Much Enthusiasm Marks Presbyterial Yesterday

Call is Made For 10 Per Cent Increase to Commemorate Coming 10th Anniversary of Union. — Three Sessions Held at Winchester.

The ninth annual meeting of the Dundas-Grenville Presbyterial of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the United church, Winchester, yesterday. Registration of delegates at the morning session showed 236. The meeting was opened with hymn 408 and the worship period was in charge of Mrs. H. Graham and Mrs. B. Newman. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. L. Helmer of Winchester, and the reply by Mrs. Rorke of Kemptville. Greetings were brought by the Branch president, Mrs. Murdock, after which Mrs. Jas. Smith, corresponding secretary, gave the report of the year's work for each auxiliary. Reports from the treasurer and supply department showed that the only increase in the work of the year was in supplies. Two very fine papers on "Launching of the Tenth Anniversary of Union" by (1) The Kingdom of God Movement, (2) A Review of Our Membership," were given by Mrs. G. E. Earle and Mrs. M. Foster respectively.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session was opened promptly at 2 o'clock with Mrs. Allison presiding. Mrs. R. Peterson and Mrs. F. F. Davidson, two of the vice-presidents, were in charge of the devotional service. Hymn 249 was sung followed by prayer and the reading of two passages of scripture exemplifying "the importance and power of prayer," which was the subject of an inspiring short talk.

Two papers which had been carried over from the morning session were given by Mrs. M. Foster and Mrs. R. H. Earle. The first was on "Our Literature and Periodicals" in connection with the launching of the 10th anniversary of Union. Mrs. Foster asked that a real effort be made to have a 10 per cent increase this year in the use of the Study Book and Missionary Monthly. Mrs. Earle stressed the need for increased zeal in our givings if the objective of a 10 per cent increase is to be realized in the Christian Stewardship department. Mrs. Carson, president of the Ottawa Presbyterial, brought greetings. Miss Russell, a missionary nurse from West China, in a short talk stressed the need of the missionaries on the front line of service, for the prayers of those at home. Greetings from the Glengarry Presbytery were read by the president, also a kindly message from Mrs. Hindman, a former president, now living in California.

A very beautiful memorial service was conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Johnston, with Mrs. McGuire reading the names of those members of the various auxiliaries who have been removed by death during the past year. A very appropriate solo by Mrs. W. N. Fulton of Chesterville followed the memorial service.

Mrs. W. L. Smythe, president of the Bay of Quinté branch, delivered an inspiring address based on the text "The Kingdom of God is Within You."

A duet by Mrs. Nutall and Mrs. Perrin of Prescott was followed by an address on "Temperance" by Mrs. C. C. Gilbert.

Greetings from sister societies were brought by Mrs. Turner for the Presbyterian W.M.S., by Mrs. Davies for the Anglican church, and Mrs. McKendry for the Baptist church, Mrs. Singleton for the Women's Institute, and Mrs. Johnson for the W.C.T.U Mrs. T. Houlehan of Chesterville replied to these greetings.

The Mission Band banner for the year was presented to the president of the Hulbert Mission Band.

Evening Session.

The evening session opened at 7.30 with a capacity audience. After devotional exercises, an anthem by the choir of the Winchester church was enjoyed, as were also several readings by Miss Myrtle Casselman and two numbers by a double quartette from Spencerville. The address of the evening was given by Mrs. Smythe of Pembroke and was overflowing with useful and inspiring information. Mrs. Smythe urged that a special effort be made to achieve a 10 per cent increase in membership for next year, stating that only one-quarter of the women connected with the United church are members of the W.M.S. There are 450,000 women in the church who are non-members. Last year there were 146,000 members and $650,000 was raised. A pageant by the Winchester Circle, "Crusade for Membership," and the Benediction closed the session.

Bride-to-be Showered With Gifts by Holy Trinity Guild

Miss Amy Fairbrass, R.N., Was Guest of-Honour at Charming Party on Tuesday Afternoon.

A very charming event was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. McGee, College street, Tuesday afternoon, when Miss Amy Fairbrass, R.N., was the guest-of-honour of the Guild of Holy Trinity church at a miscellaneous shower in honour of her approaching marriage.

The regular meeting was opened with prayer by Mrs. Archer and at the conclusion of the business part of the programme, a prettily decorated wagon loaded with gifts was drawn into the room by little Miss Connie Morris and Master Bruce Casselman who drew up their load in front of Miss Fairbrass. Mrs. H. H. Casselman assisted the bride-elect to open her presents for inspection and Miss Fairbrass thanked the ladies very kindly. Lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. McGee, assisted by Mrs. Archer and Miss Edna McGee.

Miss Fairbrass is a graduate of the Nursing School of the Cornwall General Hospital. Before leaving Chesterville to study for the nursing profession, she was a member of the choir and Sunday School of Holy Trinity and has at all times been in close connection with all affairs of her church.

Under the auspices of the Lutheran League at Dunbar a three-act comedy, "Putting on Airs" was well presented to a large and appreciative audience under the direction of Mrs. Bessie McMillan and Rev. Cronmiller.

The cast of characters included Mrs. Hubert Barkley, Mrs. Russell Froats, Mrs. Richard Fawcett, Miss Lee McMillan, Messrs. Wilfred McMillan, Edwin Barkley, Hubert Barkley, Carl McMillan, Richard Fawcett and Hubert Casselman.

Before the curtain and between the second and third acts vocal and instrumental music was presented by Mrs. Amelia Lambkin and Mr. Wilfred McMillan.

EVERYONE READS THE PAPERS.

Borden Cities Star.

The Bureau of Advertising, surveying the whole field of publicity media and reporting to the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, now meeting in New York, says:

"The final conclusion is that the advertiser who uses local newspapers alone is getting the best available coverage at the lowest cost."

There were plenty of figures to back up the paragraph above, but one does not need to consult figures to appreciate the soundness of the conclusion. Every magazine has some readers. Every billboard is seen by some persons. Every radio station has some listeners. But everybody reads the local newspaper.

Funeral of Late Martin L. Courtenay Held at Winchester on Monday.—Was Section Foreman Here.

On Saturday, the remains of the late Martin L. Courtenay were taken to Winchester, accompanied by his son, Frank, and his daughter, Annie, who are the only surviving members of the family. Many years ago, Mr. Courtenay was section foreman here, later he moved to New Hampshire and worked his way up to be station agent, which position he held until his recent illness came upon him. He was 77 years of age. Six years ago his wife died and he brought her remains to Winchester to the home of her sister, Mrs. W. S. Hughes, where his body was also taken and where his funeral was held at 1.30 p.m. on Monday, being conducted by the new United church pastor, Rev. W. S. Atchison, who spoke from the words "At evening time there shall be light."

Mrs. P. Durant also brought a message of comfort in a beautiful solo, the accompanist being Miss Annie Walker.

Interment took place in Williamsburg cemetery beside his wife. The bearers were Messrs. T. O. Keyes, Geo. E. Earle, J. H. Faith, T. A. Scott, H. L. Hughes and Ed Shaver.

California Visitors Return To Find Home in Ruins

Village of Maxville Recovering From Excitement of Bad Blaze Which Laid Whole Block in Ruins.

The village of Maxville is recovering from the excitement caused by Thursday night's fire, when almost a complete block of stores, dwellings and warehouses, situated on Main street, were destroyed. A number of appraisers representing the various insurance companies spent two days adjusting losses, carpenters and glaziers have been busy repairing damaged buildings on the west side of the street, where almost all glass in the buildings was broken by the heat, and the town has been invaded by contractors seeking the work of rebuilding.

The congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church worshipped as usual in the church, although the exterior was extensively damaged by fire, and the interior blackened by smoke. All the equipment owned by the Blue Jackets Hockey Club, of the Central Ottawa Valley League, was stored in the Smillie and McDiarmid building, where the fire originated, and was destroyed. The Misses Jean and Ruth Smillie, sisters of J. Walter Smillie of the Smillie and McDiarmid establishment, who with their aunt, Mrs. John A. Cameron, were returning from a visit to California, arrived Friday afternoon to find their home and its contents entirely destroyed.

At a late hour Saturday night, one of the solid brick walls of the store which had remained standing, was brought down by the high wind and gave an added fright to the already nervous neighbours.

Edouard Desjardins, Ottawa, assistant to the Ontario fire marshal, visited Maxville on Friday and viewed the scene of the blaze. He stated later his visit was merely a matter of routine and that there was no question concerning the origin of the fire.

TRANSFER.

MODERN transportation is one of the wonders of our age. The facility and speed with which people and things can be transferred from one place to another is truly remarkable. And, yet, the oldest means of transportation are still in daily use. Despite the motor car our legs are used to get us to most of the places we want to go.

As far as we know, the germs of disease continue to transfer themselves from the sick to the well by the same old way. Because people move around more readily, and travel great distances in a short space of time, the spread of disease germs is facilitated. Almost surely some of the travellers will carry the germs of disease in their bodies and will spread them to others in their travels.

The germs of tuberculosis have only a few means of escape from the body. When the disease is in the lungs (by far the most common site), the germs escape in the sputum, the secretion coughed up from the lungs. Some of the sputum will be swallowed, and the germs which it contains will pass out through the intestines.

The transfer of tuberculosis germs depends upon the transfer of sputum. At one time, it was thought, when the sputum was deposited on the ground or some other place that after it dried it was blown into the air as dust, which, when inhaled, carried with it the germs of tuberculosis into the body of the person who breathed the dust.

We no longer fear dried sputum as dust because we know that drying destroys most germs and if to the drying process is added sunlight, the destruction is complete. It is to the fresh and moist fine particles thrown out of the mouth in talking, coughing or sneezing that attention is directed.

These particles of saliva are thrown a distance of several feet, depending upon the violence with which they are projected. They will remain suspended in the air for some minutes. To them are attached the germs which were in the sputum as it was coughed up from the disease lung into the mouth. Anyone coming within range of these particles will likely inhale some of them. The lips will be covered with saliva and so it is dangerous to kiss the lips of a tuberculous person.

From what has been said, it is obvious that the mouth should be protected by a piece of gauze or handkerchief held in front when the person is coughing or sneezing, and that we should not come close to those who do not take such precautions because many germs are transferred in this way.

Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

"How interesting to meet you like this," said the young lady to the novelist. "I've just been reading one of your novels."

"The last one?" he inquired.

"I hope so," was the fervent reply.

An Italian and a Frenchman who had arranged to fight a duel met at the railway station en route for the appointed rendezvous.

The Italian asked for a return ticket, but the Frenchman took only a single.

"Ha, you fear you will not come back. I always take a return," said the Italian.

"I never do," retorted his adversary calmly. "I always take the return half from the man I kill."

NEWS AND INFORMATION FOR THE BUSY FARMER

Furnished by the Ontario Department of Agriculture

Beware of Weed Seeds in Manure

Weed seeds find their way to the manure pile through the digestive systems of animals and in bedding. When fresh manure is hauled out and spread on the land viable weed seeds may be spread with it. If weeds are present allow the manure to remain in the pile for at least one month before spreading and thereby avoid the danger of increasing weed infestation.

The Modern Farmer.

There is no question that the farmer's occupation is a skilled one. Many city dwellers have little idea of the amount of skill and detailed knowledge necessary for success in farming. This skill must take several forms. There is the manual dexterity and mechanical sense needed for operating both ordinary and modern farm machinery and the knowledge required in dealing with horses and stock. And above all there is the judgment which decides the right moment to carry out this or that operation on any particular area of soil, and the managerial capacitjy to arrange operations and materials efficiently. The degree of forethought and skill demanded is much higher than is expected of the ordinary recipient of the basic wage for unskilled labour.

Choosing Fertilizers.

This is the time of year when farmers are purchasing or considering the purchasing of fertilizers for the various farm crops.

Until quite recently, farmers who had not made a study of fertilizers usually depended upon the local fertilizer agent to advise them as to the particular analysis they should use, and unfortunately, the advice from this source was not always in the farmer's best interest. A more acceptable source of information is now at the service of farmers. for the Provincial Governments in Eastern Canada have in recent years set up fertilizer councils composed of leading authorities in agricultural chemistry, farmers who have a practical knowledge of the use of fertilizers, and representatives of fertilizer manufacturers. These councils publish recommendations as to the analyses most suitable for the various crops under the various soil conditions, and thus are performing a valuable service to farmers in assisting them to select fertilizers which promise the most economic returns.

The Farm Poultry Flock.

Poultry is at last definitely recognized as one of the essential departments of every up-to-date farm where a programme of mixed farming is carried on. Not only is it recognized as a necessary department of farm work but more and more farmers are coming to realize that for the capital invested and labour involved there are few if any departments that give as high returns. For the mixed farm, general purpose breeds such as the Plymouth Rocks, which are good both for laying and for the production of market poultry, are recommended. A flock of a hundred such birds carefully managed are returning to many a farmer a profit over cost of feed from $200 to $500 a year, which is something not to be disdained by even the most successful farmers.

Jam Marketing Scheme.

The Canada Jam Marketing Scheme which primarily affects the provinces of British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec, has been approved by Hon. Robert Weir, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, and the Governor-in-Council upon the recommendation of the Dominion Marketing Board.

The Scheme has the support of the manufacturers representing at least 90 per cent of the volume of jams, jellies and marmalades produced in Canada. No opposition has been advanced by any fruit growers.

Under the Scheme it is anticipated that the demoralized conditions which have prevailed in the marketing of jams, jellies and marmalades during the past several years will be corrected. These conditions which have existed have reacted to the disadvantage of jam manufacturers, fruitgrowers and consumers. It is expected that under the new regulations the quality of the jam which will be offered for sale will be improved.

The Local Board is composed of fourteen members, namely, nine manufacturers, three growers, one consumer representative, appointed by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and a Chairman who has no financial interest in the jam business.

Horticultural Notes.

(By John F. Clark.)

Garden roses should not be set out if soil is cold and muddy. Pruning is in order, cutting all dead wood from climbers. Hybrid Teas and Hybrid Perpetuals when pruned low will give large exhibition blooms. Well rotted manure may be lightly cultivated into the soil about rose bushes.

The burning of all rubbish cleaned out of the garden, dead weeds, old foliage from perennials, rose and fruit tree prunings is highly advisable to assist in control of garden pests and diseases.

All plants wintered in cold-frames, pansis, roses, bulbs, perennials and rock plants should be uncovered. Remove protection on a cloudy day.

Plant Tuberous Begonias in a box of soil lightened with leaf mould and sand The side of tuber showing irregular cavity is the top. Plant just barely below the surface. Shade boxes from strong light.

It will be beneficial to beds of ferns and wild flowers to leave most of the rotting foliage of the past season on the ground to serve as a natural mulch.

Seasonable Garden Hints.

(By John F. Clark.)

In dividing perennial phlox, discard the old centre. To control mildew attacking this plant, dust with sulphur when foliage is wet.

Lilium Henryi, Regale, Auratum and speciosums may be planted safely in spring. Give good drainage and surround bulbs with sand. Do not permit them to come into contact with manure.

A light dressing of hydrated lime may be sprinkled over the Irises. No other fertilizer is necessary.

Air coldframes and hot beds on warm sunny days to prevent moisture from collecting and causing dampingoff.

Shrubs and hedges will show appreciation of a good mulch of rotted manure, left on all year.

Soil for perennials should be prepared deeply and thoroughly with well-rotted manure incorporated at time of digging. Never crowd the plants. Arrange tall material at the back, medium tall in the centre and low perennials and annuals in front.

Soil in seed flats should be of a light nature. A pourous soil of pulverized leaf mould and sand is advised. Sift the soil and fill to within half an inch of the top. Fine seed should be sprinkled on surface and gently firmed in, while large seed may be lightly covered.

STEPHEN A. HABOUSH.

Native Galilean Shepherd, coming next Sunday morning to speak at Trinity United Church. On the following Wednesday night he and party will give the great Travelogue.

Mr. Haboush is a Galilean by birth. He has looked upon the bright skies, the green hills, the olive groves, as they were two thousand years ago when the tremendous story of the four gospels was happening. He was born to the mysticism and the wonders of the East. It is his heritage. He brings a message straight from the heart of the ancient and changeless Holy Land. A story that every North American and every Christian is inspired with.

Mr. Haboush's experiences as a shepherd in Galilee enables him in a peculiar and effective manner to explain and apply both the surface and deeper meanings of the shepherd literature of the Holy Book. He is the author of that inspirational story "My Shepherd Life in Galilee."

Under the auspices of both the church and the Sunday School of Trinity church, this Galilean and his party with Madam Haboush are coming to Chesterville for the purpose of presenting the great Musical Travelogue of the wonders of Jerusalem and Galilee.

Mr Haboush will speak Sunday, May 5th, at 11 a.m. at Trinity United church and will tell of his experiences as a shepherd in ancient Galilee.

Next Wednesday night, May 8th, at 8 p.m., Mr. Haboush, assisted by Madam Haboush, will play the Shepherd flutes, give the shepherd's call to his sheep that makes them follow him wherever he leads them. He shows you the ancient cities, the covered streets as they were and as they are to-day. Solomon's quarry and stables, the models of the Temples from the time of Solomon to the present, the Temple area, the Mosque of Omar, and gives the Mohammedan call to prayer, shows the Wailing Wall and for two full hours gives you an intimate tour of the Holy Lands in picture and a story all synchronized with music. Both Mr. and Mrs. Haboush appear in beautiful Oriental costumes —bring to you the atmosphere of Palestine and Galilee as only a native can do.

Mr. Haboush speaks English fluently and wherever he has appeared, whether before great North American churches, conferences, assemblies, universities, colleges, schools, or London audiences or on the platform in the ancient city of Damascus, he has interpreted the scriptures in the light of the places and people.

The new maid was no "find" as far as intelligence was concerned. Her mistress was finding the task of training her somewhat arduous. At breakfast she showed her an egg-timing glass.

"This runs for three and a half minutes, Bridget," she said. "You can boil the master's eggs with it."

Five minutes later the maid came into the diningroom.

"Well?" asked her mistress.

"The eggs is done, madam," she replied, "but I have me doubts about the glass, I think it's done for."

CHIEF SCOUT AND CHIEF GUIDE IN CANADA

Special Programme, "Christ, Our Hope," Was Used With Inspiring Readings and Prayers.

The Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church held their Easter service on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Archie Black. A special programme, entitled "Christ, Our Hope," was used with the president in charge and was very interesting and helpful to those privileged to be present.

The service opened with prayer in unison and a scripture reading by the president, "Christ, Our Atonement," with a proper bearing on the same subject given by Mrs. F. D. Douglas. A hymn followed, scripture reading in unison, and a beautiful Easter prayer. "The Power of His Resurrection" was read by the president followed by a poem "There is no Death," read by Mrs. Woods. Mrs. Bailey and Miss Rae led in prayer for the Eastertide. The offering was received by the treasurer, Mrs. Bailey with the Doxogy used as the Dedicatory prayer. A solo. "Let Me Die a Christian," was feelingly sung by Mrs. Jas. Campbell. The roll call was answered by members each giving one of Christ's miracles and where found. A short address "The First Day of the Week," was given by Miss Jamieson. "O Day of Rest and Gladness" was sung and a triumphant Easter prayer was joined in unison.

A short time was spent on business and preparations talked of for the 50th anniversary of Brockville Presbyterial to be held at Prescott May 15th and 16th. A wonderful programme is being prepared with special speakers and returned missionaries present.

The service was closed with the Apostle's Creed in unison. The hostess served lunch assisted by her daughter. Miss Lila Weegar.

Mrs Douglas and Mrs. C. McIntosh moved a vote of thanks for their hostess' hospitality. Mrs. Woods extended an invitation to the society to meet at her home, which was gratefully accepted.

Former Resident Died at Hotel Dieu, Cornwall

An invalid for eight years, though seriously ill for only two days, Miss Mary McDonald died at Hotel Dieu Hospital, Cornwall at seven o'clock on Saturday evening, April 13th. During the years she was an invalid, Miss McDonald was a most patient sufferer and a source of inspiration and edification to her nurses, displaying a spirit of resignation that was beautiful to behold and the admiration of all who came in contact with her.

Miss McDonald was born in Finch township 66 years ago, a daughter of Michael McDonald. She resided on the old homestead for about 40 years when she and her mother moved to Chesterville, where they made their home until eight years ago, when they went to Cornwall. Her mother died six years ago, since which time she resided with her sister, Rev. Sister St. George, at Hotel Dieu Hospital.

In her earlier life, Miss McDonald was actively identified with St. Bernard's church, Finch, and was well known in Finch and Chesterville.

Left to mourn her death are four brothers and a sister: William McDonald of St. Paul, Minn.; Joseph McDonald of Butte, Mont.; Edward McDonald of Ottawa; Thomas McDonald on the homestead in Finch township, and Rev. Sister St. George of the Hotel Dieu Hospital, Cornwall.

The funeral service was held in the Chapel at Hotel Dieu Hospital on Monday morning, April 15, the celebrant of the Requiem High Mass being Rev. J. M. Foley, pastor of St. Columban's church. The Sisters' Choir sung the Mass. The body was afterwards taken to Finch and burial was made in St. Bernard's church cemetery.

Among relatives present at the Mass were: Edward McDonald, Ottawa; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McDonald, Thomas Foley, Charles McMahon, Leonard Foley, James McMahon, Miss Rose McMahon, all of Finch; Dr. Gormley of Crysler.

Many spiritual and floral offerings were placed on and about the casket by sorrowing relatives and friends.

YOUR PROFITS LIE IN THE CHICKS YOU RAISE

EVERY CHICK you buy costs you money. Every time a chick dies the money you paid for it is lost for good. How many chicks do you count on raising out of every 100— 85? 90? 95?

We don't know the success all of our customers are having this year, but many of the reports so far show that the losses in Bray flocks are very small—and that the chicks are showing excellent growth as well.

Wilfred Kehoe, Lloydtown, has lost only eleven out of 405 Bray White Rocks—he's raising better than 97 out of every 100. At five weeks old, many of his chicks weigh 1¼ lbs.

Mrs. H. Stobbart, Weston, has raised 502 Bray Barred Rocks out of 507—better than 99 chicks out of every 100!

Burt Riddell, King, lost only 3 out of 307 Bray Barred Rocks—he's raised better than 99 chicks out of every 100 too—and at 13½ weeks he has pullets weighing over 3½ lbs.

Chicks that live and grow like these are bound to make you money. Buy chicks that have the vigour and stamina to live through the first few weeks of brooding and grow into big, profit-making birds. Buy Bray chicks.

Come in and talk chicks with us. Get a copy of our Free chick booklet and consider it at home. Prices are particularly attractive for May and June delivery. You can save $1.00 per hundred by placing your order with a 10 per cent deposit 30 days in advance.

"I have received official communication from the Secretary of State of Canada and from the Provincial Secretary of Ontario requesting that at Divine Service on Sunday, May 5th, 1935, 'appropriate expression of gratitude to Almighty God be given for the manifold bounties and great mercies which we have enjoyed during the twenty-five years of His Majesty's reign.' I have promised loyal cooperation on the part of the Church of England in this Diocese.

"On Sunday morning, May 5th, our Thanksgiving Service should be the Holy Eucharist with Collect, Epistle and Gospel from the Accession Service.

"At other services that day we shall have available the special service prepared for use at St. Paul's Cathedral, London, on May 6th. Monday, May 6th, has been proclaimed a holiday. We are asked to honour it in any way we can. Where our churches possess flags they should be used.

"I trust that in as many places as possible, time will be made for a religious service that morning, for the 6th of May is the day of our King's Silver Jubilee and it is on that day that the great Thanksgiving service in England will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, London. It is a privilege to join with the whole Empire in Thanksgivings on this great occasion."

On Monday, May 6th, the service of Thanksgiving prepared for use in St. Paul's Cathedral will be observed in Holy Trinity Church at 10 a.m.

PENDING ONTARIO SCHOOL CHANGES.

TWO PARAGRAPHS in the report of the proceedings at the annual convention of the Ontario Education Association immediately arrest attention. In the first place, the Hon. Duncan McArthur, Deputy Minister of Education, informed the delegates that there is a possibility that French will be dropped as a compulsory subject for high school pupils who do not intend to enter the university. In the second place, whilst refusing to put the association on record by taking a vote, some of the separate school trustees expressed disapproval of entire abolition of school pupils' promotion by examination. Neverthless, Inspector Walsh, of London, declared that such examinations, regarded at present as "a necessary evil," will fade out of the school picture by gradual process.

Regarding the teaching of French, it is surprising at this date to learn that the idea of eliminating the subject from the curriculum of the high schools should be given even the shadow of official countenance. In recent years laudable endeavours have been made to spread wider a knowledge of the French language in Ontario. Facilities for acquiring that knowledge have been enlarged in some of the public schools and teachers of French have spent part of their summer vacation every year in the province of Quebec because of the abounding opportunities they find there to perfect their knowledge of the language by intimate study and conversation with French-speaking people.

The experience has been invaluable not merely as a means to greater teaching efficiency but also because those annual intellectual retreats conduce to a better understanding and therefore to constantly improving relations between the two races. But if French is dropped as a compulsory subject in the Ontario high schools, the pupils will be robbed of what should be regarded as an indispensable part of their educational equipment, and there will, of course, be less incentive to voluntary effort to attain bilingual efficiency. And in a country where the two languages are official, bilingual effieciency is essential to men and women who aspire to play an important part in the national life.

A feeling that an adequate knowledge of French cannot be acquired by the average pupil who may not take a course beyond the high school is no valid reason why the teaching of French should be abandoned. Rather, it is an argument that the French language should be better taught in the Ontario schools. The Hepburn Government went into office pledged to "sweep up" nearly everything. If it is seriously proposed, as part of the new administration's policy, to "sweep out" French from the schools, such an initiative will be a reflection on Mr. Hepburn's prescience and a sad disappointment to those people who have expected some real constructive work from the Prime Minister of the province.

Regarding school examinations, their merits and demerits are a perennial source of controversy. Hitherto, the debate has been conducted in a more or less vicious circle. It may be said at once for the opponents of the prevailing system that a humanitarian motive is to be read into their reiterated proposals for abolishing examinations as a test of the pupils' competency to go into a higher class. They consider there is in the system an element of danger to the health, physical and moral, of youth. From any s andpoint, school examinations for promotion are formidable things, even to students who are at their best for the test. It will be noted that one of the inspectors of the Department of Education described them as necessary evils. Well, for every evil there is a remedy. In the instance, the evil might be met at the same time, by dispensing with examiners who are strangers to the pupils and leaving the question of class promotions to the discretion of the teachers, who are qualified and may be depended upon to honestly test their own work in the classes. Probably a reform on these lines is contemplated, since it is declared the official purpose is that the present system shall gradually "fade out of the school picture."

The current process is acknowledged to be an "evil" largely because it permits examinations to be designed, not solely as a touchstone of the pupils' attainments but in many respects as a test of their ability to meet the unexpected. Examinaions conducted by teachers would seem to afford a better practical means for fairly judging the general intellectual efficiency of boys and girls attending the public schools.

SNIPPING RED TAPE.

WITH AN EYE to the cash revenue from motor tourists, Ottawa has made a few wise adjustments or regulations at the border. The bond of the guarantee company previously required at the frontier by tourists who proposed to stay for a period of ninety days and up to six months, will no longer be necessary. The same relaxation of the rule is extended to those who enter for sixty days and later decide to remain longer. Neither bond nor deposit will be necessary. A change, too, has been made in the rule about issuance of permit to temporary visitors. The twenty-four hour period has been extended to forty-eight hours to include week ends and public holidays.

POPULAR DIETING.

Galen Gough, a 259-pound citizen of Los Angeles who is so strong he can play with a barbell attached to a couple of 200-pound beer kegs, has entered upon the second half of a 32-day reducing diet, in which he consumes nothing but beer. Already he has drunk 192 bottles and lost 25 pounds in weight. At that rate, he should be a mere 225-pounder at the finish. This seems to be about the happiest recipe for reducing that has yet been tried.

Brown was at a talkie. He was sitting behind two women whose continuous chatter finally became more than he could bear.

Leaning forward, he tapped one of them on the shoulder.

"Pardon me, madam," he said, "but I can't hear."

"You're not supposed to—this is a private conversation," was the cutting retort.

An affable English tourist came upon an ancient grave-digger in a Scottish churchyard, and, anxious to be sociable, remarked: "I suppose things are very quiet here?" "Not so quiet as them there," was the discouraging answer.

Unabashed, the Englishman tried another. "Yes, indeed," he said, "but I suppose people do not die often here?" "Only once, sir," replied the grave-digger.

"No doubt," rejoined the other. "I suppose you have spent all your life here?"

"Not yet, sir."

And that was as far as the Englishman got.

NOVELTIES IN THE NEWS

NOT SO LONG since only newspapers recognized the value of novelty. It has taken the depression to make the business man enlist it as his main money-maker. Thus, on the basis of something bizarre in entertainment a recently opened restaurant in New York is meeting with phenomenal success. It is staging its "show" in the ceiling instead of on the floor!

Nightly, beginning at nine o'clock, a daring young girl, on a series of flying trapezes does her stunts fifty-four feet above the heads of the fascinated patrons.

And the reader's anxious enquiry is answered even before it is asked. There is a strong net to catch the flying figure should she miss her grasp. Besides, her turns are done principally over a cleared space high above the centre of the huge room. The restaurant, by the way, has taken its name from this vaudeville attraction. The building was formerly a millionaire's stable, hence its height, and the bare brick walls are something of a novelty after so much modernistic art elsewhere.

Another famous restaurant which has succeeded well enough to form a chain attracts the customers who like to see their dinner cook over enormous open fireplaces. The idea of gathering before a roaring hearth while the chicken is done to a turn is not only chummy, but a welcome change from the secrecy of hotel kitchens.

And there's the beauty parlour that is said to be serving cocktails to its customers while they submit to shampoos and permanents. Of course, no compulsion is practiced on those who don't indulge. Ginger ale is on hand for the teetotallers!"

New York is treated to the sight of a doll's house that is famous on two important counts: (1) It belongs to the actress, Colleen Moore, (2) It is valued at $435,000.

Manhattan Island is really being given a preview of this remarkable architectural feature, which is scheduled to tour the world From the small fee charged to view it, Miss Moore hopes to build up a fund for the support of various crippled children's homes.

The doll's house is really a castle which Colleen has spent more than nine years in furnishing. It is 14 feet high, stands 9 feet square on its base and is set on a precipice. A study in costliness and perfection, it boasts such possessions as a gold pipe organ, pictures by celebrated artists the rarest of woods and bronzes on a miniature scale, and diamond-studded electric light bulbs no bigger than wheat grains. It is presided over by a fairy princess who dances, sings, and curtsies.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

Conducted By
MISS HELEN LACEY, B. H. Sc.

LET THEM EAT CAKE.

WITH summer coming on, most of us will be serving simpler desserts such as blanc manges, gelatine sponges and charlottes with plenty of ice cream. With such desserts, cake of some kind is almost a necessity.

EXPRESS CAKE.

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons mixed spice
½ cup chopped nut meats
1-3 cup melted shortening
2 eggs
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup sugar
¼ cup citron or orange peel
½ cup seedless raisins
¾ cup sour milk
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in 1 tablespoon hot water

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and spices. Add raisins, nuts and orange or citron peel and mix well. Add melted shortening, sour milk and eggs and beat well for two minutes. Beat the soda mixture into the cake last of all. Pour into two greased layer cake tins. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until risen to full height (this batter does not raise much), increase heat to 400 degrees F. until cake is set and nicely browned. Cake requires about ½ hour to bake.

CRUMB CAKE.

2½ cups flour
½ cup soft butter
2 cups brown sugar

Mix three above ingredients together thoroughly and take out ¾ of a cup of the mixture for the top. To the remainder add:

¾ cup sour milk
1 egg
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Beat until smooth. Pour into cake tin and sprinkle crumb mixture over the top. Bake in a moderate oven 40 minutes.

COFFEE CAKE MADE WITH YEAST

1 cup milk
4 tablespoons butter
¼ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1-3 yeast cake
¼ cup lukewarm water
½ cup raisins
2¾ cups flour

Scald the milk; add butter, sugar and salt; cool to lukewarm; add yeast dissolved in the ¼ cup lukewarm milk and flour to make a stiff batter. Let rise over night. In the morning add beaten egg and raisins. More flour may be needed to make mixture into a stiff batter. Spread in a greased baking pan; cover and let rise. When light, brush over with beaten egg and spread with the following:

1½ tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoon flour

Melt the butter, add sugar and cinnamon and mix thoroughly. Add flour.

Bake in a moderate oven 45 to 60 minutes.

BANANA CAKE.

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
2-3 cup butter
3 tablespoons sour milk
1 1-3 cup flour
1 cup banana pulp
1 teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the butter, blend in sugar, add egg yolks. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with sour milk. Add banana pulp and lastly stiffly beaten egg whites and vanilla. Bake in a moderate oven.

GOLDEN GATE CAKE.

¼ cup butter
¾ cup sugar
2 egg yolks
4 tablespoons orange marmalade
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
2 tablespoons finely chopped candied orange peel
½ cup chopped nuts
1-3 cup water
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 egg whites

Cream butter and sugar together, add egg yolks, marmalade, peel, grated rind and nuts. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Add liquid and dry ingredients alternately. Fold in well-beaten egg whites. Bake in a well-greased loaf tin. This cake is best when fresh and is an excellent one to serve for an afternoon tea.

BUTTER CREAM ICING.

4 tablespoons butter
3 cups icing sugar
1 egg white
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream the butter, add sugar slowly and mix well. Add unbeaten egg white. Cream again, then add salt and vanilla. Beat all together until very light and fluffy.

Variations:

1 Beat in a little heavy cream and chopped nuts.

2. To produce a mocha icing, omit vanilla and add 1 tablespoon strong coffee and 1 teaspoon cocoa

3. Maple icing is made by boiling a little maple sugar, allow to cool and add to butter cream.

4. Orange icing is made by adding grated rind of orange and lemon and a little orange pulp.

Questions should be addressed to Miss Helen Lacey, Chesterville Record.

THE TAMING OF THE SHAW

He swore by all the ducks in the pond
And all the leaves in the tree,
That he could do more work in a day
Than his wife could do in three.

"NO SIR!" said Cadmon Shaw emphatically. "We can't afford any labour-saving devices. The first Mrs Shaw never had 'em, and there wasn't a better housekeeper in Teahi county.'

The second Mrs. Shaw—this was the fourth honeymoon breakfast of the newly-wedded pair—looked at her lord mildly over the coffee cups. Cadmon took a second helping of corn fritters and hoped that his wife was not going to prove unreasonable. Her cooking was good. But he reflected with some uneasiness that the first Mrs. Shaw would never have broached the subject of power machinery or water in the kitchen.

Cadmon knew well the neighbours' opinion on that matter; they had not been slow to declare that too much hard work had sent the first Mrs. Shaw to her grave.

"Salina was too meek," they said. "Oh, I guess he never beat her, but it was work, work, work, work and pinch and save, and never go anywhere or have decent clothes and no company for fear they'd eat extra!"

The second Mrs. Shaw was not a Teahi woman. Cadmon had discovered that the spinsters and widows of Teahi County preferred single blessedness to Shaw penuriousness. It was still his own secret that this was the second Mrs. Shaw's third matrimonial venture.

"That tractor machine you've got," said Mrs. Shaw, appearing to change the subject, "it works all right?"

Cadmon had bought it instead of a wedding present for his wife. He launched into praise of the new machine. He told her what speed he could make with it, and how much better ploughing he could do. Mrs. Shaw was an excellent listener; she drew him on. Cadmon cleared his plate and mopped up the gravy with a biscuit.

"I suppose"—Mrs. Shaw spoke with a tone of mild curiosity—"your father just had a walking ploough. Wouldn't he have been glad to have such a labour-saving thing? He did just have a walking plough, didn't he?"

Cadmon looked sharply at his wife, but she was passing him the plate of cookies and her face showed no guile.

During the forenoon Mrs. Shaw washed the dishes, carried them into the buttery, which was up two steps from the kitchen, churned, using an old stone churn, carried the butter across the yard and down into the spring house, hunted eggs, dug potatoes, washed them, carried two pails of rain water and three pails of well water across the yard, pared the potatoes, split some kindling and baked a cake.

Late in the afternoon she changed her gingham apron for a white one, and went out across the fields to the big meadow where the new tractor was turning up a wide swath of turf. She climbed up behind Cadmon on the running board and travelled around the field, watching him steer, and asking him intelligent questions about the mechanism.

On her way back to the house she stopped in the implement shed and took careful note of the hay loader, the seeder and the cultivators, which Cadmon considered as a necessary part of his equipment.

"I'd like to learn to run the tractor," she said at supper, as Cadmon was finishing a very good meal. "It looks to me as if it would be a lot easier than housekeeping in this house."

And then Cadmon said it.

"Shucks!" he exclaimed somewhat testily. "Housework ain't no job atall. It's just fiddling. If I had no more to do than a woman in the house, I'd think I was having a vacation. I bet"—he went on, warming to his subject—"that I could get more housework done in a day than any woman I ever knew could do in three."

Mrs. Shaw laughed good-naturedly, and passed him the pie. "If you can beat any woman in this neighbourhood, I'll never say any more about labour-saving devices You show me how to run the tractor and then we can trade work and see."

"Shucks!" said Cadmon, and thought that he would do no such thing.

The next afternoon Mrs. Shaw went out early, and again rode behind her lord on the running board of the tractor, and asked more questions about the machine's inner works.

"Now to-day let me try," she begged a few days later.

Cadmon disliked to do it; he had an uneasy feeling that the situation was getting beyond his control. But she was a comely woman and a very new wife—and she had brought out with her a large slice of very good ginger cake. So, although he had no mind to exchange work with her, or to be wheedled into wasting money on power washers or other "falderals," he let her run the tractor for a few minutes.

And then the hired man quit. It was the day after Mrs. Shaw had driven across country to the home of Mr. Shaw's sister to return that lady's first call; but Mr. Shaw did not connect the two incidents.

"How lucky I know how to drive the tractor!" said Mrs. Shaw. "I can draw the harrows with it just as well as not. And you can drive the horses to the seeder as the man did. I'd just as soon as not. It's most like running an automobile.

"You see, it would be cheaper to get a woman to do the cooking and housework than to get another hired man," she went on. "Your sister was saying that she knew a woman that would like a spell of work. Why not hire her and let me help outdoors? I'd just as soon as not."

That argument seemed sound to Cadmon—especially since the season was getting late for seeding the wheat. And Mrs Shaw had made no mention of exchanging work with him. So, after a futile attempt to get a new man by way of a neighbour's telephone,—he had always considered a telephone as an expensive and unnecessary luxury,—Cadmon allowed his wife to set out bright and early the next morning in quest of a housemaid; but Cadmon made it very plain to Mrs Shaw that the arrangement was only temporary, and that "a hired girl would waste more than she would earn."

The first dinner of the new maid's serving was also her last in the house of Shaw. Mrs. Shaw had for some reason chosen to take her luncheon with her, so that she did not return from the lower meadow for dinner. The meal was late and of poor quality. The biscuits were burned, the potatoes were soggy, the coffee was weak.

Cadmon had discovered that the work that he had always relegated to the hired man was far warmer and harder than running a tractor; so he spent a part of the afternoon in taking the maid back to her former abode and in searching the neighbourhood for a suitable man.

He could find none, and at last had to be content with bringing home the daughter of a neighbour. But she got only one meal. gave Mr. Shaw her opinion of his kitchen, and departed—after a little private conversation with Mrs. Shaw.

And then Mrs. Shaw made her proposal. Smilingly, and in perfect good nature as usual, she said:

"I can stand it to run the tractor all right. It doesn't tire me nearly so much as you'd think; this will be a good time for you to see whether you can do as much as any three women you know. That way, of course, you can run the seeder some, too."

In an unfortunate moment Cadmon agreed.

The next morning Mrs. Shaw got the breakfast, suggested what her husband should get for dinner, and then, putting some luncheon into a basket, cheerfully departed for the lower meadow.

Cadmon's plan was to set the dishes on the back of the table, to put the food in the cellar, and to do a man's size job until half past eleven; he intended to get dinner in half an hour and to wash the breakfast dishes while the meal was cooking.

But it took him longer to pare the potatoes than he had anticipated, and he began to wish that he liked to eat them in their jackets. He also remembered the protests that he had made when the first Mrs. Shaw had occasionally served them unpared.

Then he had to prime the hard-water pump, and before he thought to get more he had used all that was in the house. Since the days of the first pioneer Shaws the rain water had been drawn from the cistern with a pail and a rope. There was a pole for sinking the bucket, but a few minutes before Cadmon discovered its usefulness he had cut it up for kindling. He made two trips to the cistern to get the water with which to prime the well. Before he had split the kindling he had spent five minutes hunting for an axe. The hatchet that both Mrs. Shaws had managed to do with was too dull for Cadmon.

The little boy from across the creek presently came over to tell Cadmon that it was churning day.

"Mrs. Shaw lets me ride with her," he said. "But she remembered that the cream is ripe, and she was afraid you might forget. I guess something's burning," he added helpfully.

It was the potatoes.

After a meal of half a pie and some cold meat, Cadmon hauled the old churn out of its corner. The butter was in no hurry about "coming," and Cadmon found just how heavy the old dasher was. He carried more water across the yard, stumbled up the buttery stairs and broke a butter jar, stumbled down the spring-house stairs and spilled a quart of good cream worth thirty-five cents, chased the calves out of the garden, dug more potatoes, split more kindling, and wondered what to have for supper.

Then he noticed that the kitchen floor was in a terrible condition. Al thought he had never been overcautious about tracking in mud, Cadmon was a cleanly soul. Besides he felt that if Mrs. Shaw should see that floor it would proclaim his defeat. With the best broom, an old shirt, and a liberal amount of soap, he scrubbed the floor vigourously, and in so doing he learned why Mrs. Shaw had sighed for a new floor.

The little boy from across the creek looked into the kitchen twice during the afternoon.

"Golly!" he said. "You'll get splinters."

Cadmon already had got them.

"Ma used to, on our floor, awful," the boy added sympathetically; "but now she don't. We got hardwood floors."

On the second trip he said:

"The pigs are in your garden! I guess Mrs. Shaw didn't fix the fence very good. We tried one day, when we'd chased the pigs out four times, but we didn't have enough wire."

Cadmon dropped his work in the kitchen and went out to repair the garden fence.

"Did Mrs. Shaw tell you to come up here and tell me these things?" he asked the boy.

"Nope, she didn't; I remembered. She just wondered what you was going to have for supper."

Cadmon chased a hen half a mile or so. beheaded her and de-feathered her. Then he had to make another trip to the well to get water for scalding the hen.

While he was debating the best method of dismembering the creature Stephen Blumbley, from across the road, looked in at the door Stephen augmented the earnings from his small farm with the agency for Dolliver's labour-saving devices.

"Did you send for me?" he inquired.

Cadmon replied in the negative.

"I called on your wife a while ago," Mr. Blumbley began diffidently "about Dolliver's washing machine and the power churn. I think she'd like them, all right. She seemed to think she would. I'm selling them everywhere. You can attach them to your gas engine, you know, and there's some that even use the tractor. Mrs. Shaw said she'd speak to you. I wonder if she ever did?"

"Yes, she did," replied Cadmon and looked out toward the lower meadow. The tractor was down at the end of the field, standing still. And hurrying toward it across the field was Mrs Shaw; she was coming from the direction of the Blumbley home.

While Cadmon looked she climbed up to the high seat, and the machine with its fantail of harrows began to move sedately along. Cadmon noticed that it would be her last round of the field She would be coming in within half an hour!

"Is Mrs. Blumbley at home?" he asked eagerly.

"Why, yes—but—" Blumbley began in much bewilderment.

"If you get her over here to fix this hen, and get on the stove so it'll taste right, and don't go blabbing to the whole neighbourhood, I'll buy every blamed labour saver you've got in the catalogue. Are there plumbing things like sinks, and faucets for hot and cold water—and hardwood floors—in it?"

Mr. Blumbley had to admit that there were not.

"Well, we'll get 'em," said Cadmon savagely, "every last one of 'em. Only you see that you don't go blabbing until it's done."

"I'm no blabber," said Blumbley. "But that reminds me. Your old hired man called up on our telephone. He wanted I should tell Mrs. Shaw that he don't like the cooking at that place she got him, and he don't want to stay a week like she said; he wants to come right back."

Cadmon stared at his neighbour for a long minute. Then he gave a prolonged whistle.

"Shucks!" he said. with an involuntary chuckle. "That's pretty cute."

And he swore by all the leaves in the tree,
And all the pigs in the pen,
That his wife could do more work in a day
Than he could do in ten.

THE BOY SCOUT TRAIL

Berton Braley.

This is the Trail that the Scout shall follow
Over the hill and down in the hollow,
The trail that leads you to find the beauty
In loyal service and simple duty;
The trail that takes you, through shade and sun,
To wildwoods' knowledge and outdoor fun,
By hidden covert and secret stream
Where feathers glimmer and bright scales gleam!

This is the Trail the Scout shall take
By cool green forest and sparkling lake
A trail that calls with the voice of joy
To the heart and soul of a healthy boy.
A kindly trail through the mossy glade
Where wild things come to you, unafraid,
And a Scout grows capable, wise and brown;
At Home wherever you set him down!

This is the Trail that the Scout shall know
Where knightly qualities thrive and grow
The trail of honour and truth and worth
And the strength that springs from the good brown earth,
The trail that the Scouts, in their seeking, blaze
Through the deepest angle, the deepest maze,
Till out of Boyhood the Scout comes straight
To Manhood's splendid and high estate!

WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

FRIENDLINESS

(Scout Law No. 4)

A Scout is a Friend to All, and a Brother to Every Other Scout, no matter to what Social Class the other Belongs. Thus, if a Scout meets another Scout, even though a stranger to him, he must speak to him and help him in any way that he can, either to carry out the duty he is then doing, or by giving him food, or, as far as possible, anything that he may be in want of.

A Scout must never be a Snob.

SCOUTS WILL LIGHT BEACONS FROM ATLANTIC TO PACIFIC

Following announcement from Dominion Headquarters that the Scouts of Canada will celebrate the King's Silver Jubilee on the evening of May 6th, by lighting a chain of beacons from the Atlantic to the Pacific, Scout troops and district organizations are discussing and reporting plans for this display of loyalty. Wherever possible the lighting of the beacons will be preceded by a royal salute of 21 rockets. In the Old Country a similar chain of beacons will extend from John o' Groats to Land's End.

CANADIAN SCOUTS TO U. S. JAMBOREE.

Canada will be represented at the 25th Birthday Jamboree of the Boy Scouts of America, at Washington, August 21st-30th, by at least one composite Scout troop. The boys will go direct from their various provinces. The expected 30,000 Scouts will be reviewed by President Roosevelt.

The state legislature of Nevada has passed a bill raising the marriage license fee from $2 to $3. The extra $1 is to go into the state's Boy Scout fund.

MORE INTERNATIONAL SCOUT GATHERINGS.

The Boy Scouts are never allowed to forget that they are an international brotherhood. With the great Australian Jamboree "auld-lang-syned" into history, they are now talking of Jamborees this summer in the United States, Denmark and Poland, and a World Rover Moot in Sweden.

100 OLD BOWLERS, PLEASE!

Old toys, old clothes, old shoes, old furniture are frequently called for by Boy Scouts in their welfare work. It remained for Oxford Scouts to spring a new one. They were asked to be Roman soldiers in a pageant. Having the Scout reputation for resourcefulness, they were requested to provide their own Roman helmets. The answer: 100 old bowler hats, minus rims; plus 1 gal. aluminum.

A REDSKIN-PALEFACE BATTLE, 1935.

Here's a modern battle, Redskins vs. Palefaces, Boy Scout style. And it was the Palefaces "bit the dust"—on the ice It was a hockey game between Blackfoot Indian boys of the Old Sun School Scout Troop, Gleichen, Alberta, and the 1st Rockyford Scout team And the Indian lads won, 6-4. Some of their stars were Wolf Leg, Yellow Fly, Fox and Waterchief.

RESOURCEFUL KING'S SCOUT REWARDED BY ART GALLERY

A set of artist's brushes and paints will be sent to Stanley C. Knapp, 20-year-old English apprentice in charge of the Hudson's Bay Company post at Clyde River, by the trustees of the National Gallery of Canada in recognition of his natural talent and inventiveness, it has been announced at Ottawa. Clyde River is 500 miles north of Frobisher Bay, Southern Baffin Land, N.W.T.

Knapp is a King's Scout of the 10th St. Thomas Exeter troop, Devonshire, Eng., where his widowed mother, Mrs. Helen Knapp, still lives.

Last year Knapp presented H. S. Southam, chairman of the board of trustees of the gallery with an oil painting of the company post at Frobisher Bay, executed by him with brushes made from hair out of his own head, and painted on cardboard with common house paint. The gift was brought down by Major D. L. McKeand, commander of the Canadian Government Arctic patrol.

The gallery trustees plan to send the paints and brushes by the S.S. Nascopie, Hudson's Bay Company boat, which will leave Montreal for the Arctic about July 13th.

Because of its historic value, Knapp's painting of the Frobisher Bay post was handed on to the Dominion Archives by Mr. Southam.

"Where does she get her good looks?"

"From her dad."

"Handsome man, eh?"

"No—chemist."

The veteran was on his favourite topic—his experience as a soldier in all parts of the world.

"I remember the time when we were stationed near Babylon. Why, it was so hot we toasted our bread in the sun, and—"

"Yes, I know," interrupted a war-weary youngster, "and they supplied you with corkscrews to draw your breath."

He was on his way home with his new car, which was absorbing all his attention, when it struck him that he had forgotten something.

Twice he stopped, counted his parcels and searched his pocketbook, but finally decided that he had everything with him.

When he reached home his daughter ran out, stoop with a surprised look on her face, and cried, "Why, father where's mother?"

SCOUT DANCE RAINED OUT.

The danced billed by the 1st Chesterville Troop of Boy Scouts for Monday evening did not prove a money-maker, the torrential downpour and gale keeping many from the event. The feature orchestra was the College Widows, an organization of eight girls, seven musicians and an entertainer who danced and sang in floor show numbers between dances. The orchestra was very well spoken of and is on a tour of the country which is meeting with success at each billing. The amount of cash going into the Troop's summer camp fund was but slightly over one dollar, and the Scouts are beginning to think they stand in bad with the weather man for they have put on four dances in the last two years and a downpour of rain has visited town on each occasion.
