memory of our mothe r and grandmother, Mrs. Elgin Froats, who passed away August 23rd, 1950.

They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time so far has only proved
How much we miss you yet.
God gave us strength to forget it
And courage to bear the blow,
But what it meant to lose you
No one will ever know.

Always remembered by Shirley, Basil, Rickie and Connie Barkley.
