An unfortunate accident occurred at the freight shed yesterday, whereby Mr. Henry Garlough may probably lose a horse valued at about $225. He had the horse attached to a single wagon and was loading on some of the machinery that made up the delivery of the Deering Co., when a train came along and the horse bolted, and ran into some machinery, cutting the cords of the fetlock. Dr. Harvey was summoned and fixed up the horse as best as could be, but what the outcome of the accident will be is hard to say, as it will mean that the horse will be unfit for use this summer.

But there is only one President Daniels and it is yet hoped he can be prevailed upon to act as ringmaster, in which he excels."

The newspaper man sees the world at its worst and at its best. He comes to learn early that no man is as white as his eulogists would have the world believe, neither is any man as black as his enemies paint him. He comes to know that most of us are of a fast, iron-gray color that stands up well in the wash and will not run when rinsed. Sin, struggle, stress, humor, pathos, graft, honesty—these are the opposites which appear upon the newspaper moving picture screen hour by hour. We cannot help but believe that if preachers and teachers could see the world as newspaper men see it they would be better equipped for their work of saving humanity from sin and error.

Yesterday was the day fixed by Mr. J. C. Silmsen, district blockman for the Deering Harvester Co., to have a delivery of farm implements at Morrisburg, when over two carloads of their machinery were placed on 38 rigs, which were paraded down St. Lawrence street to Main, then down Main street to Lock and to the Windsor House, where a banquet was served for the teamsters. It was an imposing sight and should prove a good advertisement for the local agents, Messrs. Oscar Beckstead and C. F. Whittaker, of Williamsburg. Fire caused five million dollars of a loss at the Capital buildings in Albany, N.Y., Wednesday morning. Among the losses are:—The State library, containing 400,000 volumes, among them the most valuable genealogical works in the United States, together with priceless documents, some of them dating back to 1776 and irreplaceable. Police Magistrate Eager held a session of his court on Saturday evening last to hear a case in which a married man of town complained that a single man had put his arm about his wife's waist and said he would see her home. Evidence of the plaintiff and his wife was taken; and also the accused and two witnesses on his behalf. After the evidence had been heard, Mr. R. F. Lyle, who appeared for the accused, moved to have the complaint dismissed with costs, which met with the views of His Worship. The complainant was given two weeks in which to pay the costs.

A young man went to a preacher to get married, and the preacher asked "How old are you John?" He replied, "I am half as old as father. He is two years older than my mother. My eldest sister is two years older than my youngest sister. My youngest sister is four years older than my youngest brother." "How old are they altogether?" asked the preacher. The young man replied that the five children are seventeen years older than his father and mother. How old is John and each of the children and his father and mother?—Exchange. Do you suppose John is married yet?

The call of the Dundas County Farmers' Institute for delegates to attend a meeting at Winchester last Monday for the purpose of considering the advisability of holding a county picnic this summer, brought out about 25 representative citizens, coming from all parts of the county. The subject was discussed pro and con and it was the consensus of opinion that it would not be advisable this year, it being contended that it would have a tendency to hurt the annual excursion to Ste Anne de Bellevue, which most of those present thought was of great educational value. The fact was also mentioned that it was the purpose of the residents of the front to hold an unveiling of a monument at Dundela this season in honor of the old McIntosh Red apple, at which time it would probably take the form of a picnic. And this might be the nucleus for holding a monster picnic another year.

Self-Denial Social

The annual self-denial social of the Epworth League of the Methodist church took place on Friday, March 24, in the lecture room of the church. The room was filled to the doors by a large and enthusiastic audience, every available chair in the church being utilized. The pastor opened the meeting by asking all present to join in the "Lord's Prayer." The Misses Summers opened the concert by playing a piano duet "In Festal Array." Their technique was perfect, they responding to an encore. The chairman, Rev. Osborne, then gave a few remarks stating that the object of the concert was to defray the church lighting expenses, undertaken by the members of the League. He thanked the large audience for their presence and complimented the social committee for their enthusiastic and self-sacrificing zeal in organizing this concert. Miss P. Sparling rendered the "Sun on the Mountains" and responded with "In the Time of Roses." Her tonal qualities and phrasing were perfect. Mr. Ralph Fetterly delighted the audience with a clarinet solo entitled "Simple Confession." Dr. Will C. Davy gave one of Drummond's poems entitled "How Batiste Came Home." He certainly had the "Habitant" lingo down fine. Miss Sadie Bouck rendered very pleasingly the "Island of Dreams." Miss May Baker played a piano solo which was heartily applauded. Mr. A. Hill sang that old favorite "Over the Ocean Blue" he responded with "The Boys of the Old Brigade." Mr. B. A. Herring broke the ice with "The Powder Monkey." Upon being recalled he rendered "Mary of Argyle." The instrumental duet by Miss Cameron and Miss Smith evoked a storm of applause. Miss Helen Baker in a humorous recitation told the chairman where he could buy shoelace cheap, 10 cts. a dozen pair. She responded to an encore. The vocal solo by Miss Gladys Sherman "Good-bye Sweetheart, Good-bye" was well received and enjoyed. Mr. John Gormely delighted those present with a few old-time reminiscences and witticisms. Unfortunately he was very anxious to follow Jimmie's example. Everyone was delighted to have Mrs. Kerr with us. She rendered "The Soul's Awakening" in her usual style and responded to an encore with "Happy Time." Miss Minnie Smith was the accompanist.

The collection taken amounted to $52 which was very gratifying to League members. The proceedings closed with the audience singing the National Anthem. Everybody voted the concert a huge success.

GOING TO TURKEY

W. R. LEADBEATER, OF QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY, ACCEPTS POSITION AS HEAD OF PHYSICS AND CHEMISTRY.

The following is taken from the Kingston Whig of last week, and refers to a young man who has a number of acquaintances here. He is a nephew of Mrs. L. E. Murphy, of this town:—

"Queen's students will indeed be happy to learn of a unique honor recently conferred upon a member of this year's graduating class. William R. Leadbeater has been appointed head of the department of physics and chemistry of the International University at Smyrna, Turkey, and will assume his new duties with the commencement of the fall session. Mr. Leadbeater is one of the most brilliant and successful students of Queen's. During his college career his exceptional ability has attained for him extensive scholarship, and a genial personality has won for him the universal friendship of the students. The best wishes of all go with Mr. Leadbeater to his new sphere of enterprise."

Without Light and Power

Breaking of the Shaft of the Main Driving Wheel Puts the Town in Darkness.

About three o'clock Monday morning Mr. W. Doran, who was on duty at the town's electric light plant, discovered that things were not working as they should, but kept the plant in operation until Electrician Stitt came on duty, when the difficulty was located and the plant shut down. From what The Leader can learn, it is thought the shaft had been cracked in the hub of the main wheel for some time.

The town authorities at once got busy and a new shaft was ordered from Montreal, and is due to arrive on the Moccasin tonight, when it will be placed in position possibly by Saturday night.

The Leader has been hard hit by this accident, as it has not only been without light, but has also been unable to turn a wheel of its presses, being dependent upon electricity for power. We have to thank The Herald for the use of its press in helping us out of the difficulty.

It strikes The Leader and many citizens as well, that the original shaft was too small, being of less dimension than other shafts dependent upon it.

Though it would cause considerable outlay, it might be well to have made a larger shaft and heavier wheel at once, and when occasion came again have it placed in position, thus insuring against further trouble.

Be patient, users of electric light, as everything is being done that can be to make matters right as quickly as possible.

The Late Mrs. Farran

The death occurred at Farran's Point on March 24th, 1911, of Mrs. J. R. Farran, a highly respected lady of this section.

Although her death was not unexpected, she will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

She was born in Montreal 67 years ago and was for several years a resident of Morrisburg, where her early years were spent and where she attended the public and high schools, obtaining a teacher's certificate. She came to Farran's Point to teach and subsequently married J. R. Farran of that village, who with one daughter, Mrs. A. W. Daly, of Winnipeg, and one son, Wallace Farran, M. S. R., of Molsons Bank, survive.

The deceased, whose maiden name was Flora Eacutt, was a daughter of the late Isaac Eacutt of Farran's Point, formerly of Morrisburg.

Nowhere except in the home circle will she be missed as much as in the church work, where she was ever ready to lead in every enterprise for the good of others. Besides being Sunday School superintendent for years, she was one of the prominent workers in the King's Daughters and her home was always open to any good cause. The pastors of the church of which she was a faithful member were ever sure of her sympathy and help.

The funeral took place on Monday, March 27th, from her late residence to the Presbyterian church, Farran's Point, interment being in the cemetery at Woodlands. Rev. N. McLaren, of Woodlands, officiated. The pallbearers were William Griggs, Charles Baker, B. Nichols, Chas. R. Farran and Wm. Brown, brothers-in-law, and I. A. Eacutt, brother of deceased.

Among relatives from a distance were: I. A. Eacutt, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Griggs, Alburg, Vt.; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Eacutt, Colton, N.Y.; Mrs. Harry Rance, Clinton; Mr. and Mrs. B. Nichols, Louisville, N. Y.; Mr. Albert Daly, Winnipeg, Man.; Mr. M. S. Brown, Morrisburg; Mrs. Geo. Stott, Quebec; G. C. Smith, Cornwall.

There were many beautiful floral tributes laid on the casket, among them being a broken column from the King's Daughters, pillow from the Sunday-school, large wreath from the family, and several pieces and cut flowers from other friends.

Dillen—Bowman

At the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday, March 29th, 1911, Rev. H. S. Osborne united in marriage Mr. Fred Dillen, son of Mr. George Dillen, jr., and Miss Annie Bowman, daughter of Mr. Wesley Bowman, of Froatburn. The happy couple were unattended. After the pleasing ceremony the young couple drove to the residence of the bride, where a sumptuous repast was in waiting for them, at which about fifty guests were present.

The Leader extends its congratulations.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, but the Trouble Lies in the Blood

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to severe weather, cold, raw, damp winds following mildness start the aches and twinges, or in more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism, the trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be thrown off and driven out. This is a solemn medical truth every rheumatic sufferer should realize. Liniments and outward application may give temporary relief, but they never did and never can cure rheumatism. Any doctor will tell you this is true. The sufferer is only wasting time and money with this sort of treatment, and all the time the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted—and harder to cure. There is just one sure, speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the weak, impure and tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of rheumatism. Here is a bit of proof out of thousands of similar cases that might be given. Mrs. F. X. Boisseau, St. Jerome, Que., says:—"For almost two years I was a terrible sufferer from rheumatism. The trouble first located in the right leg, making work about the house impossible, and walking very difficult. I tried to cure myself by means of all sorts of liniments and lotions, but with no result—it was only money wasted. The trouble constantly grew worse and the pains more unbearable. Finally it attacked the other leg, and I was all but helpless and completely discouraged, thinking I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life. At this time I read in our home paper of the trouble being cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. After using the pills for several weeks I could see that they were helping me, and I continued taking them until I had used nine or ten boxes, when every symptom of the trouble had disappeared and I could walk as well as ever I did. Had I known of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills earlier I would have saved myself much suffering and much money spent in other useless treatment as well."

Whether you are ailing or not a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will increase your vitality and give you increased strength to withstand the torrid summer weather coming, when even the strongest feel easily fagged out. You can get these pills from any dealer in medicines or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ENGLISH BRIDES NOW OLDER.

Statistics Show a Falling Off in Marriages.

The British registrar general's full report for 1909 on births, marriages and deaths has just been issued.

The marriage rate—14.6 per 1,000 of the population—shows a fall of 17.4 per cent. when compared with the rate of 1876-1880. The registrar general states that the effect of the modern tendency towards postponement of marriage is clearly shown in the facts that the marriage rates for women have declined in all age groups except 25-35, and that the marriage rates for bachelors have generally increased at ages above 25, below which age there is a large decrease.

The birth rate was 25.6 and the death rate 14.5—both the lowest on record. The trend of the birth rate, it is stated, is still downwards, the provisional rate for 1910 being 24.8. The same statement is made concerning the death rate for 1910, which is 1.1 lower than the 1909 rate.

TO INCLINE TOWARD MERCY.

Jim had been far from a good boy during the day, and toward nightfall he realized the fact fully. Being well acquainted with the workings of family discipline, he essayed a little diplomacy.

"Shall you tell father about me?" he inquired of his mother.

"Certainly I shall tell him," responded his mother, with sorrowful firmness.

"Shall you tell him before dinner or after dinner?" asked the culprit.

"After dinner," was the announcement.

"Mother," and Jim gave a wriggle of anticipation, "couldn't you have a blueberry pudding for his dessert? Couldn't you do that much for me, mother?"

NOT TO HIS KNOWLEDGE.

The object of the suit was to determine the ownership of a cow. One of the witnesses was Abram Reese, a colored man who had worked for the plaintiff.

"I will ask you, Mr. Reese," said the attorney for the defendant, "if you were present when the exchange in question was consummated?"

"I didn't see nuffin o' dat kind, mistuh."

"Perhaps you don't understand me. Were you there when the trade was made?"

"Yes, suh; I wuz dah w'en Mist' Libbs done trade de buggy fo' Mist' Simmon's cow."

"Wasn't there a different understanding between them at some later period?"

"De unde'standin' 'twen 'em wuz all right, suh."

"I mean, Mr. Reese, did they ever trade back?"

"Not as I knows on, suh."

"So far as you know, then, everything remains in statu quo?"

"No, suh," said Abram, with much positiveness, "dey's bofe o' 'em still in Hawkinsville."

THE SILVER LINING.

It was not always possible for Mrs. Leahy, from her permanent station at the wash tub, to appreciate the silver lining which Mr. Leahy continually discovered in every cloud, and pointed out to her.

"I've lost me job, Nora," he said, cheerfully, the other day; "but this is the time you ought to be thankful I'm not as smart as some people."

"Why should I be thankful for that?" inquired Mrs. Leahy, pausing for an instant to wipe her glistening forehead with her damp apron.

"Tis aisy seen," and her husband gazed tolerantly at her from his comfortable chair by the stove.

"If I was Terry Dolan now, and out of me job, I'd be losin' $2 a day instead of $1.50. You think o' that, me darlin', an' 'twill put the heart into you, same as it has into me."

STILL IN SUSPENSE.

Private Donahue and Private Leahy were the best of friends, but when Private Donahue became Sergeant Donahue, Private Leahy saw the failings of his former companion with amazing clearness.

"Sergeant," he said one day, after long, fixed gazing at his superior in rank, "if a private stepped up to a sergeant and called him a consorted little monkey, phwat wud happen?"

"He'd be put in the yard-house," said the sergeant.

"He wud?"

"He wud."

"But if the private only knew the sergeant was a consorted little monkey, and said niver a wurd, wud he be put in the yard-house for that?" inquired Private Leahy.

"Av course he wud not," said the sergeant, loftily.

"Well, thin, for the present we'll leave it go at that," said Private Leahy.

DELICATE BABIES NEED

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. H. L. Boone, Tay Mills, N. B., writes:—"I think Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent remedy to keep in the house and I would not be without them. My baby was not exactly sick, but was very delicate, and I gave him the Tablets and they have made him strong and healthy."

Such is the testimony of thousands of mothers. Baby's Own Tablets always do good—never harm. They can be given with absolute safety to the youngest child, as they are guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no harmful drugs. Never give baby "soothing" stuffs that only do harm. Give him a medicine that will act right on the root of his trouble. A medicine that will strengthen his stomach; regulate his bowels; sweeten the breath and make him bright, healthy and strong—such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They are sold by medicine dealers or at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Dear Father," wrote a youngster of twelve, "we are all well and happy. The baby has grown ever so much, and has a great deal more sense than he used to have. Hoping the same of you, I remain, your affectionate son, James."

If a cough makes your nights sleepless and weary, it will worry you a good deal, and with good cause. To dispel the worry and give yourself rest try Bickel's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It exerts a soothing influence on the air passages and allays the irritation that leads to inflammation. It will subdue the most stubborn cough or cold, and eventually eradicate it from the system, as a trial of it will prove to you.

Keep an eye on the man who tries to flatter you.

BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She found quick relief in the old reliable Kidney remedy, and advises all her friends to use Dodd's Kidney Pills.

St. Benedict, Sask., March 20 (Special).—Gladness has replaced the anxiety that reigned in the household of Mrs. Annie Vanvorst of this place. For some time past Mrs. Vanvorst had suffered from Kidney Trouble and palpitation of the heart, and fears were entertained of those terribly sudden fatalities that so frequently accompany affections of the heart. But relief from both ailments was quickly found in the old reliable remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills. In an interview Mrs. Vanvorst says:

"I had palpitation of the heart and my Kidneys were out of order. I took one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and found great relief. For a Kidney pill Dodd's Kidney Pills cannot be beat. You may publish what I say as it may be the means of benefiting others who suffer with Kidney Trouble or Heart Disease."

Pure blood is the basis of all health, and you can't have pure blood unless your Kidneys are in good working order. Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to put the Kidneys in perfect working order.

There is nothing equal to it.

THE DAY WOMEN RULE.

Candlemas Day is not celebrated in Holland much more than in England, but its place is taken by a festival unknown in this country, says the London Globe. Slipper Day in the Netherlands is the one day in the year in which the Dutch woman claims superiority over her husband. On that day she rules him to her heart's content, and he generally obeys good-humoredly enough. That is, unless she is one of those ladies not unknown in Holland or in any other country who aspire to complete rule over their unhappy partners throughout the year.

FACE SORES AND ERUPTIONS.

Zam-Buk Will quickly Heal.

The approach of Spring finds many people with unsightly face sores, eruptions, boils, etc. In this connection Zam-Buk is invaluable. Mr. R. H. Barker, of Glencairn, Ont., says:

"I never could have believed that any remedy could cure so quickly and at the same time so effectively as Zam-Buk cured me. My face began to be covered with a kind of rash, which itched and irritated. This rash then turned to sores, which discharged freely and began to spread. I first tried one thing and then another, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and the eruption got worse and worse until my face was just covered with running sores."

"Apart from the pain (which was very bad), my face was such a terrible sight that I was not fit to go out. This was my state when someone advised me to try Zam-Buk. I got a supply, and within a week I could see that the sores were rapidly healing. A little longer, and Zam-Buk had healed them completely, and my skin was as clear as if I had never had a sore."

Zam-Buk is unequalled for Spring rashes, eruptions, children's sores, scalp diseases, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, eczema, tetter, piles, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries and diseases generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price Zam-Buk Soap, (25c. a tablet) should be used instead of ordinary soap in all cases of eruptions and skin diseases.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER X.—(Cont'd)

As she met the glance of those black eyes, she shivered, then pride gave her strength. With a bow she was passing him, when Thomas Crawshaw stopped her.

"Wait a bit, Nancy, I want a word with you, if you please."

She turned pale as death.

Was this the fulfilment already of her vague presentiment?

"You seem to have something on your mind, Nancy," Crawshaw went on, fixing her with his eyes; "have you had bad news from home?"

The last sentence roused her anger.

"I have business indoors, Mr. Crawshaw; you will pardon me if I leave you, I—"

"Your business can wait," he said, quietly, and at his tone she shrank back.

There was a nasty air of determination about him; she felt a sudden loathing and fear spring up anew for this man.

"I have waited for this opportunity, Nancy," Crawshaw went on, slowly, "and I am not going to lose it, now I've got it; I have a good deal to say to you, my girl."

He paused, and Nancy, weakened from her long, anxious mental struggle, and faint with the heat, leaned her hand on the top of the rustic seat to support herself.

But though she was physically weak, her mental courage was strong.

"You can have nothing to say to me to which I care to listen," she said, in quiet, forcible tones.

A flash of anger shot across Crawshaw's swarthy face.

"I've got a question to ask you," he replied, shortly, "and I want an answer!"

Nancy turned her eyes upon the roses nodding near. Oh! if they were but human, and could help her to escape this man! She felt a curious sensation, as though a net were suddenly flung about her, and she was being gradually drawn toward her old life.

She passed one cold, trembling hand over her eyes, while Crawshaw watched her carefully.

"You know what it is, Nancy," he remarked, coming a step nearer.

She shook her head and shrank away from him.

Crawshaw's face darkened.

"Your memory must be bad, then," he said, curtly. "There is only one question I am likely to ask you, Nancy, and you've heard it before."

She was trembling in every limb now.

"Then I have but to give you the same answer as I have always done," she replied, in a voice that would tremble.

"I think not."

Crawshaw spoke in ominously calm accents. He paused, and then said, with great deliberation:

"Will you be my wife, Nancy Hamilton?"

She retreated from him with a shudder.

"No—no—never!" she murmured, overwhelmed with fear and disgust. "I—I would sooner die! Let me pass. I—"

But Crawshaw was not to be dismissed so easily; he caught her arm, and drew her back.

"Die or not, you shall be my wife!" he muttered, furiously. His face was pale to his lips, and the effect was horrible, with his coal-black eyes and hair. "I have sworn it, and I mean to stick to my oath."

Nancy wrenched her arm from his grasp.

"I am not the lonely, friendless girl I was," she answered him, though she was trembling in every limb. "I have friends who will protect me from such vulgar threats. I—"

"Friends!" he repeated, passionately. "Yes, I know your friend—your lover, Nancy—the man who gets the kisses that belong to me. Well, go to him, and see if he will protect you, and keep your uncle, Henry Chaplin, out of a prison cell."

Nancy was rushing impulsively away, when his last words stayed her; the hot flush of anger died from her face.

"A prison cell?" she repeated, slowly, yet with growing horror. "My uncle what—what do you mean?"

"I mean," said Crawshaw, speaking very quietly, "that your uncle has very foolishly occupied himself with forging my name to the tune of a couple of hundred pounds; that's what I mean, Miss Nancy. This old scoundrel confessed it to me with his own lips only yesterday."

day."

"And—and—it rests in your hands?"

The girl's lips could get no further.

Mr. Crawshaw took out a gorgeous case, and without an apology lit a cigar.

"Yes," he said, carelessly, flinging away the match, "it rests in my hands whether I will prosecute him or no; or, rather, I should say it rests in yours, Nancy."

"In mine?"

The two words were whispered faintly.

"Yes, in yours. Marry me and I'll say no more about it, though the old chap has done me out of two hundred quid. But you refuse me, and—well, Henry Chaplin will learn what the inside of a jail is like before he can say 'Jack Robinson.'"

Nancy paused; her brain reeled.

Her uncle, her mother's beloved brother—the only creature in the wide world who had given her love and tenderness in those old miserable days—her poor, broken-down uncle in a prison cell!—it was horrible—it—

"I do not believe it!—I do not believe it!" she cried, fiercely, turning on him.

"Then your uncle's own hand must prove the truth. Miss Leicester entrusted me with some letters for you that have arrived by the second post. Unless I am mistaken I see Henry Chaplin's scrawl among them."

He took the letters out of his coat pocket and handed them to her.

Despite herself she took them. She let the others fall to the ground; they were only invitations to garden parties, etc., in the neighborhood, and sinking onto a seat, she opened her uncle's. Her eyes were dim with growing horror and pain, but she read enough to know that Crawshaw had indeed spoken the truth.

"Nancy, for God's sakes," the poor creature wrote, "save me! I have seen him. He tells me it rests in your hands, child. By your mother's memory, I implore you, save me from a felon's shame—a felon's cell! I was mad—mad with trouble; but I am sane now. I will work to repay him, but he will give me no time. You can alone save me, Nancy—you!"

She crushed in her hand the written cry of the broken-hearted man, her head sank on her breast, while Crawshaw, standing close beside, watched with breathless eagerness the agony she was enduring.

She lifted her eyes, and gazed at the flowers shedding their fragrance on the air, and some words of the poet came back to her in a vague, strange way:

"I shall never again be friends with roses."

Never again would she feel the tumultuous happiness, the exquisite delight, that had grown with their scent only a few short hours ago. It was gone, never to be returned, never to come again!

A lover's dream, short as a midge's life, had been born beside those roses; and now a tragedy—for what else could such a sacrifice be called?—was in progress beneath them.

She was silent so long that the man grew impatient.

"Well," he said, roughly, "what is it to be? I am waiting for your answer, and I must write to my solicitors by this afternoon's post. Have you thought it all out, and are you going to stick to your lover?"—how his eyes glowed as he spoke of Darnley—"and see your uncle—"

Nancy put out her hand with a shudder.

"No—no—not that—I—I consent to—help him."

"You will be my wife?"

Crawshaw flung his cigar away, and approached her closely.

Nancy could hardly breathe; her strength seemed to leave her suddenly; she shut her eyes to hide his face from her sight.

"Yes," she said, in choked, strained tones, "if—it is—to save him, I—will be your wife."

With an exclamation of triumph, Crawshaw had her in his arms, and kissed her pale, cold lips.

"At last!—at last!" he muttered. "I've vowed it should be, and it has come. I've loved you from first to last. Even now, when I could marry any woman I chose, I've come back to you, Nancy."

He kissed her again, but she made no response, she lay like an image of stone in his arms. Her apathy angered him. He loosened his hold, so that she staggered back and nearly fell; but as he came near her all her misery awoke, and she felt as though she would go mad if he touched her.

"Go—go—leave me!" she whispered, shrinking farther away from him.

With a savage exclamation, yet with an exultant heart, Thomas Crawshaw obeyed her.

"I have won," he said, triumphantly, to himself; but as he was moving away he turned. "Understand," he said, curtly, "you've not to utter one word of this to a living soul. Let the world know nothing, except that you are my wife of your own free will. If I find out you have spoken to any one of them, I shall put your uncle's case in the hands of the proper authorities without delay."

If Nancy heard, she made no sign, and as she walked away, glorying in his cowardly conquest, she fell prone on the ground in silent agony and unfathomable despair.

And still the sun shone and the roses nodded, heedless of her broken heart and ruined life, heedless that her joyous spirit is lowered, her loving nature.

CHAPTER XI.

Mrs. Darnley was wonderfully affectionate to her niece all through the long summer day which heralded the evening of Derrick's return; and she expressed such a decided wish for Miss Leicester's companionship, that despite herself the little mistress of Ripstone Hall had to throw up her own inclinations and attach herself to her aunt, who was also her guest.

Luncheon was but scantily attended, for Lady Burton and her two daughters, with Capt. and Mrs. Fairfax, had driven over to another lawn-tennis meeting some miles off; and although Lord Merefield was present, and Mr. Crawshaw also, the meal was only a dull affair.

Dorothy struggled hard to join in her aunt's chatty conversation; but she was depressed with the heat, and distressed at Nancy's sudden and most unusual attack of illness.

"If she is not better in an hour's time," she said, in a low voice, to Lord Merefield, whom she felt understood and sympathized with her anxiety, "I shall send for Dr. Knowles. I have never known Nancy to be ill like this before."

"It is the heat," Lord Merefield, of course, hastened to suggest. "Pon my word, Dolly, my head has been aching like anything all the morning."

"Oh, yes, your head would," Dorothy replied, thoughtfully, glancing at that very boyish object as she spoke. "But Nancy is so different."

Mrs. Darnley caught the last words, and a slight frown came on her face for an instant; but it vanished as she poured out some more claret and lifted it to her lips.

"Doubtless Miss Hamilton was bored, Dorothy," she said, with a gentle smile and drawl. "I have often found a headache a convenient excuse when I wish to be alone."

Dorothy bit her lip.

"Then I hope you have not suffered as poor Nancy is suffering now, when you made such an excuse, Aunt Anne," she answered, hotly.

Mrs. Darnley elevated her brows in a manner that aggravated her niece beyond description.

"I have just come from Nancy's room," Dorothy went on, hurriedly and angrily; "and if you had seen her, poor girl, I don't think you would have been inclined to doubt her illness. She is as white as a sheet, and her eyes look as though some one had struck her two blows, they are so black all round. She tried to get up and speak to me, but she cannot even open her lips. I am quite determined, Merefield!"—turning to her cousin, and addressing him alone—"I am quite determined to have Dr. Knowles here, if she is not better soon."

"I will ride over at once," Lord Merefield offered, eagerly. "It won't take me long, Dolly."

"I shall be very happy to accommodate Miss Leicester," Mr. Crawshaw broke in, blandly. He had been lolling back in his chair, very silent, but with a curious smile hovering about the corners of his mouth, a smile which had vaguely irritated and annoyed Miss Leicester.

FORTY POUNDS TOO MUCH.

To be really fat is to be unfortunate, not only on account of the physical discomfort the condition brings with it, but also because the fat is not, and cannot be, either well or long-lived. Furthermore, in spite of these facts, fat persons get little sympathy from their fellows, who are apt to class them roughly as either lazy or gluttonous; and unhappily they are often, although not always, both.

There is good evidence that fat persons themselves are not at all pleased with their fate, for antifat remedies fill the advertisement sheets, with their offer of things to take, or to wear, or to rub on, and one must suppose that here, as elsewhere, supply and demand go together.

It cannot be too definitely understood that "quack" medicines which claim to reduce fat rapidly are dangerous things, and can do their work only by robbing the patient of health and strength faster than they rob him of his fat.

Equally ill-advised is the sufferer who evolves a method of treatment for himself, and without an iota of real knowledge of his own constitution or its needs, starts in to starve or purge or exercise himself into a condition of semi-invalidism. It is true that by this method a few pounds may be lost, but as there is no scientific principle underlying the treatment, the patient either finds the routine too hard and abandons it, in which case the lost pounds rapidly come back with many more, or—as in the case of quack remedies—health and strength go with the flesh.

Medical men to-day are fully aware of the drawbacks and dangers of obesity. They know, as one of them has significantly stated, that "a fat person lives on the brink of a volcano," and the only safe course for the overcorpulent individual is to place himself for treatment in the hands of a good physician, who will make it his business to study the constitutional fault or faults which cause the fat before he outlines the treatment.

This treatment will almost certainly be dietetic, because almost all people who grow stout in middle life are sufferers from gout, and gout cannot be defeated except by strict regulation as to eating and drinking. But the kind of diet will differ with different persons, and most positively be laid out by a medical man, and not by a layman.

Exercise is of next importance after diet, and must also be under scientific control. It is natural for the fat to be disinclined to exercise, and dangerous for them to undertake too much or in too violent a form.—Youth's Companion.

AUSTRALIAN BEE-KEEPING.

The bee-keeping industry in South Australia has made rapid progress during recent years, as the farmers and gardeners generally are realizing the benefits to be derived from possessing a number of hives and working them in conjunction with their other business. In districts where cultivation has not displaced the native timber large apiaries of from 500 to 800 colonies are to be found, and in many instances they constitute the sole occupation of their owner.

The Leader ISSUED EVERY THURSDAY FROM ITS OFFICE ON MAIN STREET, MORRISBURG, BY The Leader Publishing Co. LEWIS E. MURPHY, Editor and Manager THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1911. The Only Way

The number of deaths resulting from tuberculosis, typhoid fever, scarlet fever and many other diseases are carefully recorded and tabulated by the authorities. But of the number of deaths directly traceable to worry no such account is kept, yet all physicians know that these are by no means small. One constant source of worry and anxiety for the wage-earner or man of small means is, how he may make provision for old age when his earnings are little more than sufficient to provide the daily needs. To such a one the Canadian Government Annuities scheme is indeed a blessing. In no other way can he get such wonderfully good returns for that "little more" he may have to invest, for it will when his Annuity begins enable him to spend the principal as well as the interest thereon without his income becoming smaller no matter how long he may live.

Further particulars on the subject may be obtained on application to your Postmaster, or to the Superintendent of Government Annuities, Ottawa, to whom all letters go free of postage.

Your Opportunity

A pathetic case has lately come to light. An elderly woman, for years one of the society ladies in a fair Canadian city and thought to be wealthy, has through unfortunate investments fallen upon hard lines, and the sadness of her case is increased by the terrible fact that she has been stricken down by an incurable disease. During her prosperous years she thought but little of the future, and a large portion of her income was spent in "keeping up appearances." Now, penniless and homeless, she must seek alms to some place of refuge; her friends of yesterday know her no more. Such cases as these should cause young wage-earners to appreciate the fact that they may escape such a fate if they are but willing to take advantage of the Canadian Government Annuities scheme, for by investing with the Government but a small portion of their weekly wages they can provide an income to begin at 55 or later that will insure them independence and happiness no matter how long they live. Give the matter your most serious consideration, and if you desire further particulars on the subject these may be obtained on application to your Postmaster, or to the Superintendent of Government Annuities, Ottawa, to whom all letters go free of postage.

Stallion Enrollment and Inspection

At last we in Ontario are to have some Government control in connection with our horse breeding interests. Last week in the Legislature, the Hon. J. S. Duff introduced a bill respecting the enrollment and inspection of stallions in the province of Ontario.

The Act, which is cited as the Ontario Stallion Act, provides for a stallion enrollment board of four persons to be appointed by the Minister of Agriculture. These inspectors, of whom there will be three, constitute a committee.

Before any person may stand, travel or offer for use any stallion, the name, description and pedigree of such stallion must be enrolled and a certificate of such enrollment be procured.

Certificates are to be renewed annually each year until the stallion has reached the age of eight years, the first inspection thereafter to be final. The fees to be paid before the use of any certificate shall be: For enrollment, $2.00; for inspection, $5; for renewal of enrollment, $5; transfer certificate $1. The Board will fix the times and

THE CURSE OF THE NATION IS CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Alone Cures This Disease

A famous scientist states that Constipation, or non-action of the bowels, causes more deaths than all other diseases combined. Constipation inflames the kidneys, ruins digestion, is the foundation of Rheumatism, poisons the blood, causes Headaches, Neuralgia, Nervousness and Insomnia.

Constipation is caused by a weak or sluggish liver. Bile, the only purgative of the body, is secreted by the liver, which in turn should pour out into the intestines sufficient bile to move the bowels. Unless the liver is active, there cannot be enough bile to move the bowels regularly, and Constipation is the result.

"Fruit-a-tives", the famous fruit medicine, will always cure Constipation because it acts directly on the liver—relieves the congestion—increases the quantity of bile and strengthens the bowel muscles. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

places at which stallions may be inspected by the committee.

Posters issued by stallion men must contain a copy of the certificate of enrollment and shall not contain any illustrations, pedigree or other matter which is untruthful or misleading. Where no posters are used to advertise the stallion the owner of the stallion must exhibit to owners of mares, on demand, the original certificate issued for his stallion. A penalty of not more than $100 and not less than $25, is provided by the Act, which will not come into operation until Aug. 1st, 1911.

Each plot is to be two rods long by one rod wide, except No. 28, which is to be one rod square. Any person in Ontario may choose any ONE of the experiments for 1911 and apply for the same. The material will be furnished in the order in which the applications are received while the supply lasts. It might be well for each applicant to make a second choice, for fear the first could not be granted. All material will be furnished entirely free of charge to each applicant, and the produce will, of course, become the property of the person who conducts the experiment. Ontario Agric. College, Guelph, March 11.

Canadians Eat Eggs from Many Countries

We Bought Over Nine Million Eggs from the United States Last Year and Large Quantities from China

Canada imported 893,324 dozen eggs during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1910. From the United States alone 757,316 dozen eggs came to Canada. China sent us 87,075 dozen, and Hong Kong 41,245 dozen, while small quantities came from Great Britain, France and Japan.

Our egg exports amounted to 164,835 dozen, but only 39,917 dozen went from Canada to the United States, so that we bought from the Americans 717,399 dozen more eggs than we sold to them. Canada sold 33,465 dozen eggs to Great Britain, 20,947 dozen to Newfoundland, 10,700 dozen to Bermuda, 2,196 dozen to the British West Indies, 44,100 dozen to Cuba, 12,555 to St. Pierre and a few dozen to British Guiana, Mexico and China.

Deducting our total exports of eggs from our total imports of eggs it will be found that Canadians consumed 728,489 dozen more eggs than the total production of eggs in Canada.

The duty on eggs coming into Canada is three cents per dozen. If the Reciprocity Agreement goes into effect this duty will be removed and the importation of eggs will greatly increase.

A board of tariff experts, recently appointed by the United States Government to compare Canadian and American prices, has reported on the price of eggs at Buffalo, Toronto, Burlington, Vt., Montreal, Lancaster, N.H., Sherbrooke, Que., Ogdensburg, N.Y., Prescott, Ont., Bangor, Eastport and Calais, in Maine, and St. Stephen, N.B.

The statement of prices prepared is for the month of January, 1911, and the result of the inquiry is shown in the following table:—

Place	Wholesale Price per doz.
Buffalo, N.Y.	.36
Toronto, Ont.	.40
Ogdensburg, N.Y.	.30
Prescott, Ont.	.32
Lancaster, N. H.	.27
Sherbrooke, Que.	.32
Burlington, Vt.	.27
Montreal, Que.	.35
Bangor, Me.	.30
Calais, Me.	.28
Eastport, Me.	.26
St. Stephen, N.B.	.33

It will be noted that the prices in Canada were considerably higher than in the United States.

Reciprocity will give the Canadian farmers the privilege of selling their eggs in the United States at lower prices than they can get for them in Canada, and it will give farmers of Australasia, the United States and twelve other foreign countries the right to send eggs into Canada free of duty.

The report of the United States Government experts also deals with the prices of other farm products in the two countries. The Canadian Century will publish the figures in future issues and those who read them will be convinced that Canadian farmers have nothing to gain by Reciprocity with the United States.

Important Events for 1911

(J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner.)

A further advance has been made in the cow testing movement by the organization of "Dairy Record Centres" in several localities. The Recorder, as the man in charge of each centre will be designated, will devote his whole time to a limited territory, covering something like a radius of six or eight miles. He will be expected to secure a complete census of every herd and to encourage as many as possible of the farmers in his district to keep accurate records of the individual cows. It is the intention to follow up this line of work for several years in each locality. Dairy Record Centres have already been established in Oxford county, Ontario, St. Hyacinthe county, Quebec, and at Kensington in Prince Edward Island. Others are likely to be started in the Eastern Townships and in central and eastern Ontario.

There is every prospect for another record year in dairying if the weather conditions are favorable. Winter feed has been abundant, including a large increase in supply of corn silage. There were probably more silos erected in Canada in 1910 than in any previous year.

There is a revival of interest in the question "paying by test" at cheese factories, and many factories will adopt the system this year for the first time, and many others will resume this method of declaring dividends.

The Minister of Agriculture has authorized the calling of a conference of dairy experts during the year 1911. It will probably be held during December next. A beginning has been made towards co-operation among the fruit growers in the province of Quebec. There is a great opportunity to improve the apple trade of that province. There are many fine old orchards, that include a large proportion of trees of some of the finest dessert apples in the world, which are almost non-productive through neglect. The renovation of these orchards and the proper handling and marketing of the crop would, under present conditions, yield a handsome return to the owners.

G. W. Boyce has sold his house to George Lane, of Bouck's Hill. Mr. Lane has rented to C. Pitt, who will move in as soon as possible.

(From another correspondent.)

Geo. Boyce left for Brockville on Monday evening. He has disposed of his property here and will move to that town in a few days. Mr. and Mrs. Boyce will be missed by their many friends in this locality.

Mrs. Wm. Shaver, son and daughter, of Winchester, were the guests of her mother, Mrs. King, on Sunday.

Mrs. C. Tuttle and Mrs. Torings, of Dundela, spent Sunday at Jerry Lane's.

Mrs. Casselman and sons, of Morrisburg, were guests of her daughter, Mrs. Reuben Loucks, on Sunday.

Jack Stewart, our genial baker, has severed his connections with the south end boarding house and has fitted up his house with all the necessaries of house-keeping. Jack says there is nothing like the comforts of life.

Mrs. Geo. Durant is on the sick list but we hope for a speedy recovery.

The Williamsburg cheese factory commenced operations on Monday with a good supply of milk for the first day of the season.

No announcements have been made, but from hearsay we believe there is to be an Easter concert in the Presbyterian church.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Strader and Mr. and Mrs. J. Becksted were spending Monday evening at Rev. Mr. Newton's at Elma.

Murray Robson, of Morrisburg, has been spending a few days in town.

C. Jarvis and Billy Flynn, two of our enterprising men and canine fanciers, are about to start a kennel in this thriving town. Anyone wishing to secure any thoroughbred Irish terriers directly imported from the Emerald Isle expressly for their kennel, will leave their orders at once, as business is on a small scale at present and first come first served. As an inducement for the first ten orders a guarantee of free taxation for one year will be furnished.

Ross Stata, veterinary-in-general, is a very busy man these days.

A load of our junior hockey players, journeyed to Morrisburg on Friday last to try conclusions with a team from that town. We have not been informed of how the score stood at the end of the game but neither side scored over fifty. Satchel says they were bombarding the goal with a gatling gun. The river air was very exhilarating that evening, as they nearly derailed an engine while crossing the track. There were two of the boys missing the next morning, but all have been accounted for at the time of writing.

The I. O. O. F. of Williamsburg, held a banquet in the Model Cafe on Monday evening, in honor of Mr. Geo. Boyce, who is leaving for Brockville. Everyone had a good time and from the number of empty bean cans and other food consumed we would judge they would save their wives the trouble of cooking the next day. Bill says he didn't have a very good appetite that evening.

THE EVENT OF A NIGHT

Through the fog came the sound of scuffling, then a loud report, a groan, and after that retreating footsteps.

Douglas Lesleigh paused and peered around him, uncertain precisely whence the noise had come. Another groan, fainter than the first, caused him to step aside to a spot near the railings, and what he saw made him catch his breath sharply.

A man lay on the pavement—a man wearing evening dress, as Lesleigh was, his covert coat was open, and a portion of the white shirt front was dyed a significant red. The refined, strong-featured face was deathly pale; the eyes were closed. For a moment Lesleigh thought the man was dead.

But the eyes opened and their gaze rested on him.

"What has happened? You are badly injured—I will get a doctor!" The stricken man made a feeble, deprecating gesture.

"I am beyond a doctor's skill, thanks all the same. There's something else you can do. There's a leather case in my inner vest pocket; in it you'll find a sealed letter ready stamped and addressed. Send it and the other contents to the person whose name you will see there. Do not mention the matter to anyone. The fog's getting thicker—I can't see. Thanks awfully—I know I can trust you." And then came a weak moan, a gasping, choking sound, and a little shudder—the man was dead.

Lesleigh bent over the body and took the leathern letter-case from the breast pocket as he had been requested. At the same moment the heavy, regular tramp of a constable came through the fog. In sudden realization of the difficult situation that might be cheated were he to be thus found with a portion of the dead man's property in his possession, he turned in the opposite direction. Simultaneously he heard the slight click of a gate near by and a small gloved hand was laid firmly on his arm.

He was vaguely conscious of a beautiful face illuminated by a pair of wonderful eyes that looked earnestly up into his; of a voice, soft, low, and musical, that yet had in it a note of authority it was impossible for him at that moment to ignore.

"Come away at once! Don't you see it won't do for you to be seen with—that?"

Before he could quite realize what it meant, Lesleigh found himself being led along a curving, gravelled path, and through a high lattice-work gate and past the rear of the house into a spacious summer-house. He stumbled as he entered, and something fell to the floor.

"You must stay here until I come," the girl said, speaking rapidly. "Don't smoke or do anything to let anyone else know you are here; if you do you may find yourself in very grave danger!"

With these words she left him, drawing some white, floating, clinging thing more closely about her shoulders as she moved away.

Seating himself on one of the rustic seats, which he found by groping in the darkness, he waited and thought over what had happened. Who was the girl, and why had she wished to save him from the grave possibilities of being found with the dead body of the man who had been murdered? And who was the dead man, and what special reason had he had that the contents of the pocket-book should be disposed of privately? It was evident he had been possessed by a potent desire for secrecy in the matter.

He wondered how long it would be before she returned to him and released him from his strange position. If he were discovered by anyone else it would certainly be a most awkward situation. The minutes dragged on and he began to chafe at the delay. Still there was no sign of the girl with whom he had had so brief and mystifying an acquaintance.

He distinctly heard the front door open and shut; other sounds, more or less distinct, also the conservatory. He was thinking of the leather case, and debating whether he was bound by the dying man's request not to mention the matter to anyone. It was evident Miss Mentworth knew nothing of this; the incident had but occupied a few moments and it had doubtless escaped her notice. Instinctively he put his hand over his breast-pocket; the case was gone! It must have slipped out when he stumbled on entering the summer house! He no longer hesitated; it was necessary to tell her. He paused as she was about to lead the way past a group of palms.

"The man who was shot handed me a leather case, and asked me to send it to a person whose name was inside," he explained, quickly; "I no longer have it—it must have dropped from my pocket when I stumbled; it must be in the summer-house. I ought to go back; it is a sacred trust to the dead and I must follow his wishes!"

A strange, new light leapt to her eyes.

"No, no!" she said fervently. "There is no time; people will be about who will see you. You must get away at once. I will look for the case and send it to you!"

A fresh thought came to him. Apart from other considerations it would be hard, very hard, never to see this girl again.

"I trust you will pardon me for my apparent boldness, Miss Mentworth," he said, in low, quick tones, "but I wonder whether you could arrange to return it to me yourself? It is a curious idea, perhaps, but I would rather it were not sent through the post. Could you possibly arrange to meet me anywhere?"

"I will be at the New Galleries, Bond Street, on Thursday afternoon, and will bring the case. It would be impossible for me to say to-morrow, as I have an engagement." This was Tuesday.

"You are very kind," he replied; and for a moment his gaze rested on her suddenly shy face in ill-concealed admiration.

By tacit consent they lapsed into silence, and Lesleigh followed Enid Mentworth into the corridor that led to the entrance hall, where, avoiding addressing him by name, she bid him adieu in an easy natural manner.

The fog had thickened, but as he left the premises he was conscious of a keen glance from a man who was strolling along the pavement at the very spot where the crime had taken place. For a moment he was beset by a sense of insecurity, but it swiftly left him.

And as he walked away in the direction where his chambers lay, the music of a soft, sweet voice lingered pleasantly in his ears.

There was a perplexing development at the inquest on the dead man. The post-mortem examination had revealed the strange fact that the bullet that had been the cause of death was of a larger calibre than that which fitted the revolver the alleged murderer had dropped as he darted away through the fog, and to the identity of the owner of which there was no clue. It did not, of course, disprove the inference that the owner had committed the act, since it was quite possible he had carried a second revolver of heavier make. But it was a point in favor of the untraced fugitive, and it was a point that puzzled both Enid Mentworth and Douglas Lesleigh not a little—particularly the former—when they read the account in the papers the following evening.

The next day the girl, true to her promise and looking charming in a neat, tailor-made costume and toque to match, entered the New Galleries with a new excitement shining in her eyes. Lesleigh approached her with a glad ejaculation, and they shook hands like old friends. Then, with a few commonplaces, he led her to one of the quieter salons and they began their talk.

"You found the pocket-book, Miss Mentworth?" was his first question.

"Yes, Mr. Lesleigh; I found it in the summer-house, and—here it is," she replied, producing the little case from her crocodile satchel. "But I have to make a confession," she added, with a little nervous glance at him; "there was something in it that I removed."

"Something you removed?" he replied, aghast at the statement.

"Yes, and before you can understand my motive there is something I must explain. I will tell you the truth; I feel it is safe with you." She regarded him with a questioning gaze that yet was trustful, and he knew instinctively that her explanation would merit his promise.

"Whatever you say will be absolutely safe with me," he said, very earnestly.

"It is unlikely that you and I will ever meet again after to-day"—Lesleigh started, and a look came into his eyes that made her avert hers—"so after you have heard what I have to tell you I should like you to judge me and say whether you blame me for my silence in regard to what I know and for tampering with the contents of the case."

"Basset Mowbray and my brother Browning were both infatuated by the same woman, a brilliant member of the diplomatic set in Brussels. Although at first her smiles were bestowed almost equally, it soon became clear that Browning was the more favored of the two. He and Mowbray had hitherto been good friends, and apparently they continued to be so. But secretly Mowbray set about trying to ruin my brother, and contrived by card jugglery and the like to get him heavily into his debt.

"A few days ago Mowbray got to know that Browning had been entrusted with a secret mission to Berlin, and that he would be returning direct to London. He obtained leave of absence, came to London, called on Browning, and managed by a trick to drug him and secure the important document he was to deliver the next morning to the chief of his department."

"When Browning recovered sensibility and found the paper had vanished he knew what had happened, and he also knew that it meant his ruin. His card losses were no secret, and Mowbray would probably cause it to appear that he had sold the document for money to pay his debts, declaring that Browning had paid him; Mowbray was wealthy and could well afford to sacrifice the amount."

"Was it any wonder that Browning was almost mad with rage? A man named Kielberg, who deals in these things—an agent for one of the Continental Powers—lives near my uncle's house; and my brother, guessing that one of Mowbray's first acts would be to negotiate with this person, intercepted him. Mowbray had been too clever to go direct from Browning's chambers, and so there was time to overtake him. I saw Browning a few minutes before, and he told me everything. He did not say he intended to kill Mowbray, but I warned him to be careful."

"When you told me about the case I guessed that it contained the stolen document, and I did not hesitate, for my brother's sake, to search it. It was there and is now in his hands. You can see for yourself the name of the person to whom Mowbray wished it to be sent; she is the woman I mentioned. I interfered with nothing but Browning's paper. The rest you already know, Mr. Lesleigh. Can you blame me for the way in which I have acted?"

"No, Miss Mentworth; I cannot and do not blame you," was Lesleigh's ardently uttered reply. "But what did you mean when you said it was unlikely we should ever meet again?" he added. "Why should that be, when I should so very much like you to honor me by regarding me in the light of a friend?"

"Can you wish to be the friend of a murderer's sister?" she asked. Her tone was a little bitter.

"What can it matter to me what your brother has done? Why should his act stand between our future friendship? What he did was wrong, no doubt, but it was the outcome of great provocation. Let us be friends, Miss Mentworth. Are you willing?"

"Yes, I am willing!" she murmured, in a low tone that was not quite steady.

"Thank you!" he said, very earnestly.

After a short silence they went on to talk about the inquest and the mystery of the bullet.

"Browning tells me he had but one revolver, which was the one they found," Enid said. "He is as much puzzled as I am."

"Did you notice there was a very loud report, almost as though there was an immediate echo, or another report simultaneously?" Lesleigh asked, musingly.

"I did notice it," said the girl.

After a while they talked of other matters.

"Don't you think we had better let your brother into the secret, Miss Mentworth?" Lesleigh suggested. "He could effect a formal introduction, you know, and then—"

He paused and their eyes met. Did they realize in that swift mutual glance that it was fated that theirs were linked lives? A week later, when it seemed that so far as the public were concerned the mystery of Basset Mowbray's death would have to be relegated to the long list of London's undiscovered mysteries, there was a surprising piece of news.

Otto Kielberg, the secret agent of whom Enid Mentworth had spoken, had been suddenly seized with appendicitis in an acute form. Realizing before the operation that there was little hope of his life being saved, he had confessed to having killed Basset Mowbray. His shot had been fired simultaneously with another, and being, as he believed, on the point of death, he felt it his duty to state the facts in case the owner of the revolver that had been found should be traced and accused of the crime. He had shot Mowbray in revenge for some trick he had played him in Berlin several months back.

It was only a few weeks after Kielberg's death that Enid and Douglas Lesleigh—who, on Browning Mentworth's introduction, had quickly become a recognized caller at her father's house—were alone in the dainty drawing-room.

They had seen each other a good deal of late, and something in the girl's manner told Douglas he need not fear to speak.

"Surely it is not necessary for me to keep silence any longer?" he said, very gently, as he took one small hand and held it tenderly. "I love you and—yes, I see it in your eyes—you love me!"

She did not turn away. Her mouth quivered. In an instant his arms were around her.

"Enid, my dearest, I want you! I think I have loved you from the very first hour we met. Will you be my wife?"

Shyly she raised her radiant eyes to his, and her lips formed the word he was awaiting.

It was scarcely audible, but he knew she was his from that time henceforth.—London Tit-Bits.

"RATS" AND SWITCHES.

Are Not Made of Hair Taken From the Dead.

Women who resort to "rats," switches and puffs of hair to reinforce nature need not think that they are wearing hair taken from the dead, according to the United States Consul-General at Hong Kong, China. He also contradicts the stories that have been circulated to the effect that much of the hair which goes to make up these "reinforcements" comes from queues that have been cut off. To substantiate this, he says that although thousands of queues have been cut off in Hong Kong during the past few months, the hair has not been sold.

The hair shipped from the Chinese Empire is the combings from well-to-do people, mostly women, says the Consul-General. Combings that formerly were thrown away, he adds, now are saved and sold to the barbers by Chinese maids. Barbers also obtain considerable hair while plying their trade, selling it to hair exporters. Much of the Chinese product is sent to Paris, and is exported from there to Canada and the United States as French hair.

OPERATES UPON HIMSELF.

Exhibition of Nerve Power the Talk of Paris.

M. Alexander Fzaicon, a 26-year-old Roumanian surgeon in Paris, France, is the talk of Paris for an act of cool heroism of a unique character.

He has been studying a new anesthetic, the action of which he calls rachistrychno-stovainisation. It leaves the patient lucid, but suppresses all sensibility, and M. Fzaicon intends to make his discovery the subject of the medical essay which he will present at his final examination, which he is to pass in a few weeks.

M. Fzaicon had been suffering from hernia, and an operation became necessary. He determined to try his new anesthetic and to test its efficacy by operating on himself.

The anesthetic was administered and the young doctor sat down at the operating table, and, after calmly performing the operation, stitched up the wound and went to bed. The operation took an hour to perform. He is now in a fair way to recovery.

Don't go too fast, young man, even if the road is smooth.

HEALTH APOSTLES IN A VAN.

English Women on a Gypsying Crusade Against Tuberculosis.

A novel way of fighting tuberculosis has been introduced in England by the Women's Imperial Health Association. Two caravans, as they call the luxurious vans in which high-bred folks go gypsying around the country, have been sent out by this society to spread a knowledge of hygiene among the ignorant classes.

"The van was supplied with everything that sufficed for the daily needs of an ordinary mortal," says a writer in the Gentlewoman in describing one of these tours, "though everything was of course as much as possible in tabloid form. A typical day was as follows: By 6 o'clock we were breakfasting in front of the caravan, our meal consisting of bacon, eggs, tea or coffee, bread and butter and marmalade.

"From 9 to 11.30 we washed up breakfast things, tidied up caravan and prepared midday meal and supper. Eleven-thirty to one was spent in shopping, business calls and for the arrangement of future meetings. Our midday meal occupied us for an hour, including clearing away and washing up.

"From 2.30 to 4 we probably either held a meeting in some parish room illustrated by moving pictures and lantern slides and then distributed literature or held a reception at the caravan for people who came to come and inspect and find out all about it. From 5 to 7 we wrote up reports of afternoon meetings and attended to our business correspondence generally.

"Supper occupied us until 8, when a large organized lecture by some special doctor was held in a public hall, the audience varying from 300 to 1,000."

SHOOTING BY R.M.S. NEPTUNE.

At Five Miles Shell From Big Gun Cut Down Flag Pole.

Service circles are keenly interested in the progress of the gunnery experiments now being carried on in the Mediterranean by H.M.S. Neptune. The conditions under which the experiments are being conducted provide as severe a test, as possible. The idea is new, H.M.S. Neptune is new, the ship's company is new, and therefore has not shaken down, as will be the case in a month or two.

On February 13 a flagstaff thirty feet high and four inches broad was dropped at a distance of nine thousand yards, or just over five miles from the ship. The flagstaff was invisible to the naked eye of any one on board the Neptune. When the button was touched by the control aloft five 12-inch shot went straight as a die to the target more than five miles off. The five shot fell in a space of a hundred and fifty yards. Such a volley would have crippled any Dreadnought afloat. The trials, on February 13 were only the beginning of the experimental gunnery course, and it is expected within a few days that the big guns of the Neptune will make three times as many hits in a minute as any previous Dreadnought has done before.

CHINESE MARRIAGE SOLEMN.

No Levity and Much Weeping in Ceremony.

A Chinese marriage is all ceremony—no talk, no levity and much crying. The solemnity of a funeral prevails. After the exchange of presents the bride is dressed with much care. A feast is spread upon a table, to which the blushing bride is led by five of her best female friends. They are seated at a table, but no one eats, says the London Globe. The utmost silence prevails, when finally the mother leads off in a cry, the maids follow, and the bride echoes in the chorus. Then all the bridesmaids leave the table, and the disconsolate mother takes a seat beside the chair of state where the bride sits. The bridegroom now enters with four of his best men. The men pick up the throne on which the bride sits and, in procession and walk around the room or into an adjoining parlor, signifying that he is carrying her away to his own home. The guests then throw rice at the happy couple.

DASHED UNDER THE BIG GUNS

HEROIC EXPLOIT OF LORD CHARLES BERESFORD.

Many Gallant Acts Were to His Credit That Demanded Supreme Courage.

After more than fifty years' service in the Navy, Admiral Lord Charles Beresford has now retired, having reached the age at which that step becomes imperative under the regulations. That he feels deeply the final separation from the service he loved, and in which he was one of the most popular of the higher officers, one cannot doubt. And the regret will be felt keenly among those he leaves behind.

But he will take into retirement the high satisfaction of knowing that he won the approbation of three Sovereigns, the deep affection of the nation, and the esteem of all with whom he had been brought into contact during his professional career.

Having joined the Britannia, as a naval cadet in 1859, he was after appointed to the Marlborough, and subsequently to the Defence. And although at the moment there were no opportunities to earn the approval of the country upon a field of battle or upon the deck of one of the ships of the British Fleet, he was not long before he gave a sample of the kind of work that might be expected from him when the opportunity came.

WAS VERY BRAVE.

It was while serving in the Defence that he saved the first of several lives by his courage. The ship was lying in the Mersey, when a shout went up that there was a man overboard. Without an instant's delay young Beresford leaped to the rail, and from thence dived into the water, holding up his man until a boat could be sent to his assistance. For his pluck he was awarded the medal of the Royal Humane Society, which, with its bar for further act of courage and life-saving, is still doubtless one of his most cherished trophies.

It was only a few years later that he earned the second reward by a particularly plucky act. It was in the early part of 1871, and his ship was lying in Port Stanley, on the Falkland Islands. There was plenty of sport to be had ashore, and the young officer was just going to start on a little expedition of that character.

But as he was about to step down the gangway, a marine fell over the ship's side, and was at once seen to be in danger of losing his life. Beresford had a heavy shooting jacket. Moreover, his pockets were bulging with ammunition.

Yet he was after the drowning marine while others were wondering what had better be done, or waiting for a boat to be got out. He was successful in saving the man's life in spite of his weighty clothes and cartridges, and when the news came ashore the society decided to add a clasp to the medal they had already given him.

LIFE-SAVING INCIDENT.

Before telling the story of the Condor there is another life-saving incident that stands to the credit of the brave officer. He had but three years' service, and was still on the Defence, when it happened. Indeed, it was only a few months after the incident for which he received the medal already referred to. The ship was lying in Dublin Bay, and a boat was going ashore with some liberty men. Before the occupants had quite settled down one of them fell into the water. Beresford was scarcely more than a boy, and in his earlier days was but a weak little chap. But he had strong courage, and without hesitation went to the assistance of the drowning man. For this he was awarded the medal of another society.

It was in January, 1882, that he obtained command of the Condor, one of the gunboats of the Mediterranean squadron, and six months later he was the hero of the incident that has remained firmly fixed in the romantic side of historical reminiscences ever since.

The British fleet, under Admiral Sir F. B. Seymour, was engaged in the bombardment of the Alexandria. The enemy were effectively replying, and when, in the course of the bombardment, the Temeraire went ashore, she was in considerable danger from the guns of the fort.

Lord Charles Beresford was ordered to render her all the assistance possible in getting her floated, and when he had done the work allotted to him he started on something that was even more to his taste.

DISABLED TEMERAIRE.

The Marabout Fort had been particularly active in throwing its projectiles in dangerous proximity to the Condor and the disabled Temeraire, and the commander of the little gunboat determined to pay her back with some of her own coin.

An order was given, and in a moment those who were watching saw almost with horror that the Condor was dashing right under the very mouths of the guns of the fort, and engaging in a duel with them.

For a time those who witnessed the incident almost held their breath, expecting to see the frail little craft sink, with a well-placed shot inside her. The Condor had only three guns in all, a 7 inch and two 54-pounders. The fort was armed with two 12 inch, two 9 inch, twenty 32-pounders and five mortars. The odds were appalling. But the little gunboat spit her fire at the flame-belching mass of guns overhead, and before the enemy could depress their aim sufficiently to get at the little wasp that was stinging so disagreeable from below, the signal had been run up from the commander-in-chief's flagship, "Well done, Condor!" Beresford's name was at once on the tongues of the nation as that of a British sailor of the type of which the country and the empire have been proud since there has been a navy and an empire.

FIGHT WITH A LION.

A Hunter's Experience With Big Game in East Africa.

The ostrich camp near Sir Alfred Pease's homestead at Athi River had been worried by lions, and a hunting party was organized consisting of Sir Alfred Pease, G. Grey, Howard and Edward Pease, Capt. Slatyer, Mr. Clifford and H. M. Hill. They divided into two parties, one consisting of Sir Alfred and Mr. Hill, says the East African Standard.

After about half an hour's ride Mr. Hill espied two large lions and the party of two galloped after the quarry. Sir Alfred followed the bigger and slower animal and Mr. Hill the leader. The object of the hunters was to turn the game into a donga (creek) and thus to give time for the other party to come up, hoping that Mr. Grey would be given the opportunity to open the shoot. He was a sportsman with a fine reputation for high courage and was no novice with big game.

Unfortunately Mr. Grey on seeing the game at once put his horse to the gallop and practically started to course the lions. His companions were immediately alarmed at his temerity and endeavored to warn him of the danger he was courting. They were doubly alarmed at seeing one of the lions preparing to charge.

Mr. Hill dismounted and fired a quick shot at the bigger lion in the hope of distracting his attention from Mr. Grey, who jumped off his pony and waited the onslaught. At about twenty yards he fired. The shot went into the shoulder but did not stop the charge. He got in another shot at about five yards, hitting the lion in the mouth, breaking two of his fangs. Then the lion flung his victim to the ground and began to worry him like a dog would a mouse.

Meanwhile H. Pease had followed Mr. Grey and with Sir Alfred and Mr. Hill galloped to the lion and his victim. When they were some fifty yards away the lion noticed his fresh antagonists and ceased to maul Mr. Grey.

At twenty-five yards the party dismounted and ran in. The lion immediately made toward them. At this moment of peril Mr. Hill's rifle jammed. Sir Alfred and H. Pease fired and the balls entered the lion's ribs. The wounded animal then returned to his victim.

The horrified relief party scarcely remember what happened during the next brief moments further than that the lion was on top of Mr. Grey and animal and man were so mixed up that it was most difficult to distinguish the former's head from the latter's body. It was found impossible to get in a deadly head shot until the lion was almost lifeless. During the fray the other lion was only about one hundred yards away, growling and lashing his tail. The hunters, having only two .256 rifles, paid no attention to the second animal.

Mr. Grey's wounds were very numerous. The lion severely clamped his face and head, bit his arms, hands and thighs and inflicted wounds on his back. Mr. Grey died in a hospital at Nairobi.

SALT BATHS BANISH COLDS.

Chicago's Health Bureau also Advises Using Salt Soda.

"Salt baths" will keep you from catching cold. This is the advice given in the latest bulletin of Chicago's health bureau.

"The skin is second in importance to our lungs and kidneys in renovating our system," it states. "Hence, how needful are clean skins. Here is a bath suggestion: Instead of soap use sal. soda, or bi-carbonate of soda (baking soda). They will clean the skin quicker and better.

"When through wipe thoroughly and then dash the whole body over with a cold saturated solution of common salt, and wipe sparingly. This is one of the best skin tonics and bracers against colds. Many a cold has been thwarted and many a coddled skin girted up by this plan. Rock-ribbed, germ-proof health is largely attained by healthy skins."

BRITONS HOLD THEIR OWN

AGAINST GERMAN AND AMERICAN COMPETITION.

Gigantic Engineering Feats Prove That Britain is Not a Back Number.

In spite of what gloomy pessimists may say about Great Britain losing her grip of the world's trade, it would appear that in engineering, at any rate, we are not only holding our own, but grabbing other people's, says Pearson's Weekly.

This comforting reflection arises from the fact that British engineering firms have recently secured, in the teeth of strenuous German and American competition, the contracts for two great South American railways.

TO COST $21,250,000.

The President of Chili has signed a decree accepting the offer of Messrs. Griffiths & Co. to build the new Chilean railway between Cabildo and Toledo, a distance of about four hundred miles, at a cost of $21,250,000. Mr. Norton Griffiths, M.P., the head of the firm, has started for Chili, and from all quarters of the globe the firm's engineers have been ordered by cable to join their chief at the seat of operations.

Some idea of the tremendous task undertaken by the contractors may be formed from the fact that they estimate they will require a million sleepers and over thirty-five thousand tons of rails. There will be just under three miles of bridges and rather more than three miles of tunnels, and the earth to be removed is estimated at 14,000,000 cubic yards. With the exception of the sleepers, which will come from America, all the rails, tools for construction, and engines will be ordered in England.

This railway, which will be completed within five years, will ultimately form part of the much-talked-of Pan-American railroad system which is to extend from New York to Valparaiso. From Toledo a railway already runs up to Arica, and from Arica to La Paz another railway is being built by British capital.

A German syndicate was very keen on getting the contract for the Arica-La Paz railway, but it was secured by a company in which Messrs. Griffiths are largely interested, the contract price being $15,000,000.

NO RAIN FOR FORTY YEARS.

For more than half the distance from Arica the line runs through a barren desert without any sign of vegetation, and this enormously complicates the difficulties of building. There has not been a shower of rain in the neighborhood for forty years, and the absence of rain is so certain that the contractors have not troubled to build sheds to shelter some thousands of tons of Portland cement, but have left it out in the open.

About five hundred mules are constantly employed in carrying food, water, and materials up the mountains, water at one time having to be carried over thirty miles. More suitable water-carrying arrangements have recently been made, however, by means of a line of pipes about eighty miles long.

As our readers may remember, another great South American railway, the recently opened Trans-Andean Railway, is also British built, and these are only the larger of the engineering works being carried out in South America by British capital.

REGISTERED AS AMERICANS.

Middlesborough engineering firm recently wrested a big contract from the grip of several powerful American firms. This was a contract for 6,000 tons of steelwork comprising 400 bridges, varying in length from 7 feet to 105 feet, required in connection with the doubling of the South Manchurian Railway system between Su-chra-tun and Dalny.

Another British firm triumphantly carried the war into the enemy's country, and has recently finished the tunnelling of East River, New York, a tunnel the Americans were unable to build for themselves.

To obtain the contract the firm had to go through the formality of registering themselves as an American company, and they also had to agree to a penalty of $2,000,000 if they failed in their undertaking.

In the middle of the river is a low reef breaking up through slit and quicksand, but in few places was this reef high enough to cover the outer rim of the tunnel. This simply means that to drive through the quicksand the men had to work in compressed air that would resist the tendency of the quicksand to rush in and overwhelm them, and at the same time there was a constant danger of the roof of the tunnel being blown out by the immense pressure of air from within.

Men affected by compressed air die so quickly that special arrangements had to be made and doctors were kept in readiness for emergencies day and night.

SIR OLIVER LODGE'S VIEWS

SAYS CONCEPTION OF DEITY IS HUMANLY SIMPLE.

The Great Scientist Says It Appeals to the Ignorant and Babies.

No scientific man compels greater interest and attention in Great Britain when dealing with religious matters than Sir Oliver Lodge. His great lay sermon on the subject of "Christian Revelation" from the scientific point of view was the outstanding event at the National Free Church Council meeting recently at Portsmouth, England. Sir Oliver declared that he had learned to regard the universe as a concrete, full-bodied reality with its parts accessible and intelligible to all. Among other things he said: "God can be regarded as displayed to us in such fashion as we can make use of in the person of an incarnate being, who came for the express purpose of revealing to man such attributes of the Deity as would otherwise have been missed."

At another point Sir Oliver advised his hearers to "always mistrust negations. The impossibility of squaring a circle is not really a negative proposition except in form. Negations commonly and prejudice always, except when they are thoroughly established and carefully formulated in the light of actual experience or mathematical proof. Even then, I would be ready to admit the possibility of higher generalizations which may uproot them. They are only safe when thrown in the form of a positive assertion. Always try for a positive form of any comprehensive denial. If it cannot be thrown in positive form, mistrust it. Its promulgator is probably stepping out of bounds into the easy region of negative speculation. He is like the rationalistic microbe, denying the existence of a human being."

In summing up his convictions, Sir Oliver said: "Progress lies in careful investigation as well as speculation and thought up to the limits of human power. When things are really understood, they are perceived to be fairly simple after all. The Christian conception of God is humanly simple. It appeals to the man in the street, to the unlettered, the ignorant and babes. That is the way with the greatest things. The sun is the center of the solar system, full of mystery and unforseen force. But the sunshine is a friendly, homely thing that touches common objects and conduces to comfort, yes; and conduces to the comfort of the cat. Sunshine is not the sun, but is the human, terrestrial aspect of the sun.

A GLORIOUS OBJECT,

"Thus would I represent the Christian conception of God. Christ is the human, practical, workaday aspect. Christ is the sunshine, that fraction of the transcendent Deity which suffices the earth."

In dealing with miracles, Sir Oliver said they were no more impossible, nor more lawless than the interference of a human being would seem to a colony of ants and bees. "The region of the miraculous," concluded Sir Oliver, "has been hastily and illegitimately denied. So long as we do not imagine it to be a region denuded of a law and order of its own akin to the law and order of a psychological realm, our denial has no foundation."

INSURING AGAINST DEVILS.

Curious Way the Chinese Have of Taking Out an Annual Policy.

Once every year, during the first fifteen days of the seventh Chinese month, the curious ceremony of Yu-Nan-Whei is celebrated, being in fact the paying of homage to the land and sea devils.

Seven priests carry out the ceremony by offering up various forms of prayer, says the Wide World Magazine, and making an unearthly noise by beating gongs.

Any one wishing to show his respect to the devils can do so by a payment of 600 cash—about 22 cents—to each of the priests, for which amount they will continue their performance for twelve hours—a truly modest remuneration.

For an extra payment of 2,000 cash a number of small red paper boats about six inches long, with lights inside, will be sent floating down the river with the current. These lights are for the benefit of the sea devils in order that they may be able to see their way about on dark nights.

Having finished their performance the person on whose behalf it has been carried out goes away happy in the conviction that he will not lose any of his family throughout the year either from sickness or drowning, so that the whole ceremony may be looked upon as an insurance policy. At this time of year many thousands of the small lighted boats may be seen floating down the Yang-tze-kiang.

CORONATION JEWELRY.

Real Coronets are Cheaper Than the Imitations.

London jewelers are working overtime in producing all manner of coronation novelties. Imitation coronets for those who are not entitled to wear the real article are among them. Strange to say, real coronets are cheaper than the imitations.

The special tiaras and coronets which the fashionable jewelers are turning out for the coming social festivities range in price from $500 to $50,000 or more. They are set with pearls and diamonds in elaborate designs and when not worn as a hair ornament some of them can be converted into necklaces.

The coronets worn by the nobility are plain affairs in comparison. Only the Royal coronets can be set with jewels. Those worn by peers and peeresses are fashioned in silver gilt and a nice one can be had for $500 or a little more.

Imitation coronets are not the only expensive articles of jewelry to which the coronation year is lending a wide popularity. Hatpins mounted with gold crowns are being turned out in large numbers. Facsimiles of the pure gold anointing spoon which plays a part in the coronation ceremony have already found place in many homes.

The new King George coinage is being made up into brooches and waist belts, and dainty tiepins are on sale with Royal crowns and tiny jewelled sceptres to ornament them.

NEWS OF GERMAN SCHOOLS

TAKING CARE OF THE HEALTH OF THE CHILDREN.

New Ideas Have Been Developed and Improvements Have Been Introduced.

In Germany gymnastic exercises in the open air during recesses and after school hours are held in the lower schools of 193 cities. Sessions are interrupted by calisthenic exercises in the schools of 236 cities and breathing exercises by open windows in the schools of 160 cities.

Orthopedic gymnastics for children suffering from curvature of the spine are arranged in 23 cities. In 205 cities the school authorities offer opportunities for swimming baths in pools with constantly changing water.

Gymnastic school excursions on free afternoons (Wednesdays and Saturdays) are made in 163 cities; games for children in the open air on playgrounds and in neighboring groves are arranged in 357 cities, and in 332 the teachers are obliged to take their classes out walking through woods and fields. Four cities have arranged rowing matches, skating on ice is promoted in 174 cities, 226 cities have play afternoons as regular school lessons. In 36 cities are main tained, three have forest homes for sickly children and eight have forest schools.

As many as 443 cities offered instruction in the upper grades of school on the evil effects of alcohol. In 20 cities school dental clinics are established, and in 15 other cities such clinics were planned, the authorities merely waiting for the required appropriation; 53 cities attend in other ways to the teeth of their school children and in 163 an examination of the children's teeth takes place at regular stated intervals.

In 274 cities cities a careful examination of children's eyes is made at intervals and records are kept; three cities have appointed professional oculists for that purpose and 215 furnish glasses at the city's expense. For children with defective hearing 131 cities have appointed experts, but only 24 have arranged special schools for such children.

In 196 cities courses of instruction for teachers for curing defects of speech are arranged; in 171 cities special treatment of throat and nose diseases and for children suffering from impediments in their speech, is arranged. Also for children with and for weak minded children 103 auxiliary classes in fully graded schools and 169 independent auxiliary schools are established.

In 238 communities special physicians are appointed to determine the existence of tuberculosis among the school children; 109 cities merely exclude such children from attendance at school; in 139 other cities such children are sent to appropriate institutions at the city's expense.

To all the efforts mentioned in the foregoing may be added the duty of feeding hungry children which is done in 301 cities. This is not done in Germany from charitable motives; free breakfasts or lunches are not given or taken as alms, but the whole movement is prompted by pedagogical motives, since instruction to hungry children is about as useless as it is to sick children.

It may be stated that the appointment of school physicians is to-day almost universal in Germany, and that in consequence of the work of these men as well as of school nurses new ideas have been developed and improvements have been introduced, so that the foregoing report is in some of its statements already antiquated.

The essentials to domestic strife are a fussy husband and a nagging wife.

Rheumatism comes from bad kidneys. The poisonous Uric Acid which they should remove stays in the blood, accumulates in joints and muscles, and causes agony. ## STANDING FIELD CROP COMPETITION

To be Again Conducted by the County Agricultural Society

The Dundas Agricultural Society, in conjunction with the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will again conduct a Standing Field Crop Competition. Oats will be the crop in the competition. The main objects are:

1. Stimulating a greater interest in the growing of first-class grain.
2. Encouraging the practice of growing seed for next year's crop in a field by itself, using only the best obtainable grain from the largest yielding straws, sowing it on the cleanest and best prepared land, allowing it to ripen, and threshing and storing separately.
3. Producing pure seed, i. e. free from other varieties, the presence of which can best be detected when the crop is growing.

Promoting the sowing of seed from clear, vigorous crops of uniform stand with bright, stiff straw.

5. Ensuring careful and intelligent farming and the production of grain free from weeds.

Fifty dollars in prizes divided as $15, $12, $10, $8 and $5 will be offered.

The only conditions are that the competitors must be members of the County Agricultural Society and must pay an entrance fee of $1.00. This is the time to make preparations by securing the very best seed possible. Entries should be made to Charles Styles, Secretary, or to A. D. Campbell.

CHURCH TO FOUND SOCIETY

Lutheran Denomination Takes the First Steps to That End.

The following is from the New York Times of Friday last, and the Dr. Hayunga referred to is a former resident of East Williamsburg:—

"The first steps were taken last night at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Central Park West and Sixty-fifth street, for the erection of a Lutheran hospital and dispensary. A constitution for the Society of the Lutheran Hospital of the City of New York was adopted tentatively, and Dr. George Hayunga of 504 Canal street, who has been prominent in Lutheran church work, was elected president.

"The constitution states that the object of the society shall be 'to found institutions in New York City for social and material betterment as an extension of the moral and ethical church work.'

"No site has yet been selected for the proposed hospital, but it was stated at the close of the meeting that it would probably be located in the upper part of Manhattan. Robert Schey was elected secretary; John A. Prigge, treasurer, and Robert E. Gaskell, H. Cording, the Rev. F. B. Clausen, and the Rev. W. H. Feldman, members of the executive committee. Carl Pikhart, the Rev. F. H. Knubel, and the Rev. F. H. Borsch were elected vice presidents.

License Act Amendments

Amendments to the License Act by the Ontario Legislature include the following:—

Municipal councils will not be allowed in future to reduce licenses. This can be done only by vote of electors, and bylaw must be submitted if petition is received containing ten per cent. of names on voters' list. The bylaw will carry on a fifty per cent. vote. After passing, no further reductions can be made for three years.

The powers of officers to search for liquor that is being smuggled into "dry" districts are greatly increased, and instead of being limited to trains or express companies, they can search trunks, bags or other receptacles, which are believed to contain liquor intended for sale, whether in control of any person or not.

No petition is required for a renewal of summer licenses.

Only bona fide voters in permanent residence may vote on local option bylaws.

Bylaw cannot be quashed on ground of creating a monopoly.

The exempted sum on bar receipts which on Monday night was raised from $40 to $50, was on Tuesday night further raised to $60 in cities, remaining at $50 in other places. The change was to offset the higher license fees in cities.
