Death From Whooping-Cough

News was received here by relatives last week of the sad death of little Ruth, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Beattie of Surf Inlet, B. C., after only six days illness. Death was caused by whooping-cough combined with intestinal lagrippe. Interment took place in Vancouver, B. C. on Saturday Jan. 21st., which was the fourth birthday of little Ruth. Besides the parents are left two brothers and one sister to mourn the loss of a "loved one gone before."

To the bereaved ones is extended the loving sympathy of their many friends here.

Chesterville Loses to Champions

Tuesday night one of the largest crowds of the season saw the Champion Blues from Berwick set back the Cyclones another notch in their dash for the pennant, in the fastest and cleanest game of real hockey seen in this loop. Berwick were without their star centre man Mills Foster, whose father was very ill, but this fact only seemed to put more determination in the old guard to play the game of their lives. It took them some time to strike their real stride but when Lorne Hutt, Andy and Gordon Ouderkirk got going good they soon put the game in the win column for the Champions.

Play started fast right from the first face-off with hard clever hockey being put up by both teams. Chesterville showed a trifle more combination than their opponents but could not pull Hutt and Hank Ouderkirk far enough out from their positions to make an effective assault on Inman who stopped many long range shots. When Hutt captured the rubber he made a lone rush, likewise Hank, going the length of the rink only to have the play carried back by Casselman Sorrell and Conley to stack up against the Berwick stone-wall defense, the period ending without a score

The second started with the same whirlwind brand of hockey and it looked good enough to the home crowd to win when Sorrell by a pretty piece of stick handling netted the first counter of the game and the only one with forty minutes playing time gone.

Everybody was on tiptoe for the third session, Chesterville fans pulling for another score to give them a bit more margin, and the Berwick bunch yelling their heads off for the Blues to tie up the score. Lorne Hutt responded, got the puck in front of his own goal, sailed through the whole Chesterville team and tied up the score with their first tally in three minutes. Chesterville stepped on the gas, but their fastest pace was not good enough to get in behind Berwick's defense and put one past Inman, who was playing a great game. After twelve minutes of hard plugging Andy Ouderkirk showed his old time form as it used to be up in the Cobalt country, and put his team in the lead. With only five minutes to go Chesterville pressing the Blues almost to the limit got a little too anxious, with their defense drawn clear out when Gordon Ouderkirk grabbed the puck and with a great burst of speed beat the bunch and rolled in their third and last counter, cinching the game three goals to one.

Whittaker the Optican will be in Chesterville on Feb. 14th. Finch Feb. 16th.

No trealer Cets Heavy Winter Overcoat By Trick

Mrs. Dorset Birchal, wife of a prominent citizen of Montreal received a telephone message from her husband's club, informing her that he had been taken ill, but was afraid to come home in the cold weather without his heavy Winter overcoat. The man who delivered the message, however, told her that he would come up for it and bring it down to him. It was no trouble at all, he said. Mrs. Birchel thanked him for his kindness, and when a few minutes later a well dressed stranger presented himself at the house, she unquestioningly handed over her husband's valuable coat. It was not until Mr. Birchal returned home last night in perfect health and wearing another coat that the stranger's duplicity was discovered.

An Age Worn Fake

The envelope switching game, hoary with age, is still doing business, and two Toronto tailors are the latest victims. Max Shapiro and Max Stein were given information that two men, hard-pressed for money had 1,000 yards of cloth which could be bought for $950, and a deal was made. The "con" men demanded evidence that the tailors were financially capable of carrying out the bargain, and the money was counted out and put in an envelope and handed to a friend of the tailors to be held until the cloth was delivered. The "con" men then hurried away to arrange for delivery. When they did not show up in reasonable time, the envelope was opened and was found to contain sheets of paper.

No Mouldy Feed In Drury's Silo

A 14x37 foot silo on Premier Drury's farm was last year filled from 18 acres of sweet clover. The work of filling was spread over two weeks. It began before bloom started and ended as full bloom appeared, the material going into the silo practically as soon as cut in the field.

Feeding from the silo did not begin until the first of January, and meantime the contents had settled 12 feet. When feeding began a foot of spoiled ensilage was thrown off, and below that the feed was found in good condition for use. At first there was hesitation by part of the herd in eating the stuff, but all the cattle are relishing it now. The ensilage is quite dark, but there is no mould. Eight acres of sweet clover was also made into excellent hay.

A ten-acre field, from which part of the sweet clover had been harvested, was broken up directly after the removal of the crop, and eight acres of this seeded to millet, and the rest planted in turnips and potatoes. The millet gave a bumper crop of hay, the turnips above an average. Of the rest of the acreage from which clover had been harvested part was broken up and worked in preparation for next spring's seeding, and part sown to fall wheat, which went into wiuter in prime condition.

"Well, you had better be very careful of it, my dear. He told me last week I had broken it."

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. Funeral Of W. A. Hen.y, Berwick

The funeral of the late William Archibald Henry of Berwick took place at St. Luke's Presbyterian Church Finch, on Wednesday, Jan. 25th. It was conducted under the auspices of Finch Lodge, A. F. & A. M. No. 557, of which deceased was a member. Rev. R. J. Wilson M.A. B. D. officiated, his text being Isaiah 57 2, "The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart: and merciful men are taken away." Appropiate music was rendered by the choir, including Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar" by John Hodgson. The pallbearers were J. N. McDougal, A. J. McDougal, D. B. Cameron, Chas. Gray, L. J. Hutt and J. McKillop.

Mr. Henry passed quietly away early Monday morning in his 54th year, surrounded by the immediate members of his family. The high esteem in which he was held by the people of the surrounding community was shown by a large collection of floral tributes and the group of sorrowing friends who met to pay their last respects. The late Mr. Henry was known as a man of sterling qualities, always cheerful and willing to lend a helping hand to those in need of sympathy or comfort. During his life the deceased took an active part in the life of the community, being an elder of St. Luke's Presbyterian Church, Finch, Township Treasurer for the past number of years, and holding many local offices.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife. one daughter Jennie, two sons Wendell and Dalton Henry, all at home; one sister Christena, a trained nurse of Pittsburg, Pa.; and one brother Donald, Berwick.

Among the relatives and friends from a distance were Christena from Pittsburg, Pa; Mr. Angus Patterson. Saskatoon; Robert Henry, Dickinson's Landing; Mr Geo. Griminson, Montreal; Mr. Jas. Byran, Osnabruck; Mr. Howard McMartin, McDonald's Corners; Mr. and Mrs. Fred McMartin, Smiths Falls; Mr. Robert Stark, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs W. Kennedy, Maxville; Mr. and Mrs. Ranald Benton, St. Elmo.

No. 557; Wreath from Presbyterian Sunday School, Berwick; St. Andrew's Cross from Angus Patterson and family, Saskatoon; Horseshoe, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Grimison, Montreal; Heart W. T. McMartiu and family Dunbar.

Action Dismissed

His Honor Judge O'Reilly has dismissed an action brought in the Williamstown Division Court by a number of the members of the Glen Brook Women's Institute against four of the offieers of the Institute, the action being based on the payment of the sum of $100 out of the Institute funds to the Cornwall General Hospital. The circumstances giving rise to the suit occasioned a difference of opinion amongst the members of the Institute. A garden party had been held by the Institute, and the plaintiffs in the action held that the whole proceeds of the affair should have been turned over to a farmer who had been burned out, whereas the officers, who were the defendants in the action, maintained that all that was necessary was to pay for a set of harness which had been purchased for this farmer. At the hearing at Williamstown some months ago, Judge O'Reilly expressed the opinion that when the members of the Institute voted $100 to the Cornwall General Hospital, and $100 to the Hotel Dieu Hospital, they were within their rights and had not been guilty of any breach of trust His judgment now gives efiect to that view. —Cornwall Freeholder.

Sentenced For Life; A Year Added

Imprisonment in the penitentiary for life sentence imposed on two men for the robbery of the branch of the Bank of Hamilton in Toronto on October 18 last. In pronouncing sentence Mr. Justice Riddell said he had decided not to direct that they be whipped as well as imprisoned but he continued "I give warning, open and public, to all contemplating robbery, that if they are convicted in the future, they may expect the lash."

Then the learned Judge added the sentence of one year for conviction on another charge.

Who Pays For Advertising ?

Why, nobody pays for it. Like the labor-saving machine that cuts down overhead and increases production===It pays for itself.

Or like the truck installation that decreases delivery charges by increasing efficiency--It pays for itself.

Advertising cuts down selling costs--breaks down sales resistance--It pays for itself.

Weasel's Death Dance Is Clever Performance

The death dance of the weasel is quite the cleverest act performed by any wiid creature to obtain food. He will practise upon lapwings, for these birds are very inquisitive. He sees the birds in a middle of a large meadow. Running through the grass, he gets as near to them as he can without being seen. Now he begins to dance; he jumps up and down, not very quickly at first, bnt just raising himself above the grass. The birds cease feeding and look at the strange creature.

The weasel now seems to go quite mad. He twists, tumbles, falls over and over, bounces up and down, but all the time getting just a little closer to the bird he has marked. The lapwings prying nature sends them closer to the little animal. Wilder grows his antics, closer and closer he works toward the birds. He is now in the middle of an admiring group. Suddenly there is a spring, a startled cry from a bird, a flutter of frightened wings, and the birds fly off, But the teeth of the weasel are fixed firmly in the neck of the bird he has won.

An Editor's Candor

Coal Oil Johnny is dead. He was remarkable in two ways. He managed to spend a million dollars in a few months, and then managed to live on $50 per month. We've managed to do one of 'em.

William and Henry, chauffeurs, were discussing the ill-luck of a lellow-chauffeur Clarence, who had the day before been fined for taking out his employer's car withont permission.

"But how did the boss know Clarence had taken the car out?" asked Henry.

"Why," explained William, "Clarence ran over him."

Paratyphoid Fever

In former days people thought that typhoid fever was a disease with well-defined symptons and that it could easily be recognized by the peculiar steplike way the temperature rose and then gradually descended to normal. But after investigators had discovered a blood test with which they could determine with accuracy the nature of the disease they found that there was another disorder, paratyphoid, a sort of first cousin of typhoid, that had constantly been mistaken for it. That explained the mystery of "second attacks" of typhoid, one attack of which was thought to make the patient immune; for typhoid did not protect absolutely against attacks of paratyphoid.

The incubation period of paratyphoid fever—that is, the time that elapses between the catching of the disease and the appearance of the first symptoms—is, from two days to a week. Then, unlike typhoid, in which for several days there is a gradually increasing sense of being out of sorts, the disease usually begins suddenly with chills, headache, backache and pains in the limbs. The tempejature usually rises more rapidly than it does in the case of typhoid; and occasionally there is nosebleed, especially in children. The digestive organs are upset, and the appetite is lost; vomiting is not uucommon at the beginning of the attack, and diarrhoea with abdominal pain is of frequent occurrence. As in tyyhoid, there is an eruption of pale rose-colored spots on the chest, the abdomen and the back; sometimes they appear also on the arms, the legs and the face. The eruption appears toward the end of the first week of the fever and lasts six or seven days. Often there are fever blisters on the lips.

The symptoms of paratyphoid, though so much like those of typhoid, are usually less severe. The patient is seldom so much depressed physically, and delirium and stupor are uncommon; recovery is the rule, and convalescence is usually not protracted. The treatment of paratyphoid is virtually the same as that of typhoid. The chief thing is to see that the patient is comfortable and to keep up his strength.

Finch 4, Chesterville 3.

The fast Finch puck chasers were entertained at the local rink last Thursday night in a set-to which did not go as "merry as a marriage bell" for the home crowd when their favorites dropped a game to the boys from the east by a score of 4 to 3. Chesterville fans have rejoiced many times this season when the boys have been returned winners, but it was a hard crack for the home bunch to be trimmed right on their own ice. However there was nothing else for it after the final whistle but to go home and play the "glad game."

We were glad the trimming was no worse than it was, and glad that the "Cyclones" weren't as bad all the time as some of them were some of time.

The game looked pretty fast too, at times, mostly when one of the Cycs. were staging a fine one-man rush that didn't get the rubber into net. Finch were without the services of McMillan in goal and moved Sims back between the flags for the first period at the end of which Chesterville led by 2 to 1. Finch started the scoring when after three minutes of play Zeran scored, but the advantage was short lived as within half a minute Casselman had set things even again with a nice score. Chesterville's second came after nine minutes of play when a clever bit of work by Hummel added another.

After the rest McMonagle went between the posts for Finch and from that time on the Cyclones efforts were not so effective. Sim's tightened up the defence and relieved McLean of a lot of backchecking, the later using his speed to better advantage in stopping many rushes before they got beyond centre ice and boring in with Billy Ouderkirk and Zeran adding the goal that evened up the score after eleven minutes. Rickard a half minute afterwards put his team ahead with a lucky long shot from the left side over the centre line that sailed into the net without interference.

Chesterville's best in the third was one goal, but Finch had widened the margin when Billy Ouderkirk had scored in the early minutes of the period, and do their best they could not tie it up.

"THE FOUR HOREMEN" SMASHES RECORD

$1,000,000, Ingram Production of Ibanez Film Due Here—Marks New Epoch for Screen.

The long-awaited Rex Ingram Production of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is coming to the Star Theatre Thursday Feb. 16th, 1922. This is the picture that cost Metro $1,000,000 to make and from all accounts the million was well spent, as critics agree that all other efforts at production on a grand scale have been surpassed and record runs have been made in New York, Chicago, Boston, Detroit, Toronto and other cities where the picture has been previously shown.

Fifty principals and 2,500 extras were engaged in the filming of the Photodrama. An entire French village and an elaborate Chateau were erected to be destroyed under the artillery bombardment of the German invaders, and more than 125,000 tons of masonry, steel, lumber and furniture were used in creating backgrounds that are said to reproduce with absolute fidelity the shifting panorama of the story.

The appeal of the story itself has already been proved through the success of the novel by Vincent Blasco Ibanez, upon which the Photodrama is founded. This production is reported to have followed faithfully the epic tale of human passion against the background of the Great War as related by Ibanez.

The cast includes Rudolph Valentino, Alice Terry, Pomeroy Camon, Joseph Swickard, Brisley Shaw and fifty others, this picture was directed by Rex Ingram.

This Photodrama is being brought to Chesterville at a great expense to your local Theatre Manager, who wishes to lead the small towns in the showing of large productions. The seating capacity of the Theatre is so limited that twe shows will have to be run, the first, the Matinee at 2.30 p. m., the second 8.00 p. m.

This Photodrama will be run at popular prices. Adults 85c, children under 12, 55c.

The plan of the seating is now ready. Secure your seats early.

A Wizard At Work

Los Angeles Times—Those who have been thinking that Luther Burbank slumbered at the switch are advised that it is no such thing. He has been working his miracles right along. Some report of his activities comes to us from his haven at Santa Rosa. Among other things he has tamed the wild oat. The new Burbank oat is white, hull-less, and weighs approximately sixty pound to the bushel instead of forty-five present common variety of oats. It is predicted that the last horse will find replenished vigor in the refreshment provided by his new brand of oats.

The nature wizard has also developed an orange sunberry—whatever that is. It is said to have the exact flavor of the eastern blueberry—commonly known as the huckleberry. It is larger and of a yellowish color. Possibly that is where the orange comes in.

Also from Brazilian nativity Burbank has developed a fruity vegetable much like our tomato and equally desirable in soups and salads. From Peru he has evolved a winter grass that has alfalfa skinned. It withstands the heaviest frosts and is a fine forage for live stock, poultry and goats. The report further says that Burbank has an entirely new crimson artichoke, the globes of which are as beautiful as roses, but ten times as great. There are also a yellow hibiscus, a prickly poppy and an iridescent amaranthus.

In a more practical way there is a new brand of sweet corn that is said to be bigger, better and earlier than any other variety now in the market.

These are some of the upstanding features of the Burbank bulletin and show that years have not withered nor custom staled his propensities for tampering with the works of nature for the further benefit and entertainment of mankind.

A Memory For Faces

To have a good memory is to have something that is valuable as a definite talent for music or modeling or law or medicine. Perhaps without a good memory, a memory well developed in certain respects, it is impossible for a person to have any special talent, for talent really consists in a faculty for turning to account impressions and information that you have acquired. But there are numerous persons who are not talented but who have a good memory. And there is no more serviceable friend than a good memory for faces.

A desire to be remembered is common to every human being. A man wants to be remembered through life, and he would like to be remembered after death. Everyone whom he meets and who later gives evidence of remembering him gratifies a fundamental human craving. Everyone whom he meets and who later gives evidence of having forgotten him disappoints that craving and unconsciously alienates to some degree his friendly regard.

Recently an important city election was decided by the fact that the two contesting candidates who were making "a whirlwind campaign" one could remember the new people that he met, and the other couldn't. The candidate who had this gift of pleasant memory was elected, although measurably inferior in all other qualifications for office.

It isn't only politicians or prospective politicians that should try to improve their faculty for remembering people. Everyone should try to do it, for every one who does readily remember people contributes to the friendliness, neighborliness and kindliness of life. If you are one of those who say, "I can remember names, but not faces," the probability is that you are a careless observer, so far as people are concerned. Portrait painters do not forget faces. Try to fix in mind the characteristic features and expression of the people you meet and do not identify them too much with the clothes or hats that they happen to be wearing at the moment.

A Corner In Weeds

For two weeks he was away from home. It rained and the grass on the lawn grew unkempt, so that it was hard to cut when he returned. But if grass grows well in wet weather, weeds grow far better. One corner at the back of the lawn was overgrown with big flourishing weeds. They were so tall and tough that he could not cut them with a lawn mower and planned to us the sickle the next day. But the days were full, and he did not find time. At the end of a week the weeds had grown so high that when he did hack them off with the sickle the stubs that he left were thick and ugly. Now as he looks out of the window he sees that unsightly corner. It will be an eyesore throughout the season.

It is unusual, you will say, to derive profit from a crop of weeds, but that corner has brought the owner good returns. He has now a higher ideal for the lawn than he ever had before, and, more important than that, he now has a higher ideal for life, for he has seen the analogy between weeds in a lawn and weeds in a life. How many lives have been spoilt by a little corner in which weeds have been allowed to grow. Some bad habit has gained root; some weakness or some sin has never been torn out. The unworthly thing may have lodgment only in your thoughts. It may show in your conversation or in business or politics or in the family life. Perhaps it it a little trait of meaness or coarseness or dishonesty, but what a blot it makes on the soul!

As the man thinks of his lawn he knows that he will have no more weed-grown corners, for now he sees that the way to keep them out is never to let them get a start. Not only his lawn but his life will be free from them, for he will take Christ for his ideal.

The Exception That Proves the Rule

"When a fellow starts to do anything he can always succeed if he only sticks to it."

"Not always. How about when you start to remove a sheet of sticky flypaper that you've sat down on?"

If it Were To Spring

"That clock on the stairs is dangerous."

"How do you make that out?"

"It might run down and strike one."

Reminded Him

The Professor—Yes, a caterpillar is the most voracious of living things. In a month it will eat about 600 times its own weight.

Deaf Parent—Whose boy did you say he was?

Her Wishes

She—I wish that we two alone could live always on some lonely island in a great ocean.

He—Darling, havn't you a wish that could be filled more easily?

She—Oh, yes! I'm just dying for a strawberry ice cream soda.

Not If He Knew It

Mrs. Nexdore—Your boy threw a lump of coal at our cat.

Mr. Naybor—I'll attend to the young rascal. Not that we care anything about your cat, but no boy of mine is going to waste coal in that manner.

A colored man, after three weeks of married life, made his way to a lawyer's office and complained that his wife had been throwing things at him and bullying him.

"Can't stand it no longer, boss," he said.

"That's all right, Sam," said the lawyer. "Things will improve. Besides, remember you took her for better or for worse."

Drawing Up Contract Is Serious Business

Some of the common pitfalls which into even the shrewest business men fall when drawing up business contracts were explained by Mr. Thomas N. Phelan, of Toronto, to members of Ottawa Council, Knights of Columbus, at a luncheon in the Russell Hotel, Saturday. Mr. Phelan who is a lawyer, is a past state deputy of the order, and council for the Ontario Motor League.

The speaker classed all contrasts under two headings, those of an informal nature. The first group included deeds, leases for more than three years, company contracts and transfers of share in ships, which must be in writing, and under seal, and contracts of surety, contracts to be performed within one year, contracts with reference to land and contracts re real estate agents commission, which must be in writing, or they are not enforcible.

The law specifies a particular form in the majority of formal contracts and it was of the utmost importance that all these should be adhered to. A word often changed the whole legal meaniug and Mr. Phelan instanced the phrase "still a little" and "a little still."

One of three conditions must exist in all informal contracts, writting, part payment or part performance and in all contracts. three essential conditions, consideration, an offer and acceptance. Mr. Phelan pointed out many instances showing the necessity of clearly defining between a contract and a declaration of intention.

A newspaper advertisement offering a reward for the return of an article was not binding unless the claimant was aware of the offer before the article was returned. The offer must be communicated before it becomes a contract. Likewise the person making the offer might revoke it at any time before the acceptance reached him. At an auction sale the tapping of the hammer on the table signified the acceptance of the offer which might be withdrawn any time before the hammer fell.

Although as a general rule the acceptance of any offer must be communicated in order that the contract be made binding, this acceptance might be by silence. Such an acceptance would result from a person making no effort to return an article delivered to him and which he had not ordered.

The importance of delivering an acceptance of any offer by the same means as the offer was communicated was stressed by the speaker. If the ofler was received by post there was a binding contractwhen the acceptance was deposited in the Post Office and any attempt to revoke it was not then binding. The offer and acceptance must eoincide in all details and no qualifying sections could be added to the acceptance. This was the most frequent cause of trouble in contracts.

Posed as a Corpse

Posing as a corpse in an undertaking shop at Pittsburg, last Wednesday, Prohibition Agent Arthur E. Kemmerling captured an alleged bogus prohibiton agent. Kemmerling said arrangements were made for him to pose as a corpse when it was understood that the alleged bogus agent was to come to the undertaking shop to receive "hush" money from a hotel proprietor of East Pittsburgh. All funeral trappings even to lighted candles, were arranged, Kemmerling said, with the result that he overheard the conversation of the men involved. The man arrested said he was Wm. Penrod, of Braddock, Pa.

Catches $500 Fox With Spade

Persistency and a garden spade filled the bag for W. Herrington, of Thedford, after his trusty shot gun had failed him last week. While hunting cottontails, Mr. Herrington discovered fox tracks and about dusk came across the animal. He fired but succeeded only in wounding him. Next day Mr. Herrington returned and again tracked the animal, this time running him to earth in a hole. He blocked the hole and again returned the second time armed with a spade. He dug the quarry out and found that it was not a red fox but a silver grey. He got over $500 for the pelt in Toronto.

Making Sure

A negro sauntered into the office of a white friend, as Judge tells it. "Good mawnin', Mr. Withrow. Kin I use yo' telephone a minute?" he asked "Why certainly, Sam." Sam called his number and after a few minutes' wait: "Is this Mrs. Whit ide? Well, I seen in de papeh where you-all wanted a good culled man. Is you still wantin' one? Then the man yonse got is puffectly satisfactory, and you doesn't contemplate making no change soon? All right, ma'am. Goodbye." Mr. Withrow called to Sam as he left the telephone. "Now, that's too bad Sam, that the place is filled." "Oh, dat's all right, Mr. Withrow. Ise de culled man what's got de job, but I's jest a wantin' to check up."

Who Stole The Bottle?

Perth Expositor—Such is the unsolved mystery connected with the Smiths Falls Perth hockey match here last Monday night. That it is still unsolved as far as the owner of the bottle goes. In the exhuberance of victory and good spirits, not 2½%, this Smiths Falls rooter was celebrating one of Charlebois' goals and in doing so he displayed the fact that he was not without something on the hip. When his celebration was over he passed his hand lovingly over a certain part of his anatomy and discovered to his horror that there was a discrepency somewhere. Seeking whom he might devour he turned and challenged all within hearing to do battle for the bottle. But the bottle was by then in safe and intelligent hands, hands which knew how to use it, for a little girl standing nearby had noticed that he was carrying concealed weapons and had promptly disarmed him, passing the glassware down the line. Blissfully ignorant that he was standing treat for the crowd, the rooter persisted in stumping one of his neighbors to mortal combat for the, by then, dead soldier.

Boy Scouts' Corner

Read This! Everybody!

In Montreal last week, at the Annual Patrol Leaders' Banquet, Lord Byng of Vimy, Governor-General and Chief Scout for Canada said: "I've been a Scout for fifteen years. I've been through Scouting from Patrol Leader to Commissioner. It is as a Scout that I want to speak to you. I want to tell you what a Scout thinks and what he wants from you. He does not expect any present from you. He does not want anything to pass from your pocket to his. All he asks is your interest, your active personal interest.

What I want to say to all of you men who hear me, is that if you want to help these boys you must go down among them. You must go to their troop meeting and you must take part in what concerns them."

Lord Byng insisted that he should be given the same simple fare for supper as the boys ate.

The New Serial

Well, we have the new serial but it's not quite ready yet! It has to undergo a few alterations before being published but we hope to have it all ready so that the first instalment will appear next week. The name of it is "John Detson, Hero," and the name of the contributor is Scout Maurice Beckstead of the Local Troop. Watch for it next week—it's a good one!

It Isn't Your Troop—It's You!

If you want to be in the kind of a Troop
Like the kind of a Troop you like,
You needn't slip your suit in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new,
It's a knock at yourself, when you knock your Troop—
It isn't the Troop, it's you!

Real Troops are not made by boys afraid
Lest somebody else gets ahead.
When everyone works and nobody shirks
You can raise a Troop from the dead.
And, if while you make your personal stake,
Your neighbours can make one, too,
Your Troop will be what you want to see—
It isn't the Troop, it's you!

Why, What, And How Do You Read?

Did you ever stop to consider reading seriously? When you play, you play a game that interests you; when you work, you work at something that is needed and worth while; and when you study, you study to learn something of interest or importance. But what about your reading? I mean your reading of books, papers, magazines, etc.

When you read, you do it for one of two purposes, either entertainment or instruction. In most of our standard magazines to-day we have a "balanced ration" of instructive articles and entertaining fiction.

When you buy a magazine, you buy it because you know that a few of the stories will be good. This is all right—but, probably there are other stories in that paper or magazine equally as good but whose titles are not so attractive as those by authors you already know. Also, there are probably many articles of interest, instructive and entertaining as well, which you "pass up," thinking they aren't interesting.

This is a mistake, because any article in any magazine must be up to the standard of everything publisned in that magazine—else it wouldn't be allowed in that magazine.

Therefore when reading a magazine, try reading everything in it. You will find those stories with less attractive titles, equally as interesting as the rest. You will therefore get twice as much out of that magazine, for the price you've paid or as much as if you buy two magazines.

Always try to select the best class of magazines and books. "Cheap" reading never pays. A dime novel is not as interesting as some other real good stories, which are equally thrilling.

Handle books, magazines, etc. carefully. Do not bend them in a dozen different ways. That ruins the binding and tears the paper so that it is soon spoiled, both for you and those who wish to read it.

Reasonable care and neatness with a book, as well as wisdom in your selection of proper reading material is a tribute of respect you pay to any good author who has passed his thoughts on to you.

That 9th. Law

A Scout is Thrifty:—That is, he is always ready to earn money honestly (which of course, does not mean to accept a tip for a good turn) and he does not spend it foolishly or needlessly. Instead, he should place it in the bank, for a time of need, or to help put himself through College, or to start himself in some business when older. Many young men are unable to start college or to take advantage of excellent business opportunities because they lack capital which they might have possessed had they but saved a little each year when they were boys. Therefore, boys, along with your other plans for Better Scouting in 1922, don't forget your promise to be thrifty. But do not carry out this promise for the sole purpose of becoming qualified for some of your tests. Acquire the "habit of saving" and put those savings to your credit in a Book account. Don't "hide" them away in your pocket or in a neat little box in the cupboard or dresser drawer. Deposit your savings in a real Bank from from which you will not be tempted to draw out when you suddenly get the idea that you need a new pair of skates when your old ones will do!

You all know the old belief of the value of a "nest egg?" Well try one in the form of a Savings Account and then watch carefully your "record of performance."

Why He Didn't Succeed

1.—He grumbled.
2.—He watched the clock.
3.—He was always behind hand.
4.—He had no "iron" in his blood.
5.—He had no faith in himself.
6.—He asked unnecessary questions.
7.—His excuse always was: "I forgot."
8.—He didn't put his heart into his work.
9.—He learned nothing from his mistakes.
10—He was content to be a "second rate" man.
11—He felt he was above his position.
12.—He only half did things.
13.—He chose bad companions.
14.—He never acted on his own judgment.

The Making Up of a Lawn

(Experimental Farm Note)

A good lawn is one of the most essentials in making a beautiful home. There is nothing that can take the place of a beautiful greensward about any house if it is to be attractive. Original plan of the home. Draw up a plan of the contour of the ground adjoining the proposed site. The area of this will depend upon the amount of land available. In the country this should be not less than four times the area of the house site. In excavating, remove all the rich soil seperately. The subsoil from the excavation is then removed for filling depressions and grading so that the surface water will always flow away from the house. When the house is completed, and the rubbish incident to building removed, the surface soil is brought back and used to make a seed bed for the lawn grasses.

The lawn should be as permanent as the house, and requires equal care in the making. The autumn is a good time to do the grading and filling. This should be done at intervals, allowing the heavy rains to settle the transported soil several times before the final grading, ploughing and thorough tillage of the spring. This will prevent depressions developing afterwards in your lawn and tennis court. Before seeding, a finer condition of tilth is required than for any farm crop. Keep at it until the soil is like a garden or about ready for seeding onions. If the land is not in good heart, a heavy coat of manure should be worked in during preparation, and when necessary, a heavy dressing of fertilizer will greately help to make the soil as rich as it should be for growing potatoes or roots.

The seeding should be very heavy. The best lawns are made by having a great many fine stalks of grass. The best grass for shade and open lawns is the Kentucky Blue Grass. It is sown at the rate of about 60 lbs. or 4 bushels per acre. It weighs 14 lbs to the bushel. The seed merchants sell reliable mixtures; these usually contain a large percentage of Kentucky Blue Grass and White Clover Timothy and red top when added to the mixture, are satisfactory grasses for making a permanent lawn. To secure a satisfactory seeding, take about one-half of the seed for the area and sow the area one way, carefully by hand, then take the other half and sow across the first seeding. By this means you would avoid any misses and secure an even stand.

To avoid having the lawn bare during the early summer, sow oats at the rate of from 4 or 5 bushels per acre before the last cultivatiou in preparation for seeding. This will form a dense greensward within three weeks, and though requiring frequent cutting with the lawn-mower, will not only make a beautiful lawn, but will serve as a nurse crop for the grasses nntil they are well established. Cover your lawn seed with a garden rake and roll from time to time after rain.

"Yes," he bragged. "I once invented a rubber pneumatic suit for men working at great heights."

"And was it successful?" asked an unsuspecting one.

"I should say it was," he replied. "D-'you know the first workman who fell off a building wearing one bounced so hard and long that we had to throw biscuits to him to keep him alive."

Adenoids

Adenoids is the name given to an enlargement of the lymphoid tissue that lines the back of the nose and mouth. The enlargement forms a kind of third tonsil and, though it frequently comes with the swelling of the real tonsils, may also come when the tonsils are healthy. Although it is a disease of child life, it often persists in adults,

Adenoids are not only troublesome but, since they block up the nose and the openings that lead from the throat to the ears, are also a menace to health. The child that suffers with them cannot breathe properly and may be unable to hear well. Mouth breathing, which he must resort to, brings an endless train of evils with it, among which are constant colds and rapidly deteriorating teeth—both evils that are induced by germs that easily find their way into a constantly open mouth. Moreover, mouth breathing gives an ugly nasal twang to the voice. A child with such handicaps as those is naturally slow of mind, inattentive and irritable. His dull facial expression—the open mouth and the pinched nostrils—shows clearly what is wrong, and mother, nurse and teacher shonld be guided by it. It is cruel to scold and punish a child who is struggling with incipient deafness, a permanently stopped-up nose, improperly aerated blood and other symptons of a bad case of adenoids.

It is easy to help him, especially if the case is discovered early. The treatment is surgical and is now well recognized as the only good way that it is performed without hesitation on the youngest children. The adenoids are removed, usually under an anaesthic, and relief is prompt. Sometimes even when the most skillful surgeon removes than they will return, but the operation can be repeated. After an operation much can be done for a child by training him to good habits of breathing and to a hygienic mode of life.
