Mr. McMillan was in his 86th year and had been in indifferent health for the past year. He was born at Dunbar, a son of the late Daniel McMillan and Susan Hill.

In 1892 he was married at South Mountain to the former Margaret Jane Brown who predeceased him in 1939.

In his younger years he had taken an active interest in farm organizations, was a school trustee and an active member for many years on the Presbyterian church, Dunbar, where he was a life long member.

McMillan of Williamsburg township and four daughters, Susan of Bethune Bush, Mrs. Bismark Barkley of Dunbar, Mrs. Sheldon Ball of Maple Ridge, Mrs. Rodney Hummel, Toronto. ## Pledge Cards Revised For Winchester Memorial Hospital

Directors of the Winchester District Memorial Hospital held a lengthy session on Monday evening with the chairman, Mr. Walter C. MacDonald, presiding, and Mr. C. R. Robinson at the secretary's desk.

A payment of $19,000.00 was made on the building contract, making the total paid to date a little over $46,000.

One of the main items on the agenda at Monday's meeting was the revision of pledge cards. Every pledge was inspected and overdue payments noted. After some discussion, it was decided to make a list of all those who were in arrears with pledged payments, and give the names to the original canvassers, who will be asked to interview the parties concerned and report back at a meeting of the Board to be held next Tuesday. With the building activity being greatly accelerated in an effort to have the hospital closed in before the more severe winter weather arrives, all available finances will be required to meet the Board's obligations, and it is hoped that those who have neglected to make payments on their pledges will realize the situation and will bring their payments up-to-date.

Melvin Scott and David Melvin were named to have charge of the sale of tickets on a car, and an offer was received and accepted from Miss Mary Mercill, of Ottawa, a former resident, of the donation of a handmade lace table cloth with which to raise funds. This cloth, which took one year of spare time to crochet, is worth more than $100, and when received will be displayed in the different centres of the hospital area.

Ernest B. McMillan, of Chesterville, was asked to look after the memorial book which will be placed in the entry, which will have inscribed the names of those who gave their lives in this last war.

ICE SOON IN THE ARENA

With the continued cold weather, flooding is proceeding at a good pace in the Chesterville Arena, and it is hoped to have a fine sheet of ice very soon. The impatience of the small fry for some place to skate is taken care of to some extent by the condition of our sidewalks and side streets. They have proved very slippery and treacherous all week, with a light fall of powder snow to compound the difficulties.

Holstein Breeders Hold Banquet At Morewood

Speaking at the Annual Banquet of the Dundas Holstein Breeders' Club held December 3 in the United Church Hall, Morewood, John Powell of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada said, "Canadian Holsteins have tion for quality. To maintain this tation for quality. To maintain this reputation Canadian breeders must use every available tool that will enable them to still further improve the quality of their stock." Mr. Powell noted that exports so far this year have totalled close to 20,000 head and these have gone to 20 different countries. "Holding these markets is well worth our best efforts" he said. He then showed colored moving pictures taken in South America and including part of the judging at the great Palermo Livestock Show in Argentine, one of the largest and finest stock shows in the world.

Club President Harold McMenomy, Inkerman, was in charge and there was an attendance of approximately 200. Dominion Holstein Director, W. J. Fawcett, Winchester, urged the breeders support their County Black and White Day. Other speakers included W. Preston applied sutures and was later allowed to return home.

Modern Pioneers Move Quickly

In the Auction Sales of the Record last week, there appeared the notice that Mr. Ward Johnston was holding an auction sale last Saturday. Behind that innocent notice lies an interesting story of an example of modern pioneering that will meet with the approval and admiration of many of us who are farmers or have been, and that covers just about all the community.

The Wauters family, Mr. and Mrs. Wauters, five boys and one daughter are Belgians. In their homeland they were the owners of a profitable brick manufacturing concern, until European markets became so disorganized with the post-war turmoil of recovery. They decided to come to Canada and start afresh and thus began the chain of events that brought them to Chesterville. They arrived in Montreal two weeks ago on Thursday, came to Chesterville on Monday to interview Mr. Johnston, bought his farm, lock, stock and barrel on Wednesday and moved in on Monday, December 1, last. Apart from the speed of the transaction, there was nothing particularly stratling in the whole thing, until it transpired that the Wauters family had never milked a cow. They had always had their milk delivered. So we can picture their efforts and have nothing but unbounded admiration for the courage and desire to succeed that is shown by this new family in our community. Their job will not be easy, but if their efforts are successful it will be a perfect example of modern poneering in the New World.

PAINTED FARM HOMES LOOK WELL KEPT

French Canada's gayly-painted farm houses help create a community friendliness which frequently is lacking in less well-kept districts, says Gustave Plochere, American color authority, writing in a U.S. publication. Says Mr. Plochere:

"The farm houses around Quebec are mostly built of stone plastered over and the majority of these are painted white over the stucco; but their doors, shutters, window frames and sills are all colored like the city houses, most of them in two, three and four color combinatons. In some cases the window frame itself has two contrasting colors and a third color on the screen frame and a fourth color on the window sill.

"The frame houses which are not quite as old as the stucco houses (most stucco houses are over 100 years old) display a greater variety of color, mostly in grays, buffs and tans on the siding and the two, three and four color combinations on the trim and doors.

"What a difference all these colors make in a community, both from the artistic point of view as well as the spiritual side. It seems that all the inhabitants are happier than in most places; a friendly smile on everyone's face, a wave of the hand as you go by instead of the sullen stare you so often see."

A BRITISH DAIRY SHOW

The British Dairy Farmers' Association has just held its 61st Annual Dairy Show at Olympia, London, which a few days before had been filled by exhibtis of the newest developments in radio.

Richard Dimbleby and Freddie Grisewood were there to record interviews with some of the exhibitors and judges, interviews which were heard both in the BBC's Home and Overseas programmes. Dimbleby, himself a prospective farmer, was intensely interested in the cattle on show, nearly five hundred cows of the best British milking strains, Jerseys, Guerneys, Ayrshires, Friesians, etc., all from attested herds in which every beast was certified free from any form of tuberculosis. Each cow was worth something like a thousand guineas—a calmly chewing cluster of cattle worth nearly half a million pounds. These exquisite milk-providers were washed all over daily and brushed many a time during the show, the White Shorthorns even being powdered before brushing to ensure a dazzling whiteness in the show ring. Not a hint of a moo came from any of them to spoil the BBC's recording, for a contented cow is a silent cow and the five hundred ladies on exhibit were all supremely contented. Well they might be, for they were comfortably bedded down in thick straw, many had coats on some of them ultra-smart garments sporting the owner's initials—and all had their own herdsmen, some so devoted that they spent the night on the straw by their charges. They were looked after as carefully as prize racehorses, brought to the show in special lorries, and carefully guarded.

The first grade milk from these cows is sold at a considerably higher price than ordinary milk but during the show it was distributed as part of London's ordinary milk supply, so that many Londoners received much better quality milk than usual.

Rich country accents from all over England were heard at Olympia, mixed with Scottish voices—chiefly round the Ayrshires' pens—Welsh and Irish. There was a good background of the native Cockney, for one of the objects of this 61st Dairy Show was to bring to the townsfolk some knowledge of the farmer's job. They know only too well that milk is in short supply, but know little of the cows who give it or the men whose job it is to see that it is distributed as quickly and cleanly as possible. The Dairy Show, with its exhibits of cows, herdsmen, milking machinery and every aid to farming efficiency, did much to remedy the deficiency, and to show that British dairy farming today is a highly scientific and well-organised industry.

HIGH BUTTER PRICE NOT IN INTERESTS OF DAIRY INDUSTRY

Retail butter prices at any higher levels are not in the long term interests of any section of the Canadian Dairy Industry, R. C. Smellie, president of the National Dairy Council of Canada, told the Ontario Creamery Association.

"If Canadians will voluntarily moderate consumption to what they were accustomed to during war years, we will get through this Winter without shortages", stated Mr. Smellie. "It is consumer demand which is driving butter prices upward in the face of limited supply, and the remedy againt higher butter prices remains in the hands of the consumer", said Mr. Smellie, who is himself a butter manufacturer.

SPEAKING OF RIVER DRIVERS

By D. H. SMITH, Sault Ste. Marie

I well remember a colourful fellow who came to one of my drives many years ago. It was on a Sunday evening. He asked for a job, but the foreman said no. However, after observing a blue roving eye, he changed his mind and gave him blankets. Monday morning, after the other men had left, he gave him a cross-cut saw, an axe, a peavey and pike pole, and told him to go down the river to where he would find two trees that had fallen into the water. He was to trim up the trees, cut them into logs, and roll them into the river. The foreman, of course, expected he would walk down the shore. But no, Mr. River Driver, with a shoepack on one foot, a rubber on the other, walked down to the river, rolled a sawlog into the water, stuck the peaveby into the log, stuck the axe into the log beside the peavey, placed the cross-cut saw between the peavey and the axe, shoved the sawlog out from shore into the current and stuck the pike pole into the log leaning it against his shoulder. Standing on the log he started off down stream, unconcerned, rolling a cigarette. His name was Taffy Adams and he worked for us a long time. He was one of the old times.

DOES MILADY KNOW ABOUT DIAMONDS?

When the prospective bride receives her engagement ring set with the popular precious stone, diamond, what does she know about this gem except that it sparkles?

Strangely enough, the diamond, with the most brilliant lustre of all substanaces, and the black graphite in our "lead" pencils consist of the same element—carbon. Diamond is the hardest substance known while graphite, on the other hand, is among our softest minerals. Artificial graphite is made from anthracite in an electric furnace, but all attempts to manufacture artificial diamonds have resulted in the production of but a few small stones lacking the brilliant lustre of the natural diamond.

Diamonds may be divided in a general way into two classes. These are the ordinary or "white" diamond, and the "black" diamond, also known as carbonado. The ordinary diamond has blue, yellow and other shades of colour; it is brittle and does not stand shocks as well as the black variety. Black diamonds were for a long time the only ones used in diamond drills but they came almost entirely from Brazil and their scarcity and high price have caused most drillers to turn to non-gem or "industrial" diamonds of the ordinary variety. Industrial diamonds are in great demand for diamond saws, drills, special cutting tools, dies and grinding powders. Only diamond will cut diamond.

Very few diamonds have been found in North America, and some of these in the glacial drift of the northern United States may have come from Canada. Their source has long been a mystery. In South Africa, diamonds originate in pipe-like bodies of kimberlite, a dark coloured basic rock, which is concentrated in a mill to almost an unbelievable degree. In one mine 50,000 tons of rock lave been concentrated to about one cubic foot and this contains practically all the diamonds from this great quantity of rock.

Milady would enjoy a visit to the mineralogical galleries of the Royal Ontario Museum where she will see both white and black diamonds exhibited with other precious stones.

Nature Is the Best Mother

Every little while we make comparisons to her disadvantage, but we should take care not to overdo it. It is perfectly true that millions of fertile pine seeds scattered over the earth from naturally opening cones never have a chance, whereas in a nursery they may all germinate. In nature's crop of seedlings not one in hundreds can possibly amount to anything. Then we all know that the mother codfish lays so many eggs that if they all hatched, the sea would be solid fish. In both cases the loss in seed stock is very high.

In a hatchery, more eggs are fertilized to start with, and the fry are not wasted. Not one in a score of wild fry can ever survive. The fingerlings may be released practically one for an egg. What a contrast!

Let's not be foolish about our ability to improve on nature. She is merely lavish. Her vast production is effortless, and the result is a forest or a crop of fish at no cost to us. Where niches in the environment are few, few seeds make pine trees. On the other hand, should a fire have passed leaving exposed mineral soil and with seed trees standing, there will be a dense crop of seedlings. Similarly a trout fly, in a lake full of trout, has a poor chance. If he does come through we can be sure he is a first-class trout. In a barren lake, all the fry might live.

Artificial rearing of fish has been established as a necessary adjunct to fish culture practice. It provides the opportunity of replenishing depleted waters with certain species upon which the sportsman concentrates, and minimizes the initial losses which occur under natural conditions. It is a fact, however, that we get better forests for nothing than we can ever plant, and the same thing is true of fish. Only in the unusual environment of some barren lakes can we point with certainty to a first-class fishery that has not the support of a natural crop. For the great majority of our finest fisheries, there is never the least doubt, because there has been no restocking. For some, it may never be possible to restock. For nearly all, it ought to be unnecessary. When the big fellows move into the spawning beds, the new crop is in the making. In most cases the regulations provide for a closed season during the spawning period. The need for these restrictive periods is quite obvious, particularly in waters which are heavily fished. Artificial planting can supplement, but never supercede, natural reproduction.

Unfortunately, the habits of pioneering times die hard. Our ancestors needed food and cared little for sport. Generally speaking, too, their waters were underfished. They speared and netted the spawners with never a thought for the future. It would appear that in many cases, the third, fourth and fifth generations still feel the same way about it. In pioneer days, not only did the taking of a few spawners not matter, but food was the prime use. Nowadays, not only does the pressure of sport fishing make spearing wrong, but the economic loss where the assured future of sport is jeopardized through misuse of the resources is really astonishing. We can't afford it, neither can the law breakers, if they only knew. For years the Government and sportsmen have been preaching the gospel of conservation, as the only means of maintaining good fishing conditions. Illegal taking of fish during the spawning season, by spear or by any other means, deserves the condemnation of every right-thinking individual.

The enforcement staff of the Department is endeavoring to protect the spawning beds. If the public will co-operate to back up the officers, then violations will be reduced to a minimum. We hate to disturb the activities of those men and boys who still live up to the pioneer tradition, but we can't let them do to the maskinonge what their forebears did to the salmon and the passenger pigeon.

Game overseers are few, and they can't be in more than one place at a time, but the protection of the spawning beds is near their hearts. Give them all the help and encouragement you can.

Mrs. Claude Carr Chosen President Grantley W.A.

Mrs. John Kittle, assisted by Miss Doris Kittle, were hostesses on Wednesday afternoon to 16 members of the Grantley W.A., at their annual meeting.

Several Christmas hymns were sung with the President, Mrs. M. O. Robinson at the piano. Mrs. James MacMillan gave the scripture reading and prayer and Mr. Beach led the discussion on "The Woman of the Month", Mary, as an example to all mothers.

The Secretary, Mrs. Kittle, read the minutes of the previous meeting and reported the finances for the year to be in a very healthy state. Almost $15.00 was realized from the sale of Christmas Cards. The committee reported no suitable play had been found as yet.

The usual program was dispensed with and the meeting turned over to Mr. Beach for the election of officers, with the following slate chosen for 1948:

President: Mrs. Claude Carr.

Vice-President: Mrs. James MacMillan.

Secretary-Treasurer: Miss Sara Feader.

Flower Fund Secretary: Mrs. Ernest Beckstead.

Press Secretary: Mrs. Donald Gordon.

Parsonage Committee: Mrs. S. B. Casselman, Mrs. Claude Carr, Mrs. Kittle.

Church Decoration: Mrs. James MacMillan, Mrs. Kittle, Mrs. Claude Carr.

Refreshment Committee: Mrs. Jas. Hesson, Mrs. Darling, Mrs. Glen MacMillan.

A home for each month was offered by 12 members with as many volunteers for the program in each case, thus assisting the President in her duties.

Mr. and Mrs. Beach were given a vote of thanks for their valuable assistance through the year and in return Mr. Beach complimented the ladies in their agreeable relationship and on the splendid attendance with an average of 15 out of an enrolment of 27. This he thought constituted a record.

The meeting was closed with prayer after which lunch was served and the hostess thanked for her hospitality.

The January meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Ernest Beckstead.

Attorney General Orders Body Of Girl Exhumed

An order to exhume the body of Marion Jean Badgley, 25-year-old blonde secretary found shot through the head at her Frankford, Ont., home last week, was issued by the Attorney General's Department, at the beginning of this week.

A second autopsy will be performed by Prof. W. L. Robinson, consultant pathologist with the Attorney general's Department.

"This is one of those cases where the findings of the first pathologist may be questionable", a department official said.

He referred to the earlier autopsy conducted last week, and added that "the doctor who performed the autopsy and, perhaps, the coroner did not realize the significance" of a fractured bone in the dead girl's neck.

She was found dying on the floor of the Badgley Summer kitchen with a bullet wound in her head and a .22 calibre rifle nearby.

TIME TO PREPARE FOR ICE STORAGE

Where facilities already exist for making or storing ice on the farm, now is the time before the severe weather sets in to put them in order. On farms and country houses where there are no such facilities and it is desired to store ice this winter, there are three common methods for doing the job: (1) the inexpensive rough board enclosure; (2) the more elaborate insulated icehouse, and (3) the icewell. The icewell is used more for the making of ice—gradually filling the well with ice from applied water—but so far as a means of storing ice for household use, the icewell has no advantage over the rough shed. Still the icewell does provide facilities for cooling milk and other food products suspended from a bar across the mouth of the well above the covbered ice. The well should be about 12 feet deep with a diameter to suit requirements. The larger it is, the longer the ice will last. A well six feet in diameter, filled with six feet in depth with ice, will hold about four tons.

But the storage of a few blocks of ice for use later on in the following year is simple when a supply of ice can be cut from a nearby creek or pond. Any unoccupied corner of a shed will serve as a site for a roughboard enclosure. An enclosure ten feet square and eight feet high will hold enough ice to provide 50 pounds per day for 130 days, after allowing for a reasonable amount of wastage. The smaller the quantity stored, the larger the proportion of waste. The bottom of the enclosure should be covered with about one foot of sawdust. If the soil beneath is impervious clay it will be all the better if there are a few inches of gravel below the sawdust. In putting in the ice the boards can be taken away from one side and replaced when the ice is in position. A space of one foot ,to be filled with sawdust, should be left between the ice and the boards. The ice should also be covered with sawdust. It is the sawdust that keeps the ice from melting, and the drier the ice is the longer the ice will keep.

Federated Wo's Insts. Pass Many Resolutions

A broad range of subjects, covering many fields of activity in which rural women are keenly interested, was dealt with in the resolutions which were adopted by the Board of the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario at its annual meeting held in Toronto. Particular emphasis was laid on the large number of crimes against women occurring in Ontario, and several resolutions on various aspects of this problem were carried. There were also several resolutions dealing with conditions in Northern Ontario, and asking for better health and educational facilities in the northern districts.

One resolution stressed the necescity of curative as well as punitive measures in dealing with sex criminals, and recommended that the Attorney-General co-operate with the Department of Health in dealing with the social evil of crimes against women. A further resolution asked that the Attorney-General establish a centre for the training of policewomen, and that municipalities in which there are women's beverage and cocktail lounges be required to include policewomen in their regular police forces, in relation to the number of women's beverage rooms and cocktail lounges in the municipality. The abolition of women's beverage room was asked for in another resolution, and one was also passed asking that a stricter censorship be imposed on all domestic and imported literature, so that the morals of young people be protected against salacious reading material. An amendment to the Criminal Code, providing for heavier sentences in cases of offences against minors and young girls was also asked for by the Board.

Resolutions regarding Northern Ontario included one asking for adequate public health, district nursing, health inspection and dental inspection services in the Northern areas as soon as suitable personnel is available. Another resolution asked the Department of Education to establish well-equipped technical and vocational schools in Cochrane North District. In order to provide hydro service for Northern district, a resolution advocated any ruling requiring a certain number of residents per mile, and asked that the Hydro Commission proceed with the building of power lines throughout Northern Ontario. Provision for a rural mail route to serve Chamberlain and Teck Townships was also sought in a resolution which was adopted.

Among the many other resolutions passed were included the following:

That a four year degree course in home economics for girls be established at the Macdonald Institute, Guelph.

That the federal government be petitioned to have standard time adopted as the uniform time for the entire dominion.

That changes be made in the present grading system for food products so as to make it compulsory to buy and sell all eggs by weight.

That there be more rigid and adequate enforcement of the Weed Control Act in Ontario.

That the manufacturers of condensed soups be requested to market a quota of their product in 28-ounce cans, as ten ounce cans are too small for the rural family-sized group.

BRITAIN'S LARGEST LANDPLANE

The Brabazon, the 126 Ton aircraft named after Lord Brabazon of Tara, the first man in Britain to gain a pilot's license, is the largest landplane in Britain. This Bristol 167, which had a wing span of 230 feet and fuel capacity of 13,000 gallons, has been designed for non-stop flights between London and New York, but the prototype, which has eight coupled piston engines, is to be used only for experimental flying. Later versions will be fitted with eight air-screw turbine engines and will carry some 70-100 people in bunks or 120 in seats. To add to the comfort of passengers the aircraft will be fitted with a "gust detector" in the nose, this apparatus automatically adjusts the positions of the ailerons thus damping down the effects of a "bump".

This picture shows the Brabazon, dwarfing the hundreds of workers who helped to build her, just prior to the naming ceremony.

COLLECTION OF 75,000 BIRDS

Carefully stored in cabinets of an original design catalogued with equal care and precision, there are more than 75,000 bird skins preserved at the Royal Ontario Museum. It is the most complete and most widely used collection in Canada. Accumulated through years from donated private collections, from the endless parade of specimens secured by field surveys, and by exchange with other museums, the collection is in charge of Mr. L. L. Snyder, the Museum's Curator of Birds. It has been the background, together with extensive field work, for many of the staff publications in the realm of ornithology; and is in constant use for reference by students of the same science. It was in recognition of Mr. Snyder's scientific work and supervision in the building up of this collection, and of his writings and research in ornithology, that he was elected a Fellow of the American Ornithological Union recently.

'MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING'

By Your Friend—The Book Worm

Dear Reader:— We often think of the good old days; however, recently, when reading "Devils, Drugs and Doctor" written by Doctor Haggard, I came across an account of the illness which terminated the life of Charles II. Perhaps you would like to read a condensed account of the treatment. Charles apparently suffered a sudden illness and was treated by fourteen physicians. The first step was to open a vein in the unfortunate King's arm and to draw away about ½ pint of blood.

Not satisfied with this amount they then incised another vein for the withdrawal of another 8 ounces of the vital fluid.

He was then given medicine containing rock salt, mallow leaves, violets, beet root, fennel seed, linseed, cinnamon, saffron, cochineal and aloes.

The poor man's head was then shaved and a huge blister raised on his scalp.

The next procedure was to have him sniff a powder made of cardamon leaves in order to make him sneeze.

He also had to swallow a powder of cowslip flowers which was used to strengthen the brain.

In order to leave no part of his anatomy untreated a poultice made of pitch was applied to his feet.

Medicines made of lily of the valley, melon seeds, peonies, lavender and even dissolved pearls, nutmegs and cloves were also administered. However the condition of the patient worsened and further medicines and bleedings were resorted to but the king became unconscious and died.

Doctor Haggard also devoted some space to Doctor Jenner. This good doctor noted that dairymaids who suffered from cow-pox did not contact smallpox, and for 18 years he patiently collected his observations on the protection afforded by the former from the latter disease. He met with bitter opposition but eventually people realized that vaccination could wipe out smallpox. "Thus the lancet of Jenner has saved far more lives than wars have destroyed".

Did you ever stop to think that everyone knows who Napoleon was and are familiar with his characteristic posture and dress and yet Doctor Jenner, benefactor of mankind, is unknown even by name to most people. However there is a nice monument to Edward Jenner in the beautiful Cathedral at Gloucester. I wonder if you ever saw a caricature of a nurse going on a case in 1800. It is by Rowlandson and depicts a slaternly creature clutching a lantern in one hand and a botbtle of brandy and her bundle of clothes in the other.

Old women were employed by the City of London in 1600-1700 to diagnose the causes of death. Just how weird some of these diagnoses were were I leave to your imagination.

You are all familiar with the wonderful hospitals we have today and yet about 200 years ago the death rate was so high that people would beg and plead not to be placed in hospital.

We are so used to the blessing of anesthesia we forget the suffering endured when there was none. Sir John Evelyn gives an account of the amputation of a "poor sailor" wounded in the war with the Dutch; needless to say the poor fellow did not survive.

My old friend Sam Pepys underwent an operation and it was so unusual to recover ,that he held a party every year on the anniversary of his "cutting" as he described it.

Some of the medicines of long ago are still in use. Tincture of benzoin, known in British Pharmocopia by the the old name of Friar's Balsam.

Antimony acquired its name from the fact that in the experiments, Monk's took it and died from the effect.

Aromatic spirits amonnia has been in use for several hundred years.

Dover's Powders are named for a Quack Doctor Dover, who made his medicine so strong that people made their wills when he prescribed.

Having recently recovered from an illness in which the blessing of penicillin was of such good effect, I was thinking how much more fortunate was I than the ill-fated Charles. No horrible medicine to swallow, no poultices.

I wonder if any of you are interested in this chatter from some books I have read.

Sincerely—The Bookworm.

PUT REPAIRED TOYS INTO CIRCULATION

Many old toys, repaired and repainted, can help make glad many underprivileged children at Christmas time. Similarly, many old pieces of furniture with a little fixing and refinishing with paint, varnish, stain, shellac, lacquer or enamel, can be made into attractive gifts which will be highly appreciated.

You can have fun doing it while helping to make others happy.

If you cannot do the work yourself, you can turn over unneeded toys and pieces of furniture to service organizations which are equipped to repair and refinish them and again put them into useful channels.

REINDERS, LIKE SANTA'S, LIVE IN CANADA

Do you know that reindeer, like the team that Santa Claus drives over the housetops on Christmas Eve, live in Canada? During the Ice Age, when glaciers covered Ontario, Arctic reindeer roamed through southern Canada. With the mastodon, woolly mammoth, and musk-ox they existed along the bleak, barren borders of the great ice sheet. Today they are found placidly roving all the Arctic lands around the the pole—northern Europe, northern Asia and northern North America. In Lapland, which embraces northern Sweden, northern Finland and northeastern Russia, the reindeer has been domesticated for centuries. In Arctic America the wild reindeer is called caribou. With the great reduction of Canada's caribou herds domestic reindeer have been brought in to take their place, and Eskimos are now being trained to look after herds in Canada's northland. You will see several types of caribou exhibited in the Zoology galleries of the Royal Ontario Museum.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN
Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Christmas may spell C-a-n-d-y for the first time in years. Because sugar is no longer rationed, we will want to try our hand again with confections made at home. The children are elated too, and want to help but they need a few instructions. So here is what to tell them.

Use a two-quart or three-quart deep pan. Any kind of pan can be used, but the candy will not stick as readily in a heavy metal pan.

Since candy thermometers may not be available, the way to recognize the different stages is the cold water test. Place a few drops of syrup into very cold water. When the syrup is cooled by the water, it thickens and can be formed into a soft, or firm, or hard ball.

Use a small amount of corn syrup to prevent grainy candy. Or substitute for corn syrup, ⅛ tsp. cream of tartar, or ½ tsp. lemon juice to 2 cups sugar.

Do not stir candy while boiling unless it contains brown sugar or molasses—even then scrape back and forth across the pan and down the sides.

Let candy mixture cool before beating. (Do not cool candy in cold water).

In subsituting cocoa for chocolate, use 2 tablespoons cocoa and 2|3 tablespoons butter instead of 1 square of chocolate.

PEANUT BRITTLE

2 cups sugar, 3 cups peanuts.

1. Shell peanuts; remove skin with damp cloth.
2. Melt sugar in frying pan; stir constantly and do not allow to darken.
3. When melted, pour over nuts on platter (not greased).
4. Cool gardually; mark in squares while cooling.

MAPLE CREAM

3 cups light brown sugar, 1 tbsp. corn syrup, 2|3 cup milk, 2 tbsps. butter, ½ cup nuts (choped), ½ tsp. vanilla

1. Put sugar, syrup, milk and butter into a saucepan; heat gently, stirring until sugar is dissolved.
2. Boil without stirring to soft ball stage.
3. Remove from heat; cool gradually.
4. Beat until creamy. Add nuts and vanilla; pour into buttered pan.

Mark in squares before it hardens.

TURKISH DELIGHT

THE SUGGESTION BOX

Mrs. G. M. says: When you have an old-fashioned boiled suet pudding, it is wise to use a heavy cotton cloth, and always scald it, wring out and dredge with flour before the batter is put into it.

Mrs. T. E. says: Let steamed pudding cool thoroughly, uncovered, before storing in a cool place. For serving, cover, re-steam about 1 hour.

Mrs. S. W. suggests: Grape juice sauce—Blend 1½ tbsps. cornstarch with 2 tbsps. cold water and stir into 1½ cups hot grape juice. Add 1.3 cup sugar and 1 tbsp. lemon juice. Cook about 10 minutes.

Mrs. F. J. says: When you cut vegetables in even-sized pieces the food tastes better; cut in small sections the food cooks more quickly and this method saves electricity.

SHOVELLING SNOW

Windsor Star.

This snow shovelling business is quite a technique. There are so many ways to go about it. Some get results, others don't.

There is the man who stands and glowers at the falling snow and then gets out the shovel. He works and sweats and pants. Finally, he gets the snow cleared and he goes indoors for a cup of coffee. In the mornin he wakes up and remembers he forgot to put liniment on his back and how it aches. Ooooh!

There is the man who rather welcomes the chance to get out in the good fresh air. He waits until the neighbors are all at home to see him do his stuff. Then, he goes out and daintily works with the shovel until a semblance of a path is made through the white and beautiful. He never gets a backache, because he never strains a muscle.

Then, there is the family man. He rubs his hands with glee as he perceives the snow in the morning. He remarks on the glories of nature, whistles a trifle about how lovely the snow looks, and then hies off to work leaving the little woman to clear the snow.

And. there is the man who just looks at the snow and waits for the January thaw.
