HOCKEY

Cardinal 5, Morrisburg 3

Morrisburg dropped a game to Cardinal on the latter's ice in a regular league game played on January 28th. Play was fast from start to finish, the teams being very evenly matched. Both goalers made excellent saves, especially in the first and second periods, when first one citadel and then the other was bombarded with a fusilade of shots. The steady playing of both defences seemed to inspire the forward lines who opened up with as good a display as has been seen this winter.

Morrisburg scored the first goal in a neat pass from Meikle to Miller, the latter deftly flipping a backhand shot into the corner of the net. This put Morrisburg in the lead at the end of the first period.

Merve Duval scored Morrisburg's next counter in a beautiful individual rush and a wicked shot from just inside the blue line, which the Cardinal goaler had no chance to save. Then Cardinal scored on a neat piece of combination play and seemingly encouraged, were not long in tying the game up in a long hard shot, which ended up in the corner of the rink. This goal was disputed, as no one saw it hit the twine but the Cardinal goal judge. However, he was in the best position to see what happened, so the score counted Not long afterwards John Cross put Morrisburg in the lead again by a nice bit of stick handling, after receiving a pass just at the defence. John deserved this one, as he had been working particularly hard.

The second period ended in a 3 all tie. Both teams started out on the final with an earnest desire to win that game. As a result the play livened up considerably, but there was little or no deliberate rough work. Cardinal, through the heady playing of that evergreen veteran, 'Craby' Cameron, scored, the team taking a lead which was not overcome. The final period was drawing to a close and Morrisburg tried desperately to tie up the game. They put four men up on the forward line and swept in on the Cardinal goal time after time, only to be turned back by stellar work in the nets. The Marroon supporters, thrilled by this gallant standard, cheered like mad. The players seemed to react to the stimulus and played just a little harder. Cardinal was resorting to long shots to relieve the pressure, and one of these, rolling along the ice, took a bounce over McLean's stick and the game was over.

Morrisburg was without the services of Buster Cameron, one of their fastest men. He might have made a difference, who knows?

Morrisburg has a heavy schedule ahead. They play 3 games nert week On Monday night they play in Prescott, in their last visiting game of the schedule. There will be two home games next week: on Wednesday and Friday nights. As these are postponed games, it is uncertain who our opponents will be, but Brinston will be one, and either Prescott or Spencerville the other. We promise the fans a real game on both nights, so keep Wednesday and Friday nights of next week 'open' and come down to Roach's arena to see our speed boys go.

OLD TEAMS REVIVED

The Flying Dutchmen of Williamsburg journeyed to Dundela on Tuesday evening, Jan. 29th, to freshen up the memories of the past. Joe Empey acted as referee. The game was fast and clean, with only one penalty. The game ended 1—1,. They played ten minutes overtime, and could not break the tie. It is to be played off on Williamsburg rink Monday evening, Feb. 4th.

MOTORISTS WARNED

Hon. George S. Henry, Minister of Highways, announced this week that he was issuing instructions to police authorities that, commencing Feb. 1, all motorists found driving without 1929 license plates are to be "picked up".

Mr. Henry pointed out that car drivers have had ample time in which to get their new licenses, and that after the first of the month excuses will no longer be tolerated.

The warning was also thrown out by the Minister of Highways that people driving without operating permits at the present time are laying themselves open to police interference.

ANNUAL MEETING

CATTLE OWNERS WANT COUNTIES T.B. FREE AREA

Petitions urging that the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry be created as Tuberculosis free cattle area will be presented to the Dominion Government at its coming session.

At the January Session of the United Counties Council, the matter was brought before that body by D. S. McIntosh of Charlottenburgh township and the Council approved a memorial, to be forwarded to the government, stating that the majority of cattle owners in the Counties desire the T.B. free tested area and asking that steps be taken to establish the three counties as such free area.

The petition states that "As the best markets are not open until the milk is known to come from Tubercular tested cattle, the Dominion government is requested by a majority of the cattle owners of the Counties to pass an act for the early creation of a T. B. free area in the United Counties."

"FETTERLYS LIMITED" INCORPORATED SUCCEED W. H. FETTERLY & COMPANY

W. H. Fetterly and Company, pioneer automobile dealers, one of the oldest and largest in Eastern Ontario, have sold out to a newly incorporated firm to be known as "FETTERLYS LIMITED". The new firm will take over the business on February 1st, 1929.

W. H. Fetterly, founder of the business, in the year 1893, and connected with it ever since it's inception, has retired after a long and active career. The new firm will be composed of Messrs R. G. Fetterly, J. C. Fetterly, Roy Schell and Robert Merkley, all of whom were actively connected with the firm of W. H. Fetterly and Company for some time. The policies which have been closely adhered to for thirty-six years bringing a steadily increasing business will be carried out to the letter. "When Better Values are sold we will sell them" has been a slogan of the old firm and it's policy of square dealing has resulted in the retention of old customers and the addition of new ones.

McLaughlin-Buick and Pontiac automobiles will be featured again and with the new 1929 models these cars represent values unequalled or even closely approached.

Rogers, Majestic and Victor Radio, which are the outstanding radio values on the market will also be continued. The personnel of the sales, service and office will remain the same, with the addition of others which the ever increasing business will no doubt require.

"Fetterlys' Limited" solicit your esteemed patronage, and promise you in addition to the quality of the products they will offer "Service that Satisfies", which truly makes an ideal combination and which should merit your support.

MOORE FOUND GUILTY IN DEATH OF YOUTH

Christopher Moore, charged with the death of Thomas Hart at Mountain on Oct. 31 last, when Hart and five other young lads visited Moore's house and turned over an outbuilding, upset a water barrel and moved the steps, was late on Wednesday afternoon found guilty of manslaughter at the Winter Assizes, presided over by Mr. Justice Jeffrey, and was sentenced to fifteen months in the Ontario Reformatory, dating from Nov. 1 last.

The case, which opened on Tuesday, created a great deal of interest, particularly among residents of the locality of Mountain, who were present in large numbers to hear the evidence.

The Crown witnesses were the same as at the inquest, the boys reciting the particulars of their two visits to the Moore house, on the first of which Lawrence Sims was hit by a shot from Moore's house, the shot grazing his shoulder.

Following this shooting the 'gang' went down to the village and later returned to Moore's, when further 'tricks' were played. Moore opened the front door and told the boys, according to Crown witnesses, 'if you don't get away I will shoot." Shortly after the boys started away and Moore shot twice, the second shot hitting Hart near the collar-bone, with fatal results.

Moore, in giving evidence on his own behalf, which he did in a clear, straightforward way, said that for the past four years he had been molested on Hallowe'en night, and when the boys came to his home on Oct. 31 last, on their first visit, he told them: 'Fun is fun, but I can't stand that,' referring to the attempt to throw his steps at him, through the door, and then he fired his first shot, went into the house and put his gun away. He and his wife then retired, but only partly undressed, fearing the return of the boys. About 11 o'clock he was aroused by the depredations of the boys and came down stairs, opened the front door and shot, although he did not see the boys. He then reloaded the gun and fired a second shot, which hit Hart. All shots were fired from the hip, and without any special aim.

Mrs. Moore, 58 years of age, wife of accused, broke down in giving her testimony, in which she said she was 'scared to death' of what the boys might do. The boys made a great deal of noise around the house and this, with the depredations committed, upset Mrs. Moore, who had a weak heart.

Thanks

Having sold out our business to "Fetterlys Limited", details of which transfer appear in another column, we desire to thank our many customers for the patronage extended us in the past and solicit for our successors the same patronage for the future. : : :

The White Desert

by Courtney Ryley Cooper

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Fate had seen fit to shape the life of young Barry Houston into a series of tragic molds. A bitter experience in his past caused his father to lose faith in his son and therefore bequeath to him timber holdings in Tabernacle only on condition that a high output be maintained. Mysterious accidents have prevented this and Houston, arriving from Boston, finds that this is dut to the treachery of his mill superintendent, Fred Thayer.

Houston is assisted in his work in the timber country by Ba'tiste Renaud, an eccentric French-Canadian, whose life has been saddened by the double tragedy of his son's death in France and the unsolved murder of his wife. Houston discharges Thayer despite the remonstrances of Agnes Jierdon, a girl who has a mysterious hold over Houston. The mill is burned. Houston decides to carry on the fight when he is confronted with a forged lease which turns his timber rights over to a neighboring lumber company. Houston claims he doesn't remember signing such a lease. In the presence of Medaine Robinette, to whom Houston is attracted, Thayer says Houston probably doesn't remember the night he murdered his cousin, Tom Langdon.

GO ON WITH THE STORY.

White-hot with anger, Barry Houston lurched forward, to find himself caught in the arms of the sheriff and thrown back. He whirled—and stopped, looking with glazed, deadened eyes into the blanched, horrified features of a girl who evidently had heard the accusation, a girl who stood poised in revulsion a moment before she turned, and, almost running, hurried to mount her horse and ride away. And the strength of anger left the muscles of Barry Houston. The red flame of indignation turned to a sodden, dead thing. He could only realize that Medaine Robinette had heard him accused without a single statement given in his own behalf; that Medaine, the girl of his smoke-wreathed dreams, now fully and thoroughly believed him—a murderer!

CHAPTER IX.

Dully Houston turned back to the sheriff and to the goggle-eyed Ba'tiste, trying to fathom it all. Weakly he motioned toward Thayer, and his words, when they came, were hollow and expressionless:

"That's a lie, Sheriff. I'll admit that I have been accused of murder. I was acquitted. You say that nothing counts but the court action—and that's all I have to say in my behalf. In regard—to this, I'll obey the court's order until I can prove to the judge's satisfaction that this whole thing is a fraud and a fake. In the meanwhile," almost piteously, "do you care to go with me, Ba'tiste?"

Heavily, silently, the French-Canadian joined him, and together they walked down the narrow road to the camp. Neither spoke for a long time.

"Well, Ba'tiste," came in strained tones, "I might as well hear it now. You'll only be leaving a sinking ship."

"What you do?"

"That depends entirely on you. If you're with me, I fight. If not—well frankly—I don't know."

"'Member the mill, when he burn down?"

"Yes."

"Yu no believe Ba'teese did heem. Well, now I no believe either!"

"Honestly, Ba'tiste?" Houston had gripped the other man's arm. "You don't believe it? You don't—"

"Ba'teese believe M'sieu Houston. You look like my Pierre. My Pierre, he could do no wrong. Ba'teese satisfy."

It sent a new flow of blood through the veins of Barry Houston—that simple, quiet statement of the old trapper. His voice vore a vibrant tone, almost of excitement:

"I'm going back to Boston tonight. I'm going to find out about this. There's fraud. Ba'tiste—and I'll prove it if I can get back to Boston. Miss Jierdon knows the truth about this whole thing—every step of the way. Will you tell her?"

"Oui. Ba'teese tell her—about the flume and M'sieu Thayer, what he say. You go Boston tonight?"

"Yes."

Weazened, wrinkle-faced little Jenkins met him at the Boston office.

"You're back, Mr. Houston! I didn't know whether to send the notice from the Mountain, Plains and Salt Lake Railroad. It just came yesterday."

Abstractedly, Houston picked it up and glanced at the specifications.

"Jenkins!" Houston's voice was sharp, insistent. The weazened man entered, rubbing his hands.

"Have we any stumpage contracts?"

"Only one, sir."

"One? What!"

"The one you signed, sir, to Thayer and Blackburn, just a week or so before you started out West. Don't you remember, sir; you signed it, together with a lease for the flume site and lake?"

"I signed nothing of the sort!"

"You certainly did, sir."

"You're lying!"

"I don't lie, sir. I attested the signature and saw you read both contracts. Pardon, sir, but if any one's lying, sir—it's yourself!"

CHAPTER X.

Ten minutes after that, Barry Houston was alone in his office Jenkins was gone, discharged, and Houston felt a sort of relief in the knowledge that he had departed.

He returned to Tabernacle and attempted the only solution: he must secure timber from Medaine Robinette and bid on the railroad contract.

Houston felt that he would be presuming to ask it of her—himself a stranger against whom had come the accusation of murder. Yet, withal, in a way, he welcomed the chance to see her and to seek to explain to her the deadly thrusts which Fred Thayer had sent against him.

She seemed to hesitate and Houston took a sudden resolve.

Medaine's hand trembled slightly as she extended it to Ba'tiste. Houston she received with a bow—forced, he thought.

"We have come for business, Medaine," Ba'tiste announced. "M'sieu Houston, he have need for flume site."

She seemed to hesitate then and Houston took a sudden resolve. It might as well be now as later.

"Miss Robinette," he began, coming forward, "I realize that all this needs some explanation. Especially," and he halted, "about myself."

Houston came directly to the question.

"It's simply this, Miss Roibnette. If I am guilty of those things, you don't want to have anything to do with me. But I am here to tell you that I am not guilty, and that it all has been a horrible blunder of circumstance. It is very true in one sense—" and his voice lowered—"that about two years ago in Boston, I was arrested and tried for murder."

"So Mr. Thayer said."

"I was acquitted—but not for the reason Thayer gave. They couldn't make a case. A worthless cousin, Tom Langdon, was murdered. They said I did it with a wooden mallet which I had taken from a prize fight, and which had been used to hammer on the gong for the beginning and the end of the rounds. I had been seen to take it from the fight, and it was found the next morning beside Langdon. There was human blood on it. I had been the last person seen with Langdon. But they couldn't convince the jury; I went free, as I should have done. I was innocent!"

Houston, white now with the memories and with the necessity of retailing again in the presence of a girl who, to him, stood for all that could mean happiness, gritted his teeth for the determination to go on with the grisly thing, to hide nothing in the answers to the question which she might ask. But Medaine Robinette, standing beside the window, the color gone from her cheeks, one hand fingering the curtains, eyes turned without, gave no evidence that she had heard.

"I hadn't seen Tom Langdon in five years. Always had looked on him as a sort of black sheep. He asked for my father and appeared anxious to see him. I told him that father was out of town. Then he said he would stay in Boston until he came back, that he had information for him that was of the greatest importance, and that when he told father what it was, that he, Langdon, could have anything my father possessed in the way of a job and competence for life. It sounded like blackmail—I could think of nothin else coming from Tom Langdon—and I told him so. That was unfortunate. There were several persons in my office at the time. He resented the statement and we quarreled. They heard it and later testified. He suggested that we go to dinner together and insisted upon it. There was nothing to do but acquiesce; especially as I now was trying to draw from him something of what had brought him there. We had wine. Oh," and he swerved suddenly toward the woman at the window, "I'm not trying to make any excuses for myself. We left the cafe, he fairly intoxicated, myself greatly so. We saw the advertisement of a prize fight and went, getting seats near the ringside. They weren't close enough for me. I bribed a fellow to let me sit at the press stand, next to the timekeeper, and worried him until he let me have the mallet that he was using to strike the gong.

"The fight was exciting—especially to me in my condition. I was standing most of the time, even leaning on the ring. Once, while in this position, one of the men, who was bleeding, was knocked down. He struck the mallet. It became covered with blood. No one seemed to notice that except myself—and everyone was too excited A moment more and the fight was over. Then I stuck the mallet in my pocket, telling everyone who cared to hear that I was carrying away a souvenir. Langdon and I went out together.

"We started home—for he had announced that he was going to spend the night with me. Persons about us heard him. It was not far to the house and we decided to walk. On the way, he demanded the mallet for himself and pullet it out of my pocket. I struggled with him for it, finally, however, to be bested, and started away. I went home and to bed. About four o'clock in the morning, I was awakened by the police. They had found Tom Langdon dead, with his skull crushed, evidently by the blow of a club or a hammer. They said I did it."

Write a Limerick – Win a Prize

Here is another opportunity for readers of this paper to show their skill in composing Limericks. One dollar will be paid for every entry accepted. Verses must be in the well known limerick style and must mention one of the nationally advertised articles announcement of which is found in this paper.

Quite a number of entries in the last contest were disqualified because verses were not Limericks. The following examples taken from amongst recent winners can be used as guides:—

There was an old lady named Hood,
Who wanted her tea extra good,
"Orange Red Rose," said she,
"Is the tea that suits me,"
Said the venerable Dame Madam Hood.

MRS. H. FOWLER,

For Colds –

How many people you know who end their colds with Aspirin! And how often you've heard of its prompt relief of sore throat or tonsilitis. No wonder millions take it for colds, neuralgia, rheumatism; and the aches and pains that go with them. The wonder is that anyone still worries through a winter without these tablets! They relieve quickly, yet have no effect whatever on the heart. Friends have often told you Aspirin is marvelous; doctors have declared it harmless. Every druggist has it, with proven directions. Why not put it to the test?

Electrical Survey Planned

Arrangements are now being made by Windsor Mines with the Schlumberger Prospecting Company to carry out a survey of their property near LaSarre Station, Quebec. Ore bodies have been opened up parallel to a dyke which cuts northwest through the property. The latest find is said to be a massive sulphide vein with a width of five feet. It is said to show 19.08 per cent. copper. On the north of the dyke there is strong stringer mineralization for a length of 600 feet, with widths of 5½ feet, said to assay up to 10 per cent. copper.

Drink and Keep Fit Says Doctor

London.—"We may now drink iced water with no fear of the consequences. The fallacy that it is bad for the digestion is definitely exploded," said Sir William Arbuthnot Lane. "My own opinion is that it has an excellent effect on the system, toning up the digestive organs in the same way that a cold bath stimulates the skin.

"As a nation we should be much healthier if we drank four tumblers of water every morning before breakfast.

"Americans drink much more water than we do, but the good effects which might be obtained are counteracted by their excessive meat eating. The English find water-drinking more difficult owing to the colder climate."

Minard's Liniment prevents Flu.

"Then you deny," said the magistrate, "that you were rude to the policeman when he asked to see your license?" "Certainly, sir," replied the motorist, "All I said was that from what I could see of him I was sure his wife would be happier as a widow."

How They Meet the Bright New Year

Various Customs in Other Lands on the Festival of Birth of Another Year

JOY THE RULE

France meets the new years with a flowing cup; to Scotland it brings in the famous hagassis to a bagpipe tune; in Persia it signifies the rebirth of all life; China's new year sends an old household god to the land of spirits while it establishes another deity on the family hearth. In Canada, accompanied by merrymaking or solemnity, as the temper of the company demands, another leaf in the book of life turns over. Varying calandars announce the new year at different times of the year in different parts of the world but everywhere as the day rolls around it is greeted with an outburst of celebration.

St. Sylvestre's Day is a saint's day no one ignores in France. Saints come and go throughout the year, observed with more or less devotion by pious people of the nation, but when St. Sylvestre's Eve comes on the last day of the old year, families rich and poor are prepared for its ritual. The stores teem with lovely things and toy shops are crowded to the doors with dolls and drums, for St. Sylvestre's Day, rather than Christmas is the season of giving in France.

Eight o'clock on St. Sylvestse's eve take. the people to mass for the solemn dedicatory service for the coming year. When the mass is over gay crowds press homeward for the feast of the evening.

A tremendous dinner is spread and around it gather the head of the family, his wife, their children, their children's children and all the uncles, aunts and cousins—the honor of entertaining falling upon the oldest of the family line. Mouton gigot is the main dish of the dinner (since turkey and chicken are little favored in France), accompanied by glorified string beans and truffle sauces, and a finale of pataisseries and wine.

On the stroke of midnight, which approaches near the end of the dinner, the city bursts forth with all the din that whistles, drums, horns and shouts can arouse, and everybody greets the new year with a draught of champagne. Wine may flow early in the evening, but this king of beverages is reserved until the new year actually shows his face. Upon the streets hilarity reaches its height with the midnight bell, for then the ancient order of kissing comes into its own.

As on old Russian Easter, nobody stands on ceremony, for tradition gives gives him sanction to kiss the prettiest girl in sight, whether he has ever seen her before in his life—and right heartily he does it. Dignity unbends and beauty lays to its majesty for a few rollicking moments.

Youngsters, long since in bed, have left their shoes, big and little, upon the hearth, waiting for the giftgivers, and before parents and relatives betake themselves to a late bed they fill the shoes with the year's offerings of toys, candies and fruits.

GERMANY OF YORE.

Germany, whose St. Nicholas is loved even more than our Santa Claus, makes no great stir over New Year's now, but there are many tales of seasonal functions in the old days under the monarchy.

There was a custom in the cities during the youth of the former Kaiser that a man appeared on the streets in a tall silk hat on New Year's Eve at his own peril. The idea probably grew out of the hostility of the lower classes to the bourgeoisie, the silk hat being a symbol of prosperity. Should a provincial, ignorant of the custom, have the ill fortune to stroll forth in fine feathers on that evening in Berlin he was almost at once greeted by the command to take off his hat. He, not believing the summons for him, walked on with unruffled composure. Shouting mobs were around him in no time, and he, too late, saw that he was really meant to doff his hat. With rough blows the beautiful hat was smashed over its owner's ears and entirely demolished.

A story, which may be three parts fiction, say that William II. used to love to dress as a member of the working class and mingle with the crowd incognito and join in the rough sport. On one occasion he had the misfortune to belabor an old man who was more than prepared for the onslaught. The old gentleman had been attacked in former times, and on this particular year he had equipped himself with a leather skull cap which he wore under his hat. Set thickly in the leather were sharp upstanding nails. When the Emperor's fist came down on that fellow's hat, it encountered more than a bewildered head, and the royal hand was so severely injured as to require a surgeon's attention.

In Frankfort-on-the-Main the whole city salutes itself at the moment of midnight. Families and groups of friends together watch the old year out and when the clock begins to strike twelve, every window in the city flies open and the streets resound with "Prosit Nuejahr"—Happy New Year! Toasts are drunk and good wishes exchanged.

THE SCOTCH WAY.

Time was in Scotland when New Year's far outshone Christmas in importance, and though the order is now reversed, many of the old superstitions survive to make New Year one of the gayest times sober Scotland knows. It is a busy season for the bakers who are making their hard loaves of rye bread and their fancy tarts and short breads. Their windows are festive with little ornamented cakes bearing iced sugar mottos wishing "A Happy New Year" and "A Merrie Auld Yule." A famous Scotch bun made entirely of egg and chopped fruit enclosed in a crust appears bountifully during New Year week. First footing has come from the nineteenth century with scarce abated vigor. This is the custom of visiting friends immediately after midnight. Prudent people usually take care that the first foot set inside their doors belongs to a person of fair countenance since the fair face brings good luck for the entire year. A dark face brings bad luck. One might expect all brunettes to remain at home under the circumstances if another bait did not draw them out. The first footer is allowed to kiss the person who answers his knock, and many a swain makes his visit hoping the favored daughter of the house will open the door.

Healths are drunk with regular Scotch whiskey, and when the party is asembled, a piper in highland plaids enters playing the hagassis tune on his bagpipes. Immediately after him comes the cook bearing the hagassis, a huge boiled pudding of well established reputation. It is to Scotland what the plum pudding is to England, and it is loudly welcomed. On that night no fire on the hearth goes out since gray ashes on the grate on New Year borning are a bad sign.

On New Year's Eve and late into the night the children of the city and the country go from door to door singing begging songs. Carrying enormous turnips made into jack-o-lanterns, and muffled in sheets and masks, just as Canadian children are on Hallowe'en, the little beggars shout their ditty until they are rewarded with cheese and bread and with the little New Year pitcaithy bannocks which have made the bake shop windows alluring for a week.

IN PERSIA TOO.

Nowhere in the world, with the possible exception of China, does the New Year bring such feasting as it does in Persia. There the day and the customs are those which survive from the old Zoroastrian worship and traditions. Mahommetanism has long held nominal sway in Persia, and its calendar is used to a great extent but the folk customs of the older religion survive and occupy an incomparably dear place in the life of the people. That is why the New Year celebration surrounds March 21 rather than follows the day around the Mohammetan lunar calendar which makes the first of the year fall at different times of the sun calendar.

Because it is spring, and all plant and animal life is springing anew, March seems an especially appropriate time for New Year. On the clay roofs a riot of color announces the blooming of myriads of wild flowers whose seeds of the year before have blown about on the wind and found lodging in the straw and loose soil of the housetops. No child dares pick these New Year flowers, just as he dares not kill a bird or an animal, since according to Zoroastrianism life is sacred, and should any life be voilently taken the spirit of it is doomed to wander homeless forever.

In the houses all is hubbub, for spring cleaning, the like of which no western house has yet endured, is on foot. The gorgeous rugs and mats are packed on the backs of the beasts of burden and taken miles to the streams to be washed in running water; pots and pans are cleaned and scoured; the cooking quarters are humming with activity. The lady of an establishment has her hands more than full at Persia's New Year, because every member of her household, lowest servant to favorite wife, must have new clothing from the most insignificant piece of underwear to the fine gauzy silks Persian women wear as outer wraps. Peddlers of baubles and jewelry, merchants of brocades, shawls and chintzes, call upon the great of the land and sell enormous quantities of their wares. Dressmakers follow them and throw the household into such an uproar that the men and boys might leave home if any house in Persia offered a retreat.

Meanwhile culinary preparations go on briskly. Both men and women are making the famous Persian sweetmeats which belong almost exclusively to the New Year. Adjil a mixture of twenty kinds of nuts, the seeds of watermelons and pumpkins, tiny peas, quince seeds, salt and the juice of limes has a delicate greenish color and is the greatest favorite of all the delicacies prepared. Rice flour is made into fine little cakes and a rich dainty which employs pounded walnuts in place of flour is one of the richest of the New Year cakes. Nuts, too, salted and sweetened, are prepared in huge quantities.

Two thousand years ago the lovely practice of planting wheat in bowls had its origin. Today it still flourishes, and by the dawn of No-Ruz (New Year's Day) the plants, which were put into the bowls not quite a month before, are several inches high, so that the bowl makes a lovely delicate green centrepiece for the great festal board.

MOTHER'S DAY.

New Year's Day is above all others dedicated to the mother of the household. She is the queen of the day, and before the people sit down around the long white linen cloth which is spread on the floor and covered with the cookery of many preceding days, they must receive the blessing of the mother. She then invites them to sit down.

In houses where European guests of some importance have been asked to dine, soup may precede the main course but in most Persian menus this westernism has not found its way. Pilau, which is to say, rice is piled upon tremendous trays not less than two feet in diameter and served with a savory sauce. Turkey, with its sauces, follows, and finally another pilau, which is sweet. Almonds, pistachios, fings, raisins and walnuts make the sweet pilau one of the finest things in all Persian cookery.

On that day the visiting starts. No polite Persian nor foreign visiter cares omit the courtesy of the visits, though if his time is very precious he may call and merely leave his card. Twenty and thirty visits a day must be crowded into the schedule of people of some public prominence. The streets are a carnival of color; smart French gowns are veiled with the tulle scarfs of the women, but the colors of the dresses are only enhanced by the fluttering outer garment. Out of the windows, over balconies, hang the rug. which have made Persia famous—gorgeous banners of the day's importance. Tea drinking and sherbet and sweetmeats arranged in exact designs on trays in the gardens of friends and acquaintances are the order of the season.

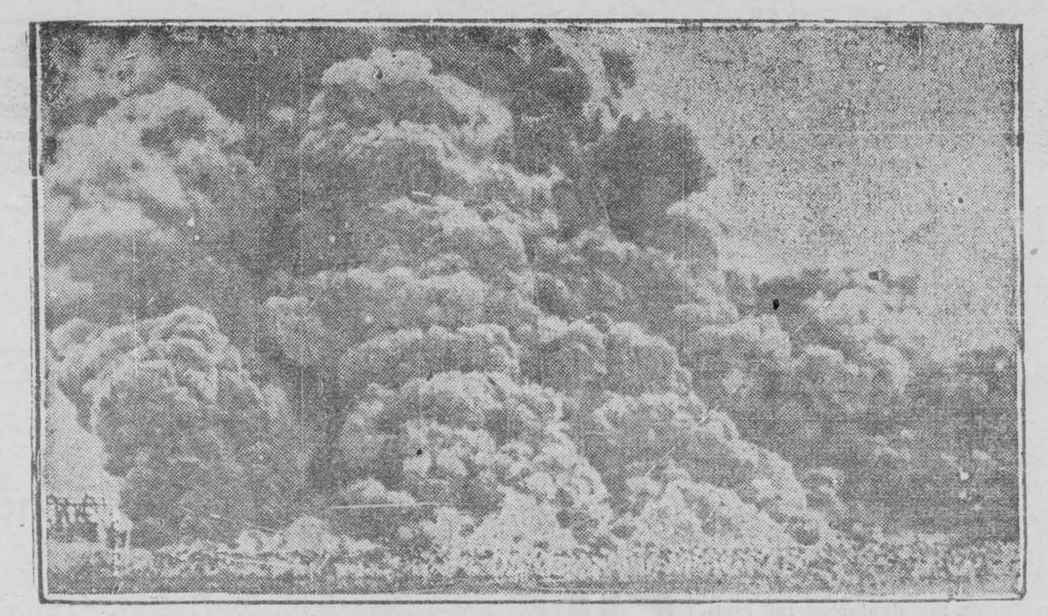

THE GIFT SEASON.

For twelve days the visting goes on and gifts are given among families and friends; not gifts in our sense of the word, but bright silver and gold coins; and in some cases fine old coins whose value is far greater than their face denomination. which are kept years afterward for their beauty and rarity.

Seezdeh-debar (the thirteenth day to the door of year) arrives on the thirteenth day of the year and with it the greatest celebration of all. Out of the twelve gates of Teheran goes the population of the city—past the moto that surrounds the ancient citadel and over the artificial hill that hems it in. Beside running streams shaded by willows and poplars they spread the picnic dinner. Such a dinner as it is. There is barbecued lamb, and rice and tea from precious old samovars, and an incredible amount of shirinee—the sweets which have been made with so much labor. All day long the picnic lasts, with the people playing games or sitting talking on the rugs they have brought out for the day. Seezdeh-bedar over, the New Year celebration is closed for the year.

Speeding around corners is a straight road to the hospital.

The Yellow River

By Thomas Steep

The Hwang-ho, or Yellow River, to which also is given the name "China's Sorrow," is of all rivers the wickedest. It inundates homes by the thousands and drowns people by the millions. It assumes in the Chinese imagination the character of a ruthlessly destructive dragon, whose tail is in the mountains of Tibet, whose body stretches 2,600 miles across Northern China, and whose head is in the Gulf of Pechili. It is held accountable for the death by drowning in the last three centuries of 10,000,000 people. It swamps areas thirty miles wide, and in one instance in a single night destroyed 1,500 villages. It churns up millions of tons of loose chalky earth, buries farmlands under mud up to the eaves of the farmers' huts and yearly carries out to sea enough sediment to build up a solid mountain on the floor of the ocean. It shifts its mouth capriciously from the coast of one province to the coast of another province and leaves in its wake famines and pestilences more devastating than war.

Yet its influence on Chinese civilization has been beneficient; its picturesque gorges and torrents in the Tibetan highlands have for ages been the theme of Chinese poetry, its shallow lower reaches bear a considerable commerce, and its whole length marks the pathway by which the pioneering forebears of the yellow race migrated from the sterile uplands of Central Asia to the fertile lowlands.

Rising in the high Kobo-nor plateau, in Tibet, among a group of small lakes called "the starry seas," the Hwang-ho tumbles through the rocky mountain gorges in fresh, cool cascades, which the Chinese poets compare to the falling of liquid jade. The falls at Lungmen (Dragon-gate), with its overhanging crags and its surrounding forests, vales, peaked pagodas and huge buddhas carved in the mountain sides, is held to be a glimpse of paradise. Beyond the foothills the river for 400 miles passes the base of the Great Wall like a wide moat, loops a thousand miles into Mongolia and enters Honan Province, where it washes up the loose yellow earth in vast quanties and carries it swiftly seaward. On the lower plains, where it widens and meets a more gradual decline, the river slackens its speed and permits the silt and coarser detritus to sink, causing the river bed to rise continuously.

For forty centuries the Chinese, to prevent the river from becoming an inland sea, have struggled to confine it within embankments of earth, only to see the embankments washed away when the river bed, raised by the accumulated silt, lifts the waters over them. "What," asks Dr. F. H. King in his "Farmers of Forty Centuries," "must be said of the mental status of a people who for forty centuries have measured their strength against such a Titan racing past their homes above the level of their fields confined only between walls of their own construction?" Obviously, the patience of the Chinese is comparable to that of ants which, finding their ramparts of sand destroyed, laboriously build them up again. The amount of mud the river disperses is prodigious. It has been estimated that the Hwang-ho together with the Yangtse in 360 centuries will fill up with solid land the whole of the Yellow Sea.

As a bearer of freight the Hwang-ho is incorribly bad; it not only because of its shallowness refuses to carry any but rafts and flatboats, but it strands them on its treacherous sandbars. The craft, whose cargoes are chiefly lacquer juice, millet, rice, tobacco, gums and oils, are built in the highlands, where timber is plentiful, and dismantled and sold for lumber in the lowlands, where wood is scarce. So it may be said of the Hwang-ho, as of no other river, that the ships sail down it never sail up again.

The last time I crossed the Hwang-ho I was a passenger on the Peking-Hankow express. It was past midnight and the train moved over the desolate plains of interior China with a monotonous clickety-click. Inside the coach the passengers, Europeans and Chinese, slept soundly in grotesque attitudes; outside in the moonlight the landscape swept by ghostly; a solitary farmhouse; a clump of gnarled and ancient trees, a ruined temple inclosed within a ruined wall. Tired old China slumbered, oblivious to the passing train.

Book-Salesman (to gentleman who has purchased several new books)—"There's nothing like buying one's Christmas presents quite early, sir, and thus avoiding the crowds." Thrifty Gentleman—"It isn't so much that, mon, as that when ye leave books until the last minute there's no time to read them before ye have to send them off!"

"My dear," remarked Jones, who had just finished reading a book on "The Wonders of Nature." "Nature is marvellous! When I read a book like this it makes me think how puerile, how insignificant is man." "Huh!" said his wife. "A woman doesn't have to wade through 400 pages to discover that."

League of Nations, Calendar Reform

Canadian Society Gave Early Support to this Vital Reform Movement, Now Assembly May Be Called

Ottawa.—An international conference on calendar reform may materialize as a result of action being taken before the House of Representatives of the United States in Washington, the League of Nations Society in Canada, which has its headquarters at Ottawa, has been advised. At the instigation of Mr. George Eastman, the well-known American financier, the committee on foreign affairs at Washington has under its consideration a proposal that the President of the States be officially requested to call an international meeting to look into the question of calendar simplification.

Various federal officials at Washington have been outspoken in their support of the movement and at present there seems every likelihood that calendar reform, which is sponsored by the League of Nations, will be thoroughly investigated. Opinion both in Canada and the United States is unanimous as to the need of this although until suggestions have been thoroughly threshed out there is and will continue to be disagreement as to the nature of the remedy.

Students of calendar reform point out many discrepancies in the present system,—inequality in the length of the months, the varying number of weeks in the months, the lack of fixity of the calendar, and so on—and state that a readjustment would be beneficial to every class of the community. The thirteen twenty-eight day month plan designed by Moses B. Cotsworth is cited as a convenient solution to the problem as there would always be four weeks in each month, and each week day would fall upon the same date each month, and crop statistics, records of all sorts, and accounting would benefit greatly. Mr. Cotsworth did much of his early work in Canada and many years ago read a paper before the Royal Society of Canada and received the unqualified support of that distinguished body.

Lady Astor, Gorgeously Clad, Moves House To Enthusiasm

2 London—Lady Astor has started another movement, this time a "brighter clothes" campaign for women.

Lady Astor appeared in the House of Commons clad in a gorgeous cerise gown instead of the usual somber blues and blacks worn by women in Parliament. The fact that she had come direct from a tea party was not mentioned in the enthusiastic comment and cheers that greeted her appearance caused other women parliamentarians immediately to start wondering if they had fallen behind.

"Of course, we do not want women to make a fashion parade of the House of Commons, said Miss Ellen Wilkinson, one of the eight women in the House, "but it strikes me that it is high time the House got over its supposed prejudice against women members wearing bright colors."

Miss Susan Lawrence, another member, supported Miss Wilkinson's attitude. "Quite right," she said. "It is my view that what clothes a parliamentarian wears is entirely her own affair."

Youth's Opportunity

"A symposium on the subject of success in business has been compiled by Mr. R. B. Dunwoody, Secretary of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, and published under the title of Youth's Opportunity.

Hre are a few sayings of some of the contributors:—

"Learn to say 'No' to yourself in matters of pleasure.

"Start early at the bottom of the ladder.

"The men who 'live well,' but 'not too well,' get on best all over the world.

"The future may see lads going into a factory for two years, then to a university.

"Grumbling should be kept to oneself.

"If a young man can manage to take as much interest in the business he has entered as he does in, say, football, cricket or motor-cars, there is not much fear of his troubling about whether the dole wil be increased or diminished.

"No man will be a success in a calling he dislikes.

"The next crop of millionaires are licking our stamps now."

MR. JOHN A. MCGILLIVRAY

There passed away at Morrisburg, Friday, January 25th, Mr. John A. McGillivray, son of the late Mr. Peter McGillivray and Mrs. Martha McGillivray. He was a highly esteemed resident of our community. Mr. McGillivray was a life-long resident of Morrisburg.

Deceased was in his fifty-first year and enjoyed almost perfect health until the last two weeks of his life, when he was stricken with paralysis. Mr. McGillivray was a devoted husband and father. He was of a most jovial disposition, and a friend to everyone. He will be greatly missed in the community where he has so long been known.

The funeral was held Sunday from his late residence on Main St. thence to St. James Church, Morrisburg, the service being conducted by Rev. Homer, Iroquois, who preached a very appropriate sermon. The remains were placed in the vault.

The large number who attended the funeral testified to Mr. McGillivray's popularity in his native community. The casket was laden with many beautiful wreaths and sprays.

Those from a distance who attended the funeral were friends from Cornwall, Aultsville, Archer, North Lunenburg and Iroquois.

The pall-bearers were six brothers of the Canadian Order of Foresters, No. 20.

Deceased is survived by his wife and one daughter Margaret, his aged mother, one brother and three sisters.

MR. ALLAN REDDICK

The funeral of the late Mr. Allan Reddick, whose death occurred at Osnabruck on Wednesday January 23rd, was largely attended, following a service at the house by Rev. Whitmore. The remains were placed in the vault at Finch, awaiting burial at Morrisburg.

The late Mr. Reddick was born in Williamsburg township eighty-three years ago. Twenty years after the death of his wife, he went to Newington, to live with his son Walter.

He leaves to mourn his loss four daughters, Mrs. Hamilton Beckstead, Morrisburg; Mrs. Phoebe Reid, Toronto; Mrs. Thos. Woodward, Toronto; Mrs. Kenneth Courtney, Ogdensburg, N.Y., and one son, Walter, of Northfield Station; also three sisters and four brothers.

Relatives from a distance attending the funeral were Mrs. Thos. Woodward and Mrs. Phoebe Reid, of Toronto, Mrs. Kenneth Courtney, Ogdensburg, N.Y., Mrs. Hamilton Beckstead Morrisburg; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Martin, Mille Roches, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Reddick, Madrid, N.Y.; Mrs. Currie, Syracuse, N.Y., Mr. Wesley Reddick, Aultsville, Frank Reddick, Cornwall, Mrs. Harold Bouchner, Mille Roches, Miss Gertie Reddick, Mrs. Will Reid, Morrisburg Mr. W. H. Fetterly.

MRS. ANNIE FROATS

On Tuesday January 29th, at 5.45 p.m., Mrs. Annie Froats passed away at St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Brockville, following an operation. This came as a shock to her many friends and relatives, as her going out was unexpected.

She will be greatly missed by all who knew her, as she herself was a true friend, cheerful and always willing to help any whom she could help.

Mrs. Froats as Annie Derousie, was born in Cornwall on March 1st, 1861, and came to Morrisburg when a young girl, with her mother, latter becoming the wife of Luther Froats of Froatburn, who predeceased her eleven years ago.

For many years she was a member and earnest worker of St. Johns Lutheran Church, Riverside, and for the last ten years a constant attendant at St. Pauls Lutheran Church, a member of the Sunday School, Luther League and the Womens' Lutheran Missionary Society.

She leaves one daughter, Mrs. Amy Deeks, Morrisburg George W. Froats, Aultsville and J. Edwin Froats, Pittsburg, Pa.; a sister, Mrs Maria Hepburn, Morrisburg, and one brother, Mr. Alvin Derousie, Port Haney, B.C.

The funeral, and interment in the family plot, is being held this (Friday) afternoon at St. Johns Lutheran Church, Riverside.

MR. LEVI BAILEY

Levi Bailey, one of Cornwall's best known business men, passed away at his home on January 27th. Mr. Bailey was a native son of Cornwall, being born there 75 years ago, a son of the late Josephus Bailey. For a period of 45 years he conducted a jewelry business there, retiring four years ago, when he sold out to Atkinson Brothers. Mr. Bailey had a home at Massena Point across the river from here, where he spent the summer seasons for many years, residing in Cornwall during the winter He was the last member of his family. He is survived by his widow, who before her marriage was Katherine Harkness, a daughter of the late Dr. Andrew Harkness, of Lancaster. The funeral service was held at his late residence on Tuesday, and interment was made in the family plot at Iroquois.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

A very large crowd attended the Memorial Service at Dunbar on Sunday afternoon, at the home of the late Ellery Merkley, who passed away December 30th, victim of diptheria.

The service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Hurst, of Elma. The hymns and text were all favourites of the deceased. The text was chosen from St. John, 14th chapter, 1st, 2nd and 3rd verses. A duet was beautifully sung by Miss Alice Beckstead and Miss Gladys Armstrong, ("There's No Disappointment in Heaven".

In that bright Eternal city,
Where no tears ere dim the eyes,
In that home of many mansions
We shall meet him bye and bye.

SMYTHE—WHITTAKER

A very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Durant, 135 Grenadier Road, Toronto, when Miss Irene Whittaker became the bride of Mr .Wm. Smythe. The bride was beautifully dressed in a long white taffeta dress trimmed with silver, with silver shoes and stockings to match. Her bridal veil came in cap effect over head and was caught at each side with orange blossoms.

The bridesmaid was Miss Marjory Slipp of Cardiff, Wales. Her dress was of peach taffeta in period fashion. Both the bride and bridesmaid carried nosegays of roses and lily-of-the-valley.

The groom was supported by Mr. Arden Whittaker, brother of the bride.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Hincks of High Park United Church. The wedding march was played by Mrs. Chas. Duke. She played all through the ceremony and during the signing of the register.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the archway being decorated with pink and white streamers with pink rosebuds. There were about twenty-five guests present, and Mrs. Durant received them in the drawing room, wearing pink georgette trimmed with black tulle, with corsage bouquet of orchids.

After the congratulations, the guests sat down to a daintily decorated table, and enjoyed the wedding supper. The bride's table was decorated with a three-storey wedding cake.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold compact and to the best man a silver cigarette lighter.

Mr. and Mrs. Smythe will reside in Toronto.

How to make Better Pastry

An expert says: "Use your favorite shortening. Mix it in thoroughly with Purity Flour, using a level tablespoon more of shortening but using two tablespoons less per cup of Purity than of ordinary pastry or soft wheat flour. Then add just enough water so that the dough will crumble together. When rolling out, sprinkle with a little flour to keep it dry.

A dough heavy with water will not flake up in the oven as too much moisture prevents quick action of the heat. The lively, almost crumbly, dough made with Purity Flour flakes up beautifully and makes the kind of pastry that "melts in your mouth."

Purity Flour Plain Pastry

2½ cups Purity Flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup shortening, ½ cup cold water. Mix flour and salt, cutting in the shortening until the mixture is like fine meal. Mix thoroughly with the water. Roll out thin, keeping it thoroughly dry. This will make crust for two pies. For extra rich pastry use half butter and half lard.

More Eggs when eggs are worth most

ANY hen will lay in the Spring and Summer, because she is able to pick up grubs and worms which contain the animal proteins necessary for forcing egg production. But in winter months you have to supply the hen with this protein in order to keep her laying.

You can do this—and do it economically—by feeding Monarch Laying Mash. This mash is made to produce the greatest number of eggs at lowest cost—and it does it! Many of the biggest poultrymen in the country have found Monarch Laying Mash a real profit maker. It gets more eggs when eggs are worth the most!

An increase of one egg per hen per month will more than pay the difference between an ordinary mash and Monarch Laying Mash—let us quote you prices.

INGREDIENTS—Cornmeal, Oatmeal, Wheat Bran, Wheat Shorts, Meat Meal, Fish Meal, Bone Meal, Alfalfa Meal, Calcium.

Special Six "400" Sedan

$ 1833.00

More Powerful, More Economical Motoring in 1929 — from the New NASH TWIN IGNITION Motor

HERE'S one sure way to make your motoring more delightful in 1929—drive a Nash "400", the car with the Twin-Ignition Motor!

More power . . . greater, smoother speed . . . remarkable economy of operation—these are new advantages now offered by Nash Twin-Ignition performance.

In the development of this remarkable new motor, Nash has combined three great principles of motor design—twin-ignition, high compression, and valve-in-head.

In the air, this type of motor is winning the honors. A twin-ignition, high compression, valve-in-head motor carried Lindbergh to Paris, Byrd over the Pole, Goebel to Hawaii.

Now, for the first time, Nash makes this more efficient, more economical motor design available to every motorist.

Ask your nearest Nash dealer to give you a Nash "400" to drive. Compare what we say about the Twin-Ignition motor, with what the Twin-Ignition motor says to you!

Cleaning Rayon

Rayon is a fabric made from a compound of wood pulp with various other vegetable substances, or left-over ends of cotton, which, by a chemical process, are transformed into long wiry fibers having a silky sheen. It is a practical fabric, and is being used extensively with great satisfaction as a substitute for real silk. It is peculiar in one respect, in that it becomes greatly weakened when wet; alkalis and heat also affect it just as they do silk. This does not mean that it should be classed as an extremely delicate or fragile material, but simply that special methods should be employed in laundering it.

There are so many different types of rayon fabrics that it is possible to answer the persistent question, "How should rayon be washed?" only by one general statement, and that is that all rayon fabrics are fine fabrics, and any washing treatment which can be used on fine silks may be used on rayons.

When to Wash—When to Cleanse

Rayon fabrics should be tested for color fastness before washing, just as are silks and wools. A safe test is to squeeze a sample, or a small portion cut from an inconspicuous part of a ready-made garment, in clear lukewarm water for five minutes, drying it and comparing it with the original material. If the colors do not run in plain lukewarm water, the material is safe with the necessary cleansing neutral soap. Rayons which fade in plain water should be dry-cleansed.

Shall rayon be soaked or scrubbed? The question is often asked, "How can you get the dirt and soil out of rayon if you don't soak or scrub it?" White rayon may be soaked, but colored ones are likely to become streaked or smudged if soaked even for a short time. Many colored rayons may be washed innumerable times with no perceptible fading which would run and streak if soaked even for five or ten minutes. One doesn't scrub and rub silks and wools—why do it with rayons? Simply dissolve enough neutral soap flakes in hot water so that the suds are lukewarm, that is, of a temperature between 95 and 110 degrees Fahrenheit. Put in the garments and wash them at once, squeezing the thick suds through and through the material. Put badly soiled things through several fresh suds, for dirty suds will not remove dirt.

Wash rayons frequently, or as soon as any kind of soil appears. The longer soiled rayon remains unwashed, the more difficult it is to wash it clean. Besides, the soil and stains tend to dull the colors and weaken the fibers. Washing will not injure it; neglecting to wash it may. Frequent washing preserves the bright new appearance and lengthens its useful life. It is a cleanly habit and a safe one to wash out rayon garments after each wearing. It takes but a moment to swish the dainty things around in a bowl of suds, and they dry very readily.

Rayons That Fade

The colors in rayon materials are not always fast, any more than colors are always fast in any other type of material. When, in the fast-to-color test it has been determined that a color will streak or run the only thing that can be done is to have it dry-cleaned, or take the same extreme precautions in washing that one would take in washing colored silks, namely, to wash each colored garment separately, as quickly as possible, in suds verging to cold. Do not soak. Dry quickly. Do not leave the article rolled up while damp. If these simple precautions are taken, even the colored rayon fabrics that are wont to fade, ordinarily launder very satisfactorily. Happily, too, the colors in rayon fabrics are usually rich and clear and, for the most part, fast to washing.

Nothing can be done to set unfast colors permanently. Soaking in water to which salt, vinegar, alum, etc., have been added is useless. It would cost the manufacturers but a negligible sum to employ any of these simple methods of making colored fabrics fast to washing, and they would have been taken advantage of long ago if colors could be set so cheaply and easily.

Rinsing and Wringing Rayons

Rinse thoroughly in three (never less than two) lukewarm rinse waters. The temptation to use cold rinse water should not be yielded to, as cold water does not remove the soap and loosened dirt efficiently. The soap holds the dirt and soil in solution, and the rinse water is intended to remove it. Complete removal is essential for fresh, clean-looking clothes. Squeeze out as much of the rinse water as possible in the hands. Never twist rayon or put it through the wringer. Roll it loosely between turkish towels and gently knead out the excess moisture.

Gently shake out the wrinkles and pull the articles into shape. Dry on dry towels on a flat surface, if possible in the fresh air. Do not dry near excessive heat, such as a radiator or register, or in the direct rays of the sun.

It is not good practice to use a water softener when washing rayons. It is difficult to know just when enough has been used, and an excess is sure to affect the colors, and sometimes harm the fibers. The safest and most economical way to soften the water is to use enough active, pure neutral soap to produce and maintain lasting suds after the clothes are all in. Heavy or very soiled garments take more soap.

With most rayon fabrics the best results are obtained in ironing by pressing them on the wrong side with a warm, not hot, iron, while the material is still quite damp. In the case of thin dress materials, the garments can generally be ironed at once. Heavier ones dry readily if shaken for a few minutes after taking them from the towels. Knit underwear rarely needs pressing, but if desired, it should be pressed on the wrong side.

Combinations of Materials

The safe rule to follow in laundering rayon which is combined with one or more other fabrics is to use the method which is best for the more delicate of the fibers. A material is only as strong as its most fragile thread, and if this fact is borne in mind, the tragedy of pulled or torn textiles will not be encountered. Cotton and rayon mixtures produce attractive and colorful fabrics at a moderate cost; their beauty can be preserved by frequent intelligent washing.

If handled with reasonable care, white rayons will stay sparkingly white throughout their lifetime. Keep them spotlessly clean. Washing does not yellow white rayons.

Knitted Rayon

Knitted rayon is a splendid, moderately priced substitute for real silk. Keep it fresh-looking by frequent washing, for stains, if allowed to remain, are difficult to remove.

Knitted rayon garments do not readily resume their original size if once stretched, so care should be used not to let the weight of wet garments pull the material out of shape. Sweaters and other similar garments should be measured before wetting, so that after washing they may be stretched and pulled to their original size and proportions, and pinned to the towels on a flat surface to dry.

Rayon Curtains

Different localities vary so greatly in respect to the dust and soot present in the air that it is impossible to give any set intervals at which curtains should be washed. The action of light and air at open windows tends to weakens the threads, especially if the curtains are exposed to them while soiled. The life of rayon curtains is lengthened considerably by frequent laundering. No special method is required, if the fact that they are fine fabrics is remembered, and they are laundered accordingly. Shake the curtains to remove the dust and do any required mending before submitting to water. It is wise to measure the curtains before washing so that they may be restored as nearly as possible to their original size. Pin thin rayon curtains to sheets on a flat surface to dry. The heavier ones may be hung on the line. In such cases, hang them straight and gently square the corners together so that the weight is evenly distributed. Avoid hanging them out on a windy day, for the slapping of the wind is likely to break the threads of the material.

Old Fish Trap Found

Honolulu.—The remnants of a fish trap built in 1350 by King Mailekukaki to supply food for his army and for the population of Oaku were unearthed recently during dredging operations in the Pearl Harbor channel.

Vast quantities of wood, torn loose from the sea bottom and brought to the surface by the dredge scoops, were identified by Honolulu experts as posts which were placed beneath the surface of the water more than 500 years ago. Old maps, handed down through generations, corroborated the location of the trap.

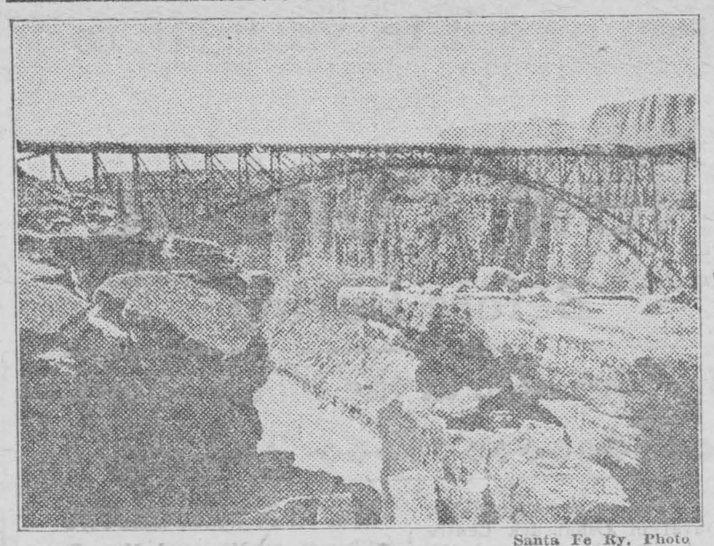

The trap was one of the largest and most important along the shoreline outside of th present naval base. It contained more than seventeen kinds of wood, most of which were brought to Oahu from the island of Hawaii. Some of the timbers in the walls were more than eighteen inches thick. They were sharpened and driven into the sand and loose coral. Cocoanut leaves, braided between the posts, made the whole enclosure fish tight. Most of the wood dislodged this week was found to be in an excellent state of preservation.

The fish were carried into the trap by the action of the tide and were segregated by an ingenious system of pockets, which singled out the nehu, mullet and other small varieties. Sharks and ulna went into other pens. Shadows cast upon the water were used to frighten the quarry into the jaws of the trap.

Arizona Completes the World's Highest Highway Bridge

World's Highest Highway Bridge—Arizona.

In the middle of March, 1928, a motor colossus on ten wheels, dragging behind it a sturdy trailer, roared smoothly into the Santa Fe freight yard at Flagstaff, Arizona; swallowed fifteen tons of structural steel, and then headed away into the northeast on the first of many journeys that were to mean much to travelers from every corner of the world.

The huge truck ended this first of four months' continuous journeys at a mushroom growth of white tents and frame buildings 130 miles from Flagstaff. A few yards away a dull-red chasm split the earth. At the bottom snarled a leaping chocolate river. Beyond rose the yellow and green tinted talus of the Vermillion Cliffs. Here in the Navajo Indian Country of northeastern Arizona, at the northern tip of the Painted Desert, and in a setting of amazing grandeur, was the one point in nearly 600 miles where engineers had decided that the greatest natural travel barrier on the continent could be bridged.

That barrier is the Colorado river proper, born deep in southeastern Utah, at the junction of the Green and the Grand, and flowing thence through Cataract, Glen, Marble and Grand Canyons—the most stupendous series of gorges on the globe. Until this year it has been unbridged for vehicles from Green River, Utah, to Topoc, 600 miles below on the western border of Arizona. There have been, and are, only a couple of vehicular ferries, and these uncertain at best, and often dangerous and abandoned.

It is seven miles below old Lee's Ferry that the new bridge, rightly to be called the Lee's Ferry Bridge, conquers the hidden river in the world's highest span. Beneath it, in Marble Canyon, the Colorado races through a rock slot with sheer limestone walls nearly 500 feet high—and only 585 feet from rim to rim. All through 1928 work on the bridge has continued.

This December the Lee's Ferry Bridge will be an accomplished fact, its 18-foot reinforced concrete roadway, with steel and concrete curbs, sweeping above the brown churn of the Colorado at a height of 465 feet.

On June 1st, 1929, Arizona local and state bodies, the National Park Service, the Indian Department and the Santa Fe Railway invite the world to a unique dedication encampment and celebration at the Marble Canyon site.

To engineers the Lee's Ferry Bridge is another milestone in the conquest of natural obstacles. To travelers it is the key to connected exploration of the hitherto divided portions of our wonder-filled Southwest. The manifold fascinations of the Spanish and Pueblo cultures in New Mexico; the Navajo and Hopi Country; the endless attractions of northern Arizona; the Painted Desert and the south rim of the Grand Canyon—all these will now be directly connected with the north rim of the great Canyon, the Kaibab Forest, and Bryce and Zion National Park.

Regular motor tours will be established next Spring by the Santa Fe and Fred Harvey from El Tovar Hotel at Grand Canyon.

Mexico to Spend 41 Million on New Highways

Program for 1929-'34 to Open Outlets for Important Producing Regions

Eight Cities To Be Linked

Mexico City.—The Mexican government will spend $41,000,000 in building new roads from this year to 1934, it is announced, according to "El Universal," by Sanchez Mejorada, Minister of Communications and Public Works. The roads will be among the most important in the country, linking the cities of Oaxaca, Puebla, Vera Cruz, Toluca, Guadalajara, Chiluahua, Ixmiquilpan and Linares.

The Ixmlquilpan-Linares highway will be the most costly in the system, as it is estimated that $7,500,000 will be needed for its construction. Other roads in the program include one from Ciudad Victoria to Guadalajara, crossing Mexico and costing $5,000,000; another from San Cristobal to Merida, traversing one of the most difficult regions of the republic, which will cost a like sum. Several routes of lesser importance are also to be built.

The statement says that $4,000,000 is to be spent this year; $6,000,000 next year; $7,000,00 in 1931; $7,500,000 in 1932; $8,000,000 and $8,500,000 in 1933 and 1934, respectively.

These highways will open up important producing regions and give other rich areas outlets. The government since 1925, when its road-building program was launched, has spent approximately $15,000,000 in the purchase of machinery and actual construction of highways.

The government plans to complete the Mexican section of the Pan-American Highway, from the United States border to the frontier of Guatemala, by 1934.

British Interest Centers Upon "Baby Airplane"

London—The "baby airplane," a Simmonds Cirrus Spartan, holder of the world's non-stop flight record for a light plane, has helped center aviation interest on these smaller craft.

The plane, carrying pilot and passenger, flew direct from London to Berlin, and then repeated the feat three days later, returning non-stop with the same crew from Berlin to London under six hours.

The London-Berlin flights were not undertaken as stunts. They are considered to represent the light airplane at its true commercial worth, capable of carrying, at a moment's notice, passenger, fifty pounds of luggage and a 20 per cent. reserve of fuel, for more than 600 miles at a speed exceeding 100 miles an hour under bad weather conditions.

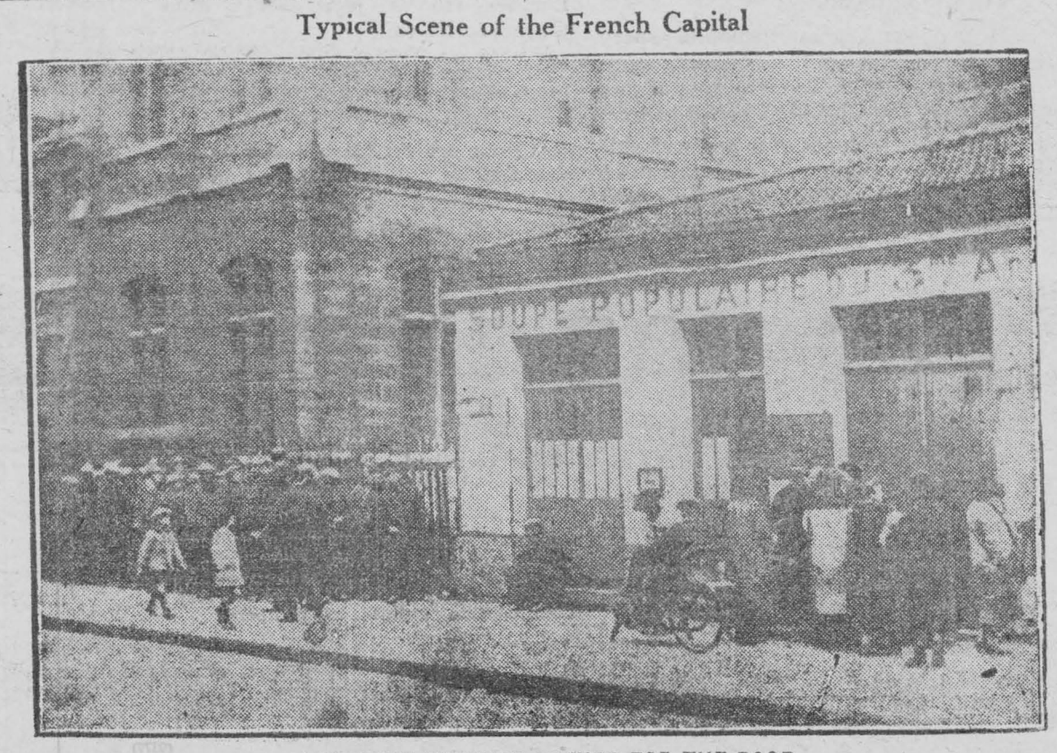

H. W. R. Bantine piloted the baby plane on the flight, and his passenger was Lietuenant Colonel L. A. Strange, director of an aircraft construction company, who made the trip to transact business in the German capital. The fuel cost a head for the one-way trip was about $15.

Sunday School Lesson

February 3. Lesson V—The Holy Scriptures—Psalm 19: 7-14; 2 Tim. 3: 14-17. Golden Text—Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law.—Psalm 119: 18.

ANALYSIS

I. THE PRAISE OF THE SCRIPTURES, Psalm 19: 7-14.

II. THE PROFITABLENESS OF SCRIPTURE, 2 Timothy 3: 14-17.

INTRODUCTION—It is difficult for us in this land and age of liberty to realize the privilege which is ours in having an open Bible in our own tongue. The Old Testament was written originally in Hebrew, and the New Testament in Greek, and for a long time it was a sealed book to the commo npeople. It was only after many a struggle and many a labor that men were able to get the Bible translated into English. We believe that in these two parts of Scripture, which go together, we have a faithful account of the gradual unfolding of the mind and purpose of God. We see how Christ is prefigured in the prophecies more and more clearly till at last he comes as the word of God in the flesh. We should therefore, learn to prize this book. Augustine said, "Scripture is a long letter sent to us from our heavenly home."

I. THE PRAISE OF THE SCRIPTURES, Psalm 19: 7-14.

Vs. 7-9. The writer of this Psalm had a very small Bible, only the Law, but he is so full of praise of this that he puts us to shame when we remember how greatly enriched our Bible is. There are three features to be noticed in these verses:

1. Each verse speaks of the law under a new name, by which the writer calls attention to the manysidedness of God's word. We should read Psalm 119 to see this same feature carried still farther. 2. Each verse selects out one particular quality of the law, such as perfection, reliability, righteousness, purity, cleanness, truthfulness. 3. Each verse points out some result which follows from the study of the law. He imparts restoration, wisdom, joy, clearness of vision, patience. No wonder he praises such a book!

V. 10. And he is, therefore, amply justified when he goes on to speak of its value in the highest terms; it is more valuable than fine gold, its message brings more sweetness than honey.

Vs. 11-13. The result of Bible study is that it drives the mind in upon itself and reveals the real nature of the heart. The dark places now become more manifest, and secret faults begin to show themselves. All of this impels the reader to pray to God for cleansing; and we have in v. 14 the very fine example of a prayer such as a sincere reader of God's word would have to make.

II. THE PROFITABLENESS OF SCRIPTURE, 2 Timothy 3: 14-17.

V. 14. This is one of the Pastoral Epistles, so called because they deal with the different problems which arise in the life of a minister or pastor. Among these duties an important place must be assigned to the right use of the Bible, which is the authority for our knowledge of the way of salvation. It contains a revelation of the mind of God. The true pastor, therefore, must rest his instruction on the book. Paul warns Timothy that he will meet with many kinds of evil, but if he is sure of his scriptural knowledge, there will be no danger of his failure. He reminds Timothy that he has been brought up in this way. Those here referred to are his mother and grandmother, see chap. 1: 5.

V. 15. The Holy Scriptures are the books of the Old Testament, for as yet the New Testament had not been included in the sacred list. The Christians made much use of the Old Testament, and read certain passages in their services. Paul often quotes the Law and the Prophets, and draws many lessons from these scriptures. At a later time the word scripture was applied to the New Testament, and now "scriptures" means our Bible. The Jews were taught to study the scriptures from an early age. The regulation was that a child should begin to learn the law by heart when five years old. Paul says that these scriptures make men wise unto salvation, by which he may mean that they predict the coming of Christ, and prepare the way for the gospel to be preached. Jesus also had said that the scriptures testified of himself. But Paul is careful to add that it is not the mere reading that saves. The book is not a fetish. It is faith which is quickened by the reading of the Bible. The scriptures bring us to Christ who saves.

V. 16. These scriptures are here said to be inspired, that is, thep are filled with the spirit of God, and become the living oracles of God. See Acts 7: 38. We may compare the words of 2 Peter 1: 21, "Holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." Paul is thus certain that the truths of the Old Testament are not mere human wisdom, but they are the expression of the mind and will of God. The church has always accepted this position for the New and Old alike. This passage has been summed up in the following words, "the Holy Scripture teaches the ignorant, convicts the evil and prejudiced, corrects the fallen and erring, and trains in righteousness all men."

V. 17. The study of the Bible brings such rich results, that if one has a well-disposed mind he will be so strengthened by these inspired words, that he will be made perfectly fit to undertake all kinds of Christian work.

The writing of history is now regarded as genteel employment for the man of comfortable means who has retired from business.—Philip Guedalla.

Samoan King Finds He Can't Defy Laws And Escape Penalty

Tamases Steps Down From Throne for Six Months in New Zealand Prison

A king in British Samoa learns that the formula "the king can do no wrong" does not obtain in the Pacific Isles. Tamases, late head of Samoan royalty, drew the wrath of the British authorities and has been forced to step down from his native throne into a New Zealand prison for six months.

Unrest has prevailed in Samoa for a year or two. The natives, famous for their happiness and hospitality, now andthen resort to noisy demonstraotins when they object to white men's laws.

Samoans who have been untouched by modern civilization are as scarce in the Pacific islands as uncivilized Indians in Canada, the Natonal Geographic Society reports. Now and then a veteran of threescore and ten is encountered in the forests of the interior. He carries an eight-foot bow a supply of barbed arrows and a spear, all of which give him a vicious appearance; but the first thing he is likely to do when you meet him is to invite you into his hut, a large single-roomed oval structure of thatched leaves, branches and sugarcane stalks.

His wife (he has only one) is as gracious and hospitable as a native could be expected to be; but the village Taupo, or mistress of ceremonies, is usually the visitor's chief human attraction. She is the village beauty, attended by a bevy of chestnut "Venuses of the Tropics." When distinguished visitors enter the village the Taupo and her feminine aids lead the dance and other entertainment for the guests.

Fortunately, Miss Samoa lives near the equator, for her clothes consist of a woven grass dress draped from her hips to her feet. The upper portion of her body, if covered at all, is draped with garlands of beads. Her bare feet and legs never felt shoes and silk stockings. Hats are never worn by the women folks except on festive occasions. Then they are fantastic groups of feathers, flowers and metal disks.

Face-powder manufacturers have not yet broken into the boudoir of Miss Samoa. The shinier the belle's nose the more she likes it. If the natural oil of the skin does not make her features glisten in the tropical Samoan sunlight, she applies oil and grease until she achieves the desired luster. One of her beauty treatments is the bleaching of her beautiful black hair to a muddy red with lime. If there is no lime, she daubs her hair with red clay.

Difficulties to Contend With

In our efforts to control the ravages of cancer, we are meeting with similar difficulties to those with which we were confronted fifty years ago when the campaign was started against tuberculosis. We then found the idea firmly fixed in the minds of the people that tuberculosis was hereditary and that it was incurable.

We were able to demonstrate, however, that tuberculosis was not hereditary; that it was not incurable, but, on the contrary, the majority of cases could be cured if diagnosed and treated early enough.

Now we are having similar difficulties in regard to cancer. If people think they have cancer, they hesitate in going to their physician lest he tell them that is cancer, and their impression is that cancer is incurable.

They also have the idea that it is hereditary, that is, that it is transmitted from parent to child.

We are now able to convince them that cancer is not incurable, but that the only safety, as with tuberculosis, lies in early diagnosis and early treatment. If possible treatment should be secured in the pre-cancer stage, that is, by the removal of any abnormal condition that would be likely to develop into cancer.

If you have any suspicion of cancer, do not fail to promptly consult your physician.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS USE NO OTHER MEDICINE

Baby's Own Tablets Are the Ideal Remedy for Babies and Young Children

Canadian mothers are noted for the care they give their little ones—the health of the baby is most jealously guarded and the mother is always on the lookout for a remedy which is efficient and at the same time absolutely safe. Thousands of mothers have found such a remedy in Baby's Own Tablets and many of them use nothing else for the ailments of their little ones. Among them is Mrs. Howard King, of Truro, N.S., who says:—"I can strongly recommend Baby's Own Tablets to mothers of young children as I know of nothing to equal them for little ones."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

It Didn't Pay

There was once a goat herd that contained two of the most stubborn goats that there ever were. One day all the goats were playing and frisking about on the mountain side when these two goats met on a narrow tree which had fallen across a deep chasm. The tree was so narrow that they could not possibly pass each other.

Each was too stubborn to turn back.

"I will not move for you," said the first goat. "Get out of the way if you do not want to be dashed to pieces."

"Not at all," said the second. "It is your place to back up. If you do not back up I shall push you off."

Each stubbornly pushed ahead until they met horn to horn right in the middle of the log. Here each angrily pushed against the other and they were both knocked off and fell to their death in the deep chasm below.

An old goat who had looked on at this needless disaster sighed: It is better to yield than to come to disaster through stubbornness.

Quite in contrast with them was the tall, thin man hunched over the wheel of an outlandish contraption that he called an automobile. But people from the Little Washoe country and the valleys north of the Humboldt gathered to do honor to their murdered leader.

When you see smoke rolling out the windows of a modern home these days it might be a female bridge party instead of the house on fire.

Lead Production in Canada

Much the greater part of the lead produced in Canada comes from the refinery at Tadanac, British Columbia, which treats lead concentrates from the Sullivan lead-zinc mine at Kimberley. The output of this mine far exceeds that of all other Canadian lead mines put together. There is also a considerable production from numerous silver-lead and silver-lead-zinc mines in the Kootenay districts and other parts of British Columbia. The Yukon output is silver-lead ore from the Mayo district; that of Ontario is derived from galena at the Galetta mine in Carleton county; and Quebec's output is lead concentrates from the Notre-Dame-des-Anges lead-zinc mine.

Good Advice From One Who Had Suffered Much

Discomfort after eating, gas pains in the intestinal tract, pains around the heart, sour rising in the throat called heartburn, are common symptoms of dyspepsia. It is a condition often neglected until it has done permanent harm, yet the treatment is simple. The great contributing cause to this trouble is thin blood. Good blood and plenty of it is required by the stomach to function properly. If the blood is thin the stomach becomes sluggish, food lies undigested, gas forms causing pains, often around the heart. Instead of getting nourishment from the blood the system gets poison. The proper treatment is to enrich the blood, and there is no other medicine can do this as promptly or as effectively as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The sole mission of these pills is to make new, rich, red blood, which reaches every organ and nerve in the body, and thus not only banishes indigestion and dyspepsia, but also all other troubles having their origin in weak, watery blood.

The splendid results following the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is shown by the case of Mrs. Lucy A. Cushing, a former resident of Kempt, N.S., but now living with her son at West Bethel, Me. Mrs. Cushing says: "I have no hesitation in strongly recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. Always after eating I suffered from pains in my stomach and other distressing symptoms that accompany this ailment. I tried different doctors while residing at my old home and also at West Bethel, but without getting relief. I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I did so and I must say that I am feeling very grateful ever since to the good friend who gave me the advice. I soon found the pills helping me and by the time I had taken nine or ten boxes I was completely restored to good health. Though I am now in my 76th year I am feeling as well and smart as I did at 35, and am enjoying life once more."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Kick Out the 'Imp.'

Sir Robert Baden-Powell recently gave the British Boy Scouts some sound advice that may well be taken to heart wherever the movement has been established. "If you're up against a hard job that seems impossible," he said, "kick out the 'imp' and work heartily and cheerily You know you're going to do something good for other people. Help in your own way to bring about peace and prosperity in the world. If you do your work, you get to like it. It makes you happy. Moreover, it is a good education."

To "kick out the 'imp'" is an excellent idea, which might be adopted by grown-up people as well as boys. Many modern movements that are founded upon perfectly sound ideas fail from lack of determination upon the part of those who started them In Montreal we have had some notable examples of this, among them the failure to enforce a test examination for all applicants for automobile driving licenses; the abandonment of the proposal to establish an automatic traffic control system throughout the city; the collapse of the plan to erect a civic hall for music; and the city's lack of any organized town-planning scheme to govern future buildings here.

If the "imp" had been kicked out by those who were the first to advance and to foster these ideas, we should be much more advanced in municipal administration than we are to-day.—Montreal Star.

Indigestion

What most people call indigestion is usually excess acid in the stomach. The food has soured. The instant remedy in an alkali which neutralizes acids. But don't use crude helps. Use what your doctor would advise.

The best help is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. For the 50 years since its invention it has remained standard with physicians. You will find nothing else so quick in its effect, so harmless, so efficient.

One tasteless spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in acid. The results are immediate, with no bad after effects. Once you learn this fact you will never deal with excess acid in the crude ways. Go learn—now—why this method is supreme.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Automobile insurance premium rates are to be increased sharply—as much as 50 p.c. for personal liability and as much as 25 per cent. for collision, following a meeting of the Canadian Automobile Insurance Underwriters Association Wednesday. The increase will be graded to differentiate between urban and rural areas. The meeting took place in the Northern Ontario Building, 330 Bay St., Toronto. It was stated that the grounds on which the increased rates would be put into effect were that the business under present conditions was unprofitable and that Canadian rates are lower than those prevailing in the United States.

Floyd Graham, a young man of Hurlburt, today is alive and well, although his car was struck by the International Limited at the Canadian National Railways crossing about a mile east of Iroquois. Graham had slowed down to allow a west-bound freight to pass, and failed to notice the eastbound flyer. His machine was thrown back against a fence and badly wrecked. Graham was not injured in any way.

Provincial Bailiff Ryan, of Toronto, was in Cornwall on Tuesday, and relieved Gaoler Ault of fourteen of his boarders, who were taken to the provincial institutions to finish their terms.

Mr. Larry Cook, mechanic in the employ of the McAuly Garage, at Spencerville, had a narrow escape from asphyxiation last week, when the fumes of a gasoline engine left running behind closed doors overcame him. It was nearly noon when the mechanic went upstairs to ecure a spare part and did not return. When found, he was lying on the floor of the upper storeroom, and had it not been for the early discovery of the unconscious man, he would have passed from unconsciousness to death.

On Wednesday last, says the Kemptville Advance, E. E. Smith, who lives on the town line of Mountain and South Gower townships, found a doe caught by a hind leg in the fence on his farm. On releasing it, he found it badly injured, and took it to his barn, and next day discovered the hip of the animal had been fractured. On communicating the facts to the game warden, he was advised to kill it. When dressing the carcass the hip was found to have been badly broken, and the animal would doubtless have died a lingering death if it had not been liberated. From marks it had made in the snow, Mr. Smith is of the opinion that the deer had become entangled in the fence the night previous.

OVER 300 DEER, DUNDAS COUNTY REPORT STATES

Should the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries take action upon a petition to be presented to it by the Council of the United Counties of Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry, shooting of deer in the three counties will be prohibited for at least two years.

Statements that there are some 300 deer at large in the northern townships of Dundas county were made at the January Session of the Counties Council by Reeve J. E. Crowder of Mountain township. Reeve Crowder declared that he had been requested by many ratepayers in Mountain township to urge the Counties Council to petition the government for the protection of these deer. He moved a resolution calling for the prohibition of the killing of deer, moose or cariboo in the county of Dundas, pointing out that such regulations were already in effect in Renfrew and Carleton Counties.

Reeve Vincent McDonald felt that it would be a capital idea to extend the protection of deer to the counties of Stormont and Glengarry as well, although he knew of no deer within the limits of Stormont.

A petition prepared by the Game Warden of the district was produced by Deputy Reeve Robert Bryan of Mountain township, who supported Reeve Crowder in urging protection for deer. He pointed out that the presence of deer in Winchester and Mountain townships had not been generally known until a Miss Robinson made survey and announced an estimate that 200 to 300 deer are inhabiting the bush country in northern Dundas County. Deputy Reeve Bryon added that fifteen deer were taken out of Mountain township in 1928 by hunters and he felt that the animals should be protected for a couple of years at least.

The Council approved a resolution to the effect that the Department of Game and Fisheries be petitioned to prohibit the shooting of deer, cariboo or moose in the United Counties for two years, commencing November 1, 1929.—Cornwall Freeholder.

The Bell Telephone Company and its financial policy

IF given authority by parliament, the Bell Telephone Company will issue new shares of stock over a period of years, at intervals and in amounts depending on the expansion required to serve public demand.

The new shares will be offered for purchase by shareholders and the price will depend on the management's judgment of conditions.

This method is the exact procedure by which the company has built the present telephone system in Ontario and Quebec.

In forty-eight years the telephone company has neither suggested nor received a government subsidy.

In forty-eight years it has never split its stock, nor issued shares that were not fully paid for at par or more.

In forty-eight years it has never been exploited for the benefit of either individuals or groups, although it is now one of the largest institutions in the country.

has met double obligation

IN choosing and following this financial policy the management of the company has had constantly in mind the double obligation of those who operate a public utility.

There is, first, the obligation to the users of the telephone system to give them proper service at lowest possible cost. And, secondly, there is the obligation to the owners to protect their property and pay them a fair return on the money they advance to build the system.

These two obligations have been scrupulously fulfilled.

Service has been given by steadily extending the system from a few hundred telephones in 1880 to over 700,000 now in use. The company is spending over $27,000,000 this year to extend and improve the system further and has made plans to spend over $120,000,000 in the next five years.

And this service has been given at low cost. The rates paid by telephone subscribers in Ontario and Quebec are the lowest in the world for comparable service. The Board of Railway Commissioners has officially acknowledged that they are more reasonable than other rates in Canada.

The 15,300 owners of the system receive a fair return, but not more than a fair return. The company's policy has handed out no "melons" nor extra dividends.

A test of this is the actual experience of a shareholder who bought Bell Telephone stock on the market fifteen years ago at $145 and has since taken advantage of every opportunity to buy new shares as they have been offered.

His annual return today, on the money he has paid for his shares, is less than seven per cent. To be exact it is 6.9 per cent.

in the national interest

THE management does not favor any change in its policy, because:

1. the record of the company's policy in efficiently fulfilling the obligations to both users and owners justifies its continuance.
2. if, however, the financial policy of public utility companies is to be fixed by parliament it should be made applicable to all such companies rather than to single out one company which does not deserve special restrictions.
3. a change in policy is not in the national interest; it means that Canadian investors will be attracted to put their money into numerous American utility companies with which the telephone company is now competing for new capital and where it is the recognized practice to offer new shares to stockholders.

The present policy of the company safeguards future expansion of the telephone system by retaining support of reliable investors, and promotes the national interest of Canadians in Canadian development.
