Distillers' Dried Grain

We have just unloaded another car of this feed; we are very much impressed the way it is selling and giving results. The price is very reasonable, at $1.90.

Millfeed

The price of Millfeed is gradually working higher, and very little chance of getting substitutes as Barley, Oats and Corn are going up along with everything else.

FLOUR

Flour has been very cheap all fall, and it certainly will pay you to buy at present prices.

MORRISBURG ELIMINATES BRINSTON IN PLAY-OFF

(Contributed)

SCORE ON THE ROUND 4—2

In the first of the play-off games with Brinston on Monday night at the local arena, the two teams battled for sixty minutes to a 1—1 tie.

The largest crowd of the season was on hand, but the brand of hockey was disappointing, owing to the poor condition of the ice. However, both teams fought hard and Brinston drew first blood, Bailey driving one in from the wing. In the second period, Morrisburg evened the score, Harry Meikle followed in on a fast play and slipped the puck past Bell. From then on it was a ding-dong battle with Morrisburg honing the edge, but not being able to get the winning counter. Several times, however, what appeared to be sure goals were frustrated through the illegal tactics of the Brinston defence. Miller finally did get through and bulged the twine but referee Simonds, for some unknown reason, disallowed the goal.

The Brinston players appeared satisfied to hold Morrisburg to a draw, being confident of winning out in their own "pill box" but they and their followers were due for the shock of their lives.

MORRISBURG 3 BRINSTON 1

Such was the decisive score in the final tilt at Brinston on Wednesday night. There was absolutely nothing flukey about the victory, for the "Maroons" flashed real hockey ability, much to the delight of hundreds of their followers and they fully deserved to win. Brinston were specially strengthened for this series by the addition of Levia, an O.H.A. player from Brockville, and Bailey, a recruit from Inkerman. Neither of these boys are eligible to play with Brinston according to a strict interpretation of the League Rules. However, this did not bother the Maroon players any and despite the fact that they were handicapped by the loss of their regular net minder, they demonstrated to all and sundry that they are a real team and fully worthy of the remarkable support the fans are giving them, and especially the drive now being made on their behalf for a new covered rink.

Incidentally, it was Morrisburg that started the Buds on a downfall earlier in the season when they performed the then unprecedented feat of trimming Brinston on their own ice. After seeing them put the finish ing touches on in Wednesday's final we can easily understand why the Brinston team were so reticent about playing their regular league fixture in Morrisburg, and why President Savor was so ready to award his team the game on the slightest protest. Apparently they had seen the handwriting on the wall and had taken warning that if they did play, Morrisburg would most surely defeat them.

Now Rooters and followers of the "Maroons" don't forget that the first game of the finals with Cardinal will be played at Morrisburg tonight (Friday) the 22nd, so get together and cheer the "Maroons" to victory and also be ready to accompany them to Cardinal on Monday the 25th inst.

Evidently the material out of which bankers grow is much in evidence in the Collegiate here, in-so-much that two students in about the last month have entered banks. Mr. Ches. Coughler joined the Bank of Montreal, Iroquois, about a month ago; Mr. Hollis Robinson is expected to enter the Bank of Montreal here early next week.

The Collegiate is forging ahead to give students a first-class business course, six more Underwood typewriters being installed there this week. Twelve typewriters are now available for students' training and practice. Over 25 students are now taking commercial work there.

THE UNITED CHURCH

MORRISBURG

Rev. Elwood Lawson, Minister.

Sunday Feb. 24th

Services will be conducted by the Rev. J. H. Miller of Kemptville.

The Annual Congregational Meeting will be held Wednesday evening at 7.30. A good program will be presented and refreshments served.

A cordial welcome is extended to all.

FATHER AND SONS' BANQUET AT WILLIAMSBURG

The Ladies Aid of Williamsburg United Church very kindly entertained the Fathers and Sons of the congregation to a dinner on Friday evening, February 15th. Rev. A. McK. Russell acted as toastmaster. The first toast "Our Dads" was proposed in a very humorous manner by Stewart Barkley and responded to by Mr. Chas. Norval, who very earnestly pleaded with the sons to be as exemplary as possible.

"Our Church" was capably proposed by Hugh McPherson. Rev. Elwood Lawson responded with "Our Home."

Messrs Fred Broder and Irwin Hilliard, K.C., gave timely advice to the boys on the subject of "Citizenship" and "The Dignity of Fatherhood." The singing of old-time favourites, a solo by Rev. A. M. Russell, a recitation by Gerald Norval, violin and piano duets by Miss Ruby Barkley and Mrs. Robert Merkley, gave agreeable variety to a most interesting programme. Mr. Ross Wingard concluded the programme by a very well-given toast, "Our Mothers."

This is the first function of this kind for Williamsburg United. We only hope there may be many more in the future.

PRESCOTT READY FOR BOOM

Inquiry has been made of Dr. W. J. Taugher, mayor of Prescott, by the General Motors Corporation, for full data on the advantages of this town for manufacturing purposes. He has sent complete information on the cheap power rates, labor costs, transportation facilities and proximity to markets. Dr. Taugher has also had inquiries from several large Canadian and American manufacturers, who are attracted by the coming development of Prescott as a great lake shipping point.

The Vickers Company, the United States Steel of Canada, have purchased the Raycroft farm below Prescott for a reported price of $15,000 in anticipation of building a shipyard.

Wells farm, known as Windmill farm, sold to the Reid family for $15,000; Ward Plumb farm sold for $18,000; the Jack Fraser farm sold for $12,000; Ben Cochrane farm for $15,000; Hugh Adams farm for $20-000; Richard Wallace farm $21,000.

Above Prescott, the old Wiser farm property of nearly 500 acres was sold for a price of nearly $50,-000.

MR. WM. EDGAR PRUNER

Mr. Wm. Edgar Pruner, a highly respected citizen of Morrisburg, who left last Fall for Toronto, intending to spend the winter months in that city, died on Thursday, February 14 after a short illness. The remains were conveyed to Morrisburg, and the funeral service was held in St. James Church on Sunday February 16th after which interment took placet at "The Churches", Riverside.

The late Mr. Pruner was born at East Williamsburg, on March 4th 1851. On November 21st, 1877, he was united in marriage to Mary Forward, daughter of the late Alfred Forward. He is survived by his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Farrar and three grand-children; also two sisters, Mrs. Mary Gowland, Morrisburg and Mrs. Amanda Pruner, Canton, N.Y.; and five brothers, Walter Pruner, Morrisburg, Nathan and Gordon, Hancock, Michigan; Lindsay of Green Bay, Wisconsin; Herbert of Detroit.

THE LEGACY OF NEW FRANCE

(Ottawa Evening Journal)

Addresses such as that which Professor McArthur of Queens University delivered before the Ottawa Canadian Club on Saturday do a fine service for Canada. Their value lies in the fact that, helping English speaking Canadians to a more adequate realization of the cultural contribution which our French-Canadian fellow-citizens make to the nation, they tend toward understanding and good will.

Too many of us take our conceptions of French Canada from our contacts with French-Canadian politicians. Because these too often show us but the seamy side of Quebec's life--just as too often our own politicians do not reflect the higher attributes of our own people—we are all too apt to argue from the particular to the general and to indict the many because of the shortcomings of the few.

There is, however, another French Canada, both old and new, that we should know. There is the French Canada of history, the glorious story of those intrepid explorers and priests and soldiers of the Louis kings who wrote an imperishable chapter in the annals of this land; and there is the Quebec of our day, the Quebec that clings to the old faiths and traditions; the Quebec of love for culture and art and music and the pioneer arts of the habitant.

It is only when English-speaking Canadians visit French Canada that they realize what it means. The schools and colleges and convents, the respect of the people of authority, the lovable qualities of the peasants, the old arts and crafts that are so tenaciously maintained, the tidy towns and villages—these and many other things so rich in the life of a nation are what meet the eye.

It is because Professor McArthur turns us to such things that his address is so valuable. We could wish that he would repeat it before every Canadian Club from the Ottawa to the Pacific.

Outlook of Mining Stock Market Indicates 1929 Will Be Record Year In Markets and Mines

HYDRO FOR HOWEY

MR. LLOYD J. MOORE

By LLOYD J. MOORE

Member, Standard Stock and Mining Exchange, who reviews the mining market and will answer enquiries for you.

Mining stocks showed alternate pulling and slack during the first week of February. There has never been such activity represnting such a large turnover in terms of dollars than has been the case during the past fortnight. The actual number of shares traded in has been exceeded in November and December, 1927. At that time however, the sales consisted largely of low-priced shares. In recent markets Noranda, International Nickel and Hudson Bay contributed largely to the extraordinary activity. There were heavy dealings in such stocks as Big Missouri, Siscoe and Arno. Widespread public interest has been shown, which indicates a desirable state of affairs in a market way, providing that the public does not carry things to excess. There is a genuine danger of losing sight of intrinsic values in the early stages of mining enterprises. However there are numerous stocks on the Standard Exchange which are selling below their present or prospective value. It is quite in order to anticipate the future of a proven or probable mine to some extent. The danger lies in looking too far ahead on a legitimate enterprise or in placing exaggerated values on properties of dubious merit.

The most far-reaching announcement affecting the mining and industrial future of Canada that has appeared for some time was that of President J. Y. Murdoch on Noranda Mines, who stated that his company would proceed with the erection of a copper refinery on the Atlantic coast, in collaboration with British Metals Corporation and Nichols Refining Company. This is of great importance from an imperial as well as a national standpoint. It means great things eventually for Noranda and for the other copper producers of Eastern and Central Canada, who may be expected to use these facilities on a customs basis. Hudson Bay, Sherritt-Gordon, Treadwell-Yukon, the Stirling mine of Cape Breton and possibly International Nickel are prospective shippers.

The public reception of the Noranda Refinery announcement does not carry much significance. Close market followers were looking beyond the refinery news to the probable effect of the coming Noranda Annual Report, which is likely to be a fairly conservative document. The public's high expectations of huge ore reserves are not likely to be fully borne out in the official estimate of proven tonnage. Taking everything into consideration however Noranda has withstood the influence of New York's sagging market better than any other Canadian mining stock.

Several adverse factors combined to bear down the price of International Nickel shares. The prospect of high call money rates induced selling of large proportions in both London and New York. This was absorbed remarkably well, considering the great amount offered. The performance was disappointing to those who were hoping for a continuance of the upward movement. The Canadian sponsors of the stock however are quite as confident as before concerning the market outlook for Nickel. It is stated on quite good authority that the best of the Nickel news has not yet been made public. Nickel is still regarded by many astute market followers as very attractive for a long hold, regardless of the apparently high valuation placed on this enterprise by the stock market.

Hudson Bay was the third of the market leaders to make a demonstration of strength. On its previous advances it has found its high point at around 22½ but on the last move it crossed 23. The Flin Flon Mine is getting closer to production. The hydro-electic power development is being harnessed and will be capable of delivering power at the mine before the present year is spent. There is no doubt whatever about the ultimate greatness of the Hudson Bay Smelting enterprise, or of its potential earning power. The price of copper has a great deal to do with earnings and profits. The present outlook is for a continuance of high prices for this metal. It has advanced approximately 4 cents a pound in the past six months, and there are no visible signs of a substantial setback It should be remembered however that high-priced copper in the past has invariably stimulated production, and has attracted high-cost producers into the field. The outlook is apparently for steadily increasing consumption which will undoubtedly take care of the output of new producers.

It was also noteworthy that powerful British interests are working assiduously toward insuring an adequate production of copper within the British Empire. British Metals Corporation is known to be closely associated with the British Government. The outlook for the metal over an extended period is considered attractive.

Some announcement is due at an early date concerning hydro-electric power for Howey Gold Mines. Negotiations have been in progress for many weeks between representatives of the company and the Provincial Government. It remains for Premier G. H. Ferguson to give his assent. There seems strong likelihood that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in Ontario will enter the Patricia Field. Howey is an assured consumer of power on a large scale. This company is prepared to proceed immediately with construction of a 500 ton mill, when the power announcement is made. The present outlook is that Howey should justify a 1000-ton milling operation, within a comparatively short time. Lateral work at Howey has been discontinued while shaft sinking has been commenced. The present program is to sink to the 1000-foot level and pursue lateral work on four lower horizons. The fourth or 500-foot level has developed remarkably well and has exceeded even the sanguine expectations of company officials. There seems good reason for believing that the full significance of Howey developments mine wise have not yet been apprciated at their full face value by the public. A decision on the Ear Falls power plant should be made within the next fortnight.

The enhancement in price of Arno cannot be readily sized up at the present time until more is known concerning actual development results at this company's property. The stock has had an unusual market record recently. It may be some time before detailed information will be available to the public, regarding developments to justify current prices. Big Missouri continues to hold strongly around the $2.00 mark. A strong pool is understood to be operating in this stock. and significant. developments have been occurring at this Portland Canal property. It should be recalled that control is held by Consolidated Smelters.

Falconbridge is beginning to show substantial tonnage figures. The sponsors of this property have asserted for some time past that the Longyear properties were next in important to International and Mond. Underground mining operations are now fairly well advanced, and proven ore should be shown up at a fairly rapid rate during the next few months. There has been a renewal of interest in Falconbridge and a corresponding enhancement in price of Sudbury Basin, which is also affected by further favorable diamond drill results at Vermillion Lake.

Altogether the broad activity in the mining shares market may be taken as indicative of a record-breaking year.

Farm Recipes Prove Successful

Farm wives yet cook the family meals. No delicatessen shop is just around the corner to provide a hasty bite. The recipes these cooks use are as numerous as the farms from which they come.

The following are three are most successful:—

Spanish Meat Ring

Pound of ground beef, 1 pound of ground pork, 2 cupfuls of unsweetened applesauce, 2 beaten eggs, 2 teaspoonfuls of salt, 3 cupfuls of cracker crumbs, 1-3 cupfuls of chopped pimento, Pepper. Combine the ingredients in the order named, adding milk or water if more moisture is needed. Pack into a greased ring mold and bake in a moderate oven for 50 minutes."

Ham Rolls With Beans

Spread medium-thick slice of cold boiled or baked ham with a thin coating of prepared mustard, then cover with a layer of cooked navy beans (canned beans may be used). Roll the meat in jelly-roll fashion and fasten wit ha tooth pick. Place the rolls in a baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for 15 or 20 minutes.

Carrot-Potato Dish

6 Medium sized potatoes, 4 medium sized carrots, ¾ cupful of hot thin cream, 3 tablespoonfuls of butter, ½ teaspoonful of salt, pepper.

Pare the potatoes and leave whole. Scrape the carrots and slice. Cover with boiling salted water and cook until very tender. Drain and mash well. Add the cream and butter and beat vigorously until flucy and light. Season with salt and papper.

Survival

When the hour strikes, O World, to make an end,
Which of the two will vanish—you or I?
What chance is mine in such a rivalry—
A makeshift thing, whose very fibres tend
To nothingness; to whom yourself must lend
That makes my life; a speck beneath the sky,
Mid seas that overwhelm and rocks that rend?

And yet, against all seeming, it may be
That it is you that are the mockery, takes
From a distracted vision of the night.
A comfort in the blessed morning
—F. H., in the London Observer.

South African Elections

Nation and Athenaeum (London): General Hertzog has announced that the SouthAfrican Government will fight the general election this year with the native question as the main issue. This public declaration that he has abandoned all hope of an agreed native policy is a retrograde step in South African politics, and is the more unfortunate in that his speech, which dealt with the alleged threat of the blacks to white civilization in South Africa, can be interpreted as forecasting a policy of sheer repression. His pronouncement has caused dismay among Dutch as well as English-speaking South Africans.

Industry and the professions are closely related. Think of what the petroleum industry has done for the legal profession, and vice versa.

Sunday School Lesson

February 24. Lesson VIII—Christian Growth—John 1: 40-42; Matt. 16: 15-18; John 21: 15-19; 2 Peter 3: 18a. Golden Text—But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—2 Peter 3: 18a.

ANALYSIS

I. THE FIRST STAGES, John 1: 40-42.
II. THE GREAT CONFESSION, Matt. 16: 15-18.
III. RECOVERY AFTER FAILURE, John 21: 15-19.
IV. SECRET OF GROWTH, 2 Peter 3: 18a.

INTRODUCTION—These four passages are connected with the experience of the Apostle Peter, and we are asked to study how this great man illustrates the way in which a disciple may grow stronger and braver, and how he may even recover from his past failures, if he will only put himself under the influence of the grace of Christ. All Christian life should be a progress in faith and love. We are to become perfect as our Father in heaven is perfect.

I. THE FIRST STAGES, John 1: 40-42.

V. 40. The early disciples of Jesus had been disciples of John the Baptist and were prepared by their early acceptance of this lesser light to recognize the fuller glory of Cnrist, who is the light of the world.

V. 41. Andrew is so captivated by his interview with Jesus that in great oy he hastens off to tell the good news to his brother.

V. 42. Jesus reads the character of the new disciple, and makes a prophecy concerning him. He foretells how this man who was naturally inclined to be impulsive and emotional would gradually win strength and courage and become one of the great foundation-stones of the Christian church. It is with characters such as Peter's, with many a weakness and failing, that Jesus is still able to work, that they, too, become strong and wise and bold.

II. THE GREAT CONFESSION, Matt. 16: 15-18.

V. 15. This confession of Jesus at Cæsarea Philippi is a great turning point in the training of the disciples. Jesus had long been preparing them for this revelation; and now under the shadow of the great Lebanon Mountains he puts this question as to their opinion about himself.

V. 16. Simon answers this question partly because he was the most promnent in the group, and partly because of his impetuous nature. However, his reply was meant to be for the others also. They had often talked about the nature of their beloved Master, and often wondered whether he really was the promised Messiah. There were so many outward conditions rendering it difficult for them to recognize in Jesus the long-looked-for Saviour of Israel; but now their doubts vanish, and Peter, with a bold venture of faith, makes this noble confession.

V. 17. Jesus is greatly moved by the reply and sees in it that the divine spirit has been working with his disciples. This knowledge did not come by mere personal observation, but through the direct agency of God.

V. 18. The promise made to Peter is meant for all. The rock is not the individual Peter, but the confession which he made. The church is to consist of all those who believe that Jesus is the Christ—the Lord. In this sense Peter was the first Christian. The church is to have the right of making judgment and passing laws. The keys represent authority, and seem to refer to the moral and doctrinal truths which were to be established during the following centuries. The gates of Hades mean that the church will never pass into the regions of the dead, but it will go on growing and expanding, till it includes all the world. This prophecy is being wonderfully fulfilled.

III. RECOVERY AFTER FAILURE, John 21: 15-19.

V. 15. This passage may be regarded as the reinstating of Peter in his apostolic office. He had been called to be one of the Twelve, but in a fatal moment he had proved unworthy and had denied his Lord. This is the incident to which Jesus now alludes; for the thrice repeated question, "Lovest thou me?" refers to the threefold denial and the boast in Matt. 26: 33. It seems strange that Jesus should thus open up the old sore, but he does it with the object of restoring Peter to the old rank.

V. 16. In each of these verses Jesus bids Peter feed the sheep or the lambs, which apparently means that the fallen disciple is restored to the pastoral office, and that he is to take up again the work out of which he thought he had been expelled by his fall. From this we infer that there is no failure in the past which may prevent a disciple of Jesus from returning to the fold, if he has real love for his Master. Love covers up sin.

V. 18. Jesus now draws aside the veil concealing the future and shows how troubled are to be the closing scenes of Peter's life. The tradition is that Peter was put to death by crucifixion during the persecution of Nero, and with his head downward, for he said he was unworthy to be crucified in the same way as Jesus. This was probably about the year A.D. 64, when he was already past middle life.

V. 19. The condition of safety in such trying circumstances is now given. He must follow Christ, and all will be well. From this incident we gather that, as there is no failure of the past the need keep back a disciple from doing the will of Christ, so also there is no dread of any dark future that need alarm the person who is willing to follow Jesus.

IV. SECRET OF GROWTH, 2 Peter 3: 18a.

V. 18. We naturally think as we read this verse of the narrative of the early life of Jesus. We think of the way in which he grew in wisdom and favor. The two qualities which are chosen in the epistle for special mention are those of which we read much in the New Testament. The first is grace, which has at least three shades of meaning: (1) The charm and attraction of the words, actions and character of Jesus. (2) The quality of love in God which urges him to forgive the sinner and save him from death. This is saving grace. (3) There is also sustaining grace of which we have a fine example in 2 Cor. 12: 8. The second quality in which the Christian must increase is the knowledge of Christ.

SMART BASQUE

Paris chic at a small outlay! Previous experience in sewing isn't at all necessary to make it, as seen in small drawings. Another interesting thing about it is that it doesn't require any trimming. The lower edge of the two-piece bodice is shirred at centre-front, forming pointed outline. The attached two-piece side-plaited skirt can be in straight or pointed outline. Style No. 381 is sketched in printed sheer velvet and is designed in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust. Crepe satin, silk crepe, wool crepe, georgette crepe, chiffon, plain transparent velvet, canton-faille crepe and sheer woolen are suitable fabrics that will make up extremely lovely in this fashionable basque model. Pattern price 20c in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

HOW TO ORDER PATTERNS.

Write your name and address plainly, giving number and size of such patterns as you want. Enclose 20c in stamps or coin (coin preferred; wrap it carefully) for each number and address your order to Wilson Pattern Service, 73 West Adelaide St., Toronto. Patterns sent by an early mail.

Prince Wades Through Mud to Miners' Hovels

So Says J. M. Keynes, Economsti, Who Finds Efficiency Gain Is Overhauling Setback Since War

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng.—The Prince of Wales, winding up his three-day visit to a number of mining villages in Northumberland and Durham, declared to the Mayor of Durham:

"I have been deeply touched by what I have seen of the bravery, patience and hope of these poor people. It has been very difficult to know what to do to solve this most pressing problem. I am afraid it must take time. The people I have met during this tour could not have been nicer to me personally. It was wonderful."

When the Prince left the Station Hotel here to visit the Bishop Auckland area of County Durham, he was cheered by crowds gathered in the streets outside. He acknowledged the cheers smilingly as his automobile left Newcastle for the stricken districts.

Stopping off at Jarrow, the Prince inspected conditions among the steelworkers and shipyard men. He shook hands with 50 men there, many of whom have been without work for eight years. As he rode through the Durham towns, made desolate by unemployment, people crowded to see him.

One of the worst places visited was the village of Benton, where a collection of tumbledown cottages were set in a sea of mud. Rolling his trousers above his shoe tops, the Prince walked through the quagmire and visited hovels where families of eight to ten persons were housed.

The Prince spent nearly an hour in East Hartford. Here men were working, but the Prince was told that the average weekly earnings of a family were only £1, equal to about $4.85 in the United States. William Lynch, a miner, showed the Prince the pay sheet of four miners, who in one week ahd worked 1* shifts and found 38s. to divide between them. This gave them less than $3 each. Another group said they had netted even less than that.

Struck by the small earnings, the Prince pursued the subject at the next village, which was Ashington. He asked mine officials to explain the figures and was told that these probably were cases in which the men had been working in a poor vein, containing more stone than coal.

In one cottage, where there was a large family, the wife explained to the Prince:

"We have meat on Sunday, but have to take pot luck the rest of the week. We never have butter, because we cannot afford it. We eat margarine, but often we have nothing at all to eat."

It is felt that the Prince's searching inquiries into conditions in the coalfields will do more to bring those conditons before the public than many appeals for public contributions for the miners.

The Prince has talked with miners and their wives for hours. He has examined the family incomes minutely, being shown company paysheets giving the wages earned.

Colonies and Dominions

Yorkshire Herald: The Colonial Office has become of greater importance than the Dominions Office. for the Colonial Office is engaged in the administration of a real Empire which. though it does not include the Dominions, Ireland or India, covers a wider area than the French Colonial Empire. And it is in this Empire that the great expanson of the future will take place. In the British Colonial Empire Great Britain can place her own people without having to consult anybody, and British immigrants are not compelled to put themselves to all sorts of trouble to gain admission. British capital, too, will flow more freely to territories where it is free from any control except British. Even now British investments largely take the form of bonds in the Dominions and of shares in the Colonies, a fact which shows that British financial activity selects channels which lead it towards the Colonies rather than to the Dominions.

FOR MOTHERS OF YOUNG CHILDREN

Mothers are quick to praise anything which brings health and comfort to their little ones—any medicine that will make the baby well and keep him well will always receive hearty recommendation from the mother. That is why Baby's Own Tablets are so popular. Thousands of mothers throughout the country, not only use them for their own little ones but are always delighted to be able to recommend them to other mothers. Thousands of mothers have proved Baby's Own Tablets to be without an equal in relieving their little ones of any of the many minor ailments which arise out of a derangement of the stomach and bowels. Baby's Own Tablets are the ideal laxative—easy to take but thorough in action. They banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers; expel worms and make the teething period easy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Germany and S. Africa

Cape Times: No one denies the right of South Africa to make trade treaties with any foreign country or to give most favored nation terms to Germany or anyone else. But a deliberate decision to put Germany on the same footing as Great Britain when any preferences are given in any future South African tariff is a very different thing. It shows that the Pact Government has decided to go out of its way to exhibit itself as unsympathetic to the family principle as applied to the nations of the British Commonwealth. It is an act of deliberate antagonism to Great Britain, the Union's best customer. South African producers should realize thef act, which cannot be denied, and should think whether the treaty is not opposed in this way to their own interests.

"Madam, this coffee you are serving won't settle!" complained a young resident in a boarding-house to his hostess. 'Then it is in good company!" was the reply.

BABY MONKEY IS CURED

James, baby gorilla, at the Bronx, New York zoo, has been cured of rickets. He is seen on top of the ladder playing with a chimpanzee.

Etchings on Snow

In the cold days of late January and early February, when the afternoon sun is driving long, low shafts across the snow, I often stop to look at the lilac and heliotrope shadows cast by the standing stalks of thistle, joepye weed, or aster. The lines of the stem shadows are so beautifully precise and they blur out in the upper branches into som thing so mysteriously and delicately vague that I am always reminded of Twachtman's wonderful drawing. He had studied the shadows on snow, both in line and color, so much that he had made of them a genre of his own. How beautifully he drew trees and banks and hill lines, snow forms and cloud edges and water surfaces! . . .

All bare forms under sunlight cast mysterious shadows on the snow—rose bushes, small hawthornes, young beeches and locusts, as well as wild rice, flags and cat-tails. Very beautiful are the shadows of some of the tall meadow-grasses, particularly the millet and what we as children called "wild oats." To these grasses come, looking for seeds, the song sparrows. . . . They have a very pretty way of flying ag..inst the tall grasses, catching hold of the stalks with their little feet, and, by the weight of their bodies, bending them down to the snow. It is a graceful performance carried on with fluttering wind and a gradual bending down of the stalk. . . A brave bird is the song sparrow! And in his gray-brown coat, holding down the golden stalk of the "wild oats," with his heliotrope shadow cast on the snow, he is a beautiful bird. One would travel far before seeing a more delicate color combination than is shown in this winter scene.—John C. Van Dyke, in "The Meadows."

PARENTS HAPPY WHEN BABY SLEEPS SOUNDLY

Here's a way to soothe crying, wakeful babies to sleep quickly and easily. It's the way doctors endorse, and millions of mothers have proved is safe and harmless. A few drops of purely-vegetable, pleasant-tasting Fletcher's Castoria, has the most fretful, restless baby or child asleep in a few minutes! And for colic, constipation, colds and upset spells, there's nothing like Castoria. The Chas. H. Fletcher signature is the mark of genuine Castoria. Avoid imitations and be safe.

Tourists Adopt Babies

Many visitors to England this year went home accompanied by babies that had taken their fancy while touring the country. Tower Cressy, London headquarters of the National Children's Adoption Association, reports that from 10 to 12 adoptions were made each week by tourists during the summer season, and little ones went to homes in Canada, Australia and other parts of the Empire. Adoption in England is also becoming more common. At times there is a greater demand for pairs than can be supplied, and often applicants ask for a boy and a girl of the same age. Most of the little ones go to childless couples and many to unmarried women.

Adoption of little ones has also become very popular in Canada. Mr. J. J. Kelso, president of the Children's Aid Society, Parliament Buildings, Queen's Park, Toronto, will always give full information to any responsible person considering this most interesting question.

RHEUMATIC PAINS DUE TO THIN BLOOD

Relief Comes Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

The most a rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the swollen ,aching points is a little relief, and all the while the trouble is becoming more firmly rooted. It is now known that rheumatism is rooted in the blood, and that as the trouble goes on the blood becomes still further thin and watery. To get rid of rheumatism, therefore, you must go to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved so beneficial when taken for this trouble. They make new, rich blood which expels the poisonous acid and the rheumatism disappears.

There are thousands of former rheumatic sufferers in Canada, now well and strong, who thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that they are now free from the aches and pains of this dreaded trouble. One of these, Mrs. W. F. Tait, McKellar, Ont., who says: —"I am one of the willing ones to tell you of the great benefits I received from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After lying in bed for seven weeks suffering untold agony with inflammatory rheumatism, relief finally came through the use of this medicine. I could not move in bed only as they lifted me, and I could only sleep when opiates were given me. The medical treatment I was taking seemed of no avail. Then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and soon I began to get relief. After taking six or eight boxes the rheumatism was banished and I have never felt better in my life. It is several years since this happened and I have had no return of the trouble since. I may add that I recommended the pills to two of my friends who were suffering with rheumatism and the pills were equally effective in both cases."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, indigestion or nervousness. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Savings of Masses as Key to Revival of British Trade

Greatest Source of Capital Now Found to Be Thrift Banks of Workers

London.—There are now 27,600 National Savings associations in Great Britain, and the thrift they have encouraged has resulted in the saving of a stupendous sum. Strangely enough, however, only a small proportion of these associations is organized in places of employment and an effort is now to be made to establish an association in every factory, shop and store

In an address on "Savings in Relation to Industry," Maj.-Gen. J. E. B. Seely, chairman of the National Savings Committee, has made the assertion that by the proper mobilization of small savings the capital necessary for industrial rehabilitation in Britain can be obtained.

"High taxation and small profits in the basic industries rule out the wealthy classes as a source of capital," declared General Seely. "There is only one source left—the savings of the great masses of the people. The past year has been a wonderful year for the National Savings movement. There are many other savings organizations that are encouraging the small investor with increasing success, but in National Savings alone investors have purchased at the rate of over 1,000,000 certificates a week during 1928, and November showed higher purchases than any recorded for the same period since the prosperous year of 1921.

"It seems probable that 1928 investments in National Savings will reach more than £40,000,000, and the total amount remaining invested, including interest, will approximate £500,000,000. It is true that this great sum is all lent to the Exchequer and does not, apparently, contribute directly to the re-equipment of industry; but the amount so invested relieves the Government from borrowing from the banks and thus sets free a corresponding amount for the needs of industry.

Two additional thrift plans, which have received the strong indorsement of Mr. Baldwin, and which are linked up with group insurance, are now being recommended by the National Savings movement. Both of them, if sucsessful, will result in the accumulation of large funds of capital.

"Portes Gil promises every surrendering bandit in Mexico a plot of land." With flowers and perpetual care, perhaps?

Care of Teeth Important Item in Healthy Life

Social Hygiene Council Gives Good Advice Which Should Be Followed By All

Toronto, Ont.—"The most important time to begin caring for a child's teeth is before the child is born. In precentive dentistdy to-day we are most concerned with the teeth of the unborn child."

This striking statement was made in a recent address here by Dr. Harry S. Thomson, General Secretary of the Canadian Dental Hygiene Council. Speaking under the auspices of the Social Hygiene Council, he outlined the latest developments in the science of saving teeth.

And these are new indeed, to the average man who deems his duty to his teeth done when he brushes them daily, and goes to the dentist only when thy ache.

The way to save a child's teeth is through his tomach, the speaker showed. 95 per cent. of Anglo-Saxons have defective teeth, as against 3 per cent. of the Esquimaux, and 1 per cent. of the Maori, o primitive New Zealand people.

"Diet is most important", said Dr. Thomson, "but it is not so much the substance of the diet, as the nature of it." The Maoris got their excellent teeth by living on a raw-vegetable diet. But the Esquimaux attained their high batting—or bitting,—average by chewing raw meat and fish exclusively.

"But the one thing they have in common", the speaker stressed, "is the rawness of their food. For generations we have been eating pappy foods. To save our teeth, we must eat more food in its natural state—raw. More raw vegetables, fruits, milk and dairy products. More bread made from whole wheat grains. All of these things are rich in inorganic salts—salts that all of us need, especially mothers and growing children.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", the speaker stressed. To-day, a dentist was much more than a filler and puller of teeth. "Now-a-days a dentist is concerned with preventing dental decay, in order that he may prevent diseased teeth, for dental decay leads to ill-health, disaster, and sometimes death", he said.

"And in preventive dentistry we are not primarily concerned with the adult—nor even with the school child, although we are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in educating the min the proper care of their teeth. For we know now that the most important time in the development of teeth is the nine months of prenatal life."

There is no reason why every one should not have perfect teeth, providing the simple rules of diet are followed during the period of prenatal development, Dr. Thomson said. "The formation of the enamel crown of the first teeth takes place six months before birth, and of the permanent teeth, one month before. If during this period of development the child is supplied with the proper food, then it should go through life with a perfect set of teeth."

For adults, he had one piece of new advice. "Exercise your teeth", he urged. "Of course, you can hardly take them out each morning and go through your daily dozen with them, but it is desirable that you should use them for masticating food.

"The tooth roots are imbedded in the bony substance of the jaw. The socket in which the tooth is imbedded is lined with a membrane, the tooth itself is surrounded with a membrane. These act as a cushion for the tooth. During mastication there is just the slightest movement of the tooth in the socket. This slight movement promotes a healthy blood circulation and brings health to the surrounding tissues of the tooth. But your teeth don't get this exercise if you employ them exclusively to eat pap, custard pie, and other mushy food.'

The Immigration Problem

Toronto Telegram (Ind. Cons.): The immigration problem grows more complicated as the days grow longer. The railways have now fallen out with the Government and it is a good guess that they won't let up till a scalp or two adorns their wigwam. Of course, poor old Robert Forke will have to suffer. . . . Hon. Robert Forke is probably a misfit in the most difficult portfolio anyone in the Cabinet has tried to handle. But who put him there? Wasn't it Premier King? And didn't Premier King know when he did it that no untried farmer could do other than make a mess of a situation that would try the genius of a statesman? Premier King made Mr. Forke Minister. There is no reason to doubt that Premier King dictated the Minister's course. And Premier King should shoulder the blame, if any, and stand between his Minister and the railways.

Sour Stomach

Just a tasteless dose of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in water. That is an alkali, effective, yet harmless. It has been the standard antacid for 50 years among physicians everywhere. One spoonful will neutralize at once many times its volume in acid. It is the right way, the quick, pleasant and efficient way to kill the excess acid. The stomach becomes sweet, the pain departs. You are happy again in five minutes.

Don't depend on crude methods. Employ the best way yet evolved in all the years of searching. That is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Empire Penny Post

Manchester Guardian (Lib.): Hitherto the attempts of the business community to bring pressure to bear on the Treasury have been concerned with retsoring the penny post within this country, and these have invariably been countered by the argument that the national finances cannot afford the loss of five millions or so which it is said the change would involve. Canada has now supplied a strong argument in favor of a general penny post within the Empire, and those who advocate it are prepared to show that the increased communications which would result would more than make up for any loss. It is believed that the suggestion of the new campaign started with the London Chamber of Commerce.

MR. AND MRS. FRANK HESS HONORED

On the evening of February 14th, 1929, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hess' home, Hoasic, was the scene of a farewell party when a host of friends numbering over one hundred, gathered to say farewell to them before leaving for their new home. An enjoyable evening was spent in games and music until about midnight when lunch was served.

The following address was read:

"We, your friends and neighbors have met here this evening to say good-bye and to bid you God-speed.

"We are very sorry you are leaving us, for we realize what it means to lose old and tried friends, who have proved to us that "'A friend in need is a friend indeed,'" and although we say farewell now, we hope to meet you occasionally in the future and greet you with "'How do you do" or "Good-day."

"Doubtless you will feel quite at home in the community to which you are moving, having lived there once before, so your move will not call forth the loneliness it otherwise would.

"As a remembrance of your Hoasic friends, we ask you to accept this purse, and when you use it, we hope you will remember us and say "Do my old friends remember me?"

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors,

GEO. COLQUHOUN,
ALLAN COLQUHOUN,
WILLIS H. SWERDFEGER.

Mr. and Mrs. Hess replied in a few well-chosen words, thanking their friends for their great kindness trusting that they would be able to welcome all in their new home in the near future.

All joined in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Max Becksteadt, who has been assistant general freight agent of The Delaware and Hudson Railway Co., has been transferred and promoted to the position of general freight agent, having entire supervision and control of the whole local and foreign freight service with head quarters at Albany, New York. This promotion is the reward of great ability and eminent services and becomes effective at once. We wish him every success in his new sphere of labor.—Albany Times.

SILVER WEDDING AT NUDELL BUSH

A very pleasant surprise party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Prunner, when about eighty of their intimate friends and neighbors gathered to extend their best wishes on the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, which was on February 10th. It coming on Sunday the party was held on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Prunner, although taken by surprise, made everyone very welcome, and as always at Mr. Prunner's, everyone enjoyed themselves with euchre and dancing. The excellent music was furnished by the ever-popular orchestra, Mr. Denzil Harte, violin; Mr. Arnold McMartin, banjo-uke; Mr. Donald McMartin, drums. and traps; Miss Mae Harte, piano.

About 12 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Prunner were called to the floor and Mr. Arnold McMartin read a very appropriate address and Mrs. Geo. Dennison made the presentation of a purse of silver. Mr. Prunner made a very suitable reply, thanking all present for their gift and best wishes on behalf of Mrs. Prunner and himself. All joined in singing "For "They Are Jolly Good Fellows", followed by a dainty lunch, served by several of the ladies.

On leaving in the early morning hours, all expressed the wish to be able to be present at Mr. and Mrs. Prunner's golden wedding.

STR. RAPIDS KING TO GO INTO SERVICE AGAIN THIS SEASON

The S.S. Rapids King, Canada Steamship Lines passenger vessel, which was employed for many years "shooting" the Lachine Rapids, and which was taken off the service in 1927, will resume operations in 1929, according to the officials of the line.

The vessel has been in Toronto harbor for over a year, it having been discovered that she was drawing too much water for her to be employed on the rapids service, but arrangements have been made for the draught to be reduced.

She is now in the Davie Shipyards at Lauzon, Que., being refitted for the service. All the cabins on the upper deck have been torn out, and converted into a large observation room to lessen the draught, while a smaller deckhouse has been built and the extra space is to be used for a gallery deck

She has also been converted to an oil burner, to save weight in the fuel carried, and bunker divisions will also be dispensed with.

Her previous draught was 9 feet 5 inches, which was higher than the draught of the other two ships, the Rapids Prince and the Rapids Queen which draw 8 feet 2 inches and 8 feet 8 inches respectively.

She will resume the rapids service between Prescott and Montreal in June next, leaving Prescott at 10.20 a.m. and arriving at Montreal about 6.15 p.m., carrying passengers down the rapids.

She will not carry passengers on the return journey, it is stated, but space has been made to provide for carrying automobiles if they are offered.

The Rapids Queen will not be placed in the service, and will only be used as an auxiliary to the rapids service, for use in emergency.

The Rapids King is one of the oldest ships that the Canada Steamships Line have on their list, being built in 1907 at Toronto

Her principal dimensions are length, 229 feet; beam 40 feet, draught, as yet unknown; gross tonnage 1,801 tons; registered tonnage, 1,119 tons.

It is understood that a new vessel may be built for this trade by the company in the coming year.

LATE MRS. E. FROATS

After an illness of about eight weeks, borne with characteristic fortitude and resignation, Mrs. Elizabeth Froats, relict of the late Alexander Froats of Dickinsons Landing, passed away at her home on Thursday morning, February 14th. The late Mrs. Froats, whose maiden name was Miss Elizabeth Locey, a daughter of the late Herman and Sarah Locey, was born fifty-one years and six months ago. She spent her entire life in her native village. Mrs. Froats enjoyed the warm regard of a wide circle of friends. Of a kindly and unselfish nature, she was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand to her neighbors when they needed any help, while she had her health. The late Mrs. Froats was a member of the Anglican church for many years and participated, when able, in the various activities of St. David's congregation, especially in the quiltings for the Women's Auxiliary and her generosity in this regard will ever be remembered. Her husband predeceased her about five years ago. Friends from a distance were, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Locey, Cornwall, Mr. and Mrs Dillabough, Morrisburg, and Mrs. Charles Dennis, Cornwall

LIMERICK CORNER

Joyous Jingles By Gifted Rhymsters.

In they come on every mail; piles of them. Young folks, old folks, gay folks, prim folks, all are taking a hand at this fascinating game of writing limericks.

Mrs. Ettie Eaton of Athens puts her ideas on the subject into rhyme in the following verse:—

I won a dollar with Gillett's Lye,
And now I think the tea I'll try.
To make a rhyme is plenty of fun,
But it doubles up when you win some mon'.

Some of our contributors are neglecting to give name and address and name of paper, a serious omission as it is, of course, impossible to send prizes if won. The first two published this week bore no names but if the writers will identify themselves the prizes will be forwarded.

It will facilitate handling if each limerick is submitted on a separate sheet of paper with name and address and name of paper given in each case.

Shredded Wheat

There is an old chap in Powassan,
I won't tell his name; its not Dawson,
When he couldn't eat
He tried Shredded Wheat
Which, 'tis said, proved a God-send to Lawson.

Salada Tea

There was an old gal from Nevada,
Drank gallons of tea for Bravada,
She said to her friend
"It would please me no end
If you'd fetch me a ton of Salada."

There once was an old fashioned lady,
Whose housekeeping was a bit shady,
She bought Gillett's Lye
And made the dirt fly
Now she's clean as her neighbor, Miss Grady.

Ettie Eaton,

Baby's Own

There was a young baby named Chummy,
Who had a bad pain in his tummy,
The Doctor did phone
"Give him Baby's Own"
Now he painlessly smiles at his mummy.

Royal Yeast

There was a bright maiden in Clinton,
Whose bread made a hit with young Linton,
Its easy to make
With Royal Yeast Cake
And now she's a Linton of Clinton.

Christies Biscuits

There is a plump boy in Port Dover,
Who think he is living in clover,
With Christies aplenty
A big box he'll empty
And laugh at the M.D.s of Dover.

There is plenty of enjoyment for the whole family if all join in the fun of writing Limericks.

Any nationally advertised article or service found in this or any previous issues of this paper may be made the subject of a limerick.

"I have spent nearly five thousand pounds on that girl's education," complained the aggrieved father, "and here she goes and marries a young fellow with an income of only two hundred and fifty a year." "Well," said the friend of the family, "that's five per cent on your investment. What more can you expect in these times?"

CHAPTER XVI.

Again one of those agonizing waits, racking to the two men whose future depended largely upon the happenings atop the range. Far on the other side, fighting slowly upward, was a freight train loaded with the necessary materials of a large sawmill.

"Guess it's all off," came at last. "The general superintendent in Denver's on the wire. Says to back up everything to Tollifer, including the plows, and give up the ghost."

"Give it up?" Houston stared blankly at the telegrapher. "But that's not railroading!"

"I know. I'll call Denver."

He turned to the key and hammered doggedly. Only soggy deadness answered. The line was gone!

"It'd take a guy with a diving suit to find some of them wires, I guess," the operator hazarded, as he finally ceased his efforts and reached for his coat and hat and snowshoes. "There ain't no use staying here. You fellows are going to sleep in town tonight, ain't you?"

There was little else to do. They fought their way to the rambling boarding house.

Morning brought no relief. The storm was worse, and they faced drifts waist high at the doorway.

Two hours later, the agent once more at his dead key, Ba'tiste turned to Houston.

"Eet is no use here," he announced. "We must get to camp and assemble the men to help those who are not fortunate. There is death in this storm."

Again with their waist-belt guide lines, they started forth, to bend against the storm in a struggle and at last to reach the squat, snowed-in buildings of camp. There, Ba'tiste assembled the workmen in the bunk house.

"There are greater things than this now," he announced. "We want the strong men—who will go back with us to Tabernacle, and who will be willing to take the risk to help the countryside. Eet is the danger ahead. How many of you will go?"

One after another they reached for their snowshoes, silent men who acted, rather than spoke.

Guide lines were affixed. Huddled, clumsy figures of white, one following the other, made the gruelling trip back to Tabernacle. Already the reports were beginning to come in, brought by storm weakened, blizzard-battered men, of houses where the roofs had crashed beneath the weight of snow, of lost ranchmen, of bawling cattle, drifting before the storm—to death. It was the beginning of a two-weeks' siege of a white inferno.

The whole world was one great, bleak thing of dreary white—a desert in which there was life only that there might be death, where the battle for existence continued only as a matter of instinct.

And over this bleak desert went the men of the West Country, silent, frost-burned men, their lips cracked from the cut of wind, their eyes blood-red with inflammation, struggling here and there with a pack of food upon their backs that they might reach some desolate home where there were women and children; or stopping to pull and tug at a snow-trapped steer and by main effort, drag him into a barren spot where the sweep of the gale had kept the ground fairly clear of snow.

A two-inch crust of snow formed over the main snowfall, permitting small sleds to be pulled behind struggling men; the world beneath had been frozen in, to give place to a new one above. And with that:

"It's open! It's open!" The shout came from the lips of the telegrapher, waving his arms as he ran from the tunnel that led to the stationhouse. "It's open! I've had Rawlins on the wire!"

"Rawlins?" Houston had edged forward. "There's not a chance. Get Denver on the wire. Then take this message to every newspaper in the city:

"'Can't you help us? Please try to start campaign to force Crestline Road to open the Pass. Women and children are starving here. We have been cut off from the rest of the world for two weeks. We need food—and coal. Road will not be open for four or five weeks fore under ordinary circumstances. This will mean death to many of us here, the wiping out of a great timber and agricultural country, and a blot on the history of Colorado. Help us—and we will not forget it.

"'THE CITIZENS OF THE WEST COUNTRY.'"

"Sounds good." The telegrapher was busily putting it on the wire. Then a wait of hours. Then the wire clattered forth a message. He jumped.

"It's from the papers in Denver!" he shouted. "A joint message. They've taken up the fight!"

The snows still swirled, the storms still came and went. During this period of uncertainty Houston met Batiste Renaud, returning from the lake region, to find him raging.

"Is eet that the world is all unjust?" he roared. "I am the mad enough to tear them apart!"

"Who? What's gone wrong?"

"Ah! I pass today the Blackburn mill. They have the saw going—they keep at work when there are the women and the babies who starve, when there are the cattle who are dying, when there is the country that is like a broken thing. They know that we do not get our machinery! They think they have a chance—for the contract!"

It brought Houston to a sharp knowledge of conditions. They had given, that the rest of the country might not suffer. Their enemies had worked on, fired with the new hope that the machinery necessary to carry out Houston's contract would not arrive in time.

A shout had come from the distance. Faintly through the sifting snow they could see figures running. Then the words came:

"They're going to open the road! They're going to open the road!"

A message-bearer came from the station. "It's the M. P. & S. L. According to the message, the papers hammered the stuffing out of the Crestline road. The other road saw a great chance to step in. It's lending the men and the rolling stock. They're going to open another fellow's road, for the publicity and the good will that's in it."

Two pictures flashed across Houston's brain; one of a snowy sawmill with the force working day and night,

He was looking into the drawn, haggard features of an unconscious woman.

when all the surrounding country cried for help; another of carload after carload of necessary machinery, snow-covered, ice-bound, on a sidetrack at Tollifer, with the whole, horrible, snow-clutched fierceness of the Continental Divide between it and its goal.

In the night he awoke, again thinking of it. Every possible hand that could swing a pick or jam a crowbar against grudging ice would be needed up there. A mad desire began to come over him; a strange, impelling scheme took hold of his brain. They would need men—men who would not be afraid, men who would be willing to slave day and night if necessary to the success of the adventure. Long before dawn he rose and scribbled a note to Ba'tiste Renaud:

'I'm going over the range. I can't wait. They may need me. I'm writing this, because you would try to dissuade me if I told you personally. Don't be afraid for me—I'll make it somehow. I've got to go. It's easier than standing by.

"HOUSTON."

Then, his snowshoes affixed, he went out into the night. The storm clouds were thick on the sky again, the snow was dashing about him once more. He floundered aimlessly, striving by short sallies to recover the path from which the storm was driving him.

Dawn found him at last floundering hopelessly in snow-screened woods, going on toward he knew not where.

A half-hour, then he stopped. Fifty feet away, almost covered by the changing snows, a small cabin showed faintly. His numbed hands banged at the door, but there came no answer. He shouted; still no sound came from within.

The door yielded, and climbing over the pile of snow at the step, Houston guided his snowshoes through the narrow door, blinking in the half-light in an effort to see about him. There was a stove, but the fire was dead. At the one little window, the curtain was drawn tight and pinned at the sides t othe sash. There as a bed—and the form of some one beneath the covers.

Houston called again, but still there came no answer. He was looking into the drawn, haggard features of an unconscious woman, the eyes, half-open, yet unseeing, one emanciated hand grasped about something that was shielded by the covers. Houston forced himself even closer. He touched the hand. He called:

Agnes!"

The eyelids moved slightly; it was the only evidence of life, save the labored, irregular breathing. Then the hand moved, clutchingly. Slowly, tremblingly, Houston turned back an edge of the blankets—and stood aghast.

On her breast was a baby—dead!

CHAPTER XVII.

Soon water was boiling. Hot cloths went to the woman's head; quietly, reverently, Barry had taken the still, small child from the tightly clenched arm and covered it, on the little table. And with the touch of the small, lifeless form the resentment which had smoldered in Houston's heart for months seemed to disappear.

"I'm sorry—Agnes. Don't be afraid of me. I'll get help for you."

"Don't."

There was the dullness that comes when grief has reached the breaking point. "Dead. It died—yesterday morning."

Houston could say nothing in answer. Quietly he turned to the stove, red-hot now, and with snow water began the making of gruel from the supplies on the shelf.

Forcing himself to the subject, Houston asked a question:

"Where is he?"

"Who?" Sudden fright had come into the woman's eyes.

"Your husband."

You doubtless depend on Aspirin to make short work of headaches, but remember that it's just as dependable an antidote for many other pains! Neuralgia? Many have found real relief in an Aspirin tablet. Or for toothache; an effective way to relieve it, and the one thing doctors are willing you should give a child— of any age. Whether to break up a cold, or relieve the serious pain from neuritis or deep-seated rheumatism, there's nothing quite like Aspirin. Just make certain it's genuine; it must have Bayer on the box and on every tablet. All druggists, with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Dictator of Reforms Abdicates His Throne

King Amanullah in Contrast to King Alexander Surrenders Supreme Power While the Other Takes it At a Political Crisis

A BRITISH VIEW

"The problem of government is not to devise an ideal system, but to work out a system which will give good results in the conditions and for the people of a particular country. Modernism and centralization will not do for fanatical clans."

—The Daily Telegraph.

"The experience of many kings and princes of Asia may at least console him in his retirement. His own grandfather, Abdurrahman, ate the bread of exile for eleven weary years before he returned to rule Afghanistan with a rod of iron."

—The Times.

King Amanullah of Afghanistan has abdicated, and his elder brother, who was the heir to the Throne ten years ago and was supplanted, now suceeeds to the Throne. Whether he will prove as good a King as Amanullah remains to be seen, but our prophecy some weeks ago that the ex-King would learn that the way of the reformer is hard is justified by events.

"His pilgrimage to Europe was a dangerous adventure, which proved his undoing," says the Morning Post, and in a leader goes back to the Old Testament for its illustration of this modern happening.

"The Afghans are the strongest and most fanatical of Mohammedans; and the unveiling of Queen Souriya on board ship was the beginning of a series of changes every one of which was felt to be an outrage to their faith.

An Old Testament Comparison

"If our readers would realize the sort of conflict which followed let them read those chapters in the First Book of Kings which relate the conflict between King Ahab and Queen Jezzebel on the one side and Elijah and his brother-prophets on the other.

"The Mullahs are a great power in Afghanistan. When they opposed the King's commands he put certain of them to death, but could not break an influence far more powerful than his own:

"And Ahab said to Elijah, Hast thou found me, O mine enemy? And he answered, I have found thee; because thou hast sold thyself to work evil in the sight of the Lord.

"That, we may be certain, is how the Mullahs regarded Amanullah's attempts to introduce European clothing, the education and unveiling of women, and all the other departures from the customs of their faith.

"I was a hopeless crusade from the first, and has come to its inevitable end. Amanullah has so bitterly offended national feeling in Afghanistan that after a sharp fight he has found the only course open to him to throw himself upon the mercy of the brother whose Throne he had usurped. So ends—an amazing story. As to the future, we can only say that Inayatullah is the rightful King, and is said to follow the policy of his father. If he does so, he is assured of the friendship of this country."

"The ex-King's error," asserts the Times, "seems to have lain not in his zeal for reform but in his concentration of effort on non-essential but annoying changes; above all in his refusal to recognize that he had not acquired the prestige of the Turkish Dictator whom he imitated, and that his country did not reproduce the conditions that enabled Ghazi Mustafa Kemal to impose his reforms upon a sturdy but highly disciplined people.

Seeds Will Surely Germinate

"Yet, whatever his mistakes, whatever his miscalculations, he is entitled to a large measure of sympathy from the Western world which he paid the compliment of imitation. He has failed, but he has failed in what every European who believes in the value of our civilization holds to be a good cause. Nor is his failure yet assured. He has sown seeds among the young generation of Afghans that will surely germinate.

"He has insisted on the value of education and of organization, and on the necessity of learning more from the West than the use of machine-guns and magazine rifles, and of suppressing that widespread financial corruption which has been the canker of so many Asiatic monarchies.

"His innovating zeal doubtless aroused the indignation of many of his subjects—more especially when it was manifested in attempts to improve the status and to modify the traditional dress of women—but all its consequences will hardly disappear. He may leave Afghanistan for ever, but, if the Mulahs have seen the last of him, they may not have seen the last of his reforms."

The Daily Telegraph sums up the policy which has led to King Amanullah's overthrow. After alluding to the King's journey to Europe it states:—

"On the return of the King and Queen an endeavor was made to put these ideas into practice. The King himself announced that he would be his own Prime Minister, that libraries and factories would be established, and girls and boys between 6 and 11 years of age in Kabul compulsorily educated together.

"Had this been all, all might yet have been well, but he went contrary to many of the cherished social and religious feelings of his subjects by putting a ban on polygamy, by insisting on European clothing, by declaring that the Mohammedan Sunday was no longer a holiday, by forbidding the wearing of the fez and by abolishing the purdah and the veil for women. Popular discontent at length broke forth in civil war, in which Amanullah's troops suffered defeat."

"His error," says the Evening Standard, "the error which brought about his downfall, probably consisted in believing himself to be the man to carry out this task. He evidently was not. His whole career has suggested much ambition and little discretion, and the intemperate haste with which he promulgated his reforms was very far from statesmanlike.

"Kemal Pasha stood in a wholly different relation to his people. The Turks had passed through a century of continual loss and disgrace, culminating in a disaster which made them feel that they were on the brink of destruction. Then there arose a national hero who saved them and whom they were inclined in consequence devotedly to obey.

"He on his side saw that his prestige offered an opportunity for the introduction of Western customs which might never recur, and taht if it was to be done at all it must be done quickly. King Amanullah had earned no such reverence from the Afghans. Amanullah failed in a work of statesmanship because he was not a great statesman.

"His adventure may postpone the Westernization of Afghanistan, but it it highly unlikely that it will for ever avert. There may be much to be said against our civilization, and our own sages frequently refer to the wisdom of peoples which remain in their primitive condition.

"Nevertheless, in the long run, few peoples of the earth decline the material advantages of civilization."

A Dangerous Factor.

"Despite his present adversity," says the Star, "the ex-King is clearly not without support in his own country, or he could not have gone as far as he did. Nor can it be expected that even this sharp lesson will rob so alert and enterprising a man of his ambitions. That is the most dangerous factor so far as we are concerned. Our main interest is a strong and independent Afghanistan, but for some time at least the future is bound to be uncertain with so active a potential Pretender hovering about its uneasy borders."

Condemns Mixing by Grain Agents

Royal Commission Hears Complaints of North Portal Producer

Estevan, Sask.—Claiming that competition for the maximum profit by mixing by mill agents is a source that deprives the grain producers of a fair price level, Frank Durick, of North Portal, in testifying recently before the Saskatchewan Royal Grain Commission, asserted that a car of grain should not be stopped on its journey from the point of loading until unloaded at the lake terminals. He was supported in his views by resolutions from farmers of the Rock Precee district.

The witness claimed that the shipper began to get the worst of it from the moment he hauled his grain to the country elevator or the loading platform. In the latter case he probably had to spend several dollars coopering the car at his disposal before it could hold grain, he said, and in the former his car as subject to being opened at any time the train stopped by some mill agent who wanted to get a sample for diversion. The farmer lost, he said, because the prices quoted at Liverpool "on this degraded stug" from the mixing houses was the basis on which the man on the farm is paid for his grain.

The farmers at this point, the witness said, wanted this manipulation of grain at the mixing houses stopped by law. He advocated moving the inspection department from Winnipeg to the lake head and permitting no grading other than a preliminary at point of shipment until the unloading sample is taken at the terminals.

A resolution presented to the Commission suggested that at least one farmer should hold a position on every harbor board in the Dominion through which Canadian wheat was moved. The resolution also urged that a Government elevator be placed at New Westminster, B.C.

The old War Wheat Board received a tribute by resolution presented through Frank Durick, for the local United Farmers of Canada Branch. They suggested that the Government re-establish the Board. The Government was running a railroad system for the country, he pointed out. Why not let the country run the grain industry, since they did so well during the war.

Too often the fruit of naval rivalry is the apple of discord.

British Get Truth Of Island Murders

Investigator Finds 1927 Tragedies in Solomons Had No Real Revolutionary Basis

REVENGE A MOTIVE

Nearly two years ago reports came from the Solomon Islands, in the Pacific, of a revolt among the natives in which members of the island constabulary had been slain at Guadalcanal and Malaita; it was periodically reported for several weeks that the killings were the precursors of a genral rising of the islanders. Later information revealed that certain members of the Kolokumaha tribe on the Island of Guadalcanal had, indeed, at Verakone, on February 14, 1927, slain three members of the armed constabulary, named Funansua, Gena and Veki, together with a boy named Kekipeta, who happened to be in their company, and that nine tribesmen had been arrested and tried for the crimes, of whom two were acquitted, one reprived and six hanged.

A few weeks previously W. R. Bell, District Officer at Malaita, had been killed at Kwaiamba by Sinarangoese, who, in the fight which followed between the constabulary and the natives, had also slain K. C. Lilies, a cadet in the Administrative Service, and a clerk named Marcus, as well as twelve members of the native constabulary. Several of those concerned in this affair were also dealt with Rumors of a coming general rising persisted in the news reports to London. The British Secretary of State for the Colonies was apparently much disturbed, for in March, 1927, he sent out Lieut.-Col. Sir H. C. Moorhouse to make an investigation. His report, which was published as a State paper on Jan. 5 of the present year, shows how the British Government searches out the truth in such affairs, even in its most remote possessions, so that adequate steps may be taken before the expected calamity arrives. In these cases no steps will be necessary, for the Moorhouse report shows that the Guadalcanal tragedy was inspired by two criminals, one of a former constable, without any idea of an uprising, while the killing of Bell and his companions at Malaita had been brought about by a native leader named Basiana for revenge because Bell had already prevented a revolt which Basiana and his friends had planned.

Billy Viti's Grievance

In dealing with the Guadalcanal case, the report says that in the course of the inquiry it became evident that two men, Tuatakombo and Billy Viti, alias Talolia, were the chief instigators of the murders. Tutakombo was known as the village bad man, while Billy Viti had been a good constable until he had been fined $15 in 1926, when he, too, had become a bad man. Billy, it appears, had been charged with having more wives than the law allowed, so he was summoned before Funansua. He came bringing his three wives, "to whom there is ample evidence to show that he was married according to native custom. It was on the charge of having a third wife that he was convicted and fined."

Sir H. C. Moorhouse declares on information and belief that he is convinced that the official Funansua did not exercise sufficient care as to whether the complaint was actually lodged by the first wife, as required by the law or was one worked up by the police, "possibly acting under a wrong interpretation of the law."

At any rate, smarting under the humiliation of the fine, Billy Viti allied himself with the notorious Tuatakombo and became his friend. When this friend was arrested he planned the extinction of his enemy Funansua.

"I am of the opinion," says Sir H. C. Moorehouse, "that the murders were not due to any general hatred of government measures among the tribe concerned, leading to some act by which they endeavored to throw off this, to them, intolerable yoke, but to a combination of circumstances in which the personal element mainly entered. The native tax had nothing to do with these murders."

The Malaita Murders

Dealing with the Malaita murders, Sir H. C. Moorhouse pays a high tribute to Mr. Bell, who "well-nigh achieved the impossible" as District Officer, and who gained the confidence of the natives by his interest in their affairs and his ever-present, if sometimes stern, sense of justice."

Basiana, who was the leader of the affair, was head of one of the clans and a devil-devil man of considerable influence. He had been for some time sacrificing pigs (the number has been put as high as seventy) to find out if the auguries were auspicious. Suddenly his chance came; the time for the annual payment of the tax was imminent, when, if there was any resentment among the people against the government, it would be at its keenest; "the gods" were favorable; Mr. Bell would land as usual at the "tax house" and give the opportunity.

A big meeting was held, at which the waverers "were brought only to heel by Basiana playing his trump card, the 'big swear' against which apparently no Malaita man could stand. It does not require much imagination to picture Basiana and the other leaders pointing out that here was a unique opportunity, favored by 'the gods,' of getting rid once and for all of the government who had interfered with their playful habit of promiscuous murder, and arrested and hanged their people for what was in their eyes justifiable homicide, who had substituted a paltry fine or short term of imprisonment for the death sentence for adultery, who were endeavoring to clean up their villages and force their pigs into styes where they had to be fed, and who finally had ordered them to give up their 'Sniders' (a generic term for any form of old rifle.) In fairness to the administration, it must be recorded that the calling in of the 'Sniders' was done on Mr. Bell's own initiative and without the knowledge or consent of the Resident Commissioner.

Dingaan's Day

Rev. George Walker in the London Daily Telegraph: (December 16, 1928, Dingaan's Day, the great national festival of South Africa, commemorated defeat of the great Zulu chieftain by a Boar force under Adries Pretorius at Blood River.) The key to the understanding of the attitude of the average South African to the inescapable native question is the recognition that South Africa, apart from the south-western corner, is still frontier, with frontier ideals and fears. Essentially, though there may be many "solutions" as there are individuals, there is one determining factor in the approach—Digaan's shadow remains in the background. . . . The story of the American frontier is repeated. The Zulu has not yet acquired the romantic color of the redskin, and the dress of Zulu and Matabele is less adapted to effective display upon the stage. Yet they are at least as brave, and probably were a more disciplined and dangerous foe. The Western farmer of yesterday would have seen the reason for many of the apparently irksome regulations of modern South Africa. . . . The memory of Dingaan's Day is at the back of the white man's mind; the native is a man of war, not a docile hewer of wood and drawer of water, and nothing more.

India and Dominion Status

Bombay Daily Mail: The British Dominions, before and after obtaining complete self-government, were and are laboring under the same defects which are said to exist in India. These diffculties did not, however, militate against the grant of self-government to the Dominions, while in India they are pointed out to be insuperable difficulties. There are those who argue that the grant of immediate Dominion status or anything approaching it to India woul spell disaster to it. It did not do so in other parts of the British Empire.

World Census of Agriculture Nearing Start

Seventy-Four Nations Join in Plan to Help Adjust Supply and Demand

Rome.—The world agricultural census initiated by the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome to correlate world-wide figures on the supply and demand for farm products is well on the way toward achievement.

The impetus given it by the League of Nations' World Economic Conference of 1927, the careful preparations for it and favorable reception by the governments give good grounds for anticipating its success.

The object of the census, which is planned for 1930, is to provide for the collection of annual agricultural statistics and to give a complete picture of the agricultural resources of each country.

As it will be carried out in every country at the same time and as far as possible on a uniform system, it will form a practically complete inventory of the agricultural resources of the whole world and insure, for the future at least, that agricultural statistics in the different countries shall be comparable.

The proposal for a world agricultural census attracted the attention of the International Education Board (Rockefeller Foundation) which undertook to make a grant of $10,000 per annum for the five years 1925-29.

A special bureau charged with this particular work was created at the institute in 1925, and Leon M. Estabrook, of the United States Department of Agriculture, appointed director.

So far 74 nations have definitely accepted the scheme of the census and Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands and Portugal have undertaken to apply it to their colonies.

When the census has been taken the essential function of the institute will be to study the international production of food and raw materials and to correlate the information so that the world may have an increased knowledge of supplies available from countries which have a surplus and the probable demand from countries where the output is sufficient.

Britain is on Way to New Prosperity Says J. M Keynes

Economst Who Finds Efficiency Gain is Overhauling Setback Since War

London—John Maynard Keynes, the distinguished British economist, at last sees daylight in the industrial sky. In his presidential address at the annual meeting of the National Mutual Life Assurance Society here, he cites cautious estimates which he believes show that the burdens imposed on industries since the war are being slowly but surely wiped out by increased efficiency of production, so that it is only a matter of time, he says, before Britain recovers completely.

"Between 1914 and 1924," he says, "the average real wages for a normal week of full employment rose by more than eight per cent. In the same period the weekly hours of work were reduced more than 10 per cent. The result is that employes were set the task, if they weer to maintain their pre-war position, of increasing their efficiency by nearly 20 per cent.

The census of production in 1924 indicated an increase of efficiency to that date just about sufficient to balance the shortened hours, but it was not able to make in addition any contribution toward meeting the increased weekly wage. Thus already in 1924 employers in those industries, where the increase of efficiency had not been above the average, were making heavy weather.

Between 1924 and 1928, money and wages remained practically unchanged, while return to the gold standard at pre-war parity had the effect of increasing real wages by a further 8 per cent. It follows that employers have been faced with the task of improving their efficiency by 16 per cent. as compared with 1924, before they could recover their pre-war position. Now it is not over-optimistic, I think, to suppose that efficiency is being increased at 1½ per cent. per annum on an average in the whole field of industry, which, if it is the case, is a considerable achievement. This means that to-day that efficiency has reduced the adverse lead from 16 per cent. to about 10 per cent."

The Manchester Guardian says: "One hardly expects optimism regarding the future of British industry from J. M. Keynes, but we are not sure that this passage is not essentially the most optimistic utterance that has recently fallen from the lips of any of our economic leaders."

No matter how long it rains, the famous Taj Mahal mausoleum in India leaks three drops of water, never more nor less. After 300 years no one has been able to explain how the architect arranged for the phenomenon, which was intended as his own unique memorial.

Officials of the Canadian Airways, Ltd., claim record time for a new mail plane which sped from Toronto to Montreal on Monday in one hour and fifty-five minutes. The 330-mile journey was made through rough weather at a speed of about 170 miles an hour. Pilot D. S. Bondurand brought the new machine to Montreal, with H. F. McClellan, manager, and H. C. LePot, accountant, as passenger. The plane, a Fokker super-universal model with Wasp 425-h.p. motor, has a capacity of seven passengers and the pilot. It will be placed in the regular mail service operating daily between Montreal and Toronto. Passengers will be carried whenever the mail is not too heavy. The company also reports two more machines on order, which will soon be placed in the service.

The Leader is indebted to Mrs. Geo. Dardis for several photographs of the latest type of aeroplane used for transportation, manufactured by Fokker Aerocraft Corporation, of Hasbrouck Hgts., N.J., of which Mr Dardis is superintendant. These planes are built to carry fourteen passengers, with galley and toilet equipment and sleeping accommodation for six. Would You Build A House Without A Roof?

You won't start to build a house unless you know you can finish it. The Bell Telephone Company tries to be equally sensible.

The company does not need all its $75,000,000 of new capital now but will spread its issue over years to come.

But it does need the assurance that, when equipment is started now for future telephones, money can be obtained to finish the job.

By 1934 Ontario and Quebec will need a million telephones. These telephones cannot be ready unless central exchanges and other equipment are started now.
