HENRY'S Shorthand School Ottawa, Ont.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "THE SCHOOL OF HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specially say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

THANK-OFFERING AT DUNBAR

The annual Thank-offering of the W.M.S. of Dunbar Presbyterian church will be held in the church on Sunday, Sept. 30th, at 7.30 p.m. Mr. W. M. Orok, of Prescott, will address the meeting.

Chesterville Girl Honored

Last Wednesday evening the Sunday School hall of the United church was the scene of a bright function when the many friends in the choir, the Young People's Society and the Mission Circle gathered to do honor to one of their most popular members in the person of Miss Rae Dixon, who will leave in a few days to enter Queen's University, at Kingston. After a complimentary address by Rev. R. E. Newman, in which he expressed the regret of those present at losing the association of Miss Dixon in the various activities of the church, was coupled the pride and joy in knowing that she was taking the course to better fit her to enter into the bigger things of life in the years to come. At the proper moment Miss Anna Smith and Miss Lillian Tate made the presentation of a boudoir clock and two silver vases, as slight tokens of remembrance of old friends who would always be glad to welcome back and to watch her course through the halls of learning.

Refreshments were served to more than three score present and an hour was spent in games and music.

Five Year Term For Abetting Suicide

Robert John Childs was found guilty by a jury at Woodstock, Ont., late yesterday afternoon on a charge of aiding and abetting a suicide. Mr. Justice Fisher immediately sentenced him to five years in Portsmouth penitentiary.

The case, which had been in progress there for two days, was completed in the afternoon and the jury took but 45 minutes to reach a verdict.

The charge against Childs grew out of the death on August 20 of his sweetheart, Miss Gertrude Yelland, of Ingersoll, Ont. The girl succumbed in the back seat of Child's automobile while the car was parked on a lonely road in Oxford County. Death was caused by chloroform.

Childs returned to his home in Woodstock the following morning with the body of the girl and in a statement to police authorities told of a suicide pact.

Evidence adduced at the trial detailed the incidents surrounding the death of the girl The defense produced testimony intended to prove that the accused was suffering from depressive insanity at the time.

Professor Dr. Goldwyn Howland, Toronto University, took the stand just before the case for the defense was concluded and blamed the actions of the accused on love.

"Being violently in love for a whole year is a real strain," he told the jury.

Broder Memorial Unveiled

A monument erected in honor of the Hon. Andrew Broder, who represented the constituency of Dundas for many years in the Provincial Legislature and the Dominion Parliament was unveiled in Fairview cemetery, Morrisburg, Sunday afternoon.

The monument, of Stanstead granite, was erected through the efforts of friends, representative of every party and creed. It bears the simple inscription, "The Honorable Andrew Broder, 1844-1918.

Several thousand persons gathered for the ceremony. G. H. Challies, Morrisburg, chairman of the committee which supervised the erection of the monument, presided and speakers included parliamentary representatives of adjoining ridings. Hon. Dr. W. J. Roche, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, drew a parallel between the life of Mr. Broder and Abraham Lincoln. Both, he said, came from the common people and both were strong in mental and oral qualities. Both expressed a keen sense of humor, exhibited a lofty patriotism and made use of simple and homely language.

Speaking as an old friend and neighbor of Mr. Broder, Senator, the Rt. Hon. George P. Graham declared Mr. Broder's two strong points had been his humor and his rugged honesty. All through his public life he had conducted himself as a friend and a man.

William Eager, Morrisburg, unveiled the monument and the Ven. Archdeacon Carson, Morrisburg, pronounced the dedication. Tributes were read from a large number of public men including those from Sir Robert Borden, George Perley, Sir Herbert Ames, Sir Georgee Foster, Hon. Jas. A. Robb, Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Hon. E. D. Smith, Hon. Martin Burrill, Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. W. F. Nickle.

Shower at Berwick For Popular Bride-Elect

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. A. D. McMillan on Friday evening, Sept. 14th, when Mrs. Hugh McMillan, Mrs. Alex. Smith and Mrs. John Bogart entertained at a most delightful shower in honor of Miss Marjory MacMillan, bride-elect of this month. The popularity of Miss MacMillan was testified to by the beautiful gifts received. The house was most tastefully decorated for the occasion, delicious refreshments were served and the following address was read by Mrs. Hugh W. McMillan.

Dear Marjory,—It is with a good deal of pleasure that we, your friends and neighbors, are gathered here this evening. We have known you during the years you have lived with us and have learned to love and admire your many sterling qualities. As a neighbor you have always been willing and ready to help all and any, and often in time of sickness and sorrow you have made it easier by your presence and kind sympathy. At our social gatherings you have always been a great aid and in fact always interested in anything that was for the good of the community. It is with feelings of regret that we learn of your taking your departure, but we know that what is our loss is the other community's gain. We hope you will continue to be a help to them as you have been to us.

Now, as a token of esteem and friendship, we ask you to accept these gifts, and we hope that they may prove useful to you and help you to remember us. We congratulate you on your approaching marriage and wish you all the joy and prosperity that you could wish for yourself.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors: Mrs. Hugh W. McMillan Mrs. Alex. Smith, Mrs. John Bogart.

Morewood United Church

Attendance at Church this month has been most encouraging. A large congregation was present Sept. 9th for the Flower Service. The pulpit platform was made rich with floral beauty and in front of the pulpit stood a real cross four feet high and built of asters, etc. Fifty children marched down the aisle to the music of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," at the opening of the service, each bearing a little bunch of sweet peas for bouquets for the sick and lonely. Another large congregation was present last Sunday when forty-seven boys and girls were enrolled in a Church Attendance League, each receiving a button bearing the letters "C.A." Each boy or girl who attends service fourteen Sundays before the New Year is to receive a certificate printed in colors on New Years Sunday, 1929.

Next Sunday there will be administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper at the morning service. In preparation for this a service will be held on Friday night this week when Rev. J. A. Waddell, of Winchester, will give the address.

Our church was represented at the County S. S. Convention, Inkerman, this week by Mrs. A. B. Allison, Mrs. Ab. Dillabough, Mr. Walter Stewart and Rev. R. P. Stafford.

Sad Trail Left By Florida Storm

Out of the saw grass regions of Lake Okeechobee where the hurricane struck several Florida communities, and brought death or injury to an estimated several hundred, come stories of suffering, grief, damage and desolation, the greatest ever experienced in that section.

The hurricane Sunday night whipped across towns and settlements on the south-eastern end of the 40-mile long Lake Okeechobee and relief workers who battled their way into West Palm Beach over water-covered roads gave graphic accounts of the storm's fury.

Thumped by the 125-mile wind, a diken ear Pahokee crumbled and citizens of that area had to battle flood their wrecked homes and debris from their wreckedh omes and debris which littered a large section.

National Guard officers who were on patrol there told him they had located 200 additional bodies but had not yet removed them. He said conditions there were so "horrible as to be beyond description."

Relief workers estimated the homeless in the area at 8,000.

Girl's Body Found In Canal At Moulinette

Mystery still surrounds the identity of the body of a young woman about 20 years of age found floating in the old Cornwall Canal at Moulinette. It was at first thought the body was that of Maud Nesselrodt, of Williamsburg, Virginia, who disappeared from Canton, N.Y., on July 23, last, but relatives of the missing girl failed to identify it.

Body in Morgue.

The body was found by Arnold Annable of that village and was taken to Bert Jardine's morgue in Cornwall. Town and Provincial police were informed and as they had snapshots and descriptions of a girl named Maud Nesselrodt, of Williamsburg, Virginia, who disappeared suddenly from Canton, N.Y., on July 23, last, it was surmised that the body found was that of Miss Nesselrodt, as no person had been reported missing thereabouts.

Word was sent to Sheriff Shaver, of Canton, N.Y., and he communicated with relatives of the girl at Williamsburg, and Monday L. F. Nesselrodt, of Williamsburg, arrived in Cornwall with Sheriff Shaver in the hope of identifying the body. But Mr. Nesselrodt, who is an uncle of the missing girl, could not identify the body as that of his niece, as the drowned girl wore a brown dress and Miss Nesselrodt was wearing a tan sport suit when she left Canton nearly two months ago.

Disappearane Unsolved.

He left the morgue satified that the disapearance of his niece was yet unsolved. Maude Nesselrodt was an orphan, her mother having died when she was two years old and her father passed away two years ago in Jacksonville, Florida. She and other members of the family were brought up by the uncle who was in Cornwall and his wife. F. L. Nesselrodt's daughter is the wife of Professor M. W. Thomas, who was a teacher during the summer course at St. Lawrence University at Canton, N.Y., and Maude Nesselrodt accompanied Professor and Mrs. Thomas to Canton and was taking a course in English when suddenly disappeared on July 23 leaving a note in her room.

Professor Thomas made a diligent search for her and she was traced through several places in New York State and finally to Cornwall, it being learned that she had been rowed across the river by an Indian boy from St. Regis. Professor Thomas and Under Sheriff Martin went to Cornwall and left snapshots and a description of the girl with the town and provincial police, but no trace was learned of her there.

Was Given Lift.

Later it was ascertained that a strange girl had been given a lift by W. H. Wells of Cardinal, from Morrisburg to Prescott, but from that time nothing had been heard of Miss Nesselrodt, and when the body was found in the canal at Moulinette the authorities connected the two cases and sent word to the relatives of the missing girl. Now that an uncle of the Virginia girl reruses to identify the body as that of his niece, the mystery resolves into another one of who the drowned girl really is.

Dr. C. J. Hamilton, coroner, has issued an order for her burial and the body will be interred in Cornwall as an unknown. A rumor was in circulation that a girl was missing from Ottawa. The provincial police investigated and were informed that no girl answering the description of the girl lying drowned in Cornwall was missing from the Capital.

Ay Meyer of Madison, Wis., was arrested for carrying a cat to a height of 1,500 feet in an airplane and dropping it to see if it would alight on its feet and live. It didnt.

C. D. Griffith chose a poor place for a forced airplane landing on Long Island. He came down in a pasture occupied by a savage bull and was rescued with difficulty by a farm hand after several minutes spent in dodging the animal.

This years cranberry crop in the United States is estimated at 521,000 barrels, of which Massachusetts will produce about 325,000. Now someone may figure out how many turkeys will be required to go with the cranberries.

CAPTURE MAIL ROBBER WILL BE REWARDED

The Cabinet last week decided to recognize in tangible manner the conluct of Walter and Houghton Laird and Harold J. Rowland, whose prompt pursuit on August 18 led to the capture of the man Burowski, now held in connection with the robbery of the mail car on the C.P.R. express, between Sudbury and Parry Sound. The Lairds, unarmed, grappled with the suspect, who was using a .45 calibre revolver, and Walter succeeded in laying him out, holding the alleged bandit's pistol arm while the weapon was being discharged, until the revolver finally jammed. A gratuity of $500 will be paid Walter Laird, who was wounded. His brother is to receive $350, and Rowland, driver of the pursuit car, gets $200. The Laird boys are to be presented with medals at Parry Sound Fair.

BROKEN BONES REWARD FOR "FOOLISH LAW"

Hon. John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, who had a few ribs cracked in a motor accident a few weeks ago, was thereby subject to the chastisement of Providence, on account of his Noxious Weeds Act, in the opinion of a resident of Sprucedale, Parry Sound Disrict. In a letter to the Minister, Mr. Capel B. St. George states that while tne Scripture requires him to be subject to every ordinance of man, yet he cannot obey "this fool law," and therefore intends to sell his farm as soon as possible.

"I have heard," he writes, "that you have had some bones broken. In the Summer of 1883 I spent some time at Southern. near London, where there is a church of 'The Peculiar People.' They refuse medical help in sickness and rely wholly on the Lord to cure in answer to prayer. They told me that in over 50 years only one of their people had a bone broken, and he was a man who had ceased to live a righteous life. I tell you the story as I heard it. You can apply it.

"Another Scripture says, 'He that is glad at calamity shall not go unpunished,' so to escape punishment I must not be glad at your calamity, and I confess it is not easy to be glad, for I felt like taking you over my knees and giving you a good old-fashioned slipper spanking when I read that food Weed Act you got passed this year. Laws like that, that cannot be obeyed, create Bolshevism. There are thousands of farms that it is an absolute impossibility to cut all the weeds on. There are places on roads here where to do it a man would have to get down on his knees with a pair of scissors, and do you think anyone is going to do that? A farmer having about 30 acres cleared, the rest being burnt bush, land just full of weeds, how is he to get them out? It is astonishing that any sane man, if he knew anything of the conditions, could vote for such an Act. One effect will be to drive the people off the land. Evidently the Lord sees with me and has spanked you."

Talent For Music

Through tests devised by psychologists, many interesting and useful facts have been discovered concerning the aptitude of a child for various pursuits. If their information developed by these tests be practically applied, much time otherwise devoted to training for activities which the child is naturally unsuited may be saved.

It is now possible, according to Prof. Seashore of Iowa University, to positively determine the musical talent possessed by any child, even before he begins the study of music. The sense of pitch, time, consonance, intensity and others may each be determined with mathematical accuracy.

Practical experiments have demonstrated that a person may have a high sense of pitch, with a poor sense of time, and so on. Only when all the elments of the musical mind are acute do we find real talent. When these purely musical elements are combined with a high general intelligence the foundation for an exceptional musician is found.

Contrary to the general belief, aptitude for music cannot be developed by training. It must be inborn. A child with a poor sense of pitch at the age of eight will have a poor sense of pitch all his life, no matter how much he may study and practice. The same is true of the sense of time and the rest. Training only develops that which is possessed at birth. A realization of these facts would save much useless torture for music students and those who must listen to them, if facilities for making the tests were available.

Prof. Seashore declares that no attempt should be made to force an unmusical child to learn music, as the result must be disappointing to all concerned. He says it is a tragedy to drive an unmusical boy to practice several hours a day on a violin, "while at the same time you may be ruining a perfectly good mechanic, or architect, or second baseman."

From Farm to Castle

Calgary Herald—Walter C. Little, son of George Little of High River, and nephew of Professor W. L. Carlyle, manager of the Prince of Wales' ranch, has arrived in Canada after a 10 months' visit with the Dean of Windsor at Windsor Catle.

The circumstances of the visit were unique. A year ago when Dr. Bailie, Dean of Windsor, was in Edmonton with the Westminster choir, he suggested that the university send over as his guests two of its most receptive and outstanding young men to spend a year with him. He offered to bring them in touch with the cultural life of England as well as advance them in their special lines. The selection was left to President H. M. Tory, who chose Louis Hyndman, graduate L. L. B., and Walter Little, third year agricultural student. Mr. Hyndman returned to Canada after two months to accept an opening in a law office, and Walter Little was left, as he says himself, "to fly Alberta's colors alone," under most breath-taking surroundings.

On the King's Farms.

The sudden transition from the simplicities of farm and provincial university life to the atmosphere of Windsor Castle was more like a fairy tale than reality.

As a guest of the Dean he met constantly world-known writers, musicians, painters and statesmen from all parts of the Europe, as well as titled people of every rank and nation. It was a formidable adventure for a boy of 20, but though he "felt dumb," he at least listened. In his own agricultural lines he was assisted by Mr. Connacher, manager of the King's farms, and stayed some time with Sir Christopher Turner, head of the co-operative farming in England. He was also under the kindly care of Sir Walter Peacock and the agricultural correspondent of the London Times.

He was the guest of Walter Biggar, who for years has been the judge of fat cattle at the international stock show in Chicago. He attended all the big stock shows of England and Scotland.

Guest of Danish Baron.

He spent the lambing season on a sheep farm in the Cheviot Hills with Captain Scott, and was also here entertained by the Earl of Dalkeith. The Blackface sheep and Shorthorn herds of Scotland interested him greatly. Some time also was spent at Cambridge and Oxford attending lectures and studying the agricultural departments, which are much similar to those in our universities. As a climax the Dean arranged that he should spend some time in Denmark, staying with Baron Rosencranz, one of the foremost men in Denmark. Through the baron he was brought into touch with the great co-operative machinery of that country. He found the Danish extremely prosperous with everything organized co-operatively—credit, farming supplies, marketing and exporting. The farms, he said, are the last word in scientific modern farming.

Social Life.

From a recreative and social standpoint, there were opportunities probably never before accorded a young Canadian under similar circumstances. He played golf on the King's private golf course, was initiated into the thrills and spills of fox-hunting, and witnessed functions from the seclusion of Queen Victoria's box, at which no other commoner was present. He attended the Ascot races with admission to the Royal enclosure. These and an infinity of other social functions presented bewildering complications from a sartorial standpoint. But the Dean's magic wand was equal to every occasion. And as for proof that the practical, commonplace life of farming in Alberta still remains uppermost Mr. Little came home on a cattle boat, where he assisted Mr Yule, son-in-law of Prof. Carlyle, in bringing over thoroughbred stock f Alberta ranches.

(Mrs. W. H. Casselman and Mrs W. A. McElroy, of Chesterville, are aunts of Walter Little referred to above.)

BERWICK WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Berwick Branch of the Women's Institute was held in the Township Hall on the evening of Sept. 13th with a large attendance of members and visitors.

The committee in charge of the September meeting, Mrs. A. Henry. Mrs. R. Meldrum and Mrs. C. Thompson, decided to hold a social evening everyone to attend.

A splendid programme was enjoyed by all present. We also had with us two very prominent men, who addressed the meeting, in the persons of Mr. Arnold Smith M.P., and Mr. D A. McNaughton M.P. They both spoke of the good work carried on by the Institutes, and in concluding his address, Mr. Smith presented the Institute with three German Army Guns as souvenirs of the World War

The meeting cosed by singing the National Anthem after which ice cream and cake were served by the ladies in charge, assisted by other members of the Institute.

Cornwall Shocked By Double Tragedy

Two baby boys, one 17 months and one 4 months old, are dead, and their mother, Mrs. Napoleon Lagreois, aged 25 years, 8 East Prince Arthur street, north, of East Cornwall, is near death from the effects of drinking lye, which police believe she swallowed after drowning the children Monday. Mrs. Lagreois is under guard in the Hotel Dieu Hospital and a charge of murder will be laid against her the authorities say.

When Napoleon Lagreois returned to his home from his work in the Dundas cotton mill, about 5.30 o'clock Monday afternoon, he found his wife, Delina, lying across the bed writhing in pain, while at the foot of the bed were his two children, Romeo and Leo, aged 17 months and four months respectively, the children having been drowned by the mother, who then tried to commit suicide by drinking lye, police declare.

Taken to Hospital

The distracted husband summoned Dr. Hurteau, who did all he could for the mother, and had her removed to the Hotel Dieu Hospital. Provincial Constable Wilfrid L. Bertrand, who was notified and visited the home, from a careful examination of the premises came to the conclusion the mother had drowned her children in the toilet room, as the floor was wet with water. This is the only place in the home the deed could have been committed in.

So far as the officer could discover, Mrs. Lagreois evidently carried the children to the bed and took a dose of lye in an effort to end her own life, as a can of lye and a cup, which had contained the poison, were found in the kitchen under a box.

Mother Seemed Cheerful.

The husband, when questioned, could give no reason for the strange act of his wife. Mr. Lagreois' brother who boards with him, left the house at three p.m., and Mrs. Lagreois was then apparently quite cheerful. The sad affair caused a great stir in East Cornwall, to which quarter of the town the family recently moved. The bodies of the infants were removed to Mr. Courville's undertaking establishment, where a post mortem will be held. A police guard was placed at the bedside of Mrs. Lagreois at the hospital, and a charge of murder will be preferred against her.

Watch Your Machine

Every prudent person who owns and operates a piece of machinery is careful to see that it is kept in good condition. This is generally done through frequent inspections to determine unusual wear and tear, so as to have the necessary repairs made before the machine actually breaks down.

The most important piece of machinery of all, however, is often sadly neglected. We refer to the human body, the machine upon which all joy of living depends.

It is well that people are more and more getting the habit of having periodical physical examinations, even though they are apparently in good health. By these examinations incipient disease may often be detected long before the person examined would have felt any discomfort from it. This is particularly true of diseases which attack the internal organs such as the heart, lungs, liver and kidneys.

Every person, especially those getting along toward middle age, should have a thorough physical examination at least once a year, whether they feel any symptoms or not. If no disease is found, it is a great satisfaction to know that onei s sound physically, while a warning of disease in its first stages enables one to obtain treatment which may check its progress and materially prolong his life.

Most large life insurance companies now afford their policyholders free medical examinations once a year and this privilege should be taken advantage of by all means. If no insurance policy is carried, the fee for such an examination is small and may save much suffering and expense int he future. Watch your human machine.

The Faithful Servant.

In the corner of an old neglected English churchyard the following epitaph was found on a moss-covered weather-beaten old grave stone:

Sacred to the memory of
who departed this life suddenly and unexpectedly by a cow kicking him on the 15th of September 1853.

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

The car sped along through the rather monotonous country. Suddenly the landscape began to brighten up.

"Oh, the lovely creek!" cried the girl in the back seat.

"Hush, my dear," said her mother, "I know it does creak a bit, but you must remember it is very good of our host to take us for a drive at all."

MOREWOOD WO'S. INSTITUTE

August Meeting.

The August meeting of the Institute was held at the home of Mrs. B. Loughridge. Quite a number of members and invited guests were present to hear Miss McGee of Chesterville, who so kindly came to speak to us. We were all charmed with the address, so many good thoughts and hints to Institute members, ways and means of getting the timid members working and urging us always to be optomistic. At the close of the address a bouquet of sweet peas was presented to Miss McGee by Marjorie Faulkner. A nice lunch was served by the ladies.

September Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held Sept. 11th at the home of Mrs. James Bogart. Rev. R. P. Stafford kindly consented to address the meeting on the subject, "The League of Nations." Mr. Stafford gave an address well thought out, nicely worded and appreciated by all the members. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem. A social half hour was spent and a nice lunch served by the committee.

A Real Grievance.

First Farmer: "How is it you no longer put up at the 'Blue Lion' when you drive to market?"

Second Farmer: "Because they are real frauds! Last winter, when I lodged there for a night, they made a great fuss of me, and gave me a big bottle to take to bed. And when I opened it, what d'ye think it was? Nothing but hot water!"

Hosiery dealers of Paris are suffering from the loss of trade through the ladies' new fad of going without stockings. They treat their legs with a skin cream and powder in a manner to imitate the appearance of the stockings that are absent.

Making Highways Safe

With the establishment of a Bureau of Complaints in the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Department of Highways, the machinery has been wound up for each citizen, responsible or otherwise, to become a highway traffic officer. The thought behind the move is to provide assistance for highway traffic officers and municipal police in their difficult task of attempting to mark the black sheep in the motoring flock.

Several loads of cards have been printed, each of the approximate size of a postcard, and they are available to one and all at police stations and branch offices of the Highway Department. The cards have blanks which must be filled in by any persons wishing to make a complaint against a motorist, and there are sufficient blanks to provide all the information necessary for the Highway Department to take court action against the motorist concerning whom complaint is made.

But it is not quite as simple as that. The mere arrival of a postcard will not necessarily imply court action; but all cards will be given careful consideration, and in cases where it is believed there had been a serious infraction of highway laws the matter will be investigated.

Motorists will be protected against cranks or people who are trying to work off spites. If a citizen becomes a habitual postcard sender, he will be marked and little attention paid to his complaints. Names and addresses of people making complaints must be given on the cards, so light-minded citizens will be discouraged.

Last year California harvested 2,250,000 tons of grapes, which were shipped all over the United States, to Canada and Cuba. Immense quantities of the juice are reduced to a sort of jelly and shipped to consumers who add water to form a beverage. These consumers are "warned" not to allow the stuff to ferment, as that would make it intoxicating.

TO express the almost sensational advantages of these new Rogers-Batteryless Sets in terms as conservative as seems proper yet as emphatic and enthusiastic as is justified by the actual facts, is a difficult problem. Nothing to equal these marvellous values and remarkably low prices was thought possible. Here are a few of the features that you will find in the new Rogers-Batteryless Radio Models this season, at prices $60 to $110 less than last year:

1. New Illuminated Drum Dial
—for increased visibility, greater ease and speed in tuning-in stations. Wavelengths clearly shown.

5. Phonograph "Plug-In" Jack
—in conjunction with the electrical pick-up unit this makes any old phonograph equal to the best and highest-priced phonograph of today.

6. Increased Selectivity without Tonal Loss
—by means of improved Shielding and the new Rogers A/C Power Tube.

And—please bear in mind—that these are all new features in addition to the basic features built into the Rogers-Batteryless from the beginning and responsible for its early success.

The Fly On The Pane

A fly on a window pane will crawl up t the top, fly back to the bottom and crawl up again. This order is seldom reversed—why no one knows. It is on record that a fly crawled up a window pane thirty-two times, returning each time a-wing.

Hens scratch for food with the sun behind them, the reason being that the rays reflect on the minute particles. A blind hen will pick grain and not miss a kernel.

Cats seldom lie with their feet to the fire. Usually they lie on the left side. Dogs lie with their fore paws to the fire.

A mouse will ignore a food supply sufficient for a meal and run great risks to nibble at a wholesale supply. It will hide at the source of food supply and not depart therefrom until actually disturbed. It isn't true that a mouse runs to its hole at the first alarm.

Find a harmless little snake the length of a lead pencil and provide a box for it in the house, visit it daily and at the end of three months it will crawl to you for food.

Goldfish usually swim around a globe to the right. They can be taught to take a fly out of the hand in six week's time. The presence of other fish in the globe is generally ignored by goldfish. Drop a pice of chip on the surface of the water and it will frighten the fish.

Sheep spend more time grazing than do cattle or horses. Sheep will eat for twelve hours out of twenty-four—New York World.

Big Crowd Attended Metcalfe Fall Fair

Attended by the largest crowd in the history of the society and favored with the finest weather, the seventy-second annual exhibition of the Metcalfe Agricultural Society was opened yesterday with a fine display of exhibits.

From the time the gates opened in the morning until late last night a steady throng of residents of Metcalfe Carleton County wended their way through the turnstiles. By the time the afternoon program got underway more than 5,000 had entered the grounds and this number was swelled considerably at the start of the night performance.

President J. E. Woods and his fellow directors were highlly enthused over the attendance and the quality of the exhibits and predicted that all records would be broken before the Faid concluded at night. Great interest was manifested by the residents of Carleton County in the judging of the cattle, and poultry and there were some splendid specimens on exhibition. Considerable work has been done on the Fair buildings and the entire atmosphere was one that reflected credit on the directors who have left nothing undone to make Metcalfe Fair the best in Carleton County.

One of the interesting and novel feature was the horse shoe tournament organized under the auspices of the Ottawa and District Horseshoe Association and staged directly by the Metcalfe Club. President Harold Shipman of the district proved to be a member of the winning doubles team, partnering with Thomas Pilon in a fine exhibition of "barnyard golf" that brought them the honors after a stirring competition with A. G. H. Low and Percy Foley. Both teams were from Ottawa. Some 30 players competed and they were followed by a large gallery throughout the afternoon.

The afternoon program featured by harness horse races in which the leading trotters of Ottawa and district entered. The crowd took kindly to the races and patronized the grand stand and watched proceedings from the lawn, as the stand was taxed to capacity. "T.N.T." owned by J. Dowser of Metcalfe was the winner of the free-for-all event and MacKenzie King, owned by Joseph Menard of Ottawa, captured the 2.25 race. The judges for the racing were A. Goulet, M.P., Bourget, Ont.; Warden J. H. Nixon, Osgoode, and E. J. Morris, Metcalfe, with John Hoffman of Ottawa acting as starter.

During the afternoon and evening performances the Chesterville band rendered musical selections which were well received. The Brinston Dramatic Club, directed by Charles Strader, presented a play in the evening entitled "Folderol," and were enthusiastically applauded by a large audience. The main building was also the scene of a dance in the evening and those who attended enjoyed themselves to their heart's content.

Taken all round the Metcalfe Fair is bigger and better than ever and the fact there were more than one-third as many more automobiles as were in evidence last year speaks volumes for the popularity of the fair with residents of the county and surrounding country. Many Ottawa people were present during the afternoon, notably Controller Herbert H. McElroy, manager and secretary of the Central Canada Exhibition, who complimented the directors on the success of the fair and praised the organization highly. Norman F. Wilson, ex-M.P. for Russell County, was also an interested visitor and was very pleased with the attendance and quality of the exhibits.

Fake Prize Schemes

A rather ancient scheme for separating the unwary from their money is being worked again, both in the United States and Canada, according to a leading business men's magazine.

The plan is to insert an advertisement containing a perfectly simple puzzle which anyone can easily solve, and offer prizes for correct solutions. A favorite prize is a "building lot."

Of course anyone who sends in a solution of the puzzle wins a lot, but he is informed that he will be expected to remit a small sum—in one case $7.75—for the deed and other incidental expenses conected with the transfer of the property. The "lot" is very small and the $7.75 fee alone would net the seller around $200 an acre for some worthless land.

So, if the "winner" swallows the bait he is out just $7.75 for the privilege of working out the puzzle, while his name is passed along to other swindlers as an easy mark.

There are many perfectly legitimate prize offers advertised in various periodicals, but those which require payment of cash before the prize is delivered are generally fraudulent and should be shunned.

Flying Taxis

Following closely upon the organization of a transcontinental airplane service comes the announcement of the proposed establishment of a "flying taxi" service, whereby passengers many engage planes for trips from one city to another.

The new enterprise is capitalized at $7,500,000, the financing of which is said to have been completed, and the first step to be taken will be the equipping of flying fields in 25 principal cities. Three schools for the advanced training of aviators are also to be established, probably one in the East, one in the Middle West, and the third on the Pacific Coast.

The idea of airplanes for hire is not new, such a service having been operated since 1910, but the present enterprise is on a much larger scale than any heretofore projected.

With greater stability and safety of airplanes being constantly developed, it is reasonable to expect that this form of passenger transport will be rapidly extended. The time is perhaps not far distant when a large percentage of all travel will be by air.

New Plan Settlement Will Help Farming

"As predicted, the West within about a week will have completed harvesting the greatest grain crop on record," commented C. W. Peterson, editor of the Farm and Ranch Review, of Calgary, Saturday(?)"It is true that the great fall in wheat prices has proven disappointing, but the western farmer, nevertheless, will receive a larger return per bushel than he did last year, when the western crop was seriously injured by unfavorable weather. This year the quality is uniformly high," said Mr. Peterson.

"The importation of harvesting help with resulting unfortunate conditions would be eliminated in future, he declared, by two schemes on foot now. The first was the general introduction of the combine harvester which has had the effect of reducing the cost, he sand, by upwards of 60 per cent.

Settlement Scheme.

The other plan is for a general farm settlement scheme, whereby families would colonize in groups on small farms. Their names would be in the hands of a central labor bureau who would notify them as their services were required by farmers. When they were not thus employed, they could work their own farms, build up a small herd of cattle and learn western farming conditions gradually. In two or three years they could move to larger farms. In this manner all the help needed for the busy seasons, and the harvest, would be in the West.

Mr. Peterson said a large number of combine harvesters had been placed in the West. It was estimated that each machine took the place of 18 men, and could be operated by two persons.

When Jumbo Was England's Pride

Once upon a time the city of St. Thomas, Ontario (or was it only a town then?) got into the world's news by an unusual railway mishap?

When I was a small boy, one of the attractions of the Zoo in London was the giant elephant "Jumbo." He was one of the "institutions" of the day. When mothers wanted to induce their boys and girls to do something particular the bait was held out: "If you do, you shalll have a ride on Jumbo." Contraiwise, bad little boys and girls were told that as a punishment they do, you shall have a ride on Jumbo." The elephant was both reward and penalty in the hands of the parents of those days. And the elephant's fame spread far and wide. Children from the provinces went up to London to see him and share the privilege of the children of "Cockayne." In due course the United States heard of "Jumbo," and, of course, wanting all the "biggest things" in the world, decided that it must annex the elephant.

P. T. Barnum, then in the height of his success, went over to London, and approaching the trustees of the Zoological Gardens, made them an offer, which, like a king's ransom, was too big to refuse; and one day it was announced that England was going to lose "Jumbo." Then there arose a whirlwind of an agitation. The Yankees might buy the old masters; they might purchase family heirlooms, but they must not be permitted to annex "Jumbo." That would be a national catastrophe. People wrote to the Times about it, the columns of the Daily Telegraph were filled with letters of protest and denunciation of "American greed," children marched in procession to insist that their favorite should not be exiled. Punch published a cartoon about it, questions were asked about it in the House of Commons—in fact every form of public indignation took shape. The elephant's future was the great national topic of conversation. He must be saved to the British nation!

But, alas, "Yankee gold" proved more effective than Britain's protest. The sale had been completed, it could not be upset, and one day, amidst a nation's mourning, a steamer sailed down the Thames bearing on it the treasured "Jumbo."

In due time the elephant reached New York. They had a "whale of a time" getting him ashore, but eventually he was staked down in Barnum's circus and became the admiration of millions, as the circus made its way through America. "Jumbo" was an aristocratic elephant, he did not mix with the rest of the herd, he disliked the mental task of shoving wagons and other paraphernalia when breaking up time came; perhaps he missed the London children with their gifts and manifestations of delight as they rode him (he was not permitted to play with children in America, he was too valuable a showthing) and "Jumbo" became bad-tempered. Like most Englishmen (for he had become anglicanized), he disliked American modes of travel, he preferred the privacy of the Zoo to the gasflares of the "greatest show on earth," and he was not as easy to handle as he had been.

Barnum made his annual tour of Canada in 1885. "Jumbo" was the star attraction and many a grown Englishman went to the circus just for the sake of seeing his old pal. On September 15 the show played St. Thomas,. As usual after the shows, "Jumbo" was made to do his bit, like the other elephants, and he did not like it. He broke from his handlers, made his way over to another track in the railway yards, and ran into a switching engine. The impact was terrible. The locomotive was derailed. The elephant was so badly mutilated that he had to be shot.

And as the news flashed over the cable bed, St. Thomas became known to thousands who had never before heard of it, and many English children, and grown-ups too, wept over the loss of their favorite, for they had never abandoned hope that one day, perhaps, he might return to the old Zoo and give another generation of Londoners the thrills their parents had had.

He Served His Country Long And Ably

It is appropriate that a monument should be unveiled to the memory of the late Hon. Andrew Broder in Morrisburg, where he made his home during the greater part of his life. That monument will recall that Mr. Broder represented the County of Dundas in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario from 1875 until 1886 and in the House of Commons at Ottawa from 1896 until 1917, that he was elevated to the Privy Council of Canada in 1916 and died in January, 1918. It will recall, too, a man who, though he never held office in a Provincial or Federal Government, wielded much influence in his party and in public affairs in Canada.

Those who knew Mr. Broder will remember his tall, spare form and the qualities of personality and expression that made him a power upon the platform in a political campaign. He made no display of eloquence, but he dealt, in plain language, with subjects of which he had knowledge. He spoke too, with good humor, and even when criticizing his political opponents he preferred usually to touch them with a shrewd witticism rather than wound them with bitter words. He gave a fine example of this preference when he addressed a Conservative convention in Toronto before the Ontario general election of 1905. Hon. George Ross, then Premier of the Province, had reorganized his Government. Mr. Broder, commenting on the Premier's statement, remarked that Mr. Ross had put three new legs under the old stove that had smoked him out of his house. Mr. Broder was thoroughly acquainted with the problems of the country and particularly the problems of agriculture, and he brought to bear upon these problems a sound, practical judgment. As a politician he was recognized by friend and foe alike as scrupulously fair and honorable, and he exercised a great personal influence, especially in the Ontario electoral districts bordering on the St. Lawrence River.

Mr. Broder was the valued intimate friend of the late Sir James P. Whitney and was selected to accompany Sir Robert Borden in his campaign tours of Ontario and the Prairie provinces in 1911. Indeed, it has been said that Mr. Broder might have been included in the first Borden Cabinet had it not been for difficulties encountered in the distribution of representation in that Cabinet. Mr. Broder did not enter the Cabinet, but he continued to sit in the House of Commons and was elevated to the rank of a Privy Councillor in 1916. That rank, like the monument that was unveiled in Morrisburg last Sunday, was a recognition of his long, able and unselfish service as a legislator and as a member of the Conservative Party.

"I am afraid, doctor," said a woman to her physician, "that my husband has some terrible mental affliction. Sometimes I talk to him for hours and and then discover that he literally hasn't heard a word I said."

"That isn't an affliction," was the reply; "that's a divine gift."

"NO TAXES, NO VOTE"

The town of Parkhill, in Middlesex, is evidently a pioneer in adopting the principle of "no taxes, no vote." Parliament Buildings officials in touch with municipal affairs do not know of any other municipality which has passed the by-law authorized in this connection by the Municipal Act, by way of withholding the franchise from ratepayers in arrears.

Prior to the 1927 session of the Legislature, a by-law could be passed to take such action where taxes were in arrears on December 15. By amendment made last year, any local municipality may pass a by-law disqualifying from voting any ratepayer whose taxes on land are overdue and unpaid "on the date set for nominations." Parkhill has advanced its election date to the first Monday in December, with nominations a week previous.

Hens vs. Pullets For Egg Laying

(Experimental Farms Note.)

On many farms poultry yields little profit because the hens kept are too old. Very often, two, three and even four-year old hens are found on such farms. These birds absorb much of the profit which would be derived from the small group of pullets raised each year.

An experiment conducted at the Dominion Experimental Station at Ste Anne de la Pocatiere shows that year old hens are already less profitable than pullets. During three consecutive years, two equal groups of hens and pullets received the same feed. and the number of eggs laid and cost of feeding for each group were accurately recorded. The results of these three years of experimenting are summed up as follows:—

	Number of eggs laid	Cost of feed	Value of eggs	Profit
Hens..	85	$1.67	$2.81	$1.14
Pullets	136	1.87	4.83	2.96

Each year the pullets were more profitable than the hens. It is noticeable that the average profit from the pullets during the three years more than doubled that from the hens. This is due to their better production, especially in winter time, the best season for the sale of eggs.

According to the above experiment, it seems advantageous to raise, each year, a sufficient number of pullets to replace all year old hens, except those required for the production of hatching eggs. Hen eggs are usually more fertile and give stronger chicks.

The hens must be carefully selected in the fall, only those of best type and production being retained for breeding.

According to our experiments, the cost of raising pullets is more than offset by the sale of the year old hens in the fall.

Very Explicit.

OLD ZACK'S "PLAT-I-NUM"

In the Old Squire's estimation it was a great event in a young man's life when he reached the age of twenty- one and voted for the first time.

"We all ought to vote, and vote right," he used to say. "It's a duty, and it's a great responsibility.

He kept the ages of us boys at the old farm well in mind, and now and then would say to Halstead, or Addison, or me, "Well, sir, in four years you can go to the polls and vote for President. How much do you know about the constitution? Hadn't we better read it over again?"

I have to confess that I found the Constitution of the United States dry reading. It was difficult for me to remember it. In fact, I am afraid that none of us took the Old Squire's conscientious view of our responsibility. Addison, I remember was at Yale on his twenty-first birthday, and very busy with his duties there. In addition to those he had also begun to accept commission and to make trips as a mining expert, to determine the value of mineral deposits. These latter engagements were profitable to him, for the usual fee was twenty-five dollars a day and expenses.

The Old Squire, however, had expected him to come home and vote at the election for Governor and for Representatives to Congress in September. The distance from New Haven home to the old farm was three hundred and sixty miles. Addison was never greatly interested in political matters, as the Old Squire realized, but when he wrote, saying that he probably would not be at home for the September election, the old gentleman was so disappointed that he sent him an urgent letter to come and inclosed money for his railway expenses. The election that fall was not especially important. But the Old Squire did not like to have us boys stray off from home and take no interest in the welfare of our native State.

So Addison came—though rather reluctantly, I think—and cast his first vote in the old town-meeting house at home. I recollect that, after he voted, the Old Squire patted him on the shoulder and said, "Now, you're a man and a citizen of this free country."

That evening, after town-meeting, while we were all at the supper table at home, whom should we see drive into the yard but old Zack Lurvey of Lurvey's Mills—the very last person in the world we should have expected to call on us. Ever since the trouble we had had with him about the mast of the Yankee Byade, old Zack had hardly been on speaking terms with us, even when we met him on the highway."

"Let him come to the door and knock if he wants anything of us," Grandmother Ruth exclaimed, for she remembered the hard things he had said of us. But the Old Squire nodded to me, and I went out to take his horse and ask him in.

Old Zack did not seem inclined to come in but asked whether Addison, whom he had seen that day at town-meeting were about the house. "I'd like to speak with him," Old Zack said.

So I went back and called Addison out. "I guess old Zack's got a bone to pick with you," I said and, feeling curious, I stood about to hear what was said.

But the old fellow spoke quite pleasantly—for him. "They tell me you know a lot about rocks and mines," he said to Addison.

"Oh, well, a little something, perhaps," the latter replied, wondering what old Zack had on his mind.

Although shrewd and keen, the old lumberman was illiterate, "ignorant as a horse," his enemies used to say, and he had many of them. No one knew exactly where he had started in life, for he was never heard to speak of his early home or of his parents. He made his appearance in our part of the country when he was about thirty years old; and at that time he could not sign his name otherwise than with a cross. But he went into lumber business and prospered, for he possessed talents of a sort. He built Lurvey's mills and came in time to be worth two or three hundred thousand dollars.

He was ashamed of not being able to read, and they tell a story of him that once while at the Preble House, on a business trip to Portland, he picked up a newspaper in the reading-room and sat for some time holding it in front of his face, like the other guests. But a traveling man sitting him noticed that he held the paper upside down and presently said, "Friend, what's the news today?"

"Not much news," old Zack replied, without lowering the paper. "But I see here that a ship has capsized."

Although thus cut off from information in print, old Zack acquired a great deal of knowledge, merely from listening to what people said and remembering it; for, like many illiterate persons, his memory was retentive.

He was much too shrewd, too far-seeing, to be dishonest in business matters. His word was good; but he was suspicious and would never trust anybody, if he could help it. He was reckoned a hard man by his employees at the mills; they disliked him, but feared him.

For years it was said that he kept his accounts on the attic floor of his house with beans and kernels of corn laid in rows and piles. People who went to see him on business told of hearing him crawling round on the floor overhead, moving those beans and corn kernels.

Such arithmetic had disadvantages when rats and mice or cats got into the attic. As for his second wife,—not Rosemary,—he never allowed her up there; she was as afraid of him as of a bear.

About the time he was fifty years old, this wife of his—a slack, careless creature—accidentally set their house on fire; and this disaster wrought havoc with his bookkeeping that he vowed, old as he was, that he would learn to read, write and "figger" before another year went by! So he started in that winter to go to the district school with the others, bringing an A.B.C. primer, a copy book and a primary arithmetic. The teacher, a young sophomore from Bowdoin College, had the greatest experience of his life with him, for old Zack was prone to break out in strong language, right in school hours, over the inconsistencies of English spelling and the perplexities of figures—particularly of fractions.

I well remember the crafty expression on old Zack's face as he sat there in his wagon that evening in the Old Squire's dooryard. He must have been sixty-five or seventy years old by this time, but he was still sturdy, and his shrewd old visage was as ruddy-brown as pitchwood. "Oh, I've hearn of ye and what prices ye git for going to look at mines," he said to Addison. He seemed to hesitate a little, then with a quizzical glance he asked, "Is thar such a thing as plat-i-num?" He divided the word curiously, accenting the second syllable.

"Platinum?" said Addison, smiling. "Yes, there certainly is such a metal."

"'Tain't wuth nothin', is it?" old Zack asked softly, with a keen look at Addison's face.

"On the contrary, it is about as valuable as gold," Addison replied laughing.

Old Zack did not seem astonished. It was evident that he had already heard something, or most probably had puzzled out certain facts about platinum from books; but he wanted to hear what Addison would say.

"Um, what does it look like?" he asked.

"It's a white material somewhat resembling silver but heavier," Addison replied.

"Kind of stringy and spongy is it?" old Zack asked. Plainly he was referring to something that he had read.

"Why, yes, spongy at one stage of the refining process," Addison said.

"Hard to melt, is it?"

"Very."

"If anybody found a lot, would it be worth while to try to git it out?"

"It surely would," Addison said, considerably amused.

"D'ye think ye'd know it if you saw it?" old Zack asked cautiously.

"I think so," Addison said. "But there are tests. The blow-pipe would help settle the question.

The old man turned his horse as if to drive away, but drew rein again. "Would ye be willing to make a little trip for me?" he then asked. "Course I'd expect to pay ye," he added.

"Why, yes, if it were a short one," Addison said. "I couldn't be gone long. But I had better tell you, Mr. Lurvey, that in my opinion it is not likely that you have found platinum in this part of the country."

"What makes ye think so?"

"Because—well, there are geological reasons," Addison replied, thinking that it was not much use to go into details with a person of old Zack's attainments.

"But ye can't say fer sartin."

"No," Addison replied. "No one can certanly say what may be found. But if you will show me your ore samples, I can probably tell you whether it is patinum or not."
whether it is platinum or not."
said. "But I want ye to go to a sartin place with me."

"Very well, if it won't take more than two days," Addison said.

"Call it a 'greemunt, then," old Zack rejoined. "I'll be here to git ye at six tomorrow mornin'." And he drove off, merely nodding to the Old Squire, who had come to the door.

"It will be a Tom-fool's errand probably," Addison remarked. "But the old fellow is able to pay for it."

It came out later that old Zack had never been to this supposed platinum deposit, himself. All he knew of it was what a French-Canadian boy who came down to Maine from the parish of Garthby in the Province of Quebec, to work at Lurvey's Mills, had told him. It was old Zack's custom to ask questions of his hired men concerning the places from which they came, to see what he could learn; and this boy—he was not more than eighteen—had told him of white, stringy stuff that his people picked out of seams in the ledges at a place called Black Lake, not far from Garthby. He said that they had tried to melt it, at the blacksmith's shop, but even the charcoal fire and bellows produced no effect on it. Old Zack jumped to the conclusion, from something he had read, that this "white stringy stuff" must be platinum. A desire to get possession of the deposit filled his mind: but not a word as to its whereabouts did he disclose, even to Addison.

The old man was at our door with horse and wagon early next morning: and he had brought with him the Canadian boy, whose name was Luc Gonier.

We had supposed that it was to be a trip to certain lots of wild land that old Zack owned up in the great woods near the boundary: but instead of taking the lumber road in that direction they drove—after Addison had joined them—to the railroad station, and journeyed by rail to Sherbrooke over the Border in the Province.

They had dinner at the hotel there, and then another of Zack's amiable traits came to the surface. "I'm goin' to leave you here," he said to Addison. "All you've got to do is stay here till I get back."

"What! You are not going to have me see your mine?" Addison exclaimed in surprise.

"No, I'm not!" old Zack replied bluntly. "You are working for me at twenty-five dollars a day, ain't ye? I want ye to stay right here at this hotel till I'm ready for ye."

It became suddenly apparent to Addison that the old man did not mean to trust him. For the moment he was indignant. "When I accept a fee to examine a mine, I am supposed to be on my honor,' Mr. Lurvey," he said. "If you think otherwise, you are mistaken."

Old Zack merely grinned; and Addison was much disposed to take the next train back and leave him to his own devices. On second thoughts he concluded to let it pass as one of the old man's idiosyncraises and strolled forth to see the town, paying no further attention to his employer's movements. In fact, he saw nothing more of him or the French boy, until the middle of the afternoon next day when they made their appearance at the hotel, with a sack of specimens.

They went up to Addison's room, and after seeing that the door was locked old Zack turned the contents of the sack out on the bed. There were eight or ten chunks of an odd, fuzzy gray rock, and the fact that each was about five inches thick showed the width of the seam from which they had come. Addison knew what it was at a glance. He laughed; he couldn't help it. Old Zack was regarding him keenly.

"Wal, that's plat-i-num, ain't it?" he asked.

"I'm afraid you are going to be disappointed," Addison replied, still laughing in spite of himself.

"If it ain't plat-i-num, what is it?"

"Asbestos," said Addison. "Very good specimens."

"Ye hain't looked at it! Ye hain't 'plied no test to it!" cried old Zack violently.

"No need of tests. That's asbestos fast enough," Addison said.

"Don't b'lieve it! Ye're foolin' me!" old Zack cried, nearly shouting.

"Very well," Addison said. "Believe me or not, as you please."

Thereupon the old man calmed down a little. "Is it wuth anything?" he said, at last.

"Good selected asbestos ore like this is now quoted at thirty-eight dollars a ton," Addison told him.

Old Zack snorted in disgust.

"Is the deposit very extensive? Is there a great deal of it?" Addison asked. But the old man was too suspicious to reply. "When a man employs me to examine a mine," Addison continued, "I feel it my duty to advise him whether or not to invest in it. That is why I asked if the deposit is extensive. If so, I advise you to buy it if you can. Asbestos is commercially valuable and is growing more so. Deposits of it are rather rare. You would do well to secure this one."

Old Zack remained sulky. He did not half believe what Addison told him. He gathered up his specimens, and they came home on the afternoon train. Rather crustily, he paid Addison fifty dollars. On the way down the French boy, who evidently did not like his employer very well, told Addison where the asbestos came from.

It was thus, in this roundabout fashion, that the great asbestos mines at Black Lake and Thetford were discovered.

We learned subsequently that old Zack took the specimens to Prof. Cyrus Brackett at Bowdoin College—to be sure Addison was not deceiving him! I think he still believed that it was "plat-i-num." But so far as we could learn he made no move to acquire the property. When Addison came home to vote the following year he went over to see Lurvey and asked him whether he intended to proceed in the matter; for if he did not, Addison meant to go up and buy the land thereabouts, himself. But old Zack would not say a word as to his intentions, and a great opportunity was lost, for during the following year the deposit passed into the hands of a Montreal man who began mining operations soon afterward.

Since the year 1900 thousands of tons of asbestos have been taken from these mines annually; and so numerous are now the uses that this strange fibrous stone subserves that the price has steadily advanced. Fireproof curtains, sheathing paper, shingles, insulators, coating for steam pipes, packing and a hundred other uses are found for it. The supply, indeed, scarcely keeps pace with the ever-increasing demand.

For once old Zack did not show his customary shrewdness. His disappointment that the deposit was not "plat-i-num" was probably so keen that he could not realize the value of the less precious ore, and, curiously enough, he always seemed to have the feeing that Addison was in some way to blame for the fact that the stringy, spongy rock was asbestos.

A doctor who had been called in to see a patient strongly impressed upon him the necessity of drinking hot water with his whisky. "Otherwise," he said, "you must not take it at all."

"But how shall I get the hot water?" plaintively inquired the patient. "My wife won't let me have it for the whisky?"

"Well, tell her you want to shave," answered the doctor, as he took his departure.

The next day the doctor called again and when the wife opened the door he asked how the patient was.

"I'm awfully worried, doctor," was the reply. "I'm afraid he's gone raving mad. He shaves every ten minptes."

The biggest day for grain handling that the port of Montreal has experienced this season was registered on August 21st, when deliveries went well over the 2,000,000 bushel mark for the 24 hours, and receipts were recorded at nearly 1,500,000 bushels, a total handling of 3,500,000 bushels for one day.

The almost complete absence of forest fires with their smoke screens marring scenic effects—the brilliant clearness of the air in this region has made the present tourist season the best on record in British Columbia. Many touring parties travelled over the Canadian Pacific lines, some breaking the journey to motor over the picturesque Banff-Windermere highway. Among other groups may be mentioned the Alpine Club of Canada, which held its camp at the Lake of the Hanging Glaciers, followed by the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies.

Approximately 250 new elevators have been constructed throughout Alberta this year, it is estimated by local grain men. The total capacity of these elevators would be about 18,000,000 bushels, it was stated. Complete figures for elevator construction in the province were not available, but grain men stated that extension of facilities had been progressing rapidly in all parts of Alberta. The capacity of the elevators varied from 35,000 bushels to 140,000 bushels. The Alberta Wheat Pool alone has 110 grain elevator companies have in 1927 and practically all the public grain elevator companies have increased their storage capacity.

For the first season in a number of years the Nipigon trout may be said to abound. Hydro-development with accompanying fluctuations in water levels, threatened extinction of this exceptionally game fish, but the careful regulation of the past three seasons has apparently restored the world's most famous trout stream to something of its old standing. Six guests of the Bungalow Camp here brought in 125 pounds of fish yesterday, counting a fair number of four and five-pound trout caught mostly at the entrance to Lake Polly. Pike and pickerel still abound in large numbers, so it is thought that the restoration of the water level rather than the destruction of natural enemies has brought back the Nipigon trout.

Entirely new and important schemes involving large expenditures on the part of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the placement of British colonists upon the land, are to be undertaken through the Department of Colonization and Development of that company, working in co-operation with the Overseas Settlement Committee of the British Government. The details of these schemes have been negotiated during the present visit to Canada of Lord Lovat, Under Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs and chairman of the Overseas Settlement Committee. One undertaking provides for the building of one hundred cottages by the Canadian Pacific for the use of British families. They will be used to make families accustomed to Canadian conditions and farm life before being established on farms of their own.

Believe it or not. Several large laundries in England and Scotland replace collars free when they are worn out. The customer starts with a dozen collars and when one begins to show signs of wear he merely writes "replace' on it and a new one is substituted.

Ladies who pluck their eyebrows to a thin line are warned by Dr. Bruckner of Berlin that they are laying up trouble for themselves. He declares that many cases of inflammation of the eyes result from the practice. We never could see that it added to their beauty, either.

C. G. Swan of Chicago, is not only honest but has a good memory. He recently sent a Polk street restaurant $2 for a 30-cent lunch he ate there 36 years ago and failed to pay for.

When asked what he thought of Canada a member of the Empire Parliamentary Association who is also a professor in economics replied: "The impressions I have so far formed of of Canada are of an over-powering hospitality, so that one ought to be rather a professor of gastronomics than economics, and the second impression is that there seems to be an overwhelming supply of roast chicken in the country."

Mr. Chas. F. Marselis, Reeve of Williamsburg, Mrs. Marselis and two daughters and Mrs. Marselis Sr., retuned home last week after spending seven weeks with relatives and friends in the Western Provinces. Among the cities which they visited were Regina, Calgary and Winnipeg, but Mr. Marselis' interest centered on the field crops, especially wheat, which promises to be one of the largest crops on record. Thousands of acres of wheat, he said, which stood up to his shoulders, would yield well over 50 bushels to the care. These splendid crops ideal climate and a kindly people so captivated Mr. Marselis, that it became a struggle between the heart strings which bind the Marselis family to the old homestead (in their possession for nearly one hundred years) and a progressive outlook,as to whether this prosperous Dundas farmer would make his future home in the West or not. Taking the family interest into consideration, Mr. Marselis finally decided that he could not part with his old home and the Township in which it is located, would be equally sorry to part with Reeve Marselis and his family.—Morrisburg Leader.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Marshall Merkley, who died September 20th, 1921.

Seven years are gone,
Our hearts still sore,
As time goes on we miss him more.
His nice kind ways, his loving smile,
No one can fill dear father's place.
Down a long trail of eternity to a happy and peaceful rest,
You are gone but not forgotten, by all who loved you best.
When the tide of life is slowly fading, and our heart aches are no more,
Then we will join our father dear,
On that bright and happy shore.
Your place is vacant, God calls us one by one,
The home is prepared by him when earthly work is done.

Inserted by wife and family.

BETTING FAVORS HOOVER

Herbert Hoover Republican presidential nominee, is favored to win the presidential election over Governor Al. Smith, Democrat, in Wall street circles. Odds of 2½ to 1 are being wagered a gainst Smith's chances, it is reported.

So far some $250,000 has been wagered in Wall street, it is said, most of it on the presidential poll in New York State, where wagering odds are even or rule six to five in favor of Smith.
