Will Try to Repeal Local Option.

At the meeting of the Mountain township council at Mcuntain Station on the 2nd inst., a resolution was passed to submit a by-law to the electors for the repeal of the local option by-law which has been in force for nearly three years in that township. The movers of the resolution were Councilors A. Christie and Wm. Shaver. The vote will be taken the same day as the municipal elections are held.

A Well-Dressed Stranger.

A smartly-dressed and clever talking young gentleman, who passed through Newboro vicinity about two weeks ago, has been discovered to be the perpetrator of an old skin game in a new form. He pretended to be the travelling agent for a new and unadvertised clothing company in Montreal, and was taking orders all kinds of ladies' and gentlemen's winter coats, which were being disposed of at a great sacrifice. He showed the most stylish styles and patterns, and had the samples of the cloth. He took the measures of the prospective purchaser and incidentally from $2 to $5 as part payment and "as a guarantee of good faith." If the buyer wished full payment was accepted the coat would come at about half price. A number in that locality are known to have been bitten and it is supposed there are others who are saying nothing.

John R. Baker Dead.

A very sudden death occurred at Nation Valley on Sunday morning at 6 o'clock, when John R. Baker was called suddenly away, heart failure being the cause. He was 57 years of age. The deceased had always enjoyed good health, and was in town and transacted business as usual on Saturday. On Sunday morning before rising he and his wife were talking, and in a few minutes he was noticed to be breathing rather strange, when Mrs. Baker took hold of him and enquired what was the matter. From that time he ceased breathing. Others were called to his bedside, only to find that the end had come.

The deceased was an industrious and hard working farmer and had accumulated a good deal of wealth.

The funeral service was held at the family residence yesterday afternoon at one o'clock, services being conducted by the Rev. A. E. Runnells, B.D., after which the remains were placed in the vault at Maple Ridge cemetery.

John R. Baker leaves to mourn his death four sons and one daughter, viz: Walter, Irwin, Harold, Frank and Gertrude; also brothers and sisters, Edward and Edwin Baker, who live a mile south of Winchester; Mrs. Coons, of Winchester Springs; Mrs. R. S. Merkley, of Morrisburg; Mrs. Samuel Hutt, of Cass Bridge, and Miss Maggie Baker, of Winchester.

The District Department of Agriculture.

The district branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture at Morrisburg is bound to keep up the good record established last winter through the Day Schools. During the past summer important work was carried on by way of experiments on the fair ground at Morrisburg, the great value of which was realized by occasional visits to the plots during the season. By seeing the plots growing side by side one could readily understand the value of varieties, selection, and cultivation. We hope to have a report of these experiments for a future issue.

The work of the Day Schools will be continued this winter, beginning on Nov. 24, 25 and 26 at Dunbar, Hoasic, and Williamsburg, on Heavy Horses, and an advance on the Day School work is to be made by the organization of the farmers of various localities into Farmers' Clubs to meet monthly and discuss questions of agricultural interest. A meeting is called for Morewood on Monday, Nov. 23, for this purpose, and we believe Mr. Sidney Carlyle is establishing a similar organization in the Nation Valley.

Organization indicates the highest type of civilization, and we look upon these two clubs as forerunners of a complete organization of the farmers of the County of Dundas.

The Gavin Spence Entertainment.

Monday night in Foster's Hall was the scene of the Gavin Spence entertainment. The weather was not very favorable, which no doubt kept a number from attending, but in spite of this the hall was nicely filled and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy it. In Gavin Spence he might be termed the old war horse, for he is a whole show in himself, and with the assistance of Miss Nannie Strachan, the sweet soprano, and Miss Kerr as violinist and accompanist, an evening can be thoroughly enjoyed, which was in Foster's Hall on Monday evening.

The many friends of Mr. Ralph Logan will be pleased to know that he is getting along nicely since his operation, and is expected to resume his position in the Molsons Bank in a short time.

"PORTLAND FATTY" CAUGHT

He Is Wanted for Robbing a Bank at St. Raphael, Quebec.

A despatch from New York says: When several Central Office detectives at once were strolling through Chinatown the other night looking for suspicious characters, they took into custody a party of four men because they had recognized two of them as safe-blowers. One of the strangers, who described himself as George W. Monroe of Cumberland, Maine, made a plea for freedom, saying he knew nothing of the men in whose company he had been found.

On Wednesday Monroe, or as the police say he is better known as "Portland Fatty," was in a cell awaiting the call of Canadian officials, who wish to take him across the border to tell what he knows of the robbery of a bank in Quebec. In the pockets of the prisoner the police found a number of certificates marked "La Banque Provincial, St. Raphael, Quebec, Canada." Inquiry showed that the bank was robbed on October 23. The Canadian authorities were notified of the arrest of "Portland Fatty," and two officers are here to attempt to bring about his extradition to Canada.

THE PROSECUTOR SHOT.

Attempt to Assassinate F. J. Heney in San Francisco.

A despatch from San Francisco says: Francis J. Heney, a leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in San Francisco, was shot and seriously injured at 4.22 o'clock on Friday in Judge Lawlor's courtroom by Morris Haas a Jewish saloon-keeper, who had been accepted as a juror in a previous trial of Abraham Ruef and afterwards removed, it having been shown in court by Heney that Haas was an ex-convict, a fact not brought out in his examination as a venireman. The shooting of Heney occurred in the presence of many persons in the courtroom during a recess on the trial of Abraham Ruef, on trial for the third time on the charge of bribery. At 6 o'clock at night Mr. Heney, who regained consciousness and will likely recover, said: "I will live to prosecute Haas and Ruef." The physicians in attendance on Heney expressed the opinion that the assistant district attorney would live.

Horses Ran Away and He was Dragged Some Distance.

A despatch from St. Catharines says: William Betts, 72 years of age, who had been a resident of Beamsville but one week, was killed near his home on the lake shore on Thursday. He had been to town and was driving along the lane leading to his house when the horses took fright and bolted. The unfortunate man was thrown over the dashboard, and, becoming entangled in the gearing of the wagon, was dragged some distance. When the team was stopped by the hired man Mr. Betts was unconscious, being severely bruised about the head and body. In the evening, despite medical aid, the injured man expired without regaining consciousness.

A despatch from Cobalt says: On Thursday, about 4.30 o'clock in the afternoon, two women living alone in a small log shack about a mile east of Argentite were attacked by a man evidently bent upon robbery, but he may have a murder charge to face if captured. The two women are Ethel Stone and Carrie Smith. Ethel Stone is able to be out of the hospital, although she has two bad cuts on the side and the back of the head. Carrie Smith had both jaws broken, her head cut in several places, and her recovery is doubtful. Their assailant escaped through the woods and the police are still on the trail.

The clerk was shot dead, and the judge dangerously wounded. The assassin, a man named Grosser, succeeded in firing ten shots before he was overpowered. LEFT CHINAMEN TO DROWN

Six Orientals Lost Their Lives on the Buffalo Sea Wall.

A despatch from Buffalo says: Several suspects have been arrested here in connection with the investigation being made by the Buffalo police with a view to finding out what white men smuggled from Canada to this port the ten Chinamen, six of whom were drowned and four rescued at the Government breakwall here early on Thursday morning. So far none of the suspects arrested has been identified by the four survivors. Chief of Police Taylor of Buffalo said he did not believe any white men lost their lives in connection with the case. The bodies of the last two of the six Chinese victims were recovered on Thursday afternoon. It is said that in the pockets of one of the drowned men were found the name and address of Marks Co., 687 Yonge street, Toronto. The name of this victim is not known.

Two boats in which the ten Chinamen had crossed from the Canadian shore were wrecked against the breakwall, half a mile east of Michigan avenue, at an early hour on Thursday morning, probably about 1.30. The sea was running high and the men were thrown into the water and dashed again and again against the rocks. How the survivors came through the terrible hours that followed is a mystery, for it was not till quite 3.30 that Ralph White, a watchman on the stone boat Atlas, which was working on the breakwall, heard a cry in the darkness. He landed to investigate and met a bruised and bedraggled Chinaman crawling toward the boat. White helped the chattering man aboard and then roused the crew to help him look for others. In a short time three more Chinamen had been pulled over the rocks and set down to dry and toast beside the engine. The four men said they had come from Toronto, and gave their names as Mock Quong, aged 42; Pong Sing, 25; Ching Jing, 22, and Chin Jon, 19.

The crew of the Atlas could find no more survivors, and though they sent repeated signals to the life-saving station, no boat was sent out till daybreak, by which time the gasoline launch and rowboat in which the Chinamen had crossed from the Canadian shore had been dashed to splinters. The life-savers could do nothing when they arrived, but attempted to extricate the six bodies, which had been beaten in among the rocks of the breakwall, and were showing here a bare stiff arm, with clenched fish thrust up; there a frozen yellow leg, and again a bundle of sodden rags and flesh tightly wedged in a rock crevice. Four of the bodies were recovered, the others remaining tightly fastened in the rocks.

VISCOUNT KILLS GUIDE.

Fatal Accident to William Prettie Near Kenora.

A despatch from Kenora says: An unfortunate shooting accident, with fatal result, occurred on Friday, the victim being William Prettie, aged 32, a hunter and trapper of this district. A shooting party consisting of Major Hon. Jeffrey Vereker, his nephew, Viscount Gort, with William Prettie and George Gilbert, guides, left on Thursday to go moose hunting. While following the trail, Viscount Gort slipped on a large stone and fell, the rifle going off, the bullet entering Prettie's leg and going right through. He was brought to the Jubilee Hospital here, but died on Saturday. Viscount Gort is the eldest son of Lord Gort, and came to Canada to visit his uncle a few weeks ago and to hunt large game.

THREE KILLED AT CROSSING.

Run Down by Grand Trunk Train at Kingscourt Junction.

A despatch from London says: David Lougheed, his wife and little daughter, were killed near Kingscourt Junction on Sunday afternoon by Grand Trunk passenger train No. 3. Mr. Lougheed was driving home from church and was crossing the track when the train suddenly came into view. Before he could get the rig over the track the engine struck it. The three occupants of the buggy and the horse were instantly killed.

TWO MEN INSTANTLY KILLED.

Derrick Boom Crashed Down on Workers.

A despatch from Trenton says: About 10 o'clock on Friday morning, at the construction of the Trent Canal, near Glen Miller, about three miles north of Trenton, two men were instantly killed by the falling of a big derrick. One of the men was the foreman in charge of the work, and his home is in Trenton. His name is Wm. Cronen, a middle-aged man of forty odd years. The other man killed was an elderly Italian workman, whose name is unknown.

DEATH OF DR. WITHROW.

Prominent Methodist Editor and Author Passes Away.

A despatch from Toronto says: Following an attack of paralysis sustained on Thursday the 15th instant, Rev. Dr. William H. Withrow of the Methodist Publishing House, author, editor and traveller, passed away shortly before 12 o'clock on Thursday night at his home, 244 Jarvis street. As a man high in the councils of the Methodist Church and one whose kindliness endeared him to many hearts his unexpected demise comes as a shock.

HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

Yardman Blamed for Fatal Wreck at Brantford.

A despatch from Brantford says: Joseph Maguire, late Grand Trunk yardman, who was held by the company as partially responsible for the recent wreck in which one Brantfordite and two Londoners were killed, was, on Wednesday, committed for trial at the next High Court Assizes on a charge of manslaughter. His counsel made an effort to have the charge reduced to neglect, but the Crown refused, and will press the case against him.

Four men were killed by an explosion of dynamite at Port Daniel, Quebec, on Saturday.

A Calgary despatch says Mr. Bell Hardy has resigned from the Mechanics' Union on account of the strictures contained in the report of the committee that investigated the C. P. R. strike settlement.

CHINA NOT AFRAID OF JAPAN

Men Are Being Trained for the Inevitable War Between the Two Nations.

A despatch from Philadelphia, Pa., says: Declaring that the youth of China, the younger and more progressive element in the nation, would in a great revolution overthrow the present dynasty, Rev. William Christie, a missionary at the Christian and Mission Alliance, stated that great disturbances were about due in the Celestial Empire, and also that a war with Japan was in contemplation. Mr. Christie said:

"The object of the revolutionary movement is the overthrow of the present dynasty, which is hated for its conservatism and feared for its power. During the past year there have been three abortive attempts, each time before the movement was ripe. The unrest is being fostered by the student element.

"China is not afraid of Japan. The Government is working night and day in the training of men for the war with the Japanese that eventually will come. All this talk of conciliation between Japan and China in the event of another [illegible] with the western nations, is [illegible] culous."

THREE HUNDRED MEN LOST

Greatest Mine Disaster of Many Years in Germany.

A despatch from Hamm, Westphalia, Germany, says: The greatest mine disaster in many years in Germany occurred on Thursday morning at the Redbod mine, three miles from here. There was a very heavy explosion in the mine about 4 a.m., and almost immediately the mine took fire. Of 380 miners only six escaped without injury. Thirty-five were taken out badly injured, and 37 bodies were brought out. The remaining 302 have been given up for lost. The explosion destroyed one of the shafts, which had to be partly repaired before the rescue work was begun.

Heartrending scenes were enacted at the mine when the dead and wounded were brought to the surface, and there were similar scenes in the town when the injured were transported through the streets to the hospitals.

Finally the fire had made such great headway that it was decided that any further attempts to rescue the entombed men were vain, owing to the impossibility of entering the galleries. At the same time an order was issued to flood the mine. First reports indicated that the accident was the result of an explosion of coal dust, but the statements of the injured men render this impossible.

RHEUMATISM IN THE BLOOD

Liniments and Rubbing Will Not Cure It—The Disease Must be Treated Through the Blood.

The trouble with men and women who have rheumatism is that they waste valuable time in trying to rub the complaint away. If they rub hard enough the friction causes warmth in the affected part, which temporarily relieves the pain, but in a short time the aches and pains are as bad as ever. All the rubbing, and all the liniments and outward applications in the world won't cure rheumatism, because it is rooted in the blood. Rubbing won't remove the poisonous acid in the blood that causes the pain. But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will, because they are a blood medicine acting on the blood. That is why the aches and pains and stiff swollen points of rheumatism disappear when these pills are used. That's why sensible people waste no time in rubbing, but take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when the first twinges of rheumatism come on, and these speedily drive the trouble out of their system. Mr. John Evans, 12 Kempt Road, Halifax, N. S., says: "About three years ago I had an attack of rheumatism which settled in my right leg and ankle, which became very much swollen and was exceedingly painful. I wasted a good deal of time trying to get rid of the trouble by rubbing with liniments, but it did not do me a bit of good. My daughter was using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at the time and finally persuaded me to try them. Inside of a week the pills began to help me, and after taking them a few weeks longer the trouble completely disappeared and has not bothered me since. My daughter was also taking the pills at the time for weakness and anaemia, was also cured by them, and I am now a firm friend of this medicine."

Most of the troubles that afflict mankind are due to poor, watery blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new red blood. That is why they cure anaemia with its headaches and backaches, and dizziness and fainting spells; the pangs of rheumatism, and the sharp stabbing pains of neuralgia; also indigestion, St. Vitus' dance, paralysis and the ailments of young girls and women of mature age. Good blood is the secret of health and the secret of good blood is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FIGHTING FIRE IN CHINA

STRANGERS HELP TO QUENCH THE FLAMES.

Travellers Come Upon a Burning Bridge and Find Strange Sights.

Following the main road we found it only thirty miles northwest, to the Fu city of Yuencheo, but several passes had to be climbed, the days were hot, and in spite of the 1,000 or more feet of altitude we were nearly roasted, entirely tired out and looking for a couple of days of rest with fellow foreigners.

Little did we dream of getting the most unusual fire experience that we did, says a correspondent of the Shanghai Mercury. It was a Saturday morning and the first day of the Chinese fifth month or "moon," when everybody must have out a lighted candle and incense for some one, no one knows who if you ask them. It is "ancient custom" and that settles it. We had just crossed the long fourteen span bridge which connects the city with its busy western suburb, called Kiangsi Street, and had noticed blazing candles, one or more in front of each of the 108 shops or booths lining the bridge on both sides.

The bridge and booths seemed to be all of wood, and it was remarked that this looked somewhat dangerous. However, a nice inn was found at the end of the bridge which had a back veranda facing the river and giving a good view of the bridge. As usual with sights seemingly worth it, we took a put the camera back in the box, were soon more presentable for city life and found our way to the hospitable mission compound in the middle of the city. As usual a warm welcome was found at the hands of the six or seven foreigners here. These were all of the German branch of the C. I. M., and we were just enjoying breakfast and telling and receiving all the news when the fire trumpets were sounded.

Soldiers were parading the streets and warning the people that a fire was on, and that they should be watchful. This is doubly necessary here, as so much wood is used in construction, being the cheapest material at hand, and fires get fearful headway and burn out very rapidly. The missionaries, having a pump and hose for self-protection, sometimes go to big fires, where they can be of help.

In this case breakfast was forgotten by every one, the pump and hose got ready, and by this time some one said it was the bridge that was on fire. This being near the personal effects of the writer, and of special interest now, a hurried visit was made, in the wake of the "Gospel Hall Fire Department," and sure enough, there was the great crowded bridge a mass of flames in the centre, where the candles had been thickets, in front of the idol, and there seemed no hope of saving the 100 odd shops on the bridge itself.

THE PUMP AND HOSE

were soon go to work, and did splendid work for their size, but there were three men to manage that, and the writer seemed to be of no use. Hearing that the Hsien Mandarin who should come to such fires and supervise some effective measures was absent on business in the country, and that the two other pumps native owned) in the city were not coming, and also noting that there was but one small official helping to quell the fire, and that with only about twenty soldiers, the writer hurried to them, snapped two more pictures of the bridge burning, sent the goods and the coolies into the city and himself appeared on the scene in straw sandals, short clothes, and with a large wet towel wound around the head, held in place by the useful queue. A great fire brigade we all were, not an axe, saw or hardly a pail among us all!

A raid was again made on my friend the innkeeper, and down in the basement a two foot coal poker was found, while next door we commandeered a small pail from an old lady. The poker was not much for power and the pail was small and lonesome, but a big noise was made on the light woodwork of the four booths (two on each side) we were trying to get out, and the tiles flew as well. The pump and poker inspired the soldiers, and the fire was stopped at the east end of the bridge, to the good wetting of the flooring by the G. F. D.

SLEEPLESS BABIES ARE SICKLY BABIES

When babies are restless and sleepless it is the surest possible sign of illness. Well babies sleep soundly and wake up brightly. Sleeplessness is generally due to some derangement of the stomach or bowels or to teething troubles. A few doses of Baby's Own Tablets will put the little one right, and make it sleep naturally and soundly. Mothers need not be afraid of this medicine as it is guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no opiate or narcotic. Mrs. Louis Reville, Gawas, Ont., says: —"I am never without Baby's Own Tablets in the house. I have used this medicine for mw children as occasion required, for the last five years, and have found it superior to all other medicines in curing the ills of childhood." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Red noses, according to a French physician, are more frequently due to cigarette-smoking than to drink.

"Sorry, sir," telephoned the butcher, "but we are out of sirloin. Why don't your wife order you a round?" "What's that?" exploded Harker, at the other end of the line. "I say, why don't your wife order you a round?" "Why don't my wife order me around? Man, that is all she does from morning until night! If you were nearer, I'd——" but the startled butcher had hung up the receiver.

A POOR MEDICO.

"I don't believe in that doctor."

"Why?"

"He didn't tell me everything I wanted to eat was bad for me!"

A Wide Sphere of Usefulness.—The consumption of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has grown to great proportions. Notwithstanding the fact that it has now been on the market for over thirty-one years, its prosperity is as great as ever, and the demand for it in that period has very greatly increased. It is beneficial in all countries, and wherever introduced fresh supplies are constantly asked for.

Switzerland heads the list of European countries in divorce, the rate being 40 divorces for every 1,000 marriages, France, with 21 per 1,000 coming second, and Germany third with 17 per 1,000.

Tearing Down Signals does not delay storms. Opium-laden "medicines" may check coughing, but the cold stays. Do not trifle; when you begin to cough take Allen's Lung Balsam, free from opium, full of healing power.

Medical Man—"Jobson has done the meanest thing I ever heard of. He came to my house the other night, ate a big dinner, got indigestion, and then went to another doctor to be cured."

The cheapest tea to use is not the lowest priced. You can buy tea a few cents a pound cheaper that will make a drink, but if you want an absolutely pure, healthful, cleanly prepared tea use "Salada." It is infinitely more delicious and decidedly more economical than other teas, because it goes farther.

If the appetite of a man were as great in proportion to his size as is a sparrow's, he would eat a whole sheep at one sitting.

Not a Nauseating Pill.—The excipient of a pill is the substance which enfolds the ingredients and makes up the pill mass. That of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is so compounded as to preserve their moisture, and they can be carried into any latitude without impairing their strength. Many pills, in order to keep them from adhering, are rolled in powders, which prove nauseating to the taste. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are so prepared that they are agreeable to the most delicate.

HOW MRS. CLARK FOUND RELIEF

AFTER YEARS OF SUFFERING DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED HER.

Pleasant Point Matron Tells Her Suffering Sisters How to be Free From the Terrible Pains that Make Life a Burden.

Pleasant Point, Ont., Nov. 16—(Special).—That most of the ills that the suffering women of Canada have to bear are due to disordered Kidneys, and that the natural cure for them is Dodd's Kidney Pills, is once more shown in the case of Mrs. Merril C. Clarke, a well-known resident of this place and a prominent member of the Salvation Army. Mrs. Clarke is always ready to give her experience for the benefit of her suffering sisters.

"My sickness commenced twenty years ago with the change of life," says Mrs. Clarke. "My health was in a bad state. Water would run from my head which would make me faint. When I came out of the fainting spells I took fits. I was bloated till I was clumsy. The pain I suffered was awful. It would go to my feet and then to my head. Many doctors attended me, and I tried many medicines, but nothing gave me relief till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills. The first box stopped the fits and seven boxes cured me completely."

Every suffering woman should use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They make strong, healthy kidneys, and the woman who has good Kidneys is safeguarded against those terrible pains that make miserable the lives of so many women.

HOW TO HANDLE SICK STOCK.

Place the sick animal in a well disinfected and dry box stall with plenty of bedding and sunlight (avoid drafts). In cold weather place a blanket on the animal, feed sparingly with digestible food, such as bran mashes made of linseed tea; keep the manger sweet and clean. Water should be pure and clean, and warmed when necessary.

It is always necessary for new milch cows to be given warm water. An injection of warm (per rectum) should be given all sick animals, excepting those afflicted with looseness of the bowels.

HIS WISH FULFILLED.

A German peddler rapped timidly at the kitchen entrance. Mrs. Kelly, angry at being interrupted in her washing, flung open the door and glowered at him.

"Did you wish to see me?" she demanded in threatening tones.

The peddler backed off a few steps.

"Vell, if I did," he assured her with an apologetic grin, "I got my vish, thank you."

"A Little Cold, You Know," will become a great danger if it be allowed to reach down the throat to the lungs. Nip the peril in the bud with Allen's Lung Balsam, a sure remedy containing no opiates.

Brushes made of such thin glass fibre that they are like spun silk are used by artists when decorating china.

A cough is often the forerunner of serious pulmonary afflictions, yet there is a simple cure within the reach of all in Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, an old-time and widely recognized remedy, which, if resorted to at the inception of a cold, will invariably give relief, and by overcoming the trouble, guard the system from any serious consequences. Price 25 cents, at all dealers.

A police-sergeant was boasting of the honesty that prevailed in his division. "Why," he said, "you might hang your gold watch on a lamp-post in the evening and find it still there in the morning." DISEASES

THE SULTAN'S CIGARETTES.

Probably the most particular smoker in the world is the Sultan of Turkey, whose recent granting of a constitution to his subjects has attracted universal attention. His cigarettes must be of the finest possible quality, and to ensure this, they are made in a small factory in the Royal palace itself. Some half-dozen workmen, the most skilled to be found, are daily engaged in a light, airy room, containing a couple of hand-cutting machines of the simplest pattern, and here they examine the bales of Turkish-grown tobacco raised for the Sultan's use. The best crops in the country are marked for his special benefit, and what is not actually selected for making into cigarettes must be destroyed. A hundredweight of leaves may be turned over before a pound sufficiently fine and flawless for the Royal lips is found. And the flavor is undeniably superb.

Only those who suffer from piles can know the agony, the burning, throbbing, shooting, stabbing pains which this ailment causes and the way it wrecks the sufferer's life!

Zam-Buk is blessed by thousands who used to suffer from piles, but whom it has cured. One such grateful person is Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor of Greenwood Avenue, Toronto. She says: "For four long years I suffered acutely from bleeding piles. During that time I spent an immense amount of money on 'remedies' and doctor's prescriptions but I got no ease. Zam-Buk was different to everything else I had tried and it cured me. I am grateful for the cure, and as I have never had piles once since, I know the cure is permanent."

Another thankful woman is Mrs. A. E. Gardiner, of Catelina, Trinity Bay. She says: "In my case Zam-Buk effected a wonderful cure. For 12 years I had been troubled with blind, bleeding and protruding piles. I had been using various kinds of ointments, etc., but never came across anything to do me good until I tried Zam-Buk which cured me! That this may be the means of helping some sufferers from piles to try Zam-Buk is the wish of one who has found great relief."

Brockville Presbytery.

The Presbytery of Brockville held a regular meeting in Cardinal on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. There was a good attendance of ministers and elders. Among other items of business was the disposal of a call from Alexandria to Rev. D. Stewart, B.A , of Morewood. After hearing the representations of the congregations concerned, and the Rev. Mr. Tanner, of the Presbytery of Glengarry, Mr. Stewart decided to accept the call, which was most hearty and unanimous, and will be inducted into the new charge during the first week of December.

Mr. Stewart is a young man of great promise, and the Presbytery of Brockville very much regret his removal.

A number of the brethren spoke very feelingly of his departure and of his zeal and faithfulness in his present charge, where he is so highly esteemed.

In connection with the meeting of the Presbytery of Brockville, at Cardinal, there was a convention of workers in the Sabbath School and Young Peoples Societies of the Presbytery. Rev. Dr. Neil, of Westminster Church, Toronto, delivered a most interesting and inspiring address on Tuesday evening, on "The Child in the Midst," and on Wednesday forenoon conducted a most helpful conference on Sabbath School Work.

On Wednesday afternoon, Rev. N D. Keith, of Prescott, gave a fine address on "The Aims of the Young People's Societies," and in the evening Rev. N. H. McGillivray, of Cornwall, gave a rousing address on the "Layman's Missionary Movement." Many of the delegates took part in the discussions that followed the deliverance of the above address. A large number of representatives were present and all were kindly entertained by the Cardinal congregation and others.

Proved Beyond Doubt.

The disappointed victims of poor Catarrh remedies should read the statement of J. R. Smith, of Lake Stream, N. B. In Catarrhozone he found an absolute cure and says: "Last winter my little girl of eight caught cold which lodged in her ears in the form of Catarrh. She became sick and deaf and nothing helped. By inhaling Catarrhozone she got relief and gradually the discharge went away. She was cured perfectly of Catarrh. Personally I can recommend Catarrhozone for coughs and throat irritation; its a wonderful medicine." Sold everywhere, 25c. and $1.00.

The Late Alma Beckstead.

There passed away on Monday, Nov. 9th, at the home of her father at Aultsville. Alma Beckstead, one of those bright young lives which fill the home with gladness and help to lighten the burdens of life. Miss Alma Beckstead was born at Grantley, Ont., 28 years ago coming to Aultsville to reside about eight years ago. Being of a delicate constitution, her disease, asthma, racked her frame with its rasping, and these attacks becoming more frequent caused heart trouble, which was the immediate cause of her death. The end came suddenly and unexpectedly to her friends, as only a few knew of her last illness.

She was a member of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church, and was also a member of the Young Ladies' Bible Class in Sunday School. Her cheerful countenance and jovial manner will be missed by those who knew and had learned to love her since she came to Aultsville to reside.

Besides a fond father and mother, she leaves three sisters, Mrs. Carl, Mrs. Wallace and Mrs. McLean, of Grantley, and four brothers, Howard and Arthur, of Grantley, and Ross and Irvine, besides an aged grandmother at home. To these and the other relatives the sympathy of the community is extended. The circumstances are doubly sad as only a little over two months have elapsed since the grandfather was taken from the home by death.

The funeral was held on Wednesday, Nov. 11th.

A short service at the house was conducted by Rev. W. Service, and the funeral service was held at Grantley church, interment being made in Grantley cemetery. The pallbearers were the four brothers of the deceased. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. T. C. Cassidy, and the choir, of which she was a member for several years, sang at the funeral.

Confessed to Burglary.

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 10.—The police took into custody to day on a charge of drunkeness a young man giving the name of Chas. Gray. He was wearing a new suit of clothes, including an overcoat, and had in his possession several pairs of gloves with the tags recently torn off.

When closely questioned Gray acknowledged having committed a burglary in Napanee last night in company with another man, whose name he will not divulge. He claims to have entered the store of Lester Byrce by cutting away a panel of a rear door, and, after fitting themselves out with clothing and numerous sundry articles, they skipped the town, coming east by the early train. He says his partner left him at Kingston. Gray is being held awaiting the arrival of an officer from Napanee.

Confesses to Shooting.

Ottawa, November 14.—William Dougherty, arrested in connection with a shooting affray in Rochesterville, when George Illchuck was shot on the street in a row, has confessed to the shooting.

Women of England.

The following is a quotation from a letter to the Rev. Mr. Runnells, from his sister, Mrs. Bird, who lives in London, England:—

"We are having exciting times here. The unemployed—hundreds of the scum of England marching through the streets with drums and banners, rattling their collection boxes and speechifying.

Then we have the Suffragists, rushing the House of Commons, and being sent to prison. Yesterday two women got into the visitors' gallery and chained themselves to the grating, locking the chains, then began addressing the House. Attendants came rushing up to carry them out and found them chained to the iron grating. While the attendants were pulling and tugging to get them free, they were addressing unwelcome listeners on "Votes for Women." It is really laughable, but they are determined and are going to get the vote, because many of them are the leading women of England, with money and influence, to say nothing of ability. They are fighting hard, and are sure to win. I am not one of them, but I think they will win. The attendants had finally to break down the iron framework, then ushered these women into an ante-room, where chains were filed and they were freed I think that was a clever trick"

Whatever we may think of these zealous Suffragists, we cannot help admiring their determination and self-sacrificing spirit. If the women of our country and community were as willing to go to prison and to judgment in the interests of some great cause, some reforms would be here that are long overdue.

Heavy Sentences on Brockville Thieves.

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 16—Swift justice has been given the two men who visited the town on the 3rd inst, and that night robbed six business places, winding up by attempting to steal a gasoline launch which they purposed taking to Ogdensburg and which failed to work. The next day they were arrested in Ottawa, giving the names of Stewart Gray and Charles Campbell. The former confessed and Campbell had to acknowlenge his crime.

To-day they were sentenced by Judge McDonald, Gray to six yearsand Campbell to seven years in Kingston penitentiary. Gray resided in Ottawa but Campbell had only been recently liberated from Central prison, Toronto, where on June 11th he was sentenced under the name of C. W. Darrington for stealing $69 from the Albany club. In their raid here they secured very little cash, less than $15.

Strange Death of Boy at Smith's Falls.

Michael O'Neil, a Perth boy, aged sixteen years, died suddenly at Smith's Falls, and owing to some ugly rumors which are afloat in connection with his demise, an inquest was ordered and was adjourned.

The deceased was a baker by trade, and had been about his work all day until four o'clock in the afternoon. After that nothing was seen of him, so far as known, until the evening, when he was discovered in a dying condition in his room at the store he was employed. He appeared to be in great distress and was lying with his face on the floor and partly under the bed. A physician was hastily summoned, but the unfortunate young fellow only lived a short time after he was discovered. An autopsy was held, and the report of the physicians will be given to the jury at the inquest.

Ten-Year-Old Boy Shot.

Peterboro, Nov. 13.—Information has been received from the township of Harvey, via Young's Point, of a fatal gun accident. A ten-year-old lad named Roland Ayatte, with a companion of the same age was yesterday returning from school, the latter carrying a shotgun. By some means the piece was discharged, the contents entering Ayatte's chest. His companion ran for help, but when it came the boy was dead. Exact details of how the accident happened are wanting. An inquest may be held.

...tools of clover, a scientist ...and that the little pimples at the base of the stem consisted of millions of microbes, and he also found that these microbes have the power to take nitrogen from the air and give it to the plant. After many failures, this process of manuring is now a success, and farmers in many countries buy these microbes, packed in cotton-wool, and spread them on the ground as manure.

SAVED FROM STARVATION.

To appreciate the full value of this discovery, it must be remembered that twenty-five years ago it was known to scientific men that there was every chance of the world's food supply being so reduced before they grew old that half the people of Europe and America would die of starvation.

It was all a question of manure for the land. As everyone knows, the land can grow practically nothing without its allowance of manure—neither wheat for bread, nor clover to produce beef and mutton, nor potatoes, turnips, fruit, nor flowers. Long ago, when people were comparatively few, the manure of the farmyard sufficed. But for many years past the supply of this valuable commodity has been only a drop in the bucket of what the land demands.

Fortunately, a great store of guano was discovered in Peru. But the population increased, and the guano began to give out. There was no way of renewing it, and the farmer was faced with bankruptcy, when another discovery saved him. That is the fact that one of the by-products of gas manufacture, sluphate of ammonia, is an excellent substitute for farmyard manure.

THEY WANTED MORE.

But the population continued to grow. More and more food was required. The sulphate of ammonia began to fall short of the land's needs. The supply could not be increased. And so famine again loomed ahead.

Then came the providential discovery in Chili of the nitrate of sodium, or Chili saltpetre. But, great as the store of nitrate is, it became evident that it could not last many years. No other natural source of manure is known to exist, and it seemed that by the year ...in th... saved from ... close shave, for ... twenty or thirty years late starvation was inevitable.—London Answers.

At 1,000 fathoms below the surface of the ocean there is a uniform temperature just above freezing-point.

"After taking three bottles of your wonderful medicine, our baby was entirely well and needed no more medicine. At sixteen months of age she weighed thirty pounds. She had cried eight months, night and day, and nothing did her good until we tried Scott's Emulsion."—MRS. E. C. SMITH, Villa Rica, Ga.

Scott's Emulsion

probably saved this child's life. Four doctors had been tried. SCOTT'S EMULSION seemed to be just the thing needed, and it is just the thing needed by thousands of other children. It's so easily digested, so pure and harmless, yet most powerful in building up the most delicate child or adult. But be sure to get SCOTT'S EMULSION, there are so many worthless and harmful imitations.

OUR Up-to-Date Tailor, man who sells pota... each bushel of potatoes sold off the farm there is sent away 5.7 cents worth of fertilizer. If, therefore, a man receives 40 cents a bushel for his potatoes, the margin between the selling price and the value of fertilizer removed is several times larger than in ... nothy. The farmer can, therefore, afford to treat his potato fields honestly by applying to them before, and perhaps after, the crop is removed, at least as much fertilizing ingredients as the crop will extract from the soil. With each bushel of oats a farmer sells 17 cents worth of fertilizing ingredients. If he receives from 40 to 50 cents per bushel for his oats he, in turn, can afford to return to the soil, although he often does not, as much fertilizer as the crop removes. In virtue of their extra price, oats need not, though they usually are, be as exacting on the soil as hay. Looking over these statements, one cannot but notice that, unless the vendor receives $15 or more a ton for hay the crop is, by far, the greatest robber of fertility grown in our provinces, and, yet, this is the crop that in many sections is the most freely sold. Is it to be wondered that we often hear of run out farms and poor agricultural conditions. There is only one salvation for this kind of agriculture, and that is, live stock.

Now, if it is necessary to keep live stock—or rather have live stock keep us—it is, at least, equally important that this live stock whether it be cattle, horses, sheep, swine or poultry, be of the best quality, for there is stock that will lose money for the owner.

It is a curious trait of human nature that many a man, who can summon up his courage to buy first-class stock and who will, under the stress of circumstances, pay a fairly large price, will begrudge to those animals every extra ounce of feed they consume. This will not pay. Such profitable classes of stock as Jerseys, Holsteins, Ayrshires, Shorthorns, etc., have all been brought to their excellence through feeding, and their real value consists in the amount of food they can consume to advantage, over and above the amount necessary to maintain the vital functions.

A WISE MOTHER'S STORY

Let all Mothers and Daughters Read Carefully and Profit by it.

"I am convinced," writes Mrs. A. B. Hopeford from St. John, "that a majority of young girls who die of consumption do so because their mothers neglected their health at the critical time when carefulness insures vigor and sound health. If a breath. If a girl's health is neglected their health at the critical time when carefulness insures vigor and sound health. If a girl's health is neglected from her eleventh to sixteenth year her body will be weak and she becomes a ready victim of typhoid, anaemia, and in many cases consumption itself In her sixteenth year my youngest daughter showed signs of failing strength. Some dyspeptic troubles developed, her heart became weak and palpitation frightened her dreadfully. She was irregular in the important bodily functions and rapid loss in weight and a ruddy complexion pointed to a rapid decline.

She disliked making her troubles known to our doctor, a feeling I felt I should respect, and so by good fortune I was led to use Ferrozone with most gratifying results. My neighbor next door, Mrs. Woods, had found Forrozone so good in nervousness that she persuaded me that it would restore Flossie's health, and from the time the second box was commenced her improvement was constant. She is now a big, strong girl, ruddy and plump, able to study hard and ro take her share of household duties. I am in earnest advocate of Ferrozone. We all use it now as a tonic as it is certainly woman's best friend."

All dealers sell Ferrozone, 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2 50; procure a supply so-day.

Warnock Will Case is Open.

A legal fight in which many Ottawans are interested is on the list for the non-jury sessions of the high court which opened Monday afternoon in Brockville before Chief Justice Falconbridge. The action arises over the will of the late James Gregory Warnock, formerly of Ottawa, in Brockville last May, one hour before his death. Two points are to be settled. The first is as to the legality of the will, it being claimed by those opposing it that Warnock was a very sick man and that one hour before his death he had not the capacity to make a legal will. In the event of the will not being held valid, there is an interesting point to decide as to who his wife was and who would benefit by the administration of the estate.

For sixteen years the late Mr. Warnock had lived in Ottawa with a woman who was known as Mrs. Warnock and there are several children. Warnock subsequently married Miss Eva McCallum, who had been employed in the store which he conducted on Sussex street.

The Methodist W. M. S. at its regular monthly meeting on the afternoon of Thursday, Nov. 12, held at the parsonage entertained the sister society of the Presbyterian church and the Methodist Ladies Aid. After the usual routine of business had been disposed of Mrs. A. W. Reveler read a paper on the medical work in mission lands showing the scope of its endeavor and the great success of its achievements. Mrs. E. L. Munharvey followed with a paper entitled "Women's work in China," dealing with the moral and social conditions surrounding the home. Both papers were very instructive and interesting and were greatly enjoyed. At the conclusion of the programme the society served a hearty repast to its friends and a most pleasant evening was spent in social conversation.

On the following Sunday evening the annual thank offering service was held in the church and a large audience gathered to listen to Messrs. (Rev.) J. S. Hughes of Kemptville, who had come to address the society on that phase of the missionary problem as it effects the women of the church.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your NEW METHOD TREATMENT for a serious blood disease with which I had been inflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the NEW METHOD TREATMENT for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. CHAPTER IV.—(Cont'd).

Some men would have been paralyzed by a departure so bold, so absolutely without authority, but Jimmy was a man of courage, and his convictions were equal to the severe strain; and so, as he marched up the street, his grizzled head was carried a trifle higher than he had borne it for years, and his step had lost a shade of its shuffle.

He knew nothing of the amazement rapidly resolving into explosive rage that he had left in his rear, nothing of the man with the whitened face and lacerated heart behind the curtain. He merely felt that he had made a new move on life's board, and therewith he was content.

A move indeed, but to an end! Too often do men mistake the leaf of bay for garland of laurel, too often in the hour of bitter black defeat do they sing their song of triumph. Jimmy Rule had paid no tribute to Jacob Graham's virtues; he had merely drawn attention to Michael Strang's sin's, and because of the slumbering fires of hatred his call had fanned again into fierce white glow, he had done the dead man distinct dis-service.

Michael Strang was one of those men apparently designed by nature for the overthrow of certain popular theories, though it may be contended that he was merely an exception further establishing a well fixed rule. Outwardly, he was one of the most amiable of mortals; contentment sat upon him like a well cut garment; his speech was silvery, concessional, as that of one in whose mouth butter would fail to melt; his whole bearing that of a being at peace with himself and the world.

And yet Michael Strang's position left something to be desired. Like ninety per cent. of the men folks in Allerdale, he owed his bread and butter to the sea. But old ocean did more than minister to his needs; to the bread and butter it had added cake and wine; by the heaps of pence it had raised piles of golden coin. Of course, it was all a bargain. Nature never gives; she always insists upon an exchange, weight for weight, bulk for bulk, ache for ache, soul for soul; if not now, some day; inevitably there comes a settling hour, and the price is paid. If only nature exacted the price from the man with whom she makes the bargain, no one need complain; that would be simple justice; but alas and alas! it is often the other man who pays and the other woman and the other child. Thus hearts are broken. This was exactly how she had dealt with Michael Strang, around whom a fearsome growth of dark stories and darker hints hung in clusters. Actual contact with sea life he had never made; all his marine enterprises had been conducted from the comfortable eminence of an office desk, and the crafty seduction of a fireside chair; and it was whispered that his fortune had been made, not by the ships that had done a ship's work by landing their cargoes in the havens to which the winds should have wafted them, but—let it be whispered low—by the ships that had never reached port, and that often the price of his bargains had been paid by sailors low down in Davy Jones' locker, by the heart agony of widows and the hunger wailing of little children.

In accordance with human conception of the fitness of things, Michael Strang should have buried himself out of sight, or at least, have walked abroad in sackcloth and ashes; but he did neither. He faced his fellows with a smile of oleaginous quality, he garbed himself in broadcloth, and so successfully did he ward off the attacks of conscience and care, that even now, when his years were counted by fifty, his thatch of closely-brushed raven hair was innocent of the first grey streak.

Within the four walls of his own house, however, the real man was seen. There, like the rest of his fellow mortals, he realized the futility of dissimulation; there, his passion had full play, his meanness and malice ran riot.

Long after Jimmy Rule had passed upon his way, Strang, ashen faced, nerves quivering, hands clenched, heart pulsating with fury, stood behind the curtains in the darkened room, where he had listened to the bellman's accusatory proclamation, reviling in death the man whom in life he had hated, hated with all the intemperate, unreasoning resolution of Evil, hated as the Bad, the deliberately Bad, always hates the Good, and with no other justification than this, that the other is not as it has chosen itself to be.

"Curse him," he cried; "a thousand curses on his head! Even in his death he flouts me; from his shroud he holds me up to the scorn of the blockheads in the streets. It's always been the same, all along the line; just because I have preferred to regard my business as a commercial concern and he has chosen to turn his into a benevolent institution, because I chose to make money from my ships and he preferred a white-livered reputation, mine the bright, shining, comforting gold, his the frowsy rags of a saint—because of this, I've been spat upon and spurned, and at his feet men have fallen and worshipped. But I'll be even with him yet. I will, my soul against his, but I will. When he died I thought if he'd have left me alone, but he wouldn't; cold and dead, he has risen up like a ghost to fling his empty goodness in my face. Dead, dead, ape, but even his tombstone will stand as a reproach to me. . . .

"Dead, ay, Jacob Graham, you're dead; but—Michael Strang lives, and the Book you yourself have sworn by declares that a living dog is better than a dead lion. Dead, ay, but my books are open yet, and before the account is finished off, your reputation will be lifeless as you yourself.

"Listen, Jacob Graham!"

A new fury has hold of the man now, a type more potent than the fury of blustering, bellowing madness—a fury that could reason and sneer and smile.

"Listen, Jacob Graham. To-morrow the grave"—he stopped, and in a whisper slowly repeated the word—"to-morrow." With its utterance a new inspiration had come to him. "To-morrow!"—his thin lips curled into a malicious grin—"to-morrow!" His sinuous fingers met, and over each other rolled and intertwined until the knuckles cracked.

"To-morrow, oh, excellent, excellent!" he chuckled. "My vow shall sleep for a night. I'll keep it for your burying, Jacob. It shall be my funeral oration, delivered in the silence of the churchyard night, over a grave door not yet closed. And as I vow, so will I perform."

Rage worrying at his heart, and yet the leer of self-satisfied spite upon his face, he turned and blundered towards the door, but ere he reached it a shadowy heap, crouching upon the sheep skin mat, jerked itself into human form, on feet that gave no sound, sped hurriedly through the darkened hall and up the stairs, nor halted until it reached the wretched garret room, fit only for the rats that lodged behind its crazy boards.

"To-morrow," it croaked, as it dropped upon the ramshackle apology for a bed. "To-morrow; don't forget, captain. Sorry I've not got an invitation, but I want one so desperately bad that I'll really have to go without. To-morrow; thanks, Mr. Michael Strang, I'll be there."

To-morrow! With its dawning, the breaking of flags half-mast upon the ships that ride in upon the morning tide, until from everything that floats within the harbor walls there droops a wish of turkey red; with the noontide hour the clatter of hoofs upon the pavement, as friends and neighbors troop in from Nether port and Bransty, from fishing hamlet, and from fellside cot; and after that the patter of a myriad feet, the gathering of a black-garbed solemn-visaged throng before the gates of a darkened house; a bier, around which bareheaded sailors cluster, a coffin, hidden by the soiled red flag of Britain's merchant service, the first bit of bunting to wave upon a Graham brig; a weeping boy, the last of his line; a waiting woman, with hard, drawn face and torn heart; a squat, moon-faced skipper, whose world is nearly empty; the wailing strains of the mariners' dirge, the hollow rattle of ashes and dust, and over all and at the end of all, the pall of night.

Night—this, the morrow, for which Michael Strang has waited. Through its earlier hours he sits by his lonely hearth, no sign of emotion upon him, his pale, bloodless face masked by its usual placidity just as though his life was without a spot; and not until the hour wherein the lights have vanished and tired folks have sought their beds, does he draw his cloak about his shoulders, set a wide-brimmed felt hat upon his head, and step out into the deserted streets.

As the door softly clicks behind him, a little window, opening upon the narrow alley carved into steps down the side of the house, is gently shot up, a pair of sharp eyes, deep sunk in a pinched, old young face, per cautiously up the steps and down, and then a long, lanky body wriggles through the narrow space and drops lightly to the ground. Another look this way and that, and then the window is silently pulled down, and The Captain darts nimbly up the stone stairway.

Under the yellow glare of the street lamps not a soul is in sight, but without hesitation he shuffles off to the right, travelling rapidly until the erect form of his master looms out of the gloom, whereupon he checks his pace to that of his quarry. Thus they thread their way between the gaunt, [illegible] lines of house and shop, until the road divides, and into a black cavern, made of high wall and overhanging tree, Strang sharply swerves. Presently, he reaches a narrow door set in the wall, and halts, looks up the lane and down, then slips a key into the lock and passes at a stride from the realm of life into the land of sleep.

Before him the huge form of the old square-towered church, showing twice as vast as with daylight around it, stands ebonized against the profound blue of the midnight sky; on this side and on that and stretching away in front of him to the shadow of the distant building, file upon file of chesselled stones, lonely stones, mossy green, letterless, dead now themselves, in very truth; grey stones of memory still vital, of love unsatisfied; stones of ghostly white, declaring to-day and night of riven hearts, from which the blood still slowly drips.

On these for a moment his eyes coldly rest, and then, without a touch of fear, he drags his unhallowed feet through the sacred grasses of the garden, and lightly lifts them over the green quilted beds. From one of these a tiny shaft of marble, bearing two initial letters and a date, projects, an apology for a tombstone, or, better still, a substitute for one, for, since the day when the widow spent her mite upon it, the widow's heart has been fixed upon one more worthy of her man, and Strang, catching his foot against it, stumbles and almost falls. To a man inspired in the slightest degree by superstition, to a man with the edge of his finer feelings unblunted, the thing might have been minatory, ominous, for the grave is that of a man who had lost his life within sight of home on one of Strang's ships; but the shipowner's nerves are tough as the marble itself, and with a curse for the block and another for the dust beneath it, he passes upon his way.

Close by the fringe of the shadow cast by the church he comes upon a tiny clearing, a spot wherein the turf is newly gashed, and for a moment he halts, hesitates in his purpose, draws back within the screening tombs. The gaping scar, torn, desolate, but oh, so majestic, flings its spell upon him; into his graceless soul there enters the first faint suggestion of awe that is has known for long, long years. And yet it is only a suggestion, not stout enough for battle with the evil forces that have sent him hither; all the good angels that might minister unto such as he, have surely fled, terror-stricken by his impious design; only a suggestion, only a halt. Again he advances, stumbling over the littre of soil and planks, nor stays until he is poised on the verge of Jacob Graham's half-filled grave, his eyes bent upon its black, indefinite vacuity.

A moment thus, and then the silence of the graveyard night [illegible] broken. Strang is speaking, [illegible] voice, low pitched, sibilant, intense with malignant passion.

"Jacob Graham," he cries, [illegible] living appealing to the dead, "th[illegible] is something I would say to y[illegible] Listen, man, listen to the mess[illegible] I've brought. I'm here to tell [illegible] how I hate you, how I've alw[illegible] hated you, and that even tho[illegible] you lie there dead, I mean to w[illegible] my will upon you. Have you n[illegible] seen it, old man? Oh, what a [illegible] fully blind fool you've been; bl[illegible] blind, as all the rest of your sa[illegible] timonious crew are blind! [illegible] think that your life and mine [illegible] always lain far apart, and I'll w[illegible] rant you've praised your God [illegible] on your knees for the fancy. [illegible] tell you, our lives have run side [illegible] side; we've been brothers aga[illegible] our will; you the lily white la[illegible] of the flock, I the sheep with [illegible] blackened fleece. Yes, we've b[illegible] brothers, brothers, brothers, I [illegible] you, kin because of our contra[illegible]

"No use your pleading you di[illegible] know, you must have known [illegible] known how you have ever been [illegible] alted as a pattern, and I have b[illegible] held up as a warning, how all [illegible] conduct has been pitted aga[illegible] yours, and how in contrast all [illegible] I have done has shown doubly b[illegible] and yours more abundantly wh[illegible]

"Jacob Graham," he contin[illegible] "I tell you I hate you, hate y[illegible] not for anything you did, but [illegible] what you were—hate you bec[illegible] for all your conduct men [illegible] naught but praise, and me t[illegible] despised even when they faw[illegible] upon the gold I'd won.

"And now you're dead. On[illegible] long, long years ago—when [illegible] were young and I was you[illegible] still, I swore that I would drag [illegible] down, that the stain that rests [illegible] on my ships—if it be a stain—sh[illegible] rest upon yours also; and [illegible] though you lie there dead, [illegible] shall not escape me.

"You are dead, Jacob Grah[illegible] but your boy still lives, and [illegible] hatred you have created in [illegible] heart I pass along to him. L[illegible] see the thing I hold in my ha[illegible] it is the book whereby you cl[illegible] to have ordered your life, upo[illegible] open pages I vow my vow. Y[illegible] name, the name of the Grahams, I swear to roll in the mud; the mantle of righteousness which you and your fathers have worn shall be torn from the back of your boy, and ripped into shreds, rag from rag, thread from thread; your ships shall be reviled for their rottenness, they shall sink for the sake of the gold, and women's hearts shall break that a Graham may add to his treasures. On your Book, old man, I make my oath, by the side of your unsealed tomb, that I shall lay my hand upon the heart of your boy, and leave my finger prints thereon; when I have wrought my will he shall be even—as—men—say—I—am—myself."

This, the oath, this the triumph, planned behind the curtain—this, only this.

'Tis only the grasses of the graveyard bending 'neath the kindly touch of a seaborn breeze, but to The Captain, crouched low behind a tombstone in the pit of the shadow, his brain on fire, his eyes aflame with horror, their whispering is as the hiss of execration from the spirit world. 'Tis only the transient flash of a falling star, but to the watcher the fire shaft is a flaming spear, launched by the gods upon the blasphemous head, and by its failure his amazement grows. 'Tis only the booming of the Solway tide, but on the ears of the watcher it weirdly beats as the horror moan of an unseen host. Surely, surely, retribution is at hand. Terrified by the thing he has heard, every sentiment of awe and reverence and mystery stirred by his surroundings, he waits for the denouncement his own human judgment demands.

Ah, but not thus, not thus does the Father of men deal with his sons. The black of heart in his hour of boasting has laid a lier upon unborn days, has pledged his soul in a vow and for reply there is naught save the whispering wind, the moaning sea, the chirp of an insect in the grass, the cry of a night bird circling round the grey church tower. Thus are the boasters mocked.

ALL-POWERFUL PIMPLE

HOW IT HAS SAVED THE WORLD FROM STARVATION.

The Efforts of Scientific Men Have Been Crowned With Complete Success.

It seems incredible, yet it is a hard fact, easily proved, that the civilized world, and England especially, has escaped starvation only by the skin of its teeth. In fact, had it not been for the investigation of the pimples on a plant, the worst might have happened.

All have heard of the experiments now going on in England and elsewhere with the "nitrifying baeteria." Examining the [illegible] fic man fou[illegible] ples a[illegible]

[illegible] is way the world has been [illegible] famine. But it was a [illegible] if science had be[illegible]

1925 the produce of wheat, oats, barley, maize, potatoes, and even beef and mutton, milk, butter, and cheese would be reduced to something like one-third of the present produce. Of course, long before that time there would be scarcity, high prices, hunger, and perhaps a world-wide war for the possession of the nitrate mines.

That was the catastrophe that threatened the world. How has it been averted? This is one of the most marvellous stories in the whole of science.

In the air around us is an apparently lazy, inert gas called nitrogen. Four-fifths of the air consists of this gas, and it is so abundant that no less than 3,000 tons of it float over every acre of ground. It is a most unsociable body. Only the greatest force at the command of the chemist will make it combine with other elements. And as soon as it is wedded it does everything in its power to get free. That is why gunpowder and dynamite explode. The nitrogen which is part of them awaits only the opportunity to

SEPARATE AND LIVE ALONE.

We must eat nitrogen to live. We eat it in the flesh of other animals or in plants. These animals eat it in plants, and the plants get it from the soil. Whence does the soil get its nitrogen?

Now, although there are 34,000 tons of nitrogen over every acre, neither plant nor animal can get one grain weight of it from the atmosphere, because it exists there alone. It is then what the chemists call "free" nitrogen. In order that plants may make use of it, the nitrogen must become "fixed"—that is to say, it must become united with some other body, such as soda or lime. This it is most loth to do. But during millions of years past a quantity of it has been so united. Every time a lightning-flash passes through the air it compels a very small quantity of nitrogen to unite with oxygen. This is brought down to the earth in the rain, and there it enters into union with soda or potash, or some other element.

Now, so long, of course, as men were few, there was sufficient for the food of grasses and trees. But when the population of the earth grew large, and people began to grow wheat and other grains, the store of nitrogen became quickly used up.

TO CONQUER NITROGEN.

Farmyard manure is valuable only because of the nitrogen it contains. That, too, is the reason why the gas product—made from coal, which is a vegetable body—and the Chili nitrate nourish plants. When, therefore, the natural stores showed signs of running out, scientific men set about the task of making manure—that is, of forcing the nitrogen of the air ot unite with some other body; and, after much hard labor, their efforts, as we stated at the beginning of the article, have been crowned with complete success.

About the Farm

ROBBING THE SOIL.

The produce of every farm were far better to be marketed in the form of butter, cream, beef, poultry, pork, etc., rather than as hay and oats. The following figures give my reason for this statement says Professor Cummings. The man who sells butter or cream off his farm and with that perhaps pork and poultry, sells only five or ten per cent. of the fertilizing ingredients which were required to produce the hay and grain and roots upon which his stock are fed. The man who sells whole milk sells about twenty-five per cent of the fertilizing ingredients contained in the fodder raised on the farm. The man raising steers sells from five per cent. to ten per cent. In these cases then, as well as in the case of selling pork, poultry, horses, etc., there is not removed off the farm more than from five to twenty-five per cent. of the fertilizing ingredients which enter into the composition of the fodder consumed. Not so, however, when hay or oats or barley, or wheat and summer products are sold, for in these cases the farmer hauls off his farm every single pound of fertilizing ingredients which enter into the composition of these fodders.

If in return, he receives a sufficiently high price to enable him to buy barnyard manure, if it is available, or chemical fertilizer, or with the aid of the latter, to grow green crops and plough them under then the soil would be fairly treated. This treatment is, however, seldom meted out. Of the crops commonly sold from the farm, hay is, by far, the most exacting. A ton of timothy hay, for example, contains 25.2 pounds of nitrogen; 10.6 pounds of phosphoric acid and 16 pounds of potash. To buy these fertilizing ingredients in the form of fertilizers would cost at the rate of 20 cents a pound for nitrogen; 7 cents a pound for phosphoric acid and 5 cents a pound for potash, $6.08 per ton. In addition there is the value of the vegetable matter, or humus contained in the timothy. Setting this aside, however, it is evident that the man who sells hay at from $8 to $10 per ton receives a very small margin over and above the value of hay as a fertilizer. With such a small margin, he is not likely to return much fertilizer to the land. If, instead of this the farmer were to feed this hay to stock of any kind it must be evident that the results are entirely changed, so much so that, even if no extra returns were received through this latter operation, it would pay better than to continue selling crude products off the farm, for the one method means fertility maintained, and the other, run out farms.

The Stork Legend

WITHIN the confines of Fairyland for a long time there were held captive birds which we know as storks. These birds were kept as nurses to the little human babies, which reposed on immense lily pads floating upon a great pond. It was very lonely about this pond, as the fairies permitted no one to come near, lest some of the precious babes be stolen away. And after the storks had watched over their charges for many years they began to find the task somewhat tiresome. So they took council together to discuss their grievance. The result of this meeting was that when the fairy who had sole charge of distributing the babies among human folk called for a baby, she give the permission you desire."

The very next day when the fairy came to the pond she summoned all the storks to her.

"The queen of the fairies consents to have you go out into the world," said she, "provided you are willing to do a little work in return. Heretofore some of the fairies have spent much time away from court in the carrying of babes to their mortal parents. As the queen is actually in need of the services of these fairies, she commands that you undertake the work. She promises you, too, that in return for this service the human folk will be only too glad to let you build nests upon their houses, and that they will be very fond of you and respect you."

"NURSE OF THE BABY MORTALS"

one of the storks, appointed by his fellows, said unto the sprite:

"Gracious fairy, we have served you for hundreds of years without a murmur. Now we long for a change; we long to go away from this lonely spot. Won't you release us, in order that we may go into the world? We should like, oh, so much! to see these sweet little babies grown up, and we should like to see the other animals and birds as well. Please, good fairy, grant our request!"

"That I cannot do," replied the fairy keeper of the babes, "until I have spoken to our Queen Fairy. True it is, however, that you have labored faithfully for us, and I shall speak well of you to the queen, begging that Joyfully the storks thanked the fairy for her kindness, and they promised to do exactly as the fairy queen commanded.

At once, therefore, each stork picked up a little baby from the lily pads and flew rapidly away with it to the world. Here they built nests upon the houses after they had delivered their tiny burdens, and lived in happiness ever after.

But the storks never forgot their duty of bringing the wee babies from Fairyland, and the storks' children and their grandchildren and their great-grandchildren still continue to show their allegiance to the queen fairy in this way, as well as to make mortals happy.

COSTLY PARLIAMENT HOUSE.

Parliament House, Melbourne, which has been rushed by "the unemployed" of the Commonwealth capital, is the costliest legislative palace in Greater Britain. It belongs to the Parliament of Victoria, but since Federation it has been the meeting place of the Parliament of the Commonwealth, its owners moving to a wing of the exhibition building close by.

LUCINDA'S EXPERIENCES.

She's Always Finding Things, but Never Finds Anything Valuable.

"I'm the greatest one to find things that ever was," said Lucinda, "but I never find anything valuable. And why do you suppose that is?

"People must lose valuable things don't they? Why certainly; but it doesn't seem to be my lot to find that sort. Other people find the valuable things and all that I get is what my brother Claude calls the junk.

"And the way I find the brass things is astonishing. It's mostly baby pins that I find, and I discover them on the sidewalks and in the street; everywhere, in fact.

"I see something glistening under the edge of a fence and I pick it up, and it's another baby pin. Beautifully carved, and all that, but worth nothing.

"Sometimes the pins I find thus are new and bright, sometimes old and battered; but always they are worthless so far as actual value is concerned. Why do I never find a gold baby pin? I did find one once that a jeweller said was ten karat filled, the nearest I have ever come to it, but even that was of no money value.

"Rings? Why, yes; I've found rings, too. Sapphire rings and turquoise rings and emeralds, and once I found a diamond ring, but the precious stones in these were all of the same material, namely, glass, and like the rings in which they were set, of no value whatever.

"And it has always been just the same with the various other miscellaneous items of jewelry I have found. The good things appear all to have been picked up before I come along and all the brass goods left for me, and I certainly do find them.

"And when it comes to finding money it's just the same. Somebody else appears to find all the money. Don't you know how you read in the papers how somebody found a pocketbook containing seven hundred and eighty-two dollars and ten cents? And how somebody else found a pocketbook containing eleven thousand dollars, and things like that? But nothing like that ever happened to me—somebody else always finds the big sums of money.

"I never found any money but twice in my life, and once it was a cent, and once a dollar. The cent I kept; the dollar I was very glad to be able to give up within two minutes after I found it.

"I was walking along a street when I found this dollar. I spied it ahead of me lying on the sidewalk, and when I had come to it and picked it up found that it was a really and truly good dollar bill I laughed to myself gleefully; I couldn't help it; I had finally found something of the value actual good money. And then I wondered where the dollar came from.

"Walking on along the sidewalk ahead of me was a little girl carrying a pitcher, and of course all I could see of her was her back, but she seemed to me a pleasant little girl and she seemed to be walking along cheerfully, and then all of a sudden she stopped short and seemed to get sort of stiff all over right in a jiffy, and then she turned around and started back toward where I was, and now she was crying and about as distressed a little girl as one could ever expect to see; and of course I knew what was the matter with her now, she had lost a dollar.

"When she came along to where I was I said to her, 'What's the matter, my dear?' and she answered very tearfully and solemnly:

"'I've lost a dollar.'

"'Well, don't you worry any more over that, my dear,' I said to her, 'here it is.'

"And I handed it over to her, and my gracious! I've seen a few quick changes, but I never did see shadow succeeded by sunshine quite so suddenly as it was now on this little girl's face; and I knew that I got more fun out of giving the little girl back her dollar than I ever did out of any little thing in my life.

"But really, now, why is it, do you suppose, that I find so much of that stuff that my brother Claude calls the junk, but never anything of value?"

TRAGEDY ON AN ISLAND.

An Evicted Tenant's Last Terrible Revenge.

An extraordinary affair is reported from Whiddy Island, off the coast of Kerry, Ireland. A young man named John Groggin, who, with his family, was evicted from his farm on the island a year ago, waylaid the present occupiers of the farm, who are paternal cousins of his, as they were returning from a neighbor's. He fired several shots from a revolver, but only one took effect, shattering the arm of Christopher Goggin.

He then went to the farm, and fired a number of shots through the doors and windows, killing a horse in a stable, after which he set fire to the house.

The flames were noticed on board the battleship Britannia, and an officer and twenty men landed, and succeeded in extinguishing them after great damage had been done. In the darkness one of the sailors missed his footing, and fell into a moat running round an adjacent battery, being killed instantly.

Meanwhile Christopher Goggin and his brother had notified the police on the mainland, whereupon a strong party, under Head Constable Looney, obtained a boat and went out to the island. They reached the old pier at midnight.

Almost immediately afterwards one of the officers heard a man approaching him. He went towards him, but as he did so the man, who proved to be John Goggin, put a revolver to his mouth and fired, falling dead into the constable's arms.

Goggin lost his wife and baby a week ago, and the fact that the cousin whom he wounded was to have been married, and to have lived on the farm, from which he had been evicted, is said to have preyed on his mind.

The chrysanthemum, among flowers, is said to live longest when cut.

SIR HENRI JOLY DEAD.

Passed Away in Quebec After a Long Illness.

Quebec, November 16—Sir Henri Joly de Lothbiniere, ex-lieutenant-governor of British Columbia and former premier of Quebec, died this morning at his residence here, after an illness of several months.

Sir Henri Gustave Joly de Lothbinere was the son of the late Gaspard Pierre Gustave Joly, a hugenot native of France, and Jule Christine Chartier de Lothbiniere granddaughter of the last Marquis de Lothbinere. He was born in France on December 5, 1829, and educated there. Coming to Canada, he was called to the Quebec Bar in 1885 and created a Queen's counsel in 1878. He was elected to the Canadian Assembly at the general elections of 1861 for the county of Lotbiiniere He took a prominent part in the debates on Confederation, acting with Holton, Dorion, Huntington and other Liberal leaders. In the first election to the House of Commons in 1867, he was returned by acclamation for Lobtiniere and and also to the Quebec Legislative Assembly. He remained a member of both these bodies until dual representation was abolished in 1874, when he decided to remain in the Legislature. He led the Opposition till March, 1878, when Lieutenant-Governor Letellier dismissed his ministers and called on Mr. Joly to form a Government, which he did. He remained in the Legislature until November, 1885, when he resigned his seat in consequence of the Riel agitation, of which he disapproved. He reappeared in political life at the Dominion Liberal convention held in Ottawa in 1893, of which he was vice-chairman. He stood for Portneuf at the general elections of 1896 and was elected. He entered the new Laurier administration on July 13, 1896 and was elected. He was sworn of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada, June 30, 1897, and called to the Cabinet as minister of inland revenue. He declined a seat in the Senate in 1874 and again in 1877. He was offered a portfolfo in the latter year by the Premier, but declined. He was made a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. in May, 1895, and in 1900 was appointed lieutenant-governor of British Columbia. He was an honorary D.C.L. of Bishops, Lennoxville, and an L.L.D. of Queen's University, Kingston, 1894 He took a deep interest in forestry and in 1885 was elected vice-president of the American Forestry Congress at Boston. He was the author of much valuable literature on the subject. He served as a member of the Council of Agriculture of the province of Quebec and of various other agricultural and fruit growing associations. He was a vice-president of the Imperial Federation League in Canada. In 1888 he was authorized to add his mother's name de Lotbiniere, to that of Joly by the Quebec Legislature. In September 1895, he was entrusted with the diplomatic mission of conducting Li Hung Chang, viceroy of China, through Canada. He was made a member of the Imperial Order of the Double Dragon in recognition of this service. He married in 1856 Margaretta Josepha, daughter of the late Hammond Gowan, of Quebec. There eldest son, Edmond, adopted the legal profession, and married Lucy Campbell, daughter of the late W. D. Campbell, of Quebec; the second son, Alain, graduated from the Royal Military College, Kingston, 1883. Gazetted a lieutenant in the Royal Engineers, January, 1886, he was promoted captain, 1895. He married January, 1887, Marion Helen, daughter of the late Lieut.-Col. J. T. Campbell. Their third son, Henri Gustave, born in Quebec, March 10, 1868, graduated from the Royal Military College, Kingston, 1888, after having won the Governor-General's gold medal there. Gazetted a second lieutenant in the Royal Engineers, 1888, he was promoted a lieutenant in 1891. Both officers are now and have been for some time, employed in India.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO.

What Booth's Kidney Pills are Doing for Chesterville, Ont., People.

All the blood in the body passes through the Kidneys every three minutes.

The kidneys filter the blood.

They work night and day to daily remove about 500 grains of impure matter. If they fail some part of this impure matter is left in the blood, bringing on pain in the back, headache, diziness, irregular heart, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gravel, dropsy, deposits in the urine. Booth's Kidney Pills make the filtering right and overcome Kidney trouble. Hundreds of Dundas county residents have found this out.

Mrs. Bella Gray, of Queen st., Chesterville, Ont, says: "My back had been very tender and painful and there seemed to be a weakness across the kidneys. I would take cold very easily and suffer with dull, bearing down pains in my sides. I was unable to straighten myself up for many minutes and then with much suffering. I would tire very easily and was languid and without ambition. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills through a friend and procuring them at Mr. Bolster's pharmacy I began their use. The one box of Booth's Kidney Pills took the pains and weakness out of my back entirely. I have not had a return of any symptom since and have felt fine and like a new person. I could not help recommending Booth's Kidney Pills." Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R. T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., sole Canadian agents.

Cankers on Apple Trees.

Many Ontario apple growers have complained that an unusually large number of branches are dying on their older apple trees, and not a few of the younger trees have been killed outright. The trouble has usually been attributed to sun-scald and oyster-shell scale. Investigations this autum, however, have shown that the greater part of such damage can be traced to cankers, caused either by a fungus disease known as black rot, or a bacteral disease known as pear blight, fire blight, or twig blight. The black rot attacks also the leaves and fruit, causing the latter to rot. On the surface of the rotten fruit little black pustles or pimples almost one third the size of a pin head appear after a time. These pimples contain spores which when set free are carried by the wind from tree to tree, and help spread the disease in the summer. Either kind of canker may cause diseased areas on the trunk and large branches, or at the main crotch. It is not easy to tell in every case to which disease a canker is due.

A Blight Canker however, often begins by attacking a water-spout and running down it into the trunk, crotch or main branch, and forming a large dead area there. This time of year such areas caused by blight are usually distinctly marked off from the healthy bark by a crack between the two, and by the diseased bark being darker brown in color than the healthy bark and slightly shunken. As a rule the surface of blight cankers is very smooth, not rough, checked or blackened, and is free from pimples except in old cankers, where other diseases have got in and caused these.

The Black Rot Canker, on the other hand, is as a rule not distinctly marked off by a crack between it and the healthy bark. The central part, especially if more than a year old, is usually somewhat swollen and the bark is rough, black and checked. On part of the smoother surface there will nearly always be found little black pimples or pustules about one third the size of the head of a pin. These are the places where spores are produced that spread the disease in the spring of the year.

Both kinds of kankers may live over from year to year, and continue to increase in size. This is especially true of Black Rot Canker, though often this as well as the other may die out at the end of the first year. The diseased area may be small in either kind or again it may include the whole of the trunk and part of the branches, or may run for several feet along a single branch. In old trees only the branches are attacked.

Remedies: Where a tree is too badly attacked to give any hope of its recovery it should be cut down and burned as soon as possible, for otherwise the disease will spread from it even though the tree itself be dead. In the same way dead or dying branches should be cut off and burned either this fall or early next spring, taking particular pains to see that the cut is made several inches below any trace of the diseased area All cuts thus made should be disinfected in the manner described below and then painted. If this is done the frost will not injure them. Wherever a healthy stub is left after cutting off the cankered part of a branch it can be cut afresh in the spring and grafted.

Where the cankered ares are not too large, especially on the trunk and crotches, they should be neatly cut out with a knife or some sharp instrument until the healthy bark is reached. The wounds thus made must be disinfected and pointed with white lead (free from turpentine) The painting should be repeated next spring to make sure that no disease gets into the wounds. The best disinfectant to use is corrosive sublimate of the strength of 1 part of this substance by weight to 1,000 parts of water. Any druggist will supply the substance and explain how to make it up. The material will cost only a few cents. A wooden or glass vessel must be used instead of iron or tin, as the substance will corrode these. Corrosive sublimate is deadly prison when taken internally, so care must be taken not to allow anything to drink the liquid, and to wash thoroughly the vessel before using it for any other purpose. The best way to disinfect the wound with corrosive sublimate is simply to tie a little sponge or a small pad of cloth on the end of a stick and, after dipping it into the liquid, wash over the surface of the wound. This will kill any kind of germ whatever.

To ward off cankers for the future it is necessary (1) to prevent as far as possible any injury to trees by such means as tearing off the bark by whiffle trees or other implements, or by boots when climbing. If wounds are made in this way they should be disinfected and painted at once, otherwise they let in the germs of the disease. Cankers usually start from wounds of some kind though sometimes these may be very small. Sun-scald injuries also allow canker germs to enter, hence young trees should be protected against sun-scald by some of the well-known devices for this purpose.

2. Water spouts should be kept off the trunks and main branches, because, as said above, the blight disease often runs down one of these and starts the canker below. A few minutes will usually suffice to remove all the water-sprouts from any ordinary tree.

3. The trees must be carefully sprayed with Bordeaux mixture and special pains taken to see that the trunks and main branches are thoroughly covered with the Bordeaux. The first spraying should be done just before the leaf buds burst, the second a few days before the blossoms open, and the third within a week after most of the blossems have fallen. Half a pound of paris green should be added to each barrel of Bordeaux and the whole kept well agitated while spraying. The spraying will then also do a great deal to keep off cankers, but will also keep most of the Codling Moths (which cause the wormy apples), the Cigar Case-Bearers, Pistol Case-bearers, Canker Worms, Bud Moths, and many other insects; and in addition will keep the apples free from scab, so that orchadists should thus get a return for the time and money spent in the form of healthier trees and more and better fruit. Care should be taken in every case to see that the spraying is thoroughly done at the times mentioned Orchards that are properly pruned and sprayed have been found to be very much less affected with canker than those that are neglected.

SHAKE IN A BOTTLE.

Now is the time when the doctor gets busy, and the patent medicine manufacturers reap the harvest, unless great care is taken to dress warmly and keep the feet dry. This is the advice of an old eminent authority who says that Rheumatism and Kidney trouble weather is here, and also tells what to do in case of attack.

Get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

Just try this simple home-made mixture at the first sign of Rheumatism, or if your back aches or you feel the kidneys are not acting just right. This is said to be a splendid kidney regulator, and almost certain remedy for all forms of Rheumatism, which is caused by uric acid in the blood, which the kidneys fail to filter out. Any one can easily prepare this at home and at small cost.

Druggists in this town and vicinity, when shown the prescription, stated that they can either supply the ingredients or, if our readers prefer, they will compound the mixture for them.
