WILLIAMSBURG LADY

SERIOUSLY INJURED

Mrs. Calvin Bouck of Williamsburg had a very narrow escape from serious injury last Friday evening, when she ran on the road in front of a westbound automobile driven by Aden McIntosh of Williamsburg. Mrs. Bouck, with Mr. Bouck, had driven with a horse and buggy to Elma, from their home near Williamsburg, to attend a church gathering. Mr. Bouck had tied the horse under the church shed, and when the gathering was over, he went to untie the horse to return to their home, when in some unaccountable manner the horse broke loose, and ran away. Mrs. Bouck, in the excitement of the runaway horse, ran out on the road and into the path of the car. Mr. McIntosh was driving slowly and tried to avoid hitting the woman, who did not notice the car. She was struck with the bumper of the car, receiving a fractured leg, a laceration of the hip which required several stitches, and suffered from shock.

She was taken to the home of Mr. McKenzie at Elma, where her wounds were attended by Dr. C. A. Loudon of Morrisburg. She was later removed to St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Brockville.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Officer Frank Rose of Morrisburg, who stated that no charges have been laid.

MRS. GEORGE SAMPSON

Aultsville and community sustained a great loss in the death of Mrs. Geo. T. Sampson, who passed away after a long illness, on August 3. The late Mrs. Sampson, whose maiden name was Frances Graham, was a daughter of the late James Graham of Iroquois, where she was born 61 years ago. She received her education in Morrisburg, Public and High schools, and after graduating, taught school for several years in Dundas County and Osnaburgh township. Thirty-six years ago she was married to George T. Sampson, and since that time she and her husband have resided in Aultsville, with the exception of a few years spent on their farm in the third concession of Osnaburgh.

The deceased lady had suffered from ill-health for several years, but always maintained an optimistic outlook upon life and a bright and cheerful disposition. She was greatly beloved in the community, and the courage with which she faced illness and suffering was an inspiration to all who knew her.

She is survived by her husband, George T. Sampson, and two daughters, Mrs. Sanford Hickey, Aultsville and Mrs. Clair McCracken, Montreal; also two sisters, Mrs. Edward Hamilton and Miss Mary Graham, both of Iroquois; also two grandchildren, George and Frances Hickey, Aultsville.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held on Sunday, August 5 at St. Paul's Anglican church and cemetery, Aultsville. The service was conducted by the rector, Rev. F. E. Strange, assisted by Rev. G. W. Thom of Bearbrook, Ont., a former rector of St. Paul's, who preached the sermon, in which he paid an eloquent and touching tribute to the deceased, stressing particularly her loyalty to the church, the cheerfulness with which she bore suffering, and her kindness and sympathy, which were the outward manifestations of a true Christian character. At the close of the service in the church, Mr. Hebert Shaver sang a solo, "A Beautiful Land," which was a particular favorite of the deceased.

ELMA MINISTER AND BRIDE HONORED BY CONGREGATIONS

More than 200 members of the congregations of the United churches of Winchester Springs and Elma met at the Elma appointment Friday night, to honour the minister, Rev. Kenneth Woodmark, and his bride, the former Miss Ida McDowell, of Ottawa.

Following games played on the lawn, a reception was held in the auditorium of the church, where the gathering was addressed by Mahlon Beckstead of Elma, who asked Clifford Robinson, Winchester Springs, to act as chairman. A program of music was presented by the organist, Mr. Fred Beckstead, with cello accompaniment by Mrs. A. Lambkin.

After an address read by Reginald Barkley, the presentation of a purse was made by Hugh McMillan, on behalf of the Elma appointment and from the Winchester Springs church.

RETURN OF CREATOR WILL BE FEATURE OF OTTAWA EXHIBITION

There are many outstanding features for the Ottawa exhibition which will open on Monday, August 20, and continue for six full days and nights, but to many the stellar attraction will be Creator and his band.

This is the first Canadian appearance of Creator since 1930, and for the exhibition engagement, the band will come direct from New York. The great maestro is at his best, and he expresses the opinion that the band is the strongest he has ever brought to Canada. In addition to the band, two lady soloists are featured, Miss Anna Pinto, harpist, who is a virtuoso and who, besides playing with the band, will be heard in a solo number each day.

MORRISBURG HIGHWAY NO. 31 NEW ROAD TO U. S. A.

With the completion of the new concrete highway between the Carleton County boundary and Morrisburg the Morrisburg-Ottawa Highway, known as No. 31 King's Highway, is now the shortest and best route to U.S.A.

The new stretch completed this month, between Winchester and Winchester Springs, offers the motorist public 21 miles of concrete and 25 miles of paved road. It is only 46 miles from Billings Bridge to the U.S.A., via the Morrisburg Five-Minute Ferry. The safety feature to motorists is that the road compares very favourably as to curves with other roads, there being in all only twenty official curves on No. 31 King's Highway, against over seventy on No. 16 King's Highway (Prince of Wales), which is more than 60 miles from Ottawa to the St. Lawrence River front. The shorter distance with the fewer curves makes this No. 31 King's Highway the main artery from the Capital to U.S.A.

On this pleasant drive you pass through Williamsburg, Ont., which has the world famous outdoor clinic of Dr. M. W. Locke; it is 40 miles south of Ottawa, and 6 miles north of Morrisburg on No. 31 Highway. Patients from all parts of the world receive treatment there daily, except Sunday. This clinic can be seen without charge. The village itself boasts accommodation for over two thousand visitors, and it has many hotels, private homes which cater to the public.

Morrisburg is now famous for its Five Minute Ferry to Waddington, N.Y., U.S.A. The distance across this section of the beautiful international St. Lawrence River is only 500 yards, and the two Government Approved steel boats are equipped to take care of unlimited traffic without congestion or delay. The schedule operated is from 6 a.m. to 12 midnight, continuously, daily, all year. Motorists can therefore arrive at any time, and within a few minutes can be on their way. Morrisburg also has a Chamber of Commerce, where maps of every State and routing can be obtained without charge to the public.

Waddington, N.Y., U.S.A., situated three miles west of the ferry dock, is a beautiful village of homes, and it is the gateway to the Adirondacks, Watertown, N.Y., and Washington, D.C. Passing the ferry dock is No. 37 Highway, which covers the American side of the waterfront, starting at Malone, N.Y. through Waddington, continuing along the waterfront to Morrisville, N.Y., and then cuts southerly to Watertown, N.Y. Interstate Highway No. 11 is within 18 miles of Waddington, and No. 345 Highway leads southerly from Waddington to Canton, and No. 11 Interstate Highway. The same highway, No. 345 leads from Waddington to Madrid, and No. 56A to Potsdam, N.Y. Thus the following highways converge at Waddington: No. 37, No. 345, No. 56A and No. 11. All the above roads are completed in concrete and pavement.

The Morrisburg-Waddington Ferry rate for passengers, free return on the same day, is 25c per passenger, and motor cars are only $1.00, with no extra charge on Saturdays, Sundays or Holidays. This gives motorists a delightful and interesting suggestion for a holiday or an evening trip. Motor cars enjoy free parking at Morrisburg, Ont., and Waddington, N.Y., U.S.A.

HALLVILLE WINS TROPHY IN SOFTBALL PLAYOFFS

Defeating South Mountain 13-2 in the final game of the Dundas County Softball League playoffs, the Hallville team captured the Chalmers Trophy, this being the third cup won by the Hallville team this season. The champions won the first playoff game 9-4, taking the series in two straight games.

Playing 26 games this season, Hallville has turned in 25 straight victories, and have won the Casselman cup permanently, by taking it in 1933 and again this year. They also won the Dr. Locke Cup in a tournament at Williamsburg, and much of the club's success has been due to the skillful handling of the team by Manager Broder Scarlett.

MISS STEIER RECEIVES COUNTY APPOINTMENT

The "Thousand Islands Sun", published at Alexandria Bay, N.Y., in its issue of August 2, contains the following item:

"Miss Edith Steier has been appointed deputy county clerk to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Mrs. Dorothy C. Vian Farmer, who resigned Wednesday of this week.

"Miss Steier is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Steier of this village, a graduate of the local schools and for the past few years has been employed in the law offices of Wiltsie and DeYoung, local attorneys. She is also a graduate of Central City Business School in Syracuse."

Miss Steier is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. James Mallen, of Morrisburg, who she has visited several times. Her many friends here wish her continued success.

The TUDOR HOUSE

By MRS. STANLEY WRENCH

(Author of "Sing for the Moon" "Strange Lovers," etc.)

SYNOPSIS

Michael Borde, 40, unmarried, born and bred in a Birmingham slum, is now a wealthy motor manufacturer wrapped up in his business. One day he feels an urge to visit the countryside around his old home and motors up there one Spring day. He rescues Daphne Eden from a menacing tramp, falls in love with her and proposes. She accepts and introduces him to her father, who greets him with the words, "Get out of here, you cur. You ruined my home. . . stole my wife. . . broke my life. . . curse you!"

Michael meets Mrs. Hamill-Hardy who insults him, but he negotiates successfully for the old Tudor house. He tells Mrs. Gregory, Daphne's friend, of the purchase.

THE TRUTH

"Daphne gone away."

He echoed her words blankly, but Michael Borde looked at Mrs. Gregory as though he would wrench some secret from her.

She shook her head.

"No, I do not know where she is. Apparently she received a great shock and this, as well as her father's death, seems to have changed Daphne. She has always been rather grave and a slight bit secretive about their affairs. I know little about her, but she certainly led me to believe," and here she watched him closely, "that something happened with relation to you."

There Mrs. Gregory stopped short, for Michael Borde sprang to his feet angrily.

"No, wait," she told him. "Daphne did not mention your name. She told me nothing. But when I spoke of you I saw her eyes and I guessed then something must have taken place to change her. She did care—I am sure that Daphne liked you before," she added softly. "What have you done to make her alter so?"

"I love Daphne, Mrs. Gregory," he said in a low voice. "She is the one woman in the world that matters, I don't mind owning that. I've done nothing to be ashamed of, I've done nothing that Daphne need mind hearing about. She condemned me at once on the word of a man who never knew the truth, she gave me no chance to speak, never allowed me even to say a word."

He gave a short, dry angry laugh.

"It's the way women behave. I've seen it over and over again," he said. "They're neither logical nor sensible when it comes to a matter of the emotions. However, that's not fair, perhaps for me to talk like this about her. Daphne heard what her father said; he accused me to her face and I was so taken aback, so amazed at seeing him there, and knowing he was Daphne's father, that for once in my life, I was absolutely unable to collect my wits in time. I didn't do the thing of which he accused me."

He stopped short and Mrs. Gregory saw that his eyes were bitter.

"But you see, Daphne believed it," he cried. "There's the difference between a man and a woman, Mrs. Gregory. If someone had come to me and accused Daphne of being a wanton, he made deliberate pause and spoke the word calmly, 'do you suppose I'd have believed it? No, I would have knocked his head off for daring to hint at it. If you love a person you take that person on trust until he has failed you. Isn't that so?'"

She bent her head.

"Better tell me the whole story, Michael," she said simply.

It was the first time she had spoken his Christian name, but it put Michael Borde at his ease.

"May, I smoke," he asked and she drew out a pipe as she nodded.

"I told you about myself the other week," he said. "I explained how I started on my own after the war, ran a garage and did hire of cars and repairs, and how eventually I advertised for a partner in order to get more capital for the development of the business. I didn't tell you then who the man was."

He paused for a minute in order to light his pipe, drew a few whiffs and leaned back looking at the woman opposite.

"He was Richard Eden," he said.

"Daphne's father?"

Michael Borde nodded.

"He was an excellent mechanic and engineer, understood cars, but he was no good as a boss. He would yawn away to a garage hand and waste time, and he had no idea of business himself. Still, he put money in, and it gave me a chance so I decided to stick it for a time, put up with his ways, and then when the business had developed choke him off. Mind you, he took out his pipe and eyed her sternly, 'I wasn't going to do anything shabby. He'd been paid off with jolly good interest. But there are some men in life who only serve as stepping stones for others, they'd never make good on their own and Richard Eden was one of them. I don't care where he went or who he was with, he'd get nowhere.'"

She waited for him to continue.

"He was married but at first I never saw her, although they lived in the house adjoining the garage," he said. "Then Eden got a bout of malaria, he was laid up one morning, and she came to tell me he could not get up. That was the first time I saw her."

For a minute there was silence, but Lorna Gregory noticed that he drew hard at his pipe.

"She was what you would call a beautiful woman, I suppose," he went on. "I don't know that I thought very much about it. Frankly, I've never been much interested in women. But there was something about her different. Folks don't mince matters to-day, they call a spade a spade, but in those times I suppose I was a young fool. You must remember this goes back to the time just after the War," he said, and again she saw that schoolboy look on his face. "Sex appeal, IT, or whatever you like to call it, that woman had a darned sight more than her share, she was about ten years older than me, I daresay, and probably she had a good many fools fall for her before."

He bit the stem of his pipe, savagely.

"I did fall for her—in a fashion," he cried. "At first I tried to choke her off, because to tell the truth, I was so hardheaded even then I could see that a woman like that mucking up my business would mess up my life too. But she was too clever for me. She told me a yarn about being married to Richard Eden, who was older than she, of the miserable life she'd led, talked of her loneliness, and God knows what, at any rate, as I tell you she was too much for me. It ended in my believing that my friendship would save her—yes, I was that sort of fool," he ended with a hard laugh.

She waited for him to go on.

"I swear there was nothing—er—what anybody might say was wrong," he continued, and his voice was slightly husky.

"You see, I haven't thought about this for years. Beyond, being a fool, there was nothing, although, as I say, when I do look back and remember, I can see that she chuckled herself at me."

"I say," he broke off abruptly, "you don't mind my talking like this?"

Go on Michael. Perhaps we shall get this thing cleared up," was her response.

"Well, it was bound to come to a head sooner or later, I suppose. Her sort won't stand for holding hands and all that rot. So she started making trouble indoors with old Eden, and he used to come to me and pour out his worries—pretty rotten for me, too, I can tell you. He was in love with her I imagine she was his second wife, for she couldn't have been Daphne's mother. I do know that."

"Oh, blast it," he cried angrily. "I don't see why such women are allowed to live to mess up affairs. See what it has done to me. Look at what has happened now. Daphne has gone off believing I made love to her father's wife—as a matter of fact, I never so much as kissed her. As for the other thing—look here, I tell you I cared too much for making a business go to even think about it. Do you believe me?"

"Of course I do Michael," she answered. "Go on."

His face cleared a little.

"I didn't know what to do because if I cleared Eden out, he'd take his money, and money meant so much to me then," he said. "So I—I played a sort of a double game for a while. I made believe that I did care for her, hoping that I could bluff enough to keep her amused and at the same time I was busy making plans for a move. I saw a chance of getting away, although not quite in the way that she believed."

"I said before they lived in the house adjoining the garage," he went on. "There was a room I used as an office. Well, at that time it was just round about the Hunt Ball season, when we had a lot of extra hire work and although I had drivers to do night work, it often happened that I'd take on a job too. Sometimes it meant getting another car from another garage in the town, we'd work in with one another, but if the order came to us then it meant supplying a car some how or other. Well, to cut a long story short, I happened to take on one of these late night affairs, got back to the garage about four in the morning, was mighty cold, and as I had a key to the house, thought I would slip in and make myself a cup of coffee. In fact she often used to have one ready for me."

He laid down his pipe, which had gone out, looked Mrs. Gregory in the eyes and smiled.

"She was there waiting for me—and there was a bit of a scene, because I believe she had been through my desk and found out that I was making plans to sell the business. Anyway, there it was, and it ended with her crying on my shoulder, begging me to take her with me. Now I suppose you can guess a bit of the rest. I can't stand seeing a woman crying, even now. It bowls me over. Soft I know—but there it is. Anyhow he found us there—and like the sort of man he was, he put the worst construction on everything—accused me of Lord knows what. There was I—and he was a much older man. I begged him to leave things to the morning, but he was set up and bothered—and, well in the end, he finished up with a sort of stroke."

Russian Movie Problem

Soviet Russia, too, has its moving picture troubles. The chief problem there is not dirt but dullness. A survey in a recent number of Izvestia is quoted in the Russian Economic Notes published by the Department of Commerce at Washington. Russian films are described by Izvestia as being low in artistic merit, uninspired in theme and overlaid with propaganda. The last condition is one that obtained in Soviet literature until Stalin issued orders for a little less proletarianism and a little more artistic truth and entertainment. The human mind is capable of absorbing just so much propaganda. After that it goes to sleep; as it has done in Soviet Russia and Nazi Germany.

Soviet planning as applied to the screen industry does not show up better than American cutthroat individualism. Izvestia mentions four pictures which have been two years or more in the making. An extreme case is the film "It Happened One Summer," which was five per cent. completed at the end of a year at a cost of 500,000 rubles. The Russian market can hardly carry such costs. Attendance in 1933 was one visit a year per head of the population. In the United States it was 30 visits a year.—New York Times.

ZEST TO MEAT SALADS

Cucumber dressing adds zest to cold fish or meat salads. Simply whip cold cream (don't get it too stiff), put in a little vinegar, salt, pepper and paprika. Leave it in the ice box until ready to serve and then add a cupful of thinly sliced cucumber.

Russian Hoboes

Given Setback

MOSCOW—Hoboes are most unwelcome on the railways of Soviet Russia. The Communist government is seeking to abolish railroad hooliganism.

Damage to tracks and railway cars by hoboes, reported from many portions of the country, has moved the council of the People's Commissar and the central committee of the Communist party to issue an order to imprison for six months all persons caught stealing rides on trains.

Vagrants who deliberately damage railway property may be imprisoned for three years.

All persons not employed by railways are forbidden to live on railway property, and Communist railway workers have been enjoined to inaugurate wide propaganda campaign among transport employees to protect passengers and guard state transportation against sabotage and disruption.

Both official Russian newspapers, "Pravda" and "Izvestia," published leading articles emphasizing the necessity for a general rally of law-abiding citizens against elements which have contributed to railway accidents and are said to be impairing transportation so vital to the public interest.

"Pravda" enumerated many cases where discharged and drunken employees have caused damages to tracks and rolling stock, and pointed out that a new order providing stricter penalties against hooligans and inaugurating a general campaign of education should result in great benefit to national economy.

Mother and Son

One of the saddest things we have read for some time, says Ed. Duncan, in the Wiarion Echo, was the case of an aged widow of Wardsville, who won her second fight for possession of her home which was claimed by her son. The son had appealed the case, but the appellate court dismissed his appeal with costs. We know nothing of the circumstances, but it does not look well for a son to be fighting his mother through the courts for possession of a home. It is often the case when children grow up and get the little possessions that their parents have managed to get together, that they turn the parents out. It must be the fault of early training, often indulgent parents think nothing is too good for their children and the children get the same idea and wash their hands of any responsibility towards their parents. We need to take pattern from the Chinese where age is revered and where the old grandmother rules the household as a Matriarch.

ITCH TAKEN OUT OF WOOLLEN UNDERWEAR

Mam's inhumanity to man will cease soon. Itchy woollen underwear is out.

A new process has been perfected which relieves the discomfort to the tender epidermis of the old-style woolens worn next the skin.

A new treatment of fabrics, which it is claimed renders them unshrinkable, also adds lustre to the material, and can be applied with equal facility to loose, scoured wool, tops, or to knitted fabric.

The method is being kept secret for its discoverers and fellow members of the British Wool Industries Research Association, who hold patent right, according to a recent report of the association.

It is stated that the new discovery is the outcome of advances in technique in an entirely different industry.

MOTHER HAS HER TROUBLES IN THE GOOD OLD SUMMER TIME

When Children Have Accidents She Must Keep Cool and Have First Aid Kit Handy

The good old summer time brings its own troubles for the mother. Her children need roughage, that is, a bit of venture, and it will be a most remarkable and lucky child who will escape entirely without a bruise or cut or blister.

The best way is to take things as they come and not worry from dawn until dark for fear something may happen. Warnings are in order, but obsessions about accidents can put the strongest mother to bed herself.

As to warnings, there are, of course some things that should be absolutely "verboten," such as swimming in a dangerous spot, riding wheels, small wagons or playing ball in the street, climbing brittle trees, or going barefoot in snake country.

Be Prepared

Outside of such things or whatever hazard she lives near, the mother would be better to say, "Johnny is bound to have a few accidents. Am I prepared to do the right thing at the right time? Can I get used to seeing blood without losing my head? Have I the proper materials on hand for quick help? Do I know how to use them? Will I scream or cry and make Johnny think he is hurt worse than he is. Or will I let things go, trusting that time cures most things very well?"

Keep a Handy-Kit

Contents for a handy-kit cost little. Some sterilized absorbent cotton, a narrow and wide roll of gauze bandage, some clean (boiled) old linen, iodine, peroxide of hydrogen, baking soda, salt, a tube of pure vaseline, or whatever else the doctor may suggest. Keep a basin that isn't used for anything else in the house. There won't always be time to stop and scrub one out. A household bucket or a bathroom basin may look clean but won't be sanitary enough to use in the medical department.

Although a mother can give first aid, she must remember that except in minor cases it's only temporary. When there is a deep cut or a puncture caused by something rusty or dirty, a bad sprain, a blow on the head that causes vomiting or unconsciousness, a dog or snake bite, she should get a doctor to come at once. And in sun-sickness or in cases of near-drowning.

Watch Swelling Wounds

Also, if there has been what she thought was an innocent wound that has begun to swell and redden and cause pain in such a case the doctor is absolutely necessary.

Every mother should have directions of some sort to refer to in case of minor accident.

A short talk with the doctor (she can take notes) will be of help. And most "mother's books" today contain the information needed.

Running rusty nails and splinters into bare feet is a common summer occurrence with children. To run a nail into the hand or foot isn't good. We always speak of "rusty" nails, but it doesn't matter whether they are rusty to the eye or not. A dirty nail, and most are, is just as bad as a rusty one when it comes to chances of infection and that dread word "tetanus."

No use going off the deep end and imagining that every youngster who builds a shanty or runs about in his bare feet will get hurt. But in case he does, there is that handy kit in the bathroom you have laid by for just such emergencies. While you're getting it, however, have someone call the doctor. Tell him what for, too, and he won't lose much time getting that foot or hand treated.

Wash Wound Thoroughly

If Johnny has a shoe on, get it off at once. "Then wash his foot with soap and water," directs a famed pediatrician, "and keep it wet by a dressing of bicarbonate of soda (baking soda) or peroxide of hydrogen, or immerse the wound in an Epsom Salt solution (1 lb. to the pint)."

This will keep it open until the doctor arrives.

Another authority suggests pouring the peroxide in after the soap-and-water wash, as it will foam up and loosen dirt particles, and recommends a salt solution (1 teaspoonful for every 2 cups water) in the basin for soaking the foot until the doctor's arrival.

At any rate, the procedure for home measures differs little. The object is to get the deep, narrow wound as clean as possible and to keep it open either by soaking or by wet applications until it can be looked after professionally.

Deep splinters should be attended to in the same way. No—splinters don't get rusty, but anything dirty that sinks deep into the tissues can't be played with. All accidents of the sort need a professional eye and hand.

Dirt and "Tetanus"

"Tetanus" is a word we fear and it may be caused by rust or dirt.

Don't jump to fearful conclusions and picture your child with lockjaw or something equally terrible if he gets hurt. There will be little need for worry if the doctor is called and the wound is cared for in one of the ways suggested above. These measures are only "first" aids. Albeit to keep one's head and set about treatment in a business-like way may be the very things that will discourage danger until more help arrives.

CANNIBALS DON'T LIKE TO EAT WHITE MEN

Cannibals are easy to get along with if one knows how to handle them, according to Capt. Edward A. Salisbury.

The captain, who for 40 years has explored the remote corners of the world and often has been where man-eating tribes are a reality, visited Rochester, N.Y., before embarking on another voyage.

"The average cannibal has the mind of a 4-year-old child," the captain explained. "My attitude toward them has to be like that of a nurse toward a group of children. Should they begin to squabble, it is forgotten as soon as their attention is turned to something else. My only problem, if they began to view me as a potential meal, is to distract their attention."

The captain also exploded the popular belief about the cannibals' pot with the assertion that victims are not boiled in a large pot but are "cooked over hot rocks."

If that is no consolation, the captain offered a bit of comfort with the statement that cannibals do not like white men as their "main dish" but prefer members of any enemy tribe as a choice diet.

In order to discover truth we must be truthful ourselves, and must welcome those who approve and confirm our discoveries.—Max Muller.

A PAGE FROM MY DIARY

by P.C.2

I had warned that man at least a couple of times before. He used to drive pretty regularly along No. 2 Highway. Sort of salesman, I should judge.

What about him? Well, I'm telling you.

He was a good driver all right, so far as driving goes, but he seemed to think the whole road belonged to him. You know what I mean—could not keep to his own side, and thought he had as much right to drive on the left-hand side of the road as on the right. I don't suppose he thought anything about the danger of it, and I'm doggone sure he never paid much attention to the rule of the road.

What happened? I'm telling you if you'll listen a moment. He's in hospital now—be lucky if he gets out in a month. He'll be luckier still if he ever drives again.

You know the sharp bend in the road just east of Jonesville? That's where it happened. Our friend swings over to the left-hand side of the road—probably figured he could save a second in rounding the bend. Didn't figure there might be cars coming the other way. Well, there happened to be two of them. The first managed to pull over, but the second hadn't a chance in the world. Just sideswiped him like nobody's business. Tossed his car clean over into the ditch with him underneath it.

I came along just after it happened and helped to get him out. Sure he was unconscious—I wondered if he'd get into hospital alive.

See what I mean? A big hospital bill, and a big lawsuit for heavy damages to face when he gets out—just because he would not keep to his own side.

Say! people are funny; risk their lives, cars, and everything for the sake of a second of time.

Yes, you've said it. That's my opinion, too.

CRISP, COOL SALADS.

Summer menus cry aloud for crisp, cool salads. The eye does half the eating in hot weather and so color and beauty in food are of double value.

Try this molded crab-meat salad with watercress sandwiches for luncheon on the porch some hot noon.

Molded Crab-Meat Salad

Two cups flaked crab-meat, ¼ cup diced celery, 2 tablespoons shredded green pepper, ¼ teaspoon onion juice, ½ cup mayonnaise, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 tablespoons lime juice, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, 4 tablespoons boiling water.

Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes and dissolve it in boiling water. Add lime juice, vinegar, salt, onion juice, crab-meat, celery, green pepper and mayonnaise. Turn into a ring mold and let stand on ice until chilled and firm. Unmold and garnish with mayonnaise, cucumber sticks and radishes. Lime juice is suggested in place of lemon juice because the favor of lime is particularly delicious with crab-meat. If limes are not to be had, lemon juice of course may be substituted.

Ham Salad

Two cups finely chopped but not ground cold boiled or baked ham, ½ cup shredded new cabbage, 1 shredded green pepper, 1 package lemon flavored gelatin, ¼ cup boiling water, ½ cup cold water, 1 cup mayonnaise. Pour boiling water over gelatin and when dissolved add cold water. Let cool and add ham, cabbage and green pepper. Mix well and fold in mayonnaise. Turn into a brick shaped mold and let stand on ice for several hours to chill and become firm. Unmold and serve on a bed of lettuce with a garnish of dill pickle strips and mayonnaise.

This salad may be varied in many ways. Add celery and grape fruit pulp in place of cabbage. Green pepper adds a refreshing touch of green as well as a tang that is pleasant with both combinations. You may want to add 2 or 3 tablespoons vinegar, reducing the amount of cold water that much.

COOL DRINKS

Of all the deliciously simple and simply delicious concoctions in the category of summer foods, fruit granites come first. Chilled to the degree without the actual forming of ice crystals, granites are refreshing and decidedly cooling.

To make a granite a heavy syrup is combined with fruit juice and water and the mixture is half frozen. It always is liquid enough to drink, but so thoroughly chilled that it just misses being an ice. Chill it until it looks white with frost and ice crystals gather against the sides of the mold.

The combinations are almost countless for these granites. All the canned fruits and most of the fresh ones may be used singly or in combination. The combination of fresh and canned fruit produces many novel flavors that are delightful.

Berry Granites

Berry granites are seasonal and easy to prepare. Wash and drain one quart of berries. Put into a deep bowl and cover with 2 cups granulated sugar. Mash and cover with a clean towel. Let stand two or three hours. Extract all the juice and strain through a fine wire sieve or cheese cloth. Add two cups of water, pouring it through the fruit pulp. Pour into a mold and freeze. Serve with a garnish of mint.

Canned fruits must be cooked with additional sugar to make a heavy syrup, crushing the fruit as it cooks.

Then the syrup is strained and combined with water as for fresh fruit.

You may use jelly, too. Combine it with a citrus fruit juice. Orange, lemon, lime and grapefruit juices all are good and each produces a distinctive flavor. Currant jelly and orange juice, blackberry jelly and lemon juice, red raspberry and lime—these are a few combinations that will suggest others to you. Use one large glass or standard measuring cup of jelly to one cup of fruit juice, ½ cup sugar and 3 cups water. A tart juice such as lemon may require up to one cup of sugar. Make a syrup of the sugar and water by boiling them for 10 minutes. Add jelly and when cool add fruit juice. Strain and freeze.

This may seem like a large amount of sugar, but as extreme cold has a tendency to deaden the taste, these drinks must be made extra sweet before chilling.

Plums Good Choice

Plums make a zestful granite. Add a few whole cloves and a two-inch stick of cinnamon broken in small pieces when making the syrup. Red, yellow or blue, they make a rich fragrant beverage. Cook them just long enough for the juice to flow freely, pour over the prepared syrup and let stand until cool before straining and freezing.

If the granite is to be chilled in a crankless freezer, use three parts crushed ice to one part ice cream salt and let stand one hour. To hasten the chilling process, scrape down the edges of the mixture as it freezes.

Orange and Lemon

An orange and lemon drink is very refreshing and easy to make.

Peel four oranges and two lemons very thin and put in a vessel with a pinch of salt. Allow to simmer and finally bring to the boil. Take out the peel and, when cool, add the juice of the fruit.

This makes a good syrup and may be diluted with water or soda water as required.

A few slices of cucumber, an add grape or two, or a cherry, two or three raspberries, or whatever fruit is handy, add a new flavor to the drink, which will interest your friends.

Gooseberry Quench

Gooseberries simmered with sugar and water then strained, make a good fruit syrup especially if a little thin orange peel is added. Rhubarb, too, will give a tang to a syrup which, when diluted, makes a much appreciated drink.

A good general rule is to boil slowly the sugar, peel and water for syrup, but not the fruit juice, as it loses its flavor. This should be added afterwards.

Lemon Squash

The children all love lemon squash. Here is a good recipe:

Boil 2 cups sugar in 1 pint of water for ten minutes, then leave to cool. Mix 2 oz citric acid with two teaspoons of essence of lemon, and stir into the cold syrup.

Add the pulp of two lemons, and shake thoroughly in a bottle. Allow one tablespoon to a tumbler of cold water.

Lemonade

Extract the juice from six lemons and put this, with 1 cup sugar into a jug, pour in a quart of boiling water.

When the sugar has dissolved, strain the lemonade through muslin and allow it to get thoroughly chilled before serving.

Cherryade

Crush 1 lb. picked-over cherries and break a few of the stones. Put the fruit into a saucepan with the kernels and one pint of water, bring to the boil and boil steadily for five minutes. Sieve, stir in half cup sugar, and when cold store in bottles. Serve two tablespoons diluted with each tumbler of water or soda water.

Chocolate Milk Shake

One cup chilled milk, three tablespoons chocolate syrup, one tablespoon whipped cream, dash of cinnamon.

Put syrup and milk into a glass and beat well. Top with a spoonful of whipped cream and sprinkle with a dash of cinnamon.

Grape Lemonade

To make 2 qts. of this drink, use juice of 4 limes, 3 cups grape juice, 5 drops oil of peppermint, 4 cups plain soda and plenty of ice. Sweeten with syrup made of sugar boiled with water. Add mint to syrup and mix all together. Add ice and water. Serves 6.

Mint Cup

Place in a large bowl 2 cups hot tea and add a cup crushed mint leaves. Let stand until cold and strain. Add to the mint flavored mixture the juice of 3 oranges and lemons, 1 cup shredded canned pineapple, 1 cup sugar and water syrup, 1 pint grape juice. Let stand on the ice and chill. When ready to serve add 1 qt. cracked ice, 1 qt. chilled soda water and 3 drops oil of peppermint. Mix well, stir in two diced bananas and ½ pint maraschino cherries with the juice. Serve in tall glasses and garnish each with bouquet of fresh mint. Serves 12.

Ginger Frappe

1 cup tea, 1 cup ginger chopped, ½ can cherries and juice, juice 3 limes, juice 1 lemon, 1 cup sugar and water syrup, 5 bottles ginger ale, 1 bottle plain soda, 1 qt. raspberries.

Combine tea, chopped preserved ginger with the syrup, pitted cherries with the juice of limes and lemons. Sweeten with syrup of sugar and water and chill. When ready to serve add ginger ale, soda and raspberries. Pour slowly over block of ice, place in punch bowl and serve. Serves 20.

Frosted Root Beer

Turn into a tall glass 4 tablespoons thick cream. Then pour in slowly so that it will not foam up and run over glass, a chilled bottle root beer. Top with 2 spoonfuls sweetened whipped cream, flavor with lemon and serve immediately. Cracked ice may be added if desired.

Pineapple Lemonade

1 pint water, 1 cup sugar, 1 qt. ice water, 1 can graded pineapple, juice 3 lemons.

Make syrup by boiling water and sugar 10 minutes. Add pineapple and lemon juice, cool, strain and add ice water.

Fruit Punch

1 cup water, 2 cups sugar, 1 cup tea infusion, 1 qt. plain soda, 2 cups strawberry syrup, juice 5 oranges and 5 lemons, 1 can graded pineapple, 1 cup maraschino cherries.

Make syrup, add tea, strawberry syrup, lemon and orange juice and pineapple. Let stand 30 minutes, strain and add ice water to make 1½ gallons of liquid. Add cherries and plain soda. Will serve 50.

The Sunday School Lesson

Amos Pleads for Justice. — Amos 5 and 6.

"Hear ye this word which I take up for a lamentation over you, O house of Israel." Amos begins his denunciations far away, with distant Damascus.

"They hate him that reproverth in the gate." The city gate, the open square before which being the place for public gatherings, the place where Amos himself would find the largest audience for his fiery reproofs of the ruling classes.

"And they abhor him that speaketh uprightly." The righteous like Amos, seek only the approval of the righteous people; they do not want the approval of the unrighteous.

Forasmuch therefore as ye trample upon the poor." Trample is a hard word, but not too hard. These rich oppressors were squeezing the very life out of the poor as if they trod upon them with iron-shod boots. "And take exactions from him of wheat." This common tax does not refer to bribes given to corrupt judges, but to presents which the poor peasants had to offer to the grasping aristocrats in order to secure permission to retain at least part of their products.

"Ye have built houses of hewn stone." Not houses of brick, dried in the sun or baked in the furnace as in the simple days of old, but luxurious and costly houses made of stone laboriously chiselled out by masons. "But ye shall not dwell in them." The fierce Assyrians were coming to pull down the stone houses and to carry their owners into captivity. "Ye have planted pleasant vineyards." Perhaps in the way of Ahab took in the case of Naboth. "But ye shall not drink the wine thereof." Much has been said and written, and vastly more will be said and written about the iniquities of trade and the possibilities of overcoming or preventing them, but all will be vain until the heart of the trader is touched to new motives and new aims.

"For I know how manifold are your transgressions, and now mightily are your sins." Jehovah is now represented as speaking; however, ignorant men may be, he knows "Ye that afflict the just." Those who should be honored and protected by their rulers, rather than afflicted. "That take a bribe." The idea involved in the word rendered 'bribe' is a ransom which the poor and defenceless were obliged to pay. "And that turn aside the needy in the gate from their right." The gate here again is the city gate, before which the elders of the town sat as judges.

"Therefore he that is prudent shall keep silence in such a time; for it is an evil time." The wise, in such a time, would not give their advice or warning, since neither would be accepted.

"Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live." No one deliberately and consciously seeks evil, but all sinners virtually do seek it, make it the object of their lives. "And so Jehovah, the God of hosts," Jehovah, Sabaoth, the Lord of all the armies of heaven—God's awful and most majestic title. "Will be with you, as ye say." In spite of their many sins they flattered themselves that God was with them.

"Hate the evil and love the good" It is never enough merely to do good or merely to refrain from evil.

"And establish justice in the gate" But, we may say, we are only private citizens, and obscure at that. We can do what we can, and that is all that God asks of us. "It may be that Jehovah, the God of hosts, will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph." It may be that the Lord will spare a remnant and call to mind the true-hearted Joseph, your forefather.

"I hate, I despise your feasts." Your counterfeit worship, the worship of the true God under an idol symbol (the calf-worship established by Jeroboam 1). "I will take no delight in your solemn assemblies," Literally, I will not smell the savor of them, they will not be a sweet fragrance to the Lord. Wicked men often go to church to hide their wickedness. They join in public worship as a salve to their consciences.

"Ye, though ye offer me your burnt offerings and meal offerings." Burnt offerings were animal sacrifices consumed on the great altar of the temple. "I will not accept them." All these acts may have a value as aids to devotion, but they can never be made a substitute for it. "Neither will I regard the peace-offerings of your fat beasts." Beasts specially fattened for sacrifice.

"Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs." The best of music becomes mere noise when, for any reason it ceases to appeal to him who hears it. "For I will not hear the melody of thy viols." We may play loudly as we can on the finest of organs, but God will not even hear us unless our hearts are in the music.

"But let justice roll down as waters." But in contrast to this hypocritical worship, substitute the real worship in which God takes delight, the just living that makes this earth a heaven. "And righteousness as a mighty stream." Let justice which has hitherto been too often thwarted and obstructed in its course, roll on as waters in a perpetual flow.

"When the destination is desirable, expectation speeds our progress." — Mary Baker Eddy.

Toll of Autos Is Decreased

Ontario Heaviest — Death Rate Higher Than Any Other Province

Ottawa.—Death from automobile accidents in 1933 numbered 954, a decrease of more than 100 as compared with 1,120 in the previous year, says a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The death rate from this cause was 8.9 per 100,000 population as compared with 10.7 in 1932.

All provinces with the exception of Alberta and Prince Edward Island showed a smaller number of automobile fatalities in 1933 than in the preceding year. In Alberta the number increased from 49 to 64. Prince Edward Island had two deaths as against one in the preceding year.

Ontario had the heaviest death rate from this cause of any province in 1933, 11.8 per 100,000. British Columbia stood second with a rate of 11.0. The next highest rates were 8.8 in Nova Scotia, 8.6 in Quebec and 8.5 in Alberta.

In the City of Montreal 104 deaths took place in 1933 as compared with 121 in 1932. In Toronto the number was 65 as against 41, in Ottawa, 25 as against the same number in the preceding year. In Hamilton 22 as against 20, in London 20 as against 12, in Winnipeg 18 as against 22. Death occurring in cities due to automobile accidents are not in every case the result of accidents which have taken place within the city limits, as those injured in accidents outside if cities are frequently taken to city hospitals.

Thrills Cost Him Plenty

Will Spend $150,000 For Tractor Trip Through Bush

EDMONTON, Alta. — Chas. E. Bedaux, multi-millionaire Frenchman, likes his thrills so well he is going to pay more than $150,000 for one this summer.

Bedaux and his party have left Edmonton for Jasper, where he will undergo a two weeks' "training period" prior to attempting a tractor dash across 700 miles of unexplored wilderness in northern British Columbia.

With a party of 30, including three women, he plans to leave Fort St. John and hopes to arrive at Telegraph Creek on October 15th.

The party includes several exploration experts of international reputation and numbers among its equipment five specially built caterpillar tractors.

Nothing has been left to chance. Supply bases have been established along the route and radio equipment will be carried. Should anything unforeseen happen that makes outside aid necessary, help will be summoned by radio and sent by airplane.

The three women are Mme. Bedaux, wife of the leader; Mme. Alberto Chiesa, wife of a famous Cannes and Paris sportsman, and their maid.

Bedaux said the trip primarily is for adventure, but he expects to find mineral deposits, important fossil remains and some new tropical valleys, formed by hot springs.

WHITE IS FAVORITE FOR EVENING

Paris.—White was in the ascendant in the evening stylescape, blues and pinks took second and third places. Elegantes wearing voluminous snowy draperies that rivalled those of the visiting Bey's suite hinted that a new Tunisian silhouette may be expected in the future. Untrimmed velvet evening wraps in deep colors were favorites, often they echoed the velvet trimmings on the bodices of white frocks. Tiny befeathered Eugenie and Peter Pan hats were extensively revived for evening; they often accompanied feathered caps.

MUTT AND JEFF—

News And Information For The Busy Farmer

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Poultry Exports Double

Reports at hand indicate that some 935,000 pounds of dressed poultry were exported from Canada to the United Kingdom during the first five months of this year. Compared with the corresponding period of last year, this is an increase of approximately 537,122 pounds.

Take Out the Weeds

Although modern seed cleaning machinery will do a great deal to take out weed seeds from grass and clover seed, it will not make perfect separation in all cases. In fields for seed, weeds should be taken out in the summer, so as to make possible the high grades and best prices. Such weeds as mustard, daisies, bladder campion, white cockle and others classed as noxious, should be removed during the summer so as to keep them out of seed crops and, what is just as important, keep them from seeding themselves down again.

Cutting Soybean Hay

With an increasing number of farmers growing soybeans for hay, it is important that growers should cut the crop at the proper time. Soybeans for hay should be cut when the pods are about half filled out. The most desirable combination of quality and feed value is obtained at this stage. Cutting should be done with the mower in the morning, after the dew is off. It is usual to leave the crop in the swath for a day, or until the leaves are thoroughly wilted, then rake into windrows and allow to cure. Or it may be left two or three days in the windrows and then put into small cocks. The hay should be thoroughly cured before hauling, and handled in such a way as to preserve the leaves as much as possible.

Head the Hive with a Prolific Queen

The foundation for the next year's honey crop, says the Dominion Apiarist, is laid by making sure that every colony is headed by a young and vigorous queen early in August, so that she has sufficient time to produce a large force of bees before the end of the brood rearing season. To perform the duties expected of her, the queen must have ample room for maximum egg production, and there must always be an adequate supply of food available for the brood she produces. Other conditions being satisfactory, strong colonies headed with a vigorous young queen in the fall are the best assurance of strong colonies the following spring, and a strong force of field bees in time for harvest.

Table Turnip Acreage

That Ontario farmers appreciate the increasing demand for high quality table turnips is indicated in reports to the Ontario Department of Agriculture stating that, in many of the more prominent growing sections, acreage devoted to this crop is larger by some twenty-five per cent. as compared with that of last year. Sections where this holds true include Oxford, Brant, Wentworth, Waterloo, Wellington, Perth, Huron and Bruce counties.

Rains in the latter part of June stimulated planting, as growers were hesitant to plant while dry weather prevailed. Approximately ten per cent. of the acreage is for early August and September shipment, which is a twenty-five per cent. decrease from last year.

Federal-Provincial Bull Bonus Policy Discontinued

The Federal-Provincial Bull Bonus Policy is being discontinued in Ontario, and no further inspection and grading of bulls will take place after August 1st. This announcement is made by L.E. O'Neill, assistant director of the Livestock Branch, who states that only those applications for bonus which are received in the office of the Ontario Livestock Branch on or before August 15, 1934, can be considered for payment. His message further declares: "If you have sold any bulls subject to this policy, it will be necessary if any bonus is to be paid, that you arrange to have the buyer send in his application along with the Canadian registration certificate properly transferred, so as to arrive in this office before August 15th."

At What Stage of Maturity Should Crops Be Harvested?

Experiments by the Field Husbandry Division of the Dominion Experimental Farms show that crops cut at the following stages give highest yields of best quality:

HAY—Alfalfa one tenth in bloom, red clover full bloom, timothy when the bloom has fallen, grain for hay when the kernels are in the milk stage.

GRAIN—All grain crops should be cut when the kernels are firm and before the heads are too easily shattered.

SILAGE—Corn late dough, sunflowers 50 per cent. in bloom, red clover full bloom, alfalfa full bloom and wilted 5 hours after cutting, oats and peas when oats are in the dough stage.

ROOTS—As late in the fall as possible.

POTATOES—When the tops are all dead.

Asparagus a Long Time Job

The importance of asparagus may best be judged by the rapidly increasing demand both in the fresh and in the canned state, and during recent years also there has been a greater interest taken in asparagus culture by home gardeners as well as by market and truck gardeners. However, a word of warning is given by Mr. T.F. Ritchie of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. "The in-and-out grower" is precluded from dabbling in this venture. This branch of industry is not adapted to the practice of growing a crop one year when the prospects of a rising market might be profitable and out of it the next season if the probabilities of a lucrative return are poor. An asparagus plantation should last from 15 to 20 years. Asparagus can be grown on many kinds of soils, but the most desirable are those well supplied with humus, deep, rich, loose, and with sufficient moisture. The organic soils, such as peat and muck, are essentially humus in nature, and should show a definite reaction where the addition of one or more chemical fertilizers are applied.

Quality is important in lambs. Finish and weight, along with breeding, play an equally important part in determining quality. While improvements in the breeding and feeding of lambs has increased the quality of the finished product, there is still much to be done in order to supply the trade with what it desires throughout a greater portion of the year. Buck lambs do not please the consumers, and tend to discourage buying of lamb. For a number of years the price of buck lambs has been cut below that of wether and ewe lambs, and on and after July 2 of this year, 2 cents more will be paid for ewe and wether lambs than for bucks. A premium will be paid for good quality, well-finished lambs up to 90 pounds over those ranging from 100 to 110 pounds. In order to get top price, castrate all male lambs not intended for breeding purposes, and finish the lambs to a desired weight. This requires extra feed, and it will be necessary to grain the lambs on pasture. With the way this season is starting off, grain feeding on pasture may be necessitated more than in the past. It is a good plan to pick out the earliest and fastest-growing lambs and crowd them for market. As the season advances, the price may drop. Early summer sales are always at higher price than fall sales. Light lambs should be held back until they have taken on the desired fleshing. It is by paying attention to market requirements that the best returns are obtained from the flock.

SCHWERTDFEGER CLAN HOLD FIFTH ANNUAL PICNIC

The fifth annual picnic of the Schwerdtfeger Organization was held at the farm home of Mr. Charles Schwerdtfeger, 2½ miles east of Morrisburg, on Monday Aug. 6th, 1934. About 260 friends and relatives were present, with many good things to eat.

Dinner was served at noon on the lawn. Immediately following, a very good programme was presented, with Mr. Ernest Schwerdtfeger, Ottawa, as the chairman. The programme began with community singing. Mrs. Mildred Schwerdtfeger of Riverside gave a reading entitled, "The Stove-Pipe Hole". Mr. Harold Schwerdtfeger of Ottawa, sang three pleasing solos.

Rev. Mr. Mehlbacher of Morrisburg gave a very inspiring address. This was followed by two duets by the little Misses Shirley and Estrel Schwerdtfeger, and a song by Harry Hutchinson and Carman Schwerdtfeger.

The business period consisted of the reading of the minutes of the last gathering, the treasurer's report, and the election of officers, which were as follows:

President—Mr. Ernest Schwerdtfeger, Ottawa.

Vice-President—Mr. Allen E. Schwerdtfeger, Morewood.

AND NOBODY WILL WIN

San Francisco's strike has tied up 250 ships has cost shippers $50,000,000 tied up $75,000,000 worth of cargoes, and cost $3,500,000 in wages thus far. Nothing could better illustrate the desperate folly of strikes. There is loss, suffering, bloodshed, and in the end, no matter what the outcome, there will be gain for nobody. Original issues in this strike have been so muddled and bloodied, it is not easy to tell what they are about, who is in the wrong. What is clear is that nothing can be at stake to justify what has taken place. After loss of countless millions, plus violence and bloodshed, strike leaders in San Francisco have begun talking arbitration. Yet they had the choice of arbitration before them all along. Truly, human beings are slow to learn wisdom from experience.—Ottawa Journal.

FREEDOM'S LAST STAND

The women of Athens, Georgia, becoming suspicious over the frequent absences of their husbands at what the latter claimed were lodge meetings appealed to the newspapers of that town to publish attendance lists for each lodge. Thus has the last citadel of masculine liberty been assaulted. In the good old days if a man was a good joiner he might expect to spend three or four evenings a week in masculine company instead of staying at home.—Winnipeg Tribune.

WILL TAKE NO CHANCES

A hitch-hiker who killed a motorist who gave him a lift says he had an irresistible urge to kill. This quaint defence will have the effect of giving motorists an irresistible urge to step on the accelerator the next time they see somebody doing that cute thumb wiggle.—Ottawa Citizen.

POLICE UNIFORMS

Municipalities throughout Canada have been singularly negligent of the comfort of their police officers in the summer. They clothe their men excellently in winter, but when summer comes around there is cruel indifference as to the conditions that confront the officer who must walk about for long periods in apparel that is little different from that worn during the low winter temperatures. There is a wide choice in clothing material of appropriate summer weight. It could be made into neat and attractive uniforms.—Welland Tribune.

MUSICALLY LAZY

The gramophone began to write the death warrant of the piano business. The radio signed and sealed it. It is so much easier to listen than to play. Canined music has made the present generation musically lazy.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

COLDS NOT CONTAGIOUS

One never knows what to expect next. Recent research and experiment of the University of California medical men, into the common cold threatens the upsetting of one of the generally accepted beliefs about that frequent and baffling ill of civilized man, namely, that it is infectious," the Kingston Whig-Standard tells us, for example. Before the American Association for the Advancement of Science these medical scientists told of experiments in which all attempts to transmit colds by infectious of direct inoculation failed.—Sault Star

SUCCESSFUL IMMIGRANTS

Hon. R. G. Reid, who is to succeed Mr. Brownlee as the premier of Alberta, is a Scot who came to Canada at the age of 24 and worked for a time as a lumberjack in Ontario. Another Scotsman, Robert Forke, came to Canada at the age of 22 and worked as a farm hand; he became leader of the dominion Progressives and held ministerial office. An Englishman, Charles Dunning, came to Canada as an emigrant farm laborer at 17, and lived to be the country's finance minister. An Irishman, Peter Heenan, emigrant at 27 and took a job on the railway; he became a federal minister and is now to be in the new Ontario cabinet. Canada is a land of opportunity.—Toronto Star

PROFIT IN HORSES

An authentic story is told of the purchase in one of the eastern counties by a good judge of horse flesh of two horses one for $225 and the other for $275. They were kept, and groomed and fed for a year, at the end of which they were sold to a New York man for $5,000. Now that is good business, but one first has to know what a good colt is or what he can be developed into. There is the rub.—St. Catherine's Standard.

BRITISH INVENTION

A simple device patented by a Cheshire engineer at Wallasey may revolutionize the design of motor cars, and possibly of ships and airplanes, "Industrial Britain" announces.

ces. Its inventor claims that the device will do the work of a clutch and gear, and will cost substantially less to manufacture than either of these units at the present time.

The model of the invention consists of two steel cones covered with brake-lining placed side by side so that the apex of each cone is in a line with the base of the other, but adjacent surfaces being parallel but not touching one another. One cone is coupled to the engine and the other to the shaft.

A small wheel with a heat-proof tire transmits the drive from one cone to the other by means of a lever and spring. The wheel can be moved either towards the apex of the driving cone, or in the other direction and this movement results in changing the gear ratio. The inventor states that an almost infinite number of variations between the ratio of 5 to 1 and 1 to 6 can be obtained on cones less than a foot long.—Border Cities Star.

TWO ON A BIKE

The youth who appeared in New Toronto Police Court charged with carrying a passenger on his bicycle after being warned not to do so, and who, though convicted was let go on suspended sentence may consider himself lucky. The habit is a dangerous one and something must be done to curb it. The Highway Traffic Act prohibits not only the carrying of two on a bicycle built to carry one, but provides a penalty for other dangerous practices—that of bicyclists hanging on to street cars, automobiles, or other moving vehicles.—Toronto Star.

WASTEFUL DEATHS

The vast majority of deaths from drowning occur at the time of life when the individual is most in debt to society and to his relatives—when he has completed his preparation for life, usually imparted to him at the expense of the state and his parents and has yet made little productive use of it. They occur also among the healthiest and most enterprising, although perhaps not always the most sensible members of the younger generation. Socially speaking, they are the most wasteful deaths that one can imagine. It is time they were greatly cut down.—Toronto Saturday Night.

LIGHTNING AS A BENEFACTOR

And yet lightning is one of man's greatest benefactors. Natural lightning introduces free of charge about 100,000,000 tons of fixed nitrogen into the soil in the course of a year. One bolt will deposit immense quantities of this absolutely essential fertilizer in a field. So when a farmer loses some cows or a barn by lightning he will if of a philosophical turn of mind, mark it up as balancing his account with Vulcan, the fertilizer man.—Sarnia Canadian.

EFFECTIVE ACTION

American film producers quickly changed front when United States churches of all denominations united in a drive for the elimination of suggestive indecent films. Protests were not effective, but the producers began to see that cleanliness was the next thing to godliness when box office receipts were threatened.—Guelph Mercury.

HANDWRITING

Many educated persons seem to take a curious pride in the difficulty of their handwriting. They ascribe to personality the twists and twirls which are a fatal barrier to the stranger who seeks to read. They present an editor with a page or a like a picture of an extremely complicated barbed-wire entanglement and are surprised and hurt that it all is not as plain as day.—Charlotte-town Guardian.

THE EDITOR EXPLAINS

There are scores of friends of this newspaper who furnish us quite often with reports of various gatherings and societies that our limited reportorial staff could not possibly find time to attend. We greatly appreciate the service thus rendered to us, and we are always glad to receive these reports. It often happens however, that space is not available for their publication in full and we are obliged to condense them, often much to the annoyance of the writer. Readers will readily realize that we have only so much space available each week for news. The only way we have of making a living is by the advertising, and therefore many columns of space must be given over to this revenue producing matter. We could not possibly afford to add two pages because of an overabundance of news, for that would prove business suicide in a very short time.—Huntingdon Gleaner.

will be necessary since the process of raising the general level of taste is not a matter of a few months or even years. But the Council starts in favourable circumstances. There can be no doubt, that, even now, the influence of the British film trade is being felt in every cinema and that the worst days of the American film are past. Box office considerations are doubtless, all-powerful. Yet there is apparent a genuine urge towards artistic and moral development of standard for which it will be generally agreed there is a pressing need.—Glasgow Herald.

H. R. H.

"Kitchener was clear that the risk of death weighed nothing with him, but that he could not take the risk of capture—with its consequent unholy triumph for the captor—which must exist so long as our front line was unfixed." When the British line became stable with the failure of the Prussians to break through, then the Secretary of State allowed the Prince to go—and even then had to exert his authority to prevent the keen young officer from getting into the trenches on every possible occasion. Thus while the father was sharing the dangers of his people, and this experience makes a peculiar and enduring bond, which reinforces kingship, as it was reinforced by many another Prince of Wales on the battlefields of France and Flanders.—London Morning Post.

THE NATIONAL HEALTH

It is so often assumed nowadays that civilization is going to pot that facts and figures which prove the exact opposite are refreshingly welcome. The Minister of Health supplies them. The death-rate is ten per cent lower than it was as recently as five years ago. In ten years the tuberculosis death-rate has been reduced by 22 per cent. We now save annually 40,000 people who had been born in 1900 would have died. The average man can expect to live much longer than his grandfather did. For part of this progress we are indebted to medical science. But we owe even more to social services.—Manchester Sunday Chronicle.

THE COLLECTIVE SYSTEM FOR PEACE

There are still some people who believe that the earth is flat; but they are not so numerous nor so influential as they were in the days of Galileo. There even may be a few who believe that the best protection against a quarrel, actual or potential, is a revolver in the hip-pocket; but, here again, not so many. Yet millions of intelligent people today can still assert similar absurdities—still refuse to believe that the safest (and ultimately the only) national defence is the pooling of national power under the rule of law, propositions all of them at least as self-evident as that the earth goes around the sun.—Manchester Guardian.

FATAL ARGUMENT

Give Report On Mounties

Police Are Busier — 47,912 Cases Probed By Force During Year

Ottawa.—"True cases" investigated by the Royal Canadian Mounted police for the year ending March 31, 1933, numbered 47,912, as compared with 32,737 for the year which closed on September 30, 1932, and for which last previous figures are given, according to the annual report of that force available in the House of Commons recently. The "true cases" are distinguished by this term from those cases reported and later found to be unwarranted.

This year's report reflects economy on the part of the Royal Mounted. The blue book comprises only 79 pages, chiefly filled with statistics, as against 189 pages in the last report, which covered the year preceding September 30, 1932.

In the past the annual report of the R.C.M.P. has been eagerly awaited as a veritable mine of hair-raising stories, particularly dealing with the patrols carried out by the detachments in the Arctic. These are absent from this year's record, their place taken up with masses of tabulated figures.

Under federal statutes last year 11,566 cases were investigated. These had to deal for the most part with violations of the customs and excise acts—smuggling and rum-running—the railway act, the Indian and narcotic drugs acts. The breaches of the railway act related to transients "riding the rods."

The report notes that cases of theft, breaking and entering appear on the increase. These come within the scope of the criminal code, of which 22,384 violations were investigated. Breaches of provincial statutes numbered 13,962. These had mostly to do with breaches of the various liquor acts.

The Royal Mounted now has agreements in provincial matters with six of Canada's nine provinces. These are Saskatchewan, Alberta, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island.

ON FEEDING A DOG.

An intelligently trained and properly fed house dog may no more expect to receive tidbits from its master's table than to receive a visit from Santa Claus. The creature will not expect anything of that sort until after some thoughtless visitor has broken a household rule, putting into its head notions which it may take long to eradicate.

A healthy dog will almost always snap up any tasty morsel offered it unless it has just gorged itself. To keep a dog in good health in the abnormal environment of a city home it is necessary to feed it correct food at regular hours: it is especially important to see that it get enough without permitting it to overeat.

Among pets it is probable that more canine lives are shortened by over-indulgence than by neglect.—New York Sun.

Germans Are Most Determined Climber

So Says Attendant at London Monuments Who Sees Countless Tourists

Tourists from Germany, Denmark and Norway are the best climbers of the 311 steps, leading to the top of the monument, the pillar which was built by Sir Christopher Wren in 1617 to commemorate the spot on which the great fire of London (England) started.

This is the definite decision of L. G. Bentley, the attendant at the monument, who scorned the recent assertion of a woman visitor from the United States that Americans can give Londoners a good few points in making this wearisome climb to the top.

Bentley asserts that the majority of tourists from the United States are frightened away when they learn they must climb to the top.

"When I tell them there is no elevator and only 311 steps to climb they say it is too much like hard work and go away."

Germans, in his opinion, are the most determined climbers, with the Danes and Norwegians running a close second. Londoners, on the other hand, are very rare visitors, but their lack of interest is made up for by the flock of visitors from the provinces.

British in Debate Over Bath Water

Y. Y. in London New Statesman.

If we may judge from the correspondence columns in the press, one of the most absorbing topics in Great Britain at the moment is the use of bath water in the garden during a drought. Hitherto most of us have scarcely given a thought to bath water. It was water spoiled for common use through its defilement with soap and the soiling of our bodies. As children, we maintained a keen enough interest in it till the last pint of it had disappeared with a terrifying gurgle down the waste pipe; but that was because our noses, in order to compel us to come out and be dried, had invented a legend that we, too, might be swept down the pipe, where a beast of the family of the Loch Ness monster lay in wait for us. Shades of the prison-house began to close about us, however, and the golden light of credulity was no longer able to penetrate our darkness. Romance gave place to that form of blindness which is called realism. Bath-water, when once used, became to us mere dull and dirty water. It was not even saleable, like old rags and old paper. It was the most worthless and most uninteresting thing in the world.

It required the prolonged drought to convince most of us that it is a mistake to adopt an attitude of contempt, even to bath-water. Men and women of all classes have suddenly become alive to the fact that, in the absence of rain, bathwater is a precious thing that should no more be thrown away rashly than the juices of the vine. It is, some of them even declare, more beneficial than the rain itself would be to the roses and violas in the garden. That admixture of soap, which we once believed ended its uses, appears to give it new qualities of enrichment and to provide it with alkalis that are among the luxuries beloved by our bodies. It may be, are a sweet dish to a pansy. Who can tell? All living things except man have queer tastes. Does not the cow eat grass and the donkey thistles?

Man, however, is a lazy animal. Realizing that the flowers in his garden are craving for this once-despised bath-water, he is still perplexed as to which is the easiest way to transfer the dirty water from the bathroom to the garden. To scoop it up in a bowl and to pour it into a watering can and then to walk up and down stairs again and again with the watering can till he has filled larger outdoor receptacles with the contents of the bath is tedious work even for a man who has nothing else to do. If he is addicted to a cold bath, he may, of course, pour each canful, when he takes it down, straight on to the flower bed, but in blazing sunshine that may do little good to the flowers. Whether the water is hot or cold, he will probably find it best to store the precious stuff up till the approach of sunset, when every flower, gasping like a fish on dry land, will be able to appreciate his showers of blessing before falling into its evening slumbers.

Readers of the Times have been suggesting a variety of labor-saving devices for getting the bath-water into the garden. One reader recommends "syphoning" the water from the bathroom to the outer world. Another reader says that he knows a better method. He has "attached an old inner-tire tube (cut) to the drain; and then by means of either old treadle-tins or tinned fruit tins, with their bottoms cut out, he puts on as many more inner-tubes as necessary. The tins," he explains, "make a perfectly water-tight joint, as the soft rubber tires can be stretched well over them. The resultant 'hose' is moved to a different place each night, and the bath water does the rest." How ingenious human beings become when cast away on a desert island or left in similarly challenging circumstances!

Negro Girl Writer Is Hoodoo Doctor

College Graduate, She Studied Folklore, Cooks "Hand" Chicken and Writes Best Seller

A chicken should be fried in 13 pieces, counting the gizzard and the neck, says Zora Neale Hurston, good-looking 32-year-old Negro girl writer. Zora—a fine cook, Southern style—thinks the way they cook chicken "up North" is positively indecent. Her best dish is fried hand chicken—"you hold it in your hand when you eat it."

The young author, in New York to celebrate the success of her first novel, "Jonah's Gourd Vine," graduated at Barnard and then returned South to study folklore in the lumber camps and sawmills. She learned about hoodoo in New Orleans, and is now a full-fledged hoodoo doctor herself.

Zora's favorite author is Anatole France and she thinks "Green Pastures" is punk as it can be. She says it is "good spectacle, but poor Negro."

THE BRITISH ARE COMING TO THE FORE IN STYLE

London Designers Combine Comfort With Chic in New Fashions for English Women

Today Englishwomen are better dressed than at any time in living memory, writes a Frenchwoman visiting London. The improvement in the last fifteen years is almost incredible. Those with money and those without have achieved minor miracles. At the end of the war a great discovery was suddenly made by large numbers of women on this island. They heard of a town called Paris, and began to go there to buy things. They came home and gave their velvet hats—best Manchester make—away and stepped out in creations. It became a habit.

"Movie Influence."

At about the same time hundreds of new motion picture houses began to appear throughout the land. These theatres have continued to increase.

Girls began to notice what their favorite screen stars wore. The bobbed hair fashion did the rest. There you have the three chief reasons for the better dressed English girls of today—the war which brought a closer acquaintance with Paris, fashionable and short hair.

Now of course there were well turned out women here, and always have been. In Boadicea's time some of the British girls must have caught more than a Roman eye with the artistry in which they daubed on the blue mud. Now and then at Ascot, at the royal courts, at the theatre or a house party, English women astonished themselves and the onlookers. They have always looked well in the uniform of the hunting field, and the shooting tweeds woven in Scotland and the islands of the north always had an air of being the real thing, which they were.

Gift to Fashion World.

And then a certain Lady Duff Gordon began to do things with pink and blue fabrics in the London house operated under the trade name of Lucile. Lucile became a name to stir the feminine heart in many countries. The Lucile touch was world famous.

The Lucile mannequins were farmed out to Ziegfeld and married princes and millionaires, and for a time Lucile, in the person of Lady Duff Gordon, rode the crest of the wave. There was also in the house of Lucile a young fellow who had more than a knack with a pair of shears and a mouthful of pins. He could drape a piece of goods on a slim figure in a way that made Paris begin to look slightly envious. His name was Edward Molyneux, a French name, but he is English. He came out of the war a captain in the British army and staked every penny he could lay his hands on to a dress-making establishment in Paris, Park Avenue and Mayfair know the rest of that story.

Molyneux is a great name today in the story of haute couture. His line is famous wherever clothes of distinction are worn. He showed Paris something. For a time English women of fashion who wanted Molyneux clothes were obliged to go to Paris for them. Today Molyneux is established in London. He is perhaps the greatest artist in line of his time. Incidentally, he is married to a Canadian.

Stage Dress Creations.

Another young Englishman whose clothes have attracted attention in recent years is Norman Hartnell. He achieves wonders with tall girls, particularly tall actresses, and his stage dresses in black and silver, or black and white, or black and gray are lovely things to see and wear. The Honorable Mrs. John Russell had a vogue here in the late 1920's with her creations and is still gowning many fashionable women.

Reville, Ltd., design and produce clothes which seem to suit the English taste which is more conservative than the American. The English designers have refused as a rule to sacrifice comfort and plain good taste to chic and individuality. There will be further improvement in the new found co-operation between the designers and the manufacturers, which the duties on foreign materials have imposed. Such co-operation is partly responsible for the success of French dressmaking and the same trend has appeared this season in England.

Sports Clothes.

Of course sports clothes have always been a feature with British designers. Tweeds, tartans and knitted things are particularly good in the little, tight little isle and such things as raincoats, rainproof ulsters for stormy weather and soft felt sports hats need only be labelled "British" to meet a ready sale, so enviable a reputation have they sustained for style, comfort and durability.

It is interesting to see the rapid advance of British designers in the face of world competition.

Streets of To-morrow Featured at C. N. E.

Walking down the "streets of to-morrow" will become an actuality for visitors to the Canadian National Exhibition this year, following the first installation in Canada of high intensity mercury vapor lamps which will provide a degree of lighting brighter than that of any street on the continent.

Transforming the "Great White Way" into the "Great Blue Way," the lamps will be installed in the street-lighting standards along the Prince's Boulevard. Held by engineers to be the greatest advance in lamp efficiency since 1907, the new lamps do not depend upon an incandescent filament to produce light but instead use a column of mercury which becomes highly luminous when an electric current is passed through it.

The high intensity mercury lamp is also being introduced in England and it is felt that the installation at the Canadian National Exhibition is the forerunner of a new type of lighting which we may expect to see in the future. Artificial light, which has hitherto been yellow, is destined to be blue-green, and the eyes will have to accustom themselves to a new set of color values. Visitors to the Canadian National Exhibition will have an advance opportunity of judging this lighting of the future.

ABANDON "BAD LUCK" BABY

A member of the Manitoba Executive I.O.D.E. told a gathering in Winnipeg the other day of a visit she had made to the I.O.D.E. preventory for undernourished children.

Among the babies she noticed a very dark youngster and asked his history. She was informed that he had been born Friday, the 13th, of Gypsy parents, and had been abandoned so it could not bring them bad luck.

Cochrane, Alta.—Countess Kunigi, formerly Princess Tatiana Obolensky, now residing here with her husband, Count Kunigi, has fallen heir jointly with Prince George Obolensky, of Marlborough, Yugoslavia to an estate worth more than $10,000, it is learned here.

The estate was left by Marie De Trubnikov, also known as Mary Trubnikov, who died in Vienna November 27, 1933. Her will has been filed in New York City for probate. Countess Kunigi was appointed executrix of the estate outside the United States.

Countess Kunigi and her husband at present are staying here with Baron Csavossy, district rancher, and it is believed the baron and Count Kunigi intend to carry on ranching together. The count and countess have been in Canada for two years.

Small Women Should

Avoid Over-Dressing

An artist once said that a petite woman reminded him of a miniature painting. "But," he added, "as in a miniature, the detail is so exquisite, the moulding so delicate, that the whole attraction is lost if the frame is too ornamental."

His remarks are very true. In her efforts to avoid looking insignificant the little woman often makes the mistake of over-dressing, and too many frills and furbelows at once give a "little-girl-dressed-up" appearance, which is neither attractive nor smart.

Small women should always choose a frock which has a high waistline rather than a low one, as this increases the apparent length of leg, and gives the impression of greater height.

Then again, every horizontal line seems to reduce the height by an inch or two; therefore horizontal stripes are definitely barred, and wide belts in strong contrasting colors, too, as they are inclined to cut a short figure in half.

Too much shoulder elaboration should also be avoided, though the high neckline of the moment is excellent because the greater the length from neck to hem the better.

Bear Runs Off

With Bicycle

Ernest Wright of Kingston, whose pursuit in his studies in entomology, led him into the wilds near Arden recently, saw a bear. The bear saw him, and in the general mix-up that followed the bear ran away with the bike. But one paw had become firmly fixed in the spokes of the wheel and the machine which departed with him in considerable haste could not be removed.

The student who had ridden the distance on his bicycle on which were firmly strapped his outfit and bedding, left his possessions leaning against a tree near Bald Mountain, and decided to fish a stream. At dusk he returned, observed that a large black bear had seized the bike, and had torn all his foodstuffs from it and was busily engaged in eating.

Seizing a club, Wright crept up and gave the bear a smart crack on the back. Surprised, the bear somersaulted in his haste managed to trap his paw in the spokes of the wheel, but started down the path nevertheless, with the wheel bumping after him at every step.

Wright later found the bike half a mile down the trail, but it was broken beyond repair. He was far from home without bedding or even a coat. Only a little foodstuff was left. Still carrying the wheel he reached a main travelled road next afternoon where he received a passing ride to Tamworth and finally to his home near Kingston.

Sydney, N.S.—Mr. Jack McDonald, of Coolamon, who lost his sight some years ago, now runs a small mixed farm. He milks twice daily, calling the cows by name to "bail up."

He separates the milk, feeds the "poddies" and pigs, sows his own wheat bags, and can even dress mutton. All the stock on the farm know him and, as though conscious of his handicap, will stand for him to pet them. He can distinguish each beast as soon as he runs his hand along its back.

He who has it in his power to commit sin is less inclined to do so. The very idea of being able weakens the desire.—Ovid.

Dressed Hog Compet'n Attracting Large Entry

Judging hogs for bacon type and finish for market purposes, the slaughter of hogs and their display in electric refrigerators with plate glass fronts will be an interesting feature of the Canadian National Exhibition this year. This occurs in the car lot competition, each car lot to consist of forty hogs from which ten will be selected from each car for slaughter purposes.

From each lot of ten the judges will select one dressed hog for final championship competition. A reserved champion award will also be made. This unusual competition is arousing a great deal of interest in swine-breeding circles throughout Canada. The judges will be A. L. McPhail of Brandon, Man., for Tamworths, Yorkshires, Berkshires and other breeds; for carload lots L. Pearsall, Ottawa, Ont. Mr. Pearsall will also judge the bacon hog classes and slaughter competition in company with F. Williams of Toronto.

Delegations of agricultural students from the state vocational schools of Edinboro, Pa. Northeast N.Y., and Forrestville, Md., will come to the Exhibition. The principals of these schools have expressed themselves as being specially interested in the bacon hog competitions.

IT'S LIVER THAT MAKES YOU FEEL SO WRETCHED

Wake up your Liver Bile

—No Calomel Necessary

For you to feel healthy and happy, your liver must pour two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels, every day. Without that bile, trouble starts. Poor digestion. Slow elimination. Poisons in the body. General wretchedness.

How can you expect to clear up a situation like this completely with mere bowel-moving salts, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage? They don't wake up your liver.

You need Carter's Little Liver Pills. Purely vegetable. Safe. Quick and sure results. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c. at all druggists. 54

ITCHING TORTURE Stopped Instantly

D. D. D. Prescription Speeds Relief

CARTIER looks at CANADA TODAY

The fearless, courageous, dauntless spirit that brought Cartier across the high seas 400 years ago, is bringing Canada and Canadians out of the dark days of economic stress. This spirit is exemplified in the "Show Window of the Nations" as this mighty enterprise forges ahead in its capacity as an effective stimulant to the trade and commerce of our Dominion. Canada's Cartier Celebrations, in conjunction with Toronto's Centennial Celebrations, climax on September 4th and 5th at the Canadian National Exhibition in impressive ceremonies in which representatives of Great Britain, France, the United States and Canada, unite in celebration of that gallant explorer's discovery of Canada. The Spirit of Cartier looks on Canada at the Canadian National Exhibition, where the progress of nations is on review.
